~~497.c.~~

Vol. III. Pl

To the HISTORIAN of LEICESTERSHIRE,
This PLATE, Drawn & Engraved from Subjects actually existing in that COUNTY, is presented as a Testimony of sincere Respect, by _*R. Longmate.*

THE

HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES

OF THE

COUNTY OF LEICESTER.

By JOHN NICHOLS, F.S.A. EDINB. & PERTH.

VOLUME III. PART I.

CONTAINING

EAST GOSCOTE HUNDRED.

NON OMNIS
MORIAR.

LONDON:
PRINTED BY AND FOR JOHN NICHOLS, RED LION PASSAGE, FLEET STREET.
1800.

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

ROBERT SHIRLEY, EARL FERRERS, VISCOUNT TAMWORTH,

THIS HISTORY OF THE HUNDRED OF EAST GOSCOTE

IS RESPECTFULLY INSCRIBED BY

HIS LORDSHIP'S

GREATLY OBLIGED AND VERY FAITHFUL SERVANT,

JOHN NICHOLS.

ADVERTISEMENT.

SINCE the various conjectures relative to the interleaved copy of the Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire by "that worthy Patriot and judicious Antiquary WILLIAM BURTON[1], eſq." were ſuggeſted in a former page[2]; I have now before me (through the indefatigable reſearches of my friend Mr. SHAW, and the kindneſs of the worthy repreſentatives and guardians of the preſent earl TALBOT[3]), the volume ſo long ſought for; together with two tranſcripts of it made under the immediate inſpection of WALTER CHETWYND, eſq. as deſcribed in the "Catalogus Manuſcriptorum Angliæ," N°s 4049. 4050. Theſe tranſcripts are the ſame which Mr. Aſhby notices as ſeen by him in 1763; but neither Lord Chetwynd nor Sir Thomas Cave ſeem to have been aware that the original copy of Burton remained in exiſtence. The "large folio with looſe drawings" has unluckily not come to light.

To an enquiry by Sir Thomas Cave, made through the medium of his friend Sir Cordell Firebrace, Lord Chetwynd, Oct. 9, 1754, thus anſwers:

"I hope, dear ſir, you will not think me negligent or unwilling to renew a correſpondence with you, if I have not ſooner acknowledged the favour of your letter of the 4th paſt; but I gave it immediately to Dr. Fawcett, to enquire after the books you mentioned; and as he did not immediately look over my ſtudy, and give me his anſwer till a day or two agone, I will hope to ſtand excuſed for any want of attention in obeying your commands. The Doctor tells me he hath not found the whole ſir Thomas Cave mentions. He hath given me the incloſed account of what we have; and if it may be of any ſervice to ſir Thomas, I ſhall be glad to oblige him; though I muſt obſerve to you that I have loſt ſome manuſcripts."

Dr. Fawcett's report was in theſe words:

"The printed copy of Mr. Burton's Deſcription of Leiceſterſhire, interleaved, with Additions, &c. is not now to be found among lord Chetwynd's books at Ingeſtry. There are, however, in his lordſhip's ſtudy, two large folio manuſcripts; one, entituled, 'A Deſcription of Leiceſterſhire, containing matters of Antiquity, Hiſtory, Armory, and Genealogy; firſt briefly collected and publiſhed by William Burton, of Lindley, Eſq. Now enlarged and amended from publick Records, Manuſcripts, Leiger Books, and private Evidences; and continued to the year 1642.' The other MS. ſeems, from a curſory view taken of it, to be pretty near the ſame with the firſt juſt now mentioned; but it has no title prefixed. In both theſe manuſcripts there are many looſe ſheets of paper; moſt of which ſeem foul copies, tranſcribed into the books."

On the 29th, Dr. Fawcett thus again addreſſes Sir Thomas Cave:

"I received the favour of your letter of the 27th inſtant a quarter of an hour ago, and immediately communicated the contents of it to lord Chetwynd. I have the pleaſure to acquaint you that his lordſhip did not heſitate a minute; but at once commiſſioned me to make his compliments to yourſelf, and deliver the books you deſire to your ſteward. His lordſhip muſt leave it entirely to you, either to mention Mr. Chetwynd's name or not, juſt as you ſhall find the obſervations worthy of a perſon of his credit and reputation, or otherwiſe; and thinks himſelf ſafe in truſting the character of his honoured Anceſtor to one of ſir Thomas Cave's judgement and abilities. Lord Chetwynd has only one requeſt farther to make; which is, that as he is not willing to detain your ſteward whilſt he examines particularly the looſe papers in the books, ſhould you find any papers among them of a more private nature, and not relative to the Antiquities of Leiceſterſhire, that you would be ſo good as to take more particular care of them. I have delivered the acknowledgement of the receipt of theſe two manuſcripts to lord Chetwynd. I am ſorry you ſhould make any apology for addreſſing yourſelf to an old acquaintance, who will always have pleaſure in obeying your commands. I often reflect with peculiar ſatisfaction upon the many chearful hours we paſſed together when at the Univerſity; and only lament that Fortune has thrown me entirely out of your way ſince that time. I could ſay a great deal to you, were I not afraid of making your ſervant wait; but muſt not conclude without giving you aſſurances that I am very happy to have had this opportunity of paying my compliments to you; and that I am, with particular ſentiments of regard, your obliged and obedient humble ſervant, RICHARD FAWCETT."

Thus much for the loan of the volumes to Sir Thomas Cave; in whoſe hands they appear to have remained for thirteen years; in which time he carefully tranſcribed the whole of the additions made by Mr. Chetwynd; which, on examination, appear to be in moſt caſes an abridgement, very rarely an enlargement, of the additions in Mr. Burton's own copy; and, after all, it is rather ſingular, that, notwithſtanding our Author's letter to Sir Robert Cotton[4] in 1627, in which he ſtates that "having gotten ſome Roman, Saxon, and other antiquities of good note, which would almoſt make the book as big again, he was nearly ready for a ſecond edition," ſo very few alterations of any conſequence ſhould have been made in the article of Thedingworth[5].

Oct. 22, 1638, Mr. Burton tells Sir Simonds D'Ewes, "that his book, being at length gone from him, ſo much enlarged that it would riſe to a treble proportion, was then in the hands of ſir John Lambe;" and the ſlighteſt inſpection of the improved copy will ſhew that it was "fairly prepared for the preſs." What prevented the then re-publication, it would now be fruitleſs to enquire. Mr. Gaſcoigne tells us, "that he had Burton's book, that ſhould have been printed, in his cuſtody, in the beginning of the war." The confuſion of the times, and the death of Mr. Burton in 1645, ſufficiently account for ſubſequent delay. The volume was afterwards preſented, by the Author's ſon, Caſſibelan Burton, to Walter Chetwynd, eſq. who amuſed himſelf by tranſcribing the whole work, incorporating the additions with the original; and afterwards employed his tutor Mr. Charles King (in whoſe hands it ſeems to have been in 1711) to make a fair copy of the whole[6].

From this period all ideas of re-printing Burton, or any continuation of his Hiſtory, ſeem to have ſubſided, till Mr. Peck, in 1729, circulated queries with a view to the natural hiſtory and antiquities of this county and of Rutland; in which he ſtated that he had made conſiderable progreſs. The price of the copies of Burton's printed Hiſtory, meantime, conſiderably advanced.

---

[1] Engliſh Verſion of Herodian, p. 312.

[2] Vol. II. pp. 842—845.

[3] On this head ſee hereafter, p. xiv.

[4] Vol. II. p. 842.

[5] See hereafter, in the preſent volume, p. 546.

[6] Mr. Francis Brokeſby, in 1711, mentions this MS. of "that learned gentleman, Mr. Walter Chetwynd;" which, he ſays, "ought not to be forgotten, when queſtionleſs it affords ſeveral uſeful and delightful obſervations upon my native country. I hear that it is in the hands of the learned and ingenious Mr. Charles King, who was a companion and aſſiſtant to Mr. Chetwynd in his ſtudies." Letter to Mr. Hearne, in Leland's Itinerary, vol. VI. p. 96.

Mr. Oldys, who notices the work, as a Reviewer, in "The Britiſh Librarian, for May 1737," ſays, "Thus we end our brief recapitulation of this book; not without ſome wonder to obſerve, that after near ſixſcore years ſince the Author thus broke through thoſe clouds of darkneſs and oblivion wherewith the luſtre of this county had been overſhadowed, ſo few others ſhould ſee the way to imitate his example, by their further illuſtration thereof: inſomuch that we know not of any one county in England, which in that compaſs of years has had fewer publications beſtowed upon it relating either to its Antiquities or Natural Hiſtory. Nay, even our Author's own improved copy of this work, very much enriched with Roman, Saxon, and other Antiquities, has, to this day, been denied the light. Wherefore, we thought it a debt due to his merit, as well as to the ſubject he has celebrated, to take the notice we have here done of them, in order to excite thoſe whom it may concern, to oblige the publick either with that enlarged work of this Author, with further continuations thereof; or any other ſuch memorials of the place and its products, as may render them, with what juſtice they deſerve, no leſs conſiderable than other counties and their productions appear in this iſland."

Theſe ſuggeſtions, and locality of ſituation, might perhaps have induced Sir Thomas Cave (who at that time was actively engaged in promoting the publication of Mr. Bridges's Northamptonſhire[1]) to have undertaken the pleaſing, though arduous, taſk of a new Hiſtory of the County of Leiceſter.

On the 13th of May, 1766, Propoſals appeared, from another quarter, for printing, by ſubſcription, "The Hiſtory and Antiquities of the Town of Leiceſter; originally collected by William Staveley, Eſq. Barriſter at Law: And now firſt offered to the Publick from the Author's Manuſcript; with very large Additions and Improvements, and an Appendix of Papers relative to the Subject; by Richard Farmer, M. A. Fellow of Emmanuel College in Cambridge, and of the Society of Antiquaries, London.—I. The Editor propoſes that the work be elegantly printed in quarto at the Cambridge preſs; and illuſtrated with copper-plates of the antient and preſent town, Roman remains, teſſellated pavements, coins, ſeals, &c. II. That the copy be ſent to the preſs, as ſoon as the number of the impreſſion may be tolerably aſcertained; and that each ſubſcriber pay five ſhillings when he gives in his name, and five ſhillings and ſix pence on the delivery of the book. III. A few copies will be printed on large paper, at fifteen ſhillings each. Subſcriptions will be received by the Editor; and Meſſrs. Thurlbourn and Woodyer, in Cambridge; Mr. Dodſley in Pall-Mall, Mr. Millar in the Strand, Mr. Beecroft in Pater-noſter-Row, London; Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Prince in Oxford; and by Mr. Gregory and Mr. Farmer in Leiceſter."

Some extracts from letters between Dr. Farmer and his friends may here, perhaps, be acceptable:

1. "Dear ſir, I heartily wiſh you ſucceſs in your preſent undertaking; and can gladly inform you that my lord Denbigh, lord Wentworth, the honourable Mr. Noel, and the Doctor, ſent their names to Gregory a few days ago. Davie, at the Abbey, I was informed, had by him a manuſcript he found about the building, that gave an account, a very particular one, of the burial of Cardinal Wolſey[2]. It was ſaid to be wrote by his gentleman-uſher. Upon my applying to him for it, he ſaid he had had ſuch a one; but, upon lending it, had loſt it. He can remember, however, many of the contents. Mr. Bentley has by him a warrant ſigned with Oliver Cromwell's own hand. But what chiefly induced me to trouble you was the miſtake of your title-page. Mr. Samuel Heyrick, who has ſubſcribed, called me in yeſterday, and told me of it. The author's name, he ſays, was Thomas Staveley[3]: William was the brother of him. This Thomas's wife and lord-keeper Wrighte's mother were ſiſters; their names were Oneby, and their father lived at Hinckley. There were four coheireſſes of them. He told me who the other two married. He ſhewed me two ſeveral papers wrote in the hand of this Thomas; and aſked me if I knew it, which I very well did, as having ſomething remarkable in it; and he ſhewed me a very ingenious copy of verſes[4] upon the death of his father-in-law. What, he ſaid, occaſioned the miſtake was, Mr. Kilby's writing ſomewhere near the title-page, "Mr. William Staveley gave me this book;" which I think he did. The manuſcript in Leiceſter has no author's name prefixed to it. I have collected a conſiderable number in Leiceſter; and am daily adding to them. Gregory has borrowed the tranſcript; and told me this morning, he ſhould have printed it very ſoon had it not been for yours. Yours, moſt ſincerely, J. SIMMONDS."

2. "Stanford Hall, Oct. 20, 1766. Sir, I was greatly diſappointed on my going to Leiceſter (the beginning of this month, after my return from Bath) to find you had removed to Cambridge; as I was in great hopes I ſhould have ſeen you at Stanford this autumn, to have communicated to you what little collections I have relating to the borough of Leiceſter. My papers chiefly regard the county (in which I ſhould be glad of your reciprocal aſſiſtance); but I have a MS Hiſtory of Leiceſter, wrote by a very excellent author, which I believe you never ſaw; and it is highly neceſſary you ſhould ſee and peruſe it. When it will be convenient to you I know not; but at any time you will be welcome to my houſe. I imagine I ſhall have a call to parliament early next month, but hope to be at home again by Chriſtmas; or, if I ſend you word where I am in London, will a trip thither be more eaſy to you? T. CAVE."

3. "Stanford Hall, Nov. 11, 1766. Sir, the day after I wrote to you, I received yours of the 20th; to which I thus reply: I have no copy of the Domeſday-book for Leiceſterſhire. Mr. Mores, one of the Antiquarian Society, I am told, has a copy. He is difficult of acceſs; and I never could come at him yet. Dr. Brady, Dugdale, &c. have only given a part of it. The manuſcript I have is Mr. Carte's original Hiſtory of Leiceſter, in his own hand-writing[5]. That which Browne Willis had was, at beſt, but a ſhort abſtract from it. I have one of the ſame, given me by Dr. Willis. The additions to Burton in Mr. Chetwynd's MS. are numerous; I mean, with regard to the town of Leiceſter only; I have copied them from that MS. and will take them to London with me next week to Dr. Aſkew. If you think it neceſſary, you are mighty welcome to a copy of them, if you pleaſe to inſtruct the Doctor to have them tranſcribed; for I have not leiſure to do it myſelf. Gaſcoigne's notes and additions I am a ſtranger to, and wiſh you would give me ſome account of them. Bp. Tanner, indeed, does mention an old Abbey-book in the cuſtody of ſir Thomas Cave; but by what authority I know not, as I never yet met with it. In the Bodleian is an old vellum MS. giving an ample account of the poſſeſſions of that famous abbey, drawn up by one Charyte, who was abbot there; and it is called "Charyte's Rentale[6]." I could have wiſhed you had not formed your work before we had been better acquainted. I have ſeveral large volumes of Collections, by the Cartes,

---

[1] This buſineſs was very heartily taken up by the gentlemen of that county, who formed from among themſelves a committee for the expreſs purpoſe of conducting the publication; and ſir Thomas Cave was very judiciouſly appointed chairman. It is much to be lamented, that this committee, or the ſurvivors of them, contented themſelves with giving the work to the publick juſt as Mr. Bridges left it; by which means the Hiſtory of the County of Northampton is 80 years in arrear.

[2] Theſe were only extracts from Mr. Cavendiſh's Memoirs of the Cardinal, abridged in vol. I. p. 271.

[3] See an account of Mr. Staveley, vol II. p. 677. His "Hiſtory of Leiceſter," which, by the gift of Dr. Farmer, is now in my poſſeſſion, is incorporated in the Firſt Volume of the preſent Work.

[4] Theſe verſes are printed in the "Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica," Nº XLIII. p. 374.

[5] This alſo, by the favour of Dr. Farmer, is now my own, and has been made uſe of in the Firſt Volume.

[6] See this particularly deſcribed in the Appendix to vol. I. p. 67.

containing matters relating to the county and town, extracts of Hall Books, &c. &c. which you ſhould have ſeen here; but they are too cumberſome to move. Alſo the biſhop of Carliſle ſent me ſeveral deeds relating to the town; but buſineſs or ill health has prevented my looking at them. Perhaps I think my treaſure more valuable than it is: you would be a better judge if you ſaw it. A trip to London in the Fly next week would do you good; and you may hear of me at the Exchequer Coffee-houſe next Weſtminſter-hall gate. Have you got a draught of the Roman pavement, diſcovered a few years ago, under the houſe called Vauxhall? I gave five guineas for one. I am, ſir, your moſt humble ſervant, T. Cave.”

4. “ Palſgrave (by Diſs) Dec. 31, 1766. Rev. Sir, I often hear of you, and wiſh much oftener to have the pleaſure of your agreeable converſation; as I do our good friend's Mr. Reeves, who, although but at nine or ten miles diſtance, yet is difficult of acceſs. The laſt time we were together, he gave me one of your propoſals for printing the Hiſtory of Leiceſter; and at the ſame time hinted to me, that he believed you intended a copy for me of the book when publiſhed, for which I ſhall be extremely thankful, and will requite the favour in the gratefulleſt manner I am able. Nevertheleſs, I would by no means be abridged of the honour of my name being inſerted amongſt the liſt of your ſubſcribers; and if I can be of any ſervice in diſpoſing of any, it will much rejoice me. I find, in looking into my Collections for Leiceſterſhire, that I am in poſſeſſion of a few trifling deeds and papers relating to that town and county; of which, if they will be of any ſervice, I will either ſend you fair copies, or the originals themſelves, if not too late for your commendable undertaking. I expect very ſoon to be in Cambridge to finiſh ſir James Burrough's executorſhip; ſo pray let me hear how far you have proceeded in your Topography, and whether you take in the whole ſhire, or only the town of Leiceſter. I turned laſt evening to ſee what account Burton had given of it; but I find it a very jejune performance. I think long to ſee yours, as my time wears away apace. I have lately ſcraped an intimate acquaintance with one of your Leiceſter members, viz. John Darker, eſq. No doubt he will encourage your work, as will every ingenuous gentleman. My Burton's Leiceſterſhire[1] has ſeveral marginal additions by the late Peter Le Neve, eſq. but none for Leiceſter town. If you would have them, I will tranſcribe them for you. Pray contrive to come and ſee us as ſoon as you can in the ſpring. I beg a diſtribution of my beſt compliments to my much eſteemed friend Mr. Hubbard, &c. &c. and am, in ſome hurry, worthy dear ſir, with great truth, your moſt obedient ſervant, Thomas Martin.”

5. “ Treaſury, Jan. 8, 1767. Sir, herewith you will receive a tranſcript of a charter relating to the earldom of Leiceſter, from the original in my collection. This charter is very fair. The ſeal, which is of green wax, is exceeding fair. You will obſerve that the charter of king John is dated at Vernoil in France, which was his place of reſidence when his brother Richard I. was ſlain before the caſtle of Calais. John loſt no time in gaining over to his intereſt ſo powerful a nobleman as the earl of Leiceſter; and, the better to ſecure him, ſent this charter to the earl before he ſet out for England. Simon de Montfort had one moiety of the honour of Leiceſter; and by the words “ alteri heredum comitis Roberti,” I ſhould ſuppoſe that he was a younger ſon. You will alſo obſerve, that many of the privileges granted by the charter of king John had not theretofore been enjoyed by any former earl of Leiceſter. I have ordered drawings to be made of the teſſellated pavements, which I ſhall deliver to Mr. Percy. Dr. Ducarel, of Doctors Commons, hath a particular account of the pariſh of St. Martin's, Leiceſter, in the hand-writing of the Rev. Mr. Samuel Carte. The Doctor hath alſo ſome notes concerning Mr. Staveley, which he will communicate to you if you will apply to him by letter. I thank you for your intentions with reſpect to your Eſſay on the Learning of Shakeſpeare; and am very truly, &c. Thomas Astle.”

6. “ Stanford Hall, Jan. 16, 1767. Sir, Before I left London at the end of November, I left the MSS. with Dr. Aſkew, who ſaid you ſhould have them in a few days: I am glad you have got them at laſt. I ſhould be certainly very glad to ſee Gaſcoigne's additions, eſpecially if I may have them ſome time to abſtract. As to the additions of Burton in the Ipſwich Catalogue, perhaps you may find out from the bookſeller who purchaſes it, and I may ſome time get a ſight of it. As for purchaſing, I have ſo many Burtons, &c. that they rather perplex me. If I live and am well at the end of this ſeſſion, I intend diverting myſelf again in digeſting my Collections, which have lain dormant ſome years; but I muſt beg leave to aſſure you, that I believe my works will be of no uſe to any body but myſelf. That they have been indeed, becauſe they have given me amuſement at leiſure hours. I will bring up my drawing (which is a very exact one) of the teſſellated pavement. I ſhall alſo bring up the two MS Burtons of lord Chetwynd's, in order to return them; but will detain them till I know when you will be in town, that you may have a ſight of them. I really don't know whether my folio manuſcripts contain any thing to your purpoſe or not; they are very irregular, and ſadly wrote, and muſt be hunted all over to ſee whether they do or not; ſo that I wiſh you could have ſeen them yourſelf. I hope it is not too late in the ſpring to do ſo: moſt probably you have the marrow in Mr. Carte's MSS. which I have ſent you. Impaſſable roads and deep ſnow detain me at preſent from being at London. As ſoon as travelling is practicable I ſhall move thither. That you may enjoy many happy new years, is the ſincere wiſh of your obliged humble ſervant, T. Cave.

“ P. S. I beg leave to ſubſcribe for two copies of your work relating to Leiceſter Town.”

7. “ Oakley, Feb. 18, 1767. Reverend Sir, ſome time ſince meeting with Mr. Tyrwhitt[2], he informed me that you was deſirous of ſeeing Burton's Hiſtory, which he had kindly lent me: I therefore take this opportunity to ſend all the manuſcript notes relative to Leiceſter which are in that book. I hope theſe tranſcripts will be agreeable to you; and I ſhall be very happy if I can contribute any thing farther to your work. Mr. Burton is very conciſe, and is only to be eſteemed for his antiquity; but I ſhould think materials might be found to enlarge it, and bring it down to the preſent time; and you would do a particular honour to your county, if you was to undertake it. I am, ſir, your moſt humble ſervant, P. Wright.”

8. “ Bridge-ſtreet, Weſtminſter, Feb. 19, 1767. Sir, I am to return you my humble thanks for the kind preſent of your criticiſm upon the Literature of the great Shakeſpeare. Dr. Aſkew very faithfully delivered it at my lodgings; but unfortunately I was abſent when he came. Give me leave to inform you, that ſome years ago I heard Dr. Stukeley had drawn up a Treatiſe concerning the Ratæ, or Rawdykes, at Leiceſter. I once waited upon him with a requeſt to ſee it, but left him without his compliance. Where it is now I know not; but probably in the hands of Mr. Fleming, a counſellor, who married a daughter of the Doctor's. I am not acquainted with him, nor do I know where he lives. Our friend Aſkew probably knows him, and may get ſome information relating to it, if you chooſe to make farther enquiry into it. Have you no deſign of coming to town for a day or two? I have brought up my drawing of the teſſellated pavement on purpoſe to be of uſe to you, if you have no better, and will direct your engraver to look at it. I have alſo the two MSS. of lord Chetwynd, but muſt return them ſoon, having had them in my hands many years. I only wait to know if you would look at them here. Your moſt humble ſervant, T. Cave.”

---

[1] From this copy, which is now in the Britiſh Muſeum, I have extracted all the additional notes.

[2] Librarian of Jeſus College.

9. "Bridge-ſtreet, Weſtminſter, March 14, 1767. I am very ſorry to find I am not likely to ſee you in London; and alſo that I know not how to aſſiſt you in procuring a ſight of Dr. Stukeley's Diſſertation upon the Rata. I have been one evening at the Antiquarian Society, and ſaw the drawing of the teſſellated pavement at Leiceſter. Your engraver, whoever he is, has been but once to copy it, and proceeded but a very little way in his work, and lord Weymouth is in ſome hurry to have his copy returned; wherefore, to aſſiſt you, and ſave you the charge of a copy, I will ſend mine to Dr. Aſkew for your uſe; and hope, whoever you employ to grave it, will be a little more expeditious, that mine may be returned in a ſeaſonable time. The draught which I ſaw is not to be compared with mine, one part of it being omitted. I am ſorry I cannot get aſſiſtance from Gaſcoigne's notes; and hope, however, when Mr. Wright has done with the book, I may alſo have it. As I know not the gentleman, I wiſh you to write to him about it as ſoon as you conveniently can. Neither do I know Mr. Martin of Palgrave, and therefore entreat your intereſt with him to get me the uſe of his Burton with Le Neve's Notes, as alſo St. Loe Kniveton's Church Notes. I preſume, as Walter Chetwynd's name is prefixed to one of the MS copies I had, that Mr. Chetwynd made the additions. Yours, &c. T. CAVE."

10. "Sir, I am ſorry to find I have no proſpect of ſeeing the Burton belonging to Jeſus College Library, as Mr. Wright has ſtill the poſſeſſion of it. If God gives me life, I hope to ſee it another opportunity[1]. Mr. Martin, I obſerve, offers to tranſcribe Le Neve's notes out of his own Burton for your uſe; perhaps you have intereſt with him to procure the ſame favour for me, of which I ſhould be glad. As the extracts in the letters you ſent me regard your own work principally, I have returned them uncopied. About a fortnight ago I ſent my draught of the Roman pavement to Dr. Aſkew, deſiring him to forward it to you, and hope you have received it long ago; if not, give him a ſtimulus. I have been confined to my room ſome days with a feveriſh diſorder; and as ſoon as it abates, ſhall retreat to country air; but, if you favour me with a line within a fortnight, you will direct to me at Mrs. Thomſon's, at Ewell, near Epſom, Surrey. In about three weeks from this time I hope to be at Stanford. I am, ſir, &c." T. CAVE."

11. "London, April 30, 1767. Sir, I have now been returned to London ſome days from a little retreat for my health's ſake, having been much out of order for ſome weeks. The Doctor promiſed me to ſend you the drawing ſoon after I gave it into his hand, and I am amazed you have not received it; and therefore, for my own ſake, beg you would remind him of it. Parliamentary buſineſs begins (when it ſhould end) now upon us; and the labours due in the winter are to be executed in the ſummer, according to the modern ſyſtem of politicks, which is full of enthuſiaſm. I have already attended till fatigue has impaired my frail juncture of fleſh, bones, and ſpirit; and yet ſhall attempt to diſcharge one week's duty more, concerning the ſtubborn behaviour of the North Americans. If Miniſtry is determined, they will find more of the ſame ſentiment; if not, it will be vain to throw away our time in pompous ſpeeches and long debates here. Le Neve's Notes from Mr. Martyn's Burton I ſhould be glad of, if not too prolix. The other matters I don't lay much ſtreſs upon. Your aſſiſtance is very kind; and will always be very acceptable to, ſir, your humble ſervant, T. CAVE."

12. "Stanford Hall, Aug. 13, 1767. Dear Sir, I am much obliged by the procurement of the book you mention. I have not heard any thing of it from Leiceſter; but ſhall be at the aſſizes there to-morrow, and will make due enquiries after it. I will take as much care of the book as of my own; and will be as expeditious as a great hurry of affairs upon my hands, and ſome inability from an indifferent ſtate of health, will permit me to be; but am fearful of being cenſured for tediouſneſs. I am in no manner of haſte for a return of the pavement; it is in your hand very ſafe. As to the uſe of my name in that or any where elſe, I ſhall eſteem ſuch an inſertion an honour done to my unworthy aſſiſtance. Poor Mr. Simpſon (whoſe ill fate I lament) never gave me any exemplication or tranſcript of any kind, or doubtleſs it ſhould have been at your ſervice. I have a little ſewed paper-book, containing as under; 1. "Carta Libertatum & Privilegiorum Ducatûs Lancaſtriæ;" 2. "Nomina omnium Villarum in Comitatu Leiceſtriæ infra Lancaſtriæ Juriſdictionem (uti aſſeritur) exiſtentium;" 3. "Of the Honour of Winton." If it will be of any ſervice to you, inform me where I ſhall depoſit for your uſe[2]. I am glad ſo much griſt comes to your mill, where I am confident it will be made to produce the fineſt flour. If you viſit Leiceſterſhire this year, I indulge myſelf in thinking you will not paſs me unregarded, as I am Mr. Farmer's moſt obedient, T. CAVE."

In 1769, the late Mr. Alderman Gregory of Leiceſter publiſhed propoſals for re-printing Mr. Burton's Hiſtory by ſubſcription, with the following advertiſement:

"The above valuable work, being now become exceeding ſcarce, Mr. Gregory has been frequently and importunately ſolicited by great numbers of his friends to re-print it. He now complies with their requeſt; and if proper encouragement appears, the work will be put to preſs immediately. The armorial bearings, and every other embelliſhment of the original, will be faithfully preſerved. The annexed half-ſheet is deſigned as a ſpecimen of the paper and intended execution of the printing. The map and copper-plates he promiſes to have executed in a maſterly manner. The work will be delivered to the ſubſcribers as ſoon as it can be executed, at one guinea in ſheets, to be paid on the delivery. Any nobleman or gentleman poſſeſſed of any curious accounts of families or pariſhes, or who will favour the Editor with plans or views of their reſpective ſeats, &c. will have their favours gratefully acknowledged, and inſerted in an intended Appendix; but which will not be included in the primary ſubſcription, as it is impoſſible to aſcertain the extent, and conſequently the expence, of ſuch Appendix at preſent."

Theſe propoſals occaſioned the following correſpondence of Dr. Heathcote and ſir Thomas Cave:

1. "Sileby, Sept. 21, 1769. Sir, the Deſcription of Leiceſterſhire becoming at length a very ſcarce book, Mr. Gregory conceived a deſign of re-printing it. He communicated his purpoſe to me; which I greatly approved, and encouraged him in; but adviſed him withal not to be precipitate, as I ſuppoſed there was extant a copy of that work, enlarged and improved by the Author himſelf. In confirmation of this, I ſoon after ſent him the following extract from the Hiſtorical Library of Biſhop Nicolſon; who, having obſerved that Burton's work conſiſts chiefly of deſcents, pedigrees, and moot-caſes, tells us, that "the author was afterwards ſenſible of the main defect, and therefore very much enlarged and enriched it with the addition of Roman, Saxon, and other Antiquities; that this appears from his own letter to ſir Robert Cotton, ſtill extant; and that the book itſelf, thus improved, is ſaid to have been lately in the poſſeſſion of Walter Chetwynd, of Ingeſtre, near Stafford, eſq. who had alſo other MSS. of the ſaid Mr. Burton's compoſure. I told Mr. Gregory, that the recovery of this improved copy would be a valuable acquiſition; adviſed him to ſpare no trouble in tracing it; and had the pleaſure to be informed by him ſoon after, that it was happily in your poſſeſſion. He added, that you had made conſiderable collections yourſelf. Upon this I obſerved, that nothing (as I apprehended) could be wanting to furniſh out a very compleat edition of the book; and we talked about the plan. We preſumed, that Burton's text was exactly to be followed, unleſs corrected or altered by himſelf: for, though the pedigrees and deſcents of many families, antient indeed and reſpectable, but not diſtinguiſhed in the annals of our country, and therefore of private rather than public concern, had been complained of as tedious and uninteresting, yet it was agreed to leave nothing out; leſt the reputation of the work ſhould be hurt by the notion of its being, what the bookſellers call, caſtrated. It ſeemed equally adviſable not to inſert any thing, except Burton's own additions and enlargements; for, by ſuch heterogeneous interpolations, as they would be called, this ſecond edition might be thought adulterated, contaminata as the Latins ſay; and then the Virtuoſi would perſiſt, with or without reaſon, in thinking the firſt the object of the curious. In the mean time, whether theſe additions ſhould be incorporated into the text, or thrown as notes into the margin, muſt be determined by the manner in which they are drawn up. if into the text, they may, ſhould it be thought expedient, be diſtinguiſhed by parentheſes. With regard to the Collections made by yourſelf, ſir, or any other gentleman of equal judgement in theſe matters, they will appear vaſtly well in an additional volume, by way of Appendix: and for the method in digeſting them, perhaps none better can be deviſed than that which Burton himſelf had uſed; that is, by placing the towns and villages in an alphabetical order, ſo as to correſpond with thoſe in the former volume. At the end of the ſecond volume may alſo be added, if they ſhall be thought of either uſe or curioſity, the other MSS. of Mr. Burton mentioned by biſhop Nicolſon. The letter to ſir Robert Cotton will be rightly prefixed to the firſt volume; together with an advertiſement, ſetting forth an account of this edition, and making proper acknowledgements to ſuch as ſhall contribute to it; to yourſelf, ſir, moſt particularly. The Bookſeller, who will always conſider himſelf as a principal in theſe undertakings, ſeems very ſolicitous that the work be not ſwelled too largely, leſt the bulk endanger the ſucceſs of the ſale. I told him I was not apprehenſive of this; that, though I had mentioned two volumes, it might poſſibly be comprized in one; and that, though the Natives of the County might, ſome of them, wiſh for more minute details and particular deſcriptions, yet as theſe would not be deemed of univerſal concern, they could not be admitted into a work deſigned for univerſal uſe. This, ſir, is a general idea I have formed to myſelf of a ſecond edition of Burton's book; and I have preſumed to communicate it to you, becauſe I have underſtood that ſuch a communication would not be diſagreeable. I have made no collections myſelf, having never had any thing of this kind in view; but ſhould be glad to aid and aſſiſt, as far as I can, in promoting any work of literature, and eſpecially a thing of this kind, which is undoubtedly of ſpecial uſe. I have the honour to be, ſir, your moſt obedient humble ſervant, RA. HEATHCOTE."

---

[1] Sir Thomas Cave obtained afterwards the loan of the volume of Burton with Gaſcoigne's notes; and made his full uſe of it. See the Preface to vol. I. p. vii.

[2] This little MS. I have now before me.

2. "Stanford Hall, Oct. 12, 1766. Sir, your favour of the 21ſt of September I received laſt week, and take the firſt opportunity of making my acknowledgements for it. With regard to the two MSS. of Mr. Burton's in Lord Chetwynd's library, I was led to ſearch for them, both by the account given of them by Dr. Nicolſon, and the mention made of them in Catal. Bibl. Bodleian. I requeſted Lord Chetwynd to lend them to me, which he very obligingly did; and, while I had them in my cuſtody, I tranſcribed every word of them which was additional to Mr. Burton's ſhort work. The MS. continues the hiſtory of property about 26 years lower down than Mr. Burton does, and deduces the genealogical account down to the ſame time; but I do not perceive any great enrichment of the work from the Roman or Saxon Antiquities. This MS. is intituled, Mr. Burton's Antiquities of Leiceſterſhire, with large Additions by Walter Chetwynd, Eſq.; but it appears evidently to be Burton's own compiling, becauſe, in the courſe of the work, he often ſpeaks of ſome errors, &c. &c. in his firſt edition. Theſe additions Mr. Gregory is very welcome to the uſe of, if he perſeveres in his reſolution; and they will eaſily join to the old work, without the addition of marginal preſs-work. To theſe I wiſh might be added the hiſtory of the continuation or alienation of local property to this preſent time, diſtinguiſhed as new matter, by ſtars, daggers, or ſome ſimilar mark. And I heartily wiſh Mr. Gregory would immediately proceed upon his deſign; eſpecially as by giving only the work of our Antiquary, pure and unmixed with the relations of any other pen, the bulk will not be greatly increaſed. And he ſaid he ſhould not grudge 20 ſheets of preſs-work more than a copy of the old edition will require: I think the additions alone will not demand ſo many. As to my Collections, they are numerous indeed. I have amuſed myſelf with them many years, and intended to have digeſted them regularly; not but I have almoſt completed ſome particular places: but my accounts are full and long; and, were they all prepared in the ſame manner, would compoſe three or four volumes in folio. I now cannot expect to live ſo long as to do it, as the change of ſcene from a retired country life to the ſtage of London is a great impediment to a much farther progreſs in it. However, I ſtill divert myſelf a little now and then in labouring at it; and if any thing may be ſelected from the ſcralls I may leave behind me, towards farther illuſtrating the ſubject, I do not repent at the toil I have had. Give me leave to make one declaration for the ſake of my own character; that in whatever I have wrote and collected, I have not done it on the leaſt preſumption of my abilities, but merely for the averſion I have to idleneſs; and the zeal I have for the ſervice (ſuch as it is) of a county, who have long honoured me with their confidence, pointed out the ſubject. Lord Chetwynd's MSS. are word for word the ſame, only one ſeems a fair tranſcript from the other. I am, ſir, your moſt obedient ſervant, THOMAS CAVE."

Sir Thomas Cave, from this time till his death, embraced every opportunity of improving his Collections[1], particularly in his more immediate neighbourhood, the Hundred of Guthlaxton; and had thus drawn up his ideas on the ſubject of his intended publication.

"As Mr. Burton has laid a foundation for any future work in regard to the Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire, it is propoſed to inſert ſo much of that Author as is merely hiſtorical; omitting ſuch relations of men and things as do not concern this ſubject[2]. It is farther propoſed, 1. Not to proceed alphabetically, as Mr. Burton has done, but to deſcribe each Hundred by itſelf, according to Sir William Dugdale's method[3]. 2. To omit the pedigrees[4] of ſuch families as are now extinct, or have aliened their eſtates; and to inſert the genealogies of ſuch of the Nobility and Gentry as are either now reſident in the County, or proprietors of eſtates in it[1]. 3. When any account or relations of greater antiquity, or antecedent to the time from which Mr. Burton commences his account, can be diſcovered, to add the ſame, and alſo to continue the narratives from the time where he concludes to the preſent year[2]. 4. To render this work more entertaining to ſuch as have no particular pleaſure in the peruſal of Antiquity, it is deſigned to embelliſh it with the (ſhort) hiſtory of any eminent perſons, remarkable tranſactions, buildings of note, and alſo natural hiſtory of herbs, plants, &c. wherever any thing comes to knowledge that falls under that denomination[3]; avoiding all idle and fantaſtical tales[4] of apparitions, witchcraft, &c. 5. To deſcribe the preſent condition of every lordſhip, whether open or incloſed; number of houſes, teams, freeholders; ſoil, which rich, moderate, or barren; wooded, or open; rivers, medicinal ſprings; collieries, ſtone quarries, &c.; with the preſent (as well as antient) lords of the manors, patrons, impropriators, rectors, and vicars; value of livings, how charged or diſcharged in the King's books; whether donatives, ſinecures, &c.; chapels of eaſe; and with any particular cuſtoms, privileges, exemptions from biſhop's court, marriage within themſelves, dedication of churches, &c. copyholds, &c.[5] and, 6. To have a new general map[6] of the county, if the gentlemen of it give due encouragement[7]."

---

[1] "The intelligent and faithful Burton has given an excellent ſketch of Leiceſterſhire, exhibiting, in a ſhort and well-arranged account, the true ground-work of a County Hiſtory. To improve and complete his plan, much was added by that diligent enquirer the late ſir Thomas Cave. His finiſhed labours will find, it is hoped, ſome learned and attentive publiſher, to do them full juſtice, and preſent them to the world with the luſtre in which they ought to appear. To him alſo this preſent publication is much indebted for encouragement, and a long-continued and effectual ſupport." Preface to Northamptonſhire, p. ii.

[2] In this preliminary article, we beg leave to differ a little from the worthy Baronet. It has been ſtated (vol. II. p. 843.) that Mr. Burton's printed volume, though a folio of above 300 pages, if the unneceſſary digreſſions were ſtruck out, and the pedigrees reduced into leſs compaſs, would ſhrink into a ſmall work. But it was the ſtyle of the times in which our Author lived, for writers in general to indulge themſelves in fondneſs for digreſſion; affecting to pour forth their whole ſtate of common-place learning on all occaſions, whether applicable or not; and it muſt be admitted that the digreſſions of our Author in particular are in general ſo pleaſant and ſo pertinent, as deſervedly to be entitled to notice.

[3] Much approving of this plan, it is accordingly adopted, and a ſeparate Map of each Hundred introduced.

[4] By compreſſing the pedigrees into a very narrow compaſs, the older ones are preſerved, without occupying much ſpace.

Sept. 16, 1776, the following Propoſals were offered for a new edition of Mr. Burton's book:

"I. That this Work ſhall be printed in one Volume, folio, on good paper, and with a new ſet of types. II. A new engraved map of Leiceſterſhire, and two engraved copper-plates containing all the arms. III. The Work ſhall be put to the preſs and finiſhed with all expedition. There will be only 300 copies printed (25 of which will be taken off on ſuperfine writing paper, price £2. 2s.) IV. The price to Subſcribers One Guinea, to be paid on delivery of the book, ſewed in blue paper. From the extreme ſcarcity of the preſent edition, and the extravagant price it now bears, the Editor is induced to lay before the Publick theſe Propoſals for printing another edition; in which he moſt humbly ſolicits the encouragement of the Noblemen and Gentlemen of that County, and of the Public in general. Truly ſenſible of the great favours conferred on him by thoſe Noblemen and Gentlemen who have already aſſiſted him in promoting and accompliſhing this undertaking, he returns them his moſt hearty thanks; and earneſtly requeſts ſuch other Noblemen and Gentlemen as are poſſeſſed of matters of Antiquity, Hiſtory, Armory, and Genealogy, in any manner relating to the ſaid County, to lend him their aſſiſtance in rectifying ſuch miſtakes or omiſſions as now appear in the preſent edition, and in improving and enlarging the intended Work, by deducing the ſame as near to the preſent time as the nature of it will admit of."

Mr. Whittingham's edition, profeſſing to be "enlarged and corrected, appeared in 1777; though in what the enlargement conſiſts it will be difficult to find. The corrections are only an awkward modernizing of the nervous ſtyle of the original. But the book had become ſo ſcarce, that even this edition was acceptable.

In the ſame year, Mr. John Throſby publiſhed ſix ſmall volumes, under the title of "Memoirs of the Town and County of Leiceſter;" of which performance not another word need be ſaid.

In 1780, the Author of the preſent volumes was induced, from family connexions, to inveſtigate with ſome attention the early Hiſtory of the Town of Hinckley; which in 1782 was ſubmitted to the publick as the Seventh number of Local Antiquities then publiſhing under the title of "Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica," with the following prefatory epiſtle to Mr. John Robinſon:

"My good Friend, to what Patron is this Hiſtory intended to be inſcribed, is a queſtion you very naturally have aſked me; but I ſee not that any Dedication is neceſſary. If it were, I ſhould perhaps, when treating of Local Antiquities, look up either to the Society of Antiquaries of London, to whom I can boaſt of a profeſſional relation; or to that of Edinburgh, which has done me the honour to enroll my name amongſt its Correſponding Members. But my reſearches, whilſt they have convinced me that there is ſcarcely a village in the kingdom but could furniſh materials for the Hiſtorian, either as having been the ſeat of a battle, the peaceful reſidence of ſome Religious Society, the birth-place of an eminent individual, or for ſome event which poſterity would wiſh to know, have led me to more ambitious views. When I contemplate the dignity ſuſtained by a town which furniſhed the kingdom with an HEREDITARY LORD STEWARD, I am naturally led to conſider the preſent amiable REPRESENTATIVE of ſo high an honour, the SOVEREIGN of the Britiſh Empire. To HIM, therefore, to the Father of his People, as HEREDITARY BARON OF HINCKLEY, I have every inclination to offer up this humble tribute of dutiful reſpect, but have not the preſumption to requeſt the neceſſary permiſſion. As a hearty well-wiſher to the proſperity of your native town; you will live, I hope, to ſee it reſtored to no ſmall portion of its primitive ſplendour. Whilſt there are ſo many blooming branches of the Royal Stem, we may indulge the pleaſing expectation of ſeeing the Barony revived in the perſon of a Prince, and this antient and loyal Borough again diſtinguiſhed by the privilege of ſending Repreſentatives to the Great Council of the Nation. For the active part you have taken in this Hiſtory, accept my beſt thanks. The reader will eaſily perceive the advantages it has received from your accurate drawings and judicious communications. I am, Sir, with great truth, your obliged and faithful friend, J. Nichols."

---

[1] This particular has been adopted, whenever the proper information could be obtained.

[2] This has been attempted in the fulleſt extent.

[3] This alſo has been performed to as full a degree as was practicable.

[4] As far only as relates to hiſtorical facts, theſe "idle tales" have been occaſionally noticed.

[5] To all theſe various particulars the fulleſt attention has been paid.

[6] The ſeparate map of each Hundred in the preſent volumes, it is preſumed, is an improvement of the plan ſuggeſted by Sir Thomas Cave. A general map will alſo be given in the concluding volume.

[7] Saxton's map of this county is included in that of Warwickſhire, engraved 1576 by Leonard Tervoort, without the hundreds. Mr. Burton ſupplied theſe, and added 80 towns in another map, engraved by Jod. Hondius at Amſterdam 1602, inſerted in his book on a ſmaller ſcale by Kid, and copied by Speed 1610, with a plan of Leiceſter. Another, including Rutlandſhire, has been publiſhed by E. Bowen, 1756, having on the Weſt ſide in capitals *Hereford*ſhire, inſtead of *Stafford*ſhire. A map of Leiceſterſhire from an actual ſurvey was begun in 1775, and finiſhed in 1777; by John Whyman, aſſiſtant to Mr. Burdet *, who ſurveyed and publiſhed Derbyſhire, under the direction of the Rev. John Prior, of Aſhby de la Zouch; engraved by J. Luffman, in four ſheets, with a plan of Leiceſter, 1778; dedicated by Mr. Prior to the Earl of Huntingdon †. [Mr. Prior, to whom this paragraph was ſhewn, obſerves, "What you have ſaid in regard to the map, is perfectly right; but, as it there ſtands, it may naturally occaſion a queſtion; How came I to dedicate a map, which was made by another perſon? The occaſion was this. I aſked my friend Burdet to take a ſurvey of our county. He told me he could not ſtay; for that he was engaged to go to Germany, to be an engineer to the Prince of Baden. I then wiſhed Whyman to do it, who had been formerly my ſcholar. He ſaid, he could not afford it; but if I would undertake it (as Mr. Burdet had recommended to me, having previouſly acquainted me with his method) he ſhould be glad to do it for me. I conſulted ſeveral of the firſt people in the county, whether they wiſhed a ſurvey to be taken, and would promote a ſubſcription; to which they readily aſſented. I then contracted with Whyman, for a certain ſum, to make the ſurvey, and lay down the map in the way which I ſhould direct. The property was to be mine; and, indeed, the whole was done under my direction and inſpection; and the ſubſcriptions were paid to me. I told the gentlemen whom I intended to employ, and wiſhed to put Mr. Whyman's name in the map; but thought I could not put in both our names without it appearing awkward. I had contracted with the Publick; and was conceived by them as reſponſible for procuring an accurate ſurvey. It was nothing to them whom I employed. You have my perfect conſent to repreſent this agreement as you pleaſe. I undertook the buſineſs in compliment to the gentlemen of the county (as no other perſon would do it), and to ſerve my ſcholar Mr. Whyman."]

* Burdet is the young man taking notes in the print of the Lecture on the Orrery after Wright.

† Gough's Britiſh Topography, vol. I. p. 518.

In October 1787, the XLIIId number of the ſame work contained the Hiſtory of the villages of Aſton Flamvile and Burbach; thus inſcribed to the late David Wells, Eſq. F. S. A.

"Dear Sir, If the Dedication of a Book can be conſidered as an acknowledgement for Literary Favours, this Volume can to no one be ſo properly inſcribed as to Mr. Wells; to whoſe truly original ſuggeſtions, judicious obſervations, and critical remarks, co-operating with the kind and unremitting efforts of our philoſophical friend Mr. Robinſon, I am indebted for much that is valuable in the following ſheets. Little did I apprehend, when the "Hiſtory of Hinckley" was ſubmitted to the publick, that the memorials of the Family of Onebye[1] would have been of the important conſequences they have ſince proved: it is therefore with the greater ſatisfaction I now exhibit the fruits of more mature reſearch. In the beginning of that work I ventured a ſuggeſtion, which even the ſmall townſhips here deſcribed will contribute to confirm. Though neither of them can furniſh conſiderable materials for general Hiſtory; they have long been in the poſſeſſion of the Turviles, the Wightmans, and the Grays; they have been honoured by the paſtoral labours of Anthony the good Earl of Kent, and by thoſe of the very learned and excellent Duport; and Burbach in particular gave birth to ſeveral of the children of the right-honourable rector, and to Roger Cotes the profound mathematician. Leiceſter Grange, which is ſaid to have been diſtinguiſhed in the laſt century by a viſit from a Monarch, and ſoon after became notorious as the manſion of a Traitor, is riſing into new diſtinction by the improvements it has received under the auſpices of its preſent poſſeſſor. To thoſe who, like yourſelf, are aware of the extreme difficulty with which authentic Anecdotes in Genealogy and Biography are obtained, no apology will be neceſſary for the irregular mode in which ſome of them are now arranged. And I may ſafely truſt to public candour for forgiveneſs on an article in which, however imperfect, neither trouble nor expence has been ſpared. Had the Collections of Sir Thomas Cave for a new Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire been completed; or had they, even in their preſent unfiniſhed ſtate, been depoſited where acceſs could readily be had to them; much of my labour had been ſpared, and ſome particulars might perhaps have been recorded with more accuracy. To obviate in ſome degree this deficiency, I had intended to annex to this Publication ſuch information as I have met with, conſiſting principally of Church Notes, Epitaphs, Liſts of Incumbents, &c. under the title of "Brief Collections towards the Hiſtory and Antiquities of the County of Leiceſter:" but theſe, ſmall as they are, having accumulated far beyond my original idea, I ſhall bring them forward, in no great length of time, as a future Number of the "Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica." Without detaining you, Sir, by the compliments which too frequently accompany this ſpecies of addreſs; I ſhall conclude with heartily wiſhing you a long continuance of health, to enjoy the learned leiſure and domeſtic felicity of your delightful reſidence at Burbach. With very ſincere regard, I remain, Sir, your faithful and obliged ſervant, J. Nichols."

In 1789, Mr. Throſby began to publiſh his "Select Views in Leiceſterſhire, from original Drawings; containing Seats of the Nobility and Gentry; Town Views, and Ruins; accompanied with deſcriptive and hiſtorical Relations;" and in 1790, "The Supplementary Volume to the Leiceſterſhire Views, a Series of Excurſions in the Year 1790 to the Villages and Places of Note in the County; to which are added, the moſt valuable parts of Burton, Nichols, and other antecedent writers on Leiceſterſhire."

The Brief Notes above alluded to appeared in April 1790, as N° L. of the "Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica," under the title of "Collections towards the Hiſtory and Antiquities of the Town and County of Leiceſter;" with the following advertiſement:

"When the preſent Number was firſt announced in the Preface to the Hiſtory of Aſton Flamvile, &c. it was intended to conſiſt principally of Brief Church Notes, and a few Monumental Inſcriptions. Information, however, has ſince flowed in ſo copiouſly, as to occaſion ample materials for a large volume; which is ſo far advanced in the preſs, that it will be ready to publiſh in a few weeks."

The "Additional Collections" were accordingly publiſhed in July, as N° LI, with this apology:

"On the ample Collections which have been forming for an Hiſtory of the County of Leiceſter ever ſince the time of the induſtrious William Burton, it is needleſs to expatiate. A zeal for the honour and proſperity of Leiceſterſhire has gradually accumulated the preſent materials; but a defect in arrangement has evidently and unavoidably ariſen from the various periods at which they were obtained. To any other merit than that of aſſiduity and good intention the very nature of the volumes now ſubmitted to conſideration forbids the Collector to aſpire; their preſent appearance being that of a common-place-book, connected however by an Index, which it is hoped the Reader will conſult before he determines that any pariſh he may wiſh to examine is actually deficient. There will be few places in the county that are not mentioned in more parts of the book than one; and it will readily be perceived that the lateſt information very often materially improves, and in ſome few caſes almoſt wholly ſuperſedes, what had before been given. The beſt agology for having given ſo much, is a deſire that thoſe who may be diſpoſed to aſſiſt by future communications may have as little trouble in tranſcribing as is poſſible. When they ſee what is already done, they will have the goodneſs to add to it, or to ſuggeſt whatever may occur to them in the line of correction and improvement. If the Editor is ſo fortunate as to enjoy a continuance of health and ſpirits, he hopes to accompliſh a much completer Work, "The History and Antiquities of the Town and County of Leicester;" in which he earneſtly ſolicits, and doubts not of obtaining, the cordial aſſiſtance of his Literary Friends, and more eſpecially of thoſe who by local reſidence are in every way moſt competent to contribute their aid.

"The reſult of Mr. Peck's indefatigable aſſiduity, with the Collections which the late Sir Thomas Cave had formed during the ſkilful and attentive reſearch of many years, the Editor is happy to announce, will form the baſis of the intended publication. For theſe he is infinitely indebted to the liberality of the original Collector's grandſon, the late worthy Baronet, and to the friendly interceſſion of the Rev. Charles Cave [now Sir Charles Cave, Bart.] who has conſiderably increaſed the obligation by his own very uſeful notes and obſervations, and by the politeneſs with which the favour has been conferred. Two other manuſcripts, already in the Editor's poſſeſſion, will hereafter be of ſingular ſervice, though in the preſent work he has been delicate in extracting from them; "The Hiſtory and Antiquities of the ancient Town and once City of Leiceſter, by Thomas Staveley, Eſquire;" and, "An Eſſay on the Antiquities and Hiſtory of Leiceſter, by Samuel Carte, Vicar of St. Martin's, 1721." Theſe articles, with ſeveral engraved plates, were in the moſt liberal manner contributed by a Dignitary of the firſt eminence in literature, from whoſe pen there was once reaſon to have hoped for "The Antiquities of Leiceſter[2]." Of ſeveral other

---

[1] This alluſion will be explained hereafter, under the Hiſtory of Hinckley.

[2] On this head, ſee the Preface to vol. I.

Townſhips in the County it will be ſeen that a full account is here given; ſuch as, when incorporated with Burton, and enlarged by records and other authentic papers, will be ſufficient for the Hiſtory of thoſe places. The parts that may yet be deficient he hopes to ſupply, by his own diligent inveſtigation, and the exertions of his friends. Nor will the preſent maſs of information be wholly ſuperſeded, even when a complete Hiſtory of the County ſhall be produced. The Volumes now exhibited are a mine of rough materials, whence a fair ſuperſtructure may be raiſed; and will exiſt as ſome authority for what may be deduced from it in a form more regularly connected.

"It remains only to requeſt, in the moſt earneſt manner, the aſſiſtance of the Nobility, Clergy, and Gentlemen of the County[1], towards the completion of a regular Hiſtory, which the Publiſher of theſe Collections propoſes to undertake; reſpectfully ſoliciting them to favour the Public with Views of their family manſions, pariſh churches, antient monuments, or other remarkable articles of curioſity. The communication of whatever may tend to elucidate the antiquities, local cuſtoms, &c. of any one particular place, will be eſteemed a ſingular favour; and to the Clergy he looks forward with confidence, to aſſiſt him with Church notes, epitaphs, curious extracts from their Regiſters, Terriers, interleaved copies of Burton, &c. either in the method already pointed out by his friends, or in any more eligible mode that may occur to themſelves. The ſmalleſt article of information will be acceptable; and whatever he may be favoured with ſhall be duly attended to, and thankfully acknowledged. J. N."

To the laſt-mentioned publication was annexed the following copious liſt of queries, propoſed to the Nobility, Gentry, and Clergy, of Leiceſterſhire; with a view of completing, from their anſwers, an Account of the Antiquities and Natural Hiſtory of the ſeveral Pariſhes in the County.

1. What is the antient and modern name of the pariſh in which you reſide? and what do you ſuppoſe to be its etymology?

2. What is its diſtance from LEICESTER, or from the neareſt market-town?

3. What is the extent of the pariſh? and by what pariſhes is it bounded, Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South? and what are its length and breadth?

4. What number of hamlets, villages, townſhips, chapelries, &c. are in it? their names and ſituation? and to what diviſion, hundred, liberty, belonging?

5. What are the number of its houſes and inhabitants of every kind, and of its teams? liſt of freeholds and copyholds, and their holders?

6. What number of perſons have been married, chriſtened, and buried, for the ſpace of 20 years paſt, compared with the firſt 20 years of the regiſter? When did the regiſter begin? Are any curious entries or remarks made therein?

7. What manors are or were in the pariſh, and who are or were lords thereof?

8. What are the names and qualities, arms and deſcent, of their proprietors?

9. Are there any particular cuſtoms or privileges, or remarkable tenures, in any of the manors in the pariſh? What courts, and their peculiar cuſtoms? What exempt juriſdictions, civil or eccleſiaſtical?

10. What caſtle, fort, antient manor or manſion houſe, ſeat, villa, or other remarkable buildings, are or have been in the pariſh? and the dimenſions of their largeſt apartment or galleries?

11. What coats of arms, inſcriptions, dates, or other ornaments and figures, are or were carved or painted in and about any of their buildings?

12. In what manor, deanry, and hundred, does the CHURCH ſtand?

13. Is it dedicated to any Saint? when and by whom it was built, of what materials? and has it a tower or ſpire?

14. What are its dimenſions, number of ailes, chapels, and bells?

15. Are the font, altar-piece, or plate, antient, or any way remarkable?

16. What chantries, altars, ſhrines, lights, images, gilds, or roods, appear to have been in the church; or what privileges or indulgencies annexed to it?

17. Are there any painted figures, arms, or inſcriptions, in the windows? Is there any parochial library in the church or parſonage?

18. Are there any antient or modern monuments, grave-ſtones, or braſs plates? and what inſcriptions and arms in the church, chancel, or ſteeple, or on the bells, plate, cheſts, pews, ſcreens, &c. or in the church-yard? The communication of any ſuch monumental or other inſcriptions is particularly requeſted.

19. Are there any tables of benefactions, or other inſcriptions, which are worthy of notice, painted or carved in or about the church, within or without?

20. Are there any vaults or burial-places peculiar to any antient or other families? and what extraordinary interments or preſervation of bodies?

21. Is the living a rectory, vicarage, donative, or ſinecure?

22. Are the computed worth of the living and its rate in the King's books rightly ſtated in Bacon's Liber Regis, or in Ecton's Theſaurus?

23. Who are, or who have been, patrons?

24. Who are, or have been, incumbents, as far back as you can trace by the pariſh-regiſters or otherwiſe? and were any of them remarkable for their writings, ſufferings, or other particulars? of what univerſity or college, what their degrees or preferments, and where buried?

25. Are there any lands belonging to the glebe or vicarage, or any copy of the endowment, or any terrier? Has it been augmented by Queen Anne's bounty? What are the firſt-fruits, tenths, ſynodals, procurations, penſions, &c.?

26. Who is poſſeſſed of the great tithes? what may their reputed value be? and is any modus paid thereout, and to whom?

27. Is there any chapel of eaſe in the pariſh; how is it ſupported? and who are, or have been, incumbents? and of what value may the cure be ſuppoſed?

28. What charities or benefactions belong to the pariſh? when and by whom given? how improved, or how loſt? What was the return made to Parliament?

29. Are there any Diſſenting or other meeting-houſes, or Popiſh chapels? and what number of each perſuaſion may be in the pariſh?

30. Are there any colleges, alms-houſes, free or other ſchool, or hoſpital? by whom and when founded, for how many objects, and what is the preſent ſtate?

31. Have there been any abbeys, priories, friaries, nunneries, hermitages, ſanctuaries, or other religious houſes; or are there any remains or ruins of them? by whom founded, and to whom granted? what charters, cartularies, ledger books, rentals, ſtatutes, deeds, wills, obituaries, bede-rolls, or other writings, ſeals, habits, ſhrines, or other fragments, belonging to any church, monaſtery, chantry, gild, hoſpital, ſchool, or other charity?—Speed mentions Stane and Werewereden as Benedictine monaſteries in Leiceſterſhire. Q. where were thoſe houſes ſituated[2]?

32. Are there any croſſes or obeliſks, inſcribed or carved ſtones, circles of rude ſtones, ſingle ſtones on

---

[1] "It has been juſtly complained of in other Counties, that papers of the utmoſt conſequence to their Hiſtories have, with an uſeleſs precaution, been timidly withholden from public inſpection, under the futile idea that the titles of the proprietors might, by a free communication, be called in queſtion: but I have too good an opinion of my countrymen, to ſuppoſe them biaſſed by ſuch unmanly ſentiments; and am rather inclined to think, that every proprietor will willingly and joyfully contribute to the full completion of a work, in which every individual will be partly concerned. Every one muſt naturally wiſh to ſee the hiſtory of his property traced to its original holder; and no one would bluſh to know, that his preſent eſtate was, antiently, part of the poſſeſſion of the principal men in this kingdom." WYNDHAM.

[2] See the anſwers to the queries on Barkby hereafter, p. *64.

hillocks, or otherwiſe, hollows wrought in rocks, ſingle ſtones placed horizontally or over one another, or any beacons, in the pariſh?

33. Are there any barrows or tumuli, or extraordinary mounts? have any been opened, and what have been found therein?

34. Are there any Roman, Saxon, or Daniſh caſtles, forts, camps, roads, ditches, banks, pits, or other extraordinary earth-works, or pieces of antiquity, remaining in your pariſh; and what traditions or hiſtorical accounts are there of them?

35. Have there been any vaults, pavements, urns, pieces of pottery, lamps, weapons, armour, ſeals, rings, buckles, odd pieces of metal, ſtatues, buſts, carvings, altars, images, coins, or other pieces of antiquity, Roman, Saxon, Daniſh, or other, or bones of extraordinary ſize, dug up in your pariſh; when and by whom; and in whoſe cuſtody are or were they?

36. Have there been any remarkable battles fought? on what ſpot, by whom, when, and what traditions are there relating thereto? Or what the ſufferings or adventures of the clergy or gentry in the civil wars?

37. Have any councils, ſynods, parliaments, or other meetings, civil or religious, been held in it?

38. Have you any wake, Whitſun ale, doles, or other ſuch cuſtoms, uſed in the pariſh; or any annual or other proceſſions or perambulations?

39. What markets or fairs are kept in the pariſh? what commodities are chiefly brought for ſale; are they the manufactures or produce of the country, live cattle, or other things? what toll is paid, and to whom?

40. Is there any ſtatute-fair for hiring of ſervants, and how long has it been eſtabliſhed? What are the uſual wages for men and maid-ſervants, &c. for each branch of huſbandry?

41. Are there any manufactures carried on in the pariſh, and what number of hands are employed? What rare pieces of art have been invented or made by any of the pariſhioners?

42. What is generally a day's wages for labourers in huſbandry and other work; and what for carpenters, bricklayers, maſons, or other mechanicks, &c.?

43. What are, or have been, the prices of proviſions, beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork, pigs, geeſe, ducks, chicken, rabbits, butter, cheeſe, &c.?

44. What is the annual rent or value of the lands or houſes in the pariſh, or townſhip? what is the poors-rate in the pound, communibus annis?

45. What common, or quantity of waſte land, may be in the pariſh?

46. Are there any foreſts, chaces, parks, or warrens; of what extent, number of deer, &c.? any heronries, decoys, or fiſheries; and to whom belonging?

47. What is the uſual fuel? is it coal, wood, heath, furze, turf, or peat? and the prices paid on the ſpot?

48. Is there any great road leading through the pariſh, and from noted places?

49. Do any rivers, or brooks, or navigable canals, riſe in or run through the pariſh? and when and on what terms were the acts for making them navigable obtained?

50. What bridges, when and by whom built, of what materials, what number of piers or arches, the length and breadth of the bridge, and width of the arches? are they ſupported by private or public coſt?

51. Has the pariſh given birth or burial to any man eminent for learning, or other remarkable or valuable qualifications?

52. What particular games, ſports, cuſtoms, proverbs, or peculiar words or phraſes, or names of places, perſons, animals, vegetables, or things, are uſed; and what notions or traditions obtain among the common people?

53. Are there, in any of the gentlemen's or other houſes, any pictures which give inſight into any hiſtorical facts, or any portraits of men eminent in art, ſcience, or literature; any ſtatues, buſtos, or other memorial, which will give any light to paſt tranſactions; or what manuſcripts in any language, books of arms, pedigrees, lives, ſignatures, patents, diplomas, perambulations, ſurveys, plans, pictures, or drawings, of any perſons, buildings, or views, relating to the pariſh, in the poſſeſſion of any perſon in the pariſh, or their acquaintance?

54. What is the appearance of the country in the pariſh? is it flat or hilly, rocky, or mountainous, opened or incloſed; and the terms and mode of modern incloſing? and when was the incloſure made?

55. Do the lands conſiſt of woods, arable, paſture, meadow, heath, or what?

56. Are they fenny or mooriſh, boggy or firm, fertile or barren?

57. Is there ſand, clay, chalk, ſtone, gravel, loam, or what is the nature of the ſoil?

58. What petrifactions or foſſils are found in the pariſh, and in what ſtrata?

59. Are there any mines? to whom do they belong, and what do they produce?

60. Are there any mineral ſprings, frequented or not; at what ſeaſons of the year reckoned beſt, and what diſtempers are they frequented for? What are their qualities, virtues, weight, and analyſis; and what cures atteſted or wrought by them?

61. Are there any hot waters or wells for bathing, and for what diſtempers frequented? any wells or ſtreams formerly accounted holy?

62. Are there any lakes, meers, pools, or waterfalls; what their depth and height; where do they riſe, and whither do they run?

63. What is the proportion of arable, and meadow or paſture?

64. What are the chief produce of the lands, and in what proportion?

65. What is the general price paid for lands, arable, meadow, paſture, &c.? What ſort of manure is chiefly uſed for the land, and what is the price of it on the ſpot? What are the methods of tillage; what ſort of ploughs and other inſtruments of huſbandry are uſed? or have any new modes of cultivation been introduced?

66. What trees thrive beſt, or are moſt common? What plants, ſhrubs, grains, moſſes, graſſes, trees, fruits, flowers, are peculiar, or moſt common?

67. Is the pariſh remarkable for breeding any cattle of remarkable qualities, colour, ſize, value, or number, and how ſold? with other general obſervations.

68. What quantities of ſheep are raiſed or fed; and what is their chief food?

69. What is the nature of the air? is it moiſt or dry, clear or foggy; healthy, or ſubject to produce agues, fevers, or other diſorders? and at what time is it reckoned moſt ſo, and by what probable cauſe?

70. What are the kinds of birds, inſects, or reptiles, common or rare?

71. What ſorts of fiſh do the rivers produce, what quantities, what are their prices on the ſpot, and in what ſeaſons are they beſt?

72. What ſtrange accidents, wonderful events, or extraordinary diſeaſes and cures, have happened; or uncommon deaths, diſcoveries of murder, or apparitions; what legends and traditions obtain about them, or what their atteſtation?

73. Hath there been any remarkable miſchief done by thunder and lightning, ſtorms, whirlwinds, or earthquakes? Or any remarkable phænomena, or meteors?

74. To theſe Queries, as applied to the town of LEICESTER, any farther information will be uſeful, reſpecting its antient or modern hiſtory, foundations, ſtreets, buildings, walls, gates, churches, wards, pariſhes, charters, privileges, immunities, companies, gilds, government, trade, manufactures, ſieges, accidents by fire or otherwiſe; with liſts of the mayors, recorders, repreſentatives in parliament for the town and county; and, as far as any of theſe particulars are applicable to the other market-towns, or to any of the larger villages in the county, the ſame information is alſo requeſted.

⁂ Although it is not preſumed that every gentleman, to whom this ſet of queries is addreſſed, may have it in his power to anſwer them all; it is nevertheleſs hoped, that, if only a ſingle one ſhould occur, it may be communicated to J. NICHOLS; by whom the favour will be thankfully acknowledged.

Finding that in many inſtances the preceding queries were thought too voluminous, and that gentlemen, from not being able to anſwer the whole to their own ſatisfaction, were deterred from anſwering any, the following conciſer letter was addreſſed to every clergyman in the county:

"Dec. 4, 1790. Reverend Sir, Let me requeſt you to peruſe the incloſed Queries, and to anſwer ſuch of them as may more immediately apply to your own pariſh. As you poſſibly may not have ſeen the "Collections towards the Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire" which are already publiſhed, and which have been put forth principally with a view to obtain more correct and ſatisfactory information; I ſhall with pleaſure ſend you that part of the printed Collections, if you are ſo good as to tell me you have an inclination to ſee it, which relates to your own pariſh; and ſhall be thankful for the ſmalleſt articles of information or correction you may pleaſe to favour me with. The points in which I more eſpecially would wiſh to be indulged with your aſſiſtance are theſe: 1. A particular deſcription of your church in its preſent ſtate; and tranſcripts of the epitaphs it contains. 2. An account of the chapels connected with your church; whether ſtill in uſe, or deſecrated; alſo what meeting-houſes, and what public ſchools. 3. The names and dates of your predeceſſors, as far as your Regiſters will point them out; or any remarkable entries that appear there. 4. The number of houſes and inhabitants in your pariſh; with the number of baptiſms and burials for five years at three different periods. 5. The number of gentlemen's ſeats; and in what manor or manors? with the name of the preſent lord of the manor, and the ſucceſſion of its owners from 1622, when Burton's Hiſtory was publiſhed, to the preſent time. An earneſt deſire to render the Hiſtory I have undertaken as complete as poſſible muſt be my excuſe for giving you this trouble; and I ſhall hope at your leiſure to be honoured with an anſwer; being, with much reſpect, your very obedient ſervant, J. N."

In 1793, Mr. Throſby again appeared before the Publick, in "The Hiſtory and Antiquities of the Town of Leiceſter; being the firſt publiſhed Hiſtory of that antient Town."

"If this attempt," he ſays, "be found among the more humble efforts of this kind of writing, much may be ſaid in extenuation of its defects. The Writer, or Compiler, had no beaten track to paſs ſmoothly over. Nothing prior to this had been done, in any regular way, towards the Hiſtory of this antient place, that might aſſiſt him in this difficult undertaking. Mr. Staveley, ſteward of the Borough Records, in 1662, left a MS. which Dr. Farmer many years ſince offered to the conſideration of the Publick, but which was never publiſhed till incorporated [1] in this work. Beſides which, nothing material has contributed, as helps, but the Rev. Mr. Carte's [2] little MS.; Mr. Nichols's Collections; and Mr. Bickerſtaffe's Notes. In ſhort, the Compiler had to form from a maſs of undigeſted papers, and other materials which he had been collecting ever ſince the year 1777, ſomething like a regular ſyſtem, which might give the Reader a progreſſive detail of events; a taſk not extremely eaſy, it is known, to thoſe who have attempted provincial hiſtory. One advantage, however, may reſult to the publick from this undertaking. The Author is a native of the place he has deſcribed, and has been many years in the habit of noticing occurrences as they aroſe; and from that conſideration few, he preſumes, have eſcaped him; to which may be added, his predilection to the arts and things of Antiquity, with at leaſt a common ſhare of induſtry."

The materials for the preſent more extenſive undertaking were in the mean time rapidly accumulating; and, on mature deliberation, it was thought adviſeable to arrange the whole work in four volumes, and to publiſh it in ſeven parts; two of which accordingly appeared in 1795; and a third in 1798. A fourth is now ſubmitted to the reader; and the three remaining portions, each containing a complete Hundred, ſhall be proceeded with as ſpeedily as the nature of ſo laborious a work will admit.

It may now be not improper to ſtate briefly the circumſtances which led to the diſcovery of Mr. Burton's long-loſt volume; which cannot be done more effectually than by an extract from Mr. Shaw's letter to Mr. Urban [3]:

"After having obtained about 30 folio volumes of MSS. to ſelect from, beſides an infinite number of detached papers, and the liberal uſe of family records; I thought there could be little more left of value to me in the county of Stafford, unexplored. Laſt week, making a more particular ſearch at Ingeſtre [4], where I had before obtained the two curious Chetwynd MSS. I fortunately diſcovered, amidſt a chaos of antient evidences, &c. three other MS volumes for Staffordſhire, conſiſting of numerous extracts from leiger-books, old deeds, church notes, &c. with abundant looſe papers of parochial accounts, pedigrees, and other relicks of Antiquity, in the original writing of my venerable predeceſſors, Erdeſwick, Burton, Sir Simon Degge, Ferrers of Baddeſley, and Walter Chetwynd. In the ſame boxes was another treaſure for Leiceſterſhire, Burton's own printed Hiſtory, copiouſly interleaved, and enlarged with various marginal notes, &c. for a ſecond edition, by the Author, as appears by his writing in the title-page, and a long ſecond Preface, dated "Lindley, ... 1641," near 20 years after the firſt. This intended edition remaining unpubliſhed, fell, with various other MSS. of Burton, into the hands of the above excellent antiquary, Walter Chetwynd, who had not only left for my diſcovery a large volume of the ſame, with other additions in his own fair writing, but alſo a duplicate, in the ſame admirable penmanſhip and heraldic manner as the Chetwynd MS. for the Hundred of Pirehill, ſtill in my poſſeſſion. Theſe were, no doubt, both executed by the ſame ingenious perſon from the College of Arms, Gregory King [5], who was clerk to Sir William Dugdale, and tranſcribed and embelliſhed his beautiful Viſitation of Staffordſhire; to which my firſt volume is indebted for ſo many curious monuments, arms, and inſcriptions, formerly in Lichfield cathedral, &c. of which city he was a native, though I am ſorry he eſcaped my notice among the reſt of its numerous Worthies, having only recently met with his life in Dallaway's ingenious book upon Heraldry; where it is farther ſaid, that he copied the deeds, and tricked the ſeals, &c. in the beautiful Chetwynd Chartulary, which I have before deſcribed [6] to be on vellum, elegantly bound, and decorated with a fine portrait of the Author. This is a ſcarce print, and well engraved. I think it was taken from a painting now in the hall at Ingeſtre; but was too anxiouſly employed amongſt the above MSS. to compare them ſufficiently. Amidſt ſuch a collection, I had great hopes of diſcovering the long-loſt original Survey of Staffordſhire by Erdeſwick; but I am now convinced it is not at Ingeſtre, and probably not now extant. Burton, in a curious Latin Preface (which I ſhall tranſcribe below) dated in 1604, only one year after Erdeſwick's death, ſpeaks very highly of his performance; but adds, that even then it was not known for certain into whoſe hands the MS. fell, though he had heard it was in the poſſeſſion of ſir Thomas Gerrard, knt.; if ſo, there is a poſſibility that I may ſtill recover it among the archives of that antient family, now belonging, with great part of their property, to Hugo Meynell, eſq. In the mean time, if I may be allowed to hazard a conjecture, after ſo many able enquirers concerning that original MS. I ſhould think it was the copy from which the very incorrectly printed Erdeſwick was publiſhed, and which may, in ſome meaſure, account for the great number of inaccuracies therein, as the Author's hand-writing, rendered ſtill worſe by his peculiar contractions, was certainly very illegible and difficult to a mere printer, who had no local knowledge to aſſiſt him. I ſhall now, Sir, conclude with obſerving how fortunate it has been, both for the publick, Mr. Nichols, and myſelf, that, during our labours, and the minority of the preſent owner of Ingeſtre, Earl Talbot, who is ſtill on his travels in Ruſſia, the guardians of his affairs are liberal enough to permit me to put the above MSS. to the uſe for which they were originally intended. You will, therefore, oblige me by thus informing the Hiſtorian of Leiceſterſhire, that I hope ſoon to return to my employment in town for the winter, well laden with the above curious volumes, &c. for his inſpection.

---

[1] In what manner this is performed, it would be invidious here to mention.

[2] The meagre abſtract given to Sir Thomas Cave by Dr. Browne Willis, and firſt printed in Bibl. Top. Brit. N° L. p. 593.

[3] Gent. Mag. vol. LXVIII. p. 921.

[4] During ſome recent repairs of the roof of that noble old manſion, were found numerous ſilver coins of Charles I. and II. hid there, probably, in the troubles of thoſe reigns.

[5] One of the copies ſeems to have been tranſcribed by Mr. Charles King; ſee p. v.

[6] Gent. Mag. vol. LXIV. p. 1080.

S. SHAW, Hartſhorn, Nov. 4, 1798."

The above-mentioned Preface of Mr. Burton was intended for the work which he gave to the Publick, in 1622, under the title of "The Deſcription of Leiceſterſhire; containing Matters of Antiquity, Hiſtory, Armory, and Genealogy;" but which, according to his firſt ideas, was to have appeared under the following title:

"Collectio armorum, inſignium gentilitiorum, tumulorum, et eorum inſcriptionum, monumentorum, et cæterarum antiquitatum, in ſingulâ fere eccleſiâ, templo, monaſterio, aliove loco memorabili, in comitatu Leiceſtrenſi, quas ætas et tempus ad nos devenire permiſerunt, hic deſcripta, labore et ſtudio plerumque Willmi Wyrley, Leiceſtrenſis.
Acceſſit etiam collectio antiquitatum in quibuſdam eccleſiis in comitatibus circumjacentibus, cæteriſque ubicunque, labore prædicti W. Wyrley.
Nomina eorum, qui huic cumulo aliquid adjecerunt.

S. E. Sampſon Erdeſwick, de Sandon, Staff.
H. P. Humfredus Purefey, de Barwell, Leic.
W. B. Willmus Burton, de Lindley, Leic.
H. A. Hieronimus Aſton, de Leiceſter.
T. P. Thomas Purefey, de Barwell, Leic.
W. S. Willmus Smith, Londinenſis.
N. C. Nicholaus Charles, Londinenſis.
R. C. Robertus Cooke, Clarentius Rex Armorum.
N. D. Nicolaus Dethick, Windſor Heraldus.
E. G. Edmundus Gunter, ædis Chriſti in Oxon. ſcholaris.
T. I. Thomas Ingram, de Hinckley, Leic.
W. Bel. Willmus Belcher, de Gildeſburgh, Northampt."

The Preface, fairly written out in Mr. Burton's hand, runs thus:

"Willmus Burton, Lindliacus, Leiceſtrenſis, amico lectori ſalutem. Cum in omni genere cognitionis ſcientia antiquitatum, rerumque veterum et præteritarum ſit digniſſima et maximè laudabilis, tum, ut mihi videtur, earum conſervatio, et ab imâ oblivione ſive interitu vindicatio, æquam meretur laudem. Quum enim ego non ita pridem in libellum incidi, qui antiquitates, monumenta, et multa alia notatu digna comitatûs Leiceſtrenſis, tum etiam paucorum circumjacentium comitatuum illuſtravit; hoc animo animadvertens meo, nil gratius eſſe quam prodeſſe multis, ejiciens omnem laboris metum, aggrediendum duxi, quem rudi pennâ et pennicillo (ut aiunt) indocto hic depinxi. Et ut nemini ingratus viderer, narrabo breviter, per quos profeci, et quorum labore congeſtus hic liber ſit. Willmus Wyrley, patriâ Leiceſtrenſis, natus, ut ipſe refert, apud Seile, com. Leic. 4 Eliz. è gentilitiis Staff. oriundus, et per matrem è familiâ de Charnels, de Snareſton, com. Leic. homo ſedulus et honeſtus, et ſtudio heraldico multum addictus, circa annum 1588, hunc laborem ſuſcepit, nimirum perambulandi et colligendi antiquitates, arma gentilitia, cæteraque notatu digna, quæ in quâvis eccleſiâ, locove celebriori infra comitatum Leiceſtrenſem et alibi forent ſpectanda, non ſine impenſis et labore gravi; ſæpeque mihi retulit (familiariter enim cum eo egi) ſe totum comitatum Leiceſtrenſem, topographicâ, hiſtoricâ, et heraldicâ narratione deſcriptum velle; quantúmque hâc in re progreſſus eſt pro certo non habeo[1]; vereor enim ne impeditus negotiis, vel aliis coactus cauſis, propoſitum intermiſerit. Circa annum 1599 profectus eſt in Scotiam ad regem Jacobum, et, quantum nunc audio, circa palatium regis moratur; ſed amplius de inſtituto ſuo hâc in re pro comperto non teneo. Quocirca quum tam commoda et neceſſaria ſit hæc deſcriptio, et unicuique perutilis, ego tametſi ex minimis infimus, ex indoctis indoctiſſimus, exemplo inductus doctiſſimi et reverendiſſimi viri Guil. Camdeni, cui Britannia tantum debet quantum orbis Ortelio, exemplo etiam Johis Nordeni et Ricardi Carewe, quorum hic Cornubiam, ille Middleſexiam et Hertfordiam deſcripſit, tum etiam exemplo amici mei ſingularis et unicè colendi viri literatiſſimi et ornatiſſimi Samſonis Erdeſwick, de Sandon, Staffordienſis, qui accuratiſſimè, quantum unquam aliquis comitatus Stafford, et Ceſtriæ deſcripſit, opus grande, doctiſſimum, laboratiſſiméque navatum: ſed, heu dolendum! immaturâ præreptus morte, in lucem non edidit, ſicut in animo eſſet ſuo, cujus conſilii ego teſtis etiam eſſe poſſim; quod opus in cujus nunc latet manibus incertum eſt; audivi nuper, quod penes eſſet Tho. Gerrard militem, utinam in lucem propediem prodiret in perpetuam reipublicæ utilitatem. His ego, inquam, inſtigatus exemplis, et his de cauſis permotus, provinciam Leiceſtrenſem illuſtrandam ſuſcepi; collegi quædam laceris chartis, et, quantum pro tam brevi temporis ſpatio licuit, antiquitates quaſdam enodavi, inſignia gentilitia et ſtemmata genealogica comparavi; ſed vereor ne quod mihi propoſueram aſſequi non poſſim; duobus enim ferè abhinc annis incidi in morbum dictum phthiſim ſive tabem, quo nunc afficior, cujus diuturnitate continuâ, vires corporis ita fractæ et labefactatæ ſunt, ut nec mihi facultas ſtudendi, nec poteſtas inveſtigandi aut ſcribendi, data ſit: interim tamen quibus poſſim viribus operam intendo, ut hic comitatus, qui a nobilibus præclariſſimis ſiquis in Angliâ alter, et multis antiquitatibus refertur, inter reliquos emicet, caputque elevet ſuum,

"Quantum lenta ſolent inter viberna cupreſſi."

"Faxit Deus, ut in ſtudioſorum et candidatorum gratiam hanc deſcriptionem, uſque ad ſummum deſiderium, quod avidè cupio et aveo, perficiam et perfectis partibus abſolvam. Interea temporis (amice lector) hoc opus æquè accipito, quod non ſine magno labore et ſumptu collectum fuit; et quantum ego pro virili comprehendere poſſim, mei incuriâ vel negligentiâ omiſſum non erit. Vale. Lindley, 7 Apr. 1604."

If I had fortunately poſſeſſed Mr. Burton's improved copy before the plan of the preſent work had been finally arranged; I ſhould perhaps have preferred the giving of his labours entirely diſtinct, in the manner propoſed by Dr. Heathcote; and have publiſhed in ſeparate volumes the ſubſequent reſearches of my other induſtrious predeceſſors. But, as that plan is at preſent impracticable, it would be injuſtice to the memory of Mr. Burton, were I not to avail myſelf, as far as poſſible, of his curæ poſteriores. I ſhall therefore preſerve his original Dedication and Preface; eſpecially as it was printed improperly in the Introductory Volume[1].

---

[1] Wyrley's original MS. containing alſo many churches in the counties of Stafford, Northampton, York, Rutland, and Warwick, is now in the library of the Heralds College; bearing the mark V. 197. It appears alſo that he afterwards accompanied Burton, in his ſurvey of the churches there, in the years 1603, 1608, &c. In V. N° 127, in the ſame library, is a fair and beautiful copy of both their labours in this way, with the arms, monuments, and antiquities, well drawn.—V. is the mark of Auguſtine Vincent, Windſor herald, whoſe collections are all in this library.

"To the Illuſtrious and Right Honourable George Villers, Marquis and Earl of Buckingham, viſcount Villers, Baron Whaddon, Lord High Admiral of England, Ireland, and the Principality of Wales; Great Maſter of his Majeſty's Horſe, Knight of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter, and one of the Lords of his Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council.

"Right Honourable, Having undertaken to remove an eclipſe from the ſun, without art or aſtronomical dimenſion, to give light to the county of Leicester, whoſe beauty hath long been ſhadowed and obſcured, have adventured to ſubmit the work to your Honour's patronage; for that upon the diſcovery of thoſe rays, Truth will come forth, againſt whom will many adverſaries riſe; who for that ſhe appeareth naked and unarmed, and cannot of herſelf reſiſt the violence of their furious encounters; vouchſafe therefore, Good Lord, to grant a protection to her, and to the county, and take them both under your Honour's tutelage, ſince by birth they do belong to you, and none alike to you can make the like defence, whoſe only word can calm the ſtrongeſt aſſault; then will their glorious beams reflect upon your ſelfe, and make your Honour ever more to ſhine, ſo ſhall both they and I for ever be your Honour's truly devoted, William Burton."

The Preface to the Reader, as finally ſettled in 1641, for "the ſecond Edition, corrected and enlarged by the Author," ſtands thus:

"Courteous Reader: Amongſt the multitude of writers that daily come abroad to the view of the world, I have now thruſt myſelf amidſt the crowd, to write upon a ſubject hitherto not treated of by any; not for any ſelf-conceit or vain glory, for I am one of thoſe which hold, that

"Gloria totius res eſt vaniſſima mundi."

Nor that I am ſo well opinionated of my own knowledge, or ability, or hold myſelf able, or fit to handle ſuch a matter, which requires a moſt learned and judicious head, to manage and diſcover; but muſt truly confeſs myſelf altogether unfit and unfurniſhed for this ſo great a buſineſs. Unfit, for that myſelf was bound for another ſtudy, which is jealous, and will admit no partner; for that all time, and parts of time, that could poſſibly be employed therein, were not ſufficient to be diſpended thereon, by reaſon of the difficulty of getting, and multiplicity of kinds of learning therein. Yet, if a partner might be aſſigned or admitted thereto, there is no ſtudy or learning ſo fit or neceſſary for a Lawyer as the ſtudy of Antiquities, and ſpecies thereof, which I could make good for many cauſes: yet was I drawn to this ſtudy of Antiquities by a natural genius; and as thoſe two learned writers, Georgius Brunius[2] and Hieronimus Henninges[3] (the one the author of "Theatrum Urbium," the other of "Theatrum Genealogicum") do ſay of themſelves, that though by profeſſion and calling they were Divines, yet being drawn by a natural inſtinct, the one to the love of pictures, proſpectives, maps, and other geographical delights; the other to the ſtudy of genealogies; that therefore no man ſhould lay any imputation upon them, for thoſe their labours, ſith that (ſay they) Saint Hierom, Bede, Iſidore, Oroſius, Æneas Sylvius, Rodericus Toletanus, and many Fathers of the Church, did delight themſelves with human learning, and each of them ſet forth hiſtories, or ſome other treatiſes, expreſſing their variety of content therein. The like may I ſay of myſelf: I gave way in ſome ſort to my own deſire, chuſing rather to recreate myſelf in this kind, than either to be miſemployed, or altogether idle, having ever accounted this old ſaying of Seneca[4] good and true, "Otium ſine literis mors eſt;" contrary to that vain and idle humour of ſome brutiſh gallants, who, having no learning themſelves, hold all learning baſe, and the lovers thereof alike; but their cenſure I refer to D. Onofrio Zarrabini[5] and Petrus Crinitus[6]; and holding that Caſtilian proverb authentical, "Mas vale ſaber, que aver," that knowledge is more worth than wealth. Unfurniſhed I ſay, for that through the weak conſtitution of my body, not being able to follow that practice which my calling did require, have now retired myſelf to a private country life, and ſo may with that conceited Macaronic poet[7] ſay:

"Et quoniam mea ſit quâ ſcribo penna badilus, Et faciam druſias foſſa cavando manus;"
"And though my pen be chang'd into a paddle,
And thereby make hard hands, and in trenches baddle;"

cannot therefore make ſuch diſcourſe as the worthineſs of the ſubject requireth, being hereby deſtitute of thoſe helps which the City affordeth; yet notwithſtanding, rather than my native country ſhould any longer lie obſcured with darkneſs, I have adventured (in ſome ſort) to reſtore her to her worth and dignity, being animated hereto by the examples of many grave and worthy men; as that moſt learned and never-enough admired Antiquary, William Camden, eſq. late Clarenceux King of Arms, who moſt exactly hath diſcovered the whole continent of all Britannia; and that induſtrious and well-deſerving Maſter John Speed, who, in that his great and elaborate Hiſtory of England, hath well ſpoken of all the ſhires, and, by his great travail and expenſes, hath, for farther grace thereto, added the maps of each ſhire, the plot of every city and great town therein inſerted, never before performed by any. By others, who have illuſtrated ſeveral counties; as, namely, that grave and ſage lawyer, William Lambarde, of Lincoln's Inn, eſq. who from the depth of Antiquity hath reſtored the county of Kent; which comes in view again by the expert herald John Philipot, eſq. Somerſet officer at arms. The eloquent and noble gentleman, Richard Carew, eſq. who very worthily hath ſurveyed all Cornwall: And that excellent ſurveyor John Norden, gentleman, who hath briefly deſcribed the counties of Middleſex and Hertford; and ſince then hath made certain chorographical tables of ſome Weſtern ſhires, and a fine proſpective of the City of London. [[8]Being alſo encouraged by many my good friends of worth, among whom I cannot let paſs unremembered (without a thankful acknowledgement) the kind aſſiſtance and good directions of my antient and much reſpected friend and kinſman, John Beaumont, of Gracedieu, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq.; as alſo of that expert genealogiſt, my good friend and kinſman, Mr. Auguſtine Vincent[9], by his place Rouge Croix Officer at Arms, who very kindly from the Tower hath imparted to me many worthy notes, elſewhere not to be had or found, whoſe labours alſo in this kind for the County of Northampton ere long will come to light.] In this Deſcription I have run through in every town (as occaſion was offered) thoſe four ſections[1] above mentioned in the title-page. As for the Topography of this County, at the requeſt of a friend of mine, I rectified (certain years paſſed) Chriſtopher Saxton's map of this County, with an addition of 80 towns, which was graven at Amſterdam by Iodocus Hondius 1602, and ſince imitated by Mr. Speed in his great Hiſtory of Britain, with an augmentation of the Plot of the town of Leiceſter, and reduced into a leſſer form, and here inſerted; and of thoſe places which are of a more eminent ſite, I have briefly ſpoken ſomething throughout. And where any natural paſſage offered itſelf to be ſpoken of, I have there a little digreſſed, and written what I thought, not thinking it altogether impertinent to give ſatisfaction to the Reader in this kind. And to the end likewiſe that this diſcourſe might give content in ſome ſort to each, I have of purpoſe (where conveniently I might) uſed ſuch hiſtorical digreſſions, as with fitneſs might upon the precedent treatiſe have dependance; like unto thoſe artificial Cooks and Confectionaries, who, in ſetting forth of a feaſt or banquet, do fit ſeveral diſhes and conceits for ſeveral palates. I have obſerved, as near as I could be aſcertained, the times of the foundations of all monaſteries, abbeys, religious houſes, churches, chapels, houſes of nobility, or other memorable places of note, which hereafter perhaps may give light to ſome other paſſages. Concerning the titles of land herein expreſſed, where manors, lands, or tenements, did deſcend by an heir-general, or were granted by the king's letters patents, or by any ſuch eminent grant; I have there made bold to ſet down the ſame, which I have done for this purpoſe; that the antiquity of continuance of them in a name or blood might be diſcovered, and the antient owner (ſo far as could be found) might be known, not intending to derogate any thing from any man's right or title, or to move any doubts or queſtions to the ſame. In ſetting down of tenures I have been very ſparing, leſt, for my over-boldneſs, I might be juſtly cenſured. The ſocage tenure I have expreſſed, and no certainty of any other, unwilling to give any cauſe of offence; for well I know there are more differences and more ſtrange proceedings and carriages in theſe buſineſſes, than in any one thing of ſo common a nature; yet no doubt they might be rectified, if the trueſt and moſt probable records and evidences were accepted. Offices and inquiſitions are very uncertain, ſometimes clean contrary to truth, which are paſſed and concluded with ſuch proofs as for that time are delivered. Thoſe caſes of law which of later times have happened within the ſhire, I have briefly remembered; in ſome, ſhewing ſome arguments and reaſons of the judgement. As touching the genealogies and arms of the gentry, I have forborn to write of the modern, only ſpeaking of the old and antient, whoſe families are now extinct, leſt, perhaps, for not giving to each one now living his own content, I might be without cauſe challenged: only ſome few of my friends I have remembered, upon whoſe kindneſs I have preſumed, that they will accept in good part whatſoever I have delivered. For the ſtate of the Church, I thought good to ſet down in the ſame manner as I find it expreſſed in an old manuſcript, made anno 1220, in the fifth year of Henry III. wherein is diſcovered what churches were rectories, what were appropriate: if rectories, who was the patron, who the incumbent, what chapels belonging unto them, and how they were to be ſerved, whether by a chaplain reſident, or on certain days, or ex gratiâ. If appropriate, to what monaſtery or religious houſe belonging. And in ſome, how the vicar was endowed, and with what, and to whom the tithes were to be paid. I have farther added out of the records in the Office of the Auditors of the Preſs, by the means and help of Sir Francis Goſton, knight, late one of the Auditors, what value they are now of in the King's books. And further, I have ſhewed who are the now patrons of every Church. For the Roman Antiquities, or any other of note, I have briefly touched ſo many as have come to my knowledge.

---

[1] It was printed, I am aſhamed to ſay, by ſome ſtrange inadvertency, from the diſtorted copy in Whittingham's edition of 1777.

[2] Prefat. in tertium tom. Theatri Orbis, in 4 Monarchia, parte priori.

[3] Theatrum Genealogicum, Epiſt.

[4] Epiſt. ad Lucilium.

[5] D. Onofrio Zarrabini di Cotignola, della Nobilita Civile & Chriſtiana: Vinegia, 1586, 4to.

[6] De honeſtâ diſciplinâ, lib. ii. cap. 12.

[7] Merl. Coccaio, Sonol. 1. de Zanitonella.

[8] The paſſage between the hooks is croſſed out, and theſe words ſubſtituted: "And laſtly, by that painful and true lover of Antiquities John Stowe, who not many years ſince made an accurate ſurvey of the City of London, ſetting down the worthineſs, and antient and memorable antiquities of that famous city; imitating therein the labours of Franceſco Sanſovino, who in that kind hath exactly deſcribed the city of Venice. And ſince the firſt edition of this book many other counties (as I hear) are now in hand by many learned judicious gentlemen; as Worceſterſhire, almoſt finiſhed and made ready for the preſs by Thomas Abingdon, of Henlip, co. Worceſter, eſq.; Northamptonſhire, by Mr. Norden; Nottinghamſhire, by Gilbert Boune, a ſerjeant at law; and Warwickſhire (but by whom for certain is not now fixed), and which (it is hoped) in good time will get to public view.

[9] Of whom ſee Gent. Mag. vol. LXI. p. 312. There probably was ſome decay of friendſhip; Brook by Vincent came out the ſame year as Burton.

"Laſtly, I have added all the Arms in all the Church windows in the ſhire, and the inſcriptions of the Tombs, which (for the moſt part) I have taken by my own view and travel, to this end, for that perhaps they may rectify Armouries and Genealogies, and may give teſtimony, proof, and end, to many differences. For my own knowledge I can affirm, that the antiquity of a Church window, for the proof of a match and iſſue had, hath been delivered in evidence to a jury at an aſſizes, and hath been accepted. I have alſo added the names to moſt of the coats, for which I had any proof or probable conjecture thereto. If the blazon do not give ſatisfaction, I muſt confeſs, I have not followed that conceited blazon of Gerard Leigh, or others of later times, but delivered in ſuch terms as myſelf was beſt acquainted with, and would ſerve for any one's underſtanding. Thus, gentle Reader, have I made known unto thee my whole intendment, deſiring thy favourable acceptance of theſe my labours [and endeavours; which (as they be) unto thy friendly cenſure I ſubmit them all and myſelf[2].]

From Fald (near Tutbury) co. Staff. Oct. 30, 1622. WILLIAM BURTON."

As Mr. Burton had in ſome meaſure altered the arrangement of his volume, particularly by a conſiderable enlargement of the Prolegomena, his new plan ſhall here be ſtated.

He begins, as before, with the General Deſcription of the County, not differing ſubſtantially from that already given in the preſent work.

His account of the rivers and parks, however, in 1630, ſhall here be copied.

"To ſpeak ſomething of the rivers wherewith this country is watered, which do naturally ſo rank their ſtreams into ſuch fit diſtances, and paſs into ſuch befitting tracts, that they may very well be compared to the natural veins uniformly running in due parts throughout the body, the chiefeſt of which is the Soar, antiently called Leire, riſing in the South weſt ſide of the ſhire, not far from Watling-ſtreet, having two heads, a mile and more diſtant aſunder: upon one of which ſtandeth a town called Leire, ſo called of the ſaid river: a little beyond Whetſton, it receiveth in another brook called Sence, increaſed before with another little purl; and then, having gotten to ſome greatneſs, keepeth on a ſlow and ſtill courſe by Leiceſter, which it compaſſeth upon the Weſt and North ſide, and ſo paſſing through the middle of the ſhire, bending his courſe toward the North-weſt, dividing part of this county from Nottingham a little beyond Radcliffe upon Soar, falleth into Trent. The next of name is Wreke, which, riſing in the Eaſt part, keepeth on his courſe Weſtward, through a deep narrow valley much like a trough, and at Coſſington falleth into Soar. Another called Dene, running beyond Belvoir Caſtle, and turning into Nottinghamſhire, at length falleth into Trent. A ſmall river called Sence, ſpringing not far from Snibſton, keepeth on a Southerly courſe; and a little beneath Atherſton, co. Warwick, falleth into Anker. The little Snite, which falleth into Dene, riſeth about Howes in this ſhire. There are certain other ſmall brooks and rills without names, which, wandering along, are ſwallowed by the greater ſtreams, and no doubt bring neceſſary benefit to the places which they paſs by.

"This ſhire hath been reaſonably well ſtored with places for vert and veniſon, but now not ſo well furniſhed. The antient Foreſt of Charnwood, commonly called Loughborough Foreſt, by reaſon of its vicinity to that town, hath long ago been diſafforeſted, of which I ſhall ſpeak hereafter in its place. The chace of Leiceſter was lately well repleniſhed with game, but now they are deſtroyed. It antiently belonged to the earls of Leiceſter, who had many parks alſo near adjoining. The parks which are now in uſe in this county are theſe:

"Tooly Park, ſometimes belonging to the Caſtle at Earl Shilton; after to the dutchy of Lancaſter. It was lately the inheritance of Judith Lady Corbet.

---

[1] Antiquity, Hiſtory, Armoury, and Genealogy.

[2] Theſe words are croſſed out, and this ſentence ſubſtituted: "which, had they been of more worth, the tender would have been otherwiſe;" but, "Majores majora ſonent; mihi parva locuto Sufficit in veſtras ſæpe redire manus." Martial, Epig. ix. 1.

“ Barne Park, belonging to the Earls of Leiceſter, now part of the ſaid dutchy.

“ Garendon Park, belonging to the Earl of Rutland.

“ Donnington
Burly
Aſhby 2.
Parks, belonging to the Earl of Huntingdon; one of which parks, called the Old Park, did belong to the baron of Aſhby; the other imparked by William lord Haſtings, by licence of King Edward IV. 14 Edward IV.

“ Bradgate Park, belonging to the Earl of Stamford.

“ Kirby Park, imparked by William firſt Lord Haſtings 14 Edward IV. now the inheritance of ſir Robert Banaſtre.

“ Stanton Park, belonging to ſir Charles Shirley, bart.

“ Bagworth Park, imparked by William Lord Haſtings 14 Edward IV. now the inheritance of Frances Lady Manners.

“ Parks diſparked. Newhall Park, belonging to Mr. Turvile of Thurleſton. Desford, belonging to the antient Earls of Leiceſter, now part of the dutchy of Lancaſter. Hinckley, ſometimes belonging to the barony of Hinckley. Bardon, ſometimes belonging to the Lord Beaumont. Beaumanor, imparked by Henry Lord Beaumont. Groby, imparked by the Lord Ferrers of Groby, now belonging to the Earl of Stanford. Holt, imparked by Thomas Palmer, eſq. by licence granted 26 Henry VI. Loughborough Park, imparked by Hugh le Deſpenſer; diſparked 1630. Cole Orton Park, imparked by John de Maureward temp. 1 Edward I. Saint Mary Abbey Park, by Leiceſter. Frith Park, belonging to Leiceſter Caſtle, granted by Henry Duke of Lancaſter to the New College at Leiceſter, called the Newark [1]. Beaumont Leys, antiently belonging to the old earls of Leiceſter. Nouſeley Park, now diſparked. Whitwick, ſometimes belonging to the caſtle at Whitwick.”

Mr. Burton propoſed to divide his ſubject into two books; the firſt of which he thus opens:

“ The government of this county is in two kinds, eccleſiaſtical and temporal. Touching the eccleſiaſtical government, this ſhire in antient times had the juriſdiction of an epiſcopal ſee; for, as William de Malmſbury [2] writeth, Etheldred king of Mercia, dividing his kingdom into biſhopricks in the year of our Lord 680, placed an epiſcopal ſee at Leiceſter, and made Sexwulfe the firſt biſhop there; from whom ſucceeded eleven biſhops, Leoſwin being the laſt; in whoſe time, and in the reign of king Edgar in the year 979, it was united to Lincoln; within which dioceſe it now is, and oweth ſubjection to the metropolitanate of Canterbury. The ſtate of the church I have ſet down in three rolls; the firſt made 1220, 5 Henry III. the title whereof is Matriculus Domini Hugonis de Welles [3] Epiſcopi Linc. de omnibus eccleſiis in archidiaconatu Leiceſter. 1220; the which is expreſſed ſparſim in the ſecond part in every enſuing pariſh; the original, in an old manuſcript in vellum, is now remaining in the library of Sir Thomas Cotton, bart. ſon and heir of that noble and worthy preſerver of Antiquities, Sir Robert Cotton, knt. and bart. not long ſince deceaſed; the tranſcript of which roll was ſent to me by the learned and judicious lawyer and antiquary, John Selden, of the Inner Temple, eſq. The ſecond roll was made between the 13th and 23d of Edward III. about the 18th year of his reign, which myſelf copied out of the original, now remaining in the hands of a private gentleman. The third made in the 26 Henry VIII. the original whereof is in the Augmentation Court; all which I thought good to delineate at large, that, being of that worth and value of themſelves, and perhaps hereafter may be uſeful unto many, they might eſcape the ſharp edge of Time's keen ſickle. This county hath one only archdeaconry, which is valued in the king's books at £87. 19*s.* 2*d.*; and is divided into ſix deanries; viz. Framland, Goſcote, Acle, Gartre, Guthlaxton, and Sparkenhoe; beſides Decanatus Chriſtianitatis Leiceſt. This ſhire hath pariſhes 205; whereof rectories 116, Houghton and Sheepey having double rectories; vicarages 85; donatives or ſtipendiaries, now not inſtituted and inducted, 6.”

The different eccleſiaſtical articles above ſpecified will all be found in our introductory volume; and from the whole Mr. Burton had formed one general table, which he thus prefaced:

“ Out of theſe above-written rolls, and ſome other notes which I have of the like kind, I thought good, in the ſame form, to expreſs in this table the ſtate of them altogether, that at one view the deſirous reader might be fully aſcertained in every of them, both of the antient and modern ſtate; wherein will appear, what alteration and changes, as well of churches as pariſhes, ſucceeding time hath wrought. Many of theſe churches were appropriate to divers monaſteries and religious houſes in ſeveral counties; which being ſcattered in the book, are here in this table [4] contracted for thy more ſpecial uſe.”

Then follows “ A Catalogue of the Writers which either were born or lived in this county;” an article in which, it is preſumed, the preſent work is not deficient. Mr. Burton thus proceeds:

“ The temporal government of this county is of two kinds, civil and martial. The civil kind of government may be again ſubdivided into juriſdiction particular and general. The particular juriſdiction is exerciſed by mayors, ſtewards of county leets, franchiſes, hundreds, courts baron, high conſtable, and petty conſtables. The general juriſdiction is exerciſed by juſtices of aſſize, juſtices of peace, ſheriffs, coroners, clerks of the market.

“ Concerning the ſheriff's juriſdiction, it was for many years conjoined with Warwickſhire, one ſheriff ſerving both counties, yearly choſen out of one of thoſe two ſhires by turns, until the eighth year of the reign of queen Elizabeth; and then by two acts of parliament, the one made in the eighth year of queen Elizabeth, the other made 13 Eliz. they were ſeparated and diſjoined, each county having now a peculiar ſheriff of their own by virtue of thoſe two acts; yet one eſcheator ſerveth ſtill yearly both counties.

“ As touching the etymology of the word Sheriff, of his antiquity and authority, for that my Lord Coke, in his Commentaries upon Littleton's Tenures [5], hath learnedly diſcovered them all; and better cannot be ſaid, I thought good here to expreſs in hiis verbis what there I found by him written. “ Shireve is a word compounded of two Saxon words, viz. Shiꞃe and Reve. Shire, Satrapia, or Comitatus, cometh of the Saxon word, Schiꞃan; i. e. partiri; for that the whole realm is parted and divided into ſhires; and Reve is præfectus or præpoſitus; ſo as ſchireve is the reve of the ſhire, præfectus ſatrapiæ, provinciæ, or comitatus. And he is called præfectus, becauſe he is the chief officer to the king within the ſhire. For the words of his patent are, Commiſimus vobis cuſtodiam comitatus noſtri de, &c. And he hath thereby a threefold cuſtody, triplicem cuſtodiam; viz. firſt, vitæ juſtitiæ; for no ſuit begins, and no proceſs is ſerved, but by the ſheriff. Alſo he is to return indifferent juries for the trial of mens' lives, liberties, lands, goods, &c.; ſecondly, vitæ legis, he is, after long ſuits and chargeable, to make execution, which is the life and fruit of the law. Thirdly, vitæ reipublicæ, he is principalis conſervator pacis within the county, which is the life of the commonwealth, vitæ reipublicæ pax. He is called in French viſcount, in Latin vicecomes, whereof vicecomitis; that is, inſtead of the earl of that county, who in antient time had the regiment of the county under the king; for it is ſaid in the Mirror of Juſtice[1], that it appeareth by the ordinances of antient kings before the Conqueſt, that the earls of the counties had the cuſtody or guard of the counties; and when the earls left their cuſtodies or guards, then was the cuſtody of counties committed to viſcounts; who therefore, as it hath been ſaid, are called vicecomites. And Ockam[2], Porro vicecomes dicitur, quod vicem comitis ſuppleat.

---

[1] Leland, tom. I. p. 42.

[2] Lib. 4. Pontif. fol. 165.

[3] Or Walleis.

[4] This liſt is printed in vol. I. p. lxxxviii.

[5] Fol. 168.

"Marculphus ſays, this office is judiciaria dignitas; Lampridius, that it is officium dignitatis. Forteſcue[3] ſays, Quod vicecomes eſt nobilis officiarius; and ſee there and obſerve well his honourable and ſolemn election and creation at this day. But to confirm all this that hath been ſaid touching this point, and to conclude the ſame; among the laws of King Edward the Confeſſor, I find it thus recorded: "Verum quod modò vocatur Comitatus, olim apud Britones temporibus Romanorum in regno iſto Britanniæ vocabatur Conſulatus. Et qui modo vocantur Vicecomites, tunc temporis Viceconſules vocabantur; ille vero dicebatur Viceconſul, qui, Conſule abſente, ipſius vices ſupplebat in jure et in foro[4]."

"Herein are many things worthy of obſervation. Firſt, the antiquity of Counties; ſecondly, that which we called Comitatum, the Romans more Latinely called Conſulatum; thirdly, whom the Saxons afterwards called (as hath been ſaid) ſhireve or earl, the Romans called conſul; fourthly, that the ſheriff was deputy of the conſul or earl, and therefore the Romans called him viceconſul, as we at this day call him vicecomes; fifthly, that the ſheriff in the Romans' time and before was a miniſter to the king's courts of law and juſtice, and had then a court of his own, which was the county court, then called curia conſulatus, as appeareth in theſe words, ipſius vices ſupplebat in jure et in foro[5]; ſixthly, that this realm was divided into ſhires and counties, and thoſe ſhires into cities, boroughs, and towns by the Britons; ſo that king Alfred's diviſion of ſhires and counties was but a renovation, or more exact deſcription of the ſame. Laſtly, the conſequence that will follow upon theſe things, being ſo antient (as in the time of and before the Romans) the ſtudious reader will eaſily collect. And afterwards, fol. 135, amongſt the laws of the ſame king Edward the Confeſſor, it appeareth, that thoſe whom the Saxons ſometimes called (and now we call) aldermen or earls, the Romans called ſenatores. "Et ſimiliter olim apud Britones temporibus Romanorum in iſto regno Britanniæ vocabantur ſenatores, qui poſtea temporibus Saxonum vocabantur aldermanni, non propter ætatem ſed propter ſapientiam et dignitatem, cum quidam adoleſcentes eſſet juriſperiti tamen et ſuper hoc experti." Thus far my Lord Coke. But whoſo is deſirous to read at large the office and authority of ſheriffs, may peruſe a large and learned treatiſe thereof in folio, ſet forth and penned by Michael Dalton, eſq. a reader of Lincoln's Inn, 1623.

"Here followeth a Catalogue of all the ſheriffs which have been ſince the firſt year of king Henry II. ſo far as the continued record is extant, which I had for the greateſt part out of the Tower of London; wherein firſt may be perceived that the earl of the county, viz. Thomas Beauchamp earl of Warwick (Leiceſter and Warwick being then under one ſhrievalty) did execute the office of ſheriff himſelf, from the 18th Edward III. to the 44th Edward III. by the ſpace of 25 years together. Next, that Hugh Novant, biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield, was ſheriff of the ſaid counties in the ſecond year of king Richard II; which place he executed, not as he was a biſhop, but as he was a baron, for all biſhops were barons, and had places in parliament, not becauſe they were mitred, but for that they were ſeiſed of whole baronies, or of lands held per baroniam, which were the bodies of their baronies. And when all the biſhops and parliamentary abbots and priors of the province of Canterbury proteſted for the right of prioralty in the parliament, upon their abſenting themſelves, when the proceeding was upon the appeal brought by Thomas of Woodſtock duke of Glouceſter and others, againſt Alexander Nevile archbiſhop of York, Robert de Vere duke of Ireland, and others, in the reign of king Richard II.; they all together affirmed, that de jure et conſuetudine regni Angliæ, all biſhops, abbots, priors, and other religious perſons whatſoever, tenentes de domino rege per baroniam, were barons and peers of the parliament; and from that tenure by barony (which Matthew Paris[6] and Roger de Wendover ſay king William the Conqueror firſt began among them) they challenged their being barons, as it appears in the Parliament Roll, 11 Richard II. part 1. m. 2. art. 34; with which agreeth Mr. Camden in his Britannia, fol. 170.

"And in the time of king Henry II. (as it is to be ſeen in an old manuſcript of the life of Thomas Becket, archbiſhop of Canterbury, written by William Fitz-Stephen, a monk of Canterbury), this archbiſhop Becket, being accuſed by the barons in a parliament held at Northampton, and there found guilty, was cenſured with the forfeiture and loſs of his whole perſonal eſtate. But difference aroſe betwixt the lords ſpiritual and temporal (as the ſaid Fitz-Stephen ſaid) who ſhould pronounce the ſentence, the temporal barons affirmed that the biſhops ought, for that they were ſpiritual men, and his fellow biſhops; but the biſhops anſwered, that it belonged to the temporal barons, for that the ſentence was not eccleſiaſtical, but ſecular; for, ſaid they, we ſit not here as biſhops, but as barons, for we as barons and you as barons, and all peers. But the king being diſpleaſed with this controverſy, Henry of Blois, biſhop of Wincheſter, pronounced judgement.

"Theſe eccleſiaſtical perſons enjoyed all the immunities that the barons of the kingdom did, ſave only that they were not to be judged by their peers; for conſidering that, according to the Canons of the church, they might not be preſent in matters of life and death, in the ſame caſe they are left to a jury of twelve men to be tried in a matter de facto; but this matter is diſcuſſed at large by Mr. Calybute Downing, in his Diſcourſe of the State Eccleſiaſtical in relation to the Civil[7].

"As theſe biſhops were Barons by reaſon of their temporalities being baronies, ſo the biſhops of Durham were titled Counts Palatine becauſe of their temporalities; ſee 17 Edward III. fol. 36. pl. 4. The beginning was (as ſome conceive) from Hugh Pudſey, as if for his being made earl of Northumberland by king Richard I. the territory of Durham as an earldom had been annexed to the biſhoprick for ever; to which end read Willielmus Newbrigenſis, de rebus Anglicis, lib. 4. cap. 5. The biſhops of Durham, as counts palatine, had engraven in their ſeals a knight or man at arms, in complete harneſs, ſitting upon a horſe all trapped, with the one hand brandiſhing a ſword, and with the other holding a ſhield bearing the arms of the biſhoprick. See the form of the ſeal in the plot of the city of Durham, made by Mr. Matthew Patteſon, and cut in copper by Mr. Chriſtopher Switzer, 1595."

The liſt of ſheriffs follows next, which ſhall be printed in a future volume; the names of the land-holders in this county from Domeſday-book, which have been already completely given in the Introductory Volume; and the following article, which has been croſſed over with a pen:

"Touching the martial ſtate of this county, it is now governed by
- the lord-lieutenant, Henry earl of Huntingdon.
- deputy lieutenants,
  - Henry earl of Stamford.
  - Henry Skipwith, baronet.
  - Wolſtan Dixey, John Skeffington, knights.

---

[1] Cap. 1. ſect. 3.
[2] Cap. "Quid Centur." &c.
[3] Cap. 24.
[4] Lambarde, fol. 129. 12.
[5] Cæſar, Hen. Huntingdon, Polydore Vergil, inter leges Molmutii, Hooker, lib. 2.
[6] In Hen. II. p. 120.
[7] Diſcourſe of the State Eccleſiaſtical, Oxford, 1633, 4to, p. 95.

" The forces of this ſhire, as they ſtood in the year 1628, this table (which I received from authority) will expreſs.

		Arms.
Hundreds.	Men.	Corſelets with pikes.	Muſkets.	Captains.
Gartre,	100	40	60	Thomas Broke, knight.
Guthlaxton,	60	26	34	Bertine Haſelrig, eſq.
Framland,	70	28	42	Thomas Hartopp, knight.
Eaſt Goſcote,	85	35	50	John Dale, knight.
Weſt Goſcote,	60	26	34
Sparkenhoe,	85	35	50	William Roberts, eſq.
Borough of Leiceſter,	40	20	20
		Private arms.
Gartre,	108	44	64
Guthlaxton,	60	28	42
Framland,	75	28	47
Eaſt Goſcote,	92	38	54
Weſt Goſcote,	60	23	37
Sparkenhoe,	95	40	55

Trained Bands.
Corſelets with pikes	210	Lances — —	60	John Skeffington, knight, captain of the horſe.
Muſkets —	290	Light horſes —	40
Sum	500	Sum total of theſe	100
Private arms.		Powder — —	3000	weight."
Corſelets with pikes	201	Bullet — —	4000
Muſkets —	299	Match — —	3000
Sum	500
Sum total of arms	1000

The names of the knights, temp. Edward I. and II. are then given as already printed; and the firſt part ends with this ſhort note:

" Much more might have been ſaid, both of the eccleſiaſtical government, as alſo of the temporal, both civil and military; but I fear in this part I have ſtayed too long, ſo here will ceaſe; for,

Et nunc ſera dies cadit, & jam ſole fugato,
Frigidus æſtivas impellit noctifer horas[1].
The day is paſt; the ſun and light be gone;
And night with darkneſs is now coming on."

The ſecond Book thus announces the topographical deſcription of the county:

" Surgite, jam pueris vendit jentacula piſtor,
Criſtatæque ſonant undique lucis aves.
Ariſe, the cocks have crow'd, the day's at hand,
And breakfaſt here prepar'd doth ready ſtand."

" You may now proceed to the ſecond part, wherein you muſt tread the ſame path which was formerly ſet forth; though ſome have moved me to change, and follow that order taken by Mr. Camden in his Britannia, who, imitating John Leland in his "Cantio Cygnea," beginneth at the head of a river or ſtream, and ſo ſetteth down thoſe towns near adjacent to the ſame; but becauſe the rivers and ſtreams here are few, and towns many, and that I ſhould hereby be forced to a great land-leaping; and for that alſo this alphabetical order will ſerve as an Index or Repertory upon any ſudden occaſion of ſearch; I thought beſt to perſiſt ſtill in my firſt intended courſe."

Thus have I endeavoured to do juſtice to the labours of my learned predeceſſor; by fully pointing out his original intentions of improvement. All his additions to the hundreds of Framland, Gartre, and Eaſt Goſcote, will be found either in their proper places, or at the end of the preſent volume. Thoſe in Weſt Goſcote, Guthlaxton, and Sparkenhoe, will of courſe be properly incorporated.

It only remains, therefore, to tranſcribe Mr. Burton's valediction "To the Reader" in 1641.

" Gentle Reader, as in the beginning I ſpake unto thee, ſo at the end give me leave a little farther to expreſs myſelf. This work was firſt begun 1597, not many years after my coming to the Inner Temple, not with an intendment that ever it ſhould have come to public view, but for my own private uſe, which, after it had ſlept a long time, was on a ſudden raiſed out of the duſt, and by force of an higher power[2] drawn to the preſs, having ſcarce an allowance of time for the furbiſhing and putting on a mantle. But now, being come to a ſecond impreſſion, which I have much deſired, as well to certify ſuch errors as firſt eſcaped, as to make anſwers to the exceptions taken againſt it, I will now ſpeak ſomething in brief unto them.

" Some firſt ſtrike at the main, holding it unfit that a book of this nature ſhould come in publick. What their reaſons ſhould be I never yet could learn. For myſelf, I was altogether unwilling to the ſetting it forth; not for the matter or ſubject, but for my own inſufficiency, it requiring a more judicious head. But that it is fit that a work of this kind ſhould be publiſhed, I muſt needs aſſent thereto, and truly ſay, that if all the ſhires were illuſtrated in the ſame manner, much light and benefit would ariſe thereby. They perhaps diſtaſte that truth ſhould be diſcovered; ſed magna eſt veritas, et prævalet.

" In diſcovering of titles and tenures, I have been exceeding wary not to prejudice any in the leaſt degree; and for thoſe few genealogies inſerted, I have aſcended no higher than might ſtand with truth; neither have I endeavoured to wrench or ſcrue any into a family but what were juſtly iſſuant.

" And what I have ſpoken of any, I have related it ſincerely; imitating therein Leandro Alberto in his Deſcription of Italy, Mr. Lambarde, Mr. Camden, Mr. Carew, and others; not with an intention of ſoothing or fawning, for I ever hated baſe and ſervile flattery; neither have I any ſuch cauſe, for that I have means ſufficient to my own content; neither have I any relation or dependancy upon any—I am free.

---

[1] Calphurnius, Ægloga V. fol. 22.

[2] George marquis of Buckingham.

"But ſith their humour is to live in obſcurity and blindneſs, let them nuzzle themſelves ſtill in their own ignorance, die in darkneſs, be buried in forgetfulneſs, and receive that doom which Henry of Huntingdon impoſeth upon their like, which hereafter followeth.

"Next I have been taxed, for that, having taken upon me the profeſſion of another ſtudy, learned and profitable, have yet addicted myſelf to the ſtudy of Antiquities, terming it an over-curious ſearching after things paſt without profit, led for the moſt part by conjectures and uncertainties.

"To them firſt I anſwer, that the ſtudy of the laws I have not neglected, though the practice thereof I have diſcontinued, as not having an able body (as in the Preface I ſaid) to ſupport the laborious pains thereof, or to endure the extremity of heat and cold occaſioned by long travail (otherwiſe ſound and healthful); as alſo not having a ſpirit apt for ſuch contentious proceedings, and therefore may well ſay with the Poet,

"Non ſum ego perverſus, nec amaris litibus aptus, Mitis euim et ſenior, Pieridumque comes;
Otia me requieſque juvant, quæ magna negavit
Roma mihi; redeo, cultâque rura placent[1]."

Where I may alſo ſay with the ſame Poet:

"Me focus, et nigros non dedignantia fumos
Tecta juvant, et fons vivus, et herba levis:
Sit mihi verna ſatur: ſit non doctiſſima conjux;
Sit nox cum ſomno; ſit ſine lite dies[2]."

"But for their miſconceit of this worthy ſtudy of Antiquities, and me a lover thereof, I muſt ſay with Sidonius Apollinaris, "Qui non intelligunt artes non mirantur artifices;" but the moſt judicious well know what the ſtudy is; and as Mr. Camden truly ſaid, "Studium ſanè pluſquam difficile, in quo quantopere ſudandum, ut nemo ferè ſentit, ſic nemo facilè credit; niſi qui et ipſe aggreſſus fuerit[3]." But ſurely they would be ſomewhat mollified, if they would but conſider the true character thereof; which is, the recovering of that was almoſt periſhed, the renewing of old and obſolete, the bringing up of Truth from the cave of Ignorance and Envy, the reſtitution of errors to true knowledge, of lameneſs to uprightneſs, of wrong to right, of darkneſs to light, of dead to life; theſe then being the effects, who juſtly can except againſt it? I muſt needs ſay, that where pregnant proofs cannot be had, that conjectures may well be made. For as Sebaſtian Munſter, in his Preface to his Coſmography, dedicated to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, well ſaid, "In Antiquitatum annotationibus conjecturâ potiùs quam certitudine nitamur oportet, ubi veritas ſe ipſam manifeſtè non probat, quibus conjecturis uſi ſunt B. Rhenanus et Bilibaldus Pirkheimerus in ſuis deſcriptionibus Germaniæ." The like ſaith Livy, "Antiquis in rebus ſi quæ veris ſimilia pro veris accipienda." To make an apology for that which need not, is but in vain; but for concluſion, there is no ſcience whatſoever which is not beholden to this noble ſtudy, eſpecially the knowledge of the Common Laws; witneſs the old Year-Books, the Reports of the grave and reverend Mr. Keilwey, Mr. Plowden, the Lord Dyer, the Lord Coke, to whoſe Preface to the tenth part I refer thee for farther ſatisfaction.

"Some have excepted at the inſerting of Hiſtories, as having no relation to Antiquities; but they are much deceived, ſhewing ſmall judgement in depriving her of one of her chief companions, as appeareth by her definition made by Tully: "Hiſtoria," ſaith he, "eſt teſtis temporum, lux veritatis, vita memoriæ, magiſtra vitæ, nuncia Vetuſtatis." The knowledge of which Ariſtotle long ago held in ſuch price, that, as he ſaith in his Politicks, "Eos qui hiſtorias ignorant, ſemper pueros eſſe, et proinde ab omni reipublicæ adminiſtratione ſubmovendos." But for concluſion of this I can ſee no other, than what Henry of Huntingdon[4] long ſince ſaid to Alexander biſhop of Lincoln, "Hiſtoria præterita quaſi præſentia viſui repreſentat, futura ex præteritis imaginando dijudicat; habet quidem et præter hæc illuſtres tranſactorum notitiâ dotes, quòd ipſa maximè diſtinguat a brutis rationabiles; bruti namque homines et animalia, unde ſint, neſciunt, patriæ ſuæ caſus et geſta ignorant, immo nec ſcire volunt, quorum homines quidem illis infeliciores judico, quia quod beſtiis ex creatione, hoc illis ex propriâ contingit inanitione, et quod beſtiæ ſi vellent non poſſint, hoc illi nolunt cum poſſint, quorum mors et vita ſempiterno dotanda eſt ſilentio."

"Others do challenge me for delineating deſcents and pedigrees, holding them altogether impertinent to the former; but theſe men muſt know that the ſtudy of genealogy is the right eye to the ſtudy of hiſtories; for who can read with judgement, or conſider with underſtanding, when he is altogether ignorant of whom he reads? Beſides, how neceſſary it is to know the ſtem of our anceſtors, I refer them to the aſſertion of Michael Eitzinger[5], who ſaith, "Qui parentum majorumque ſuorum memoriam negligunt, illi brutis comparantur, quæ ortus ſui partus ubi adoleverint protinus obliviſcuntur, quare ne ſicut equus & mulus fierent, quibus non eſt intellectus, genealogias certiſſima infinitatis argumenta poſteritati commendent." And to the like opinion of Hugo de Barcinona[6], in his Commentaries upon Eſdras, ſaying, "Ille verè doctus et eruditus eſt, qui poteſt oſtendere originem genealogiæ ſuæ."

Adrian[7], Alexander Severus[8], and Valentinian[9], the firſt Emperors, were infinitely delighted with this ſtudy. And in theſe later times Maximilian, the firſt emperor, taking exceeding pleaſure therein, cauſed John Stadius and Ladiſlaus Sunthemius to collect the ſtems of the chiefeſt families of Germany; which were after ſuccentoriated by John Cuſpinian and Wolfgangus Lazius. The genealogies which I chiefly endeavoured to illuſtrate, were of the antient families now extinct; to which I was the rather induced, for that the memory of them might neither be forgotten or traduced, and might hereafter be uſeful to ſome, as in formedans, vouchers, warrants, rebutters, challenges, and the like, ſome of which were almoſt periſhed, ſome exceeding erroneous and miſtaken.

"Some have cavilled, for that all the callateral lines and branches are not expreſſed in the deſcents to them; I anſwer, that the model of the book would not give leave, unleſs it had been of royal or imperial paper.

"Others would have all genealogies inſerted, as well new as old; but I muſt refer them for ſatisfaction to what I ſaid in the beginning. Another reaſon I may here add, that to draw down all at large, would require a great volume for that purpoſe only.

"Others have carped at the digreſſions, holding them unneceſſary for a ſubject of this kind; to whom I ſay, that what here I have done, I have followed the advice of that noble and worthy Antiquary and Hiſtorian Joſephus[10], writing of a ſubject of the ſame nature; who, in the beginning of his 14th book of the Antiquity of the Jews, thus ſaith, "Qui hiſtoriam et rerum propter antiquitatem obſcurarum expoſitionem ſcribere ſe profitentur, debent quidem non negligere orationis cultum, et elegantem compoſitionem, et quicquid lectioni gratiam conciliat, et adimit tædium; ſed præcipua cura impendenda eſt veritatis ſtudio, ne ſuam ſequentes fallant et in errorem aliquem inducant."

---

[1] Altered from Martial, Epigr. lib. xii. 68.
[2] Ibid. ii. 90.
[3] Reſponſ. ad Yorke, 1600.
[4] Hen. de Huntingdon, in Prologo ad hiſtoriam.
[5] In Prefat. primæ partis Theſauri Princ.
[6] Hugo de Barcinona, Sanctæ Sabinæ preſbiter, cardinalis.
[7] Spartianus.
[8] Lampridius.
[9] Aurel. Victor.
[10] De Antiquit. Judaic. lib. xiv. cap. 1.

"Some think them too much forced and extravagant. I muſt needs ſay, aiming at variety and delight, I did a little expatiate. But let them read Henry Salmuth upon the three parts of Guidone Pancirollo's book, "Rerum jam olim deperditarum," and he will make an apology for me.

"Others again hold them ordinary and trivial. I muſt confeſs, I writ them not to ſatisfy the great artiſts or ſupercilious criticks, but for the uſe of my loving countrymen, who in kindneſs have accepted them, and therefore will freely ſay with the ſame Poet,

"Lector et auditor noſtros probat, Aule, libellos:
Sed quidam exactos eſſe poëta negat.
Non nimiùm curo; nam cœnæ fercula noſtræ
Malim convivis quàm placuiſſe cocis[1]."
"The reader and the hearer this book approve,
But ſome great critick will afford no love;
I care not; for I meant my homely meſs,
Rather than dainty cooks, ſhould pleaſe my gueſt."

"Thus to theſe carpers have I made anſwer, who (as it is in the Greek proverb) not being able to find any fault in the perſon of Venus, except at her ſlipper; and in ſome ſort to their objections: but hereby do not take upon me to clear myſelf from any errors committed; for I may truly affirm, that there is no one ſailing upon a vaſt and unknown ſea, can ſtill ſtop ſhipwreck; nor wandering in a wild deſert, where no path is extant, can juſtly hit his intended way; none paſſing in the dark can always find his end; ſo in this vaſt, wild, and dark ſtudy, what hope is there always to find the certain truth, and never to be miſled by error? And therefore do make true acknowledgement thereof, deſiring the favourable aſſiſtance of them that can in any thing certify or reſtore me to the truth; and ſo will ſay with St. Auguſtine[2], "Non pigebit me ſicubi hæſito quærere, nec pudebit ſicubi erro diſcere; quiſquis ergo audit hoc vel legit, ubi pariter certus eſt, pergat mecum; ubi pariter hæſitet; quærat mecum; ubi errorem ſuum cognoſcit, redeat ad me; ubi meum, revocet me."

Let me deſire therefore (courteous Reader) with Henry Bracton, ſometimes a reverend Judge of the Common Pleas, and a writer of the laws, "Ut ſi quid ſuperfluum vel perperàm poſitum in hoc opere inveneris, illud corrigas et emendes, vel conniventibus oculis pertranſeas, cum omnia habere in memoriâ et nullo peccare, divinum ſit potius quam humanum[3];" requeſting, laſtly, thy gentle acceptance of this my work, not for any worth or merit it can challenge, but for my own labour, travail, and endeavours; and ſo will end with the ſame concluſion of Hernando de Acunna to his Cavallero determinado."

"Y eſte libro ya a luz ſalido,
Deveſer bien recebido,
Como ſu intencion merece,
De aquellos a quien ſe offrea,
Por el que tanto ha ſufrido."
"Now ſith this book is come to light again,
Each perſon ought the ſame to entertain,
According to the Author's own deſire,
And as his labour and great pains require."

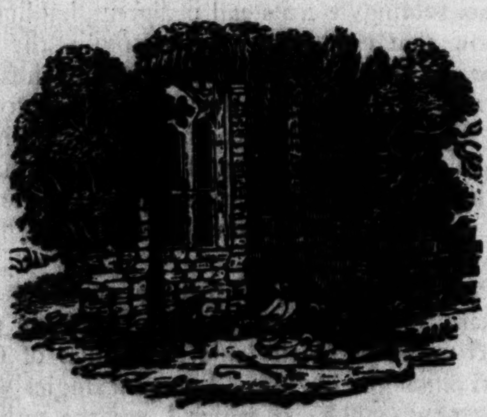
"William Burton.
From Lindley, near Hinckley,
com. Leic. 1641."

---

[1] Martial, Epigr. lib. ix. 82.

[2] Lib. 1. de Trinitate.

[3] Cavellero determinado, en Madrid, 1590.



GOSCOTE HUNDRED.

As the Hundreds of East and West Goscote were united in one diſtrict till the taxation of 1346, this introductory page applies generally to both.

In 1229, king Henry III. granted unto Stephen de Segrave, and his heirs, the bailiwick and profits of the Hundred of Goſcote, in theſe words:

"Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, &c. Epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe dilecto ac fideli noſtro Stephano de Segrave, & heredibus, totum wapentagium de Goſcote, cum pertinentiis, in com' Leic', habend' & tenend' ſibi & heredibus, reddendo annuatim c s̃. ad ſcaccarium noſtrum; ita tamen quod reſpondebit vicecomiti Leiceſt' de auxilio vicecomitis, & de eodem wapentagio pro omni ſervicio & exactione. Teſtibus; Huberto de Burgo comite Cantie & juſticiario Anglie, Philippo de Almario, Nicholao de Stuttevile, Hug. de Spencer, Richardo Grey, Galfrido de Corvo, Galfrido de Caucer, Richardo filio Hugonis, Radul' de Littleberge. Dat' per manum venerabilis patris Radulphi epiſcopi Ciceſtrenſis, cancellarii noſtri, apud Windſor, 25 Aprilis, anno regni noſtri 13°."[1]

In 1296, Nicholas de Segrave died ſeiſed of the hundred of Goſcote, held of the king in capite, paying thence into the king's exchequer the ſum of 100*s.* a year; and John de Segrave, his ſon and heir, was then 30 years of age[2].

In 1325, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held the hundred of Goſcote; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave, ſenior) was his next heir[3]; and in 1326, that it would be no loſs to the king if he granted leave to Robert de Overton to purchaſe the hundred and bailiwick of Goſcote, with the appurtenances, for term of life; and that they were then held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of 100*s.* a year for all ſervice[4].

In 1346, the hundreds of Eaſt and Weſt Goſcote (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) were aſſeſſed £58. 12*s.* 2*d.* and together then ſaid to contain thirty-nine knights' fees, a quarter of a fortieth part, and twelve parts of a fortieth part of one knight's fee[5].

In 1353, John de Segrave died ſeiſed of the balliwick of the hundred of Goſcote, with the appurtenances, jointly with Margaret his wife, held of the king in capite in fee farm, by the ſervice of paying 100*s.* a year into the king's exchequer; and Elizabeth their daughter (whom John, ſon of John de Mowbray, had married), the next heir of the ſaid John de Segrave, was then aged 15[6].

In 1372, ſir Walter de Manny, lord Manny, K. G. and founder of the Charter-houſe, died ſeiſed of the hundred of Goſcote; and Anne counteſs of Pembroke (wife of John Haſtings earl of Pembroke) was his daughter and heireſs[7].

In 1399, it was found that Thomas Mowbray, late duke of Norfolk, was ſeiſed in demeſne, as of the fee-tail, of the hundred of Goſcote, held of the king, by the ſervice of 100*s.* to be paid into the king's exchequer[8]; and in the ſame year it was found that Margaret late dutcheſs of Norfolk (daughter and heir of Thomas Brotherton earl of Norfolk, and grandmother of Thomas Mowbray late duke of Norfolk) was ſeiſed of the hundred of Goſcote, held of the king by the like ſervice[9].

In 1400, a record occurs, "De Thomâ Rempſton Cħr onerando de extenta manerii de Stoteſton, in com' Salop, & hundredi de Goſcote, in com' Leyc', que fuerunt Margarete duciſſe Norfolk[10]."

In 1403, Robert Gouſhall[11] knt. deceaſed, was ſeiſed of the hundred of Goſcote, as of the right of Elizabeth his wife, late ducheſs of Norfolk, who held it (in dower) of the king in capite; and Joan and Elizabeth were the daughters and next heirs of the ſaid Robert[12].

In 1424, Elizabeth, late wife of Thomas duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed (in dower) of the hundred of Goſcote, held of the king by the ſervice of 100*s.* a year; and John duke of Norfolk was her ſon and heir[13].

In 1432, John de Mowbray duke of Norfolk, earl of Nottingham and earl Marſhal, baron Mowbray, Segrave, &c. died ſeiſed of the hundred of Goſcote, held of the king by the ſervice of 100*s.* a year[14].

The ſucceſſive owners of this Hundred have been already traced in a former volume[15]; and on the marriage of Richard of Shrewſbury, duke of York and Norfolk and earl Marſhal, to Anne daughter of John Mowbray late duke of Norfolk, in 1477, the hundred of Goſcote, with the park of Cold Overton, and the manors of Cold Overton, Dalby Chaucombe, Witherley, Segrave, and Melton Mowbray, were ſettled on Elizabeth, widow of John the late duke[16].

Sir Robert Harrington had the ſtewardſhip of this hundred and of the manors of Loughborough, &c. in 1483; ſoon after which, by a ſolemn agreement[17] made between John Howard duke of Norfolk and William earl of Nottingham and earl Marſhal, 1488, the immenſe property of the Mowbray family was divided; and the Hundred of Goſcote, with its appurtenances, together with the manors of Melton Mowbray, Cold Overton, Mountſorell, Sileby, Segrave, Dalby Chaucombe, and Witherley, were confirmed to the earl of Nottingham; who in 1489 was created marquis of Berkeley; and, dying without iſſue in 1492[18], was ſucceeded in his property by his brother, Maurice Berkeley; who died in 1506 poſſeſſed of this hundred and the manor of Mountſorell; and from whom they paſſed in ſucceſſion to Henry lord Berkeley, who (having outlived his ſon Thomas, who died Nov. 22, 1611[19],) died Nov. 26, 1613; leaving the hundreds of Goſcote and manor of Mountſorell to lady Elizabeth Berkeley[20], the widow of his ſon.

Several receipts are ſtill in being, ſigned by this lady, between 1617 and 1622, to ſir William Herrick, for the rent of the manor of Mountſorell and hundred of Goſcote, at the rate of £20. a year: the laſt of which is dated July 6, 1622. The next, Feb. 14, 1622-3, is ſigned by John Smyth, "for the uſe of ſir Thomas Chamberlaine, knt. and the lady Elizabeth Berkeley his wife."

From this lady this hundred and the manor deſcended to her ſon George Berkeley, Baron of Berkeley, Mowbray, Segrave, and Bruce, K. B. who had been ſome time of Chriſt Church, Oxford; was created M. A. July 18, 1623; and died in 1658; leaving them to his ſon George (afterwards viſcount Durſley and earl of Berkeley) who conveyed them to Henry earl of Stamford.

---

[1] Rot. Pat. 13 Hen. III. And ſee the Segrave Chartulary in the Appendix to vol. II. p. 114.

[2] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 54. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[4] Ad quod dampnum 20 Edw. II. N° 2. Leic.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw III.

[6] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 46 Edw. III. N° 38. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. ex Libro de Lovel.

[9] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 72. Leic.

[10] Mich. Rec. 2 Hen. IV. Rot. 22.

[11] Gouſhill, alio exemplo.

[12] Eſch. 4 Hen. IV. N° 22. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 3 Hen. VI. N° 25. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 11 Hen. VI. N° 43. Leic. & ex Libro de Lovel.

[15] See, under Cold Overton, vol. II. p. 138.

[16] Rot. Parl. 17 Edw. IV. vol. VI. pp. 168, 169.

[17] See Rot. Parl. 4 Hen. VII. vol. VI. p. 411.

[18] In an act of reſumption paſſed this year, proviſion is again made in favour of Elizabeth dutcheſs of Norfolk. Rot. Parl. 7 Hen. VII. vol. VI. p. 449.

[19] Dugd. Bar. I. 369.

[20] Only child of ſir George Carey, knight, knight marſhal, and governor of the Iſle of Wight, ſon to Henry lord Hunſdon, and, after his father's death, lord Hunſdon, chamberlain of the queen's houſhold, and K. G.

The ſeveral transfers from this period will beſt appear by the following authentic abſtract of title-deeds:

24 and 25 May, 1666. Indentures of leaſe and releaſe, purporting to be a conveyance of the manor of Mountſorell and wapentake of Goſcote from the lord Berkeley and Segrave to Henry earl of Stamford.

26 May, 1666. Indenture, purporting to be a bargain and ſale enrolled of the above manor and wapentake, from lord Segrave to the earl of Stamford.

27 and 28 March, 1667. Indentures of leaſe and releaſe purporting to be a conveyance of the above manor and wapentake of Goſcote from the earl of Stamford to Ralph Diſon, gent. and ——— Barradall, and the heirs of the ſaid Diſon for ever.

20 Oct. 1675. Copy of Ralph Diſon's will.

14 Feb. 1677. Indenture, purporting to be a bargain and ſale enrolled of the above manor and wapentake, from Thomas Wells and Henry Diſon (executors of the ſaid Diſon, deceaſed) to William Wells and William Buſby, their heirs and aſſigns for ever.

27 and 28 Feb. 1677. Indentures of leaſe and releaſe, purporting to be a conveyance of the above manor and wapentake, from the ſaid William Wells and William Buſby to Thomas Wells in fee.

30 June, 1715. Will of Thomas Wells.

21 and 22 March, 1722. Indentures of leaſe and releaſe, purporting to be a conveyance of the above manor and premiſes and wapentake from Ralph Welles to Ralph Welles the younger, his ſon.

27 and 28 Dec. 1731. Indentures of leaſe and releaſe, purporting to be a conveyance of the ſaid manor and wapentake from the ſaid Ralph Welles and Ralph Welles the younger to Joſeph Danvers, eſq. in fee.

28 Dec. 1731. Indenture, purporting to be a bargain and ſale enrolled of the above manor and wapentake, from the ſaid Ralph Welles and Ralph Welles the younger to Joſeph Danvers, eſq.

12 July, 1737. Indenture of releaſe, between Charles Clarke, eſq. on the firſt part, Joſeph Danvers, eſq. of the ſecond part, and Thomas Babington, of Rothley, eſq. of the third part; purporting to be a conveyance of a feefarm rent iſſuing out of the hundred of Goſcote (as appears by the grant 13 Hen. III.) conveyed to Thomas Babington, eſq. in truſt for Joſeph Danvers, eſq.

The preſent owner is the honourable Auguſtus Richard Butler-Danvers, in right of his lady, the only daughter of ſir John Danvers, bart.

The Hundred Court is called at a large ſtone at a place at the top of Syſton field, and adjourned to the Crown at Mountſorell twice a year, within one month of Eaſter and Michaelmas. There are holden at Mountſorell aforeſaid a Court of Pleas, every three weeks, for the recovery of debts under 40s. The preſent ſteward is Mr. Henry Whatton, attorney, at Loughborough; to whom I am indebted for a conſiderable part of this information.

The TOWNSHIPS of EAST GOSCOTE are,

Allexton, a rectory.
Asfordby, a rectory.
Aſhby Folvile, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Bareſby and Newbold Folvile.
Barkby, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Barkbythorpe, Hamilton, and the North-end of Thurmaſton.
Barrow, a vicarage; including the chapelries of Mountſorell (the North end), Quorndon, and Woodhouſe, and the manſion and park of Beaumanor; Charley; Alderman's Haw, and Maplewell.
Beby, a rectory.
Belgrave, a vicarage; including the chapelries of Burſtall and the South end of Thurmaſton.
Brokeſby, a rectory.
Coſſington, a rectory.
Croxton, South, a rectory.
Dalba Magna, a vicarage.
Dalby on the Woulds, a donative.
Friſby on the Wreke, a vicarage.
Gaddeſby, with Caldwell, Grimſtone, Keame, the South end of Mountſorell, Wartnaby, and Wykeham, are chapelries belonging to Rothley[1].
Hoby, a rectory.
Humberſtone, a vicarage.
Hungarton, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Bagrave and Ingarſby (in Gartre Hundred), and Quenby Hall. To this vicarage that of Twyford (including the chapelry of Thorpe Sachevile) is alſo united.
Laund Abbey, extraparochial.
Lodington, a rectory.
Loſeby, a vicarage; including the hamlet of Newton Burdet (or Cold Newton).
Preſtwould, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Burton, Cotes, and Hoton.
Quenyborow, a vicarage.
Radcliffe on the Wreke, a rectory.
Ragdale, a perpetual curacy; including the manor of Wilghes.
Saxulby, a rectory; including the chapelry of Shouldby.
Segrave, a rectory.
Sileby, a vicarage.
Skeffington, a rectory.
Syſton, a vicarage.
Thruſſington, a vicarage.
Tilton, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Halſted, South Markfield, and Whatborough.
Tugby, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Keythorpe (in Gartre Hundred) and Eaſt Norton.
Walton on the Woulds, a rectory.
Wymeſwould, a vicarage.

TOWNSHIPS in WEST GOSCOTE.

Aſhby de la Zouch, a vicarage; including Alton Grange, and the hamlets of Balcroft, Blackfordby, Braſthorpe, Culwarby, and Swartcliff.
Beaumanor, extraparochial[2].
Belton, a vicarage; including Meril Grange.
Bradgate-houſe and Park.
Bredon, a vicarage; including the hamlets of Newbold, Staunton Harold, Tongue, Wilſton, and Worthington.
Burſtall, a chapelry[3].
Charley[4], extraparochial.
Charnwood Foreſt[4].
Caſtle Donington, a vicarage; including Wartoft Grange.
Cole Orton, a rectory.
Diſeworth, a vicarage.
Diſhley, a donative; including Thorpe Acre.
Garendon Abbey.
Gracedieu Nunnery.
Hathern, a rectory.
Kegworth, a rectory; including the chapelry of Walton Iſeley.
Langley Nunnery.
Leiceſter Abbey, and Abbey Gate.
Lodington, a vicarage; including the chapelry of Hemington.
Loughborough, a rectory; including the hamlets of Knighthorpe and Woodthorpe; Burley Park, and Loughborough Old Park.
Newton Linford; a chapelry[5].
Oſgathorpe, a rectory.
Packington, a vicarage; including the chapelry of Snibſton.
Quorndon, a chapelry[6].
Raunſton, a rectory.
Rothley, a vicarage and peculiar juriſdiction; including the chapelries of Cawdwell, Gaddeſby, Grimſtone, Keame, Mountſorell ſuperior, Wartnaby, and Wykeham.
Rothley Temple, extraparochial.
Seile Nether, a rectory; including the hamlets of Over Seile, Doniſthorpe, and Okethorpe.
Shepeſhead, a vicarage.
Stretton en le Field, a rectory.
Swebſton, a rectory; including the hamlets of Newton Burguland and Snareſton.
Switbland, a rectory.
Thurcaſton, a rectory; including the hamlets of Anſtey and Cropſton.
Ulveſcroft Abbey, extraparochial.
Wanlip, a rectory.
Whatton, Long, a rectory.
Whitwick, a vicarage; including the hamlet of Swannington, and the manor of Thringſton.
Woodhouſe, a chapelry[7].

---

[1] All deſcribed under the Hundred of Weſt Goſcote.

[2] Deſcribed, under Barrow, in the Hundred of Eaſt Goſcote.

[3] Deſcribed, under Belgrave, in the Hundred of Eaſt Goſcote.

[4] Deſcribed, under Barrow, in the Hundred of Eaſt Goſcote.

[5] Deſcribed, under Ratby, in Sparkenhoe Hundred.

[6] Deſcribed, under Barrow, in the Hundred of Eaſt Goſcote.

[7] Deſcribed, under Barrow, in the Hundred of Eaſt Goſcote.

A MAP of EAST GOSCOTE HUNDRED.

J. Cary sculp.

NOTTINGHAM SH
FRAMLAND HUNDRED
WEST GOSCOTE HUNDRED
GARTREY HUNDRED
RUTLAND SH
Willoughby
Over Broughton
Rempston
Wimeswould
Hoton
Prestwould
Cotes
Burton on the Woulds
Walton on the Woulds
Dalby on the Woulds
Wartnaby
Ab Kettleby
Grimston
Saxulby
Segs Hill
Earl Ferrers
Rakedale
Wilghes
Sholby
Asfordby
Melton Mowbray
Barrow upon Soar
Segrave
Frisby on the Wreak
Rotherby
Burton Lazars
Sileby
Thrussington
Mount Sorell
Radcliff on the Wreak
Reresby
Cossington
Danish Tumuli
Wreak
Great Dalby
Little Dalby
Gaddesby
Syston
Queneborow
Bridle Road
Site of Newbold Folvile
Ashby Folvile
Barsby
Thorpe Sachvile
Burrow
Soar
Roman Tumuli
Barkby
South Croxton
Twyford
Thurmaston
Barkby Thorpe
Beeby
Bargrave GARTREY HUND
Site of Streethill
Loseby
Hamilton
Hungerton
Owston
Knawston
Belgrave
Keam
Quenby Hall
Newton
Whatborough Lodges
Humberston
Seraperoft
Tilton on the Hill
Halsted
Sauvey Castle
Withcote
Laund West Wood
LEICESTER
Tilton Wood
Laund Park Wood
Skeffington
Loddington
Forest of Lyfield
Evington
Billesdon
Tugby Wood
Old Conduit
Belton
Tugby
East Norton
Allexton
Keythorpe Hall
Entrenchment
Goadby
Scale of Miles
1
2
3
4
5
6

In a Book of Fifteenths and Tenths granted by the Laity 3 Henry V. 1416, communicated by CRAVEN ORD, Eſq. from the Original in the Exchequer, the townſhips in the ſeveral Hundreds of GOSCOTE, GUTHLAXTON, and SPARKENHOE, are thus enumerated.

Hund' de GOSCOTH.

	£.	s.	d.
Sheil cum Hida,	6	17	0
Aſheby de la Zouche,	7	5	0
Pakyngton,	3	1	10
Wodcote,	0	10	0
Overton Sauce,	1	9	0
Overton Quatremare,	1	5	0
Snipſton,	1	5	0
Ravenſtone,	0	9	0
Whitwick,	0	17	6
Swepſton,	2	11	0
Newton Bottiller,	1	2	10
Swanington,	2	2	10
Thringſton & Oſgathorpe,	2	12	0
Belton,	1	19	0
Staunton Harold,	0	15	0
Rotherby,	0	13	0
Shepeſhed,	3	14	0
Worthington & Newbolde,	2	8	0
Bredon, Andarchyrch, Tungge, & Wenalſton,	2	8	0
Walton Iſly,	1	8	6
Diſeworthe,	3	0	0
Hemington,	1	19	6
Lockington,	1	11	6¼
Caſtar Donington,	3	10	0
Kegworth,	5	2	0
Dalbe Chaucombe,	2	9	0
Aſhby Fulwall,	3	3	0
Bareſby,	2	9	0
Thorpe Sachvile,	1	7	6
Rearſby,	1	12	0
Brokeſby,	1	1	0
Gaddeſby,	3	18	0
Friſby,	2	19	6
Cayham,	1	14	0
Barkby,	3	5	0
Beby,	3	12	4
Hungarton,	0	19	0
Thorpe juxta Barkby,	1	5	0
Queneburgh,	2	14	0
Sythſton,	2	16	0
Thurmaſton,	2	5	0
Humberſtone,	4	9	6
Hamelton,	0	12	6
Onlep,	1	10	6
Burſtall,	1	14	0
Abbegate,	0	4	0
Belgrave ex Rogero de Belgrave nuper taxatore,	2	2	6
De eodem Rogero de Belgrave nuper taxatore,	0	10	0
Grimſton,	1	14	0
Asfordby,	3	15	0
Warkneby,	2	4	0
Caldwell & Wikham,	1	15	0
Rothley,	4	11	5
Swithland,	0	17	0
Cropſton & Bradgate,	1	11	0
Thurkaſton,	1	6	8
Anſty,	1	7	0
Newton Lynford,
Adlakeſton,	1	9	0
Knighthorpe,	0	15	0
South Croxton,	1	6	0
Tokeby,	2	2	0
Cold Newton,	1	9	3½
Tilton,	3	3	0
Whatteburg,	0	5	0
Eſte Norton,	1	8	0
Lodington cum Landa,	2	13	4
Quenby,	0	18	6
Louſeby,	1	15	0
Halleſted,	1	17	0
Skeffington,	1	12	6
Twiford,	2	11	0
Saxilby,	1	5	0
Hathern,	4	17	0
Loughburgh,	6	10	0
Serlethorp & Woodthorp,	1	1	6
Thorp Hanker,	0	15	0
Wimondeſwold,	4	5	0
Horton,	1	17	0
Cootes,	1	18	0
Preſtwolde,	1	3	0
Burton,	2	1	0
Walton ſuper Wold,	1	16	0
Barow,	6	16	0
Beaumont de Priore Hoſpitalis S. Johannis Jeruſalem de Angliâ,	0	6	8
Templum de Rothley de eodem,	0	10	6
Quarendon,	2	0	0
Wodhouſe,	2	0	0
Mountſorell burghe,	3	0	0
Sileby,	2	15	0
Coſington,	1	11	0
Seigrave,	2	6	0
Ratcliff,	1	2	0
Rakedale, Wilughis,	0	19	6
Houby,	2	5	10
Truſington,	1	1	0
Dalby ſuper le Wold,	2	10	0
Siwelby,	0	19	0
Lindesforth,	0	8	0
Blakfordy & Alton,	1	0	0
Whatton,	3	12	6

Hund' de GUTHLAXTON.

	£.	s.	d.
Villa Leiceſtrie reſpondet dño regi,	26	13	6
Broughton Aſtell, Sutton, & Thorp,	4	12	0
Leyre,	1	13	0
Ollaſthorp,	1	15	0
Wheſton,	3	14	0
Cotteſbach,	2	6	0
Shattowel,	2	0	8
Kylby,	2	11	0
Miſterton,	2	2	6
Butelſbie,	1	14	6
Aſheby Magna,	2	13	0
Petelyng Parva,	1	10	6
Stormeſworth,	1	11	0
Coſbye & Thorp,	2	9	0
Walcoth,	1	3	0
Gildmorton,	2	4	0
Swinford,	1	19	0
Peteling Magna,	2	15	0
Brantingthorp,	0	17	0
Claybroke & Claybroke,	2	14	0
Bitteſwell,	1	17	0
Dunton,	1	18	0
Outheby,	3	2	0
Wiggeſton,	1	5	0
Aſheby Parva,	2	0	0
Blaby,	2	16	4
Sheveſby,	2	6	0
Countinggeſthorp,	1	16	0
Frolleſworth,	2	12	0
Lutterworth,	4	13	2
Glen Parva,	1	13	0
Knaptoft,	2	12	0
North Kilworth,	1	5	0
Cattethorpe juxta Lilborne,	1	2	0
South Kilworth,	1	3	0
Willoughby,	1	7	4
Bileſton,	2	12	0
Kimcotte & Walton,	3	2	4
Pultney,	0	15	4
Wiggeſton,	8	8	0
Foſton,	3	5	0
Erndeſby,	3	6	8
Knighton,	3	2	4
Newton Harecourt,	2	9	0

SPARKENHOW.

	£.	s.	d.
Burbach and Sketeſclyf,	4	12	0
Appulby Parva	1	11	0
Wytherdel,	2	10	0
Whityngton,	0	10	0
Barton,	1	15	4
Oſbaſton,	1	0	6
Dadelyngton,	1	4	2
Hethere,	1	13	0
Potes-merſton,	0	17	6
Nailſton,	2	15	5½
Newbold & Oadeſcote,	1	17	6
Staunton juxta Sapcote,	1	10	0
Barwell,	3	6	8
Naneby,	0	5	6
Thornton,	1	1	0
Baggeworth,	1	7	0
Lynlee,	1	18	0
Kirkbe Malore,	1	14	0
Pakulton,	0	18	6
Glenfild,	1	3	0
Ibbeſtok,	3	0	0
Fenne Drayton,	2	0	8
Sharnford,	2	4	0
Northburghe,	3	5	0
Whenleborgh,	1	3	5
Higham,	2	1	0
Stoke,	1	5	0
Staunton ſub Barndon,	0	15	0
Sapcote,	2	10	0
Snarſton,	2	0	0
Twycroſſe,	1	10	0
Gopſhul,	0	18	0
Cunſton,	1	14	8
Cotton juxta Boſeworth,	1	14	6
Endirbury,	4	0	0
Byrdſtow,	0	18	0
Shepey Parva,	0	14	6
Templum,	0	5	6
Overton ſub Ardern,	2	9	0
Aſton,	1	7	0
Norton,	1	13	8
Lubbeſthorp,	1	1	0
Markingfilde,	0	13	6
Shelton,	1	17	6
Normanton Turvile,	1	4	0
Upton,	1	18	6
Crafte,	1	13	0
Sibbeſdon,	2	3	0
Kereby,	0	15	6
Borlerſton,	1	10	0
Normanton ſuper le Heath,	1	19	4
Cateby,	0	14	3
Carleton juxta Boſeworth,	0	14	6
Shakerſton,	1	8	0
Stapulton,	1	15	0
Sheepey Magna,	2	1	0
Sutton juxta Boſeworthe,	2	15	0
Shangton,	2	5	6
Brunkingthorpe,	0	15	0

Brandeſton,

	£.	s.	d.		£.	s.	d.		£.	s.	d.
Brandeſton,	1	3	0	Wikene,	0	17	0	Groby,	0	15	6
Ratcliffe,	1	5	0	Hinkley bonde,	1	12	1
Huncote,	0	18	0	Desford,	1	1	6	Summa totalis,	757	12	10½
Bocherdſton & Newbould,	0	16	6	Odſton,	1	12	0
				Boſworthe,	2	17	0	Inde xv^{ma},	680	5	1½
Hocleſcote & Donyngton,	2	8	0	Hinkley burgh,	2	8	0	x^{ma},	77	7	9
Aylmeſthorpe,	1	19	0	Pultney de Willielmo Owen nuper taxatore,	1	0	6
Rotby,	1	5	0					Feodum Collector',	6	0	0

On a ſubſidy granted in 1627, the following inhabitants of WEST GOSCOTE paid the ſum marked againſt their ſeveral names.

From a Roll in the poſſeſſion of William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor; ſigned March 17, 1625, by Henry Shirley, William Reynolds, and Thomas Babington; and directing the bailiff of the hundred to make return at the Bull's Head at Loughborough by the 28th of that month.

Aſhby de la Zouch.	Robert Bainbridge, in bonis	4*l.*
Anſtey.	William Glover, in bonis	3*l.*
Abye Gate.	Robert Awſten, in bonis	3*l.*
Blougharbye.	George Cutler, gent. in bonis	3*l.*
Bredon.	William Davenaunt, gent. in bonis	4*l.*
	John Starkey, gent. in terris,	3*l.*
Belton.	William Eyre, gent. in bonis	3*l.*
Burſtall.	Gregorie Brookeſbie, eſq. in terris	3*l.*
	Charles Seagrave, gent. in bonis	1*l.*
Burley Park.	John Davenport, gent. in bonis.
Caſtell Dunnington.	Thomas Robie, gent. in terris	2*l.*
Charley.	Sir Thomas Waldron, knt. in terris.
Cropſon.	Thomas Stretton, in terris	2*l.*
Dyſworth.	Rowland Lillie, in bonis	3*l.*
Gracedieu.	John Beaumont, eſq. in terris.
Hemington.	John Fulwoode, in bonis	3*l.*
Hatherne.	Richard Palmer, in terris	7*l.*
Iſley Walton.	James Wood, gent. in terris	3*l.*
Kegworth.	Sir Henrie Merrei, knt. in terris	10*l.*
Knighthorp.	Henry Skipwith, eſq. in terris.
Lockinton.	John Bainbridge, eſq. in terris	6*l.*
Long Whatton.	Henry Smith, in terris	4*l.*
Langley.	. . . . . Graye, eſq. in terris.
Loughborowe.	John Holte, gent. in terris	3*l.*
	Richard Spicke, gent. in terris	2*l.*
	Thomas Hebbe, gent. in terris	2*l.*
	John Alton, in terris	2*l.*
	William Webſter, in terris	2*l.*
Mountſorell.	John Allen, in terris	2*l.*
Newtown.	Thomas Crane, gent. in terris	3*l.*
	William Whatton, in terris	3*l.*
Overſeale & Netherſeale.	Sir Thomas Woolſley, knt. in terris	3*l.*
Overton Quarter Marſh & Overton Saucey.	Dame Eliz. Beaumont, in terris,	6*l.*
	Robert Welham, in terris,	4*l.*
	Thomas Gilberte, in terris,	4*l.*
Oſgathorpe & Thringſton.	George Billett, gent. in terris	4*l.*
Onlype.	Deveruxe Aſton, gent. in terris	3*l.*
	Anna Spencer, widow, in terris	3*l.*
Packington & Snibſon.	Edwarde Aſtlyn, in terris	3*l.*
	William Nicklas, in terris	3*l.*
Quarndon.	Adrian Farnham, eſq. in terris	6*l.*
	Thomas Farnham, gent. in terris	3*l.*
	John Morton, gent. in terris	2*l.*
Rothley.	William Danvers, gent. in terris	3*l.*
	George Pachett, in terris	2*l.*
Raunſton.	Ambroſe Saliſbury, in terris	2*l.*
Swithland.	Frauncis Danvers, eſq. in terris	6*l.*
Shepeſhead.	Henrie Duport, eſq. in terris	2*l.*
Swepſton.	Sir William Cockain, bart. in terris	20*l.*
	Arthur Haddelowe, gent. in terris	2*l.*
Swannington.	John Barrodale, in terris	3*l.*
Thorp Aker.	Charles Fetherſton, in terris	5*l.*
Thurkeſton.	Harroulde Shittlewoode, in terris	4*l.*
Woodhouſe & Beaumanor.	Sir William Hericke, knt. in terris.
	Jaſper Whatton, in terris	3*l.*
	George Heames, in terris	3*l.*
Ulveſcroft.	William Clare, in terris	4*l.*
	George Muburn, in terris	3*l.*
Woodthorpe.	Thomas Burbage, in terris	1*l.*
Worthington, Newbold, & Stanton.	Sir Henry Shirley, bart. in terris.
	Dame Judith Corbett, in terris	3*l.*
	Thomas Boothbie, gent. in terris	3*l.*
	Samuel Smalley, gent. in terris	3*l.*
Whitwick.	Thomas Harvey, in terris	1*l.*

"The Certificate of the Survey of all the goodes, plate, juells, and ornaments, of everye churche and chappell within the Weſte ꝑte of the hũderde of Goſcott; taken the fyrſte day of Auguſte, anno R. R. Edwardi Sexti ſexto, by Fraunces Cave, George Vyncent, and Mykell Purefey, cõmiſſioners thereunto appoynted, by vertue of the king's Maties commiſſion to them and others dyrected for the ſame purpoſe, as herafter enſuethe [1].

LOUGHBOROWE.

In primis, on chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, fyve belles.
It̃m, one cope of bawdkyn blewe.
It̃m, one cope of white damaſke.
It̃m, tow copes of black woſted.
It̃m, tow copes of dyvers colors.
It̃m, a croſſe of coper and gylte.
It̃m, a cope of blewe ſaten.
It̃m, a veſtment of black velvet with deacon to the ſame.
It̃m, a veſtment of bawdkyn work with deacon and ſubdeacon to the ſame.

MARKFELDE.

In primis, a chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, iij belles.
It̃m, foore towelles.
It̃m, tow awter clothes.
It̃m, tow veſtments.
It̃m, a cope.
It̃m, a croſſe.
It̃m, a ſurpleſſe.
It̃m, tow cruetts of pewter.
It̃m, a cenſure [2].
It̃m, three banners.
It̃m, tow corporas clothes.
It̃m, a veyle.

ROTHELEY.

In primis, one chales wythowt a cover.
It̃m, tow copes and foore veſtments.
It̃m, foore belles and a ſance [3] bell.

ASHEBIEDELASOWCHE.

In primis, tow chalices of ſylver.
It̃m, fyve belles, and a hande-belle.
It̃m, one croſſe and one pyxe of coper and gylte.
It̃m, tow ſewte of veſtments of crymyſon velvet.
It̃m, one ſewte of veſtments of whyte, grene, and red.
It̃m, one veſtmente of blewe velvet, and one of tawnye.
It̃m, one veſtmente of blacke wolſtyde, and one cope of the ſame.
It̃m, one veſtment of ronynge wyre, and one cope of the ſame.
It̃m, tow veſtments of ſatyn, one of blwe, and one of whyte.
It̃m, one veſtment of whyt foſtyon.
It̃m, one cope of duñe velvet.
It̃m, one hangynge of an alter of red velvet, and one of duñe ſatyne, and one of whyte ſyngill ſarſnet, and one wyth foſtyon.
It̃m, one croſſe clothe of grene ſarſnet.
It̃m, ſyxe alter clothes, and x towels.

ONELEPE.

It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, tow croſſes, one of tynne, another of braſſe.
It̃m, one cenſur of braſſe.
It̃m, tow copes, one of blue velvet, another of whyte chamlet.
It̃m, three veſtments, one of whyte chamlet, another of blacke chamlet, another of grene ſay.
It̃m, thre greate bells and a ſaunce bell, tow hand bells.
It̃m, tow candellſtycks of maſtlen.

BELTON.

In primis, on chalice.
It̃m, thre veſtments, and one cope.
It̃m, tow belles and a ſaunce bell.
☞ It̃m, tow belles, ſould anno R. R. Edwardi Sexti ſecũdo, all the peryſhe beinge of counſayll.

LOKYNTON.

It̃m, tow copes, the one blewe damaſke, and the other ſatyn.
It̃m, iij veſtmentes of ſylke.
It̃m, tow croſſes.
It̃m, foore great bells.
It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.

LONG WATTON.

In primis, thre belles, wythe a ſmall bell.
It̃m, tow croſſis of latyn.
It̃m, tow veſtments wyth a cope.
It̃m, thre alter clothes, and a ſurples.
It̃m, on chalice of ſylver, wythe one corporas and the chaſe.

CASTEL DONYNGTON.

In primis, tow veſtments, the one grene, and the other blwe.
It̃m, a cope and a veſtment, wyth the hole ſuet of whit dammaſke.
It̃m, tow veſtments, the one blewe, and the other white.
It̃m, tow of yellow ſylke.
It̃m, a tynycle of dyverſe colors.
It̃m, a croſs of baſe metall.
It̃m, a cope of blue, and thre other veſtments.
It̃m, one chalice of ſylver, wythe the patent.
It̃m, one chalice, geven to the churche, in the kepinge of one Thomas Dolman of Langley, by the legacy of one Thomas Perſons.
It̃m, three belles in the ſtepell.

KEGWORTH.

In primis, on chalis parſal gylt.
It̃m, tow veſtementes, the one golde bawdkyne wythe blewe croſs, the other of green bawdkyne.
It̃m, two copes of grene damaſke.
It̃m, foore great belles in the ſteple.

WORTHINGTON.

In primis, tow belles in the ſteple.
It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, tow veſtementes, wythe the albes to them belonginge.

SWEPSTON.

In primis, one chalice, three veſtments, and one cope.
It̃m, foore aulter clothes and three towelles.
It̃m, foore belles, one of them a ſaunce bell.
It̃m, a croſs, a pyxe, and two crwettes.

THURCASTON.

In primis, three belles and a ſaunce bell.
It̃m, a chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, towe veſtementes.
It̃m, a cope of blacke velvet.
It̃m, a croſſe of coper.
It̃m, tow candelſtykes.

DYSWORTHE.

In primis, a challice.
It̃m, three belles, and one of them broken.
It̃m, one veſtemente, tow croſſes, one albe crnete.
It̃m, a cope.

---

[1] Extracted from MS. Tanner, 164. in Bibl. Bodl. f. 13.

[2] Cenſer.

[3] Saints.

QUERNDON.

In primis, three great belles and a litell bell.
It̃m, a whole ſewte of veſtmentes.
It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, a croſſe of latyn.
It̃m, a paxe, wythe a piketur of ſylver.

BREDON.

In primis, one challice.
It̃m, one veſtment of blwe ſylke and grene.
It̃m, one veſtment of white and red ſylke.
It̃m, another of damaeſc.
It̃m, another of blwe ſylke inbrawdered wythe ſtares of gold wyre.
It̃m, one cope of ſylke inbrawdered wyth gold and flowers.
It̃m, three bells.

SHEPESHED.

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles.
It̃m, tow copes, one of old ſylke, and another of red velvet.
It̃m, tow red veſtments.
It̃m, one whyte veſtment of fuſtion.

ANSTYE.

In primis, thre belles.
It̃m, one cope.
It̃m, tow ſuetes of veſtments.
It̃m, one challice.
It̃m, a croſſe of braſſe.

OSGATHORPE.

In primis, one chalice.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes, one of ſay, and one of ſarſnet.
It̃m, on cope of bawdekyn.
It̃m, tow amyſſeys of white cloth.
It̃m, one ſurples.
It̃m, one croſſe of latyn.
It̃m, tow belles.

WOODHOUSE.

In primis, foore old veſtments and a cope.
It̃m, tow belles.

NEWTON LYNTHORPE.

In primis, three belles.
It̃m, on challice of ſylver pſell gylt.
It̃m, a croſſe of coper and gylte.
It̃m, three veſtementes, one of old velvet, and tow of ſatyn of Burges, old, wyth the albes.
It̃m, an old cope of ſatyn of Burges.
It̃m, tow candilſtyckes upon the alter.
It̃m, a lytell bell.
It̃m, a forſr̃t of ſatyn of Burges for the alters, old.
It̃m, three alter clothis.
It̃m, three towelles.
It̃m, a ſurples wythe ſlevys.
It̃m, a bybyll.
It̃m, tow cruetts.

SHEALL.

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles, wyth a ſaunce bell.
It̃m, a cope.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes wyth albes and tunacles.
It̃m, foore towelles.
It̃m, a braſſe croſſe, and tow of wood.

HATHERNE.

In primis, a challice.
It̃m, thre veſtmentes.
It̃m, a cope of ſatyn of Burges.
It̃m, three belles and tow hand-belles.
It̃m, a croſſe.

ISLEY WALTON.

In primis, one challice of ſylver ſumwhat gylted wyth gold.
It̃m, tow belles (ſmale) in the ſteple.
It̃m, one veſtemente.
It̃m, one ſurples.

COTES.

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, tow belles and a ſmale belle.
It̃m, a hand-belle.
It̃m, tow candellſtyckes.
It̃m, a cope of white fuſtyon.
It̃m, a veſtment of the ſame.
It̃m, three alter clothes and a corporas.
It̃m, tow towelles.
It̃m, a ſurples.

PAKYNTON.

In primis, three belles.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes, on of ſatyn of Burges, and another of ......
It̃m, one cope of ſatyne of Burges.
It̃m, one challice.
It̃m, one croſs of maſtlyn.

THE ABBIE GATE.

In primis, one challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles and a ſaunctes bell.
It̃m, tow copes, one of tawnye damaſke, and the other of old blacke velvet.
It̃m, foore veſtments, wythe all things thereto belonging.
It̃m, one croſſe of lattyn.
It̃m, one hanging for the highe alter.

BIRSTALL.

In primis, a challice.
It̃m, an old cope of red velvet, and a veſtment wythe that y^{t} belongethe thereunto.
It̃m, thre belles and a ſaunctes bell.

WYTWEKE.

In primis, three belles, a ſaunce bell, and a hand-bell.
It̃m, a challice ſtollen.
It̃m, a cope which was ſtollen.
It̃m, a red veſtement wyth an albe.
It̃m, a ſuete of veſtementes.
It̃m, ij old veſtementes, wyth tow albes.

MONTSORELL.

In primis; In the chapel of ſaynt John Baptyſte,
A veſtment of blew ſattyn, a albe, a amyſe, wythe other neceſſarye things perteyninge to the ſame.
It̃m, tow alter clothes, tow candillſtyckes, and a old cope, one corporas, and ſeven litell bells in the ſteple ther.

In the chappell of Saynt Nicholas.

In primis, one veſtment of greene ſattyn, one albe, an amyſe, with other neceſſary things partenynge to the ſame, wyth one alter clothe.
It̃m, a ſacringe bell, a hand-bell, a ſaunce bell, wythe other tow bygger belles in the ſtepell.

FRAUNCES CAVE,
GEORGE VYNCENT,
MYGHELL PUREFEY.

ALLEXTON,

called alſo in old records Adelacheſtone, Adlaxton, Adlexton, Adloxton, Adlokeſton, Alokeſton, Aloxton, Aſlakeſton, Athelexton, Atheloxton, Athelocſton, Aytheloxton, Hallaxton, and Hathelexton, is bounded on the Eaſt by Stockerſton, on the Weſt by Eaſt Norton, on the North by the county of Rutland, and on the South by Hallaton and a ſmall part of Horninghold. It is 15½ miles from Leiceſter, 3½ miles from Uppingham; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor the principal manor of Adelacheſtone employed five ploughs, and was valued at ten ſhillings. At the Conqueſt, being then worth twenty ſhillings, it was the property of the Counteſs Judith, under whom it was held by Grimbald[1]. One plough was then employed in the demeſne; and four villans, with one bordar, had another plough. There was a mill of two ſhillings value[2].

Grimbald held alſo of the Counteſs another ſmall manor in this lordſhip, containing only half a ploughland, which then was worth five ſhillings, and employed half a plough in the demeſne. There was a mill of ſixteen pence value[3]. The Soke of Rodeley at that time extended to ſix oxgangs in this ſmaller manor; which are deſcribed as then being waſte[4].

Robert Grimbald[5] (the father, we believe, of the Judge) was hereditary poſſeſſor of the whole lordſhip; and under him the larger or ſuperior manor was held by Robert de Bakepuiz, who had married the ſiſter of Robert Grimbald, and from whom this part of the lordſhip was diſtinguiſhed by the name of

BAKEPUIZ MANOR.

The very high antiquity of the family of Bakepuiz[6], and their early ſettlement at Allexton, is confirmed by the following notes and deeds, tranſcribed from lord Stamford's copy of Burton, in which they were inſerted by Samuel Roper, eſq.

In 1067, Athelelm and Ralph Bakepuiz gave the church of Kingeſtuna to the abbey of Abingdon in Berks. Henry his ſon withdrew the revenues ſo granted; and, dying, was ſucceeded by his brother Robert; whom Roger biſhop of Saliſbury enjoined to the reſtoration of them, on pain of having the church of Kingeſtuna interdicted, and debarred of all religious offices and duties[7]. Kingſton Bakpuiz is in Oke hundred, co. Berks.

Robert Bakepuiz abovementioned ſeems to have had (inter alios liberos) a daughter named Aelez, who, under her uncle Grimbald, was the owner in fee of Allexton (which might have fallen to her portion by the grant or deviſe of her father) as appears from the following deed:

"Aeleza, filia Roberti de Bakepuz, omnibus hominibus ſuis & amicis, Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & firmitèr conceſſiſſe Johanni de Bakepuz, fratri meo, totam terram meam de Aelacheſtonâ, in feodo & hereditate, tenend' de me & heredibus meis & heredibus ſuis per unam marcam argenti reddendam mihi per annum; & propter hoc ipſe Joh̄es acquietabit terram illam de omni ſervicio quod pertinet ad dominum in capite; & hoc feci conceſſu d̄ni Roberti Grimbald avunculi mei, & Johannis filii mei; & pro hâc re ipſe Johannes, frater meus, dedit mihi primò annulum aureum coram patre meo in curiâ ſuâ, deindè firmaculum argenti coram Roberto Grimbald in curiâ ſuâ. Hii ſunt teſtes; Nicholas de Jubriâ Gwillielmus[8] filius Grimbaldi, & tota curia Roberti Grimbald."

> Sealed with a large ſeal, being her own picture, with a hawk on her fiſt[9]; penès S. Roper.

The next grant is from John de Boſchevilla to John Bakepuiz of a farther intereſt here:

"Johannes de Boſchevillâ omnibus hominibus & amicis ſuis, Anglis & Francis, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & confirmâſſe totam terram de Alakeſtonâ, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, Joh̄i de Bakepuis, adeò quietè & liberè ſicut Robertus Grimaldus & Aeleza mater mea ei dederunt, pro unâ marcâ argenti per annum; & ipſe Joh̄es Bakepuiz faciet indè ſervicium unius militis, & adquietabit terram illam erga Rob̄tum Grimbald & heredes ſuos de omnibus que illi pertinent; & hâc recognitione ipſe devenit homo meus, & dedit mihi unum palfridum & unum firmaculum auri. Teſtibus; Rogero capellano comitis, Rob̄to de Pixy dapifero, & Will̄o filio Hereberti, & Rad̄o de Eitonâ, & Roḡo de Grendonâ, & Waltero de Mulnetonâ, & Roḡo de Ulfeſmorâ, & Rob̄to filio Walk^e, & Henrico & Petro & Thomâ fratribus ſuis, & Galfrido de Bakepuiz, & Henrico de Legâ, & Rob̄to Blundo filio Radolphi, & Gerardo & Ricardo & Willielmo & Fulekero filiis Wimundi, & aliis pluribus[10]."

> Sealed in white wax; very large; the donor, brandiſhing a ſword, on horſeback[11].

John de Bakepuiz, in conſideration of homage and ſervice, gave to his ſon Nicholas a virgate and half of land in Alekeſton[12].

> Sealed with a large green ſeal; a lion rampant in an eſcocheon, circumſcribed with his own name[13].

On the aid granted to king Henry III, in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, two marks were paid for one fee then held by John de Bakepuiz; and in the Itinerary of 1280, Alokeſton, Lodington, Laund, and Eaſt Norton, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1312, John de Haſtings, ſenior, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Athelocſton, co. Leiceſter, which John de Bakepuiz held; and John de Haſtings, junior, his ſon and heir, was then aged 26[14].

In 1346, John de Bakepuiz (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 13*s*. 4*d*. for a third part of one knight's fee in Allexton, parcel of the fee of Huntingdon[15].

In 1348, Lawrence de Haſtings died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Athelexton,

---

[1] Owner alſo of Ouſton; and the immediate anceſtor of Robert Grimbald (the famous chief juſtice in the reign of king Henry II.) who ſoon after the year 1175 was the founder of Ouſton abbey (ſee vol. II. p. 757).

[2] "Grimbaldus tenet de Comitiſſâ 5 carucatas terræ in Adelacheſtone. Ibi 5 carucæ fuerunt. Nunc in dominico 1 caruca; & 4 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Ibi molinum de 2 ſolidis. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 239. b. 1.

[3] "Grimbaldus tenet de Comitiſſâ dimidiam carucatam terræ in Adelacheſtone. In dominico eſt ibi dimidia carucæ, & molinum de 16 denariis. Valet 5 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 2.

[4] "In Adelacheſtone ſunt 6 bovatæ terræ. Vaſta eſt." Ibid. fol. 230. b. 1.

[5] His arms were, Barry of ſix, Argent and Azure, within a bordure Gules; Plate III. fig. 1.

[6] "The chief ſeat of this family was at Barton Bakepuiz in the county of Derby, three miles diſtant from Tutbury in the county of Stafford, now the inheritance of ſir Henry Merrey, knight, where many of them lie buried, their arms and pictures yet to be ſeen in the church windows; which family did adhere unto the noble houſe of Ferrers earls of Derby, to whoſe deeds they appear to be witneſſes." Burton, ſub anno 1622.

[7] Deeds in Bibl. Cotton. ſub Claudio, B. VI. in Regiſtro de Abbendon. Faricius was abbot at that time, who died 17 kal. Martii, A. D. 1117. See Willis's Mitred Abbeys, vol. I. p. 6.

[8] William and Hugh Grimbald were witneſſes to their brother Robert's foundation deed of Ouſton Abbey. See vol. II. p. 757.

[9] See Plate III. fig. 2. [10] Ex Orig. penès S. Roper. [11] See Plate III. fig. 3. [12] Ex Orig. penès S. Roper.

[13] See Plate III. fig. 4. [14] Eſch. 6 Edw. II. N° 56. Leic. [15] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

Querndon.

In primis, three great belles and a litell bell.
It̃m, a whole ſewte of veſtmentes.
It̃m, one chalice of ſylver.
It̃m, a croſſe of latyn.
It̃m, a paxe, wythe a piketur of ſylver.

Bredon.

In primis, one challice.
It̃m, one veſtment of blwe ſylke and grene.
It̃m, one veſtment of white and red ſylke.
It̃m, another of damaeſc.
It̃m, another of blwe ſylke inbrawdered wythe ſtares of gold wyre.
It̃m, one cope of ſylke inbrawdered wyth gold and flowers.
It̃m, three bells.

Shepeshed.

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles.
It̃m, tow copes, one of old ſylke, and another of red velvet.
It̃m, tow red veſtments.
It̃m, one whyte veſtment of fuſtion.

Anstye.

In primis, thre belles.
It̃m, one cope.
It̃m, tow ſuetes of veſtments.
It̃m, one challice.
It̃m, a croſſe of braſſe.

Osgathorpe.

In primis, one chalice.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes, one of ſay, and one of ſarſnet.
It̃m, on cope of bawdekyn.
It̃m, tow amyſſeys of white cloth.
It̃m, one ſurples.
It̃m, one croſſe of latyn.
It̃m, tow belles,

Woodhouse.

In primis, foore old veſtments and a cope.
It̃m, tow belles.

Newton Lynthorpe.

In primis, three belles.
It̃m, on challice of ſylver pſell gylt.
It̃m, a croſſe of coper and gylte.
It̃m, three veſtementes, one of old velvet, and tow of ſatyn of Burges, old, wyth the albes.
It̃m, an old cope of ſatyn of Burges.
It̃m, tow candilſtyckes upon the alter.
It̃m, a lytell bell.
It̃m, a forfr̃t of ſatyn of Burges for the alters, old.
It̃m, three alter clothis.
It̃m, three towelles.
It̃m, a ſurples wythe ſlevys.
It̃m, a bybyll.
It̃m, tow cruetts.

Sheall.

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles, wyth a ſaunce bell.
It̃m, a cope.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes wyth albes and tunacles.
It̃m, foore towelles.
It̃m, a braſſe croſſe, and tow of wood.

Hatherne.

In primis, a challice.
It̃m, thre veſtmentes.
It̃m, a cope of ſatyn of Burges.
It̃m, three belles and tow hand-belles.
It̃m, a croſſe.

Isley Walton.

In primis, one challice of ſylver ſumwhat gylted wyth gold.
It̃m, tow belles (ſmale) in the ſteple.
It̃m, one veſtemente.
It̃m, one ſurples.

Cotes.

In primis, a challice of ſylver.
It̃m, tow belles and a ſmale belle.
It̃m, a hand-belle.
It̃m, tow candellſtyckes.
It̃m, a cope of white fuſtyon.
It̃m, a veſtment of the ſame.
It̃m, three alter clothes and a corporas.
It̃m, tow towelles.
It̃m, a ſurples.

Pakynton.

In primis, three belles.
It̃m, tow veſtmentes, on of ſatyn of Burges, and another of ......
It̃m, one cope of ſatyne of Burges.
It̃m, one challice.
It̃m, one croſs of maſtlyn.

The Abbie Gate.

In primis, one challice of ſylver.
It̃m, three belles and a ſaunctes bell.
It̃m, tow copes, one of tawnye damaſke, and the other of old blacke velvet.
It̃m, foore veſtments, wythe all things thereto belonging.
It̃m, one croſſe of lattyn.
It̃m, one hanging for the highe alter.

Birstall.

In primis, a challice.
It̃m, an old cope of red velvet, and a veſtment wythe that y^t^ belongethe thereunto.
It̃m, thre belles and a ſaunctes bell.

Wytweke.

In primis, three belles, a ſaunce bell, and a hand-bell.
It̃m, a challice ſtollen.
It̃m, a cope which was ſtollen.
It̃m, a red veſtement wyth an albe.
It̃m, a ſuete of veſtementes.
It̃m, ij old veſtementes, wyth tow albes.

Montsorell.

In primis; In the chapel of ſaynt John Baptyſte,
A veſtment of blew ſattyn, a albe, a amyſe, wythe other neceſſarye things perteyninge to the ſame.
It̃m, tow alter clothes, tow candillſtyckes, and a old cope, one corporas, and ſeven litell bells in the ſteple ther.

In the chappell of Saynt Nicholas.

In primis, one veſtment of greene ſattyn, one albe, an amyſe, with other neceſſary things partenynge to the ſame, wyth one alter clothe.
It̃m, a ſacringe bell, a hand-bell, a ſaunce bell, wythe other tow bygger belles in the ſtepell.

Fraunces Cave,
George Vyncent,
Myghell Purefey.

ALLEXTON,

called alſo in old records Adelacheſtone, Adlaxton, Adlexton, Adloxton, Adlokeſton, Alokeſton, Aloxton, Aſlakeſton, Athelexton, Atheloxton, Athelocſton, Aytheloxton, Hallaxton, and Hathelexton, is bounded on the Eaſt by Stockerſton, on the Weſt by Eaſt Norton, on the North by the county of Rutland, and on the South by Hallaton and a ſmall part of Horninghold. It is 15½ miles from Leiceſter, 3½ miles from Uppingham; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor the principal manor of Adelacheſtone employed five ploughs, and was valued at ten ſhillings. At the Conqueſt, being then worth twenty ſhillings, it was the property of the Counteſs Judith, under whom it was held by Grimbald[1]. One plough was then employed in the demeſne; and four villans, with one bordar, had another plough. There was a mill of two ſhillings value[2].

Grimbald held alſo of the Counteſs another ſmall manor in this lordſhip, containing only half a plough-land, which then was worth five ſhillings, and employed half a plough in the demeſne. There was a mill of ſixteen pence value[3]. The Soke of Rodeley at that time extended to ſix oxgangs in this ſmaller manor; which are deſcribed as then being waſte[4].

Robert Grimbald[5] (the father, we believe, of the Judge) was hereditary poſſeſſor of the whole lordſhip; and under him the larger or ſuperior manor was held by Robert de Bakepuiz, who had married the ſiſter of Robert Grimbald, and from whom this part of the lordſhip was diſtinguiſhed by the name of Bakepuiz manor.

The very high antiquity of the family of Bakepuiz[6], and their early ſettlement at Allexton, is confirmed by the following notes and deeds, tranſcribed from lord Stamford's copy of Burton, in which they were inſerted by Samuel Roper, eſq.

In 1067, Athelelm and Ralph Bakepuiz gave the church of Kingeſtuna to the abbey of Abingdon in Berks. Henry his ſon withdrew the revenues ſo granted; and, dying, was ſucceeded by his brother Robert; whom Roger biſhop of Saliſbury enjoined to the reſtoration of them, on pain of having the church of Kingeſtuna interdicted, and debarred of all religious offices and duties[7]. Kingſton Bakpuiz is in Oke hundred, co. Berks.

Robert Bakepuiz abovementioned ſeems to have had (inter alios liberos) a daughter named Aelez, who, under her uncle Grimbald, was the owner in fee of Allexton (which might have fallen to her portion by the grant or deviſe of her father) as appears from the following deed:

"Aeleza, filia Roberti de Bakepuz, omnibus hominibus ſuis & amicis, Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & firmitèr conceſſiſſe Johanni de Bakepuz, fratri meo, totam terram meam de Aelacheſtonâ, in feodo & hereditate, tenend' de me & heredibus meis & heredibus ſuis per unam marcam argenti reddendam mihi per annum; & propter hoc ipſe Joh̄es acquietabit terram illam de omni ſervicio quod pertinet ad dominum in capite; & hoc feci conceſſu d̄ni Roberti Grimbald avunculi mei, & Johannis filii mei; & pro hâc re ipſe Johannes, frater meus, dedit mihi primò annulum aureum coram patre meo in curiâ ſuâ, deindè firmaculum argenti coram Roberto Grimbald in curiâ ſuâ. Hii ſunt teſtes; Nicholas de Jubriâ Gwillielmus[8] filius Grimbaldi, & tota curia Roberti Grimbald."

Sealed with a large ſeal, being her own picture, with a hawk on her fiſt[9]; penès S. Roper.

The next grant is from John de Boſchevilla to John Bakepuiz of a farther intereſt here:

"Johannes de Boſchevillâ omnibus hominibus & amicis ſuis, Anglis & Francis, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & confirmâſſe totam terram de Alakeſtonâ, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, Joh̄i de Bakepuis, adeò quietè & liberè ſicut Robertus Grimaldus & Aeleza mater mea ei dederunt, pro unâ marcâ argenti per annum; & ipſe Joh̄es Bakepuiz faciet indè ſervicium unius militis, & adquietabit terram illam erga Rob̄tum Grimbald & heredes ſuos de omnibus que illi pertinent; & hâc recognitione ipſe devenit homo meus, & dedit mihi unum palfridum & unum firmaculum auri. Teſtibus; Rogero capellano comitis, Rob̄to de Pixy dapifero, & Will̄o filio Hereberti, & Rad̄o de Eitonâ, & Roḡo de Grendonâ, & Waltero de Mulnetonâ, & Roḡo de Ulfeſmorâ, & Rob̄to filio Walk^e, & Henrico & Petro & Thomâ fratribus ſuis, & Galfrido de Bakepuiz, & Henrico de Legâ, & Rob̄to Blundo filio Radolphi, & Gerardo & Ricardo & Willielmo & Fulekero filiis Wimundi, & aliis pluribus[10]."

Sealed in white wax; very large; the donor, brandiſhing a ſword, on horſeback[11].

John de Bakepuiz, in conſideration of homage and ſervice, gave to his ſon Nicholas a virgate and half of land in Alekeſton[12].

Sealed with a large green ſeal; a lion rampant in an eſcocheon, circumſcribed with his own name[13].

On the aid granted to king Henry III, in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, two marks were paid for one fee then held by John de Bakepuiz; and in the Itinerary of 1280, Alokeſton, Lodington, Laund, and Eaſt Norton, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1312, John de Haſtings, ſenior, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Athelocſton, co. Leiceſter, which John de Bakepuiz held; and John de Haſtings, junior, his ſon and heir, was then aged 26[14].

In 1346, John de Bakepuiz (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 13*s*. 4*d*. for a third part of one knight's fee in Allexton, parcel of the fee of Huntingdon[15].

In 1348, Lawrence de Haſtings died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Athelexton, which he held of the earl of Pembroke (the ſame which John de Bakepuiz held) value £16.[1]

---

[1] Owner alſo of Ouſton; and the immediate anceſtor of Robert Grimbald (the famous chief juſtice in the reign of king Henry II.) who ſoon after the year 1175 was the founder of Ouſton abbey (ſee vol. II. p. 757).

[2] "Grimbaldus tenet de Comitiſſâ 5 carucatas terræ in Adelacheſtone. Ibi 5 carucæ fuerunt. Nunc in dominico 1 caruca; & 4 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Ibi molinum de 2 ſolidis. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 239. b. 1.

[3] "Grimbaldus tenet de Comitiſſâ dimidiam carucatam terræ in Adelacheſtone. In dominico eſt ibi dimidia carucæ, & molinum de 16 denariis. Valet 5 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 2.

[4] "In Adelacheſtone ſunt 6 bovatæ terræ. Vaſta eſt." Ibid. fol. 230. b. 1.

[5] His arms were, Barry of ſix, Argent and Azure, within a bordure Gules; Plate III. fig. 1.

[6] "The chief ſeat of this family was at Barton Bakepuiz in the county of Derby, three miles diſtant from Tutbury in the county of Stafford, now the inheritance of ſir Henry Merrey, knight, where many of them lie buried, their arms and pictures yet to be ſeen in the church windows; which family did adhere unto the noble houſe of Ferrers earls of Derby, to whoſe deeds they appear to be witneſſes." Burton, ſub anno 1622.

[7] Deeds in Bibl. Cotton. ſub Claudio, B. VI. in Regiſtro de Abbendon. Faricius was abbot at that time, who died 17 kal. Martii, A. D. 1117. See Willis's Mitred Abbeys, vol. I. p. 6.

[8] William and Hugh Grimbald were witneſſes to their brother Robert's foundation deed of Ouſton Abbey. See vol. II. p. 757.

[9] See Plate III. fig. 2.

[10] Ex Orig. penès S. Roper.

[11] See Plate III. fig. 3.

[12] Ex Orig. penès S. Roper.

[13] See Plate III. fig. 4.

[14] Eſch. 6 Edw. II. N° 56. Leic.

[15] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

"Inter Placita de anno 38 Edw. III. Term. Trin. in Banco, Rot. 368," this manor appears to have been held by ſir William Bakepuiz of ſir Walter Montgomery of Cubley, by fealty, and 3*s*. 4*d*. per annum pro omnibus ſerviciis.

The laſt heir male of this houſe was Thomas de Bakepuiz, who lived in the time of king Edward III. and had iſſue an only daughter, Helen, who married Nicholas Langford, of Langford in Derby; was a widow in 1384[2]; and "whoſe pedigree," ſays Mr. Burton, I thought not amiſs to inſert, as I find it by record."

William de Bakepuiz, 4 Hen. III.=
Ralph de Bakepuiz, knt. 36 Hen. III.=
John de Bakepuiz, knt.=
John de Bakepuiz, 13—20 Edw. III.=
Thomas de Bakepuiz.=
Helen, dau. and heir, married to Longeford, and was a widow 8 Ric. II.

HACKLUIT'S MANOR.

Haſcullus de Athelakeſton obtained from king Henry I. the foreſterſhip of the counties of Leiceſter and Rutland; and retained them till king Stephen's time, when he was killed in his houſe by Bertrand de Verdun.

Peter his ſon enjoyed the office after him in Henry the Second's time; and married the niece of Ivo de Nevill; which Ivo, ſon of Alan de Nevill, made friends to the king to hold the office of foreſter by a more ſure title, and to have the dead wood and dry wood of the king's demeſne coppices in Rutlandſhire, paying 40*s*. yearly into the Exchequer. He enjoyed it till king John's time; when ſeveral diſtricts in this neighbourhood were diſafforeſted[3].

From a fine paſſed in 1204, it appears that Peter de Allexton, by his wife Alice, had iſſue Chriſtiana, his daughter and heir[4].

Concerning the chapel or oratory in the houſe of Peter, ſon of Haſcullus the foreſter, ſee a deed wherein Peter the rector (about 1220) covenants to perform divine ſervice there, ſealed with the ſeal of Peter, a man on horſe-back, Sig. P. fil. Haſculli Foreſtarii[5].

The office of foreſter, enjoyed by Haſcullus the ſon of Ivo, deſcended to his ſon, who held the ſame till Feb. 25, 1234-5; when, in purſuance of the promiſe made by Henry III. to his barons by his Charter of the Foreſt, thoſe parts of Leiceſterſhire were finally and completely diſafforeſted.

Chriſtiana de Allexton, who died in 1272[6], married Haſcullus, ſon of Ivo de Nevill, of Rutland; and had for her inheritance Allexton, with lands in Hallaton and many other places.

In 1279, it appeared that Peter de Nevill, then an outlaw, had made over this manor to Theobald de Nevill his ſon[7]; who continued owner of it till his death in 1306; when it was found by the inquiſition, that ſir Theobald de Nevill, deceaſed, and Cicely his wife (enfeoffed by Thomas de Nevill to them and the heirs of the ſaid Theobald) were ſeiſed of one meſſuage and two carucates of land, with the appurtenances, in Aythelexton, whereof two parts of the meſſuage and three virgates of the land aforeſaid were held of the manor of Rotheleye, in the hands of the Hoſpitallers; that is to ſay, in free ſocage, by the ſervice of 3*s*. for all ſervice; and a third part of the meſſuage and five virgates of the land aforeſaid were held of John de Bakepuiz, knt. by the ſervice of one pair of gilt ſpurs, or 6*d*. a year; and that Alice de Neville, daughter of the aforeſaid Theobald (and then the wife of John de Hakeluit) was his next heir[8].

In 1362, John de Hakeluit died ſeiſed of the manor of Allexton (in right of Alice de Nevill his wife) which he held of the prior of the hoſpital of St. John at Leiceſter; and alſo of half a virgate of land there, which he held of Thomas de Bakepuiz, by the ſervice of 6*d*. a year; and William de Hakeluit, ſon of the ſaid John and Alice, was his next heir[9].

In 1371, Alice daughter of Theobald de Nevill, widow of John Hakeluyt, and then wife of John Wardeydieu, who ſurvived her, died ſeiſed of this manor, and of the foreſterſhip of Rutland; and left William Hackluit, ſon of John and the ſaid Alice, her heir, 50 years old[10].

In 1374 it was found that William Hackluit died in the 45th of king Edward III; that ſir John Mecum, knight, aged 24, and John Truſſel, aged 24, were his heirs; and that he was ſeiſed of the foreſterſhip of Rutland and this manor[11].

By another inquiſition, in 1376, it was found that William Hakeluit died ſeiſed of a certain manor, with its appurtenances, in Allexton, which he held of ſir William Bakepuiz, knt. in capite, by the ſervice of 6*d*. or one pair of gilt ſpurs a year; and that John Meye, of Lodington, was the next heir in blood of the ſaid William de Hakeluit[12]. And in the ſame year it appeared that John de Haſtings earl of Pembroke died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Allexton, which John de Bakepuiz held[13].

All or the greateſt part of the lands of the Bakepuiz family, in the reign of king Henry IV. came by purchaſe to ſir Walter Blount, knight, (ſon and heir to ſir Thomas le Blount, knight, treaſurer of Normandy); who in 1413 enfeoffed Thomas Langley biſhop of Durham, and John Bayſham, clerk, inter alia, in his manor of Allexton, to the uſe of Sancia de Ayala and Toledo his wife (a Spaniſh lady) during her life; with remainder to Thomas his ſecond ſon, and the iſſue male of his body; and ſo to James his third ſon, and Peter his fourth ſon; with remainder to his right heirs. This deed was dated at Barton, 1 Henry V. Hiis teſtibus; domino Nicholao de Montegomeri, domino Nicholao Langford, domino Johanne Dabridgcourt, militibus; Thoma Fouljambe, Johanne filio Hereberti, armigeris; & aliis[14].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Allexton was rated at £1. 9*s*.

In 1427, it was found that Margaret de Burgh died ſeiſed of a manor in Allexton, called Over Manor; and that ſhe held it of the prior of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, as of his manor of Rothele, by the yearly payment of 3*s*. to the ſaid prior. She poſſeſſed alſo one virgate of land, with the appurtenances, in Allexton, held under ſir Thomas Blount, knt. as of his manor called Needham Halle in Allexton, by the ſervice of 6*d*. a year to the ſaid Thomas; and Anne (the wife of Robert Chiſelden, eſq.) was her daughter and next heir[15].

In 1441, Walter Blount (ſon of ſir Thomas Blount, knt.) and Elizabeth his wife, were ſeiſed of certain lands in Allexton[16].

In 1444, Anne Chiſelden died ſeiſed of the manor of Allexton, called Hakelott[17] manor; which ſhe held of the prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England[18]. This Anne was daughter and heir to William de Burgh, and brought it in marriage to Robert Chiſelden her huſband, leaving John Chiſelden (ſon of John Chiſelden) her grandſon and heir.

In the ſubſidy of 1445, Allexton was rated at £1. 9*s*.; and an abatement was made of 6*s*. 8*d*.

In 1450, John Chiſelden, eſq. releaſed all his right in all his lands and tenements in Allexton to John

---

[1] Eſch. 22 Edw. III. N° 47. Leic.
[2] MS. Chetwynd.
[3] See before, under Bringhurſt, vol. II. p. 516.
[4] Fines anno 5 Johannis regis.
[5] Peter Le Neve's MSS. fol. 52.
[6] Inq. 1 Edw. I. N° 26. 30. 64; & Placita coram rege, tenta Mich. 4 Edw. I. Rot. 13. Gaſcoigne, MS Notes on Burton.
[7] Eſch. 3 Edw. I. N° 64. Leic.
[8] Eſch. 10 Edw. II. N° 23. Leic.
[9] Eſch. 36 Edw. III. Pars 1. N° 98.
[10] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. n. 54. Leic.
[11] Eſch. 47 Edw. III. memb. 38.
[12] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. Pars 1. N° 66. Leic.
[13] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. Pars 1. N° 40.
[14] Bar. vol. I. p. 519. b.
[15] Eſch. 9 Hen. VI. N° 34. Leic.
[16] Clauſ. 20 Hen. VI. dorſo.
[17] Alio Exemplo, Hakeluit.
[18] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI. n. 14.

Boyville and others[1]; by whom they were re-conveyed to ſir Walter Blount the firſt lord Mountjoy, who died Auguſt 1, 1474[2], ſeiſed of both the aforementioned manors[3]; and alſo of the manor of Stretton en le Field, in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby; and of ſeveral lordſhips in many other counties; Edward Blount, ſon of William Blount, ſon of the ſaid lord Mountjoy, being then his next heir.

This Edward dying in his minority Dec. 1, 1476, John his uncle, being then 30 years of age, became heir to his honours and eſtates[4]. He obtained in 1477 a ſpecial livery of all the lands by hereditary deſcent at that time devolved on him[5]; and in 1482, on the death of Anne ducheſs of Buckingham (widow of ſir Walter Blount, deceaſed) had alſo livery of all the lands which ſhe held in dower after the death of the ſaid Walter[6]. John Blount died in 1486[7]; and was ſucceeded by his ſon,

William lord Mountjoy, who was called by king Henry VII. to the privy council; and by king Henry VIII. was conſtituted maſter of the mint, and honoured with the Garter. He died in 1535[8]; and was then ſeiſed of the manor of Allexton, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice[9].

Charles lord Mountjoy in 1539 had ſpecial livery of all his father's lands; ſerved in 1544 in the king's army then ſent into France[10]; and died in 1545.

The manor and advowſon at Allexton, however, had been previouſly ſettled on lady Dorothy, the ſecond wife of William lord Mountjoy, as appears by the following report of a proceeding at law:

Sir William Blount, knt. lord Mountjoy, being ſeiſed of the manor of Allexton, to which the advowſon of the church belongs, preſented John Browne, who was inſtituted temp. Henry VIII: and William Blount lord Mountjoy levied a fine of the manor, in October, 5 Johannis Baptiſte, 24 Henry VIII; whereby he ſettled it and the advowſon on certain perſons, for the uſe of the ſaid lord Mountjoy and dame Dorothy his wife, and the heirs male of their bodies; the remainder to his right heirs. The ſaid lord Mountjoy died 8 November, 26 Henry VIII. at Sutton, co. Leiceſter. And upon the death of John Brown aforeſaid, dame Dorothy preſented Hugh Pennington, who was inſtituted temp. Henry VIII; and ſhe dying, John Blount, eſq. as ſon and heir male of William lord Mountjoy and Dorothy his wife, became ſeiſed of it, and levied a fine of it 2 and 3 Philip and Mary, in the Octaves of St. Michael, by which he, with Anthony Andrewes, [illegible]tled the manor and advowſon on Richard Parkins; for which Richard Parkins was to pay him and the heirs of his body yearly £42. 4*s*. at the font of St. Paul's church in London; and in default of ſuch heirs, then to James lord Mountjoy and his heirs; and in default of ſuch payment for a month, then Richard and his heirs ſhould forfeit, nomine pœnæ, £10.; and John, &c. might enter and diſtrain upon the premiſſes. Richard alſo granted the manor and advowſon to the ſaid Anthony and his heirs; which Anthony Andrewes was alſo ſeiſed of the manor of Biſbrooke, co. Rutland, and died 20 Dec. 3 and 4 Philip and Mary; whereupon the ſaid manors of Allexton and Biſbroke deſcended to Edward Andrewes, ſon and heir of Anthony; who, by inquiſition taken at Uppingham, 3 November, 5 and 6 Philip and Mary, was found to be 12 years of age, and in ward of the crown; and the church of Allexton becoming vacant by the ceſſion of Hugh Pennington, by his acceptance of another benefice, queen Elizabeth preſented Philip Hayes, who was inſtituted. And 20 June, 10 Elizabeth, the ſaid Edward Andrewes came to be 21 years of age; and the queen, 27 Nov. 10 Elizabeth, gave him livery of his lands; and Philip Hayes, 12 Sept. 11 Elizabeth, reſigned his living to the biſhop of Lincoln; and thereupon the ſaid Edward Andrewes claimed it to be his right to preſent. John Blount and Ralph Bradley, clerk, preſented, that John Blount above-mentioned, being ſeiſed of the manor and advowſon of Allexton, on 10 Feb. 1 and 2 Philip and Mary, for £213. 6*s*. 8*d*. by indenture granted to Anthony Andrewes of Biſbrooke, co. Rutland, the manor and advowſon of Allexton, covenanting to ſuffer a common recovery, &c. for the uſe of the ſaid Anthony, he paying to the ſaid John Blount, his heirs and aſſigns, £42. 4*s*. &c. ut ſupra; and with a proviſo, that Anthony ſhould, by ſufficient writing, grant the advowſon of the church of Allexton to the ſaid John Blount to preſent a clerk, toties quoties it ſhould be vacant during the life of the ſaid John Blount; and if it ſhould not be vacant during his life, then to grant to John's executors or adminiſtrators the advowſon of the next turn after his death. The ſaid John Blount and Ralph Bradley farther ſay, that the ſaid Anthony Andrewes did not in his life-time grant the ſaid advowſon of Allexton to the ſaid John Blount, according to the ſaid indenture; whereupon the ſaid John ſeized the ſaid manor; and the church becoming vacant by the reſignation of Philip Hayes, he preſented Ralph Bradley, who was inſtituted. Judgement was given, againſt Edward Andrewes, for John Blount and Ralph Bradley, Mich. 13 and 14 Eliz. Rot. 1568, in com. Banco[1].

---

[1] Clauſ. 29 Hen. VI. 19.

[2] Of another branch of the family of Blount, an account will be given under the lordſhip of Oſbaſton, in the pariſh of Market Boſworth; particularly of Richard Blount, the famous vice-provincial of the Jeſuits in this kingdom in 1619; of whom a portrait is here given in Plate III. fig 5.

[3] Eſch. 14 Edw. IV. N° 24. Leic. By his laſt will, dated July 8, 1474, he bequeathed his body to be buried at the Grey Friers in London; appointing the bones of his ſon William to be taken out of the place where they lay, and laid on the left ſide of his tomb (one tomb to ſerve them both). He likewiſe ordained, that the pariſh church and chancel of our lady at Aylewaſton, co. Derby, ſhould be made up, and finiſhed completely out of his own proper goods; and that a third bell, called a tenor, ſhould be bought for the ſame church. Alſo, that a convenient tomb in that church ſhould be ſet over Elene his wife. Furthermore, he directed that his executors ſhould purchaſe lands to the yearly value of £10.; and appropriate them to the hoſpital of St. Leonard, ſituate betwixt Alkemonton and Bentley, to pray for the ſouls of his anceſtors; as alſo for his own ſoul, his wives and children's ſouls; the ſouls of Humphrey duke of Buckingham, Richard earl Rivers, ſir John Wodvyle, knight; and for the ſouls of the lords in old time of that hoſpital. Moreover, he ordained, that the maſter of that hoſpital for the time being ſhould find continually ſeven poor men, to be choſen by him out of ſuch as had or thenceforth ſhould be old ſervingmen with the lord and patron of the lordſhip of Barton, and of the ſame hoſpital of St. Leonard, or elſe out of the old tenants of all the lordſhips of the ſaid lord and patrons, for the time being, within the counties of Derby and Stafford: and that the maſter, for the time being, ſhould pay weekly unto thoſe ſeven poor men 2*s.* 6*d.*; alſo, that every of them, at the time of his election, ſhould be of the age of fifty and five years at the leaſt; and that thoſe ſeven poor men ſhould have ſeven kine going within his park at Barton, and ſeven loads of wood yearly for their fewel, to be taken within his lordſhips of Barton, Alkmonton and Bentley, or other lordſhips in Appultree Hundred, co. Derby. Likewiſe, that the ſaid maſter ſhould every third year give unto each of thoſe ſeven poor men a gown and a hood of white or ruſſet of one ſuit, one time white, and another time ruſſet; the gown to be marked with a tayewe croſs of red; and that none of thoſe poor men ſhould go a-begging upon pain of being removed from that hoſpital. Moreover, that every of them ſhould be obliged to ſay daily our Ladies Pſalter twice within the chapel of the ſame hoſpital. He likewiſe appointed that there ſhould be a manſion, with a ſquare court, built next to the ſame chapel, without any back-door; and that the roof of that chapel ſhould be raiſed, the walls enhanced, the windows made with ſtrong iron-work, with a quire and percloſe, and two altars without the quire. Furthermore, that the maſter ſhould wear neither red nor green, but upon his gown of other colour a tayewe croſs of blew upon his left ſide; and have no other benefice, except the parſonage of Barton. He likewiſe willed that a chapel of St. Nicholas ſhould be built at Alkmonton; that the maſter of the before-ſpecified hoſpital ſhould ſay maſs there yearly on the feaſt of St. Nicholas, and at other times by his diſcretion; and, laſtly, that his feoffees ſhould beſtow £40. in making a chapel within the abbey of Burton. Dugdale, Bar. I. 520.

[4] Eſch. 16 Edw. IV. n. 55. Clauſ. 11 Edw. IV. m. 19. [5] Pat. 15 Edw. IV. p. 3. m. 7. [6] Pat. 20 Edw. IV. p. 2. m. 8.

[7] By his will, dated Oct. 6, 1486, he bequeathed his body to be buried in the chapel of the Friers Minors in London, where the body of his father lay interred; and gave to that houſe £20. He alſo bequeathed to his ſon Rowland Blount his chain of gold, with a lion gold ſet with diamonds; likewiſe to Conſtantine his daughter £100. for her marriage; and conſtituted Lora, his wife, with ſir James Blount his brother, his executors.

[8] By his will, dated Oct. 13, 1534, he ordained, that, in caſe he ſhould die within the counties of Derby or Stafford, his body ſhould be conveyed to the pariſh church of Barton (in which pariſh he was born), there to be buried in an arch, on the South ſide, near the high-altar. And, if in Northamptonſhire, then in the college at Fotheringhay; if at Standon, within the chapel there; and if in London, then in the Grey Friers, where his grandfather, grandmother, his father, the lady Alice his wife, and other of his kin and friends, do lie; and to have a convenient tomb, by reaſon that the king had called him to the order of the Garter. Moreover he willed, that if he ſhould depart this life in London, there ſhould be a ſtone laid over his grave, the lady Dorothy and the lady Alice his wives being there buried; which Dorothy was daughter of Henry Keble. And that a tomb of alabaſter or marble ſhould be made on the South ſide of the chapel, within the Grey Friers in London, for John lord Mountjoy his father; and likewiſe another for his mother, who lieth interred with ſir Thomas Montgomery, her late huſband, at the new Abbey. This William lord Mountjoy married to his firſt wife Elizabeth, daughter of ſir William Say, knight; over whoſe grave, in the pariſh church of Eſenden, co. Hertford, he ordained that a large ſtone, with an inſcription thereon, ſhould be laid.

[9] Eſch. 26 Hen. VIII.

[10] By his will, made at that time, he ordained a ſtone to be laid over his grave in caſe he ſhould there be ſlain, with this following epitaph thereon, for a monument to his children; to continue and keep themſelves worthy of ſo much honour, as to be called hereafter to die for their maſter and country:

Willingly have I ſought,
  And willing have I found,
The fatal end that wrought
  Me hither, as duty bound.

Diſcharg'd I am of that I ought
  To my country by honeſt ownde;
My ſoul departed Chriſt hath bought:
  The end of man is ground.

Farther directing, that if he died out of the wars, that then his body, without any curioſity or coſtly ceremonies, ſhould be brought to the church moſt of reſort thereabouts, and a tomb there to be erected for him according to his degree. Alſo that, for the ſpace of two years after his deceaſe, a godly and diſcreet man ſhould be choſen out, to edify the youth of the pariſh of Weſtbury under the Plain, co. Wilts, with two lectures; whereof the firſt lecture to be every day in the morning, ordained for the catechiſing of children; that thereby they might be perfectly inſtructed to know what they profeſs in their Baptiſm; in their Pater Noſter how to pray; in their Ave Maria, to know how our Lord ought to be honoured; and in the Ten Commandments. And that he who ſhould be reader, ſhould not only read unto them, but alſo appoſe them, as they do in matters of Grammar. The ſecond lecture to be within the ſame pariſh, at afternoon, four times in the week; that is to ſay, on Monday, Wedneſday, Friday, and Sunday, to them that come; wherein chiefly to be declared the duty of ſubjects to their king and magiſtrates, for maintenance of good order and obeyſance; not only for fear, but for conſcience; with Scriptures divine, and prophane policies conſonant thereunto; as alſo increpation of vice, with their texts of Scripture; and, for performance thereof, the reader to have 20 marks by the year.

It further appears that John Blount, eſq. ſold the manor of Allexton, with the appurtenances, to Anthony Andrewes and his heirs; and afterwards (ſuppoſing the agreement not to be performed on the part of Andrewes) re-ſold the manor, with the advowſon, and other the appurtenances, to Henry lord Cromwell and his heirs; by reaſon whereof, great ſuits happened, betwixt the lord Cromwell and Andrewes, from 14 Eliz. to 43 Eliz. as appears from the following ſtatement:

"In an aſſiſe brought by Edward lord Cromwell againſt Edward Andrewes, of Gray's Inn, eſq. and others, of lands and tenements in Allexton, in the county of Leiceſter, upon nul tort nul diſſeiſin pleaded, the recognitors of the aſſiſe gave a ſpecial verdict to this effect: John Blount, eſq. ſeiſed of the manor of Allexton in the county of Leiceſter, whereof the lands and tenements put in view are parcel, to which manor the advowſon of the church of Allexton was appendant, by deed indented 10 April, 1 and 2 Philip and Mary, between him and Anthony Andrewes (father of the ſaid Edward), did grant, bargain, and ſell the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, by the name of the manor of Allexton, and of the advowſon of Allexton appendant to the ſaid manor, to Anthony Andrewes, to have and to hold to him and his heirs, to the uſe of him and his heirs, in the ſame manner and form as afterwards in the ſaid indenture is mentioned. And Blount by the ſaid indenture covenanted, that the manor was of the value of £42. per annum; and that he was thereof owner of an eſtate of inheritance, and that it ſhould be diſcharged of incumbrances, except leaſes upon which the antient rent was reſerved. And further, Blount covenanted that he would permit William Rud and Richard Elſon to recover by common recovery the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, againſt him; which recovery ſhould be to the uſes and intents following; ſcil. To the uſe of Anthony Andrewes and his heirs, rendering for the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, £42. per annum, to have and receive to Blount and his heirs, at two feaſts, &c. according to the covenants in the indenture, and £10. nomine pœnæ, and diſtreſs for both. And further, it was covenanted and agreed by the indenture between the ſaid parties, and each covenanted and granted with the other, in manner and form following; that is to ſay, as well for the aſſurance of the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, to Anthony Andrewes and his heirs, as of the ſaid rent to Blount and his heirs: That Blount, before Eaſter then next following, ſhould levy a fine of the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, to Anthony Andrewes and his heirs; and that, by the ſame fine, Anthony Andrewes ſhould render a rent of £42. in fee, payable at two feaſts, with nomine pœnæ and diſtreſs. Provided always, that the ſaid Anthony Andrewes ſhall, by his deed ſufficient in the law, give the advowſon and parſonage of the ſaid church to the ſaid John Blount during his life; and if it happen not void in his life, then one turn to his executors. And further, it was covenanted and agreed, by the ſame indenture, between the ſaid parties, and the ſaid Anthony Andrewes covenanted with the ſaid Blount, to give Blount £840. for the ſaid rent and patronage, to be paid within a year after notice that he would ſell it; the notice to be ſeven years after the ſaid ſale. And further, it was covenanted, granted, and agreed, between the ſaid parties, by the ſame indenture, that all manner of eſtates, aſſurances, and conveyances, after to be made and conveyed of the ſaid manor and other the premiſſes, ſhould be to the uſes and intents comprized in that indenture, and to no other uſe or intent; and that it is the order, courſe, and effect of all the covenants and clauſes of the ſaid indenture. And afterward, Term Paſch. next following, a recovery was had by Rud and Elſon againſt Blount of the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, according to the ſaid indenture; by force of which, Anthony Andrewes was ſeiſed of the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances (prout lex poſtulat). And afterwards, Octab. Mich. 2 and 3 Philip and Mary, Blount and Anthony Andrewes levied a fine to Richard Perkins and his heirs, of the ſaid manor, with the appurtenances, and he granted and rendered a rent of £42. per annum out of the ſaid manor to Blount in tail, with the remainder to the lord Mountjoy in fee, with cauſe of diſtreſs and nomine pœnæ, to be paid as the firſt rent was limited to be paid, and granted and rendered the manor, with the advowſon, to Anthony Andrewes in fee, and proclamations were made according to the ſtatute. And further, it was found by the recognitors of the aſſiſe, that this fine was not levied for a new ſum of money, or upon any new conſideration, but was levied to the uſes in the indenture mentioned. Anthony Andrewes, in his life, did not grant the advowſon according to the indenture; and afterwards Anthony Andrewes died; and after his death, and in the life of Blount, the church became void; Edward Andrewes, ſon and heir of Anthony Andrewes, entered into the ſaid manor; Blount did not requeſt Anthony Andrewes, in his life, to grant him the ſaid advowſon according to the ſaid proviſo; Blount entered into the ſaid manor for the condition broken. And, 6 Dec. 16 Eliz. in conſideration of £848. by deed indented and inrolled in the Common Pleas, granted, bargained, and ſold the ſaid manor, with the advowſon, to Henry lord Cromwell in fee; by force whereof he entered; upon whom the ſaid Edward Andrewes entered; and afterwards Henry lord Cromwell died; and the ſaid Edward lord Cromwell, his ſon and heir, entered upon the ſaid Edward Andrewes, who, with the other defendants, by his commandment, entered upon him, and put him out of poſſeſſion: And whether this entry was a diſſeiſin to the plaintiff or not, was the queſtion. And this Caſe was oftentimes argued in the Common Pleas, by Yelverton, Glanvill, and Williams, ſerjeants, on the Plaintiff's part; and by Drew the queen's ſerjeant and others, on the Defendant's part. And afterwards it was argued, Mich. 39 and 40 Eliz. by the lord Anderſon, Walmſley, Beamond, and Owen, juſtices, at two ſeveral days, in the Common Pleas; and the Court was divided in opinion. And thereupon the Caſe was argued before all the Judges of England, in the Exchequer chamber, by Williams, ſerjeant, and Coke, attorney-general, for the Plaintiff; and by Fleming, ſolicitor-general, and Francis Bacon, for the Defendant. And afterwards the Caſe was openly argued in the Exchequer chamber by all the juſtices of the one bench and of the other, and by the barons of the Exchequer; and it was there reſolved, that judgement ſhould be given for the Plaintiff: and, Mich. 42 and 43 Eliz. Judgement was given by the juſtices of the Common Pleas according to the ſaid Reſolution."

---

[1] From Coke's Entries' p. 499—503. And ſee the Report of this Caſe in Dyer, fol. 311. a. & b. Paſch. 14 Eliz.

Of the matters in law that were reſolved by the Judges, and the reaſons and cauſes of their judgement, if the Reader ſhall be deſirous to be farther aſcertained, we refer him to the Second Part of the Reports of the Right Honourable the Lord Coke[1]; where the Caſe, with the full reſolutions, is ſet down at large.

Edward lord Cromwell re-ſold this manor to Charles Blount lord Mountjoy, the youngeſt ſon of a former owner of it; who being a perſon of a military diſpoſition, in 1588, with the earls of Oxford, Northumberland, and others, commanded in the fleet at that time ſet forth to encounter that great Armada of the Spaniards then threatening an invaſion; and, in 36 Eliz. on the death of Henry earl of Suſſex, was made governor of Portſmouth (all this being in his brother's life-time). Moreover, in 1597, the Spaniard making new preparations againſt Ireland, he was conſtituted lieutenant to the forces then commanded by the earl of Eſſex, for the defence of that realm. And, in 41 Eliz. being deſigned lieutenant of Ireland, was oppoſed by ſome: but the next enſuing year had that high truſt conferred upon him. Whereupon, coming thither in February, he repulſed the Spaniard with great honour at Kinſale; and, governing proſperouſly there, was in a ſhort time after, 25 April, 1 Jac. conſtituted lieutenant of Ireland; and advanced to the title of earl of Devonſhire, by letters patent, bearing date 21 July next enſuing[2]; and made knight of the moſt noble order of the Garter; but departed this life about three years after, April 3, 1606[3], at the Savoy in the Strand, without lawful iſſue, and was buried in Weſtminſter Abbey in St. Paul's chapel; leaving all his lands to Mountjoy Blount, his natural ſon; who, by the ſpecial favour of king James, having been advanced to the title of lord Mountjoy of Mountjoy Fort in the North of Ireland, and by king Charles I. in 1627 lord Mountjoy of Thurveſton, co. Derby[4], was the next year, by patent, bearing date Auguſt 3, 1628, created earl of Newport in the Iſle of Wight[5]. In 1630, he was the only freeholder at Allexton; and in 1642 was appointed conſtable of the Tower[6]. He was alſo maſter of the ordnance, and of the council of war to the king; and in conſequence was included in the liſt of thoſe who in 1646 were ſufferers by ſequeſtration[7]. He was at that period the owner of this lordſhip; but ſold it at leaſt 13 years before his death (which happened Dec. 12, 1665) to Richard Verney[8], eſq.

In the Pariſh Regiſter of Allexton we find this entry: "Memorandum, That Richard Verney, eſq. did freely give, at his coming to live and reſide in this pariſh, a ſilver plate, for the carriage of the conſecrated bread in the time of the adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper, A.D. 1652. Mountjoy Cradock, Rector."

In 1655, there was collected in Allexton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 3s. 5d.

In 1660, the following remarkable advertiſment appeared in a public news-paper: "Richard Verney, eſq. of Allexton, in Leiceſterſhire, about a fortnight ſince, loſt a lanner from that place. She hath neither bells nor varvels; ſhe is a white hawk, and her long feathers and ſarcels are both in the blood. If any one give tidings thereof to Mr. Lambert, at the Golden Key in Fleet-ſtreet, they ſhall have 40*s.* for their pains[9]."

Mr. Verney was born at Kingſton, in the county of Warwick, Jan. 28, 1621; and was the ſecond ſon of ſir Grevill Verney, knt. of Compton Murdac, or Compton Verney, in that county; "a gentleman," ſays Dugdale, "accompliſhed with ſingular endowments, and of a noble and courteous diſpoſition; who left three ſons and one daughter; from the ſecond[10] of which, Richard, a perſon happily qualified with a moſt ingenious inclination, I have received much aſſiſtance in rectifying the map of this Hundred, as alſo in his delineation of divers monuments for adorning the preſent Work." Mr. Wright alſo ſays, "Belton is at preſent the ſeat of Richard Verney, eſq. a true lover of Antiquities, and a worthy Mæcenas; deſcended from that eminent family of this name, long ſince ſeated at Compton Murdac." On the Reſtoration of king Charles II. Mr. Verney (whoſe eſtate was then £1000. a year) was among the intended Knights of the Royal Oak[11]. A Pedigree of the family is given both by Dugdale and Wright; which we have enlarged, p. 12, from an entry, ſigned by Mr. Verney himſelf at the Viſitation of Leiceſterſhire, March 23, 1681-2, and continued from Thomas's additions to Dugdale, &c. whence it appears that Richard Verney, eſq. by Margaret his grandmother, ſiſter and heir to Fulk Grevill lord Broke, was lineally deſcended from Robert lord Willoughby de Broke, who was ſummoned to parliament, by writ, Aug. 7, 1492; and left three grand-daughters his heirs (the daughters of Edward his eldeſt ſon, who died in his life-time); Elizabeth, the eldeſt of which, married ſir Fulk Grevill, grandfather to the ſaid Margaret.

In 1682, Mr. Verney was ſheriff for Rutland; and in the next year, having on the death of William Verney, eſq. the only ſon of his eldeſt brother ſir Grevill, become heir to the family eſtates, he removed from Allexton to Compton Murdac; and in 1685 was returned one of the knights for Warwickſhire to the parliament then called; and was knighted April 1, 1685, on preſenting an addreſs to his majeſty from the ſaid county. He was again choſen for the county in 1688; and ſoon after preferred his claim to the barony of Broke; which, after long debate, was allowed him in parliament, Feb. 13, 1695; and accordingly, on the 25th of that month, having had ſummons to the houſe of peers[12], he took his place, Feb. 27, as the antient barons of Broke had it. He lived to a very great age, being born Jan. 28, 1621, and died July 18, 1711; having ſeen many changes in government in his time: for, being born in the reign of James I. he ſurvived not only the uſurpation that enſued, but five princes his deſcendants and ſucceſſors in

---

[1] Cromwell and Andrewes, fol. 69. b. of the firſt edition; or Vol. I. Part II. p. 69. ed. 1727.

[2] Orig. 1 Jac. p. 5. Rot. 24.

[3] On the 9th of May, 1606, was publiſhed, "A mournfull and newe Ballad, declaring the order of the late Earl of Devonſhire's Funerall." From the Book of Entries at Stationers Hall.

[4] Pat. 3 Car. I. p. 24.

[5] Pat. 4 Car. I. p. 11.

[6] Pat. 17 Car. I. p. 2. n. 50; Rymer, vol. XX. p. 461.

[7] In the ſame year, April 20, Mr. Langley, of Allexton, was fined 100 marks, for having appeared at Leiceſter when the king was there.

[8] Deſcended from an antient family, of whom William de Vernai was living in the reigns of Henry I. and Stephen, and from whom the earl of Verney in Ireland is alſo a deſcendant. Archdall's Iriſh Peerage, vol. II. p. 283.

[9] Mercurius Publicus, Sept. 6, 1660.

[10] The eldeſt of theſe brothers, ſir Grevill Verney, K. B. died a very young man. A portrait of him by Loggan is noticed by Mr. Granger, vol. III. p. 396; who obſerves that much of the hiſtory of this family may be learned from their ſumptuous monuments at Compton Murdac; of which ſee hereafter, p. 13.

[11] See vol. II. p. xlvii.

[12] Journals of the Houſe of Lords.

the throne, dying in the reign of queen Anne, in his 90th year, highly honoured and beloved by all that knew him. He was buried in his own chapel at Compton-Murdac, in Warwickſhire, in a vault there built for himſelf and family. His lordſhip married two wives; firſt, Mary, daughter of ſir John Pretyman, of Lodington, co. Leiceſter, by whom he had three ſons, John, George, and Thomas, and a daughter Mary, married to Samuel Davenport, of Calverley, co. Cheſter, eſq.; and by his ſecond wife, Frances, daughter of Thomas Dove, of Upton, co. Northampton, eſq. had a ſon, Richard, who died a bachelor June 23, 1698, about the age of 21; and a daughter Diana, wife of ſir Charles Shuckburgh, co. Warwick, bart. Of the ſons by his firſt wife, Thomas, the youngeſt, born 1676, was bred a merchant, and died in Portugal unmarried; and John-George, the eldeſt ſon (by whoſe particular foreſight the pretenſions to the barony were revived), was ſeated at Allexton; repreſented the county of Leiceſter, in ſeveral ſucceſſive parliaments, from 1695, till his death Oct. 31, 1707[1]; and acquired great honour, with the univerſal eſteem and love of the county. Leaving no ſurviving iſſue, the property at Allexton devolved to his next brother George Verney, D. D. of New College, Oxford, at that time a prebendary (and afterwards dean) of Windſor, and dean alſo of Wolverhampton; who in 1711 ſucceeded his father as lord Willoughby de Broke. He died Dec. 26, 1728; and, his eldeſt ſons being then dead, was ſucceeded by his fourth ſon, Richard lord Willoughby de Broke, who died Aug. 11, 1752; and was ſucceeded in title and eſtate by John-Peyto Verney, his nephew, the preſent lord.

From this noble family, Allexton was purchaſed by William Wilſon, eſq. of Keythorpe; who paſſed the principal part of his life at the German Spa and other parts of the Continent; and died, immenſely rich, at Piſa in Tuſcany, in the beginning of the year 1797.

In anſwer to the queries which I had circulated through the county, I have been favoured with the following remarks by the Rev. John Allinſon, the preſent curate.

"The pariſh of Allexton conſiſts of 17 dwelling-houſes, and about 60 ſouls. The lordſhip, which is nearly circular, the diameter being about a mile, is freehold; has been incloſed 233 years; and contains about 1000 acres of fine land; the rent of the whole being £1063; out of which, £788. is the property of the lord of the manor; the remainder belongs to ſeveral perſons. The whole lordſhip is grazed with ſheep and bullocks, except about 12 acres, which alternately produce middling crops of barley, oats, &c.

The wood, which is not very large, is cut down in proportion for ſale, while it laſts. The ſale conſiſts of hazel, maple, thorn, and a number of oaks, or (as they are called) ſaplings. There were for a few years no ſale of wood at all; but a reſolution is now adopted to cut down ſuch a certain portion of it as to make it hold out for about twenty years.

Here are no donations nor charity of any kind. The late Mr. Wilſon gave annually the ſum of £2. as a gratuity to the labouring poor. This gentleman, who died in Tuſcany as above related, about two years ago, deviſed the whole of his property here to a relation (Major Wilſon), who lives at Diddlington in Norfolk; is about the prime of life; and hitherto has been very charitable to the poor here as well as in other lordſhips where he has any property. The laſt year (1797) he gave to the poor here the ſum of £10.

Here is no meeting-houſe, nor any perſons that embrace any other tenets in Religion than thoſe of the Church of England.

In the beginning of the oldeſt regiſter now extant (1638), for the firſt 20 years there were 30 baptiſms, 25 burials, and 26 marriages; from 1771 to 1790, 53 baptiſms, 46 burials, and 18 marriages.

When I came to live here (Lady-day 1786) there were about a dozen children of the age of 13 and under; now (December 1798) there are no fewer than 35 under 35 years of age.

In the regiſter are theſe entries:

"Robert Johnſon, an aged man of 90 years, was buried the 8th of March, 1653.

Mrs. Mary, the wife of Richard Verney, eſq. buried Aug. 17, 1663.

John Weſton, an aged widower, above 100 years old, was buried the twentie-ſixth of March, 1664."

The wake begins on the Sunday following St. Peter's day, and ends on the ſubſequent Sunday evening.

The hall-houſe is of ſtone, and has a regular low front; near it are ſome fiſh-ponds, and ſome plantations in the old formal ſtyle.

An anecdote, which I have heard related more than once or twice in this place by perſons of probity and veracity, may perhaps not be unacceptable. Thomas Hotchkin, eſq. who rented the hall-houſe, uſed to ſay among his friends, that, on the very day in which he completed his 45th year, July 31, 1774, he would lie in bed all that day. Whether Mr. Hotchkin ſpoke this through an averſion to the number (at that time hackneyed by the advocates for Wilkes and Liberty), or that man, having arrived at the apex of life, was ever after on the declenſion, is not now known: but he kept his word; and on the day following he died, after being moſt miſerably cut and mangled, of a fiſtula[2].

The hall-houſe in 1791 was, and now is, rented by George Pywell, eſq. ſon of the late —— Pywell, eſq. of Barnwell Caſtle, co. Northampton, who married a ſiſter of Edward Hartopp-Wigley, eſq. of Little Dalby[3]."

In 1719, William Noon, of Wardley, voted for a freehold at Allexton.

In 1722, Richard Smith, clerk, was the only freeholder who polled from this pariſh; and in 1775 William Kemp is the only name.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	15	10	2
Expended in county rates, &c.	4	5	2
——— on the poor, —	11	5	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	1	12	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	38	13	9
——— 1784, —	34	3	0
——— 1785, —	12	6	10
Medium of theſe three years,	28	7	10
——— of county expences,	5	19	7
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	22	8	3
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	4	1	0
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	11	10
——— of law expences, —	0	1	8
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 38.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate III.)

dedicated to St. Peter, is built with hard durable ſtone, and conſiſts of a tower, in which are four bells, a very low and ſmall ſpire, covered with lead; a nave and chancel, both of one pace; a North door-way into the chancel, and a South one with a porch into the nave.

The leaſt bell has this inſcription round it, "Edward Andrews, anno Domini 1597."

The next, "Robert Blackwell, churchwarden 1715."

The next, "Thomas Norris made mee 1663."

The laſt, or great bell, "Joh'es Biddel, rector de Alexton,—Vivat Carolus rex."

Over the entrance of the porch, near the top of the tabling-ſtones thereof, on each ſide is ſculptured a large lion couchant regardant; and on a ſquare ſtone over the outward entrance arch is this inſcription:

ED. ANDROWES,
THE FOUNDER HEREOF
A° D'NI 1594, R. E. 36.
DEO GRACIAS.

Adjoining the nave has been a North and South aile, the two arches of both being now very viſible.

---

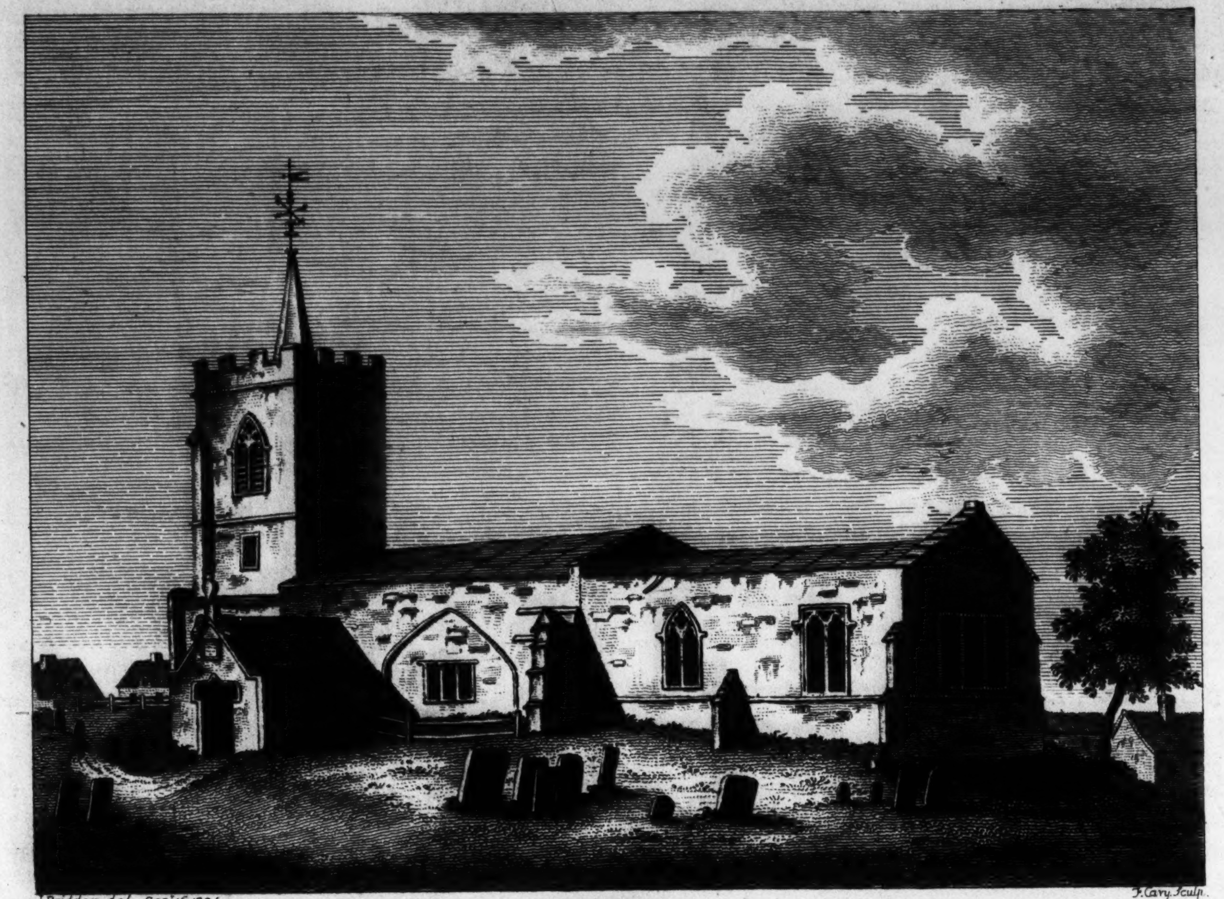
[1] Le Neve, Monumenta Anglicana, vol. I. p. 141.

[2] See his epitaph, p. 12.

[3] See vol. II. p. 159.

ALLEXTON, S.E.

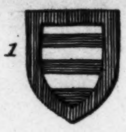
Vol. III. Pl. III. p. 11.



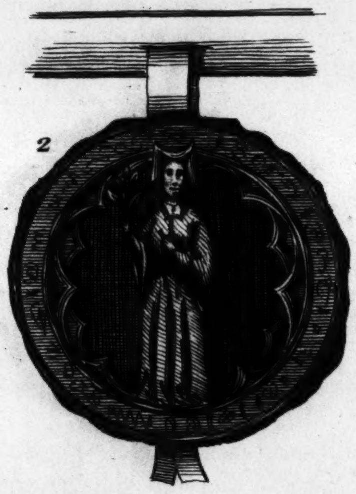
J. Pridden. del. Sep. 16. 1791.

J. Cary. sculp.

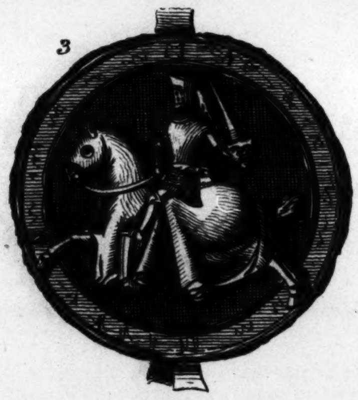
1



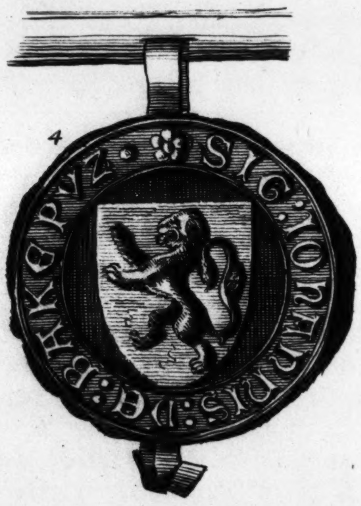
2



3

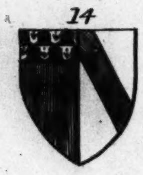


4

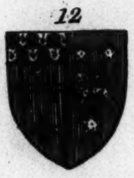


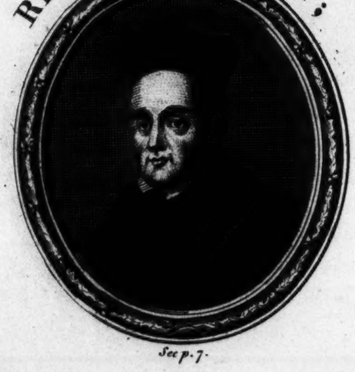
SIG·JOHANNIS·DE·BAKEPUZ

14



12

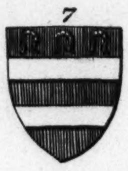




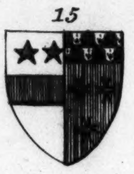
RICHARD BLOUNT;

See p. 7.

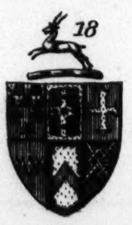
7



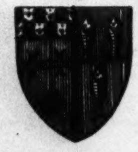
15



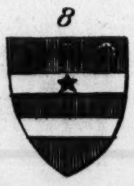
18



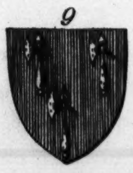
16



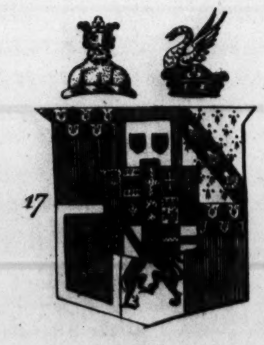
8



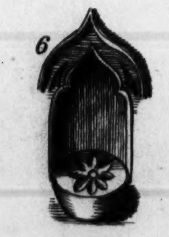
9



17



6



21

19 20 10

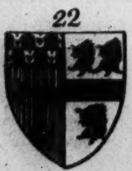
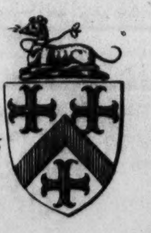
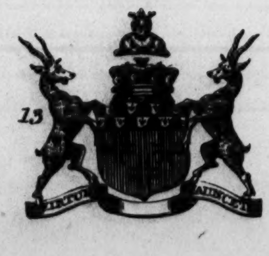
22



25

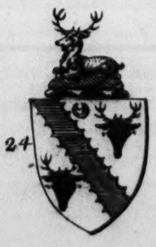


13

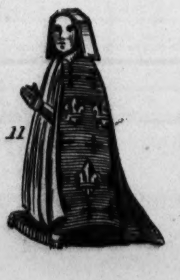


VIRTUE VAINCET

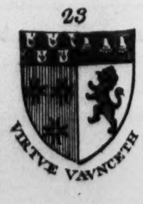
24



11



23



VIRTVE VAVNCETH

Thoſe on the North, circular, with zigzag and lozenge mouldings (perhaps Saxon); and thoſe on the South nearly plain, and pointed. On the South and North wall of the tower is alſo an arch viſible; and an open one ſeparates the nave from the tower; over which are the Royal arms.

The ſeats are all open benches, not pews.

The font is plain, antient, and octagon, upon a ſmaller octagon baſe.

In the South wall of the altar is a perfect piſcina, with a pointed arch, and a projecting eſcaloped baſon of eight indentings; ſee fig. 6.

Mr. Wyrley, in 1592, found in the loweſt North window of this church the following arms[1].

1. Gules, two bars Argent, in chief three horſe-ſhoes Or, Bakepuiz.

2. The ſame coat, with a mullet Sable on the uppermoſt bar.

3. Gules, three pole-axes Or. Hackluit.

And Mr. Smyth, in 1748, deſcribes, in the ſame window, the figure of a man; on the ſurcoat, Bakepuiz; and alſo, the figure of a woman; on whoſe ſurcoat, Azure, Cruſuly of croſſes botoné, and three fleurs de lis, 2, 1, Argent[2]. Beresford.

In the Weſternmoſt North window of the nave, part of the arms of Bakepuiz ſtill remain; in chief, Gules, three horſe-ſhoes Or; the colours very bright and good. More painted glaſs remains in this window of the ornamental kind, and the colours very bright and clear; particularly a man, but no arms on his garment or ſurcoat.

In the Matriculus of 1220[3], Allexton is deſcribed to be under the patronage of John de Bakepuiz; the rector Peter, inſtituted by Hugh formerly biſhop of Lincoln, receiving three marks, in the name of a penſion, from William the vicar, who had been inſtituted by the archdeacon whilſt the ſee of Lincoln was vacant, and received the remainder of the profits of the living.

In 1344, the procurations were 5*s.*; the rectory was taxed at ſeven marks and an half, and paid 1*s.* for Peter-pence. The then patron was John Bakepuiz.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 12*s.*; and the value of the rectory £6.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £20.; and the incumbent as "ſufficient."

William Watſon, eſq. of the county of Salop, is now the patron; and the preſent value in the king's books[4] is £6. 18*s.* 6*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are 2*s.*; the archidiaconal, 8*s.* 6*d.*

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Peter was rector in 1220.	Sir John de Bakepuis.
William de Benecle, 1225.
Henry de Bakepuis.
John de Knouvilhe, 1274.
. . . . 1309.	Sir John de Bakepuiz.
Thomas Shepeſhead, 1385[5].
John Brown.	William Blount lord Mountjoy.
Hugo Pendylton[6], 1562; reſigned.	Dame Dorothy Mountjoy.
Philip Hayes; reſigned 1569.	Queen Elizabeth.
Ralph Bradley, 1570.	John Blount, eſq.
John Biddulph, buried Jan. 9, 1641-2.	Mountjoy earl of Newport.
Mountjoy Cradock[7], 1642—1654.
William Noell, Dec. 22, 1674.	Henry Noell.
Thomas Peake, Nov. 10, 1710.	Juliana counteſs of Burlington.
Richard Smith[8], Jan. 13, 1713; died Auguſt 2, 1762.	Juliana counteſs dowager of Burlington.
John Smith[9], M. A. 1762; died March 17, 1770.	Lady Jane Boyle.
James Daſhwood, Sept. 9, 1771.	John Knight, and George Watſon of the county of Salop, gent.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

On a ſmall tablet of white marble in the North-eaſt corner, with a large urn at the top:

"Richard Smith, Cl. died
in the 75th year of his age,
April the 3d, 1762.
Of ſpirit public, to no private end,
The tender parent, and the ſteady friend;
Who, forty-eight years rector of this dome,
Himſelf did duty there, and liv'd at home.
Free, hearty, hoſpitable, us'd his ſtore,
Content with what he had, nor wiſh'd for more.
Wide on the waters wiſely caſt his bread;
Here found again, it may be truly ſaid."

On a mural tablet in the South-eaſt corner:

"In memory of
Alice, the beloved wife of Richard Smith, rector of this pariſh, and the eldeſt daughter of the Rev. Mr. John Hotchkin and Alice his wife; who died in childbed of her firſt child, John, now ſurviving,
in the 20th year of her age,
Auguſt the 10th, 1726."

Over the altar, on a neat ſlab of white marble, with a ſmall urn at the top:

"In memory of the Rev. John Smith, A. M. rector of this pariſh, and of Thiſtleton in the county of Rutland;
who, as he lived beloved, died univerſally lamented on the 17th of March, 1771.
Vivit poſt funera Virtus."

On a flat ſtone on the floor:

"MARGARET NOEL WAS BURYED
APRIL THE 16TH, 1682,
AGED 4 YEARS."

On a large ſlab of black marble, on the North ſide:

"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF
MARY, THE ELDEST DAUGHTER OF SIR JOHN PRETYMAN, AND
THE BELOVED WIFE OF RICHARD VERNEY, ESQ.; BY WHOM SHE HAD SIX SONS AND
TWO DAUGHTERS. SHE LIVED
A MODEST AND PIOUS LIFE; AND IN
THE 31ST YEARE OF HER AGE, IN AUGUST 1663, SHE RESIGNED
HER SOUL TO GOD."

Arms at top: Verney (as in p. 12) with a creſcent for difference; impaling, Gules, a lion paſſant guardant, in feſs between three mullets Or, Pretyman[10]. Creſt, an antelope.

Oppoſite to the laſt, under the South wall, lies another blue ſtone, having the ſame arms as before. This was placed there by Mr. Verney in his life-time as his own monument: but no inſcription has ever been written on it.

---

[1] Plate III. fig. 7—9.

[2] Ibid. fig. 10, 11.

[3] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[4] "Livings are valued on an average (though a very uncertain one) at about ten times their value in the king's books." Dr. Farmer, MS.

[5] See p. 446.

[6] From Certificatorium Archidiaconatus Leic', of the incumbents' names, qualities, &c. 1560—1562, in Ben'et college Library; where Mr. Pendylton is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competenter doctus; non reſidet; non hoſpitalis; deget apud Stockerſton; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; duo beneficia habet."

[7] He compounded for the firſt-fruits of Allexton, April 2, 1642. See before, under Blaſton, vol. II. p. 453; and under Hallaton, p. 604.

[8] Rector alſo of Wardley, co. Rutland.

[9] Rector alſo of Thiſtleton, co. Rutland.

[10] Plate III. fig. 12.

In the church-yard:

On the Eaſt ſide of the chancel door.

On a handſome ſarcophagus of free-ſtone, ſurmounted by an urn, and incloſed with iron palliſadoes, is a ſmall tablet of free-ſtone, inſcribed,

"THOMAS HOTCHKIN, eſq.
died Auguſt the 1ſt, 1774,
aged 45 years."

On upright ſtones:

Chriſtopher Sewell 18 Sept. 1792, aged 76.
Elizabeth Sewell March 29, 1791, aged 76.

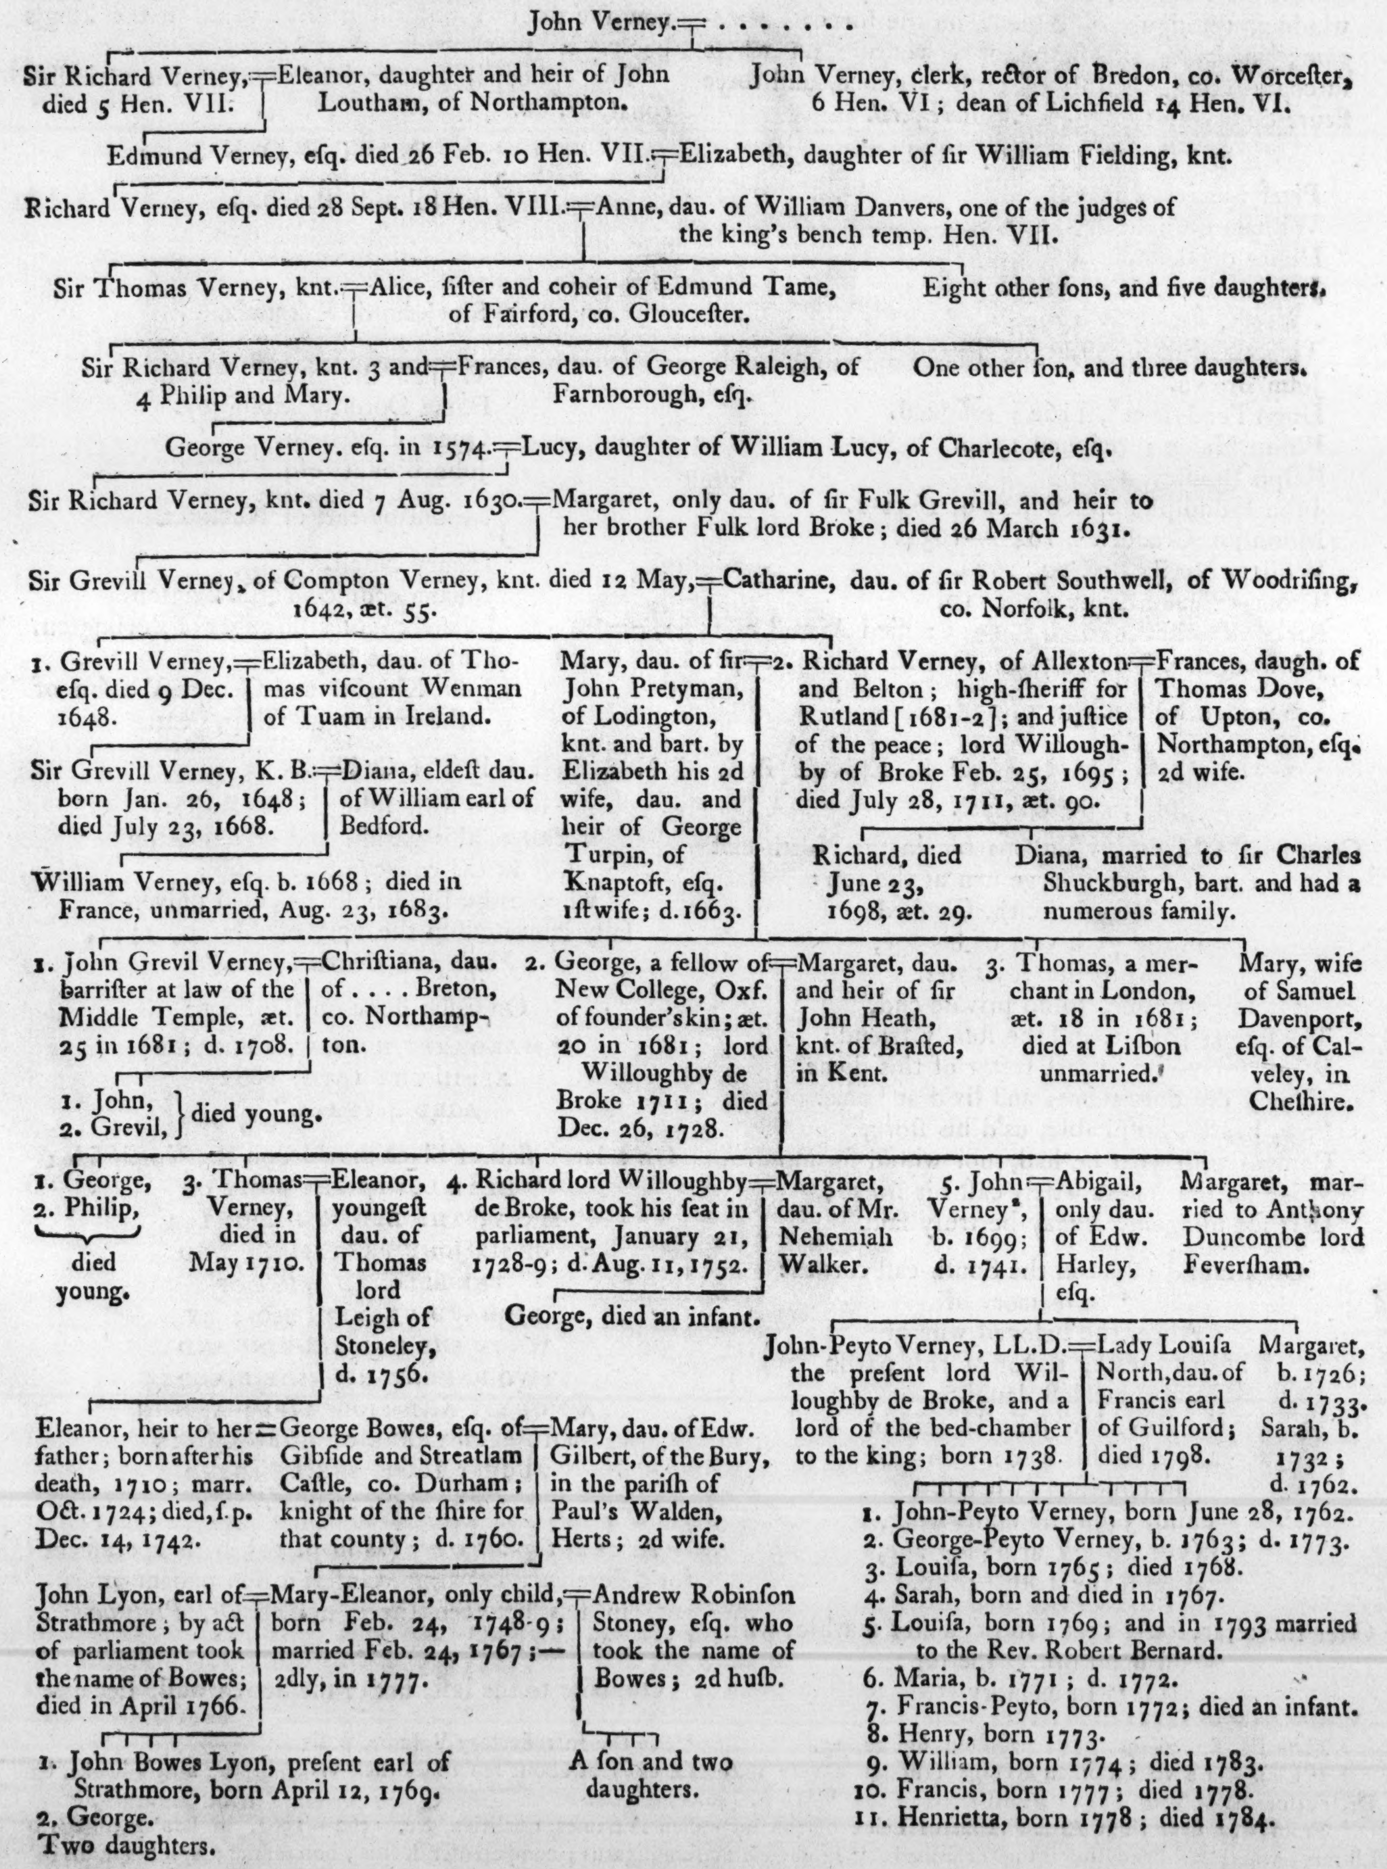
In Wardley church, Rutland:

On the altar-floor, a free-ſtone for Thomas Smith, rector of Wardley 35 years, and afterwards of Thimbleby, co. Lincoln; ſucceeded by his ſon Richard, rector of Allexton, in 1724.

In 1168, this townſhip is thus noticed: "Adelakeſton regis Scottiæ redd. comp. de dimidiâ marcâ de Placitis Foreſtæ. In perdonis, per breve regis, ipſi regi Scottiæ, dimidia marca; & quietus eſt [1]."

Pedigree of VERNEY, of ALLEXTON, BELTON, and COMPTON VERNEY. (From DUGDALE, WRIGHT, &c.)

Arms: Gules, three croſſes recercelée, Or; a chief Vaire, Ermine and Erminois. Creſt, on a wreath, the buſt of a man couped and affronté, proper, crowned ducally Or. Supporters, two antelopes Argent, ſpotted Gules, armed, creſted, and unguled Or. Motto, VERTUE VAUNCETH; Plate III. fig. 13.



John Verney. = ...

Sir Richard Verney, died 5 Hen. VII. = Eleanor, daughter and heir of John Loutham, of Northampton.
John Verney, clerk, rector of Bredon, co. Worceſter, 6 Hen. VI; dean of Lichfield 14 Hen. VI.

Edmund Verney, eſq. died 26 Feb. 10 Hen. VII. = Elizabeth, daughter of ſir William Fielding, knt.

Richard Verney, eſq. died 28 Sept. 18 Hen. VIII. = Anne, dau. of William Danvers, one of the judges of the king's bench temp. Hen. VII.

Sir Thomas Verney, knt. = Alice, ſiſter and coheir of Edmund Tame, of Fairford, co. Glouceſter.
Eight other ſons, and five daughters.

Sir Richard Verney, knt. 3 and 4 Philip and Mary. = Frances, dau. of George Raleigh, of Farnborough, eſq.
One other ſon, and three daughters.

George Verney. eſq. in 1574. = Lucy, daughter of William Lucy, of Charlecote, eſq.

Sir Richard Verney, knt. died 7 Aug. 1630. = Margaret, only dau. of ſir Fulk Grevill, and heir to her brother Fulk lord Broke; died 26 March 1631.

Sir Grevill Verney, of Compton Verney, knt. died 12 May, 1642, æt. 55. = Catharine, dau. of ſir Robert Southwell, of Woodriſing, co. Norfolk, knt.

1. Grevill Verney, eſq. died 9 Dec. 1648. = Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas viſcount Wenman of Tuam in Ireland.
Mary, dau. of ſir John Pretyman, of Lodington, knt. and bart. by Elizabeth his 2d wife, dau. and heir of George Turpin, of Knaptoft, eſq. 1ſt wife; d. 1663. = 2. Richard Verney, of Allexton and Belton; high-ſheriff for Rutland [1681-2]; and juſtice of the peace; lord Willoughby of Broke Feb. 25, 1695; died July 28, 1711, æt. 90. = Frances, daugh. of Thomas Dove, of Upton, co. Northampton, eſq. 2d wife.

Sir Grevill Verney, K. B. born Jan. 26, 1648; died July 23, 1668. = Diana, eldeſt dau. of William earl of Bedford.

William Verney, eſq. b. 1668; died in France, unmarried, Aug. 23, 1683.

Richard, died June 23, 1698, æt. 29.
Diana, married to ſir Charles Shuckburgh, bart. and had a numerous family.

1. John Grevil Verney, barriſter at law of the Middle Temple, æt. 25 in 1681; d. 1708. = Chriſtiana, dau. of . . . . Breton, co. Northampton.
2. George, a fellow of New College, Oxf. of founder's kin; æt. 20 in 1681; lord Willoughby de Broke 1711; died Dec. 26, 1728. = Margaret, dau. and heir of ſir John Heath, knt. of Braſted, in Kent.
3. Thomas, a merchant in London, æt. 18 in 1681; died at Liſbon unmarried.
Mary, wife of Samuel Davenport, eſq. of Calveley, in Cheſhire.

1. John,
2. Grevil, } died young.

1. George,
2. Philip, } died young.
3. Thomas Verney, died in May 1710. = Eleanor, youngeſt dau. of Thomas lord Leigh of Stoneley, d. 1756.
4. Richard lord Willoughby de Broke, took his ſeat in parliament, January 21, 1728-9; d. Aug. 11, 1752. = Margaret, dau. of Mr. Nehemiah Walker.
5. John Verney [2], b. 1699; d. 1741. = Abigail, only dau. of Edw. Harley, eſq.
Margaret, married to Anthony Duncombe lord Feverſham.

George, died an infant.

John-Peyto Verney, LL.D. the preſent lord Willoughby de Broke, and a lord of the bed-chamber to the king; born 1738. = Lady Louiſa North, dau. of Francis earl of Guilford; died 1798.
Margaret, b. 1726; d. 1733.
Sarah, b. 1732; d. 1762.

Eleanor, heir to her father; born after his death, 1710; marr. Oct. 1724; died, ſ. p. Dec. 14, 1742. = George Bowes, eſq. of Gibſide and Streatlam Caſtle, co. Durham; knight of the ſhire for that county; d. 1760. = Mary, dau. of Edw. Gilbert, of the Bury, in the pariſh of Paul's Walden, Herts; 2d wife.

1. John-Peyto Verney, born June 28, 1762.
2. George-Peyto Verney, b. 1763; d. 1773.
3. Louiſa, born 1765; died 1768.
4. Sarah, born and died in 1767.
5. Louiſa, born 1769; and in 1793 married to the Rev. Robert Bernard.
6. Maria, b. 1771; d. 1772.
7. Francis-Peyto, born 1772; died an infant.
8. Henry, born 1773.
9. William, born 1774; died 1783.
10. Francis, born 1777; died 1778.
11. Henrietta, born 1778; died 1784.

John Lyon, earl of Strathmore; by act of parliament took the name of Bowes; died in April 1766. = Mary-Eleanor, only child, born Feb. 24, 1748-9; married Feb. 24, 1767;—2dly, in 1777. = Andrew Robinſon Stoney, eſq. who took the name of Bowes; 2d huſb.

1. John Bowes Lyon, preſent earl of Strathmore, born April 12, 1769.
2. George.
Two daughters.

A ſon and two daughters.

---

[1] Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 375; ex Mag. Rot. 14 Hen. II; Rot. 4. b. Warw. & Legr.

[2] Attorney-general to queen Caroline; M. P. for Downton; chief juſtice of Cheſter; and maſter of the Rolls.

EPITAPHS illuſtrative of the PEDIGREE of VERNEY. (See Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 570.)

In the Verney Chapel, in Compton-Murdac church:

1. Round the verge of a monumental ſtone, on which are the portraitures of a gentleman in armour, his wife, nine ſons, and five daughters:

Arms: Verney; impaling, on a bend Vert, three birds Or; fig. 14.

"Of your charitie pray for the ſoules of Richard Verney [1], eſquire, and Anne his wife; which Richard departed out of this preſent world the 28th day of this month of September, A. Dñi 1527."

2. At the bottom another ſtone, with the braſs portraiture of a lady, and theſe arms, Argent; a feſs Gules, in chief two mullets of the laſt; Odyngſale; impaling Verney; fig. 15.

"Off your charyte pray for the ſole of Anne Odyngſale, the wyfe of mayſter Edwarde Odyngſale of Yongeton, and dogtor of Richard Verney, Eſquyer, the whyche departyde the yere of o^{r} Lord MCCCCCXXIII; on whoſe ſole Jeſu have mercy."

3. At the bottom of another ſtone, with the portraiture of a gentleman, and the arms of Verney; impaling, Gules, three lucies hauriant Argent, Lucy; fig. 16.

"HEERE LIES GEORGE VERNEY, OF COMPTON, ESQ.
SONNE OF SIR RICHARD VERNEY, KNIGHT, AND HUS-BAND OF JANE THE DAUGHTER OF WILLIAM LUCY OF CHARLCOT, ESQ. BY WHOME HE HAD ONE SONNE
AND FOWER DAUGHTERS. HEE DIED THE EIGHT DAY OF APRILL, ANNO D'NI MCCCCCLXXIV."

4. Round the verge of an elegant marble tomb, with the effigies of a gentleman and lady:

"HIC JACENT RICHARDUS VERNEY, MILES,
QUI OBIIT VII° DIE AUG^{TI}, A^{O} D'. MDCXXX. ET ÆTAT. SUÆ LXVII.
ET DOMINA MARGARETA UXOR EJUS QUÆ OBIIT
XXVI DIE MARTII A^{O} DOM. MDCXXXI. ET ÆTAT. LXX."

On the ſides:

"QUI QUIDEM RICHARDUS VERNEY,
MIL. FUIT FIL. ET HÆRES GEORGII
VERNEY, ARMIG. ET JANÆ FILIÆ
GULIELMI LUCY, DE CHARLECOT,
ARMIG. ET DICT. GEORGIUS FUIT
FIL. ET HÆR. RIC. VERNEY. MIL.
CONDITI SUB HOC TUMULO CUM
NEPOTE, ET FRANCISCÆ FILIÆ
GEORG. RALEIGH, DE FARNBOROUGH,
ARMIG. QUI QUIDEM RIC'US FUIT
FIL. ET HÆR. THO. VERNEY, MIL.
ET ALICIÆ SORORIS ET UNIUS COHÆRED. EDM. TAME DE FAIRFORD IN
COM GLOUC. MIL. QUI QUIDEM
THO. VERNEY FUIT FIL. ET HÆR.
RIC'I VERNEY, ARMIG. ET ANNÆ
FILIÆ GULIEL. DANVERS, MIL.
UNIUS JUSTITIAR. D'NI REGIS
H. VII. DE COM. BANCO, QUI QUIDEM RIC'US VERNEY, ARMIG.
EX ALIIS EJUSD. COGNOM.
EQUESTR. ORDIN. HUJUS MANERII
DE COMPTON VERNEY D'NIS
ORIUNDUS, HANC CAPELLAM
CONSTRUXIT SIBI ET HÆRED.
SUIS OB SEPELIENDI LOCUM.

QUÆ QUIDEM D. MARGARETA
VERNEY FUIT SOROR ET HÆRES
FULCONIS NUPER D'NI BROOKE
BARONIS BROOKE, DE BEAUCHAMPS
COURT, FIL. ET HÆRED. FULCON.
GREVILL, DE BEAUCHAMPS COURT,
PRÆDICT. MIL. ET ANNÆ FILIÆ
RADULPHI NEVILL COMITIS
WESTMERLAND, ET CATHARINÆ,
FILIÆ ED'RI STAFFORD DUCIS
BUCKINGHAM, QUI QUIDEM FULCO
GREVILL FUIT FIL. ET HÆRES
FULCON. GREVILL,
MIL. ET
ELIZAB. FIL. ET HÆRED. ED'RI
WILLOUGHBY, ARMIG. ET MARGARETÆ FILIÆ D'NI RIC'I
NEVILL BARONIS LATIMER,
QUI QUIDEM ED'RUS WILLOUGHBY
FUIT FIL. ET HÆRES D'NI ROB'TI
WILLOUGHBY BARON. BROOKE
DE BROOKE IN COM. WI[illegible]
ET ELIZAB. UNIUS FILIAR. [illegible]
COHÆRED. D'NI RIC'I BEAUCHAMP
BARONIS BEAUCHAMP DE
POWICK IN COM. WIGORN.

At the end of the tomb are theſe arms, &c. fig. 17: Quarterly, 1. Verney; 2. Argent, three eſcutcheons within a border Gules . . . .; 3. Ermine, on a bend Sable, three eſcalops Argent, Wendeſley; 4. Azure, three ſtags trippant Or, within a border Argent, Green; 5. Argent, a dragon rampant, cower'd Vert, and a lion rampant Azure, reſpectant . . . . 6. Verney.

On an eſcutcheon of pretence, 1. Sable, on a croſs within a border engrailed Or, five pellets, Grevile; 2. Ermine, a feſs chequé Azure and Or . . . .; 3. Sable, a croſs engrailed Or, Ufford; 4. Gules, a croſs patonce Argent, Bec; 5. Gules, a croſs moline Or, Latimer; 6. Gules, five fuſils conjoined in feſs Argent, on each an eſcalop Sable, Cheney; 7. Azure, a croſs patée Or, ...; 8. Or, a chevron Gules, within a border engrailed Sable, Stafford of Southwell; 9. Argent, ſix lions rampant Gules, 3, 2, and 1, Leybourne; 10. Sable, a fret Argent, Harrington; 11. Gules, a ſaltire Vaire, Willington; 12. Argent, on a bend Sable, three horſe-ſhoes Argent, Farrer; 13. Azure, an eagle diſplayed Or, Hule; 14. Gules, a feſs between ſix martlets Or, Beauchamp; 15. Argent, on a feſs Azure, three fleur de lis Or, Gerrard. Firſt creſt, the buſt of a Saracen full-faced proper, wreathed about the temples Or and Azure, Verney. Second creſt, out of a ducal coronet Or, a demi ſwan iſſuing Argent, beaked Sable, Grevile lord Brooke.

"QUI QUIDEM RIC'US VERNEY ET MARGARETA UXOR EJUS VITAM DEO PIAM, REGIBUS FIDELEM, AMICIS BENIGNAM,
SIBI ET SUIS MUTUO DESIDERATAM, CUM NUMEROSA
PROLE, UNANIMI CONCORDIA VIRIBUS INGENUA, NON
SINE DIGNITATE, TRANQUILLAM DEGENTES, VALETUDINARII TANDEM QUAM ÆGROTI MAGIS, SENIO JAM
MATURESCENTE, PLACIDE CEDENTES,
UNA FIDELITATE IN CHRISTO DORMIUNT."

5. On a mural tablet near the rails of the altar:

Arms: Quarterly of ſix; 1. Verney; 2. Greville; 3. Latimer; 4. Cheney; 5. Sable, Stafford of Southwell; 6. Sable, a fret Or, Matravers. Creſt, an antelope courant, Argent; fig. 18. And on one ſide Verney; impaling, Greville, fig. 19; on the other, Verney; impaling, Argent, three cinquefoils Gules, Southwell, fig. 20.

"DO'I GREVILLI VERNEY,
DE COMPTON VERNEY, VERVICENSI, EQUITIS AURATI, FILII ET HÆREDIS
DO'I RICHARDI VERNEY, EQ. AUR. ET MARGARETÆ UXORIS, FULCONIS GREVILLI
BARONIS DE BROKE SORORIS UNICÆ ET HÆREDIS.
CATHERINÆ
DO'I ROBERTI SOUTHWELL, DE WOODRISING, IN COM. NORF.
EQ. AU.
FILIÆ CONNUBIO JUNCTI (QUIBUS PROLES QUINTUPLEX, GREVILLUS, JOHANNES, RICHARDUS, GEORGIUS, ET UNICA ELIZABETHA),
EXUVIAS HOC MARMOR OBTEGIT.
OB. MAII XII,
ANNO { ÆTATIS LVI.
SALUTIS MDCXLII."

6. Below the rails, on a large flat ſtone:

Arms: Quarterly, 1. Verney; 2. Azure, three bucks trippant Or, within a border Argent, Green; 3. A[illegible]gent, three eſcutcheons Sable, within a border Gu[illegible] 4. Ermine, on a bend Gules, three eſcalops Or, Wendeſley. Supporters, two antelopes Argent; fig. 21.

"M. S.
DOMINÆ HONORATISSIMÆ KATHARINÆ
VERNEY, QUÆ, EX ROBERTO SOUTHWELL,
DE WOODRISING IN COMITATU NORFOL-
CIÆ, EQUITE AURATO, IPSIUSQUE CONJUGE
NOBILISSIMA D. D. ELIZABETHA HOWARD, FILIA CAROLI NOTTINGAMIÆ COMITIS
τοῦ πάνυ MAGNÆ BRITANNIÆ THALASSIAR-CHÆ AUSPICATISSIME, ORIUNDA, CON-
JUX VERO ET RELICTA GREVILLI VER-
NEY, DE COMPTON VERNEY, IN COMITA-
TU WARWICENSIS, MILITIS, CUI TRIADEM
FILIORUM ET FILIAM UNICAM ENIXA,
TANDEMQUE SÆCULI PERTÆSA, UTPOTE
ANNOS SEXAGINTA ET VI NATA, DENA-
TA IDIBUS APRILIS A. D. 1657, IN DOMINO
PLACIDE OBDORMISCIT, AD TUBÆ
CLANGOREM EXPERRECTURA."

7. On a tablet in the South aile:

Arms: Quarterly of ſix as fig. 18: Alſo Verney, impaling Greville, as before; and Verney, impaling, Argent, on a feſs Sable, between three lions' heads eraſed Gules, three anchors Or, Farmer; fig. 22.

"MEMORIÆ SACRUM
INCLYTI VIRI GREVILLI VERNEY, ARMIGERI, GREVILLI VERNEY, MILITIS, NATU MAXIMI, QUI NONO DECEMBRIS, ANNO SALUTIS MDCXLVIII (HEU NIMIS PROPERE), FLORENTE JUVENTUTE, SPIRI-
TUM CREATORI REDDIDIT; QUEM ELIZABETHA
UXOR MŒSTISSIMA (AB HONORABILI WENMANO-RUM PROSAPIA) VIX PER MENSES DUOS SUPER-VIVENS, CUM FILIUM UNIGENITUM (AMORUM PIGNUS, FAMILIÆ SPEM) GRATISSIMO GREVIL-LEUM NOMINE POSTHUMUM PEPERAT, SPONSO

---

[1] This Richard was in ſuch eſteem with Henry VIII. that, being informed of ſome infirmity in his head, he granted him a ſpecial licence, bearing date at Greenwich, Jan. 2, in the eighth year of his reign, to wear his bonnet at all times and in all places, as well in the king's preſence, as elſewhere, according to his own pleaſure, without the interruption of any man whatſoever. By his laſt teſtament, dated Oct. 2, 1526, he appointed his body to be buried in the new chapel on the North ſide of the church of Compton-Murdac.

ORBA, VITÆ PERTÆSA, SPE REVISENDI QUEM
AMISERAT, CŒLUM ETIAM PETIIT.
MEMORIA PII ÆTERNA."

8. On a grave-ſtone near ſir Richard Verney's tomb the arms of Verney, with the ſame quarterings, as fig. 21; and this inſcription:

"JOHN VERNEY, AN INFANT,
SECOND SONNE OF GREVILL VERNEY, KNIGHT,
AND KATHERINE SOUTHWELL HIS WIFE, WAS BORNE AND DIED THE II DAY OF AUGUST, MDCXX.
MARKE X. 14. OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOME OF GOD."

9. On a tablet in the South aile:

Arms: Quarterly of ſix, as fig. 18.

"SEPULTUM HIC JACET CORPUS GEORGII VERNEY, FILII NATU QUARTI GREVILLI VERNEY, EQUITIS AURATI, ET DOMINÆ KATHARINÆ FILIÆ ROBERTI SOUTHWELL, DE WOODRISING, IN COMITATU NORFOLCIÆ, ORDINIS SIMILITER EQUESTRIS; AB HAC CADUCA AD VITAM LONGE FELICIOREM MIGRAVIT DIE FEB. VICESIMO, ÆTATIS SUÆ VICESIMO QUARTO ANNOQUE D'NI MILLES° SEXCEN° QUADRAGESIMO NONO."

10. On the South ſide of the communion-table is a large black and white marble monument, with the arms of Verney; impaling, Argent, a lion rampant Gules; on a chief Sable, three eſcalops of the firſt, Ruſſell earl of Bedford, fig. 23; and this motto,

"VIRTVE VAVNCETH."

Under the buſt:

"TO THE MEMORY OF Sr GREVILL VERNEY,
KNIGHT OF THE HONOVRABLE ORDER OF THE BATH,
THE HONOVRABLE THE LADY DIANA VERNEY HIS WIFE, ELDEST DAVGHTER TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE WILLIAM EARLE OF BEDFORD, ERECTED THIS MONVMENT.
HE WAS BORNE THE 26th DAY OF JAN. 1648;
MARRYED THE 29th OF AVGVST 1667;
AND DYED THE 23d DAY OF JULY 1668.
HE HAD ISSUE ONLY ONE SONNE NAMED WILLIAM,
WHO WAS BORN THE 12th OF JVNE 1668.

Quid tibi regis AMOR, genus, & ſine compare forma,
Conjugioque domus profuit aucta tuo?
Vere novo, primoque ereptus flore juventæ,
Ceu roſa virgineo pollice meſſa, jaces.
Solamur merito vitæ compendia! namque
Vita brevis nobis, quæ tibi longa fuit.
Magna quidem fuerat majorum gloria juſta,
Extulit hos ætas; plus dedit ARRHA tui."

11. On a white marble ſtone on the floor, at bottom:

"FAX
Grevillii Vernei,
Balnei equitis,
omnium ſuæ ætatis corpus
hic jacet formoſiſſimum.
Animam æternam requies Sanctorum tenet.
Oſſa requieſcant in pace;
Mentis nec temerentor cineres. Honeſtæ
Plura ſcire velis?
Vicinum reſpice parietem:
Conjugalis amoris teſſera cætera docebit.
Mœrens poſuit
Archibaldus
Erſkinus,
1669.
GLORIA."

12. On the North ſide of the communion-table, on a flat ſtone, the arms of Verney, with this inſcription:

"Here lieth the body of the Honble William Verney, ſon and heire of ſir Grevil Verney, k^{t} of the Bath, he died in Auguſt, in the year of our Lord 1683."

13. On a flat ſtone, with the arms of Verney:

"Here lyeth RICHARD VERNEY, eſq. ſon of the Right Honourable RICHARD lord Willoughby de Broke, by FRANCES his ſecond wife, he dyed the 23d of June, an° Dom. 1698."

14. On another flat ſtone, with the arms of Verney:

"Here lyeth the body of John Verney, eldeſt ſon of John Verney, eſq. of Allexton in Leiceſterſhire, who departed this life the 15th day of May,
annoque Dñi 1700."

Pedigree of NEDHAM, of ALLEXTON. (From the Viſitation of 1619, and Pariſh Regiſters.)

Arms: Argent, a bend engrailed Azure, between two bucks' heads caboſhed Sable, attired Or. Creſt, on a mount Vert, a buck-lodge Sable, attired Or. On the arms and creſt, a creſcent; fig. 24.

. . . . . Nedham.=. . . . .

. . . . . firſt wife.=Thomas Nedham, of Allexton.=. . . . . dau. of . . . . Parker, ſecond wife.

4. John Nedham, married Anne, dau. and heir of Everard Howett, of Gaddeſby, and died ſ. p.
5. Ambroſe, marr. Margery, dau. of Robert Aſhby, of Quenby.
1. Thomas Nedham, of Belton, co. Rutland.=. . . . . . . dau. of . . Wilcocks, of Knoſſington.
Anthony, ſon and heir by his 2d wife.=. . .
3. Francis Nedham, of Ilſton.=Anne, dau. of Richard Gamble, of Burton Overy.
2. Edward, ſ. p.
6. Richard, æt. 68, unmarr.
7. Robert, marr. Conſtance, dau. of . . . .

Dorothy, marr. Ezekias Watſon, of Aſhby de la Zouch.

2. Clement Nedham[1], of Gaddeſby.=Philippa, dau. of William King, of Sileby, Leic.
1. William Nedham, of Belton.=Anne, dau. of . . . . . . Lambe, of Peterboro.
1. Edward Nedham, of Ilſton, died 1617.=Anne, dau. of Thomas Shawe, of Rippingall, co. Linc. died 1652.
Grace, married Clement Deacon, of Ilſton.
John Nedham, of Burton Overy, living 1630.=Iſabel, dau. of Thomas Cave, of Bagrave.

3. Anne, bapt. Nov. 3, 1599.
1. Nathaniel, bapt. Sept. 2, 1604.
2. William[2], born 1610.

1. Francis, æt. 26.
2. William, æt. 22.
3. Anthony, æt. 18.

John Nedham, died 1669.=Elizabeth King, d. 1639.
1. Ethelreda, marr. Philip Gueſt, of Ilſton.
2. Milicent, b. 1631; mar. Mr. John Grace; died 1633.
3. Bridget, æt. 14.
4. Katharine, æt. 12.
5. Mary, b. 1611; died 1628.

Francis, born 1607;
1. Anne.
2. Frances, æt. 11.
3. Grace, æt. 10.
4. Iſabel, æt. 9.
5. Suſan, æt. 8.

1. Richard.
2. John.
3. Edward Nedham, eſq. 1691; æt. 58.=Mary Thorne, d. 1732, æt. 97.
1. Anne.
2. Elizabeth.
3. Bridget.

Thomas Nedham, died 1672.
Elizabeth, died 1758, æt. 89.

---

[1] Married Feb. 1, 1598-9; buried Nov. 20, 1626.

[2] Will. Nedham, of Gaddeſby, gent. was buried July 20, and Francis Nedham, gent. Aug. 15, both in 1656. Gaddeſby Reg.

⁂ For the Pedigree of Cheſelden, of Allexton, ſee p. 19.

ASFORDBY,

ASFORDBY,

in antient writings called Eſſeberie, Oſſerdebie, and Offerdebie (corrupted probably from Eyeſordby [1], thus denominated from the little river Eye, near which it ſtands) is bounded on the Eaſt by Siſonby; on the North by Welby; on the South by Kirkby Beler and Friſby; and on the Weſt by Hoby. It is three miles diſtant from Melton Mowbray, the neareſt market-town; thirteen from Leiceſter; ſituated in a pleaſing and fertile vale on the Wreak: this, a ſmall rivulet, originating at Holwell and paſſing through Welby, enters the Eye at this place, and (like the marriage of Thame and Iſis in Oxfordſhire) enjoying the ample portion ſhe brings with her, becomes lord paramount, and gives name to the whole. From the riſing ground there is an extended and ſweet proſpect down the winding courſe of the river to Syſton.

In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, Asfordby is within the deanry of Goſcote.

Ralph Framen (one of the king's ſervants) held under the king, for his protection, three ploughlands and a half in this lordſhip, when the Domeſday Survey was made. It was then worth ten ſhillings; and two villans employed ſix ploughs; and there were twelve acres of meadow [2]. And, among the members of the ſoke of Rodeley, Offerdebie is noticed, as containing twelve ploughlands, two mills of eight ſhillings value, and twenty acres of meadow [3].

Robert earl of Mellent and Leiceſter gave to the collegiate church of St. Mary de Caſtro at Leiceſter the whole manor and the mills at Asfordby; which were afterwards transferred, by Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter his ſon, to the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis of his own foundation.

Alwin Wrethet and Hardulf de Waſteneis were early poſſeſſors of property in this lordſhip, as appears by the following undated grant:

"H. Rex Angl' Roberto de Pauilli, & omnibus baronibus & fidelibus ſuis, Francis & Angl', de Legeceſtreſira, ſcl. Concedo huic Hardulfo [4] ſuiſque heredibus in feudū & ejus hereditarium iiii car' terræ, cum molendino, & pratis & paſcuis eiſdem pertinentibus, quiet' ab ſervitio, ꝑ iiii libris per annum; & ii car' quas modò tenet in Offerdebi de dono Alfwini Wrethet, pro xl ſol.; & in eodem Offerdebi ſimiliter in feudū ii alias car' terræ, pro xl ſol', quas eidem Alfwino Wrethet conceſſit; &, poſt obitum ſuum, coram me, & meo conſeſſu, Hardulfum inde hereditarium; & i car' terræ in Wargnodebi ſimiliter in feudum & ejus hereditarium, quietum ab omui ſervitio, pro viii ſol. per annum; & inde eſt meus homo ligeus. Et volo & percipio ut terras iſtas bene & in pace, & quietè & honorificè teneat, cum conſuetudinibus & libertatibus cum quibus modo ſunt, ut nemo ei inde injuriam vel contumetiam faciat. Teſtibus; com' de Melland, & Goffr. Ridel, & Roberto de Ferrariis; apud Windeſor."

About the ſame time we find among the pleas in the Court of Exchequer the following entry:

"Agnes que fuit uxor Roberti Jagge petit verſus Galfridum de Asfordeby unum meſſuag' & i virgatam terre in Asfordeby, & in quibus non habet ingreſſum niſi poſt dimiſionem Willi de Aleby, quondam viri ipſius Agnetis, &c." [5]

The Regiſter of the Abbey of Leiceſter preſerves the following particulars of their property at Asfordby:

"Habemus in Asfordeby redditum xviiiđ. ex dono Gilberti filii Willi filii Hall, quos Wills filius Moreton ſolebat reddere eidem filio Gilberti annuatim ad duos terminos annos.

"Habemus ibi, ex dono Rogeri filii Matilde, v rodas terre, ſecundum bundas & metas, &c. ut in cartâ vª in Thornton.

"Habemus ibidem, ex conceſſione & quietâ clamatione Roberti filii Walteri, venditionem quam Robertus filius Hardulphi nobis fecit de totâ terrâ ſuâ quam habebat in Asfordby, & de medietate molendini quod fuit Alwini Wrethet, cum prato adjacente, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis. Hanc conventionem firmiter obſervand' dictus Robertus cum uxore ſuâ affidaverunt in manu Rogeri filii Refridi, tunc juſticiarii domini regis, ſic confirmando, "Quare volo & firmiter conſtituo ut predicti canonici prefatum tenementum habeant," &c. ut in carta ii libri de Chartwary [6].

Robert Fitz Parnell earl of Leiceſter, who had had ſome conteſt with the church of Lincoln concerning their property at Knighton and in the Suburbs of Leiceſter, compromiſed the diſpute, by giving to that church in exchange the entire property of the manor and advowſon, with the mills, at Asfordby, and alſo the manor of Segrave [7].

Sir Francis Gregory, of Asfordby, ſteward to Simon de Montford earl of Leiceſter, releaſed to William de Percy in 1240 his right in the advowſon of the priory of Silbred, and to certain lands at Sunden and Haſſet in Suſſex, by fine dated 24 Hen. III. [8]

No notice is taken of Asfordby in the Teſta de Nevill of 1240.

In 1262, Ralph Gregory levied a fine of lands at Tolſmyth Gregory in Eſſex.

Richard Gregory, owner of the lordſhips of Asfordby and Friſby, and grand-father to the laſt-mentioned Ralph, died at a great age, in 1292; and gave lands at Friſby to the abbey of Littleſhull in perpetual alms [9].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Asfordby, Dalby, Saxelby, and Siwouldby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Aug. 11, 1329, king Edward III. granted to Henry de Burgherſh, biſhop of Lincoln, and his ſucceſſors in that ſee, liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Leiceſter and Asfordby, co. Leiceſter: "Hiis teſtibus, J. Elien' ep̄o; Th. Heref. ep̄o, theſaurario noſtro; Henrico com' Lancaſtrie; Rogero de Mortuo Mari, com' Marchie; Joh. Mautravers, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; & aliis. Dat. per manum noſtram apud Wallingford, xiº die Aug." [10]

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Asfordby was rated at £3. 15*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum, but an abatement was then made of 16*s.*

In 1434, it was found that John Boteler, who was then outlawed, had poſſeſſed ſome lands at Asfordby [11].

The priory of Kirkby Beler had ſome ſmall poſſeſſions in this pariſh; for which they paid to the biſhop of Lincoln 11*s. per annum*, by way of quit rent. Theſe lands, which were let to divers tenants for an annual rent of 36*s.* 8*d.* were paſſed away in fee-ſimple, June 23, 1609, to William Silverwood, yeoman [12].

The manors of Asfordby and Knighton, with Thurmaſton, Sewſtern, and the bailiwick of Leiceſter, and divers other manors in various counties, were conveyed by Henry Holbech biſhop of Lincoln to king Edward VI. by deed of exchange, dated 26 Sept. 1 Edward VI. 1547, remaining in the Augmentation Office. In return, the biſhop ſecured to himſelf and ſucceſſors the rectory or impropriation of Evington in this county, with the village of Thornton, co. Lincoln, and 35 other rectories in various counties; which ſeveral impropriations, being given in lieu of manors and improveable eſtates, have, from one of the richeſt, ſunk this to be one of the pooreſt old biſhopricks in the kingdom; and its income conſiſting in impropriations of ſmall livings makes it more deplorable, the parochial cures being very meanly provided for [1].

---

[1] Thus Eye-Kettleby in this neighbourhood; and thus probably Wyfordby, corruptly for Eyeſordby.

[2] "Radulfus Framen tenet de rege in commendatione 3 carucatas terræ & dimidiam in Eſſeberie. Ibi ſunt 2 villani, habentes 7 carucas; & 8 acræ prati. Valet 10 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 236. b. 2.

[3] "In Offerdebie 12 carucatæ terræ, & 2 molini de 8 ſolldis, & 20 acræ prati." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 1.

[4] Hardulfus de Waſteneis, without doubt. See under Wartnaby.

[5] Placita apud Leic. an. 31 Hen. I. in Recept. Scaccarii.

[6] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xii.

[7] See Appendix to vol. I. p. 59.

[8] Leonard and Vincent's Viſitation, 1619.

[9] Ibid.

[10] Cart. 3 Edw. III. Nº 46.

[11] Eſch. 13 Hen. VI. N 41. Leic.

[12] See vol. I. p. cxl.

In 1534, among the temporalities of the ſee of Lincoln, we find the following:

Aſfordby manor — —	£21	10	4
Knighton — — —	20	8	1
Thurmaſton cum Sewiſthorpe —	6	4	9
Leiceſter Bailiv. cum firma manerii	16	9	0

In 1564, there were 48 families in Aſfordby.

In 1580, queen Elizabeth, in conſideration of the faithful ſervices of John Farnham, one of her gentlemen penſioners, granted to him, together with the ſite of Eaſtbridge Hoſpital in Canterbury, and various other poſſeſſions in ſeveral counties, certain parts of the lordſhip of Aſfordby, which had originally been appropriated to the finding of a lamp to burn perpetually in that church; "totam illam peciam prati ñram pertin' in Yeſtyng, vocat' Saint Nicholas Meadow, continent' per eſtimationem dimid' acr'; unam peciam prati ñram, cum pertin' in Incrofte, vocat' Saint Pulchre's Meadow, continen' dimid' rod'; duas pecias prati ñras jacen' in Holme, continen' per eſtimationem unam rod'; unam peciam prati ñram in le Holme predicta, vocat' Le Church Hooke, continen' per eſtimationem unam rod'; unam peciam pratri ñram jacen' in Demarke, vocat' Le Church Hooke, continen' per eſtimationem dimid' rod'; ac unam parcellam terre, ſive paſturam ñram jacen' apud Sawtrum Stones, continen' per eſtimationem dimid' rod'; que quidem ſeparales parcelle terre ſcituantur, ſi jacent, & exiſtunt, in parochia de Aſfordbye, in com' ñro Leic'; ac ad inveniend' lumin' ſive lampad' in eccleſiâ de Aſfordbye predictâ quondam dat' et appunctuat' exiſtebant [2]."

Three bovates and a half of land and four little tofts in Aſfordby were let to Leonard Northe, John Northe, and William Northe, for three lives, for the yearly rent of £1. 3*s*. 4*d*. by leaſe from queen Elizabeth, dated 20 Nov. 1583; and in 1584 certain lands and meſſuages in Aſfordby, parcel of the manor there, producing an annual rent of 7*s*. 10*d*. together with certain lands and tenements at Great Glen, which in theſe different parcels produced 41*s*. 7½*d*. were demiſed by the queen to captain Carſwel for the term of 31 years [3].

Elizabeth, one of the daughters of John Woodford, occurs in 1604 as the wife of . . . . Fox, of Aſfordby.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, William Gregory, gent. John Morrice, William Humberſton, Thomas Walton, Martin Allet, John Silverwood, Thomas Gamble, and Henry Auſtin.

In 1655, there was collected in Aſfordby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 16*s*. 1*d*.

In 1722, 23 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and the ſame number in 1775.

By an act paſſed in 1710, "for ſale of the manors of Frognall, &c. in the county of Kent, the eſtate of George Clerke, eſq. for payment of debts; and ſettling an eſtate, in the county of Leiceſter, and in the city of London, to the ſame uſes as the eſtate in Kent was ſettled," it appears that, by the laſt will of ſir Eraſmus de la Fontaine, late of Kirkby Beler, knight, deceaſed, dated Oct. 5, 1671, George Clerke, eſq. was in 1710 entitled to the reverſion in fee of ſeveral lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with the tithes thence ariſing, in the townſhips of Friſby and Aſfordby, of the yearly rent of £160. at that time veſted in dame Juliana Tracy (one of the daughters of ſir Eraſmus de la Fontaine, and relict of ſir John Tracy, of Stanway, co. Glouceſter [4]) then aged 65, for her life; which, upon the ſale of the Kentiſh eſtate, the act exonerated from all incumbrances.

In an act paſſed in 1761, for incloſing the open fields in Aſfordby, containing about 1800 acres, Thomas Smith, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Aſfordby, and a proprietor of a conſiderable part of the lands and grounds in the ſaid fields, and of right of common therein; Andrew Burnaby, clerk, as patron and rector of the rectory and church of Aſfordby, entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes; and all other rectorial and vicarial dues ariſing within the ſaid pariſh, and to the glebe and other land, and to right of common in the ſaid fields; and the right honourable Richard lord viſcount Howe in the kingdom of Ireland, John Hill, Eleanor Hill, ſpinſter, John Hubbard, Thomas Reeve, and others, were entitled to the reſidue of the land, ground, and right of common. An allotment was directed to be made to the rector and his ſucceſſors (in full compenſation for all the great and ſmall tithes ariſing from the ſaid fields, and from the houſes, yards, gardens, orchards, and homeſteads, of the ſeveral proprietors of land, ground, or right of common in the ſaid fields, and from the ſeveral owners or occupiers thereof in reſpect of the ſame; and alſo in compenſation for all Eaſter-offerings, and other dues and payments whatſoever to the ſaid rectory belonging, and payable by ſuch of the ſaid owners or occupiers, except mortuaries and ſurplice-fees, and certain moduſes or rates, or compoſition tithes) of ſuch land as ſhould be equal in value to one full ſeventh part of all the uninclosed land and ground within the ſaid fields, excluſive of ſuch of the meadows which did not then pay tithe; which land was to be veſted in the rector and his ſucceſſors, for and in lieu of all the great and ſmall tithes, Eaſter-offerings, and other dues and payments aforeſaid (except as before excepted), and in diſcharge thereof; and be ſubject to the ſame ſort of taxes and payments as the ſaid great and ſmall tithes, Eaſter-offerings, &c. then were liable to. To Mr. Smith was to be allotted, excluſive of ſuch land as would be his portion in lieu of his ground and common right in the fields, ſuch parcel and quantity of the then reſidue of the fields, as ſhould be a compenſation to him as lord of the manor for his intereſt in the ſoil of the waſte land or ground. The remainder in regular proportions to the other owners.

The land here is chiefly paſture; but ſome part of it arable.

Oct. 26, 1796, a freehold rent charge was advertized for ſale, of thirty quarters of barley, iſſuing out of the demeſne of the manors of Friſby and Aſfordby, and the rectory of Friſby, and divers lands, tithes, &c. The rent, payable at Friſby on the Thurſday following Dec. 10, in each year, produced on an average of five years (1791—1795) £41. 15*s*. a year, after deducting the land-tax uſually taken at 4*s*. in the pound.

The village is large, and has an excellent road made through it. The preſent lord of the manor is the Rev. Thomas-Beaumont Burnaby, M. A. (formerly of St. John's College, Cambridge) who is alſo rector, and owner of the advowſon, worth now about £400. a year. To this gentleman, who holds alſo the rectory of Aſhby Folvile, my beſt thanks are due, for much uſeful information. He married Catharine-Clark, daughter of William Abney, eſq. of Meaſham field, co. Leiceſter, a lady of conſiderable property; and has built a very ſpacious and comfortable rectorial houſe.

The Earl of Radnor has a ſmall eſtate here. Lord Maynard alſo has lately built a hunting-ſeat, on ground purchaſed from my friend and kinſman Mr. Thomas Green; who was many years a captain in the Leiceſterſhire militia, on the firſt eſtabliſhment of that reſpectable corps; and has a good houſe and other property of the Hills, of whom his wife was the heireſs.

The town-croſs remains, elevated on three ſteps, and having a ſhaft 12 feet long; ſee Plate IV. fig. 1.

The Regiſter begins in 1564; and, on a calculation of 20 years, average baptiſms at that time give yearly 8; burials near 5; marriages near 2. From 1771 to 1790, baptiſms 11¼; burials nearly 8; marriages 2¼.

There are about 73 families in the pariſh.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	66	6	10
Expended in county rates, &c.	5	2	2
——— on the poor, &c.	60	1	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	2	19	0

---

[1] "The only manors left to it, as it ſeems to me, are Biſhop's Norton, Netilham, Dunham, and Buckden; which laſt, though taken away in 1547 with the reſt, was, in regard that the biſhop had never a palace left him, except that at Lincoln, reſtored anno 1551, after four years alienation; though this ſcarce made amends for the perpetuity of leaſing away the newly given eſtate of Thornton College, on a rent of £5. per annum; which was rather a more profitable eſtate than Buckden; and ſo was coveted by ſir Edward North, and aſſigned to him by biſhop Holbech anno 1548, before he had been above a year in poſſeſſion, as I find by a note in a MS. I have ſeen." Willis, Cathedrals, vol. II. p. 36.

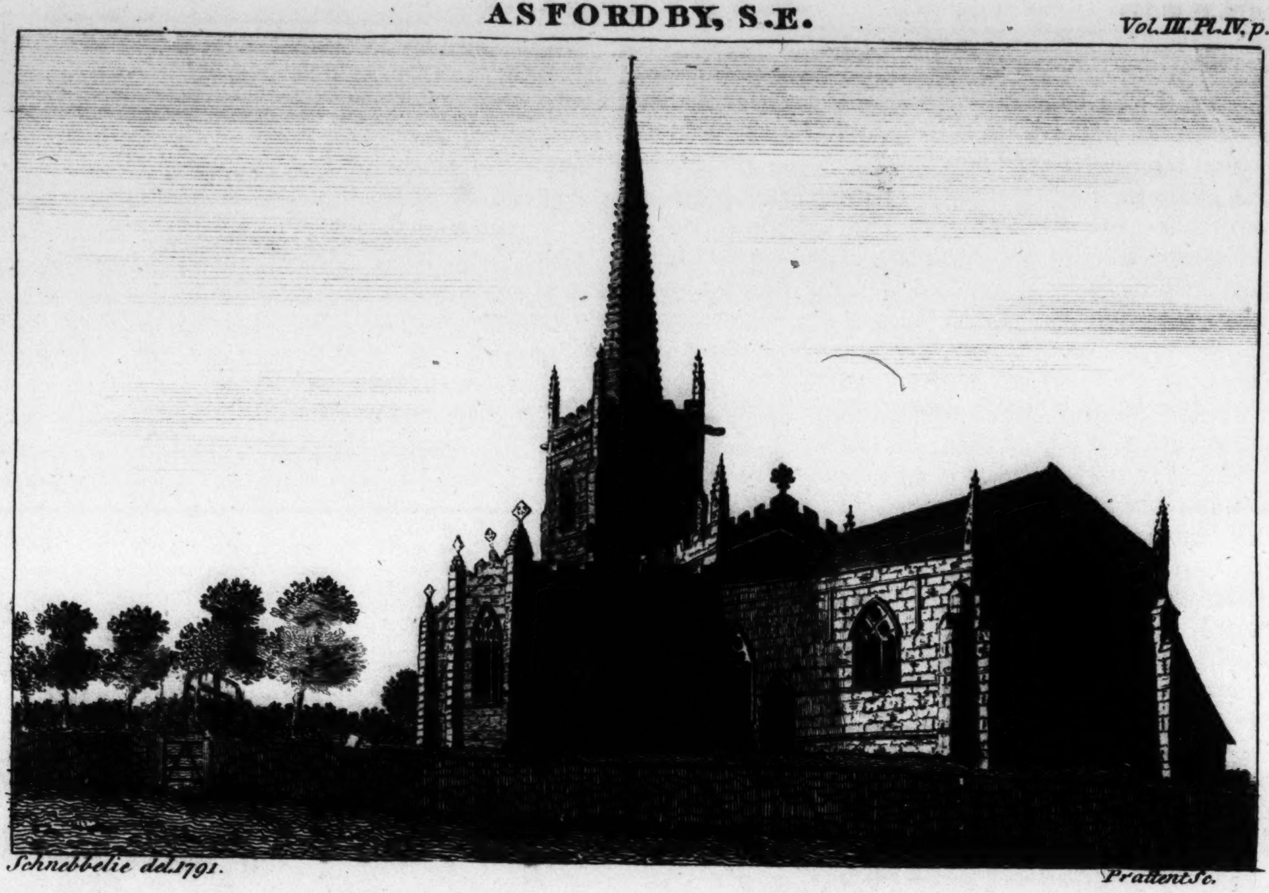
[2] 3 Pars Original. 22 Eliz. Rot. 107.

[3] From the original leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[4] See vol. II. p. 232.

ASFORDBY, S.E.

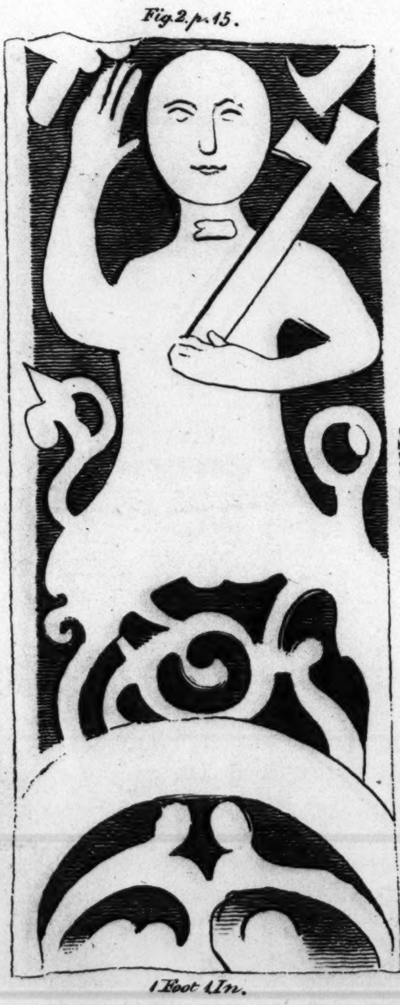
Vol. III. Pl. IV. p. 17.



Schnebbelie del. 1791.

Pratt Sc.

Fig. 2. p. 15.



3 Feet 1 In.
1 Foot 1 In.

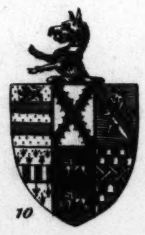


Fig. 1. p. 14.

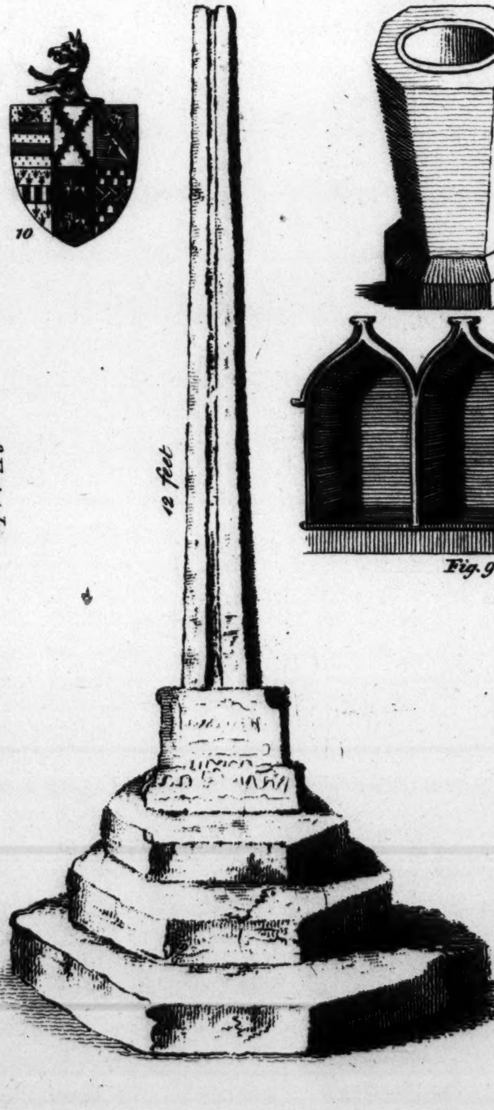

Fig. 8. p. 15.

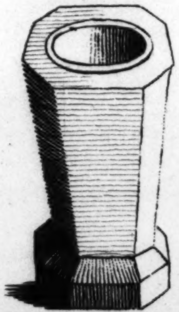

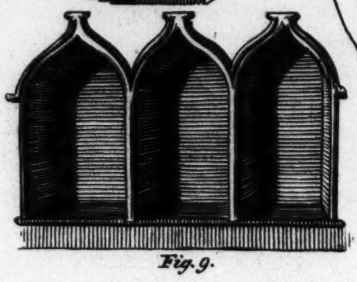

Fig. 9.

Fig. 5. p. 15.

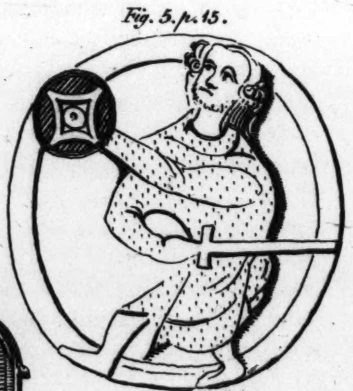

Fig. 4.

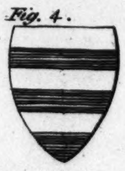

Fig. 6.

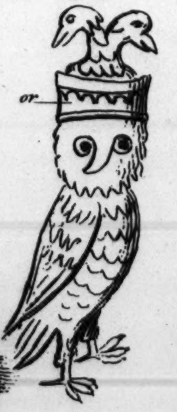

Fig. 3.

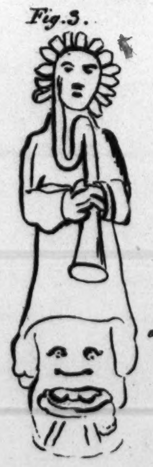

Fig. 7.

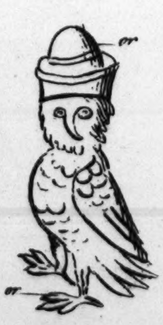

Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	91	1	1
——— 1784, —	78	1	1
——— 1785, —	107	17	2
Medium of theſe three years,	92	6	5
——— of county expences,	11	1	5
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	81	5	0
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	3	0
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	14	7
——— of law expences, —	2	6	7
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in p. 38.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate IV.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of a neat tower, with four pinnacles, on which is a very elegant proportionate ſpire, octagon, with beautiful open Gothic windows, and crockets regular to the top. The South porch has a handſome arched door-way. The South tranſept-window is very large and prettily ramified; pinnacles and croſſes compleat to terminate the church; which laſt is low and rather heavy. The clereſtory windows are very large. Two large pinnacles at the Weſt end of the church with niches.

The roof of the nave is rich, and the whole building embattled.

The North aile is ſeparated from the chancel by a ſmall neat ſkreen.

The ground-floor of the tower and part of the South Weſt end of the church are parted off for a day-ſchool!

Againſt the Weſt ſide of the North croſs, inſerted into the outſide wall, is the extremely rude figure, with a crucifix, exhibited in Plate IV. fig. 2; length three feet one; by one feet one.

On one of the corbels ſupporting the roof of the nave is fig. 3.

In this church Mr. Burton notices only one coat, Barry, of ſix, Argent and Azure, Grey; fig. 4.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel are ſeveral fragments of painted glaſs.

In the North croſs is a piſcina, and a locker; and in the window is the figure with a ſword, fig. 5; and ſeveral ſprigs of oak fructed.

In the South croſs are heads of the Virgin and Child; a ſeparate head of Chriſt; two neat ſmall whole-length figures of female ſaints, perfect; one male ſaint, not perfect; the remains of three canopies, ornamented with groteſque figures of owls, &c.

The font is engraved, fig. 8.

The rood-loft ſtairs remain; and ſome ſtone ſeats in the chancel, fig. 9.

A ſilver cup for the Euchariſt was given by William Leonard Gregory; no date.

In the Matriculus of 1220 [1], Aſfordby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the biſhop of Lincoln; and the then rector paid to R. de Iwardby a penſion of 20*s*. by authority of William biſhop of Lincoln.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s*. 6½*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 28 marks; and paid 2*s*. for Peter-pence.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 12*s*.; the penſion paid to Pell's chantry [2] in the church of Lincoln was £4. [3]; and the value of the rectory £20.

In the Regiſter of the church of Lincoln is an inſtrument for uniting the churches of Aſfordby and Siwoldby (Shouldby) [4]; and accordingly Shouldby was for ſome time conſidered to be within this pariſh. The chapel of that hamlet has long been deſecrated [5]; and ineffectual attempts have been formerly made to conſtitute it a peculiar diſtrict or pariſh. At preſent, however, it is conſidered as a part of Saxulby, and pays a modus to that pariſh of £4. 6*s*. 8*d*.

In 1650, the rectory of Aſfordby was returned worth £50.; and the incumbent as "ſufficient."

The preſent value in the king's books is 15*l*. 11*s*. 8*d*.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 3*s*. 4*d*.; the archidiaconal, 7*s*. 7*d*.; ſynodals, 3*s*. 6*d*.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Richard de Wendour, ſubdeacon, 1230.	Biſhop of Lincoln.
Alardus de Arundel [6], 1231.
William de Fulebec, 1233.
Richard Brokeſby, 1535.	Lord Willoughby of Ereſby.
Martin Hill, about 1540.
Chriſtopher Bardſey [7], 1562.
Francis Hill, 1621.	Sir Percival Willoughby of Wollaton, knt.
. . . . 1642.	Sir Francis Willoughby, knt.
Hugo Burneby, June 25, 1666.	William Boteler, eſq.
Andrew Burneby [8], Feb. 12, 1693; died Jan. 1, 1722-3.	Hugh Burneby.
Henry Wright, June 29, 1723.	Andrew Burneby, gent.
John Brown, Feb. 20, 1724.
Andrew Burnaby [9], M. A. July 11, 1726.	Maurice Cam, gent.
Thomas-Beaumont Burnaby [10], May 17, 1777.	Himſelf the patron.

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[2] This chantry is not in the number of thoſe enumerated in Willis; vol. II. p. 34.

[3] Eccleſia oneratur in penſione x marc', ſolvend' eccl' Cath' Lincoln'. See vol. I. p. xcix.

[4] Ibid.

[5] A part of the chapel wall remains in the upper houſe of that hamlet; and bones of ſeveral bodies were thrown up there ſome years ſince, on ſinking a vault for a cellar; at the ſame time was taken up a coffin-ſhaped ſtone, which is ſince put over the grave of Anne Stephens in Saxulby church.

[6] Magiſter Alardus de Arundel admiſſ' ad eccleſiam de Aſfordeby, ad collationem epiſcopi; ſalvis x marcis ſolvendis præpoſito commun' Linc' eccleſiæ, ad virum, & ad . . . . . mandatum W. [de Drayton] archidiaconum Leic'.

[7] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Bardſey is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competentèr doctus; non reſidet; non hoſpitalis; deget apud Scalford; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet." See under Scalford, vol. II. p. 316.

[8] "The advowſon of the rectory of Aſfordby belongs to the preſent rector, Andrew Burnaby, 1705." Notitia Parochialis, in the Lambeth Library, 548.

[9] Prebendary of St. Margaret's in Leiceſter.

[10] Mr. Burnaby had a diſpenſation, in May 1777, to hold the rectory of Aſfordby, with the vicarage of Aſhby Folvile.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel:

At the North-eaſt end is a projecting burial-vault of brick, appropriate to the family of Burnaby; and on ſeveral flat ſtones:

1. " Reſurgam.
H. B.
Jan. 28, 1699.

2. Eliz. B. wife of H. B.
rector of this pariſh,
was buried July 29, 1699.

3. H. B.
Aug. 20, 1742.

4. Mary Cam,
1720."

5. " Andrew Burneby,
a good ſpiritual and temporal rector of this pariſh, died January the 1ſt, 1722,
and was buried January the 3d, aged LXII."

6. " Anne, the widow of Andrew Burneby, a very good woman, was buried May the 6th, 1726, aged 67."

In the nave:

1. " To the memory of Elizabeth, the wife of John Dexter, who departed this life
the 7th day of July, 1756, in the 32d year of her age.
Alſo ſix children of the above John and Elizabeth Dexter, who died in their infancy.

Here Sweetneſs lies, and Innocence, whoſe breath
Were ſtop'd by early, not unfriendly, Death.
They're gone to reſt, juſt as they did begin
Sorrow to know, before they knew to ſin.
Death, that doth Sin and Sorrow thus prevent,
Is the next bleſſing to a life well ſpent."

2. " Here lieth interred the body of Anne Hill, elder ſiſter to Elizabeth Dexter, both daughters of John Hill by Mary his wife, who departed this life the 17th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1758, and in the 34th year of her age."

3. " Here lieth interred the body of Mary, the wife of John Hill, who departed this life March 14, 1764,
aged 73 years.

This faithful wife and mother dear
Her ſoul to God in peace reſign'd;
Happy in glory to appear
Before the Judge of all mankind.

Anne, their daughter, died July 7, 1756, aged 32."
[With ſome others of the ſame family.]

4. " Here lieth interred the body of John Hill, who departed this life July the 12th,
in the year of our Lord 1765,
in the 82d year of his age."

5. " In memory of Anne Green, daughter of Thomas and Eleanor Green, who died February the 22d, 1775,
in the 7th year of her age."

On a black mural tablet in the South tranſept:

" Near to this place lieth interred
the body of John Meadows;
he departed this life June 25, 1788, aged 68 years.
" Alſo near to this place lieth interred
the body of Mary, the wife of John Meadows;
ſhe departed this life March 11, 1790,
aged 66 years."

In the South tranſept:

" HIC JACET JOHANNES,
FILIUS JOHANNIS ET MARIÆ MORRIS,
QUI PATERNO OCCUBUIT
SEPULCHRO 14 DIE FEB. ANNO
ÆTATIS 25, ANNOQUE DOMINI 1687.

Here lies his duſt, who living had the love
Of all that knew him here—of God above;
Whoſe ſoul with too much virtue was array'd
In this world's peſt-houſe to be longer ſtayed:
And therefore, to ſecure his innocence,
He bid adieu, and took his flight from hence;
Aſcending to the court of powers divine,
To chuſe his Saviour for a Valentine."

On another flat ſtone:

" Here lieth the body of Richard Waite, who departed this life Auguſt 26, 1719,
aged 64 years.
Here alſo lieth the body of Suſanna,
the wife of Richard Waite, who departed this life July 24, 1719,
in the 35th year of her age."

On the Singers' gallery at the Weſt end of the church;
" Mr. John Hill, churchwarden 1752."

In the church-yard:

Thomas Walton, died Jan. 30, 1781, aged 72.
Elizabeth Walton, died April 8, 1785, aged 85.
John Meadows, died March 26, 1786, aged 86.

On a flat ſtone within the altar-rails at Rothwell, in Northamptonſhire, is the following epitaph:

" M. S.
Conduntur hic exuviæ Edvardi Hill, arm.
filii Edvardi Hill, arm.
cujus pietate memorabilis anteceſſor Martinus Hill [1], rector de Aſſerby, in com. Leiceſtriæ, primus in eodem comitatu
Religionis erat Reformatæ Concionator; quam ſumptibus propriis et ingenio propagavit,
è Johanne Hill, de Hounſon in com. Somerſet, milite oriundus,
qui in re militare honorificè verſatus eſt ſub illuſtri regno Edvardi Tertii Gallorum domitoris.
Obiit 28° die Aprilis, anno Chriſti 1709.
Poſuit frater Robertus adminiſtrator."

---

[1] Martin Hill, clerk, preſented by lord Willoughby to the rectory of Aſſerby in Leiceſterſhire, is recorded to have been the firſt preacher, at the Reformation from Popery, of the Proteſtant Religion in that county. This Martin had iſſue Francis Hill, his ſon and heir; who, marrying into the Willoughby family, had iſſue —— Hill, his ſucceſſor and ſon; who likewiſe had ſeveral children, of whom John Hill, his fifth ſon, was preſented in 1635 to the rectory of Holdenby in the county of Northampton. He married Suſan Lamb, daughter of Edward Lamb, eſq. of the county of Eſſex, niece to ſir John Lamb, knt. dean of the arches, and, by the death of his only child the counteſs of Denbigh, afterwards his heir. By this lady he had iſſue Edward Hill, eſq. who, marrying Suſan, daughter of John Maunſell, of Thorpe Malſor, eſq. had ſeven ſons and ſeven daughters. He died and was buried at Rothwell in 1705. His three elder brothers dying without iſſue, this manor, with the paternal eſtate, devolved upon Nathanael Hill, the fourth ſon, who married Elizabeth Lodington, daughter and heir of Stephen Lodington, of Lincoln, eſq. and was the poſſeſſor of Rothwell in 1720, at which time he had iſſue five ſons and five daughters. Bridges, vol. II. p. 61.

Pedigree of GREGORY, of ASFORDBY. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Quarterly of ſix; 1. Or, two bars, and in chief a lion paſſant Azure; 2. Argent, a ſaltire engrailed Sable; 3. Azure, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, debruiſed with a bend Gules; 4. Ermine, a feſs, paly of ſix, Argent and Sable; 5. Sable, two lions paſſant in pale Argent, crowned Or; 6. Vaire, Argent and Gules, a feſs of the ſecond, fretted Or. Creſt, a demy boar Sable, collared Or; fig. 10, John Gregory, lord of the manors of Freſeley and Aſfordby. = Maud, dau. of ſir Roger Moton, of Peckleton, knt.

1. Richard[1] Gregory, of Freſeley and Aſfordby, died (at a very advanced age) in 1292. = ...
2. Nicholas Gregory, father of Adam Gregory.
3. Walter Gregory, father of Richard Gregory.
Alice, married to Hugh, ſon of Stephen Erdwick.

1. Sir Francis[2] Gregory, diſpenſator to Simon de Montfort, occurs in 1240. = ...
2. John.
3. Thomas.

Ralph[3] Gregory, ſon and heir 1262. = ... dau. of Peter of Aſfordby.

1. Thomas Gregory, of Aſfordby, educated at Cambridge, a learned clerk, held the manor of Aſfordby; and was living in 1328. = Iſabel, dau. and heir of Richard Segrave, and lady of the manor of Cateby.
2. William Gregory, married Alice, dau. and heir of Robert de Cawley, lord of Cawley, co. Warwick, and had iſſue Tho. Gregory, of Harpole, co. Northamp.
3. Henry Gregory, killed in the Scotch war; had two ſons, Henry and Gregory.
3. Richard.

1. Francis Gregory, D. D. a canon of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter.
2. John Gregory, of Aſfordby. = Margaret Gregory, had property at Rotherwick, co. Southampton[4].
3. William Gregory, had his ſhare of the paternal inheritance at Thornton and Desford.
4. John, was the king's eſcheator.
Elizabeth, a nun of Polleſworth.

1. William Gregory, died ſ. p. m.
2. Robert Gregory, of Aſfordby. = ... dau. of the owner of Market Boſworth, and relict of Henry Harcourt.

John Gregory, eſq. the king's eſcheator in the county of Dorſet. = Joan, dau. of ..... Billeſby, ſiſter of ſir William Billeſby, of Lincolnſhire.

Thomas Gregory, eſq. = Eleanor, dau. of Richard Belleſby, of Lincolnſhire.

William Gregory, of Aſfordby, eſq. = Helen, ſiſter and heir of John Malyn, of Tuxford, co. Nottingham.

1. Thomas Gregory, eſq. couſin and heir of Will. Dymock[5], of Eiton, co. Nottingham[6]. = Elizabeth, dau. of Chriſtopher Wade, of Coventry, merchant; and mayor of that city.
2. William Gregory, of Aſfordby. = ... dau. of .... Thorpe.

1. Arthur Gregory, eſq. lord of Styvechall, within the county of the city of Coventry. = Jane, dau. of John Ferrers, ſon of ſir Humphry Ferrers of Tamworth.
2. Henry.
3. Chriſtopher.
4. Edmund.
William Gregory, of Aſfordby. = Mary, dau. of . .... Franklin.
Anthony Gregory, of London. =

1. Thomas Gregory, died ſ. p.
2. John.
3. Robert.
Laurence Gregory.

Margaret, dau. of William Alſop, of Markfield, 1ſt wife. = 1. Leonard Gregory, of Aſfordby, died 1615. = Jane, dau. of .... Clark, of Keame, 2d wife.
2. Chriſtopher.
1. Elizabeth Lee.
2. Jane Godfrey.
3. Mary.

1. William Gregory, of Aſfordby, æt. 40, 1619. = Frances, dau. of John Baker, of Eaton.
2. Thomas Gregory, æt. 22.

1. William, æt. 10.
2. John, æt. 9.
3. Leonard, æt. 6.
4. Thomas, æt. 4.
5. Edward, æt. 2.
1. Alice, æt. 1.
2. Frances.
3. Mary, ob. infantula.

Pedigree of CHESELDEN, of ALLEXTON. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Argent, a chevron between three croſſes moline Gules. Creſt, a greyhound lying down, plain collared, and rope fixed to it behind and twiſted Or; Plate III. fig. 25.

...... Cheſelden, of Allexton. = ...

1. John Cheſelden, = ... dau. to William Marbury, of Northamptonſhire.
2. William Cheſelden. = Emma, dau. to .....; remarried to Humfrey Colbron.

1. John Cheſelden = ...
2. Thomas.
3. Richard.
Elizabeth.
William Cheſelden,

Edward Cheſelden, of Uppingham. = Bridget, dau. of .... Montgomery, of Heton, co. Northampton.
Elizabeth.

Anne, dau. to Thomas Skevington, of Groby, brother to ſir William Skevington, firſt wife. = George Cheſelden, of Uppingham. = Alice, dau. to Roger Wilſton, of Uppingham, ſecond wife.

John, died ſ. p.
1. Katharine.
2. James.
3. Edward,
4. Thomas.

---

[1] Dedit partem terræ de Freſeley abbatiæ de Lileſhull in perpetuam eleemoſinam.

[2] Relaxavit Will'o de Percy jus ſuum in advocatione prioratûs de Selibred, ac terras in Soundon & Haſfeta in Suſſex, per finem .... Henrici filii Johannis.

[3] 46 Hen. III. quidem Rad'us Gregorie levonit finem de terris in Tabſmith Gregorie in com. Eſſex.

[4] Rot. Fin. 1 Ric. II.

[5] Inq. 32 Hen. VIII. Nottingham.

[6] Inq. 18 Eliz. Warw.

ASHBY FOLVILE,

in antient writings called Aſcbi, Aſceby, Eſſeby, Heſſeby, taking the ſecond name from its early owners, is ſituated on a conſiderable brook, which riſes near Burrow, and is bounded by the lordſhips of Gaddeſby, Bareſby, Thorpe Sachevile, Great Dalby, Kirkby Beler, and Twyford. Its ſituation being low, it is ſubject in wet weather to frequent inundations by the overflowing of the river, which paſſes through it. It is ten miles diſtant from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The pariſh includes alſo a conſiderable hamlet called Bareſby, and the (now depopulated) village of Newbold Folvile. The Croſs, where four ways meet, near Aſhby wood, was formerly a boundary; of which nothing now remains but a ſtone two feet high, on the ſite of which is marked a ✠. The road to the South-eaſt leads to Burrow; that to the North-eaſt to Great Dalby; that to the North-weſt to Gaddeſby; and that to the South-weſt to Aſhby Folvile.

In Aſcbi, in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, were eight ploughs; and the lordſhip contained four ploughlands. It was then worth four pounds; and remained of the ſame value at the Conqueſt, when it was held, under the Counteſs Judith, by Ralph; who employed two ploughs in the demeſne, and two bondmen; and twenty four villans, with a prieſt and three bordars, had ſix ploughs. There were forty acres of meadow; a ſpinney one furlong long and one broad; and a mill of four ſhillings value [1].

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, the lordſhip of Barneſby, containing two ploughlands and a half, was held freely by Alwin; employed two ploughs and a half; and was valued at eight ſhillings. At the Conqueſt it was worth twenty ſhillings; and was held by Humfrey the Chamberlain. One plough was then in the demeſne; and three villans had half a plough. There were ſix acres of meadow [2]. In another part of Domeſday, Barneſbi is mentioned as a member of the ſoke of Rodeley, and is ſaid to contain five ploughlands all but one oxgang. There were alſo fifteen acres of meadow [3]. But in this menſuration Aſhby Folvile ſeems to be included.

Newebold, containing a ploughland and a half, employed, in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, one plough, and was worth twenty ſhillings. It was of the ſame value at the Conqueſt; when it was held, by Ralph, under the Counteſs Judith. One plough was then in the demeſne; and one villan, with four bordars, had another. There were three acres of meadow [4]. One ploughland in Aſcbi, belonging to Newebold, employed a plough in the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor; was then worth three ſhillings; and ſo continued at the Conqueſt, when it was held by Hugh, under Henry de Ferrieres. There were two villans on this lordſhip [5].—Newbold Folvile, in the Teſta de Nevill of 1280, is mentioned in the hundred of Framland, where it was charged 4*d*. to the ſheriff's aid.

Mr. Wyrley, in 1590, ſays, "Aſhby Folvile was for a long time the antient ſeat of the Folviles, until by a daughter it came to the Woodfords, and thence by a daughter to Smith. It is placed on the brook that cometh from Laund Abbey to Ouſton Abbey, and ſo to Twyford, and then to this Aſhby [6]."

The family of Folvile, or Foleville, whence this town and one of its hamlets take their additional denomination, came out of Normandy with the Conqueror, and were ſeated here in the reign of king Stephen. Fulk de Folvile poſſeſſed this lordſhip in 1137; was ſucceeded in it by his ſon Maroye; and he by his ſon Euſtace; by whoſe conſent, Maroye had before given three acres of meadow in Thorpe Would to his younger ſon John [7], his heirs and aſſigns: "Sciant, &c. quòd ego Maroye de Folvill dedi, de conſenſu Euſtachii heredis mei, Joh̄i filio meo, & heredibus ſuis vel aſſignatis, tres acras prati in Waldo de Thorp, illas ſcilicet quas emi de Thomâ de Overton, tenendas de dicto Thomâ de Overton, reddendo unum denarium ad Paſcham, &c. Teſtibus; Wiłło perſonâ de Twyford; Joh̄e capellano de Croxton; Joh̄e Palmer de Eſſeby; Rob̄to clerico de Torp; Rogero libero ejuſdem; Ric̄o clerico de Croxton; & aliis."

To Euſtace de Folvile ſucceeded his ſon ſir Walter Folvile, living in 1186; and his grandſon ſir William Folvile, knt.; who, ſiding with the rebellious barons in 1216, had his lands ſeized by the king, who granted them to William de Cantilupe; but he was afterwards reſtored both to them and the king's favour [8].

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, he paid four marks for two knights fees in Heſſeby and Newbold. And he gave to the nunnery of Nuneaton a place and a yardland in Eſſeby, of the fee of David earl of Huntingdon, in perpetual alms, that they might pray for evermore for his ſoul, and for all the anceſtors, heirs, and ſucceſſors, of the ſaid ſir William Folvile, engaging himſelf and his heirs to pay an annual rent of five ſhillings to the abbey for the tenure of the ſaid lands. Teſtibus; P. comitiſſâ Legreceſtrâ, Margeretâ filiâ ejus, & aliis.

Alice prioreſs of Nuneaton, ſir Nicholas the prior, and the convent of Nuneaton, convey a yardland to ſir William Folvile and his heirs for ever; reſerving the yearly rent of five ſhillings to them and their ſucceſſors for evermore. Teſtibus; P. comitiſſâ Leyc', Margaretâ filiâ ejus, & aliis.

Sir William Folvile was ſucceeded by his ſon ſir Euſtace; who confirmed his father's grant to Nuneaton, and the payment of the annual rent of five ſhillings from the ſaid land in Aſhby Folvile: "Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus, &c. Euſtachius de Follvill ſalutem. Noveritis me dediſſe Deo & eccleſie beate Marie de Etonâ 5s̄. annui redditûs, percipiendi de unâ carucatâ terre in Eſſebi. Et noveritis me confirmâſſe donationem Wiłłi de Folvill, patris mei, de unâ virgatâ terre in Eſſebi Folvill, de feodo đni comitis David de Huntingdon, que ego Euſtachius contra đnum regem & đnum comitem, & contra omnes gentes, warantizabimus in perpetuum. Hiis teſtibus; đno Roberto de Folvill, đno Rađo Camerario, đno Petro de Nicole, Roberto Gumfrey rectore eccl̄ie de Wrixele, Waltero de Gravâ, clerico, & aliis."

Sir Euſtace Folvile, adhering to Simon de Montfort in his rebellion, was one of thoſe who, after the battle of Eveſham, ſo ſtoutly defended Kenilworth caſtle againſt the king in 1265: notwithſtanding all which, he was ſuffered to compound for his eſtate, according to the memorable agreement called Dictum de Kenilworth; and the ſame year obtained the king's pardon, on producing for his ſureties Peter de Nevill and John de Kirkeby: "Henricus, Dei gratiâ, &c. Cùm Petrus de Nevill & Joh̄es de Kirkeby, de com' Leic', manuceperint coram nobis, pro Euſtachio de Folvill, de eodem comitatu, ſecundùm formam in eorum literis contentam, quòd ipſe à modo erga nos & heredes noſtros benè & fidelitèr ſe

---

[1] "Radulphus tenet de Comitiſſâ 4 carucatas terræ in Aſcbi. Ibi 8 carucæ fuerunt. Nunc in dominico 2 carucæ & 2 ſervi; & 24 villani, cum preſbytero & 3 bordariis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi molinum de 4 ſolidis, & 40 acræ prati. Spinetum 1 quarentenæ longitudinis, & 1 latitudinis. Valuit, & valet, 4 libras." Domeſday, fol. 236. b. 2.

[2] "Humfridus Camerarius tenet in Barneſbi 1 carucatam terræ. Ibi fuerunt 2 carucæ & dimidia. In dominico eſt una; & 4 villani habent dimidiam carucam. Ibi 6 acræ prati. Hæ duæ terræ [Dalbi & Barneſbi] valebant 8 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos. Aluuinus liberè tenuit." Ibid. fol. 236. a. 1.

[3] "In Barneſbi 5 carucatæ terræ, 1 bovatâ minus; & 15 acræ prati." Ibid. fol 230. b. 1.

[4] "Idem [Rad'us] tenet de Comitiſſâ 1 carucatam terræ & dimidiam in Newebold. Ibi 1 caruca fuit. Nunc in dominico 1 caruca; & unus villanus, cum 4 bordariis, habent aliam. Ibi 3 acræ prati. Valuit, & valet, 4 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 1.

[5] "Hugo tenet de H[enrico de Ferrieres] 1 carucatam terræ in Aſcbi, & pertinet ad Niuuebold. Tempore regis Edwardi erat ibi 1 caruca. Ibi ſunt 2 villani. Valuit, & valet, 4 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 233. a. 2.

[6] MS. in the College of Arms.

[7] This John de Folvile gave to the monaſtery at Nuneaton a virgate of land at Little Aſhby. See that pariſh.

[8] MS. Chetwynd.

habebit, & quòd ſtabit Dicto de Kenilleworth [1], & quòd nulli de fidelibus noſtris, occaſione alicujus inimicitie priùs habite, de cetero dampnum inferet aut gravamen: remiſimus eidem Euſtachio omnem indignationem & animi rancorem, quos erga ipſum concepimus occaſione tranſgreſſionum quas contra nos feciſſe dicebatur tempore turbationis habite in regno noſtro: pardonavimus etiam eidem Euſtachio, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris quantum ad nos pertinet, omnes tranſgreſſiones & exceſſus per ipſum factos tempore turbationis predicte; ita tamen quòd erga nos & heredes noſtros benè & fidelitèr ſe habeat in futuro, & quòd ſtet Dicto predicto, ſicut predictum eſt. Et, ad pleniorem obſervationem premiſſorum, idem Euſtachius & manucaptores ſui ſubeant coërcionem & diſtrictionem eccleſie Romane & prelatorum regni noſtri, quos nos vel heredes noſtri ad hoc duximus eligendum. In cujus rei teſtimonium, has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Sanctum Paulum, London', 26° die Julii, anno regni noſtri quinquageſimo-primo. [1269.]

In the Itinerary of 1280, Aſhby Folvile, Bareſby, and Dalby Chaucombe, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1309, ſir John de Folvile, ſon and heir of Euſtace, held, at his death, the manor of Aſhby Folvile, with the appurtenances, of the king in capite, of the purparty which was Robert Brus's, as of the honour of Huntingdon, by the ſervice of two knights fees, and doing ſuit at the court of Huntingdon from month unto month; and John de Folvile, his ſon and heir, was then aged 23 [2].

In 1314, it was found that it would be no loſs to the king, or any other, if leave were given to ſir John de Folvile to enfeoff John de Sutton in the manor of Aſhby Folvile, with the appurtenances; and that it was held of the king in capite, as of the honour of Huntingdon, by the ſervice of two knights fees [3].

In 1326, Euſtace de Folvile and two of his brothers, having been threatened by Roger le Beler, one of the juſtices itinerant, and then very old; they took the law into their own hands, and barbarouſly murdered the Judge in a valley near Rereſby [4]. This Euſtace died in 1347 [5]; and is traditionally ſuppoſed to be repreſented by the monumental figure in Aſhby church engraved in Plate IV. fig. A.

In 1326, Roger le Brabazun, at his death, held of Robert de Brus two knights fees in Aſhby Folvile; both which were at that time in the king's hands [6].

In 1346, John de Folvile (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtoc, the king's eldeſt ſon,) was aſſeſſed 30*s.* for three quarters of one knights fee in Aſhby Folvile and Newbold Folvile, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon. In the ſame year, Robert Helwell (on the ſame occaſion) was aſſeſſed 13*s.* 4*d.* for a third part of one knight's fee in Aſhby Folvile, parcel of the ſame fees [7].

Geoffrey de Folvile, ſon of the laſt mentioned John, had iſſue an only daughter, Mabell, who was married to John de Woodford; who thereby became entitled to the manors of Aſhby Folvile and Newbold Folvile, and to divers other lordſhips in this county. The hiſtory of this lordſhip, whilſt in poſſeſſion of the Woodfords, will be detailed in the particular hiſtory of that family [8].

Extracts relative to the family of Folvile; tranſcribed from the "Regiſtrum chartarum de maneriis, redditibus, &c. Joannis de Woodford, olim de Aſhby Folvile, in com' Leic', &c." [9]

Here may ye ſee, and truly underſtand, the fraunchiſes that pertaynes to the manor of Aſhby Folvile, with the appurtenance in Newboulte Folvil, and to Aſhby fee in Gaddeſby; the whyche manors and tenements, in the towns beforeſaid, are holden of the Prynce of England, as of the honure of Huntingdon.

Then followeth the charter, 38 Edward I. [1310], reciting a charter of 18 Henry II. granting and confirming the ſeveral privileges, franchiſes, and immunities, of the earldoms of Cheſter and Huntingdon. After which the Chartulary thus proceeds:

Sir John Folvile, knight, and lord of Aſhby Folville, wedded Mabell, the daughter of ſir Geoffrey Delamar, knt. lord of Maxſey beſide Depynge; for which marriage the aforeſaid ſir Geoffrey Delamar gave eight ſcore marks of ſterlinge, and her attire covenable. This ſaid marriage was made in preſence of maſter John Sutton, chanon of Lincoln, and uncle to the ſaid Mabell; whyche maſter John Sutton, uncle to the ſaid Mabell, paid to ſir John Folvile, knight, for this ſaid marriage, on the day of the wedding, cc marks and x, at the manor of Maxſey beforeſaid; and therefore the ſaid ſir John Folvile enfeoffed the ſaid maſter John Sutton in his manor of Aſhby Folvile in fee ſimple; and then the ſaid maſter John Sutton refeoffed again the ſaid ſir John Folvile and dame Mabell his wife, by fine here following next after the covenants between ſir Geoffrey Delamar and ſir John Folvyll, by mediation of maſter John Sutton, chanon of Lincoln, and uncle to the ſaid Mabell. The articles of the marriage were agreed upon, between ſir Geoffrey Delamar and ſir John Folvile, Nov. 11, 1314.

A fine arrerid in the king's court, Paſch. 10 Edward II. between ſir John Folvile and Mabell his wife, plaintiffs, and ſir John Sutton, chanon of Lincoln, defendant, re-conveying the manor of Aſhby to the ſaid ſir John and Mabell, and to their heirs in tail.

A charter of pardon, that king Henry that was king John's ſon, gave to ſir Euſtace Folvile, lord of Aſhby Folvile, for divers treſpaſſes that he had done againſt the king, and for ſlaying of his chief juſtice ſir Roger Beler; dated at St. Paul's, July 26, anno 51°.

Euſtace Folvile gave to Richard Flixthorp, in marriage with Margerie his daughter, XII yard-lands and an half in the fields of Aſhby, with tofts and crofts, and with dwellings, and with XII bondmen to the aforeſaid yard-lands and half, with all other things and chattels of theirs following, and with all other pertaining, on a reſerved rent of a pair of gilt ſpurs, or ſix pence, yearly. Teſtibus; Anketino de Martivall; dño Johe de Sproxton; dño Johe perſonâ de Aſhewell; Johe Folvile de Gaddeſby; & al'. (No date.)

Memorandum, quod predictus Ricardus Flixthorp & Margeria uxor ejus habuerunt exitum Robertum Flixthorp; et dictus Robertus Flixthorp, filius predicti Ricardi et Margerie, habuit exitam filiam vocatam N. uxorem domini Johannis Helwell militis; et dictus Johannes Helwell miles habuit exitum Johannem Helwell de Gunby; et predictus Johannes Helwell de Gunby habuit exitum Johannem Helwell de N. in comitatu Northampton'; et predictus Johannes Helwell habuit exitam N. Helwell infra etatem exiſtentem; et maritagium ejus pertinet domino de Aſhby Folvile, cum predictis duodecim virgatis terre et dimid', quas tenet de eo per ſervicium militare, quia eſt in quinto gradu à Margeriâ filiâ Euſtachii Folvile.

Here may ye ſee, and truly underſtand, how that the manor of Aſhby Folvile, with the appurtenances in Aſhby, as Helwell fee, that is to ſay, XII yard-land and a half that is holden of the manor of Aſhby by knight's ſervice, with all other the freeholders land in the ſame town, with the manor of Newbolt Folvile, with all the appurtenances, and with all the lands and tenements in Gaddyſby called Aſhby fee, as appears by a remembrance taken out of the Exchequer in London [10].

---

[1] This award between king Henry III. and his barons and others (ſo called becauſe made at Kenilworth Caſtle) contained a compoſition of thoſe who had forfeited their eſtates by rebellion: which compoſition was five years' rent of the lands and eſtates forfeited.—"Knights and eſquires," ſays this Dictum, "who were robbers, if they have no land, ſhall pay the half of their goods, and find ſufficient ſecurity to keep henceforth the peace of the kingdom." Such were the manners of the times!

[2] Eſch. 3 Edw. II. N° 24. Leic.

[3] Inq. ad quod dampnum 8 Edw. II. N° 54. Leic.

[4] "Anno 1326. Kal. Feb', occiſus fuit dn's Rogerus Bellers in com' Leiceſt'. Iſte Rogerus fundavit cantariam ſecularium ſacerdotum apud Kirkby Bellers in com' Leceſtr'; quam, poſt multos annos, uxor ejuſdem Rogeri, cum conſenſu Rogerii filii eorum, tranſtulit in uſus canonicorum regularium, inſtituens ibidem primum priorem loci de abbathiâ de Olveſton. Hic Rogerus occiſus eſt a quodam Euſtachio de Folevile, ac fratribus ſuis, quibus priùs minas ingeſſerat et incurias; interfectus erat a tribus fratribus in quadam valle juxta Rereſby. Hic oppreſſor fuit eccleſiarum et aliorum vicinorum religioſorum pro cupiditate poſſeſſionum quas cupierit ad donationem cantarie ſue." MS. Dodſworth, LXXXVIII. ſol. 19. See alſo under Kirkby Beler, vol. II. p. 225; and hereafter, under Rereſby and Lubbeſthorpe.

[5] "Anno 1347, obiit Euſtachius de Folevile, qui Robertum Bellers interfecit." MS. Dodſworth, ib. p. 51.

[6] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 67. Leic.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] See p. 25.

[9] Cotton MSS. Claudius A. XIII.

[10] Ex libro feodorum de Scaccario domini regis Edwardi Tertii.

Sir Euſtace Folvile, knt. conveys to Hugh Muſele, his ſervant, for term of his life, an oxgang of land, croft, and appurtenances; rent reſerved one penny of ſilver per annum; at his deceaſe, to revert to himſelf and his heirs. Teſtibus; Willo Marmion de Newton; Thomâ rectore de Ty; & al'.

A fine, 12 Edward I. of a yearly rent of five ſhillings by the year, to the houſe and priory of Nuneaton, in lieu of a debt in arrear of ſix marks due to the prioreſs and abbey from John de Folvile, and remitted under this agreement.

Sir Euſtace Folvile purchaſes of Richard of Flixthorp and Margery his wife, daughter to ſir Euſtace, a toft called Vengardyn[1], with its appurtenances, adjoining to the manor of ſir Euſtace, in the town of Tye[2], lately received in free-marriage with his wife Margery, in perpetual exchange for two acres of meadow in the meadow of Tye, adjoining to his meadow land in Whiſſenden. Atteſted, no date.

Henry de Sc̄o Mauro releaſes to ſir Fulk Folvile, the ſon of ſir William Folvile, all the right he had to a yard-land in Aſhby, for five ſhillings to him paid.

Sir Euſtace Folvile had a daughter called Amicia, wedded to Geoffrey of Melton, and lord of Melton in borough-ſonkyn; and the ſaid ſir Euſtace Folvile gave to the ſaid ſir Geoffrey of Melton and Amicia his daughter a meſſuage and certain yard-lands in Tye, in free marriage; and they had iſſue a daughter, Genet, wedded to Alexander Lucas, a burgeſs of Stamford; and ſhe aliened this ſame land to ſir John Folvile, ſir Euſtace Folvile's ſon, and his heir, anno 31 Edward III.

Here may ye ſee, and truly underſtand, a true pedigree, how that ſir John Folvile, ſon and heir to Euſtace Folvile, lord of Tye, wedded Mabell the daughter of ſir Geoffrey Delamar, lord of Maxſey; and the ſaid John and Mabell his wife had iſſue ſir John Folvile, knight, and ſir Geoffrey Folvile, the ſecond brother, and ſir Chriſtopher Folvile, the third brother, and ſir Matthew Folvile, the fourth brother; and the ſaid ſir John Folvile and Mabell his wife had iſſue a daughter, wedded to ſir John Ramſton, lord of Ramſton in Nottinghamſhire; and alſo they had iſſue another daughter, called N. wife to ſir Geoffrey Skeffington, lord of Skeffington in Leiceſterſhire; and the ſaid John and Mabell his wife had iſſue another daughter, wedded to ſir William Marmion, lord of Ryſeby in Lincolnſhire, and of Newton Marmyon[3] in Leiceſterſhire; and the ſaid ſir John Folvile and Mabell his wife had iſſue another daughter called N. wedded to John Folvile, lord of Rereſby beſide Aſhby Folvile.

Sir John Folvile the elder, ſon to ſir Euſtace Folvile, enfeoffed ſir William Kaythorpe, parſon of Aſhby Folvile, in the manor of Tye, 4 April, 37 Edw. III.

And ye ſhall truly underſtand, that ſir John Folvile, the firſt ſon of Mabell beforeſaid, had never iſſue; nevertheleſs he wedded an old ancient lady of Yorkſhire, that was the wife of the lord Marmion, and he might diſpend yearly by her VII C marks. And they kept a worthy houſhold and a great at Aſhby Folvile. And the ſaid ſir John was a knight of the good duke's of Lancaſter; and the ſaid duke would come and lie with the ſaid ſir John at Aſhby Folvile, many divers times when it pleaſed him; and the ſaid duke gave the ſaid ſir John Folvile XX marks of fee yearly. And then long time after ſir John Folvile gave to ſir Chriſtopher Folvile his brother, and to one dame Margaret his wife; which dame Margaret was ſome time ſervant to the ſaid ſir John Folvile, and well-beloved with him; and ſo he made ſir Chriſtopher his brother to wed her, and gave them together the manor of Tye for term of both their lives, notwithſtanding the ſaid ſir John Folvile had no power for to give it; for it was entailed before of elder time by the feoffees of old ſir John Folvile, as ye may ſee before by two true tayles that are thereupon: one tayle made by ſir William Kaythorp, parſon of Aſhby Folvile, and feoffee of old ſir John Folvile, as ye may ſee before written. A copy of the tayle, and another tayle that was made by ſir William Cade of Baryſby, and ſir Richard Slegh of Melton Mowbray, prieſts, feoffees in the manor of Aſhby Folvile and Newbold Folvile, and in the manor of Tye Folvile, with the advowſon, and all the appurtenance; and the ſaid feoffees enfeoffed Geoffrey Folvile and Iſabell his wife, and to their heirs between the ſaid Geoffrey and Iſabell lawfully begotten, as ye may ſee and truly underſtand in the true deeds of entayle made by the feoffees aboveſaid; and ſo the manor of Tye is unlawfully, againſt the form of the taylles above rehearſed, made to Geoffrey Folvile and Iſabel his wife; the which Geoffrey was the ſecond ſon to old ſir John Folvile, and heir to ſir John Folvile his brother, that married the ancient lady Marmion, as it is above ſaid.

And the ſaid Geoffrey and Iſabel his wife had iſſue a daughter called Mabell, and was ward, after the deceaſe of ſir Geoffrey Folvile her father, to John the duke of Lancaſter, for the manor of Tye, that the ſaid Geoffrey held by knight's ſervice of the duke aforeſaid, as of his honour of Leiceſter, by three parts of a knight's fee, as ye may ſee in a patent that the ſaid Iſabel had of the ſaid duke when ſhe bought the wardſhip of her daughter Mabell, both of the manor, with the appurtenance and the wardſhip of her marriage, for fifty pounds that the ſaid Iſabell paid to the ſaid duke, as ye may ſee in the patent before-written a copy thereof; and ſo the manor of Tye is unrightwiſely enherited in ſir Chriſtopher Folvile's blood, that was but a younger brother, and againſt the form of the true entailles made upon the ſaid manor.

And ye ſhall truly underſtand, that the ſame dame Margaret, after the deceaſe of ſir Chriſtopher her huſband, was in houſhold with ſir John Folvile her huſband's brother, and was mickel cheriſhed with him, and was with him in houſhold at Aſhby Folvile till he was dead; and there ſhe imagined falſe deeds, and let write them, and enſealed them with his hand when he was dead, for ſhe had the ſeal of his arms, and all his deeds and evidences that belonged to all the lordſhips that Folvile were ever enheryte in England. And the ſaid dame Margaret, wife to Chriſtopher Folvile, made a falſe deed, and ſaid how ſir John Folvile her huſband, ſir Chriſtopher Folvile's elder brother, and lord of Tye, ſhould let make a ſtate by his feoffees to his brother ſir Chriſtopher, and to the heirs between him and the ſaid Margaret lawfully begotten, as by way of tayle; and all that was falſe that ſhe ſaid; and yet ſhe occupied ſuch a falſe eſtate by maintenance of one called Lawrence Hawberk, that wedded her after. And the ſaid dame Margaret, wife of ſir Chriſtopher, had iſſue a daughter called Elizabeth; and the ſaid Elizabeth was wedded to a knight called Sir Hewe Browe, a knight of Cheſhire in king Richard's time. The ſaid ſir Hewe Browe maintained the ſaid dame Margaret with her falſe feoffment that ſhe got made; and wedded Elizabeth her daughter, and had iſſue Robert Browe, eſquire; and Robert Browe, eſquire, had iſſue John Browe, that now lives, and a daughter, wedded in Northamptonſhire to John Helwell, lord of Gunby, who had iſſue, by Robert Browe's daughter, a ſon called John Helwell, that is ward to ſir Robert of Woodford, knight, for certain lyffelode that the ſaid John Helwell held of him in Aſhby Folvile by knight's ſervice.

Alſo it is for to have in mind truly how that the ſaid dame Margaret, wife to ſir Chriſtopher Folvile, overlived her huſband ſir Chriſtopher; and alſo ſhe overlived another huſband, called ſir John of Calveley, a knight in Cheſhire, and couſen to ſir Hugh of Calveley, and to ſir Hewe Browe. And this falſe feoffment was maintained by the falſe working and imagination of the falſe feoffments made by her, when ſir John Folvile was dead, with the ſeal of his arms; and therefore I ſuppoſe verily that ſhe be in Hell. Nevertheleſs ſhe delivered and made confeſſion ere ſhe died, that ſhe had made falſe deeds, and diſinherited the right heirs of ſir Geoffrey Folvile, that was the eldeſt brother to ſir John Folvile, and heir; and ſhe delivered three deeds to the good abbot of Croxton, called ſir Thomas Pegge, and beſought and prayed him at reverence of Almighty God, that he would deliver the ſame deeds to the right heirs of ſir John Folvile; that is to ſay, to the heirs of Geoffrey

---

[1] The Vineyard. [2] In the county of Rutland. Several deeds relative to this place are preſerved in the Woodford Chartulary.

[3] The Marmions were at that time lords of Newton-Burdet.

Folvile, eldeſt brother and heir to ſir John Folvile; that is for to ſay truly, to Mabell Woodford, and to ſir Robert Woodford, knight, her ſon, and lord of Aſhby Folvile; and ſo the ſaid abbot made the ſame deeds for to be delivered by Frere John Grantham, abbot of Croxton, and ſometime was chaplain with the ſaid ſir Thomas Pegge that was abbot; and afterward the ſaid John Grantham was abbot of Croxton, and delivered the ſaid deeds, with other deeds alſo that the ſaid dame Margaret, ſir Chriſtopher Folvile's wife, delivered to ſir Thomas Pegge for to deliver to Mabell of Woodford, and to ſir Robert of Woodford, true heirs lineal to the manors of Aſhby Folvile, Newbold Folvile, and Tye Folvile, in tail; as ye may underſtand truly by deeds of entail written before, and delivered by the abbot of Croxton to ſir Robert of Woodford, praying him that he would pray Mabell Woodford his mother, ſir Geoffrey Folvile's daughter and heir, that ſhe would have mercy and pity upon her ſoul. And the abbot ſaid furthermore, by his truth and his prieſthood, that the ſame dame Margaret ſent for him to Stapulford when ſhe lay a dying, and delivered him theſe tailles and deeds beforewritten; and ſaid truly, that Mabell of Woodford was true heir, and none other body; and that ſhe had done ſuch deed but by falſe counſel of men of law and of other. And the ſaid abbot ſaid in faith, that dame Margaret, wife to ſir Chriſtopher Folvile, ſaid theſe words, kneeling on both her knees, aſking her mercy and forgiveneſs of all the wrongs and diſheriſon that lay on her, done with her falſe ſubtlety againſt the heirs of Geoffry Folvile, father to the ſaid Mabell of Woodford; and delivered to ſir Robert Woodford the ſaid deeds of entail, and others as ye may ſee hereafter.

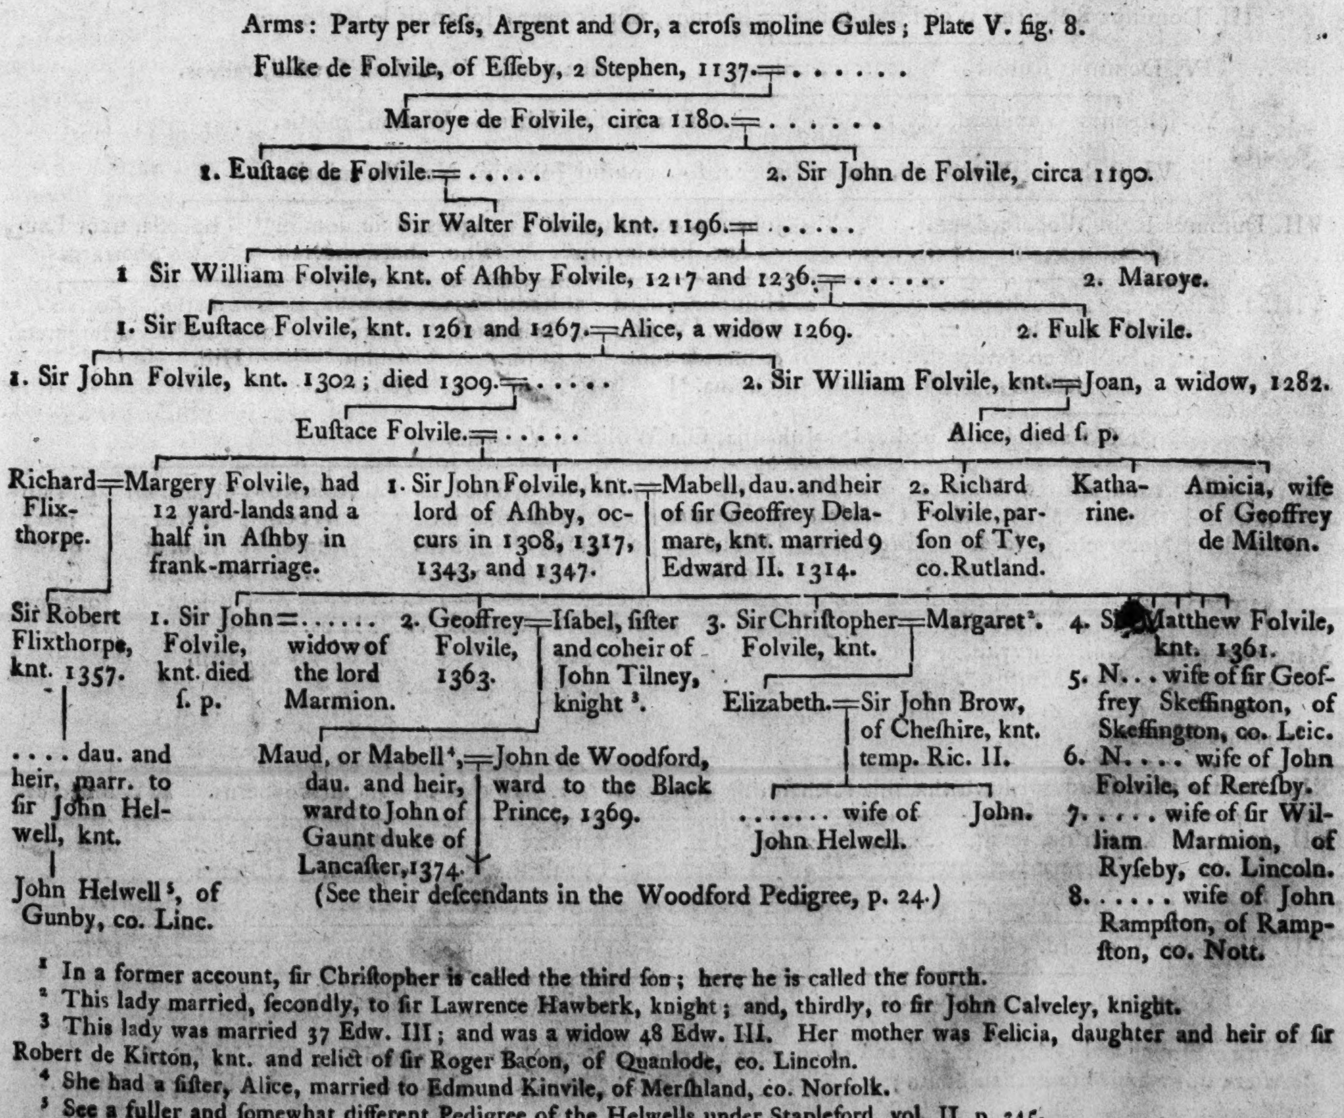
Laurence Hawberk, of Claxton, one of the feoffees of ſir John Folvile, elder brother to ſir Geoffrey Folvile, releaſed all the right that he had in the manor of Tye, by a feoffment of ſir John Folvile, made to them; that is to ſay, he releaſes to Ralph Sechevyle parſon of the kyrke of Twyford, Thomas de Gaddeſby parſon of the kyrke of Aſhby, John Friſby and John Veſey, prieſts, all the right and ſtate that he had in the manor of Tye, jointly with them, of the gift of the ſaid ſir John Folvile. Dated at Grymeſton.

The aforeſaid joint feoffees, ſir Ralph Sechevyle, Thomas of Gaddeſby, John Friſby, and John Veſey, releaſe the manor of Tye with the appurtenances, and advowſon of Tye, to Geoffrey Folvile and his heirs; 9 Feb. 36 Edw. III.

Here may ye ſee, and truly underſtand, how that Dame Margaret, ſometime the wife of Chriſtopher Folvile, younger brother to Geoffrey Folvile, attorned of the reverſion of the manor of Tye, with the appurtenances, to Geoffrey Folvile, as ye may ſee hereafter; but her attornement was falſe; for, the ſaid manor of Tye was entailed upon him, and on his heirs of his body, and of Iſabel his wife, lawfully begotten; but ſhe had ſtolen the deeds of taille what time that ſir John Folvile died at Aſhby; for, the ſaid dame Margaret, ſir Chriſtopher's wife, was over mickle cheriſhed and truſted with the ſaid ſir John Folvile: for I have heard my mother ſay, and the eldeſt men of that town, that ſhe kept ſir John Folvile after he was dead three days above the earth, unknown to all the town, until ſhe had ſent after her falſe counſel; and contrived and made falſe feoffments by ſubtelty, and ſaid how that ſir John Folvile, her huſband ſir Chriſtopher Folvile's brother, had enfeoffed Lawrence Hawberk of Grymſton, Ralph Secchefeld parſon of Twyford, Thomas of Gaddyſby parſon of Aſhby, and ſir John Veyſy vicar of Byllyſdon, in the manors of Aſhby, Newbold, and Tye, with their appurtenances, with the advowſon of the kirk of Tye: and this falſe enfeoffment was made and enſealed with ſir John Folvile's hand after he was dead; and therefore I ſuppoſe, by the rightwiſeneſs of God, that ſhe is in Hell. And thus ſhe diſinherited the right heirs of ſir John Folvile, in as much as lay in her falſe ſubtlety. But, nevertheleſs, all the falſe ſubtleties and falſe feoffments that ſhe contrived, imagined, and wrote, are nought; for, old ſir John Folvile, ſon to ſir Euſtace Folvile, and father to ſir John Folvile the eldeſt brother, and to Geoffrey Folvile the ſecond brother, and to ſir Matthew Folvile the third brother, and alſo father to ſir Chriſtopher Folvile the fourth[1] brother and youngeſt, and huſband to falſe dame Margaret that made all theſe falſe enfeoffments, entailed all theſe ſaid manors, with their appurtenances, long time before; as ye may ſee by the entails that ſhe delivered to the good abbot of Croxton, Thomas Pegge, three days before ſhe died, at Stapulford, upon her death-bed, as ye may ſee written here before.

Pedigree of FOLVILE, of Ashby Folvile. (From the Chetwynd MSS.)

Arms: Party per feſs, Argent and Or, a croſs moline Gules; Plate V. fig. 8.



Fulke de Folvile, of Eſſeby, 2 Stephen, 1137.=......

Maroye de Folvile, circa 1180.=......

1. Euſtace de Folvile.=..... | 2. Sir John de Folvile, circa 1190.

Sir Walter Folvile, knt. 1196.=.....

1 Sir William Folvile, knt. of Aſhby Folvile, 1217 and 1236.=...... | 2. Maroye.

1. Sir Euſtace Folvile, knt. 1261 and 1267.=Alice, a widow 1269. | 2. Fulk Folvile.

1. Sir John Folvile, knt. 1302; died 1309.=..... | 2. Sir William Folvile, knt.=Joan, a widow, 1282.

Euſtace Folvile.=..... | Alice, died ſ. p.

Richard Flixthorpe.=Margery Folvile, had 12 yard-lands and a half in Aſhby in frank-marriage. | 1. Sir John Folvile, knt. lord of Aſhby, occurs in 1308, 1317, 1343, and 1347.=Mabell, dau. and heir of ſir Geoffrey Delamare, knt. married 9 Edward II. 1314. | 2. Richard Folvile, parſon of Tye, co. Rutland. | Katharine. | Amicia, wife of Geoffrey de Milton.

Sir Robert Flixthorpe, knt. 1357. | 1. Sir John Folvile, knt. died ſ. p.=...... widow of the lord Marmion. | 2. Geoffrey Folvile, 1363.=Iſabel, ſiſter and coheir of John Tilney, knight[3]. | 3. Sir Chriſtopher Folvile, knt.=Margaret[2]. | 4. Sir Matthew Folvile, knt. 1361.

5. N... wife of ſir Geoffrey Skeffington, of Skeffington, co. Leic.

6. N.... wife of John Folvile, of Rereſby.

7. .... wife of ſir William Marmion, of Ryſeby, co. Lincoln.

8. ..... wife of John Rampſton, of Rampſton, co. Nott.

.... dau. and heir, marr. to ſir John Helwell, knt. | Maud, or Mabell[4], dau. and heir, ward to John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter, 1374.=John de Woodford, ward to the Black Prince, 1369. | Elizabeth.=Sir John Brow, of Cheſhire, knt. temp. Ric. II.

John Helwell[5], of Gunby, co. Linc. | (See their deſcendants in the Woodford Pedigree, p. 24.) | .... wife of John Helwell. | John.

---

[1] In a former account, ſir Chriſtopher is called the third ſon; here he is called the fourth.

[2] This lady married, ſecondly, to ſir Lawrence Hawberk, knight; and, thirdly, to ſir John Calveley, knight.

[3] This lady was married 37 Edw. III; and was a widow 48 Edw. III. Her mother was Felicia, daughter and heir of ſir Robert de Kirton, knt. and relict of ſir Roger Bacon, of Quanlode, co. Lincoln.

[4] She had a ſiſter, Alice, married to Edmund Kinvile, of Merſhland, co. Norfolk.

[5] See a fuller and ſomewhat different Pedigree of the Helwells under Stapleford, vol. II. p. 345.

Pedigree of WOODFORD, of Ashby Folvile; continued from vol. II. p. 376.

Arms: Sable, three leopards' heads paſſant, Gules, three fleurs de lis Argent; Plate V. fig. 11.

Ralph Woodford, eſq. of Aſhby Folvile, ſon and heir of Thomas Woodford, eſq. and grandſon and heir of ſir Robert Woodford, knt. and Iſabel Nevill his wife. = Elizabeth, dau. and heir of William Villers, of Brokeſby.

1. William Woodford, ſon and heir apparent, d. vitâ patris. = Anne, dau. of Simon Norwich, of Brampton, co. Northampton, eſq.
2. Matthew, married Lucy, dau. of William Brokeſby, of Leiceſterſhire, and died ſ. p.
Melicent, dau. of Thomas Markham, eſq. 15 Hen. VII. firſt wife, died ſ. p. = 3. John. = Mary, dau. of John Jerningham, of Suffolk, 2d wife.
4. Robert, ſee [A] below.
5. Thomas, ſ. p.
Jane, wife of . . . . . . Nevill, of Ragnell, co. Nott.

John, ſon and heir of John Turvill, of Newhall, co. Leiceſter. = Margaret, only dau. and heir, died 1507; conſanguinea and heir to her grandfather. = Thomas Morton[1], nephew of John Morton, archbp. of Canterbury, died Dec 25, 1516.
John. = Mary, dau. of . . . . . . Boſome.
2. Stephen.
3. William, 21 Hen. VIII. = Anne, dau. of . . . . . . Bingham.
Two daughters.

1. John, æt. 19, 1516. = Ellen, dau. of John Roper.
2. William, ſenior.
3. William, junior.
Cicely.
Agnes.
Helen.
1. Edward, died abroad, ſ. p.
2. Thomas, of Muſton, co. Leic. æt. 80, 1604. = Anne, dau. of . . . . . Lawſon.
Robert. =
Elizabeth, wife of . . . Fox, of Asfordby, co. Leic. æt. 40, 1604.

Mary[2], dau. and ſole heir, æt. 2 months in 1521.
William, 1604.

[A] Robert Woodford, fourth ſon of Ralph Woodford, of Aſhby Folvile. = Alice, dau. of Thomas Gate, of Brightwell, in the pariſh of Burnham, Berks.

1. Thomas. = Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Blount, of Iver, co. Bucks.
2. Edward.
3. Chriſtopher.
4. Euſtace.
Mary.
Margery.
Elizabeth.

1. James Woodford. = Katharine, dau. of Thomas Rede, of Borſtal, co. Bucks.
2. Gamaliel.
3. Thomas.
4. Robert.
5. Silveſter.
1. Anne, the wife of . . . . Dogell, of Lamport.
2. Elizabeth, wife of . . . Webb, of Weldon.
3. Urſula, wife of Robert Light, of Radway, co. Warwick.
4. Dorothy, wife of John Biſhop, of David's.
5. Sibill, wife of John Ayloffs, of Southampton.
6. Cecilia, wife of . . . Weſton, co. Oxon.
7. Suſan.
8. Alice.

1. Robert. = Urſula Colt.
2. Edward.
3. Jane.
4. Anne.
5. Mabell.
6. Urſula.

1. James.
2. William.
1. Mary.
2. Katharine.
3. Elizabeth.

The true Pedigree of the WODFORDS, alias WOODFORDS, of Ashby Folvile, co. Leiceſter, drawn by Mr. Francis Peck from the following Evidences.

I. Willielmus Woodford, ob. 1378. = Alicia filia domini Walteri Preſte, militis.

Rogerus le Brabazon, miles.

II. Johannes Woodford. = Matilda filia & hæres Euſtachii Folvylle.

Willielmus le Brabazon, nepos Rogeri.

Johannes le Brabazon.

III. Dominus Robertus Woodford, miles. = Johanna, filia & hæres Johannis le Brabazon.

IV. Dominus Robertus Woodford, miles. = ... filia domini Willielmi Truſſell, militis.

V. Johannes Woodford, ob. 1402. = ... filia domini Johannis Watton, militis.

VI. Robertus Woodford, arm. = Iſabella, filia domini Johannis Nevylle, militis.

VII. Dominus Rob. Woodford, miles. = ...
Johanna, uxor domini Laur. Berkley, mil.
Agnes, uxor domini Tho. Chetwynd, mil.
Iſabella, uxor Laur. Sherrard.

VIII. 1. Thomas, ob. vitâ patris.
2. Gualterus.
3. Johannes Woodford, ſenior. = ...
4. Humphr. [obiit 7 Edw. IV; filio & hærede ſuo Thoma.[3]]
5. Radulphus.
6. Johannes, jun.
Mabella, uxor Sim. Herdeby.
Elizabetha, uxor Rob. Hill.
Beatrix.
Margareta.

IX. Radulphus Woodford. = Johanna, filia Willielmi Vyllyers.

X. Willielmus Woodford. = Anna, filia Simonis Norwych.
2. Matt. Woodford. = Lucia, filia Gulielmi Brokyſby.
3. Johannes Woodford. = { 1. Milicent, filia Tho. Markham, arm. 2. Maria, filia Johan. Jernyngham, arm. }
4. Robertus Woodford. = Alicia, fil. & hær. Tho. at Gate, de Brightwell, arm.
5. Thomas, obiit ſ. p.
Johanna.

Margareta, = { 1. Johan. Turvylle. 2. Gul. Turvylle. 3. Tho. Morton[4]. }
Johannes Woodford.
Stephanus.
Willielmus.

Johannes Morton.

XI. Thomas Woodford. = Elizabetha, filia Richardi Blounte, arm.
2. Edwardus.
3. Chriſtopherus.
4. Willielmus.

XII. Jacobus Woodford. = Katharina, una fil. & hær. Thomæ Rede, arm.
2. Gamaliel.
3. Thomas.
4. Robertus.
Anna.
Elizabetha.
Urſula.
Dorothea.
Sibylla.
Cecilia.
Suſanna.
Alicia.

XIII. Robertus Woodford. = Urſula filia . . . . Colt.
2. Edwardus.
Jana.
Anna.
Mabella.
Urſula.

XIV. Jacobus.
2. Gulielmus.
Maria.
Katherina.
Elizabetha.

---

[1] Arms: Ermine and Gules, in the 2d and 3d quarters a goat's head eraſed Argent, armed Or; Plate V. fig. 18.

[2] Afterwards married to Francis Smith; ſee p. 27.

[3] Eſch. 7 Edw. IV. N° 9. Leic.

[4] Obiit 1516. Burton.

Memoirs of the Family of the Woodfords of Aſhby Folvile, extracted (by Mr. Peck) out of two folio MSS. once belonging to Peter Le Neve, eſq. one "Coats of Arms of Woodford Pedigree, painted;" and the other marked 862[1], in the printed catalogue of the ſaid Mr. Le Neve's MSS.; which MSS. are now in the hands of Mr. Thomas Martin, of Palſgrave near Aye, co. Suffolk, gent. Jan. 30, 1732-3 (See alſo the monuments of the Woodfords in Aſhby Folvile church; and the Woodford Chartulary, in Bibl. Cotton. Claudius A. XIII.)

I. Memorandum, quòd Willielmus Wodford fuit ſeiſitus de maneriis de Wyfordby & Brentingby, & certis terris in Thorp-Arnolde, in com' Leic', de antiquâ hereditate. Et deſponſavit filiam Walteri Preſt, militis [de Melton in com' Leic']; per quam habuit certas terras & tenementa in Miltoune Moubray & Burtounn S. Lazari [in com' predict']. Et habuerunt exitum inter ipſos Johannem Wodforde, &c. Arms: Wodford; impaling, Ermine, a talbot paſſant Sable, Preſt; Plate V. fig. 19. Obiit 2 Ric. II. "Juratores dicunt, quòd Wiħus de Wodeford tenuit, die quo obiit, manerium de Sproxton, in com' Leic', de Domino Principe [nota, non de Domino Rege], per ſervicium militare (viz. per ſervicium feodi unius militis), ut de honore de Huntington. Et quòd Joħes, filius predicti Wiłłi, eſt ejus heres propinquior[2]."

II. Memorandum, quòd antedictus Johannes Wodford deſponſavit [Matildam] filiam & heredem Euſtacii Folevylle; per quam habuit exitum Robertum Wodford, primum militem ejuſdem nominis; & per eam habuit maneria de Aſhby Foleville & Newbold Foleville in com' Leic'. Arms: Quarterly, Woodford and Preſt; impaling, Folvile; fig. 20.

III. Mem', quòd dictus Robertus Wodford, miles, deſponſavit filiam & heredem Rogeri[3] Brabazon, militis [de Eſtwell in com' Leic']; per quam habuit maneria de Sproxtounne & Garthorp in com' Leic'. Et habuerunt exitum inter ipſos Robertum Woodford, militem. Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Woodford, 2. Preſt, 3. Folvile; impaling, Gules, on a bend Or, three martlets Sable, Brabazon; fig. 21.

IV. Mem', quòd dictus Robertus Wodford, miles, deſponſavit filiam Willielmi Truſſell, militis. Et habuerunt exitum inter ipſos Johannem Wodford. Arms: Quarterly, Woodford, Preſt, Folvile, and Brabazon; impaling Argent, fretty Gules, on every joint a bezant Or, Truſſel; fig. 22.

V. Memorand', quòd antedictus Johannes Wodford, miles, deſponſavit .... filiam Johannis Watton, militis. Et habuerunt exitum inter ipſos Robertum Wodford, armigerum. Arms: Quarterly, Woodford, Preſt, Folvile, and Brabazon; impaling, Argent, on a bend Sable, three bezants Or, betwixt ſix croſſlets of the ſecond, Watton. "Juratores dicunt, quòd Willielmus la Zouche de Haringworth, miles, obiit ſeiſitus de dimidio feodi militis in Brentingby, in com' Leic', quod Johannes Wodford tenuit[4]." J. W. obiit 3 Hen. IV. "Juratores dicunt, quòd Joħes Wodeford tenuit 6 meſſuagia & 6 virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in Wyvordby; ac unum meſſuagium & duas acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Melton Mowbray & Sixtenby, in com' Leic'. Et quòd Robertus, filius Johannis Wodeford, eſt heres ejus propinquior[5]."

VI. Mem', quòd antedictus Robertus Wodford, miles, deſponſavit [Iſabellam] filiam Johannis Nevyll de Rolleſton [in com' Notting']. Et habuerunt exitum inter eos, 1. Robertum Wodford, militem; 2. Joannam, uxorem Laurentii Berkeley, militis; 3. Agnetem, uxorem Thome Chetwod, militis; 4. Iſabellam, uxorem Laurentii Sherard. Arms: Woodford, Preſt, Folvile, Brabazon; impaling, Gules, a ſaltire Ermine, Neville; fig. 23.

Here may ye ſee a true pedigree of ſir Thomas Nevyll, knight, lord of Rolleſton beſide Newark, how he wedded dame Cecilie, daughter of ſir Guy Blankminſter, of Cornwall, lord of the Iſle of Sully, and of other many fair lordſhips in the ſame country; and the ſame ſir Thomas and dame Cecilie his wife had iſſue ſir William Nevyll, the good knight and lord of Rolleſtone. Then follows a long pedigree of Nevill, and the marriage articles of ſir Robert Woodford.

On the day of marriage of the ſaid ſir Robert Woodford, and of Iſabel his wife, at Rolleſton, on the Saturday, 5 May, 1403, the ſaid Mabell of Woodford delivered to the ſaid ſir William Nevyll lands and tenements, rents and ſervices, to the value truly extented 40 marks yearly over the reprize, for the ſuſtenance and for the array of the ſaid Robert and Iſabel, to have and to hold the aforeſaid lands and tenements, rents and ſervices, to the ſaid ſir William Nevill and dame Elizabeth his wife, and to their executors, to the time that the ſaid ſir Robert come to pleyn age; that is to ſay,

	£.	s.	d.
From John Boteler, for the farm of Sproxton, — —	13	6	9
Thomas de Wymondham and others, — —	1	11	0
William Rawe and others in Garthorp, — —	2	12	4
Thomas Tayllor, in Stapulford,	0	5	0
Malkeyn Mackerell and others in Burton St. Lazarus, —	2	17	1
Thomas Retherby and others in Melton Mowbray, —	6	17	0½
The Grange of Burton aforeſaid,	0	2	7

VII. We do not find whom ſir Robert Woodford (the ſon of ſir Robert and Iſabel) married; but he was married, and had iſſue, 1. Thomas Woodford, who died before his father; 2. John Woodford ſenior; 3. Walter; 4. Humphrey; 5. Ralf; 6. John junior; 7. Mabell, married to Simon Hardby; 8. Elizabeth, married to Robert Hill; 9. Beatrice; 10. Margaret.

In 1447, ſir Robert Woodford, being ſeiſed of the manors of Brentingby, Wyverdby, Garthorpe, Sproxton, and Newbold Folvile, with 62 meſſuages, 60 tofts, and 2 mills there, with the advowſon of the church of Wyverdby, co. Leiceſter[6]; as alſo of three meſſuages, &c. in Eſton and Stoke, co. Lincoln; and likewiſe of 46 acres of land in Wygenhale and Tylney, co. Norfolk; gave, by a fine levied for that purpoſe, the manor of Newbold Folvile, with 2 meſſuages, 7 tofts, and 5 virgates of land there, to Walter Wodford his ſecond [ſurviving] ſon; the manors of Brentingby and Wyverdby, with 28 meſſuages there, to Humphrey Wodford his third ſon; 16 meſſuages, 4 tofts, 2 virgates, &c. in Knipton, to Ralph Wodford his fourth ſon; the manor of Garthorpe, 6 meſſuages, 6 tofts, 7 virgates, 1 carucate, 10 acres of meadow, and the rent of one race of ginger, in Garthorpe, to John Wodford junior, his fifth ſon; with remainder to John Wodford ſenior, his eldeſt ſon, in tail; with remainder to Walter, Humphrey, Ralph, and John Wodford junior, in poſt-tail, and to their heirs male; with remainder to their heirs; with remainder to Mabell, the wife of Simon Herdeby; Elizabeth, the wife of Robert Hill, Beatrice and Margaret, his daughters, in tail; with remainder to Joan, the wife of ſir Laurence Berkley, knight; Agnes, the wife of Thomas Chetwod, knight; and Iſabel, late the wife of Laurence Scherard; and to the heirs of the ſaid Joan, Agnes, and Iſabel, in tail; with remainder to the right heirs of him the ſaid ſir Robert Wodford.

Mr. Burton [in his printed Book[7]] ſays, that Walter, Humphrey, Ralph, and John Woodford junior, abovementioned, were the grandſons, not the ſons, of ſir Robert Woodford laſt abovementioned; but that, as appears by the very words of the fine itſelf, is a manifeſt error; [which indeed he had himſelf diſcovered; and it ſtands corrected in the Chetwynd MS. already cited under Sproxton[8].] Mr. Burton alſo, ſpeaking of the above diviſion of ſir Robert Woodford's lands among his ſons (or grandſons as he calls them), makes this obſervation: "By reaſon of which diviſion ſo made, this antient family (which had continued long in great account, eſtate, and livelihood,) was in a ſhort ſpace utterly decayed and gone; and, as I have heard, not any part of theſe lands (thus diſpoſed) now be in the tenure or name of any heir male deſcended from any of thoſe five brothers[1]." This is alſo another great miſtake; for, this diviſion of the eſtate, ſo far from being the ruin of the family, never took effect, and, conſequently, did it no harm at all. For the truth of this aſſertion, hear the words of Robert Woodford, great grandſon of ſir Robert:

---

[1] Talbot earl of Shrewſbury's pedigree, ſeveral papers and old writings relative thereto, in a port-folio. P. Le Neve.

[2] Eſch. 2 Ric. II. N° 55. Leic.

[3] Rectiùs Johannis; vide Eſch. 34 Hen. VI. infra.

[4] Eſch. 19 Ric. II. N° 52. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 3 Hen. IV. N° 22. Leic.

[6] Fines for divers Counties, 26 Hen. VI. Lign. 4. N° 69.

[7] Antiquities of Leiceſterſhire, p. 264.

[8] See vol. II. p. 327.

"Memorandum, that Syr Robert Wodford gauffe by fyne to hys younger ſones the manours of Wyffurby, Brentyngby, Sproxton, Thorp Arnold, Burton S. Lazarus, and Knypeton, to diſerytt Raufe hys eldyſde [ſon's] ſone, bycauſe of a grouge that he had agenſte the ſaid Rauffe; and that was, bycauſe the Villars had marryd hym agenſte the ſaid Robert's mynde; and, by counſell of hys younger ſones, he dyd burne two quarters of evedences yn Aſcheby haule, as oulde men could teſtyfye; and then the ſaid Raufe, after hys dyſſeſe, enteryd yn the manour of Aſcheby; and founde a dede, by the which the vycar of Aſſcheby was ynfeffed; and he over-lyffed the other feffes; and gave a ſtate of hys .... and enteryd yn the ſaid manor, and ſo did voyd the fyne. And I Robert Wodford ſay, of my fydelyte and truthe, that my fader, Rauff Wodford, ſhewed me the dede yn hys clouſett by the grette chamber, and ſaid that by that dede he held all hys lands. The whyche dede is yn the poſſeſſyon of my brodyr Matthew Wodford, or elſe in my brodyr John's[2]. ROBERT WODFORD."

No wonder then, "if no part of the lands (diſpoſed as above in the fine) be now in the tenure or name of any heir male deſcended from any of thoſe five brothers." And, whereas Mr. Burton adds, "and ſome of the male [heirs of theſe five brothers] live to be brought to a low ebb of fortune:" this, if true, was certainly not through any ſuch diviſion of the lands of this family among them (as he imagines), but rather for the want of it.

In the Woodford Chartulary the particulars of the abovementioned fine are thus more minutely detailed:

"Here may ye ſee, how that ſir Robert Woodford, knight, and lord of Aſhby Folvile, hath given to his well-beloved ſons aforeſaid, that is for to ſay, to every one of them by themſelves, a parcell of lyffelode lying in divers towns, as ye may underſtand truly in the fine here afterward; the which lyffelode the ſaid ſir Robert had after the deceaſe of John of Woodford of Brentingby, his father, by deſcent of heritage, and ſtanding in fee ſimple; for it was purchaſed, all the lands and tenements that ever the Woodfords had, in Leiceſterſhire, Lincolnſhire, Norfolk, Staffordſhire, and Derbyſhire, except Aſhby Folvile. And in faith there never was none of the Woodfords that ever enfeoffed any of their wives in no manner of land nor rent, as by way of joint feoffment in taille; and that was right an ungentil deed as methinkes in good faith, and as ye may ſee in all the fines and deeds well enſealed of all their purchaſings."

A fine made by ſir Robert of Woodford, at Weſtminſter, in the Utas of St. Martin, the reign of king Henry the Sixth, after the Conqueſt year the twenty-fifth, and recorded the Octave of St. Michael, anno 26 Henry VI. between John Danyel, plaintiff, and Robert Woodford, defendant, concerning the manors of Brentyngby, Wyverdeby, Garthorp, Sproxton, and Newbold Folvile, with their appurtenances, 62 meſſuages, 60 tofts, and two mills, 66 yard-lands, one carucate, and 56 acres of land, 142 acres of meadow, 90 acres of paſture, and ten ſhillings rent, and the rent of one capon, two pounds of cumin, two pair of doves, two pounds of pepper, one race of ginger, with the appurtenances, in Brentyngby, Wyverdeby, Garthorp, Sproxton, Newbold Folvile, Thorp-Arnold, Stapulford, Melton Mowbray, Fretheby, and Gnypton, and the advowſon of the church of Wyverdeby, in Leiceſterſhire, and of 3 meſſuages, 4 tofts, 2 oxgangs of land, 6 acres of meadow, and 6*s*. rent, with the appurtenances, in Eſton and South Stoke, in Lincolnſhire, and 46 acres of land, with the appurtenances, in Wyggenhale and Tylney, in Norfolk, veſting the above recited premiſes in the aforeſaid John Danyel and his heirs; and the ſaid John reconveying the whole of the ſame to the aforenamed Robert Woodford for the term of his life, without impeachment of waſte.—After ſeveral limitations, the MS. adds, "The remainder of all the whole lyffelod remains again to the right heirs of ſir Robert Woodford, knight, in fee ſimple, if all die without iſſue: that God forbid, if it be his will!"

In 1450, ſir Robert Woodford made another aſſignment of this lordſhip to truſtees: "Ego Robertus Wodford, miles, dedi, &c. Johanni Bellers, Thome Palmer, Willo Villers, Rad̃o Wodford ſeniori de Gnypton, Johanni Wodford juniori de Garthorp, & Galfrido Sherrard, armigeris, manerium meum de Aſsheby Folevyle, in com' Leic', &c. Hiis teſtibus; Thomâ Aſheby de Louſby, Johanne Vylers de Brokeſby, Anthonio Mallory de Croxton, Thomâ Derby de Gaddeſby, Humfrido Wodeforde de Wyfordeby, & multis aliis. Dat' apud Aſsheby Folevyle predict', 7° die menſis Maii, anno regni regis Henrici Sexti poſt Conqueſtum Anglie triceſimo[3]." Sir Robert died in 1455; and,

VIII. Thomas, his eldeſt ſon, being dead before him;

IX. Ralph the ſon of Thomas, and grandſon of Robert [which Ralph, as before related, married a Villiers] was found to be his heir.

"Juratores dicunt, quòd Robertus Wodeford, miles, ſeiſitus fuit de manerio de Brantingby, & quòd tenetur de Johanne la Zouch milite; manerio de Wyverby, & quòd (exceptis quatuor carucatis terre, parcellâ ejuſdem manerii, que tenentur de d̃no rege, ut de ducatu ſuo Lancaſtrie, per fidelitatem tantùm) tenetur de Johanne duce Norfolcie; medietate manerii de Gnypton, & quòd tenetur de d̃no rege, ut de ducatu ſuo Lancaſtrie, per fidelitatem tantùm; uno meſſuagio, treſcentis acris terre, centum acris prati, & treſcentis acris paſture, in Burton S. Lazari, & quòd tenentur de Johanne Bellers armigero; duodecim meſſuagiis, ſex toftis, treſcentis acris terre, & centum acris paſture, in Melton Mowbray, & quòd tenentur de Johanne duce Norfolcie; quatuor meſſuagiis, ſexaginta acris terre, quadraginta acris prati, centum acris paſture, in Erleſthorpe, & quòd tenentur de Johanne la Zouch, milite; duobus meſſuagiis, duobus toftis, ac centum acris paſture, in Stapulford, & quòd tenentur de d̃no rege, ut de ducatu ſuo Lancaſtrie, per fidelitatem tantùm. Et quòd quidem Rogerus la Brabazon miles dedit Willielmo le Brabazon, nepoti ſuo, manerium ſuum de Sproxton, & quòd tenetur de Edwardo principe Wallie; & manerium ſuum de Garthorp, & quòd tenetur de d̃no rege, ut de ducatu ſuo Lancaſtrie, per fidelitatem tantùm: Et Willus ſic fuit ſeiſitus; & habuit exitum Johannem la Brabazon: Et ſic fuit Johannes ſeiſitus; & habuit exitum Johannam, filiam & heredem. Et Johanna cepit in virum Willielmum Wodeford; & habuerunt exitum Johannem Wodeford. Et [Willielmus obiit; &] Johannes & .... uxor ejus fuerunt ſeiſiti; & habuerunt exitum Robertum Wodeford; & ſic ſeiſitus fuit Robertus. Et quòd Johannes Folevill fuit ſeiſitus de manerio de Aſheby Foleville; & quòd tenetur de d̃no rege in capite per viceſimam partem unius feodi militis. Et quòd Robertus Wodeford fuit ſeiſitus de uno meſſuagio, centum acris terre, & xx acris prati, cum pertin', in Sproxton. Et quòd Radulphus Wodeford eſt conſanguineus[4] & heres ejuſdem Roberti[5]."

---

[1] Dr. Fuller, ſpeaking of an earlier Thomas Woodford of Sproxton, who was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 16 Ric. II. 1383, confounds him with the later Thomas; and ſays, "He was the eldeſt ſon of ſir Robert de Woodford, a wealthy knight;" and adds (following the miſtake of Mr. Burton) "who, dying before his father, left five ſons, John, Walter, Humphrey, Ralph, and John. Sir Robert their grandfather, out of deſign to perpetuate his poſterity (adventured in five bottoms), made all his grand-children in effect elder brothers, dividing his vaſt eſtate among them; an equal unequal partition, to be injurious to the heir (without his demerit), that he might be bountiful to his brethren: but it thrived accordingly; for that great family (which had long continued in great accompt and eſtate), by reaſon of this diviſion, in ſhort ſpace utterly decayed; not any part of their lands (thus diſpoſed) now in the tenure of the name; and ſome of the male heirs deſcended from the five brethren now living in a low condition; and no wonder, they ſoon made a hand of all, where the thumb was weakened, to ſtrengthen the four fingers." Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 140.

[2] This tranſcript by Mr. Peck differs in ſome particulars from that made by Dr. Vernon, as printed in vol. II. p. 23.

[3] Harl. MSS. 7178. N° 224; ex evidentiis Thomæ Shirley, militis.

[4] i. e. his next of kin; namely, his grandſon, his eldeſt ſon's ſon, whom he had a mind to diſinherit.

[5] Eſch. 34 Hen. VI.

IX. Mem', quòd antedictus Radulphus Wodford [domino Roberto Wodford, milite, avo ſuo, adhuc vivente] deſponſavit .... filiam Willielmi Vyllyars de Brokeſbie in com' Leic'; & habuerunt exitum inter ipſos Willielmum, Mattheum, Johannem, Robertum, Thomam, & multos alios. Arms: Quarterly, Woodford, Preſt, Folvile, Brabazon; impaling, Quarterly, 1. Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent, Villiers antient. 2. and 3. Per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, Beler; Pl. V. fig. 24.

X. Mem', quòd Robertus[1] Wodford, quartus filius antedicti Radulphi, deſponſavit Aliciam, filiam & heredem Thome att Gate, de Burnham, in com' Buck', arm'; per quam habuit, in maritagio ejuſdem, manerium de Brutewell, ac certas terras in Burneham, Brutewell, Hucham, Doneye, & Taplowe, ut pateat per feoffamentum dicti Thome Gate factum, datum die Veneris proximâ poſt feſtum Sc̄i Gregorii, 4 Hen. VII. Et predictus Radulphus Wodford dedit, per feoffamentum, manerium de Knypton, unà cum advocatione eccleſie ejuſdem, in com' Leic', prefatis Roberto & Alicie, & heredibus dicti Roberti. Dat' 3 Aug. 4 Hen. VIII. Et habuerunt exitum inter ipſos Thomam & Euſtachium. Arms: Quarterly, Woodford, Preſt, Folvile, Brabazon; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4, Sable, ten bezants Or; on a chief Ermine, three lozenges Gules, Gate; 2. and 3, Gules, a feſs nebulée Or; Plate V. fig. 25.

XI. Pedegradus Radulphi Woodford, armigeri, conſanguinei [nepotis] & heredis Rob' Wodford, militis:

Radulphus Woodford, armiger, habuit exitum quinque filios, viz. Willielmum, Mattheum, Johannem, Robertum, Thomam; & unam filiam, Johannam. Willielmus Wodford deſponſavit Annam, filiam Simonis Norwiche de Brampton in com' Northampton'; & ex eâ habuit Margaretam, que primò deſponſata fuit Johanni Turveyll, filio & heredi Johannis Turveyll, armigeri, domini de Newhall in com' Leyc. Et poſtea predictus Joh̄es Turveyll, filius, obiit anno etatis ejus duodecimo. Et notandum, quòd, poſt ejus obitum, predicta Margareta, ex ejus propriâ voluntate & conſenſu, contraxit matrimonium cum Willielmo Turveyll, fratre predicti Jonannis Turveyll; & deſponſati fuerunt in eccleſiâ parochiali de Thurleſton. Et, poſt dictum matrimonium ita ſolemnizatum in facie eccleſie predicte de Thurleſton, pater dicti Will̄i optinuit diſpenſationem collectoris d̄ni pape, eodem tempore exiſtentis Londini, qui dicebat ipſum habere talem poteſtatem diſpenſandi in caſu predicto. Et ſic, poſt predictum ſecundum matrimonium inter predictos Willielmum & Margaretam ſolemnizatum in facie eccleſie predicte, & virtute diſpenſationis collectoris d̄ni pape, pendente lite in eodem caſu coram Johanne Morton, archiepiſcopo Cantuarienſi, apud ejus audientiam in eccleſiâ de Lambit apud London', predicta Margareta contraxit matrimonium cum Thomâ Morton, nepote predicti archiepiſcopi, per malum conſilium eorum; & nupta fuit ſibi, vivente marito ſuo Willielmo[2]; &, quod verum eſt, Deus novit, "cui nichil eſt abſconditum, quia omnia nuda & aperta ſunt oculis ejus." Matheus Wodford deſponſavit Luciam, filiam Willielmi Brookeſby. Johannes Wodford deſponſavit Milicentiam, filiam Thome Marketin, armigeri; &, poſt obitum dicte Milicentie, prefatus Joh̄es Wodford deſponſavit Mariam, filiam Johannis Jernyngham, arm', de com' Suff'; & ex eâ genuit Johannem, Stephanum, Willielmum, & duas filias. Robertus Wodford, arm', deſponſavit Aliciam, filiam & heredem Thome Gate, arm', de Burham in com' Buck'; & ex eâ habuit exitum Thomam, Edwardum, Chriſtopherum, Euſtacium, & multos alios. Thomas Wodford obiit apud Calyſiam ſine herede.

XII. Mem', quòd antedictus Thomas Wodford deſponſavit Elizabetham, filiam Richardi Blounte, de Iwer, in com' Buck', arm'; & ab eâ genuit Jacobum, Gamalielem, Thomam, & Robertum; ac octo filias, Annam, Elizabetham, Urſulam, Dorotheam, Sibillam, Ciceleam, Suſannam, & Aliciam. Arms: Quarterly of ſix, 1. Woodford, 2. Preſt, 3. Folvile, 4. Brabazon, 5. Gate, 6. Gules, a feſs nebulée Or; impaling, Quarterly of ſixteen, 1. Barry, nebulée of ſix, Or and Sable, Blount; 2. Or, a caſtle triple-towered Azure, Blount; 3. Sable, a pallet Argent; 4. Or, a wolf rampant Argent; 5. Vair, Azure and Argent; 6. Argent, two wolves paſſant Sable, in a bordure Or, charged with ten ſaltires Gules; 7. Azure, a chevron between three pheons Or; 8. as the third; 9. as the ſame; 10. as the fourth; 11. as the firſt; 12. as the ſecond; 13. as the ſeventh; 14. as the third; 15. as the fifth; 16. as the ſixth; fig. 26.

XII. Memorandum, quòd antedictus Jacobus Wodford deſponſavit Katharinam, unam filiarum & heredum Thome Rede, arm', de Borſtal in com' Buck' (qui quidem Thomas erat frater Will̄i Rede, militis); & ab eâ genuit Robertum, Edwardum, Janam, Annam, Mabellam, & Urſulam. Arms: Quarterly, 1 Woodford, 2. Preſt, 3. Folvile, 4. Brabazon, 5. Gate, 6. Gules, a feſs nebulée Or; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, three ſparrows Or, Rede; 2. and 3. Party per chevron, Gules and Argent, three unicorns' heads couped, counterchanged; fig. 27.

XIII. Mem', quòd antedictus Robertus Wodford deſponſavit Urſulam Colt, filiam ...... Colt, de com' Buck'; & ex eâ genuit Jacobum & Gulielmum filios; & Mariam, Katherinam, & Elizabetham, filias.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Aſhby Folvile was rated at 3*l.* 3*s.*; and at the ſame ſum in the ſubſidy of 1445, when an abatement was made of 7*s.* 4*d.*

Thomas Morton, nephew to the archbiſhop of Canterbury (who had married Margaret, daughter and heir of William Woodford, and conſanguinea and heir to her grandfather Ralph), poſſeſſed at his death, Dec. 15, 1516, the manors of Aſhby Folvile, Garthorp, and Sproxton, which he held by courteſy after the death of his wife (who died in 1507); and John Morton junior, his ſon and heir, was then 18 years old[3].

Aug. 21, 1521, John Morton died ſeiſed of the manor of Aſhby Folvile, then valued at £20. a year, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice. He held alſo the manors of Garthorpe and Sproxton in this county; and 3 meſſuages and 30 acres of land in Stoke and Eſton, co. Lincoln; and Mary, his poſthumous daughter and ſole heir, by Elen daughter of John Roper, was aged 2 months when the inquiſition was taken[4]. This lady was afterwards married to Francis Smith, eſq. (ſon of ſir John Smith, remembrancer of the Exchequer, and afterwards one of the barons of that court[5] by patent 31 Henry VIII); and,

in

---

[1] Iſte Robertus natus fuit 9 Oct. 1460.

[2] This William Turvyll, in teſtament of his ill uſage by this his wife, took for his motto,

A vous loyal, marry par torte;

"To you loyal, married wrongly or through ignorance."

This motto is alſo ſet under the arms of all the Woodfords above; but it was, doubtleſs, through the ignorance of the painter, who neither underſtood French, nor the occaſion of the thing itſelf.

[3] By an Inquiſition at Leiceſter, 28 July, 9 Hen. VIII. (Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. pp. 109. 134. 378.) it appears that the manor of Aſhby Folvile came into the family by Mabell daughter and heir of John Folvile; the manor of Sproxton by the daughter and heir of John Brabazon; the manors of Brentingby and Wyfordby by the daughter and heir of William Woodford.

[4] Eſch. 15 April, 13 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 456.) pp. 133. 378, 379; vol. IV. (MSS. 459.) p. 109.

[5] See vol. II. p. 885.—"Of this family," ſays Dugdale, "I may not omit here to obſerve, what I have ſeen atteſted by ſir William Dethick, ſome time Garter principal King of Arms, and Robert Cooke, Clarenceux; viz. that the ſaid John Smyth (the baron) was grand-child to John Carrington; and the ſaid John Carrington lineally deſcended from ſir Michael Carrington, knt. ſtandard bearer to the famous king Richard the Firſt in the Holy Land. And of this John Carrington, as to the occaſion that he changed his name to Smyth, they do ſpecially certify from the credit of an antient manuſcript (penès Henr. Smith de Creſſing Temple in com. Eſſex, ar.) written with the proper hand of him the ſaid John in king Henry the Fourth's time; that in his youth he was bred up in Gaſcoigne under ſir Thomas Nevill, in the ſervice of king Richard II.; and after the deceaſe of an elder brother called Edmund, that he returned into England, where he was likewiſe entertained in the ſaid king's ſervice: but afterwards, upon the depoſal of the ſaid king Richard by Henry of Lancaſter, being conſtrained to flee into France, in regard that he took part with the earls of Huntingdon, Saliſbury, and Kent, &c. againſt the ſaid Henry of Lancaſter, after one year's abode in Paris, he travelled, with one Robert Arden, eſq. his companion, into Italy; where they ſerved under John Galeas duke of Millain, againſt the emperor Rupert; and, after the death of the ſaid duke, returned into Brabant, where they met with two in 1563, ſhe died poſſeſſed of the manor of Aſhby Folvile; which, by the courteſy of England, became for his life the property of her huſband[1]; and which he lived to enjoy for a long term of years, till 1606, when he was ſucceeded by his ſon and heir George Smith, eſq.

In 1564, there were 27 families in Aſhby Folvile; and in Gaddeſby (at that time returned as a hamlet of Aſhby) there were 28 families.

At an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter, 16 Jan. 5 Jac. I. it was found that George Smith, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Aſhby Folvile; alſo of divers meſſuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Aſhby Folvile and Bareſby; alſo of five meſſuages, two cottages, thirteen virgates of land, and a windmill, in Aſhby Folvile, all held by knight's ſervice; that he died 31 July laſt; and that ſir Francis Smith, knight, his ſon and heir, was aged 35 years and upwards[2].

This ſir Francis, in 1617, obtained a grant of free-warren for his lands in the counties of Leiceſter, Warwick, and Salop[3]; and was owner of Aſhby Folvile at his death in 1629. He was ſucceeded by his ſon ſir Charles Smith, the only freeholder here in 1630; who afterwards manifeſted his fidelity to king Charles I, in the times of his greateſt diſtreſs, by divers conſiderable aids; in conſideration whereof, he was, by letters patent, dated 31 Oct. 1641, advanced to the degree of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Carington baron of Wootton; and, on the 4th of November following, to the dignity of a viſcount, by the title of viſcount Carington of Beresford within the province of Connaught in Ireland. He became in conſequence the object of plunder to the Parliamentarians; and accordingly on the 25th of September, 1646, his eſtates were directed to be ſold[4]; and in the minutes of the Committee for Sequeſtration we find this entry: "Nov. 1, 1647. Whereas this committee have, the 14th of Auguſt laſt, granted the yearly ſum of £50. out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Aſhby Folvile, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Charles Smith, Papiſt and delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Euſtace Feilding, miniſter of the pariſh church of Aſhby Folvile aforeſaid; and this committee are informed, that ſeveral profits of the ſaid impropriation lie in the common fields of Croſon and Bareſby in the ſaid county: It is ordered, that the ſaid £50. a year be paid out of the profits of the ſaid rectory, ariſing as well out of the ſaid fields of Croſon and Bareſby aforeſaid, as out of the ſaid pariſh of Aſhby Folvile; which the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay unto him accordingly[5]."—The lady Carington was alſo fined 714*l.* 8*s.* as a compoſition for her eſtate at Aſhby Folvile.

"Sir John Smith, brother to the lord Carington, was ſlain at the battle of Cheriton Down, 1644. He had been trained up in his youth in the war of Flanders, being of a Roman Catholic family; and had long the reputation of one of the beſt officers of horſe. As ſoon as the firſt troubles appeared in Scotland, he betook himſelf to the ſervice of his own prince; and, from the beginning of the war to his own end, performed many ſignal actions of courage[6]."—This gentleman was created a knight-banneret, in the battle of Edge Hill, for recovering the king's ſtandard from the rebels; and is the laſt perſon of that order we read of[7].

"Sir John Smith knighted for his ſervice; viz. he tooke 26 colours (whereof one a major's), redeemed the royal ſtandard, reſcued Col. Richard Fielding (taken), and Sir Gervais Scroop (who was ſtript naked and had received 19 wounds), and took from our enemie 3 braſſe peeces. He was afterwards major generall of the Weſterne army under the cōmand of the lord Hopton; and at the battail neere Alresford, in Hampſhire, on Martii 29°, 1644°, he was wounded, and next day died[8]."—He was buried in the South-eaſt corner of the South aile adjoining the choir of the cathedral of Chriſt Church, Oxford; where, on a black marble grave-ſtone, is this inſcription, which was written by Anthony Wood:

"Here lyeth the body of
ye valiant and moſt worthy gent. Sr JOHN SMITH, k^{t}, 3^{d} ſon of Sr FRANCIS SMITH, of Wootton Wawen in ye county of Warwick, b^{t} (deſcended of the antient family of CARINGTON from Sr MICHAEL CARINGTON, ſtandard-bearer to K. RICHARD ye I^{ſt} in the Holy Land); who with his own hands redeemed in the battell of Edge-hill ye banner royal of his moſt ſacred Majeſtie CHARLES I^{ſt}; for which ſignal valour he then received in the field
ye honour of Knighthood from his Majeſtie:
ſince which time, he in ſeveral battells gave ſingular teſtimonie of his loyalty and courage;
eſpecially in y^{t} memorable fight at Bramdean, in Hampſh. ye 29th of March;
where having rec^{d} ſeveral wounds in purſuit of victory, died at Andover ye 30th Mar. 1644;
and was the 1^{ſt} of April here interred with great ſolemnity, aged 28.
Sr FRANCIS THROCKMORTON, of Great Coughton,
in ye county of Warwick, bart. (his ſiſter's ſon), att his charge this marble hath lay'd."

Arms: Smyth, as in p. 29; a creſcent charged with a martlet for difference.

In 1655, there was collected in Aſhby Folvile and Bareſby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 19*s.* 9*d.*

Charles lord Carington, having, after the Reſtoration of king Charles the Second, occaſion to travel into France, was barbarouſly murdered, at Pontoiſe, by one of his own ſervants, in February 1664, for the purpoſe of plundering him of ſuch money and jewels as he then had with him; and was buried in the church there, with a fine tomb of marble erected to his memory[9].

He was ſucceeded by Francis his ſon; who in 1687 was owner of the manor of Aſhby Folvile, with the capital manſion-houſe, rectory, or parſonage, and advowſon of the vicarage, and divers farms and lands, in Aſhby Folvile, Bareſby, South Croxton, and Newbold Folvile. He married Juliana, daughter of ſir Thomas Walmeſley, of Dunkenhalgh, co. Lancaſter; and by her had one ſon Charles, who died in his infancy. He married, ſecondly, Anne[10] third daughter to William Herbert the firſt marquis of Powis; and died in 1701, without iſſue by his ſecond lady.

He was ſucceeded by his brother, Charles lord Carington (fourth ſon of the firſt lord); who married Frances daughter of ſir John Pate, of Syſonby; and dying in May 1706, without iſſue male, the title became extinct; but the eſtates in great part came to his kinſman, Francis Carington, of Aſton in Shropſhire, eſq. who in 1730 was ſeated at Wootton Wawen[11]; which is now the property of ſir Edward Smyth[12], bart. of Langley, co. Salop; who obtained it by marrying, Oct. 15, 1781, the only daughter[13] of Peter Holford, eſq. whoſe lady was the widow of the laſt Mr. Carington.

---

two Engliſh friers going to Rome; from whom they received tidings, that William Curſon, a younger ſon of ſir John Curſon, and couſin germain to the ſaid John, was abbot of St. Oſithes in Eſſex: whereupon he haſted towards England by Amſterdam; and arriving at Ipſwich in 1404, thence preſently ſped to St. Oſithes, where changing his name into Smyth, but privately making himſelf known to his kinſman the abbot, was by him courteouſly entertained; who beſtowed upon him good means, and advanced him in marriage to Milicent the daughter and heir of Robert Laynham, by Alice the daughter and heir to John Hende lord mayor of London.

[1] Eſch. 6 Eliz. n. 102.

[2] Eſch. Jan. 16. 5 Jac. I.

[3] 2 Pars Originalia 15 Jac. I. Rot. 79.

[4] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. IV. p. 677.

[5] From the original books of the Committee, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[6] Clarendon, vol. II. p. 475. And ſee Mr. Edward Walſingham's memoirs of this gallant hero at large, in p. 36. & ſeqq.

[7] See Loggan's Analogia Honorum, in Guillim's Heraldry, ed. 1724, p. 175; and Gutch's Oxford, p. 470.

[8] From the notes in a copy of Burton's Leiceſterſhire in Marſh's Library at Dublin; of which, ſee vol. II. p. 845.

[9] Dugdale, Baronage, vol. II. p. 471.

[10] This lady was buried at Hendon in Middleſex, May 16, 1748. Lyſons, vol. III. p. 15.

[11] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, by Thomas, vol. II. p. 811.

[12] Sir Richard Smythe, bart. the great uncle of the preſent baronet (who died in January 1736-7), had likewiſe married a Carington, niece to one of the lords Carington; by whom he had an only daughter, Clare, who died unmarried about 1751.

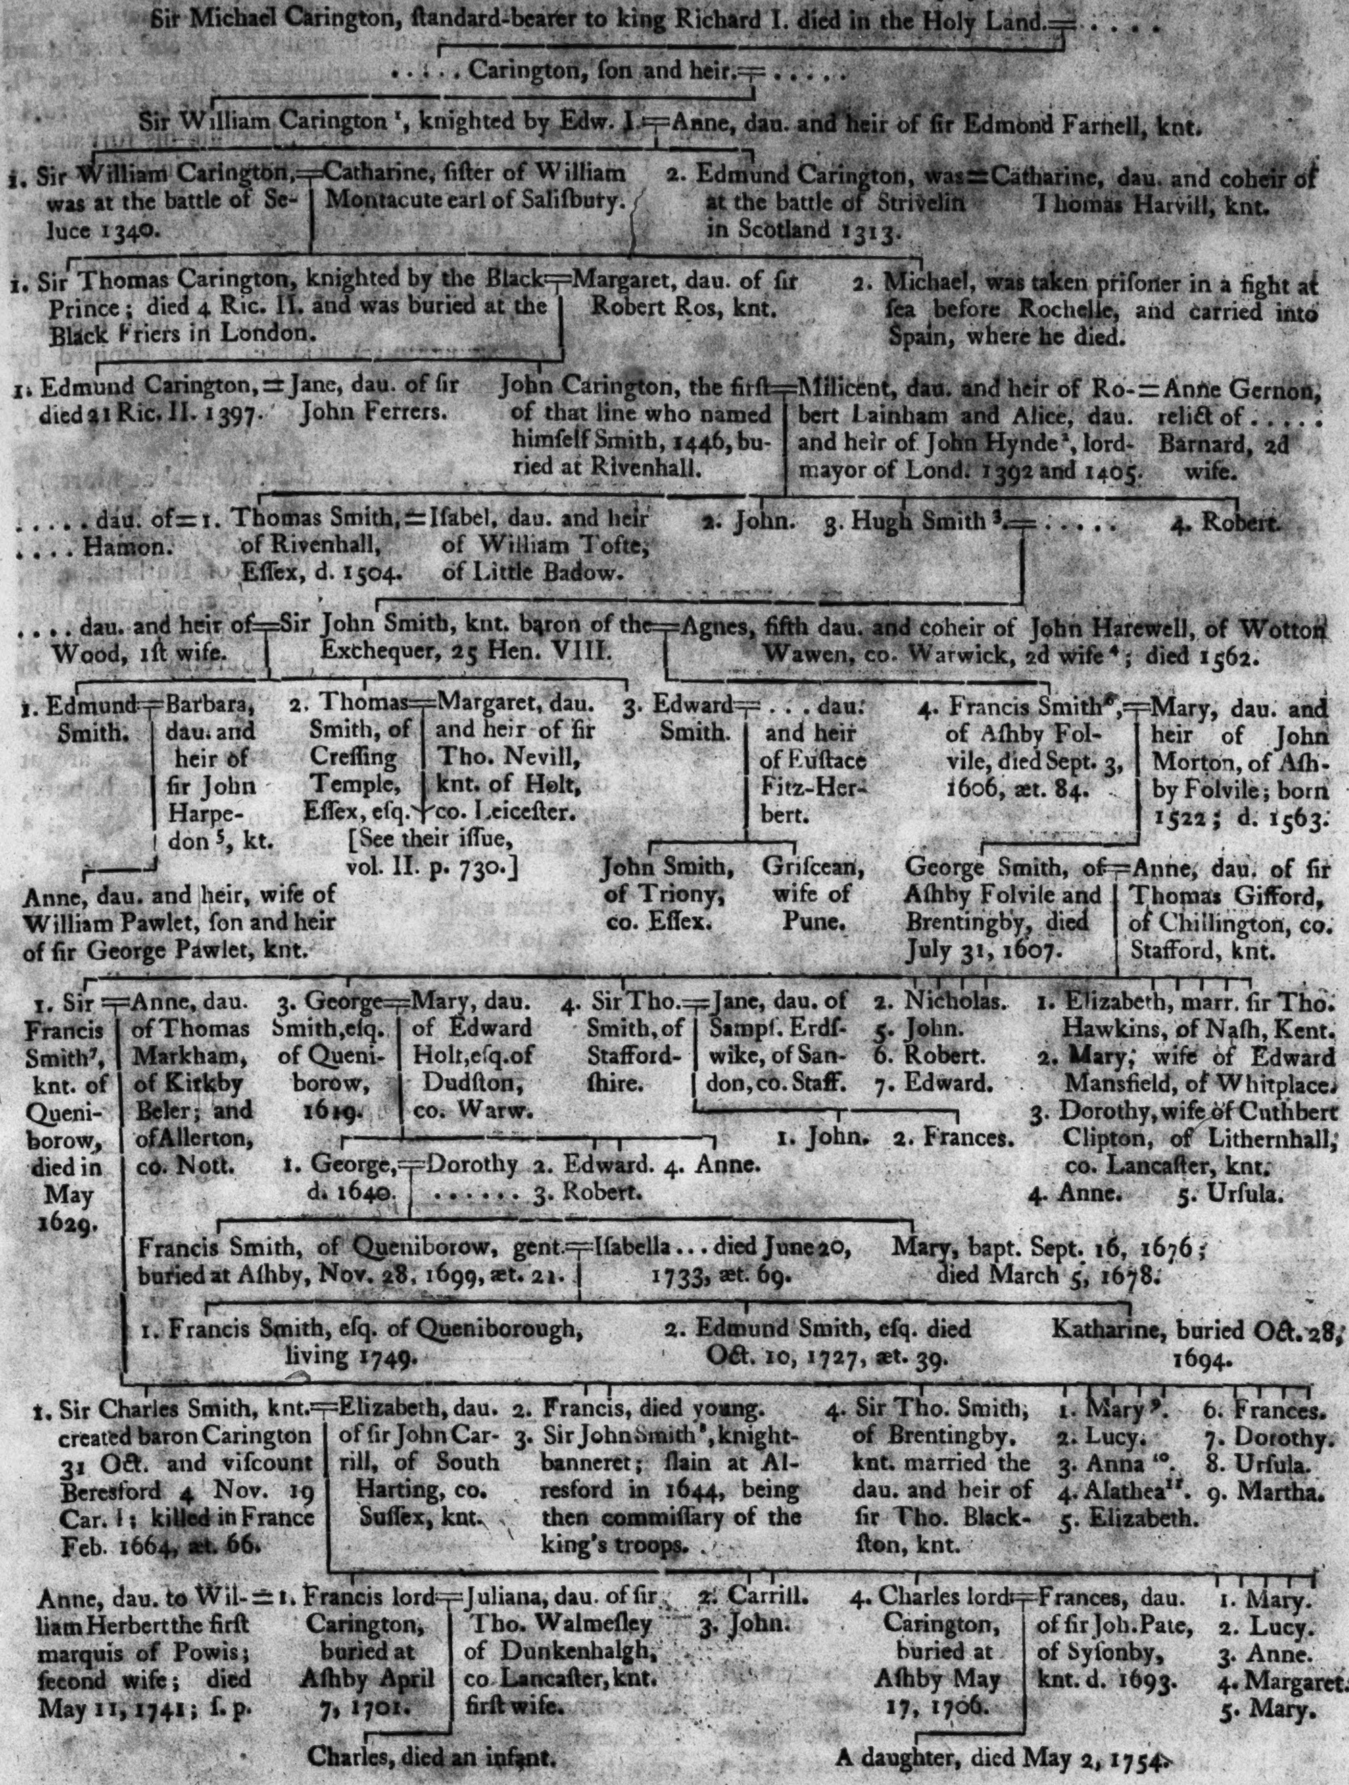
[13] By whom ſir Edward Smythe has a ſon, now about eight years old.

Pedigree of CARINGTON and SMITH, or SMYTH, of ASHBY FOLVILE.

Arms: Argent, a croſs Gules between four peahens Azure, Smith.
For the different Quarterings in the Viſitation of 1619, ſee p. 34.



Sir Michael Carington, ſtandard-bearer to king Richard I. died in the Holy Land. = ...

. . . . . Carington, ſon and heir. = ...

Sir William Carington[1], knighted by Edw. I. = Anne, dau. and heir of ſir Edmond Farnell, knt.

1. Sir William Carington, was at the battle of Seluce 1340. = Catharine, ſiſter of William Montacute earl of Saliſbury.
2. Edmund Carington, was at the battle of Strivelin in Scotland 1313. = Catharine, dau. and coheir of Thomas Harvill, knt.

1. Sir Thomas Carington, knighted by the Black Prince; died 4 Ric. II. and was buried at the Black Friers in London. = Margaret, dau. of ſir Robert Ros, knt.
2. Michael, was taken priſoner in a fight at ſea before Rochelle, and carried into Spain, where he died.

1. Edmund Carington, died 21 Ric. II. 1397. = Jane, dau. of ſir John Ferrers.
John Carington, the firſt of that line who named himſelf Smith, 1446, buried at Rivenhall. = Milicent, dau. and heir of Robert Lainham and Alice, dau. and heir of John Hynde[2], lord-mayor of Lond. 1392 and 1405. = Anne Gernon, relict of . . . . . Barnard, 2d wife.

. . . . . dau. of . . . . Hamon. = 1. Thomas Smith, of Rivenhall, Eſſex, d. 1504. = Iſabel, dau. and heir of William Tofte, of Little Badow.
2. John.
3. Hugh Smith[3]. = ...
4. Robert.

. . . . dau. and heir of Wood, 1ſt wife. = Sir John Smith, knt. baron of the Exchequer, 25 Hen. VIII. = Agnes, fifth dau. and coheir of John Harewell, of Wotton Wawen, co. Warwick, 2d wife[4]; died 1562.

1. Edmund Smith. = Barbara, dau. and heir of ſir John Harpedon[5], kt.
2. Thomas Smith, of Creſſing Temple, Eſſex, eſq. = Margaret, dau. and heir of ſir Tho. Nevill, knt. of Holt, co. Leiceſter. [See their iſſue, vol. II. p. 730.]
3. Edward Smith. = . . . dau. and heir of Euſtace Fitz-Herbert.
4. Francis Smith[6], of Aſhby Folvile, died Sept. 3, 1606, æt. 84. = Mary, dau. and heir of John Morton, of Aſhby Folvile; born 1522; d. 1563.

Anne, dau. and heir, wife of William Pawlet, ſon and heir of ſir George Pawlet, knt.
John Smith, of Triony, co. Eſſex.
Griſcean, wife of Pune.
George Smith, of Aſhby Folvile and Brentingby, died July 31, 1607. = Anne, dau. of ſir Thomas Gifford, of Chillington, co. Stafford, knt.

1. Sir Francis Smith[7], knt. of Queniborow, died in May 1629. = Anne, dau. of Thomas Markham, of Kirkby Beler; and of Allerton, co. Nott.
3. George Smith, eſq. of Queniborow, 1619. = Mary, dau. of Edward Holt, eſq. of Dudſton, co. Warw.
4. Sir Tho. Smith, of Staffordſhire. = Jane, dau. of Sampſ. Erdſwike, of Sandon, co. Staff.
2. Nicholas.
5. John.
6. Robert.
7. Edward.
1. Elizabeth, marr. ſir Tho. Hawkins, of Naſh, Kent.
2. Mary, wife of Edward Mansfield, of Whitplace.
3. Dorothy, wife of Cuthbert Clipton, of Lithernhall, co. Lancaſter, knt.
4. Anne.
5. Urſula.

1. George, d. 1640. = Dorothy . . . . . .
2. Edward.
3. Robert.
4. Anne.
1. John.
2. Frances.

Francis Smith, of Queniborow, gent. buried at Aſhby, Nov. 28, 1699, æt. 21. = Iſabella . . . died June 20, 1733, æt. 69.
Mary, bapt. Sept. 16, 1676; died March 5, 1678.

1. Francis Smith, eſq. of Queniborough, living 1749.
2. Edmund Smith, eſq. died Oct. 10, 1727, æt. 39.
Katharine, buried Oct. 28, 1694.

1. Sir Charles Smith, knt. created baron Carington 31 Oct. and viſcount Beresford 4 Nov. 19 Car. I; killed in France Feb. 1664, æt. 66. = Elizabeth, dau. of ſir John Carrill, of South Harting, co. Suſſex, knt.
2. Francis, died young.
3. Sir John Smith[8], knight-banneret; ſlain at Alresford in 1644, being then commiſſary of the king's troops.
4. Sir Tho. Smith, of Brentingby, knt. married the dau. and heir of ſir Tho. Blackſton, knt.
1. Mary[9].
2. Lucy.
3. Anna[10].
4. Alathea[11].
5. Elizabeth.
6. Frances.
7. Dorothy.
8. Urſula.
9. Martha.

Anne, dau. to William Herbert the firſt marquis of Powis; ſecond wife; died May 11, 1741; ſ. p. = 1. Francis lord Carington, buried at Aſhby April 7, 1701. = Juliana, dau. of ſir Tho. Walmeſley of Dunkenhalgh, co. Lancaſter, knt. firſt wife.
2. Carrill.
3. John.
4. Charles lord Carington, buried at Aſhby May 17, 1706. = Frances, dau. of ſir Joh. Pate, of Syſonby, knt. d. 1693.
1. Mary.
2. Lucy.
3. Anne.
4. Margaret.
5. Mary.

Charles, died an infant.
A daughter, died May 2, 1754.

In 1722, John Franks and John Pepper polled as freeholders from the pariſh of Aſhby Folvile.

In 1749, the manor of Aſhby Folvile, with the advowſon, capital meſſuage, and divers lands, and the tithes of thoſe lands, were ſold by the truſtees of Mr. Smith, alias Carington, to the hon. John Grey[12], brother to Henry fourth earl of Stamford, and the firſt colonel of the Leiceſterſhire militia on the regular eſtabliſhment of that valuable body of men; and commanded the regiment till his death in 1777; when he was ſucceeded by Charles marquis of Granby, afterwards duke of Rutland, who commanded as colonel till his death in 1787; when he was ſucceeded by the late George Pocbin, eſq.; and he again in 1798 by John-Henry the preſent duke of Rutland.

In 1775, we find 16 freeholders here, amongſt whom were the hon. Colonel John Grey and William Ayre, eſq.

In 1776, this eſtate was ſold by Colonel Grey in lots; when the advowſon, manor, capital meſſuage, and farm, were bought by Mr. Brown, the farmer who then rented that land.

---

[1] Arms: Argent, on a bend Sable, three croſs cutlaxes Or; fig. 30.

[2] Arms: Argent, on a chevron Azure, three eſcallop-ſhells of the field; on a chief of the ſecond a lion paſſant of the firſt, fig. 31.

[3] Arms of Smith, as above deſcribed, fig. 28.

[4] By this match ſir John Smith's fortune was greatly increaſed.

[5] Argent, two chevrons, each charged with three fleurs-de-lis Or; on a chief Azure a lion paſſant of the field; fig. 32.

[6] This gentleman married, for his ſecond wife, Elizabeth daughter of ſir Thomas Brudenell, knt. and widow of Rheſe Griffin. See vol. II. p. 807.

[7] He held the manor of Aſhby Folvile in capite, and thoſe of Garthorpe and Wyfordby by fealty, 1612.

[8] By the fragments on his father's tomb, p. 32, John appears to have been the fourth child; but it appears, by his own epitaph, p. 28, that he was the third ſon. See more of him, pp. 33. 36—43.

[9] Second wife to ſir Robert Throckmorton, bart. of Great Coughton, co. Warwick.

[10] Married to Rowland Eyre, of Haſſop, co. Derby, eſq.

[11] Married to Chriſtopher Anderſon, of Loſtock, co. Lancaſter, eſq. father of ſir Francis Anderſon, bart.

[12] This gentleman married, in June, 1793, Lucy, daughter of ſir Joſeph Danvers, bart.

The village has not more than 30 houſes, excluſive of that lately occupied by Colonel Grey, which is a pleaſing manſion, and watered with much taſte.

It is the cuſtom here to ſtrew the church with hay the week before the wake (which is on the firſt Sunday in September); which hay is taken from a piece of ground, given by two maiden ladies, in the ſhape of a ſtomacher, formed by two poſts, two at top and one at bottom. The officers left this cuſtom off one year; but were obliged to reſume it from the ſuperſtition of ſome of the inhabitants of the village. The donation is ſaid to have originated from the ladies having been benighted, and finding their way to the village from hearing the ſound of the bells. On the ſpot of ground where they heard the bells, they dropped a handkerchief, where the next day it was found; and the produce of this land is ſaid to have been given to the church in commemoration of their eſcape.

"William de Folvile was born at Aſhby Folvile, in this county; and therefore, when Bale [1] calleth him Lincolnienſem, underſtand him not by county, but by dioceſe. He was bred a Franciſcan in the Univerſity of Cambridge; and engaged himſelf a great maſter of defence in that doughty quarrel pro pueris induendis, that children under the age of 18 ought to be admitted into monaſtical orders. For, whereas this was then complained of as a great and general grievance; that by ſuch prepoſterous cowling of boys, and vailing of girls, parents were cozened out of their children, and children cozened out of themſelves, doing in their minority they knew not what, and repenting in their maturity not knowing what to do; our Folvile, with more paſſion than reaſon, maintained the legality thereof. He died, and was buried among thoſe of his own order, at Stamford, circa 1384 [2]." Bp. Tanner ſays, "Litera contorta Gul. Folvylle, Grammatici fuit olim MS. in Monaſt. Sion [3]."

Dr. Fuller, ſpeaking of William Woodford, under Leiceſterſhire, ſays, "I cannot fix his nativity with any certainty; becauſe ſo many Woods and Fords (and would the former did continue as well as the latter!), and conſequently ſo many towns called Woodford in England. He is placed here, becauſe his ſurname in this age flouriſhed in great eminence in this county. He was bred a Franciſcan; and, though bilious Bale [4] giveth him the character of indocte doctus, we learn from Leland, that he was one of profound learning; and Thomas Waldenſis owneth and calleth him magiſtrum ſuum. Indeed, Woodford ſet him the firſt copy of railing againſt Wickliffe, being deputed by Thomas Arundel, archbiſhop of Canterbury, to confute, publicly in writing, his opinion [5]. He died, and was buried at Colcheſter, 1397 [6]."

George Gilſon, eſq. founded an hoſpital at Morcote, co. Rutland, in 1612, for ſix poor people unmarried, men or women; who were to have £6. per annum each; and Mr. Wright, in his Hiſtory of Rutland, ſays, "the ſame perſon [7] founded a more conſiderable hoſpital at Aſhby-Fallowes, co. Leiceſter." This hoſpital ſtands on the South ſide of the church-yard; and in 1673 received an additional endowment from Francis lord Carington, from eſtates now veſted in Peter Holford [8], eſq. of Wotton Wawen. There are at this time within it, ſupported or aſſiſted by its bounty, a man, his wife, and two children, at £6. a year; a widow woman £6. a year; and a ſpinſter £6. a year [9].

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to the enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 38.

	Aſhby Folvile.			Bareſby.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	16	17	10	56	0	6
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	17	4	3	2	8
——— on the poor, —	9	5	2	52	19	2
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	19	6	8	5	3
Expended in litigations, —	0	8	0	6	16	2
Money raiſed for 1783, —	65	9	3	51	12	7
——— 1784, —	73	5	10	57	17	7
——— 1785, —	55	16	7	55	0	9
Medium of theſe three years,	64	17	2	54	16	11
——— of county expences,	5	16	0	4	14	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	9	4	2	0	4
——— of nett annual expences,	58	11	10	48	2	7
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	17	4	0	7	1
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	6	4	0	19	1
——— of law expences, —	0	3	4	0	3	2
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	0	2	2

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate V.)

dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is large; and conſiſts of a ſtout tower ſteeple, plain, without pinnacles, but comely, with long windows; and neat Gothic tracery under the battlements. The tower (in which are five bells) is built of good ſtone, apparently more modern than the body of the church; and opens to the nave by a pointed arch, over which are two paintings; one of Time, with his ſcythe and hour-glaſs; the other, Death, leaning his right arm upon a ſpade, and in his left hand a dart, with the point reſting on the ground.

The nave is lofty, and ſeparated from the chancel by a lower pointed arch, the upper part blocked up, and the lower part an open ſkreen of wood; a South aile, ſeparated from the nave by five pointed arches upon light and handſome airy pillars, over which are four large and regular clereſtory windows; a North aile, ſeparated in the ſame manner, with correſponding clereſtory windows. A chapel at the Eaſt end of the South aile. A South porch; a North door in the Weſt end of the North aile, and a ſmall door at the Eaſt corner of the South aile.

The nave has a rich roof of wood-work, finely carved, and well preſerved; the pillars tall and ſlender. At the bottom of the wood ſupporters of this roof are ſeveral well-carved figures (ſimilar to thoſe in Noſeley church); ſome holding various muſical inſtruments, and others plain ſhields.

Over the ſkreen, between the nave and chancel, are the royal arms, large, dated 1725.

The Weſt end of the South aile is ſeparated by a wood partition, and apparently has been uſed as a ſchool. There is a door-way in the Weſt wall of it, now blocked up; as is a large Weſt window nearly.

The rood-loft appears perfect; but the door at the bottom of the ſtairs leading to it is faſtened, and has not been opened for at leaſt 60 years paſt. At the top of it, in the wall near it, on the left hand of the pulpit-door, the iron frame for the hour-glaſs yet

---

[1] Deſcript. Brit. Cent. VI. num. 72. p. 491. Pits calls him "a frier minor of the order of St. Francis, a Lincolnſhire man, D. D. of Cambridge, a perſon of a religious life, and not uncelebrated for many titles of erudition."

[2] Fuller's Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 133; and ſee Peck's Annals of Stamford, Book XII. p. 10.

[3] Bibliotheca Britannica, p. 292.

[4] Deſcript. Brit. Cent. VII. num. 33.

[5] Libro de Sacramento, c. 50.

[6] Fuller's Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 133; and ſee Tanner's Bibliotheca Britannica, p. 785.

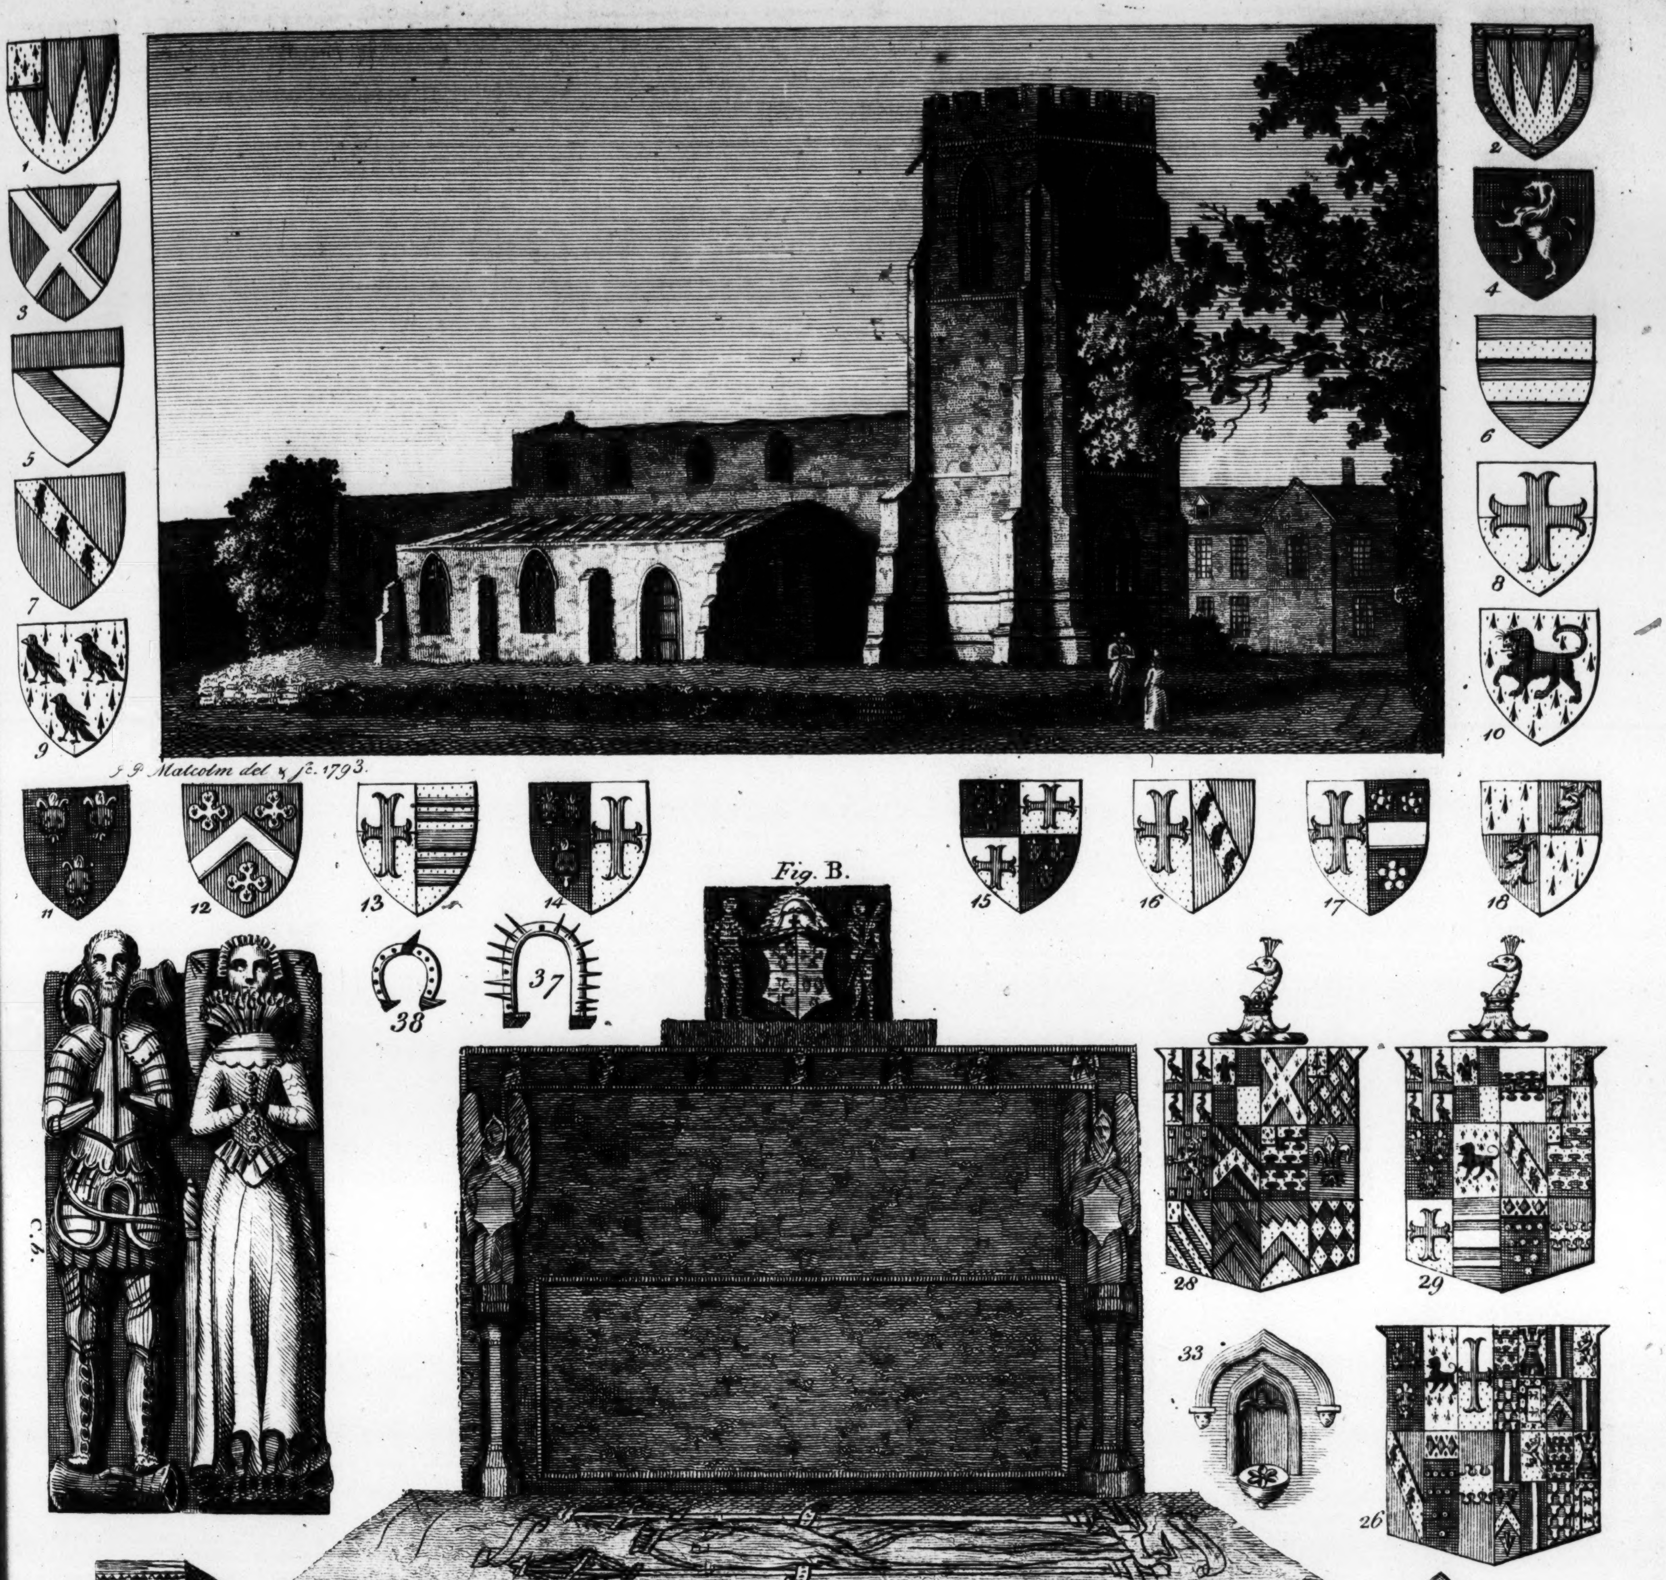
[7] Mr. Wright calls him "Mr. George Jilſon, a Roman Catholic, and (as ſome ſay) a prieſt." A monument of a charitable perſon of the ſame name, but of a later date, remains at Barkby; ſee p. 50. And William Gilſon was a freeholder at Bareſby in 1630; ſee p. 35.

[8] Who had married the widow of a Carington; ſee p. 28.

[9] Of this foundation ſee hereafter.

remains;

ASHBY-FOLVILE. N.W.



1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
Fig. B.
38
37
28
29
C.b.
33
26
36
34
Fig. C.a.
35
Fig. D.
30
39
31
42
FRANCIS
NICHOLAS
GEORGE
THOMAS
JOHN ROBART
EDWARD
43
32
Fig. A.
44
40
41
19 20 21
22
23
24
25
27

J. P. Malcolm del & ſc. 1793.

remains; near which is a ſmall ſquare opening into the nave. The ſteps come down into the Eaſt end of the North aile; near which, in the South-eaſt angle, is a ſquare opening, through which the altar may be viewed.

On the South ſide of the altar is a piſcina, under a pointed arch, with a curious projecting baſon (fig. 33.); above which is a locker.

In the chapel at the Eaſt end of the South aile, and ſeparated from the chancel by a pointed arch, at the entrance-door on the left hand in the aile, is another beautiful and perfect piſcina, projecting from a pointed arch, with a baſon which has ſix indentings (ſee fig. 34).

In the chancel is a large Eaſt window, broad; in it the arms of Smith, and ſeveral fragments.

In the South chapel a South window ſquare, richly emboſſed on the outſide; and a fine Eaſt window, in which are many remnants of painted glaſs; amongſt which the flower repreſented in fig. 35. is frequently interſperſed; and in the upper part the arms of Woodford and Folvile quarterly, as in fig. 15.

The font is antient, upon four pedeſtals, ſquare, ſides differently carved, rudely; fig. 36.

Mr. Wyrley, in 1590, deſcribes in this church "the picture of Edward the Second in glaſs, excellently wrought;" and notices the following arms[1].

1. Or, three piles Gules, a canton Ermine; Baſſet of Drayton.
2. Or, three piles Gules, a bordure Azure bezanté; Laund Abbey.
3. Gules, a ſaltire Argent; Nevile.
4. Sable, a lion rampant Arg. crowned Or; Segrave.
5. Arg. a bend Az. and a chief Gules; Cromwell.
6. Azure, two bars Or; Burdett.
7. Brabazon.
8. Folvile.
9. Ermine, three rooks Gules; Handiſacre of Staffordſhire.
10. Preſte.
11. Woodford.
12. Gules, a chevron Argent between three quatrefoils Ermine.
13. Folvile; impaling, Or, a feſs between two gemelles Azure; Delamare.
14. Woodford, impaling Folvile.
15. Quarterly, Woodford and Folvile.
16. Folvile, impaling Brabazon.
17. Woodford; impaling, Villiers antient.
18. Morton.

Mr. Burton adds, that in the Eaſt window of the church, in the South aile, is the portrait of Ralph Woodford and his wife, and all his children, being many[2].

In the fine pedigree of the Sherards, preſerved at Stapleford Hall, it is noticed, that the arms of Brabazon are in many places of the church windows in Aſhby Folvile; and that the arms of Woodford are very antient in many places in the windows of that church, impaled with Villiers, and with Folvile, and others; and Woodford and Folvile quartered.

In the church-yard may be ſeen a ſtone projecting from the wall of the South-eaſt angle between the chapel and chancel: it is about five feet below the leads of the roof. Probably upon it has been placed a ſtatue; and on the uppermoſt corner-ſtone of the Eaſt end of the chapel is a ſhield, whether charged or not cannot eaſily be diſcerned, it being moſs-grown and a conſiderable height from the ground, and emboſſed on each ſide with the date thus, 1598.

On the South door of the church are placed two large and antient horſeſhoes; one particularly ſo, the length from the extremity of the toe to the heel being 1 foot 4 inches, the width 11¼ inches; width of the web, and length of the ſpikes which project from that part of the web where the nails ſhould be, 3 inches (ſee fig. 37). The other ſhoe (fig. 38.) is not near ſo large as that firſt-mentioned, being only 7 inches from the toe to the heel in width; 6½ inches length of the corkings, of which there are three, one at the toe, and one at each heel. There are no ſpikes round this, as there are round the other; but it is faſtened upon the door by common nails like common horſe-nails, only larger. No tradition can be traced when or why they were placed here: but they are much too large ever to have been worn by any horſe.

This church was antiently given by Richard Baſſet and Maud his wife to the priory of Laund, and confirmed to them by king Henry III; and, in the Matriculus of 1220[3], is deſcribed to be a rectory, under the patronage of that priory; and had then a chapel at Bareſby, which was to be ſerved three days in a week.

In 1344, the procurations for Aſhby Folvile and Bareſby were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the church was taxed at 30 marks, and paid 3*s.* for Peter pence.

In 1388, this church was regularly appropriated to the prior and convent of Laund:

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, & pro quadraginta libris quas dilecti nobis in Chriſto prior & conventus de Laundâ nobis ſolverunt, conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, eiſdem priori & conventui, quòd ipſi eccleſiam de Aſhbye Folevile, que eſt de advocatione ſuâ, propriis appropriare, & eam ſic appropriatam in proprios uſus tenere, poſſint ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in perpetuum, ſine occaſione vel impedimento noſtri, vel heredum noſtrorum, juſticiariorum, eſchaetorum, vicecomitum, aut aliorum ballivorum ſeu miniſtrorum noſtrorum quorumcunque, ſtatuto de terris & tenementis ad manum mortuam non ponendis edito non obſtante. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', xxv^{to} die Auguſti[4]."

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 14*s.* 0¾*d.*; and the value of the vicarage £8.

In 1650, Aſhby Folvile was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £100. the vicarage £30. and the incumbent as "no preacher."

The preſent value in the king's books is £9.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 4*s.* 8*d.*; for the vicarage 2*s.*; the archidiaconal 11*s.* 0¾*d.*

It is a diſcharged living; clear yearly value 11*l.* 4*s.* 0¾*d.* ariſing from great and ſmall tithes, parſonage houſe, and glebe[5].

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Geoffrey Baſſet, 1220.	Prior and Convent of Laund.
Martin the chaplain, 1221.
Semamanus de Lan', 1224.
William de Eringworth, 1231.
John the chaplain[6], 1232.
Alan Coſtein[7], 1236.
John de Normanton, 1250.
Alan de Chalent, 1274.
Nicholas de Bromley reſigned 1281, by exchange with Thomas de Baddeley, 1281[8].

---

[1] Plate V. fig. 1—18.

[2] MS. Chetwynd.

[3] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[4] Pat. 13 Ric. II. m. 6.

[5] Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 554.

[6] Reg. Hugonis Welles, part 24. In this year the endowment of the vicarage is entered in the Roll.

[7] Alanus Coſtein ad eccleſiam de Eſeb' Folevil. Teſtibus; magiſtris R. de Kaden, Th' Walens, Jo' de Crakall, Th' de Aſkeb', canon' Lincoln'; magiſtro R. de Jakeham, dominis R. Blundo, J. de Diham, capellanis; magiſtris S. conſtabular', R. de Raveningham, C. de Camped', B. de Burgo, Ph' Quentin, Th' de Karl', N. Greco, clericis. 8 id' Apr', Reg. Groſſeteſte, Pont' 2 (dorſ').

[8] Commiſſio facta magiſtro Walt' Skirlowe, archidiacono Northampt', ſuper examinand' negotium permutationis inter dominum Nic' de Bromley, rectorem eccleſiæ de Aſsſheby Folvile, dioc' Linc', & Tho. de Baddeby, decanum eccleſiæ de Beatæ Mariæ, Salop', Lichf' dioc', admiſſus 8 Maii, 1281. Reg. Graveſend.

Thomas

Thomas of Gaddyſby, 1352.	Prior and Convent of Laund.
William Hall, March 26, 1430.
William Bernard, 1534.
William Wells[1], 1564.
William Childe, 1592; died Sept. 6, 1639.
Euſtace Feilding[2], 1647.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
John Philips, 1653.
Ambroſe Bent, 1659.
Henry Eyton, Oct. 3, 1661.	Charles lord Carington, pleno jure.
Joſhua Gilbert, Jan. 26, 1662-3.	Francis lord Carington.
Henry Allen, Aug. 12, 1666.
William Parker, Aug. 5, 1709.	Anne dowager lady Carington.
John Pagett, Jan. 11, 1723-4; died 1749.	Keneth Mackenzie, eſq.
John Carr[3], July 10, 1749; died 1776.	Sir Joſeph Danvers, bart. (as truſtee.)
Thomas-Beaumont Burnaby[4], M. A. Sept. 21, 1776.	Hon. Colonel John Grey.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On the North ſide of the chancel is a wide ſharp-pointed arch over ſome tomb, probably the founder's.

“In this church, ſays Wyrley, is an antient and fair altar-tomb for one of the Folviles in armour; on his breaſt the coat of Folvile, but no inſcription.” This monument is ſtill in the South chapel, under the South window, fig. A; and is ſaid to be for Old Folvile who ſlew Beler. A large ruſty helmet remains on it, with part of his gauntlets, and ſeveral fragments of armour. Folvile's effigies is mutilated; the features of the face ſcarcely viſible; his arms broken off; ſhoes ſquare-toed, which reſt againſt a lion couchant regardant; a girdle round his waiſt, but no ſword; his breaſt very prominent; on the right ſide of which is an iron blunted ſpike, about an inch and a half long, fixed in the ſtone with lead, apparently coeval with the figure itſelf; his head reſteth on a double pillow, which appears to have been originally ſupported by two angels, their hands and part of the drapery being yet viſible, and all the reſt gone.

In this chapel is an antient large blue flat-ſtone, ſtripped of its braſs; and a white ſtone adjoining, with an illegible inſcription round the edge; an old moveable reading-deſk; and a very ſtout oak-cheſt, ſtrongly banded with iron, and locked down with three ſtout, old-faſhioned, large padlocks.

On the North ſide of the chancel remains a very fine mural monument for Ralph Woodford, eſq. with the arms at top of Woodford and Folvile, quarterly, ſupported by two green men, the ſiniſter holding a club. On each ſide of the tomb an angel holds a blank ſhield.

On the ſlab below, between two remarkably elegant croſſes, are traces of the figure of a headleſs lady[5], as ſketched in fig. B. At her feet a greyhound looking upwards; and on two ſcrolls, at her head and feet:

“Credo quod Redemptor meus vivit, ...
. . . , ... et in noviſſimo die de terra ſurrecturus ſum.”

On two ſmaller ſcrolls, on the croſſes:

Diſce moꝛi. Diſce mori,

Round the ledge, on the ſlab, is this inſcription:

“Hic jacent Rad'us Woodford, armiger, co'ſanguineus et heres Rob'ti Wodford, militis; videl't, fil' Thome filii et heredis p'dicti Rob'ti Wodford; et Elizabeth' una filia Will'i Villiers, armigeri, uxor p'dicti Rad'i; qui quidem Rad'us obiit iiii die Marcii, a'no dñi M°CCCC°lxxxi°; p'dict' Elizabeth obiit ix die Auguſti, A. D. MCCCClxxxiv°; quor' ai'ab's propiciet' deus.”

At the Eaſt end of the South aile, on an alabaſter ſtone, are the traces of a man in armour, his feet reſting againſt a dog; at one corner of which appear the arms of Folvile; and round the ledge, “Hic jacent corpoꝛa Joh'is Woodfoꝛd, armigeri, et Milicente et Maꝛie uxorum ejus;

qui quidem Joh'es obiit . . . . . . 1530.”

Both theſe are noticed by Wyrley; as are two others:

“. . . . . Johannis Brabazon, militis.”

“Rad'us Woodford, aꝛm', et Maꝛgaꝛeta et Elizab' uxoꝛes ejus.”

On an altar-tomb on the North ſide of the chancel are the figures of a gentleman and lady, with ſeven ſons and five daughters (fig. C. a. b.); and round the ledge this inſcription:

“HERE LYETH Y^{e} BODIES OF GEORGE SMITH, ESQ.
AND ANNE HIS WIFE; WHICH GEORGE WAS SONNE AND HEIRE TO FRANCIS SMITH AND MARY MORTON HIS WIFE, AND DECEASED THE LAST DAY OF JULY,
1607; AND ANN WAS DAUGHTER TO SIR THOMAS
GIFFORD, OF CHILINGTÕ, KNIGHT, DECEASED
Y^{e} . . . . . .[6] DAY OF . . . .[6]”

At the head of this tomb are two blank ſhields within blue circular garters; one inſcribed in gold letters, FIDES SEMPER FIRMA; the other, PREIGNES A LAINE TIRE FORT. Mr. Smith is in complete armour gilt; his head upon his helmet; his feet broken off, and lain upon his gauntlets; hair combed back; long beard; hands broken off. The lady's head lies upon a double cuſhion; large ruff; long waiſt; hands broken off; quilted ſleeves. On the front of the tomb are the names and figures of their ſeven ſons:

FRANCIS; NICHOLAS; GEORGE; THOMAS; JOHN;
ROBERT; EDWARD.

And at the foot of the monument, five daughters:

ELIZABETH; MARY; DOROTHY; ANNE; URSULA.

On a lofty tomb under an arch which ſeparates the South chapel from the chancel (fig. D.) are the figures of a gentleman and lady; the latter of great elegance. A ſmall part only of the man is ſeen, as ſketched on the plate. His head reſts on a helmet, in which is a plume of feathers. He has a pointed beard, gilt armour, and falling collar. The lady's head is on a cuſhion; her hair combed back; and a large ruff. A pyramid ſtands between them at their feet.

Within the ornamental arches on the Eaſt end and North ſide were formerly the mementos of thirteen children, of which the following ſtill remain, now looſe from the body of the monument:

FRANCIS III. IOHN IIII. FRANCES VI.
DOROTHEA VIII. URSULA IX. MARTHA X.

The whole of this monument, which has been very handſome, and indeed moſt of the older monuments here, are ſhamefully diſgraced by neglect; all falling to pieces (yet once rich, honourable, and pious memorials!) and reflecting a moſt diſgraceful and niggardly ſpirit in the ſucceſſors to the eſtates of theſe good anceſtors; and their manſion-houſe, quantum mutata!—

At the head of the tomb are the following arms and inſcription: Quarterly of eight, 1. Smith; 2. Harewell; 3. Morton; 4. Woodford; 5. Preſte; 6. Brabazon; 7. Folvile; 8. Burdett. Creſt, as before; fig. 39.

“D. O. M.
FRANCISCUS SMITHÆUS,
EQUES AURATUS,
GEORGÎ F.
PROBITATE ET RELIGIONE
ANTIQUIS HEROIBUS PAR;

---

[1] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Wells is thus deſcribed: “Preſbyter, non conjugatus; mediocritèr doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet.”

[2] He compounded for the firſt fruits Aug. 11, 1647.

[3] Tadition ſtates, this preſentation was purchaſed by Mr. Carr, for £1000.

[4] See before, under Asfordby, p. 15.

[5] This figure, by the delicacy of the hand, the palm of which is turned outwards, and the very ſmall fingers, is evidently that of a lady, apparently headleſs; nor is there on the ſtone the leaſt veſtige of any thing ever having been engraved above the neck.

[6] Theſe dates were originally left blank.

QUI, LIBERIS AC NEPOTIBUS FELIX,
INTEGRITATE VITÆ MORUMQUE INNOCENTIA
MULTO FELICIOR;
AMORE IN SUOS, ÆQUITATE IN OMNES,
PIETATE IN DEUM,
DEMUM AVITÆ FIDEI CONSTANTI INTER ADVERSA,
PROCESSIONE LONGE FELICISSIMUM,
MIGRAVIT E VITA PRIDIE NON. MAII, ÆTATIS SUÆ ANNO LIX, CHRISTI CIƆIƆCXXIX."

[Charles lord Carington, eldeſt ſon of the above-noticed ſir Francis, was murdered in France; ſee p. 28; where may alſo be ſeen an epitaph on the third ſon, ſir John Smith[1].]

On flat ſtones in the chancel.

1. " Francis Smith, gent. of Queniborough, died in 1699, aged 21 years."

2. " Iſabella, the wife of Francis Smith, late of Queniborough, eſq.
died 20th of June, 1733, aged 69."

3. Arms: Smith; impaling, Per chevron Argent and Sable, three elephants' heads eraſed counterchanged; Saunders. Creſt, as before; fig. 40.

✠ " Edmund Smith, eſq. of Queniborough, ✠ died 10 Oct. 1727, aged 39.
Requieſcat in pace."
✠

4. " William Collins, gent. died 4th
June, 1716, aged 72 years."

5. Arms: On a feſs, three mullets pierced. Creſt, an arm embowed holding a ſword; fig. 41.

" John Ayre, eſq. died
Auguſt 7th, 1758, aged 82 years.
Think, as ſoftly ſad you tread
Above the venerable dead:
Time was, like thee, they life poſſeſs'd,
And time ſhall be as thou ſhalt reſt.
Here alſo lies interred the body of Mary Ayre, wife of John Ayre, eſq. died 20 Dec. 1733, aged 43."

6. " Thomas Ayre, ſon of Joſeph Ayre and Jane his wife, exchanged this tranſitory life for a glorious immortality on Nov. 16th, 1760, in the 9th year of his age."

7. " Joſeph Ayre dyed 18th April,
1762, aged 34 years."

8. " William Ayre, of Tilton in the county of Leic^r, eſq.
third ſon of John Ayre, eſq. of Aſhby Folvile.
He died Sept. 20, 1775, aged 56 years."

9. " John Ayre, eſq. of Gadſby in this county, died 15 Sept. 1785, aged 35 years."

10. " John Ayre, eſq. of Gadſby, died July 13, 1791,
aged 74 years.
Mary his wife died Sept. 19, 1789,
aged 64."

11. On a blue ſtone under the altar:
" Entombed under this ſtone lies what is mortal of Jane Ayre, relict of Joſeph Ayre, gent.
She died Sept. 12, 1796, aged 56 years.
Eulogies on the dead are only mockeries.
Let her works praiſe her in the gates Reader, prepare to meet thy God."

12. " Edmund, the ſon of the Rev. John Carr by Anne his wife, died June 22, 1758, aged 9 years, 1 month, 2 days;
a child of blooming hopes,
of uncommon parts and genius, and unfortunately cut off by the fall of a cart upon him.
Alſo John Carr, gent.
father of the rev. John Carr, vicar of this place;
died September 4th, 1761, aged 81 years."

13. " Mrs. Penelope Pagett, daughter of the rev. Mr. John Pagett, late vicar of this place,
by Elizabeth his wife,
died June 28, 1762, aged 43 years."

14. " That her name may not too ſoon be forgotten, where her virtues were to well known, be this ſacred to the memory of Mary, once the beloved wife of the rev. John Kerchevall, vicar of Scraptoft, and daughter of John Ayre,
eſq. late of this place.
She died Dec. 6, 1766, aged 42."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. " HIC JACET CORPVS WILL'I CHILDE,
.... QVI FVIT VICARIVS HVJVS PARO-CHIE PER SPACIUM QUADRAGINTA ET
SEPTEM ANNORUM; QUI OBIIT DECIMO-SEXTO DIE SEPTEMBRIS, ANNO DOM̄
1639, ÆTATIS SUÆ 79."

2. On a ſquare braſs plate on a white ſtone:
" In memory of Mrs. Mary Gilbert, late wife to the Rev. Mr. Joſhua Gilbert, vicar of this pariſh;
who departed this life
the ſecond day of Dec. anno D'ni 1707,
ætat. ſuæ 50.
To die is gain."

Below, on the ſame ſtone:
" M ✠ G 1707."

3. " The rev. Mr. John Pagett, late vicar of this pariſh, who died April 12, 1749, aged 58 years.
Alſo Elizabeth, relict of the aforeſaid Mr. John Pagett, died July 6, 1749, aged 73 years."

4. " To the memory of Anne, eldeſt daughter of the rev. John Carr, by Anne his wife; who died May 22d, 1767, in the 32d year of her age."

5. " The rev. John Carr, vicar of Aſhby Folvile, died July 4th, 1776, aged 67 years.
When he had thus finiſhed his courſe, and compleated his character, all men commended him,
and concluded that he was undoubtedly happy.
He fought a good fight, againſt the world,
the fleſh, and the Devil;
and, thro' faith in a future life of happineſs, for piety and virtue, and for his obedience to his Saviour's heavenly Preacher's precepts, he overcame theſe enemies of his ſalvation.
Anne, relict of the rev. John Carr, died May 16, 1792, aged 83."

6. " Depoſited under this ſtone reſt the remains of Edmund Wills Carr, M. A.
vicar of Loſeby, and rector of Harſton, in this county;
who departed this life June 30, 1793, aged 54.
He was a zealous advocate and ſteady defender of the preſent Eſtabliſhment, both Civil and Eccleſiaſtic;
and, at the expence of his health and conſiderable property, endeavoured to reſtore to the Church its primitive rights.
—Death is the crown of life—O! learn even now to reliſh what alone ſubſiſts hereafter."

In the North aile is a flat hard white ſtone, without inſcription, with five croſſes on it.

In the church-yard:
" Thomas Black died April 30, 1767, aged 69.
Elizabeth Black, wife of Thomas Black, died the 29th of Auguſt, 1793, aged 86."

---

[1] Of whom, ſee more fully in p. 36.—Mr. Milner, in his " Hiſtory of Wincheſter," vol. I. p. 406, having occaſion to mention the battle of Cheriton Down, calls ſir John Smith " commiſſary general of horſe;" and, after obſerving that he was of an antient Roman Catholic family, adds, that " the Catholic nobility and gentry exerted themſelves, almoſt to the ruin of their families and fortunes, in the cauſe of honour and loyalty. Many of them were amongſt the beſt of the royal officers and generals; particularly the above-mentioned ſir John Smith, ſir Arthur Aſton, ſir Marmaduke Langdale, ſir Henry Gage, colonel Howard, ſir John Weld, major-general Webb, lord viſcount Dunbar, lord Powis, lord Arundel of Wardour, the earl of Carnarvon, the marquiſſes of Wincheſter and Worceſter, &c. The whole number of noblemen and gentlemen of that religion, who loſt their lives in the king's ſervice, on this occaſion, was 194, being two-fifths of the ſum total of Royaliſts of the ſaid deſcription ſo killed."

Epitaphs on the family of Smith, in the South aile of the chancel at Wootton Wawen:

1. Inlaid in braſs on a mural tablet:

"Here lyeth the body of Lady Agnes Smyth, late wife of Sir John Smyth, knight, one of the barons of Exchequer, daughter of John Harewell, eſquier, and one of the coheirs of Thomas Harewell, eſquier, her brother;
which Agnes died the sixth of February, anno 1562."

2. On a large mural monument, with the cumbent figure of a knight in armour.

Arms at top; Quarterly, 1. and 4. Smith; 2. and 3. Harewell, fig. 42.

"VIVE DEO, MUNDOQUE MORI, PERDISCE CADUCO
SOLA SALUS CŒLO; CÆTERA VANA, NIHIL.
NASCIMUR ET MORIMUR, MORTI CONTERMINA CERTA;
VITA STAT INCERTO PERFRUITURA BONO.

D. O. M. S.
FRANCISCO SMITH ARMIGERO, VIRO VITÆ INTEGERRIMO, ANIMI FORTITUDINE, MORUM PROBITATE SPECTATISSIMO,
PACIS CULTORI, PATRIÆ AMATORI OBSERVANTISSIMO; ÆQUI
BONIQUE VINDICI ACERRIMO, PAUPERUM PROPUGNATORI
EXIMIO, PROSAPIA TAM AVITA DIGNITATE STIRPIS
QUAM PERAMPLA VIRTUTUM SERIE COHONESTA ORIUNDO, SOBOLE MASCULO (IPSO ETIAM ADHUC SUPER-STITE ANNORUMQUE PLENO) EX SE QUARTA LINEA AUCTO, EJUS EX FILIO NEPOS ET HÆRES, TAM PII HAUD IMMEMOR PARENTIS, HOC MONUMENTUM GRATITUDINIS ET AMORIS ERGÔ P."

On a tablet below:

"HIC JACET FRANCIS^{CUS} SMITH, ARMIGER, FILIUS JOHANNIS SMITH MILITIS, ET DOMINE AGNETIS UXORIS EJUS, HÆRESQUE EJUSDEM AGNETIS, UNÆ
COHÆREDUM JOHANNIS HARWELL, ARMIGERI; QUI QUIDEM FRANCISCUS, OCTOGINTA-QUATUOR JAM ANNOS NATUS, PLACIDE EX HAC VITA MIGRAVIT, ANNO D'NI 1606, DIE 3° SEPTEMBRIS."

Arms: On one ſide, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Smith; 2. and 3. Harewell. On an eſcutcheon of pretence, Morton: fig. 43. On the other, The ſame four quarterings; impaling, Argent, a chevron Gules between three morions, Azure, Brudenell; fig. 44.

3. On a flat ſtone, on which are the arms of Carington; impaling, Argent three Text T's Sable, Pate; fig. 45.

"Here lieth the body of the Honourable Frances Carington, wife to the Hon. Charles Carington, and one of the coheirs of Sir John Pate,
of Syſonby, in the county of Leiceſter;
who departed this life the 15th of July, 1693."

Arms of Smith, from the Viſitation of 1619 (ſee p. 29.)

1. Smith, as before; 2. Quarterly, Or and Sable, in the firſt quarter a fleur de lis Gules, Lainham; 3. Gules, a ſaltire Ermine, Nevill; 4. Or fretty Gules, on a canton Per pale Ermine and Or, a gally, ſails furled Sable, Nevill; 5. Gules, a lion rampant between eight billets Or; 6. Sable, three bendlets Gules, over all a chevron Ermine; 7. Barry nebulé of ſix Or and Sable, a canton Ermine, Rolleſton; 8. Azure, a fleur de lis Ermine, Palmer; 9. Azure, three bends Or, a canton Ermine, Biſhopſton; 10. Bendy of ſix, Gules and Vert, over all a chevron of the ſecond; 11. Or, a chevron Gules, a chief indented Vert, Fencotes; 12. Lozengy, Or and Sable, Bezorne. Creſt, a peahen's head eraſed Azure, gorged ducally Or; fig. 28.

Another Copy of the Viſitation gives theſe twelve quarterings: 1. Smith; 2. Lainham; 3. Argent, on a feſs nebulé Sable, three hares' heads couped Or, Harewell; 4. Morton; 5. Woodford; 6. Preſt; 7. Brabazon; 8. Rolleſton; 9. Folvile; 10. Azure, a feſs between two gemelles Argent; 11. Sable, ten bezants, 4. 3. 2. and 1; on a chief Ermine three lozenges Gules, Gate; 12. Gules, a feſs nebulé Or. Creſt, as before; fig. 29.

BARESBY, or BARNESBY,

a conſiderable village within the pariſh of Aſhby Folvile, has been already noticed, under the extracts from the Conqueror's ſurvey, in p. 20.

The abbot and convent of Croxton had ſeveral grants in this lordſhip, as appears by the following extract from their Regiſter:

"Habemus, de dono Walteri filii Galfridi de Neubold, omnes terras quas habuit villâ & territorio de Barniſby, jacentes per diverſas particulas & paſturas pertinentes ad unam bovatam terre quam habuit de dono Willielmi Ruſſell, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Radulphus filius Willielmi de Barniſby remiſit nobis annuum redditum unius oboli & unius quadrantis, in quibus Walterus filius Galfridi de Neubold ſibi tenebatur pro unâ acrâ & unâ rodâ & dimidiâ terre, & tribus quadrantibus prati, in Barniſby.

Idem Radulphus remiſit nobis totam terram & pratum, quam & quod habemus de dono Walteri de Newbold, bercarii, in campis de South Croxton & Barniſby.

Richardus dictus dominus de Eſſeby Folevyle confirmavit nobis totam terram, cum prato, quam habemus in feodo ſuo, de dono Walteri de Neubold, bercarii, in campis de South Croxton & Barniſby.

Item, de dono Matildis filie Roberti de Aulâ de Barniſby, II ſeliones terre in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Habemus, de dono Johannis filii Roberti de Aulâ, unam acram terre, cum holmis, in Barniſby, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam[1]."

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis had alſo ſome property in this lordſhip:

"Habemus in Baryſby redditum ſubſcriptum, ex dono Petri de Lincolniâ, ſicut patet in Barkby.

Joh̃es Pyke tenet unam bovatam terre, & reddit IIIIs̃.

Radulphus Gyſſyng tenet II bovatas terre, & reddit VIIs̃. VIIIđ.

Willus Monke tenet IIII acras prati, & reddit IIIIs̃.

Omnes tenentes noſtri de Baryſby venient ad viſum francum noſtri de Thurmaſton. Summa XIIIIs̃. VIIIđ.

Require terrarium predictarum bovatarum in terrario fratris W. Charyte[2]."

In 1274, it was found that John le Deſpenſer died ſeiſed of one moiety of the manor of Barneſby, held of Wygen de la Mare by homage and the ſervice of 4d.; as alſo the other moiety of the ſaid manor, held of Hugh le Deſpenſer, by the ſervice of the fourth part of one knight's fee; and that Hugh ſon of Hugh le Deſpenſer is the heir of the ſaid John[3].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Bareſby, Aſhby Folvile, and Dalby Chaucombe, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1299, it appeared that there were certain freeholders at Barneby (an appurtenance of the manor of Thorpe Ernald) who, by antient cuſtom, paid 7s. 6d. at the view of frankpledge yearly on the feaſt of St. Martin; and that William la Zouch, the ſon and heir of dame Milicent de Montalt, deceaſed, was then aged 22[4].

In 1304, Richard de Aſheby, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held 3 acres of land, and 6s. 8d. rent ariſing out of the lands of five freeholders in Barneſby, with the third part of the lordſhip of the whole town there, of John de la Sale, paying £2. a year[5].

In 1343, Henry de Ferrars died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thorpe Ernald, Aylmerſthorpe, Thurnby, Petlinge, Buſſeby, Bellegrave, Croppeſton, Barneſby, Babbegrave, and Atterton, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held[6].

In 1346, William la Zouch of Haringworth (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtoc, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 2s. for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Barnſby, parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon[7].

In 1387, Henry de Ferrars, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Barneſby, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held[8].

In 1395, William la Zouch of Haringworth, knight, died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Babbegrave, Dalby, and Barneſby, called Burdett's fee, which Thomas Aſhby of Louſeby held[9].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Bareſby was rated at 2l. 9s.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 3s.

In 1444, William de Ferrers of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of the manor of Barneſby, which William lord Zouch of Haringworth held of the ſame William[10].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of the manor of Barneſby, which ſir William de la Zouch of Haringworth held[11].

In 1564 there were 25 families in Bareſby.

Feb. 11, 1572-2, ſome lands at Bareſby and South Croxton, known by the name of St. John's leys, formerly belonging to the order of St. John of Jeruſalem, and afterward to the priory of Tutbury, were aſſigned to ſir Chriſtopher Hatton[12].

In 1583, it was found that Francis Cave, eſq. died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, and divers lands and tenements thereunto belonging, in the town of Bareſby; and that they were held of the queen, in ſocage, by the rent of 10s. a year[13].

George Smith, eſq. died July 31, 1607, ſeiſed of certain lands in Bareſby[14].

The freeholders at Bareſby in 1630 were, Andrew Picke, Richard Cooke, Arthur Woodford, and William Gillſon.

In 1722, 19 freeholders polled, and 17 in 1775.

The chapel of Bareſby, in which divine ſervice was formerly performed three times a week by the miniſter of Aſhby Folvile, has long been deſecrated.

NEWBOLD FOLVILE,

formerly a village, but long ſince depopulated; the ſite of which is on the South ſide, and near, the brook which runs from Aſhby Folvile towards the river Wreke. It is about a quarter of a mile South-Weſt from Gaddeſby, near the foot-way from that village to South Croxton.

No houſe now remains; but traces of buildings are viſible. The laſt houſe that was ſtanding here, the inhabitants of Gaddeſby ſay, was "the hall beyond the brocke," alluded to on an altar-tomb of Mary Barnes[15] at Gaddeſby. The hall too has been totally demoliſhed many years.

The ſite of this ſmall lordſhip (or townſhip, as the inhabitants of Gaddeſby call it), at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey, has been already given in p. 20. It contains only about 200 acres of old incloſure, chiefly, if not wholly, the property of Mrs. Anne Ayre, relict of John Ayre, eſq. late of Gaddeſby.

---

[1] Peck, MSS.; from a quarto MS. preſerved among the muniments at Belvoir Caſtle, p. 26. b.

[2] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xvi. a.

[3] Eſch. 3 Edw. I. N° 2. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 27 Edw. I. N° 50. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 33 Edw. I. N° 249. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 19 Ric. II. N° 52. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[11] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[12] 1 Pars Original. 13 Eliz. Rot. 7.

[13] Eſch. 26 Eliz.

[14] Inq. at Leiceſter, 16 Jan. 1607-8.

[15] Daughter of Richard Chambers, eſq. of Gaddeſby; of whom ſee under that townſhip in Weſt Goſcote Hundred.

BRITANNICÆ VIRTUTIS IMAGO; or, The Effigies of True Fortitude, expreſſed to the life in the famous Actions of that incomparable Knight, Major-General SMITH, who is here repreſented, June 1644[1].

"To the immortal Memory of that ever-famous Gentleman, the Glory of our Engliſh Nation, Sir JOHN SMITH, Knight, Major-General of His Majeſty's Weſtern Army under the command of the Right Honourable the Lord Hopton; his ſervant and admirer conſecrated this, E. W."

WHEN the reign of James, the prudent Monarch of Great Britain's United Empire, drew near a period; at Skits in Warwickſhire (a manor of the Sheldons) was born this Ornament of our Nation I am about to treat of; by a choice and ſelected branch of the ſtout and valiant Markhams of Nottinghamſhire, married to ſir Francis Smith, of Wootton Wavers, in the county of Warwick; heir to the noble and antient family of the Caringtons, famous for ſir Michael Carington, ſtandard-bearer to our Firſt Richard in the Holy Land, and renowned for the loyalty of John Carington, eſq. to his Lord and Sovereign King Richard the Second, upon whoſe depoſal he was forced to fly into Italy, where he grew famous for many brave and valiant acts; yet, at his return, he changed his name to Smith, which all his poſterity have ever ſince retained, until now it hath pleaſed his royal Majeſty to renew the antient name of this family in the preſent lord Carington, ſir John Smith's eldeſt brother. The eſcutcheon of this family is ſo near a ſemblance to the badge of the moſt noble order of the Garter, that, in my judgement, it convinces itſelf to be a kingly gift, beſtowed upon them for ſome notable ſervice atchieved by their predeceſſors: the particular definition whereof I leave to the Heralds, as a ſtar viſible only in their horizon; but, I am ſure, I do not remember to have ſeen any family in England, excepting this, to bear, in a white field, a red croſs, in a form ſo genuine to that we call St. George's.

This ſir Francis Smith was a gentleman of that integrity of life and noble nature, that to this day his memory is ſtill precious amongſt thoſe that knew him. He was remarkably happy for many worthy children and fair poſſeſſions, but eſpecially in his conſort, a Lady of thoſe excellences, that we could expect no ordinary piece of Nature from her; being alſo eminent for her hoſpitality and charity, but eſpecially for her loyalty, ſo firm and ſpotleſs, that it is almoſt incredible and beyond example what that noble Lady hath ſuſtained, when, for a ſmall contribution, ſhe might have ſecured herſelf; ſhe rather chooſing, with a magnanimous patience, to undergo the loſs of all than in the leaſt manner to comply with the King's enemies.

Before the birth of the heroic child, this virtuous Lady and her Knight fell dangerouſly ſick, as if they had both contributed their utmoſt powers to his perfections. Nature perceives him fit for her expectation; and therefore, impatient we ſhould longer expect her bounty, expoſes him to the world at leaſt a month before the uſual time. It may be that ſhe deſired that, even in this birth, the child ſhould make the firſt trial of his valour, and beyond example there expreſs his magnanimity and contempt of danger.

I ſhall not need to aſk pardon, if I paſs by his infancy, as affording nothing but merely ſhadows of a great ſpirit, incloſed in that little caſket, in a ſleep (as it were), expecting his maturity. His infancy paſt, he is brought from his nurſe, and committed to his mother's care, where his education could not chooſe but be excellent; for, without vanity I ſpeak it, this kingdom affords not a Lady that has given more happy teſtimonies of her ſkill in that kind. In the time of his childhood, his ſweet and tractable nature made him ſingularly beloved in his father's family; and to this day many of them much pleaſe themſelves with his pretty policies and witty ſtratagems to compaſs his ſports, and deceive ſuch as held a hand over him.

He is no ſooner capable of learning, but he is ſent to a kinſman's houſe, amongſt other young gentlemen allied unto him, to lay the foundation of a ſcholar; where, notwithſtanding his active diſpoſition, he profited ſo well that, after ſome reaſonable preparative, his parents, deſirous to make him more accompliſhed, ſent him to ſtudy and travel beyond ſeas; where he made ſo good a progreſs both in the Greek and Latin tongues, that, in one of the prime claſſes, he obtained the Emperor's chair, a ſeat of eminent difference from all the reſt, and due to him that is judged to excel his fellows.

But nevertheleſs he is impatient of this manner of life: his noble mind aſpires to greater actions, and will no longer be contained in this courſe. The Almighty begins to call him to that ſtate wherein he is pleaſed to employ him, who will not be ſatisfied until he be ſent for England; where arriving, contrary to his friends' deſire, he finds a welcome accompanied with rebukes, which he long patiently ſuſtained without any effect. At laſt, merely to comply with them, againſt his own nature, he takes his courſe the ſecond time for the Low Countries; where he takes his books in hand, and again falls to his ſtudy, not without daily conflicts with himſelf in overcoming his contrary inclination; but there he demonſtrated his virtue, in conquering himſelf to ſatisfy the deſires of his parents and friends, declaring he knew as well how to maſter his paſſions as his bodily enemies; which, in a thing of that nature ſo to overcome himſelf, conſidering his age and ſpirits, was very remarkable.

In the place where now he reſides there happened a commotion, in ſome ſort reſembling ours; where the dregs and rude multitude of the city bandy againſt their prince, magiſtrates, and nobility, in ſuch ſort that nothing but ruin ſeemed to hang over the heads of the latter. The rebels were ſo numerous and violent, growing daily ſo inſolent, that at laſt the beſt ſorts were compelled to endeavour their own defence in the beſt manner they could; for, divers of their perſons and houſes were violated and plundered, the ſame being imminent to the reſt: wherefore they arm themſelves as they can, and reſolve to reſiſt, if any one ſhall hereafter be aſſaulted. This quickly produced a ſkirmiſh; wherein the multitude prevailing, our gallant young ſtudent hears of it, and can no longer contain himſelf, but goes out of the college where he reſided, takes arms from the next he meets in the ſtreet, and joins to the weaker ſide, putting himſelf into the head of them; where with his brave carriage he doth ſo encourage and revive them, as if his valour had an influence upon each in particular. Wherefore they give a freſh aſſault to the enemy, and that with ſo good ſucceſs, that they foiled their vanquiſhers, who were ſoon daunted when they ſaw our young champion had laid their mechanic leader upon the ground, and ſtill beſtowed his ſtrokes ſo freely on all that he came near, that the reſt judged it better to give ground than come in reach of his ſword.

Their retreat was ſo ſudden and confuſed, that much of their plunder was left behind, when our noble youth happens upon a cloak-bag full of ſilver plate. His eminent ſervices this day procured him ſpecial thanks from the chief of the city; but the other ſide were ſo enraged againſt him, that they vowed to hew him in pieces; and, to that end, laid wait every way to compaſs him. By this time an army comes, to puniſh the offenders, and ſettle the city. Our young ſoldier, glad of this opportunity, ſeconded with the neceſſity of avoiding the people's fury, bids his books farewell, lays by his gown, and takes his ſword in hand, repairing to the camp, where he puts himſelf into a poſture fit for a gentleman of his birth, under an expert commander; and behaved himſelf with that gallantry as purchaſed him love and admiration from all that knew him.

---

[1] Oxford: Printed by Henry Hall in the year 1644. King's Pamphlets, in the Britiſh Muſeum, ſmall 4to, 163. 10.

You have ſeen, his introduction to martial attempts was both fortunate and gallant; where you may obſerve, that this noble ſpirit in his firſt enterprize ſhewed a natural averſion from baſe and vulgar actions; and that he diſdained to accommodate himſelf to popular humours, chooſing rather to ſuffer ſhipwreck with the nobler ſort, than to ſtand idle and let them periſh, if his endeavour might the leaſt conduce to their ſafety.

It was not long after he had entered the ſchool of Mars, but he had occaſion given to make trial of his wit as well as fortitude; for, a party of their horſe attempted to beat up the enemies' quarters, and at the firſt entered the place; where, out of inconſideration and a deſire of pillage, they made a way to their own ruin by diſmounting; for the enemy, finding a way to gather a head and call more aid, came and ſurprized the diſperſed ſoldiers. Our heroic youth had ſtill diſcreetly kept on horſeback, and prevailed with ſome few more to do the like, which had all eſcaped, had not the enemy ſtrangely circumvented them: they, ſeeing no hope of eſcape left, reſolved to force a way by mere ſtrength. In this attempt he, leading the way, was knocked off his horſe with ſuch a violence that quite aſtoniſhed him. The enemy gave him for dead, he falling proſtrate on his face: wherefore they buſied themſelves in ſearching for and purſuing the reſt, making ſure of him at leiſure. At laſt, recovering his ſpirits and memory, conſidering how he came there, he lies ſtill for a while, till, hearing the ſtreets quiet, he looked about very circumſpectly, and diſcovers all clear, with a ſtable open over againſt him, furniſhed with horſes ready-ſaddled. He takes hold of the opportuity, and goes in, chooſes one of the prime horſes, commanding the boy there not to dare to ſpeak till he was gone, as he tendered his own life. After he is out, he puts ſpurs to his horſe, which with ſuch celerity conveyed him thence, that he eſcaped his purſuers, and, unhurt, paſſed by divers that met him. When he arrived at the army, divers of the chief commanders were full of joy to ſee him, whoſe fall but even now they did generally there condole. The general himſelf did praiſe his ingenuity and courage, giving him one hundred pieces for the horſe he had brought away.

This put a ſecond vigour into him, both encouraging and enabling him to continue in his preſent courſes: his ſucceſs doth animate him, and his reward gives life to his encouragements. He continues with ſingular reſpect and love amongſt the commanders and ſoldiers; moſt of the latter propoſing him as an example to themſelves. At laſt, ſome accident or other happens, which calls him into England. His departure is very unpleaſing to that army, nor can he get away without engagements of his honour for his ſpeedy return. By this time his fame is grown eminent, and his friends begin to reliſh his courſes, which makes his welcome of a better temper than before; for, now they did honour thoſe excellences in him which ſo proſperouſly began to flouriſh.

He had ſcarce taken time to viſit his friends after his arrival, but his promiſe calls him back; and thither alſo he is afterwards by letter invited. The employment was ſo grateful unto him, that to his friends he makes a neceſſity of virtue, and tells them he had engaged his honour for his return. Under this pretence he bids them farewel, and immediately repairs to his former ſervice in the Netherlands; where he ſerves in the lieutenant-general's own troop, whoſe favourite he was, preferred in eſteem before the reſt.

I am ſorry that I am not able to give accounts of ſundry of his actions deſerving memory, performed in this time; divers of which I have heard related, though now I cannot call them to mind. One thing I cannot omit; to wit, the taking of a ſignal colour in a memorable fight in thoſe parts, wherein the honour of the adverſe army was much engaged. And here I may take occaſion to expreſs his modeſty, in my judgement very ſingular; for, in the gaining of thoſe colours, he having ſlain the man that carried them, another takes them up when they were down, whom the enemies aſſail in ſuch manner, that there had that party died, had not our Engliſh Gallant reſcued both him and the colours. This ungrateful man, out of too much vanity, claims the reward for the action; and ſuch was this young gentleman's modeſty, that he reſigned it, and, as much as in him lay, the honour of the act, unto him.

This and ſuch like gained him an extraordinary portion of honour and eſteem amongſt all, but eſpecially endeared him to his general; inſomuch that he ſeeks occaſion to diſplace his own captain-lieutenant, thereby to make way for his advancement to that place; which when our Gallant perceives, with anger he expreſſes his diſlike of it, and abſolutely refuſes the offer: but, ſtill ſeeing his general promoting the buſineſs, and privately urging it, with a modeſt indignation he proteſts that he will not build on another's ruin; and therefore quits the ſervice. Here may you behold an eminent effect of that true nobility which inhabited his generous breaſt, and how much he diſdained to treat, upon another's head, for his own advancement.

Immediately after this, the Scottiſh tumults began at home; whereupon, an honourable invitation concurring with his own natural inclination to that ſervice, he makes for England; chooſing rather to ſerve his own Sovereign than any foreign Prince. This was unwelcome news to the Belgian army, that he ſhould now forſake that field where his laurel began ſo happily to flouriſh: but he will by no means be any longer detained from doing ſervice to his own Lord and Sovereign; therefore, requeſting them in this reſpect to diſpenſe with him, he takes his leave. There never went thence a young gentleman more beloved, or of whoſe loſs the ſoldiers were more ſenſible. When he was gone, long time and often was he a ſubject of their diſcourſe. One praiſed his incomparable valour; another, his diligence; a third, his obedience and modeſty; a fourth, his courteſy and truly noble nature; in fine, they generally concluded that he was a prime ornament to our whole nation: nay, ſome chief men amongſt them did, by letters, confeſs they did emulate England in the poſſeſſion of him.

By this time is our young Pithocomini arrived in England (for, that ſurname the Netherlands had already honoured him withal). He begins his command under that noble and valiant knight, ſir John Digby, whoſe lieutenant he was; in which place he carried himſelf ſo worthily, that no one's gallantry in that ſervice was more famous than his, of which he gave ſingular evidence in the fight at Newburne; at which time, his captain's captivity gave him occaſion, for his releaſe, ſhortly after to make trial both of his valour and diſcretion in a very remarkable manner.

Douglas ſheriff of Tividale (whilſt the Scottiſh army lay heavy upon the North of England) adventured, with a party of about fourſcore horſe, to plunder a houſe in thoſe parts, called Stapleford, belonging to maſter Pudſey, a gentleman of quality; who, as ſoon as they are arrived, finds means to bring intelligence to his majeſty's army; where Lieutenant Smith, ſeeing few, upon the news, ſhew any great alacrity or forwardneſs to undertake his reſcue, proffers himſelf to take it upon him, angry (as it were) to ſee ſo little commiſeration or reſolution in many others who were more concerned in it than he, being authoriſed to go, ſelects a ſmall party of horſe (of a far leſs number than many judged requiſite for his undertaking), thereby to make his enterpriſe more honourable; calling along with him two or three trumpets beſides his own, meaning to make that diſcreet uſe of them which ſhortly follows: this done, he ſets forward towards the place, where he arrives with that privacy, that, diſponing all his trumpets but one on ſeveral ſides of the houſe, he comes upon the centry at unawares, and cleaves him down through head-piece and all; then commands the trumpet he had reſerved to ſound a charge, which all the other did ſecond, with great amazement to the Scots, who, thinking themſelves to be beſieged on all ſides, could not reſolve whether it were better to fight or retreat; either of which they might well have done, had they known how few their aſſailants were. In this confuſion, an old woman of the houſe found means to let them in at a door unguarded; where being entered, they killed ſixteen in the place; and the reſt of the ſoldiers, with Douglas their commander, ſurrendered themſelves to the mercy of this valiant and prudent gentleman, who led them captive to his Majeſty's army; rejoicing that he had got one wherewith to releaſe his captain; which by exchange was immediately performed.

This was the only action, redounding to his Majeſty's honour and the credit of our nation, performed in all that ſervice; for, our own army was then ſo confounded with faction, and, conſequently, expoſed to treachery, that we proſpered in nothing we then undertook. What honour and fame he gained by this I need not expreſs; for, there are few, I preſume, in this kingdom that are ignorant of it; every one praiſing and admiring ſo much diſcretion and ſo brave a ſpirit in a gentleman ſo young. Not long after, our royal Sovereign, out of his tender compaſſion to both the nations, and his unwillingneſs to engage them in a civil war, finds means to cloſe up the breach between them, though not without prejudice to his royal prerogative.

Now our brave ſoldier betakes himſelf to a retired life in his mother's houſe at Aſhby Folvile in Leiceſterſhire, not aiming at any farther voyage; for, he prudently foreſaw that the former fire, though now covered with aſhes of pacification, would ſhortly break out into a greater flame than before, and was but a preamble to this horrible and unnatural rebellion, which now ſufficiently appears in its own ſhape. He ſaid, "he knew evidently, that, though the Scots had obtained their wiſhes, yet the faction, who invited them to what they did, were as little ſatisfied as ever, and, conſequently, their unruly ſpirits could not long contain themſelves out of action, but ſhortly would endeavour to ſet the kingdom on fire." He in the interim contented himſelf with this retirement, being, by reaſon of this expectation, unwilling to take any command abroad.

His Majeſty was pleaſed, in reſpect of his eminent carriage in the laſt action, to offer to make him a Knight-baronet, as a princely reward and encouragement for his farther progreſs in his heroic courſes; he, conſidering himſelf to be the youngeſt of four brothers, that his revenues did nothing agree with the maintenance of ſuch a title, and believing that honour on thoſe conditions would be a mere burthen unto him, modeſtly refuſed it, contenting himſelf with his former condition: which action doth clear him from all aſperſion of vanity. This interim he beſtowed in ſo good a manner, that he acquired ſingular love and reſpect from all that converſed with him. His converſation was ſo ſweet and affable, and his exceſſes ſo rare, that moſt men in a ſoldier admired that temperance and courteſy. This time he neglected not frequently to read and ſtudy books of military diſcipline and inſtruction, but thoſe ſelected, and of the choiceſt ſort: to theſe he added hiſtories, ſeeking to extract thence in ſhort time by theory what many years' practice would hardly afford him. He did well diſcover the ignorance of ſuch as are only trained up in the ſchool of practice under a few years' experience; and confeſſed that "a mere practical knowledge could not make a perfect ſoldier;" and that "practice ought neither to march, in obſtinate blindneſs, without ſpeculatives of hiſtorical knowledge and example; nor theſe again without practice; but that both of them ſhould be reſpected as neceſſary parts to make a complete ſoldier."

Long time paſſed not before the unhappy actors in this preſent tragedy, forgetful of the honour of our nation, their duty to their Sovereign, or love to their country, bring to light this unnatural and ugly monſter of Rebellion and Civil War, not reſpecting their own happineſs in the calm of a happy peace, or felicity in a king of that excellent temper, for all perfections belonging to a good Prince, that hardly ever did Britannia's diadem crown the temple of his equal. This ſuddenly grows to that heighth and inſolence, that it was out of his Majeſty's power to ſuppreſs it, ſeeing himſelf on a ſudden deprived of all his arms, ſhips, forts, and neceſſaries for war; but ſoon he is brought to that exigent, that either Himſelf, his Queen, and royal progeny, with the whole kingdom, muſt be ruined, or elſe he muſt endeavour to oppoſe himſelf, by all poſſible means, to hinder its farther progreſs. To this end, he caſts himſelf into the arms of Divine Providence, and, out of nothing, begins to raiſe an army for his own defence. Preſently our young Worthy is ſought for, and made captain lieutenant under the lord John Stuart (brother to the duke of Richmond and Lenox), a gentleman of a wonderful ſweet and noble diſpoſition.

This troop was very eminent in reſpect of the commander, upon whom the eyes of moſt men were fixed in extraordinary expectation, wherein whether they were deceived or no, let his ſucceeding actions declare. In the time of his quartering at Lincoln, there happened a paſſage worth noting. Not long before, there was a gentleman of quality in the king's army, taken priſoner by the proto-rebels of Kingſton upon Hull, and there, in time of his durance, was abuſed by one of the Wrays, heir to one of the chief houſes of that name in Lincolnſhire, who, like a jay, caſt a glaſs of beer in contempt into the captive gentleman's face; whereof our gallant commander hearing, was much incenſed, determining to vindicate the wronged gentleman, if ever occaſion were offered. Whilſt he was at Lincoln, this Hotſpur Wray comes to town; whereof he having notice, repairs to the houſe, and enters the houſe where Wray and divers others ill-affected to his Majeſty were met; he demands of him whether he were the man who at ſuch a time abuſed one of his Majeſty's ſoldiers in Hull? The other peremptorily acknowledging the fact, he takes occaſion with his cane to pay him his hire, and did it to the purpoſe, in ſuch a manner that the others preſent, daunted with his courage, dared not once to ſtir in Wray's defence. This was an argument of his noble nature, and ſerved the ſoldiers and townſmen to laugh at a long time after. The like he did ſince on a knight of greater name at Bulk, in vindication of a noble lord to whom that knight had been too ungrateful: indeed, his diſpoſition was ſuch, that he could ſooner bear to ſee himſelf wronged than any other ingenuous man, and would ſooner vindicate another's injury than his own.

He could not endure to ſee the inſolence of ſoldiers over the poor peaſants and country-people; neither would he tolerate it, if it lay in his power, either by foul or fair means, to remedy; which an officer of the army (who thought himſelf no mean man) experienced certainly at Leiceſter. This man uſurps power, upon I know not what authority, to preſs and diſpoſe of horſes at his pleaſure; which he performed with that inſolence as was very grievous to the people: wherefore they complained to this generous Commander, who immediately queſtioned the other about it, and, finding him both very guilty and peremptory in his offences, lays him (although he were his nameſake) by the head and heels in the ſtable amongſt the horſes, and there let him lie, durante beneplacito, till he was entreated to releaſe him.

By this time the cockatrice of this rebellion was grown to ſome maturity; and, amongſt all that ſought to lop the growing monſter, our noble Captain Smith gave one of the firſt blows: the particulars whereof, as they are related authentically by the herald (who extorted the relation from his own mouth), I will here inſert. In the beginning of Auguſt 1642, he marched with the lord John Stuart's troop into Warwickſhire, there to meet the noble earl of Northampton, who was then in arms for his majeſty; Captain Bortue's troop marched with him; and at Rugby, on the edge of the aforeſaid county, he quartered the 8th of that month; where he underſtood that at Kilſby, in Northamptonſhire, about two miles diſtant, the inhabitants had put themſelves in arms, againſt his majeſty's proclamation; he, therefore, conceiving it fit to diſarm them, did that night ſet a ſtrong guard in Rugby of about 30 horſe, to the end he might draw out of the town at any hour with the leſs noiſe or notice.

Before break of day he marched out, the morning being very wet; and, before it was light, coming to Kilſby town ſide, drew up his horſe in a body. As ſoon as it was clear day, he entered the town; where preſently he found the people gathering together, ſome with muſkets or other guns, others with pitchforks and clubs, he aſked them "what they meant?" and told them, "he had no purpoſe to do them harm," entreating them to deliver up their arms for his Majeſty's ſervice. The unruly people no whit hearkened to his courteous deſires, but furiouſly aſſaulted his troop (which could not be drawn up into a body in regard of the ſtraitneſs of the paſſage): they wounded two or three of his men and ſome horſes; yet made he ſhift to diſarm ſome of them; and then advances to the conſtable's houſe, where he finds more company; but commanded his men not to diſcharge a piſtol upon pain of death, hoping yet by fair means to qualify them. Immediately divers ſhot are made from the windows at him; whereupon, he commanded his men to give fire, and ſo preſently diſpatched three or four of them; which the others perceiving, ran away, all except an old man that with his pitchfork ran at Captain Smith, and twice ſtruck the tines thereof againſt his breaſt, who, by reaſon of his arms under a looſe coat, received no hurt; yet could not this old man by any intreaty be perſuaded to forbear, till a piſtol quieted him. Here he took 40 muſkets; and the ſame day marched towards the valiant earl of Northampton, whom he met with Brooke's ordnance about three miles from Warwick, and attended him thither. In this action, if you conſider the condition of thoſe times, you will diſcover a great deal of diſcretion in the managery of it, and nothing ſavouring of raſhneſs or vanity, ome taints whereof you might well expect in a young gentleman ſo ſprightful and overflowing with valour.

The next action remarkable, that our fortunate Gallant had a hand in, was that famous fight, September the 23d, the ſame year, near Worceſter, where he charged with that bravery and diſcretion, that many confeſs he did ſingularly promote the victory. Thus daily he gained new honours, and his laurel ſtill flouriſhed with more ſplendor than could be expected in his age.

To this at Worceſter ſucceeds that memorable battle near Keinton, in Warwickſhire; the particulars whereof following we owe to Mr. Dugdale's (Cheſter herald) careful preſervation. His troop, at this time being in the lord Grandiſon's regiment, was drawn up in the left wing of the king's army. This day his ſingular valour was moſt eminent for ſundry notable actions, eſpecially his reſcue of his Majeſty's banner royal, vulgarly called the ſtandard; for, after the rebels' left wing of horſe and divers regiments of foot were routed, and execution followed by his Majeſty's horſe of both wings through and beyond the town of Keinton, it happened that this prudent commander ſaw ſome eminent perſons of his Majeſty's army in purſuit of the flying rebels, which he conceived had been appointed, as a reſerve of horſe, for aſſiſtance of our foot; which much amazed him, hearing both armies at that inſtant in ſharp fight; whereupon, he preſently ſeeks out the lord Grandiſon, ſir Charles Lucas, and ſome other officers of quality, and importuned their ſpeedy rallying together of what horſe in this confuſion could be ſuddenly got, that ſo ſpeedily they might return to the aſſiſtance of our foot.

His excellent advice was very well reſented by thoſe noble gentlemen; and, accordingly, they ſoon rallied about 200 horſe, and marched back towards the armies then in fight. In their paſſage, they met with a great part of the rebels of Charles Eſſex's regiment, running confuſedly towards Keinton town with their colours: thoſe they preſently charged, ſlew ſome, returned, routed the reſt, and took all their colours; this done, theſe horſe rallied again, and advanced; but they had not paſſed far before they met with about three troops of the rebels' horſe, which were wheeled off from the rear of their foot: theſe alſo they charged, routed, and followed in execution ſo far, that now this brave Commander could rally but 14 men together, to proſecute his return; with which, as he paſſed ſtill up towards the rear of the rebels' army, he met with a great part of the lord Wharton's regiment, that formerly were routed alſo, and now were, with their colours, confuſedly haſtening towards Keinton town: theſe with his 14 horſe he valiantly charged, and, routing them, took their colours. The major's colours were taken by himſelf, which he delivered to one Chichly, a groom of the duke of Richmond, who had taken a colour of Charles Eſſex's regiment.

But now, of all his 14, there were no more left but himſelf and Chichley; the reſt following the pillage of the routed rebels. As theſe two were paſſing on towards our army, this mirror of chivalry eſpies ſix men (three cuiraſſiers and three arquebuſiers) on horſeback, guarding a ſeventh on foot, who was carrying off the field a colour rolled up, which he conceived to be one of the ordinary colours of his Majeſty's life-guards, and therefore, ſeeing them ſo ſtrong, intended to avoid them; whilſt he was thus conſidering, a boy on horſeback calls to him, ſaying, "Captain Smith, Captain Smith, they are carrying away the ſtandard!" He would not ſuddenly believe the boy, till, by great aſſeverations, he had aſſured him it was the ſtandard; who forthwith ſaid, "they ſhall have me with it, if they carry it away;" and, deſiring Chichley, if he ſaw him much engaged, in- with his rapier at the foot-man that carried the banner (who was then ſecretary to Eſſex, the rebels' general), ſaying, "Traitor, deliver the ſtandard;" and wounded him into the breaſt. Whilſt he was bent forward to follow his thruſt, one of thoſe cuiraſſiers with a pole axe wounded him in the neck through the collar of his doublet, and the reſt gave fire at him with their piſtols, but without any farther hurt than blowing of ſome powder into his face.

No ſooner was he recovered upright, but he made a thruſt at the cuiraſſier that wounded him, and ran him into the belly; whereupon, he preſently fell: at which fight all the reſt ran away. Then he cauſed a foot-ſoldier that was near at hand to reach him up the banner, which he brought away with the horſe of that cuiraſſier. Immediately comes up a great body of his Majeſty's horſe, which were rallied together (according to his firſt advice), to charge the enemy again; with whom he ſtaid, delivering the ſtandard to maſter Robert Hatton, a gentleman of ſir Richard Willyes's troop, to carry forthwith to his Majeſty: ſo far was he from praiſing his own action, or gaping after honour or reward. The day was now ſo far ſpent, that he had time left only to reſcue Colonel Richard Fielding, who was taken captive by the rebels, and was leading away; whilſt, in the interim, our heroic Commander comes, and, in deſpite of them, ſets him at liberty. Surely, this day's work deſerves eternal memory, and concludes that he was born this day to place a laurel-garland on his Sovereign's head, and preſerve the honour of his nation. Many confeſs that the preſervation of our foot is due to his prudent foreſight and advice. If his valour had afforded us nothing elſe but the reſcued ſtandard, we could not ſufficiently celebrate his praiſe: it had ſurely, in the people's eyes, been a ſad omen of ſucceeding enterprizes, had we not, by his fortunate and courageous atchievements, repaired ſo ſingular a loſs; but this, on the other ſide, encouraged them who, ſeeing the ſtandard ſo near loſt, yet happily regained, conceived hopes that, though the royal diadem was deeply engaged, yet, by the fortunate endeavour of ſuch noble heroes, that alſo, together with the kingdom, might be recovered.

The next morning, king Charles ſends for him to the top of Edge-hill; where his majeſty (though the modeſt gentleman did what lay in him to avoid the honour) knighted him for his ſingular valour. Immediately our worthy knight (ſeeing the rebels, having gathered all the reſidue of their ſtrength into a body, ſtood drawn up near the ſide of Keinton town) ſignifies a great deſire he had that our horſe ſhould charge them: but, that not being reſolved, he craves liberty to have a ſmall party aſſigned him, with which he would endeavour to fetch off ſome of their cannon; which being granted, he marched down into Keinton field, and of his party he drew out about 30 to approach near the body of the rebels, and face them, whilſt horſes were ſpanned-in to draw off the pieces. He commanded this body himſelf, facing their main body within muſket-ſhot; but their horſe were ſo awed with the former day's work, that they dared not adventure to charge him with that ſmall party; with which he brought off three braſs pieces of cannon that ſtood about the left wing of the rebels' army in the battle; which action our whole army ſtood looking on with wonder and applauſe. He concludes this day's work with the generous aſſiſtance he gave ſir Gervaſe Scroop's ſon in fetching of his valiant father, ſtripped naked, and almoſt dead with the loſs of ſo much blood by 19 wounds.

Theſe valiant actions made him very eminent in his Majeſty's ſight, ſo that the royal munificence gives him a troop of his own, and the noble lord Grandiſon elects him for major to his own regiment: wherein he did ſingular ſervice in divers places, exerciſing all parts of an excellent commander; witneſs his gallant behaviour in the fight at Brainsford, and his beating up the enemies' quarters, with his ſoldier-like retreat the ſame year, in December, near Wincheſter; where with a ſmall party he dared to go into the mouth of a powerful army, to beat up their quarters; and afterward, when they came upon him, when he had done great execution in the place, with ſuch diſcretion to make his retreat, ſcarce with the loſs of a man, in deſpite of them all.

He ſtill more and more expreſſed the greatneſs of his ſpirit, and true magnanimity, when, the next day, the potent enemy had beſieged them in Wincheſter caſtle; he would have iſſued out, and tried the utmoſt of fortune, rather than ſubmit to thoſe whom he ſo much deteſted; one of which, in reſpect of their exigence in proviſion, they muſt of neceſſity do: but, when he ſaw the reſt diſclaiming and not concurring, he was fain to deſiſt; but, nevertheleſs, diſdaining to have any hand in the parley, refuſed to ſubſcribe to the articles of ſubmiſſion. How undauntedly he carried his captivity is incredible; as alſo how boldly he looked Adverſity in the face. The Almighty, it ſeems, was reſolved to make trial of his fortitude every way, to ſee whether he were as courageous in ſuffering as in fighting, or as mild a captive as a modeſt conqueror. Very magnanimouſly did he ſupport this tedious trial of nine months' impriſonment; where the enemy perceived his worth ſo well, that they were loth to part with him on any condition that might be termed reaſonable.

Nevertheleſs, when the Divine Wiſdom ſaw him ſufficiently exerciſed in this ſchool of Patience, he is at laſt releaſed, to the ſingular joy and comfort of moſt brave ſpirits in the King's army; ſome of which, even with tears, at Oxford entertain him. The noble lord Herbert of Ragland woos him to his ſervice, and makes him lieutenant-colonel to his regiment of horſe, with promiſe of a far more eminent place in very ſhort time. In this interim of his command here, I, attracted by the fame which rung through the kingdom of him, repaired unto him, deſiring to ſerve his Majeſty under this matchleſs gentleman's command; and, from that time to his death, was an eye-witneſs of what I ſhall after relate. There I obſerved the love, honour, and reſpect, he had of all the ſoldiers and commanders, which valued him beyond expreſſion. I could not chooſe likewiſe but ſee his exceeding modeſty in the midſt of theſe reſpects and applauſes. In his expedition againſt Maſſey, he expreſſed the natural averſion he had from rifling the country, or enriching himſelf by thoſe baſer means, in his frequent endeavours to reſtrain the ſoldiers from the purſuit thereof; where often he demonſtrated his noble mind ſtored with compaſſion, in tendering the complaints of ſuffering people.

The Court looks upon him as one deſerving greater command and more active employments: wherefore, in his return from the ſaid expedition (where Glouceſter's Idol ſhewed his dexterity in running, as well as his policy in other things), our worthy Knight meets with the King's letter, whereby he is called immediately away to Oxford; where he is no ſooner arrived, but commanded thence by his Majeſty to the Weſt, there to take the place of Major-general to the horſe in that army under the lord John Stuart, by whom at Wincheſter he is entertained with extraordinary welcome; the renowned lord Hopton declaring that he alſo took no little content in the poſſeſſion of ſuch a jewel: indeed, it was impoſſible for a gentleman to find more honour and reſpect than he did from thoſe worthy lords, together with the whole army, the eyes of all being bent upon him.

Our gallant Major-general, now ſettled in his office, begins and proſecutes his affairs with that prudence, courteſy, and magnanimity, that all ſorts of people were enamoured with his true excellence. He won the ſoldiers with his courteſy, the people with his modeſty, and even from his enemies drew he admiration for his gallantry. By theſe means his fame increaſes daily to an unſpeakable height, inſomuch that beyond ſeas alſo he is celebrated as a worthy of the times. He hath here fought ſo good a fight, as claims already the ſpeedy poſſeſſion of a celeſtial diadem; and, to that end, he muſt now be ſummoned hence, but yet in the moſt honourable way that may be, whilſt he is ſacrificing his life for his King and country in the head of a gallant army.

Now approaches the battle at Bramdean, near Alresford, in Hampſhire, March 29, 1644; wherein our Worthy muſt put a period to all his renowned actions. As if he had foreknown what was to ſucceed, the morn before he ſets out of Wincheſter, he prepares himſelf for death in the beſt manner poſſible. All the time our army lay expecting opportunity to aſſail the enemy, every eye looked upon him as the loadſtar of their ſucceſs. In the night before the fight he goes out himſelf, and, killing the enemy's centinel, returns back with honour: in truth, we had not any more daring and vigilant than he.

It is incredible what chearfulneſs and alacrity he ſhewed when the fight drew nigh; at meat that morning bidding his ſoldiers "feed heartily, for they ſhould have princely ſport anon." The fight begins; where our valiant foot beat the rebels out of the woods, and bravely even beſtowed a hopeful victory upon us, till ſome, out of a raſh gallantry, engage both themſelves and the fortune of a glorious day, inſomuch that the horſe muſt needs be commanded up, though upon a great diſadvantage; which our prudent Knight reſents, and to ſome that were near unto him expreſſed a great diſlike of it; but, underſtanding that it was peremptory, he eſteemed his honour ſo highly, that for a world he would not be ſeen to detract from any thing, leſt, if thereupon any diſaſter ſhould enſue, the diſhonour ſhould light upon his innocence. On therefore he goes in heroic obedience, though expecting nothing elſe but what enſued. In a diſtracted manner they are of neceſſity to charge a ſolid body of the rebels' horſe, lying under the protection both of cannon and hedges lined with muſketeers. Their cannon (when he is come almoſt within piſtol-ſhot, with intention to charge in) flies off ſo freely, that amazes his horſe; the fire, even flaſhing in his face, cauſes him to rear and turn ſideways upon the enemy, who, ſeeing all his rider's power employed to keep his ſaddle and recover his horſe, let fly at him as thick as hail; and in this interim comes one from amongſt them, clad in arms like a lobſter [1], who with a carbine gives him his third and mortal wound, in his belly, on the left ſide, beneath his armour: with this wound he falls, and, with him, the fortune of the day and courage of our horſe; for, no ſooner was he down, but, daunted with ſo diſaſtrous an accident, they in great diſorder retreat, ſcarce any but his own troop remaining on that wing, who, reſolving to die rather than loſe ſo brave a leader, advanced, to fetch him off even to the enemy's noſe, and, in deſpite of them, gallantly brought off him, his horſe and arms, with one of the company (a reformado-lieutenant) in a brave revenge, rides up to the armed monſter, and ſhoots him in the eye, ſending him to anſwer for his deteſted fact, in ſo baſe a manner wounding to death a gentleman every way accompliſhed and worthy: the Almighty was not pleaſed that any miſcreant ſhould live to glory in ſo foul an action.

---

[1] Of Sir Arthur Heſilrige's lobſters, ſee vol. II. p. 744.

Our Major general, now wounded, deſires thoſe faithful gentlemen “not to ſuffer him to come into the enemy’s hand, but convey him to ſome place where he may awhile repoſe with ſecurity.” They bring him immediately to the phyſician-general, to be dreſt; who unfortunately miſſed his mortal wound, diſcovering only a bruiſe on the ſame ſide beneath it, and therefore concludes he is out of danger. Upon this, they bring him to Woonſton, a village 5 miles from Wincheſter, where his troop lately quartered: here, after he had drunk a poſſet, and warmed himſelf awhile, he deſires to lie down and reſt: a bed is prepared, and he lies down, immediately falling to ſleep; which conſidered, together with the courage wherewith he ſupported his mortal wounds, made us confident he was out of danger; his being ſo hearty, and no ſighs or groans to be perceived, as generally in dying men. He was no ſooner awake, but he began to queſtion “how far we were from the enemy? what time of night it was?” and “what was become of our army?” and after falls into a formal diſcourſe, wherein he diſpatched ſome particular things concerning himſelf, which, becauſe they were private, I omit; which done, he lies down again, and ſaid, “the conceit of our men running away did more trouble him by far than his wounds;” and, though others were hardly induced to believe it, both now and before, he expreſſed in a mild manner, that his life was near a period, and conjured me, by all the love and reſpect I owed him, to certify his dear mother “he died with a quiet conſcience and a reſigned mind; hoping likewiſe that ſhe would not take his death with too much heavineſs, but rather rejoice that ſhe had a ſon to ſhed his blood for his Sovereign;” a truly Chriſtian and heroical ſpeech, which, though but ſhort, compriſed the very elixir of true fortitude, loyalty, and piety.

After this he prays, making an excellent act of perfect reſignation, ſaying, “O my Lord and God, out of thy infinite goodneſs, have mercy upon me, who caſt myſelf into thy bleſſed hands, heartily wiſhing that thy Divine Will may be performed in me.” Whilſt he was thus, like the ſwan, ſinging ſo ſweet a dying ode with eloquence ſcarcely uſual in his lifetime, his carriage is made ready to take him from danger imminent to a place of more ſecurity, and ſo to Oxford, if it were poſſible. He, notwithſtanding his deadly wounds, comes down ſtairs on foot, and aſcends the carriage with that ſtoutneſs as hardly hath been ſeen in a dying man: all the ſymptoms you could perceive in him were, ſometimes he would bite his nether lip, when his pangs with moſt extremity came upon him. When we drew near Andover, he began to ſay (his ſenſes being a little aſtoniſhed), “Good my lord, let us charge up again, let us charge them once again, and the day is ours.” As ſoon as we entered the town, he began to invoke the ſacred name of Jeſus, often repeating it with a ſoft voice, as if he had taken a guſt and ſweetneſs in the divine virtue of it. Shortly after, over againſt the ſign of the Angel, in a mild and ſweet repoſe he expired; where it would have grieved the hardeſt heart to have ſeen him round-encloſed with ſundry gentlemen, condoling with tears the untimely end of ſo peerleſs a gentleman.

Thus, alas! you have ſeen how this Worthy of our age, one of the prime flowers in our Engliſh garden, is cut off, in his youth, at the age of ſcarce 30 years; who, ſeeing he was arrived to ſuch an eminent excellence in ſo ſhort a time, what might we have expected from him, had he attained but a man’s age? His body at Oxford is entertained with exceeding grief both to court and city. Whilſt his burial is preparing at the College of All Souls in the chancel, his body is expoſed to the people’s view; whither a great number of all ſorts reſorted, ſome to view his wounds, and many to behold the man of whom fame had proclaimed ſo great things, and for whom now there was ſo univerſal lamentation.

The next day, being the firſt of April, in the afternoon, were his funeral rites ſolemnized, with as much ceremony as the ſhortneſs of time and means of preparation for one of his quality would permit; the manner whereof was briefly thus:

Firſt, three trumpets with black ſcarfs went, ſounding very dolefully, before; next, his horſe, whereon he was ſlain, was led by a page, and covered with black to the ground, upon which were placed his eſcutcheons of arms; then two heralds went, carrying his ſword and ſpurs: the corpſe was carried by gentlemen of his own troop, whilſt the pall, ſet with eſcutcheons, was ſupported by the earls of Cleveland and Rivers, the lord Herbert of Ragland, and the lord John Somerſet his brother; ſix colonels, on each ſide the corpſe three, carried his arms: then followed the right honourable the lord Carington, as principal mourner, accompanied by the earls of Northampton and Dover (from perſons of that degree an extraordinary reſpect), with divers others of the nobility: after this came all the chief commanders of horſe and foot then in Oxford, with a multitude of other gentlemen.

In this ſolemn manner proceeded they to Chriſt-church; and in the South-eaſt corner of the chapel, on the South ſide of the choir, was the body of this renowned and gallant ſoldier depoſited, at the head of the late viſcount Grandiſon; where, after the office of buriall was performed, this following expreſſion in honour of his memory was made by the Somerſet herald:

“Thus it hath pleaſed Almighty God to take out of this tranſitory life unto his Divine mercy the valiant and moſt worthy gentleman, Sir John Smith, knight (deſcended of the antient family of Carington, from ſir Michael Carington, ſtandard-bearer to king Richard the Firſt in the Holy Land), who, for his ſignal valour in reſcuing his majeſty’s banner royal, in the battle of Keinton, after it was poſſeſſed by the rebels, at that time received the honour of knighthood from his majeſty in the field; and ſince, in ſundry other battles againſt the rebels, hath given ſingular teſtimony of his loyalty and valour, eſpecially in that memorable battle at Bramdean on Friday laſt, the 29th of March; where, having received ſeveral wounds in purſuit of victory, he died of them the day following at Andover; and here at Oxford is now interred.

God ſave the King!”

Here lies our noble Hero, whoſe memory exacts both from his family and our nation a monument to adorn his triumphant aſhes; which I doubt not but either of them will perform, rather than ſuffer the leaſt ſtain of ſo great neglect or ingratitude reſt upon them. In the mean time, will I make bold to inſcribe an epitaph upon this living monument which I now erect unto him:

His Epitaph.

“Immortalitati Sacrum.

Suſpend your tears, whilſt I declare
Whoſe aſhes here inſhrined are:
This tomb adorns the precious duſt
Of one whoſe fame can never ruſt;
That noble, valiant, gallant Knight,
Renowned SMITH, whoſe name ſo bright
In Honour’s hemiſpheres doth ſhine,
That many judge it is divine;
And that ſome Deity at leaſt
Doth his immortal ſoul inveſt:
Beneath this marble doth remain
The body which did it contain;
And here it lies, to be refin’d,
Until again they be rejoin’d,
Thoſe endleſs glories to poſſeſs,
Which crown the Saints with happineſs.”

I cannot here omit to ſacrifice a tear or two upon his urn in a funeral elegy; though in ſo doing I ſhall effect nothing, but diſcover how ſenſible I am of his loſs, ſo that even my raptures are ſo poſſeſſed with his precious memory, that in them I am not able to conceal my paſſions.

An Elegy.

“Were Aganippe by ſome ſecret vein
Convey’d into the ciſterns of my brain,

'Twould be exhal'd (methinks) in learned tears,
By this bright Sun, new-placed in the ſpheres
Of Immortality: yet grieve not I,
To think he 's ſeated in an orb ſo high;
For, this were envy: I grieve, alas! he 's gone
So great a diſtance from our horizon,
That we, deprived of his precious light,
Eſteem the day a melancholy night:
Yet this my grief is vain, ſince he doth ſhine,
Although eclipſed to theſe rays of mine
By paſſion; which hath from my tender eyes
Exhauſted ſuch a cryſtal ſacrifice
Of ſtreaming tears, that they, by love exhal'd
In miſt-like incenſe hence, and then congeal'd
Into a cloud by grief, deprive my ſight
Of his more glorious and immortal light;
Till grief and love, juſting, as cold and heat
Combat in Nature, like to her beget
Flaſhes of fire, and together mould
Something like thunder out of heat and cold
Jumbling together, loudly may proclaim
To future worlds great SMITH's renowned name,
And, with the clay, this duſky cloud remove,
Which hides from me the bright aſpect I love."
EDW. WALSINGHAM.

There are many whoſe curious affections will exact at my hands many particulars about his inward and outward man, not yet ſpecified: which conſideration makes me here undertake a brief deſcription of him, in ſome ſort by way of prevention to ſatisfy ſuch as would expect it of me.

Sir John Smith was of a middle ſtature, but ſtrongly built. His hair was long and thick, in colour like a ripe filberd; very decent and becoming. His complexion was a moderate ſanguine; but his aſpect was ſo awful and ſtern, that you may conclude he was rather formed to command armies than allure ladies, though, in truth, I have not ſeen a gentleman whoſe ordinary looks were replete with ſuch a natural majeſty intermixed with ſuch ſingular modeſty. From his infancy did he retain a certain liſping in his ſpeech, which, notwithſtanding, was rather an ornament than any blemiſh unto him. In all his carriage and geſtures you could obſerve nothing affected or ſavouring of vanity, but, on the contrary, a certain decent neglect, which did much become him: his humility was very eminent; for, notwithſtanding all that honour and reſpect which deſervedly attended him, could any one conclude that any thing in him ſavoured of pride, oſtentation, or arrogance? for, he ſeemed wholly to be made of courteſy, reſpect, and modeſty. His exceſſes were ſo ſmall, for aught that I could ever inform myſelf, that he will be oftener admired than imitated; for, though I curiouſly obſerved him, I could never yet conclude that I ſaw him overcome by drink.

Compliments and ceremonies were for the moſt part neglected by him, as out of his element; and, take him generally, he was wonderfully ſparing and reſerved in his ſpeech; but what he ſaid was for the moſt part ſentences and ſolidity to the purpoſe: the truth is, he did infinitely better expreſs his judgement, prudence, and gallant abilities, in action than public diſcourſe, being none of thoſe windy gallants whoſe chiefeſt eminence doth conſiſt in vapouring bravely: yet was he not ſo reſerved in theſe things, but he had alſo a ſweet dexterity in accommodating himſelf to time or company, which often gained him a great meaſure of love and reſpect. As he was without taint of vanity, ſo there was none more free from emulation; for, he would ſpeak the beſt of all, and, if he confeſſed their defects, would alſo acknowledge their virtues, yea, though they were his enemies. He delighted to relate the exploits of others, but was ſo far from boaſting of his own, that he could ill tolerate to have another mention them.

In his counſels he was very cloſe and reſerved; in his expeditions exceeding diſcreet, and vigilant in all his actions; as he was ſtrict in his diſcipline and command to others, ſo alſo exact in obeying his commanders, and diſdaining no employment whatſoever. There was no common ſoldier more patient of labour or hardneſs. His diſpoſition was wonderfully noble, and his liberality ſuch, that, whilſt he had any thing, his ſoldiers ſhould want nothing. In his clothes he was nothing curious or vain; witneſs, all that knew him.

With great diſcretion would he make a trial of their diſpoſition, fidelities, and ability, whom he intended to employ about him, or entertain into the number of his familiar friends, hardly affecting any whoſe diſcretion, candour, and fidelity, he was not aſſured of by prudent experience. He would not raſhly determine of any thing that was brought before him, without due digeſtion and fit conſideration. His prudence and foreſight all his ſpeeches and actions did loudly proclaim: but, which in reſpect of his youth is moſt admirable, I have not obſerved a ſoldier more reſerved in courting ladies: he was not eaſily entangled in every pleaſing object; but, if ever he entertained himſelf in that kind, a modeſt mirth, and not any baſer end, was his inducement; for, he judged ſuch diverſions unworthy entertainments for a noble mind, if they tended any farther than true affection and modeſt recreation. This is confirmed by a pleaſant paſſage happening not long ſince at Wincheſter, where he accidentally came to ſee a letter by a young gentlewoman of that place, in which he diſcovered ſo much wit and modeſty, expreſſed in ſuch good language, that, ſtruck with admiration, he was very deſirous to know the author: her name was denied; but it was told him, that ſhe was as beautiful as wiſe, and virtuous, and withal very young: whereupon, laying aſide all farther curioſity, he anſwers, "Bleſſed be God, who hath made ſo many excellent gifts concur in one creature;" a rare concluſion for ſuch a diſcourſe, and admirable in a ſoldier ſo young and vigorous; it might well challenge any of the antient contemplatives for patron: doubtleſs, it concluded that Chriſtian piety, which was ſo eminent in him, to be true and ſolid.

I could not obſerve any ſoldier more duly frequent his prayers, if his buſineſs would poſſibly permit; whereby if prevented, he would ſeek to ſupply his loſs with frequent aſpirations and acts of devotion. Nothing was more oppoſite to his nature than flattery; for, he ſought always, with a candid freedom, to ſpeak his mind, which if he did not deſire to have known, he would by ſilence rather than diſſimulation conceal it. What time he could ſteal from company or employments he would privately employ in reading military inſtructions and obſervations, or elſe, repoſing himſelf on his bed, conſult what he was to do, and lay ground for future deſigns, all which he went about with great prudence and diſcretion.

He was none of thoſe who, out of a bravery and raſh inconſideration, run headlong, with their followers, into inevitable dangers; but, as there was none in the fact more valiant, ſo there was none in the circumſtance more diſcreet; which cauſed all that knew him, with incredible confidence of felicity, to accompany him in any enterprize; whom ſtill he brought off with that ſucceſs as ſeldom any the like: nay, in that near Alresford (where it pleaſed God to ſummon him from this earthly warfare, to place him amongſt his heavenly legions, there to proſecute his Sovereign's quarrel) not one of his followers was hurt, though expoſed as much as any, and ſome of them even laſt in the place; his former felicity ſtill accompanying them even at this time when it forſook himſelf, to inveſt him in felicities by infinite degrees more permanent and truly excellent.

Here muſt I ſet a period to my deſcription of this gallant gentleman with this confeſſion, that I want judgement and abilities duly to expreſs his excellences; which I cannot better ſupply than with this acknowledgement: Let any one imagine what perfections they could wiſh in a moſt valiant, loyal, and Chriſtian knight, I dare affirm them eminent in this matchleſs commander; inſomuch that not only his family, friends, and followers, but alſo, deſervedly, our whole nation, may glory in him, as a ſingular ornament unto them all; whoſe fame will doubtleſs ever remain increaſing daily with greater ſplendor as long as our Engliſh nation hath a being.

To the advancement of whoſe glory, I muſt needs place this trophy of the Muſes as a votive tablet upon his famous ſhrine, thereby to incite the learned poets of our Nation to employ their diviner pens in ſo excellent a work, as concurring to immortalize the memory of ſo brave a ſpirit.

An ACROSTICK ANAGRAM.

	§ §§ §§§
S hame 'tis to ceaſe aloud for	TO	proclaime
R enowned acts	THAT	merit laſting fame;
I n hope of which, the	NOBLE	r ſpirits run
O n brave attempts that	WORTHY	ly they done.
H onour may cloſe, and fame	THE	ir actions crowne.
N ew ages call them	MIRROR	s of renowne.
S hall this be ſaid	OF TRUE	th? and yet not one
M ake haſt to place fam'd	VALOUR	's impreſſe on
I nequall'd SMITHE	SIR JOHN	that valiant knight,
T hat bears the name of	SMITHE,	the land's delight.
H appy	PRESERVER	from the worſt of harmes,
E ven the glory	OF THE	Imperiall armes;
H e, waighing death leſſe than the	ROYALL	ſtaine,
J ngaged his life the	STANDARD	to regaine.
S hall we deſiſt now, ...	IN REWARD OF	this,
T o ſing his praiſe! or ſhall . .	HIS VERTUE	miſſe
I n fame to live, ...	AND'S LOYALTY	lye low
M indleſſe i'th' duſt?	THE VIRGIN QUIRE	ſays no.
S ooner we'll loſe	OF LEARNED	maids the name.
H is worth ſhall live:	MUSES	have vow'd the ſame
O n Honor's altar. We . . .	HAVE PLACED THIS
N ew	TROPHY, FOR AN	endleſſe marke of his
E ternall praiſe and	EVERLASTING	gaines:
R ecord whereof this	MONUMENT	containes.
	UPON THIS ALTAR OF HONOR, IN THE RAIGNE OF THE UNPARALLEL'D PRINCE WHOM HE SERVED, CHARLES THE GRACIOUS.

ANGLICANO HEROI ſacrum hoc trophæum Pierides ſacræ dicant.

The AUTHOR to Cenſure.

Gentlemen, our Engliſh Triſmegiſtus, that oracle of wit, in his "Advancement of Learning," delivers ſomewhat ſingular in defence of my endeavours in this kind, which, ſeeing requiſite, I cannot prudently omit: "As for lives, when I do think thereon, I do find ſtrange that theſe our times have ſo little known and acknowledged their own virtues, being there is ſo ſeldom any memorial of the lives of thoſe who have been eminent in them; for, although Kings and ſuch as have abſolute ſovereignty may be few, and Princes in free commonwealths not many, yet, however, there have not been wanting excellent men, though of an inferior degree, that have deſerved better than an uncertain and wandering fame of their memory, or ſome naked and barren elegy." Such certainly was himſelf, and the gentleman I have here expoſed; chooſing rather, like one of thoſe ſwans (of whoſe paucity the learned Viſcount complains), to carry my tablet to the Temple of Immortality, than, like thoſe other negligent birds, loſe it in the river Lethe, leſt my own name ſhould deſervedly live famous only for ingratitude, that, living, could neglect to expreſs his unparalleled worth, who even, dying, looked with ſuch a happy and affectionate eye on my indeſerts; yet am I ſo far from judging that theſe mean endeavours have acquitted the debts and affections of others, that I believe to have ſcarce ſatiſfied for myſelf; nor ſhall I reſt content, till I bring one grain of incenſe more to that great oblation which I hope the Muſes will offer ere long in publick to his memory; thereby to induce Hiſtorians, thoſe goldſmiths of Time, in their elaborate rings, the chronicles and relations of theſe days, curiouſly to enchaſe this choicer diamond, to the delight, and benefit, of ſucceeding ages.

Ut herba ſolſtitialis, pauliſper ſumus.

BARKBY,

BARKBY, AND THORPE BARKBY,

in antient writings called Barchebi and Barcheberie, are bounded by Thurmaſton, Syſton, Queniborough, and Beby. Mr. Wyrley, in 1590, ſays, "Barkby is one mile Eaſt from the Sore; the habitation of the family of Pochin. By this Barkby paſſeth a rill[1] that falleth into the Wreke." It is about four miles diſtant from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

Thorpe Barkby is a diſtinct hamlet within the pariſh.

The lordſhip of Barkby, which contained eighteen ploughlands, and was capable of employing ſixteen ploughs, was valued, in the time of Edward the Confeſſor, at thirty ſhillings; and, at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey, was worth four pounds, being then held by William under Robert de Todeni. There were ſixteen acres of meadow. Three ploughs were in the demeſne, and three bondmen; and ſeven villans, with three bordars, and ten ſocmen, and four foreigners, had ten ploughs. Six of the ploughlands of this lordſhip were held by a knight in Hungretone, who employed in his demeſne there one plough and two bondmen, and ſeven ſocmen with three ploughs[2].

Thorpe Barkby, a diſtinct manor, containing a ploughland and an half, in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, was held freely by Siward, and was worth thirty ſhillings. At the Conqueror's ſurvey it continued of the ſame value, being then held by Leuric under the lady Adeliza, wife of Hugo de Grenteſmainell. The land was reckoned equal to two ploughs; but three were employed; one in the demeſne, with one bondman; and ſix villans, with five bordars, had two others. There were five acres of meadow, and a mill worth twelve pence[3].

In 1270, Roger de Quinci earl of Winton died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Barkby (value 100*s.* a year), which Robert de Ros held[4]; and, in 1279, it was again found that Robert de Ros held half a knight's fee here[5].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Barkby, Thorpe, and Hamilton, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1296, it was found that the town of Barkby was held in fee of the honour of Winton; and that Robert de Ros held lands there of the heirs of the earl, and the heirs of the earl of the king, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[6].

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had large poſſeſſions at Barkby, of the gift of Walter le Poer and Robert his ſon, and of ſeveral other benefactors; amongſt whom the principal were, Peter de Langton and Margaret his wife; Thomas de Lincoln and Thomas his ſon; John Blound; Maud de Lincoln (who permitted them to depaſture their averiæ on the viæ communes and cheviciæ propriæ of Barkby); and Robert de Poer and Iſabella his wife (to whom they were to pay 6*s.* 6*d.* a year towards the ſheriff's aid, and the caſtle-ward of Belvoir, for lands held by the abbot in vanaſſeriâ de Barkby, of the honour of Belvoir).

The more immediate benefactors at Thorpe Barkby were, Robert Puher, Peter de Lincoln, Roger de Barkby, Richard de Branteby, Roger de Willoughby, William Harland, and William Fitz-Herbert.

By the bounty of Richard l'Abbé, they had the free liberty of fiſhing in the Soar, quotiens & quando voluerint, cum retibus & ſagenis; which privilege they transferred to Thomas Walch, of Anlip, in 1377; who gave them in return 6*s.* yearly rent, and the homage and ſervice of William ſon of Thomas of Rothley.

They poſſeſſed 12 virgates of land in Barkby, for which they paid ſcutage at the rate of 3*d.* a virgate; had the tithes of the mills, and of corn and hay; farmed for their own uſe ſeveral virgates of land; and retained ſeveral parcels of meadow ground; with a tithe barn, called le Rekyart, to depoſit their tithe of corn; and had uſually a flock of 20 ſcore of ſheep and upwards depaſturing in their lands.

At Thorpe Barkby they had the tithes of hay upon the hades and leys; and, in lieu of the tithe of meadow-ground, had three ſeparate pieces of meadow aſſigned to their uſe.

Their free tenants were, Thomas Alot, Roger Eliot of Stouton, Hugh Heriſon, William Shurlok, William Stevens, John Bate, John Billing (who held the land which had formerly been John King's, and afterwards John Smyth's, the rector of Thurleſton); and William Maſon, of Thorpe Barkby.

Tenants by eſpecial grant from the abbey to them and their heirs, on ſmall acknowledgements, were, Alexander ſon of Walter the chaplain of Barkby, Robert Marſhall of Leiceſter; Roger Haliday, ſon of Alwin of Barkby; and John de Coteſmore.

The tenants at will were, William Stevens, who rented the rectorial manſe, containing 156 acres, 3 roods and a half; and was alſo tenant for 4 virgates and a half of arable land, with paſture for 38 cattle, and divers other meadows and paſtures; and the tithes of hay, hemp and flax, in Barkby and Thurmaſton; and the croft of Thorpe Barkby; for all which he paid only 5 marks a year.

The Vicar held two tofts and 6 acres and a half of arable land, but no paſture; his rent, 7*s.* and two hens.

The other tenants at will were, John Power, John Page, William Jonſon, and William Browne; and the whole village paid 3*s.* 4*d.* for the Pynfold. William ſon of Hugh of Sileby; Adam ſon of John, ſon of Kenl'baſal, Henry and Walter ſon of Herbert of Barkby; Peter ſon of Thurſtan of Barkby and Yſolda his daughter (this Peter gave lands extending to Redemere, near his uncle Ralph's land, and a meadow beyond the path leading to Sitheſton, in which his father was killed); Robert Holiday, a meadow in a place called Neſhe, and another by Wanlip-bridge; Agnes, daughter of Yvo of Coſſington; John Twywell and John Anſtey, chaplains; Ralph ſon of the prieſt of Barkby; Robert the chaplain, ſon of William le Ferr' of Leiceſter; John le Whyte; Walter le Whyte; John de Noverey junior, Alexander ſon of Walter the chaplain; Roger de Barkby, clerk, and John Moleſon and Alice his wife (from whom Prior Charyte brought a croft in the Vicar's lane.)

William Stevens and Robert Maſon were the principal tenants at Thorpe Barkby.

June 2, 1301, king Edward I. gave to the abbot and convent of Leiceſter free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Barkby, Thurmaſton, and ſeveral other places in this neighbourhood[7].

The abbot and convent held all their lands at Barkby in pure alms, exempt from aid to the king; and had the privilege of weyf and ſtreyf. All their tenants were bound to attend the court at Thurmaſton; and to pay 12*d.* to the common fine. The copyholders on admiſſion to pay to the abbot as they could agree with him; and the ſecond beſt beaſt as a mortuary.

---

[1] "In this rill are frequently found petrifactions of different kinds; foſſil of the bivalve kind very perfect (ſee one of theſe in Plate VII); flat ſtones, which appear on one ſide petrifactions, and on the other nearly covered with knobs of metallic ore; and ſmall red ſtones of different ſhapes, which emit their colour, when rubbed hard, upon white ſubſtances. Mr. Woodcock ſhewed me ſome of this colouring upon a ſtone expoſed to all weathers for theſe 30 years; and it appeared as bright as if done but the day before I ſaw it. Mr. Woodcock has a picture painted in part with this mineral, whatever it may be; and the painter told him, he thought it would be a valuable acquiſition to that art." J. T.

[2] "Willielmus tenet de Roberto 18 carucatas terræ in Barcheberie. Terra eſt 16 carucarum. In dominico ſunt 3 carucæ, & 3 ſervi; & 7 villani, cum 3 bordariis & 10 ſochmannis, & 4 francigenis, habent 10 carucas. De hâc terrâ 6 carucatas tenet unus miles in Hungretone; & ibi habet 1 carucam in dominico, & 2 ſervos, & 7 ſochmannos cum 3 carucis. Ibi 16 acræ prati. Valuit 30 ſolidos; modò 4 libras." Domeſday, fol. 233. b. 2.

[3] "Leuricus tenet de Adelizâ in Barchebi 1 carucatam terræ & dimidiam. Terra eſt 2 carucarum. Nunc in dominico 1 caruca, cum 1 ſervo; & 6 villani, cum 5 bordariis, habent 2 carucas. Ibi molinum 12 denariorum, & 10 acræ prati. Valuit, & valet, 30 ſolidos. Siuuardus liberè tenuit." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 2

[4] Eſch. 55 Hen. III. N° 36. Leic. [5] Eſch. 3 Edw. I. [6] Inq. 24 Edw. I. in Scacc. [7] Cart. 29 Edw. I. n. 27.

Among the Cottonian MSS. is one[1], moſt beautifully written, containing, in thirteen folio pages, a terrier of the lands poſſeſſed by the abbot and convent at Barkby[2] and at Thurmaſton[3].

In the Teſta de Nevill, Barkeſby cum ſocâ is mentioned as containing ſeven ploughlands.

In 1343, William de Ros of Hamlak died ſeiſed of one knight's fee; and half an half quarter [dimidia octav', ſive decima-ſexta pars] of another knight's fee (which Thomas de Lincoln held) in Barkby, Croxton, Hungarton, Quenby, and Howes[4]; and, in the ſame year, Henry de Ferrars died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee in Barkby, which the heir of William de Ros held[5].

In 1346 (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon), Roger de Willoughby[6] was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee, and the Abbot of Leiceſter 2*s.* for a twentieth part of a knight's fee in Barkby, Thorpe, and Hamilton, parcel of the fee of Ros and Huntingdon; and John Mallore 2*s.* 6*d.* for a ſixth part of one fee in Hamilton of the fee of Ros and Winton[7]. And, on the ſame occaſion, the maſter of Merton Hall, Oxford, was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Barkby of the fee of Ros[8].

In 1347, it was found that the warden and ſcholars of Merton Hall in Oxford held 16 virgates of land, with the appurtenances, at Barkby[9].

Jan. 20, 1352-3, it was found that William de Ros of Hamelak died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee in Barkby, held of the king in capite, which the maſter of Merton Hall in Oxford held; alſo the ſixteenth part of a knight's fee in Hungreton and Barkby, which the maſter of St. John's hoſpital in Leiceſter held[10].

In 1363, Margery widow of William de Ros of Hamelake died ſeiſed of the ſixteenth part of a knight's fee, and half a quarter and the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee, in Barkby, Croxton, Quenby, and Howes, which were held by Thomas de Lincoln[11]; who died in the ſame year, ſeiſed of this manor, leaving two daughters his heirs; one of whom was married to Roger de Willoughby; the other to the anceſtor of Mr. Pochin, the preſent lord of this manor.

In 1371, ſir William de Ferrars of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Barkby, which Thomas de Ros, lord of Ros, held[12].

In 1387, ſir Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Barkby, held by Robert Ros, lord of Ros[13].

29 Nov. 1391, king Richard II. granted to ſir Thomas Walſhe, of Anelip, knt. liberty of free warren in all his demeſne lands at Anelip, and at Thorpe juxta Barkby, &c.[14]

By the king's patent dated Sept. 7, 1392, the abbot and convent of Leiceſter were empowered to hold certain lands at Barkby, Burſtall, &c. notwithſtanding the ſtatute of mortmain[15].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Barkby was rated at 3*l.* 5*s.*; Barkby Thorpe at 1*l.* 5*s.*; and Hamilton at 12*l.* 6*s.* And in the ſubſidy of 1445 they were rated at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made at Barkby of 7*s.* 8*d.*; at Thorpe Barkby of 3*s.*; and at Hamilton of 1*s.*

In 1444, ſir William de Ferrars of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Barkby, held by Robert Ros, lord of Ros[16].

In 1457, ſir Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Barkby, held by Robert lord of Ros[17].

In 1463, Thomas Walſhe, of Onlep, eſq. died ſeiſed of 4 meſſuages, 80 acres of land, and 30 acres of meadow, in Thorpe Barkby[18].

In a Pedigree of Bereſford of Barkby, we find, in 1480, "Conventio matrimonii inter Joh'em Barford de Barkebie, com' Leic', & Margeriam filiam Joh'is Fowler in Maris, cum dotalicio in terris in Barford, Thorpe, & Malforde, Ardingworth, & Sindelanes, in com' Northampton'; & Lubbenham, in com' Leiceſtr'; dat' 20° die Novembris, 21 Edw. IV."

Walter Kebell, eſq. died July 31, 1523, ſeiſed, inter alia, of certain lands at Barkby Thorpe[19].

In 1534, the manor and rectory of Barkby, with divers lands in Barkby, Barkby Thorpe, and Hamulton, were granted to Philip Gunter and others.

"Rex Henricus VIII. per literas ſuas patentes, gerentes dat' [xxii° Auguſti, anno regni xxxvi°,] pro ſummâ $\overset{c}{\text{v}}$Lxviii lī. xiii s̄. iiii d̄. dedit & conceſſit Philippo Gunter & aliis, manerium & terras ſubſcriptas; viz.

Manerium de Barkeby, com' Leic', cum pertin', parcell' monaſterii de Pratis Leiceſtrie.

Rectoriam de Barkeby, cum pertin', parcell' ejuſdem monaſterii.

Omnia terras & tenementa in Barkeby predict', Thorpe Barkeby, & Hamulton, parcell' ejuſdem monaſterii.

Advocationem vicarie eccleſie de Barkeby predict'.

Que omnia & ſingula premiſſa extendunt ad clarum annuum valorem xxiiii lī. xii d̄."[20]

In this pariſh ſeveral farms of the yearly value of 5*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* appertained to Langley nunnery at the time of the diſſolution of religious houſes[21].

The abbot and convent of Croyland had alſo ſome ſmall payment from Barkby[22].

In 1552, Richard Stanford died ſeiſed of the manor of Barkby, held of the king in capite by the ſervice of a twentieth part of one knight's fee[23].

In 1564, there were 44 families in Barkby, and 12 in Thorpe Barkby.

By an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter, 18 July, 1604, it was found that John Stanford died ſeiſed of the manor of Barkby, which he held in capite[24]; alſo of the parſonage or church of Barkby, and of all the lands, meadows, paſtures, tithes, glebes, oblations, obventions, penſions, portions, and fruits, thereunto belonging, in Barkby, Thorpe Barkby, and Hamilton; alſo of the yearly penſion of 20*s.* ariſing out of the vicarage of Barkby; that they were held of the king in capite by the ſervice of an hundredth part of a knight's fee; that he died Dec. 1; and that Thomas Stanford, his ſon and heir, was then aged 7 years and upwards[25].

The freeholders at Barkby in 1630 were Thomas Stanford, eſq. and George Pochin, eſq; and at Barkby Thorpe, John Johnſon, Hugo Maſon, and William Stanford.

"15 July, 1646. By virtue of an order of both houſes of parliament of 2 May laſt, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of £50. be paid out of ſuch of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Barkby cum Thorpe, co. Leiceſter, as are ſequeſtered from Henry Hudſon, eſq. delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter of the pariſh church of Barkby cum Thorpe aforeſaid, the vicarage thereof being worth but £35. per annum; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid profits ſhall grow due and payable[26]."

In 1655, there was collected in Barkby and Thorpe Barkby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 12*s.* 9*d.*

In 1660, Thomas Pochin, eſq. of Barkby (whoſe eſtate was then at leaſt £1000. a year) was among the intended knights of the Royal Oak[27].

---

[1] Galba, E. III. N° 12. "Tranſcriptio, tempore regis Henrici Septimi, diverſarum rerum tangentium monaſterium de Pratis juxta Leiceſter. Ex ſcriptis ejuſdem eccleſiæ, domini Latimer, Roberti Brudnell, Johannis Turvile, Willielmi Cotton, Thomæ Eſulryk, & aliorum." See a ſpecimen of the hand-writing in the margin of Plate VI; and a ſpecification of its contents in vol. I. p. 286.

[2] Pp. 82. a—85. a.

[3] Pp. 115. a.—118. b.

[4] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 60. Leic.

[5] Ibid. N° 57. Leic.

[6] In Charyte's Rentale, the abbot of Leiceſter and Roger de Somervile are ſtyled lords of Barkby, Thorpe, and Hamulton.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] Ibid.

[9] Eſch. 21 Edw. III. N° 91. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 37 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. N° 22. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

[14] Cart. 15 Ric. II. N° 35.

[15] Pat. 16 Ric. II. pars 2. m. 6.

[16] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[17] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[18] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 13. Leic.

[19] Inq. 27 Nov. 14 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. II. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 138.

[20] Harl. MSS. 6822. Plat. XIV. 11 E. N° 2.

[21] Miniſters or Bailiffs Accompts, 31 Hen. VIII, in the Augmentation Office.

[22] See hereafter, under Beby.

[23] Eſch. 6 Edw. VI.

[24] See vol. I. p. cxxxiii.

[25] Eſch. 2 Jac. I.

[26] From the original Minute-books of the Committee, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[27] See vol. I. p. xlvii.

Thomas Marſhall, ſon of a father of both his names, was born at Barkby in Leiceſterſhire, taught grammar by Francis Foe, vicar of the town, entered batteler in Lincoln college 1640, aged 19, and 31 July next year choſen one of Robert Trapp's ſcholars in that houſe, a conſtant auditor of archbiſhop Uſher's ſermons in Allhallows church, whom he reſolved to make his pattern. Oxford being garriſoned, he bore arms in the regiment of Henry earl of Dover, at his own charges, and therefore in 1645 was made B. A. without paying fees. At the parliamentary viſitation of Oxford he went beyond ſea, and became preacher to the Engliſh merchants at Rotterdam and Dort. In 1661 he was made S. T. B.; and, on publiſhing Obſervations on the Evangeliſts, the Society of his college choſe him fellow, without his knowledge, 17 December, 1668. In 1669 he was made D. D.; was elected rector in 1672; and afterwards made chaplain in ordinary to the king. In May 1680 he became rector of Bladon, near Woodſtock; was inſtalled dean of Glouceſter 30 April 1689; and gave up Bladon in February 1682. He was a critick, eſpecially in Gothic and Engliſh-Saxon languages; a good man and governor. He died ſuddenly in his lodgings, 19 April (Eaſter Sunday), 1685; and was buried in the college-chapel in All Saints, Oxford [1].

George Pochin, eſq. in 1706 left £100. the intereſt of which was to pay for the education of ten poor children here.

"An eſtate at Barkby Thorpe, belonging to Merton College, Oxford, let about 1720 to Thomas Johnſon. A ſuit concerning it by Mr. Pochin of Barkby. In treſpaſs, Johnſon defendant pleads preſcription, for time immemorial, to a private way for carts, carriages, &c. which was ſtated in the plea, and traced from furlong to furlong, &c. The pleading, &c. was amended three different times. The ſuit diſcontinued; or rather not tried: but iſſue joined. John Tanner attorney for Pochin; Jonathan Billers for Johnſon. Pochin died. Johnſon removed from Barkby Thorpe to Loughborough [2]."

In 1719, 28 freeholders polled from Barkby and Barkby Thorpe.

In 1722, 24 freeholders polled from Barkby, and 4 from Barkby Thorpe; but in 1775 we find only 9 names from Barkby and Barkby Thorpe.

Within this lordſhip are frequently found fine foſſil ſhell-fiſh, of the ſpecies [3] exhibited in Plate VIII. fig. 6; and a peculiar ſort of red-ſtone is alſo found here, which emits its colour when rubbed againſt any hard ſubſtance, and probably might be rendered uſeful to painters.

In an act paſſed in 1777, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, in the pariſh of Syſton, ſeveral open and common fields, meadows, and paſtures, and, in the pariſh of Barkby, ſeveral parcels of uncloſed land within the ring of the ſaid fields, containing together about 1600 acres; George Harry earl of Stamford is deſcribed as lord of the honour of Winton, extending over all or part of the pariſh of Syſton aforeſaid, and as lord alſo of the manor of Syſton; the chancellor, maſters, and ſcholars, of the Univerſity of Oxford, as entitled to all tithes, both great and ſmall, ariſing in the pariſh of Syſton, to certain pieces of meadow ground in Syſton called Tithe Pieces, to all the ſmall tithes ariſing from the ſaid parcels of unincloſed land in Barkby, and to a right of common in the ſaid fields, meadows, and paſtures, and the ſaid parcels of unincloſed land; all which premiſes were then held by John Whattoffe Cleever and his brother Richard Cleever, under a leaſe to them from the ſaid chancellor, warden, and ſcholars, for 21 years; John-Dawes Roſs, clerk, as vicar of Syſton aforeſaid, entitled to about ſix roods of land, and to a right of common in the ſaid fields, meadows, paſtures, and parcels of unincloſed land; William Pochin, eſq. as entitled to all the great tithes ariſing out of the ſaid parcels of unincloſed lands in Barkby, and alſo as a proprietor of part of the ſame land; and the ſame John Whatoffe Cleever and Richard Cleever in their reſpective rights, William Oldham, John Johnſon Adcock, William Pickard, Samuel Pickard, Mary Kendal widow, William Capp, William Blower, John Goude, George Henton, Thomas Johnſon Royles, Joſeph Barratt, Thomas Dawſon, Robert Kilby, John Adnut, and others, were the proprietors of, and perſons intereſted in, the reſidue of the ſaid open and common fields, meadows, and paſtures, in the pariſh of Syſton; and the warden and fellows of Merton College in Oxford, and others, the proprietors of, and perſons intereſted in, the reſidue of the ſaid parcels of unincloſed land in the pariſh of Barkby. A compenſation is firſt directed to be made to the Earl of Stamford, for his intereſt in the honour and manor; and a proper portion for repairs of highways. Land of the yearly value of ten pounds to be allotted to truſtees for the augmentation of the ſtipend to the vicar of Syſton ſo long as he ſhall make his principal abode in Syſton, or otherwiſe in augmentation of the ſtipend of the reſident curate; and in payment to a ſchoolmaſter, for teaching the children of the inhabitants reading, writing, and arithmetic, and for placing out children of the inhabitants apprentices, and for the benefit of the induſtrious poor not receiving collections from the pariſh; or to apply the ſame as the major part of the truſtees ſhould think proper. To the chancellor, maſters, and ſcholars of the Univerſity of Oxford, as impropriators, and their leſſees, their preſent tithe-pieces without any deduction for the right of common on them; and farther, to the dean and chapter, and their leſſees, in lieu of all tithes, one ſeventh of the reſidue of the common field (except of the meadows called titheable meadows), with ſo much more as ſhall be equal in value to the ſmall tithes of ſuch land as is in the pariſh of Barkby. A full compenſation to be made to William Pochin, eſq. for the great tithes ariſing to him from the ſaid land belonging to Barkby; and proper allowances to be made in lieu of tithes of old incloſures. Nothing in this act to leſſen the right of the vicar of Syſton to ſurplice-fees, Eaſter-offerings, or mortuaries; or the right of the Univerſity, or their leſſees, to tithes of ſuch old incloſures for which no compenſation ſhall be made.

In another act, paſſed in 1779, for incloſing, in the pariſh of Barkby, ſeveral open fields, containing about 1800 acres, George Harry earl of Stamford is again deſcribed as lord of the honour of Winton, which extends over a ſmall part of the townſhip of Barkby, and, as ſuch, entitled to two ſmall pieces of land, part of the ſaid fields; and William Pochin, eſq. as lord of the manor and patron of the vicarage, entitled to all the great tithes ariſing from the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable places (except of part of certain furlongs of land called Wheatholm or Wheatam, or ſome ſuch name,), to about 100 acres of the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable places, as glebe-land, and to a very conſiderable part of the reſt of the ſaid fields, in reſpect thereof, and in reſpect of his ſaid glebe land; Samuel Gamble, eſq. as entitled to all the great tithes ariſing from the remaining part of the ſaid furlongs of land called Wheatholm; the rev. Samuel Belton, as vicar, entitled to all the ſmall tithes and vicarial payments ariſing within the pariſh of Barkby, and to the great tithes of the ſeveral antient incloſures within the ring of the town; the warden and fellows of Merton College in Oxford, as ſeiſed of a manor, called "The Manor of Barkby, within the ſaid pariſh of Barkby;" and Nathanael Palmer Johnſon, eſq. John Whattoffe Cleever, and others, as tenants of the ſaid warden and fellows, by copy of Court-roll for a term of years, under ſmall reſerved rents, and in their own rights, together with the ſaid Samuel Gamble, and William Gutteridge, William Wild, William Lewin, and others, were the proprietors of, and perſons intereſted in, the reſidue of the land of which the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable places, conſiſted, and of the right of common upon and over the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable places. Three acres were to be ſet out for gravel-pits; and a compenſation to Mr. Pochin for his glebe land and right of common; with ſuch allotments to him in lieu of great tithes as (including land of the yearly value of £50. for the vicar) ſhould be equal to one ſeventh part of the land to be incloſed (Mr. Gamble's part of Wheat-

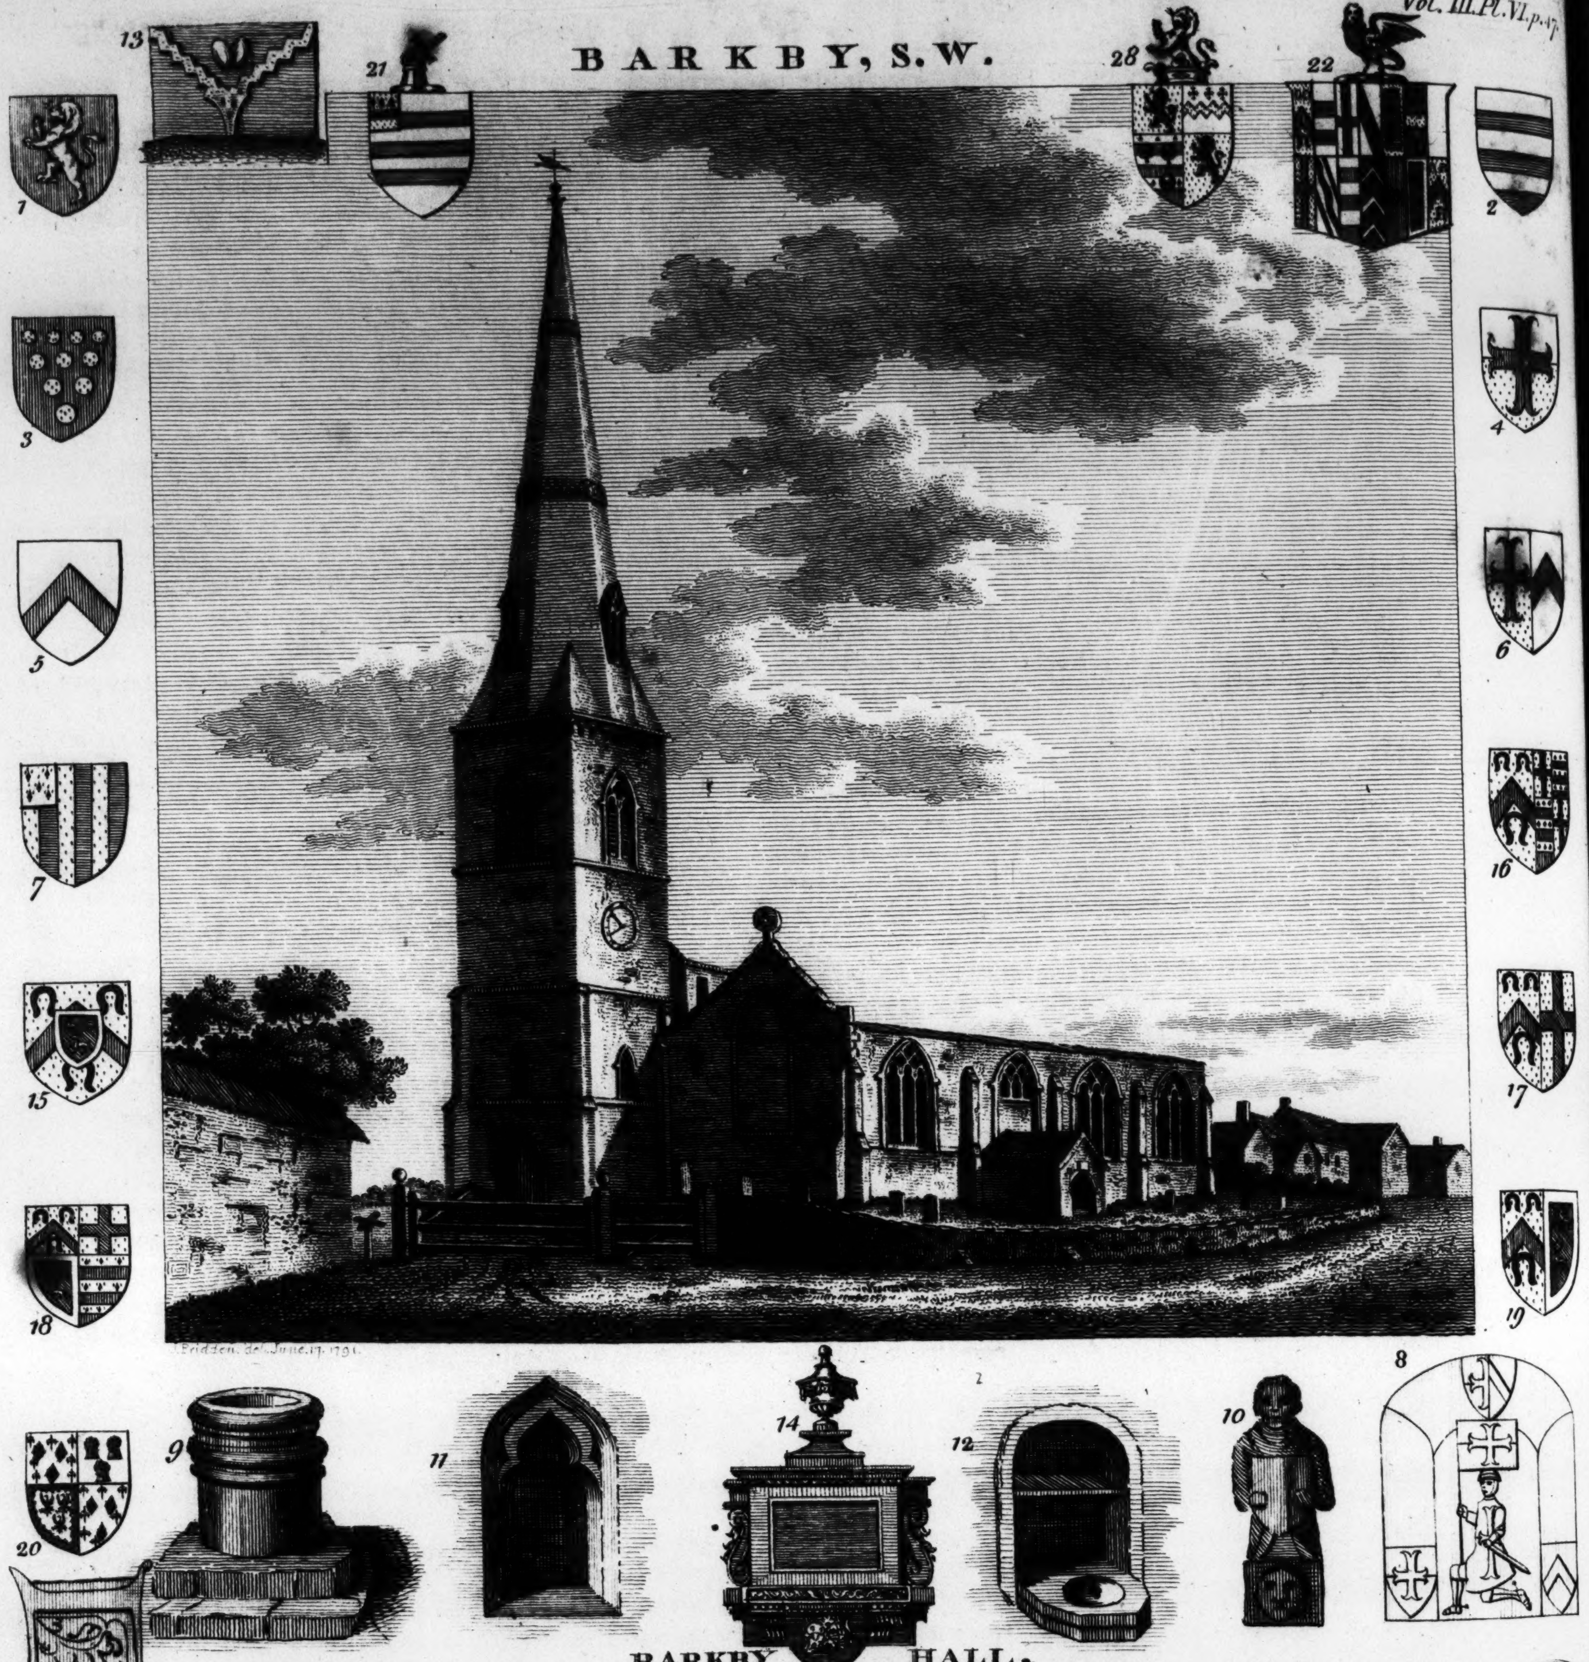
---

[1] Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 592. See his epitaph, p. 50.

[2] Carte, MS.

[3] See hereafter, under Barrow, p. 82.

BARKBY, S.W.



13
21
28
22
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
16
15
17
18 19 20
9
11
14
12
10
8

J. Pridden. del. June 17. 1791.

Barkby.

Iste terris [illegible] elib? [illegible] hiariis eāuē ā ā terrariis abam terras ponit pater in suble quietib?

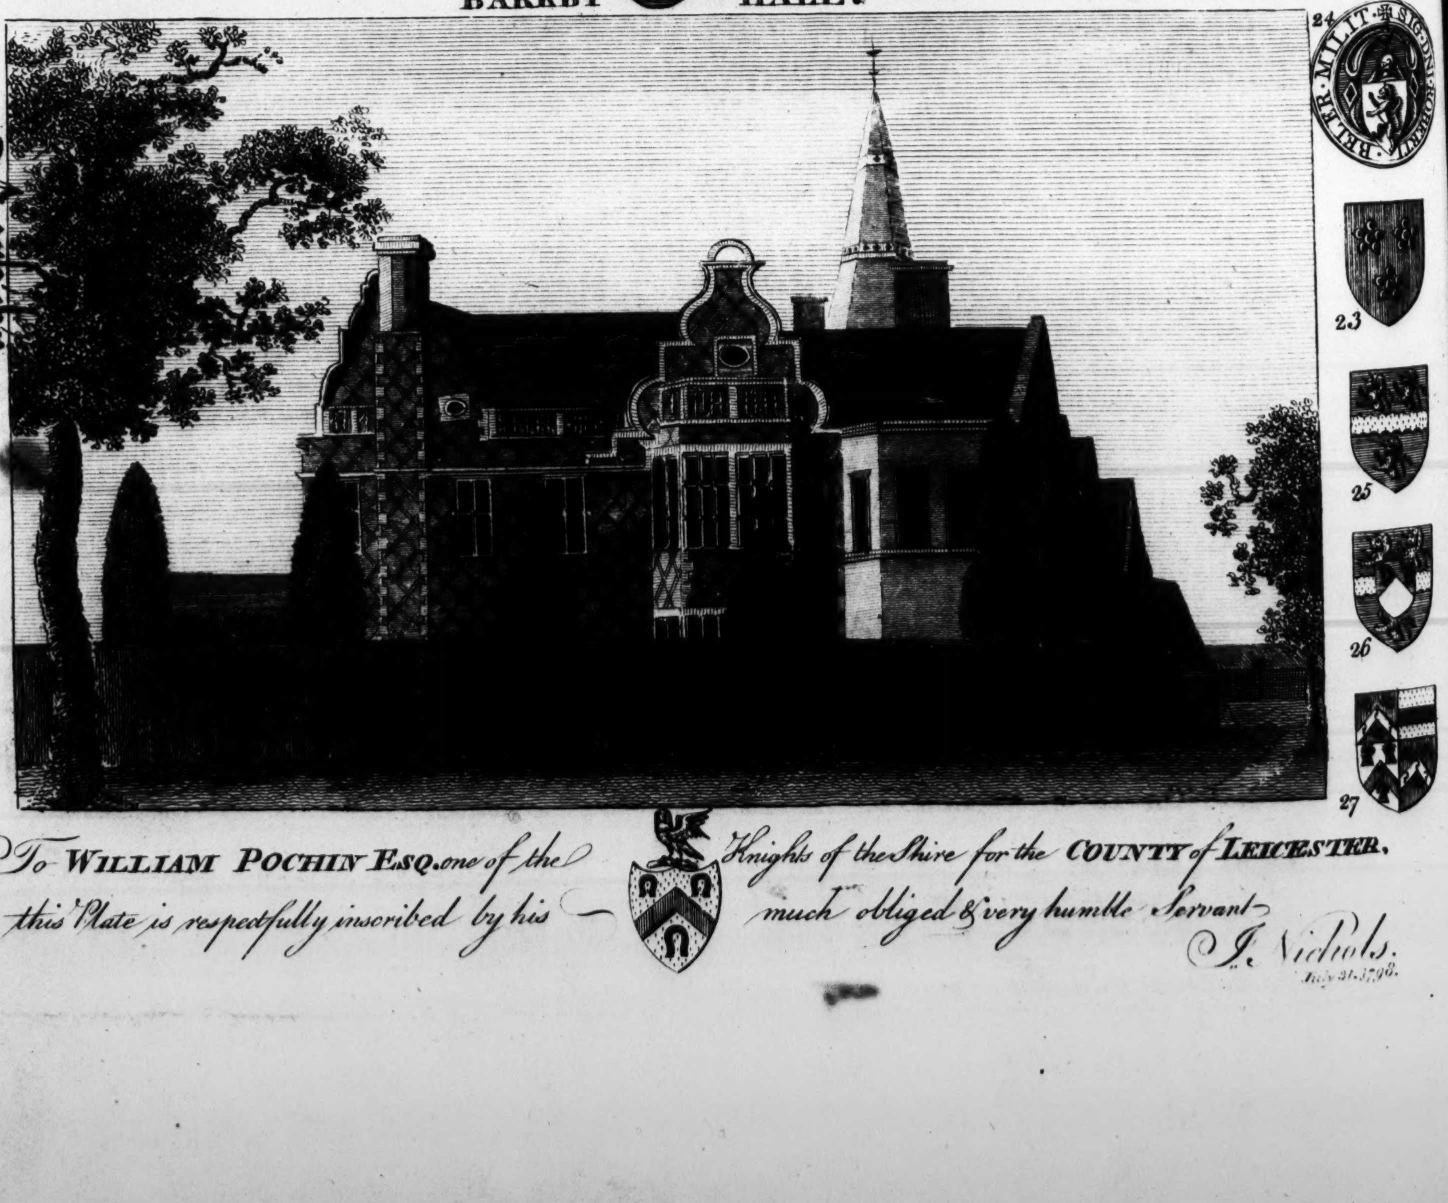
BARKBY HALL.



24
ER·MILIT·SIG·DNI·ROB
23
25
26
27

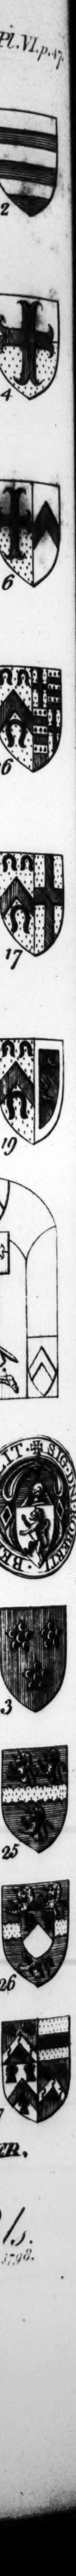
To WILLIAM POCHIN ESQ. one of the Knights of the Shire for the COUNTY of LEICESTER, this Plate is respectfully inscribed by his much obliged & very humble Servant

J. Nichols.
July 31. 1798.



holm excepted); the vicar to have the ſaid £50. in lieu of all tithes in the open field, and of all tithes and payments (ſurplice-fees and mortuaries excepted), from the inhabitants of the town of Barkby, or from owners of homeſteads within the ring of the town not exceeding one rood; the vicar to have alſo an equivalent for the tithe of ſuch old incloſures as exceed a rood, and for Mr. Gamble's part of Wheatholm, and for two antient incloſures of Mr. Pochin's called The Would Cloſes; and a farther allotment of the yearly value of £30. in lieu of all vicarial tithes and payments from Barkby Thorpe, mortuaries and ſurplice-fees excepted; and Mr. Gamble to have an equivalent for his right of great tithes in Wheatholm. Old incloſures that ſhall not be exonerated by exchange or purchaſe to pay as heretofore. The rights alſo of the earl of Stamford as lord of the honour of Winton, and of Mr. Pochin as lord of the manor, are particularly reſerved.—I am ſorry to add, that my reſpectable friend Mr. Pochin died, as this ſheet was preparing for the preſs (but not till after he had himſelf ſeen a proof of it) Sept. 10, 1798.

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 38.

Money raiſed for the poor of Barkby	£.	s.	d.	Barkby Thorpe.			Thurmaſton, North End.
within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	135	2	10	£. 53	18	9	No Return.
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	12	8	1	4	7
——— on the poor, —	131	10	2	52	14	2
Rent of workhouſe and habitation,	3	2	0	8	5	3
Expended in litigations, —	4	5	8	6	16	2
Money raiſed for 1783, —	213	1	7	55	19	5	17	0	2
——— 1784, —	239	5	7	73	2	2	17	0	2
——— 1785, —	213	1	9	54	19	1	28	4	10
Medium of theſe three years, —	221	16	3	61	6	10	20	15	0
——— of county expences, —	6	5	1	2	14	6	1	12	10
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	4	2	1	5	18	3	2	13	7
——— of nett annual expences,	24	9	1	52	14	1	16	8	7
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	10	3	0	2	1	0	2	10
——— of entertainments at meetings,	1	1	10	0	9	1	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	2	12	3	0	19	9	0	1	8
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate VI.)

dedicated to St. Mary, was originally built on a plan laid down in the frontiſpiece to "Wheatley on the Common Prayer;" the joining of the butments of the arches of the North and South croſs-ailes being very viſible, angular to the butments of the arches of the nave. It conſiſts at preſent of a tower (in which are five bells and a clock); a tall ſpire; a South porch (which is a patch-work of brick and ſtone, ſlated, and has the date "1662" upon it); a North door-way into the North aile; a South door into the chancel, which is ſeparated from the nave, and is large and lofty, by a large arch, the upper part of which is blocked up, and the royal arms painted thereon. On each ſide of the arms are the Ten Commandments, in yellow letters, upon a blue ground; below is, "Fear God; honour the King." The nether part of the arch is Gothic ſtone-work.

The ailes, which are large, are ſeparated from the nave by four pointed arches, over which are as many clereſtory windows.

Mr. Burton deſcribes the following coats at Barkby[1]:

1. Gules, a lion rampant Argent. Mowbray.
2. Barry of ſix, Argent and Azure. Grey.
3. Gules, ten bezants Or. Zouch.
4. Party per feſs, Argent and Or, a croſs moline Gules. Folvile.
5. Argent, a chevron Gules. Teyes.
6. Folvile; impaling Teyes.
7. Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine. Shirley.

In one of the windows of this church was the picture of a knight in armour, on whoſe ſurcote the coat of Folvile, holding a banner of the arms of Folvile, ſubſcribed in very old letters, FOLVILE[2]. Mr. Wyrley calls this "a fine glaſs monument holding a penon in this wiſe (ſee fig. 8.)"

On this church Mr. Gaſcoigne has the following note: "See here the faſhion of the windows; ſee the manner of impaling there, half of the one eſcutcheon, and half of the other."

Here is an old round font, with two kneeling ſteps, fig. 9; and fig. 10. ſhews the ſupporter of a beam.

In the South aile is a piſcina, with a pointed arch, fig. 11; on the South ſide the chancel is another, with a round arch, fig. 12; and on the North ſide is a locker.

On the back of the pulpit[3], which is of oak, and painted of a yellow ſtone-colour, is the date "1613."

On a beam of the nave againſt the ſteeple, "1684."

On a beam of the North aile, "G. FEWKES, 1777."

The altar-rails and Communion-table, of oak, were the gift of William Pochin, eſq. The table is dated 1781.

On Mr. Pochin's pew on the North ſide of the chancel is the date "1761;" on his pew in the nave, "1775;" and on his pew on the South ſide of the chancel, "1782."

On the chancel-door, "March 22, 1777."

Two large pews were erected in the South aile a few years ſince by the rev. Henry Woodcock, for the joint accommodation of the inhabitants of Hamilton and the North end of Thurmaſton.

On a ſtone a conſiderable height, at the Eaſt end of the South aile, in the church-yard, "William Cooper, Thomas Sanſon, churchwardens 1686;" and over the entrance-door from the church-yard into Mr. Pochin's court is the date "1656."

In the church-yard, near the Weſt gate, is placed an old ſtone (fig. 13.) which originally came off from ſome part of the church.

Much pellitory of the wall grows upon the walls of the church and chancel.

In the Matriculus of 1220, the church of Barkby is ſtated to be under the patronage of the abbot of Leiceſter, to whom it was given by Walter le Puber and Robert his ſon. The abbot held it to his own uſe from old time, together with the tithes of grain and hay, flax and hemp, wood, limeſtone, the fiſhery, &c.; reſerving eight marks and a half, to be paid on three days of the year[4] to the canons of Trentham[5], by the authority of ſome chapter then unknown.

To this church was appended the chapel of Thurmaſton in the fee of Leiceſter (that is, the North-end chapel); which was to be ſerved thrice a week from the mother-church; and the chapel of Hamilton, which was alſo to be ſerved thrice a week[6].

---

[1] Plate VI. fig. 1—7.

[2] This was in the uppermoſt window of the North aile in the memory of the preſent vicar.

[3] Tradition ſays, this pulpit was removed from Loughborough church to this.

[4] This unuſual diviſion of the payment, on three days of the year, muſt have been on the three feſtivals in honour of the Virgin Mary; as appears from the following article in Kelham's Illuſtration of Domeſday, p. 153: "Æccl'am (ſup') S. Mariæ habet rex medietatem elemoſinæ trium feſtorum S. Mariæ;" 'The king has one moiety of the alms, or offerings, given at the church of St. Mary on the three feſtivals dedicated to her.'

[5] A priory in Staffordſhire, which had been re-founded by Ranulph earl of Cheſter.

[6] See vol. I. p. lix.

Robert le Puber, who gave this church to the abbey of Leiceſter (ut patet per preſentationem datam capellano comitis Ceſtrie), added ſix bovates of his own land, as an augmentation to the glebe, ſpecifically ad incrementum tertie prebande. He gave alſo to the church ſome other lands, particularly a bovate with the toft of William Gangern, an acre at Pluntre, 9 ſelions in Sales of his own demeſne, and Goſcote meadow.

Amongſt other lands confirmed to them by Robert de Ros was one acre ad craſſectum eccleſie.

The vicarage was endowed with all the profits of the altar; and the vicar was to pay ſynodals only, and a penſion of 20*s.* to the abbot of Leiceſter; which penſion, having been diſputed by the vicar, was recovered by the abbot againſt Geoffrey Bower, vicar, in 1382.

In 1344, the procurations were, for Barkby, Hamilton, and Thorpe, 7*s.* 6¼*d.*; and the rectory (when the abbot of Leiceſter held it to his own uſe) was taxed at 50 marks, and paid 3*s.* for Peter-pence.

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 3*s.* 6*d.*; the abbot of Leiceſter's penſion £1; and the value of the vicarage £10.

Philip Gunter obtained a grant of the rectory in 1534; and in 1602 Thomas Stanford, gentleman, was patron of the vicarage, and poſſeſſed alſo the inheritance of the impropriation [1]; which he ſoon after ſold to Mr. Pochin of Barkby [2].

In 1650, Barkby was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £160; the vicarage £30; and the incumbent as "no preacher."

The preſent value in the king's books is £10. in decim. magn. & minor. cum manſ', firm', & al' profic', communibus annis; clear yearly value 37*l.* 15*s.* 11*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 6*s.* 8*d.*; the vicarage, 2*s.*; the archidiaconal, 3*s.* 6*d.*

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Reginald, 1220.	Abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
Hugh de . . . . . 1248.
Geoffrey Bower, 1382.
William Watſon, 1534.
Richard Reynold, clerk, died 1556.
Gregory Kynge, Sept. 18, 1556.	Elizabeth Stanfeld (rectius Stanford [4]).
Francis Foe [3], 1620; died 1662.
William Vade, Oct. 10, 1662.	George Pochin, eſq.
Thomas Rawſon, March 13, 1667.
Hopkin Thomas, M. A. Sept. 25, 1693; died 1743-4.	Thomas Pochin, eſq.
Ralph Heathcote, Sept. 2, 1746.
Samuel Belton, Oct. 15, 1767.	William Pochin, eſq.
Henry Woodcock [5], LL. B. 1784.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Wyrley preſerves the lines that are her tranſcribed:

"Maria Pochin, nuper uxor Will'i Pochin, de Barkby, un' fil' et hered' Will'i Palmer, armig', nuper ...."

"Rogerus de Willoughbi, d's de Aſhbie, et Amicia uxor ejus."

The Chetwynd MS. alſo notices in 1642 "a very fair monument for ſome of the family of Stanford," &c. then lately erected; with theſe epitaphs:

"1. Here lieth the body of John Stanford, gent.
owner of the manor and rectory of Barkby, Thorp, and Hamilton.
He departed this life 19 March, 1602.
Think it not ſtrange that man doth life reſign:
This day his lot was drawn, to-morrow thine."

2. "Here lieth the body of John Stanford, ſon and heir of John Stanford, owner of the manor and rectory of Barkby, Thorpe, and Hamilton.
He departed this life 3 December, 1603.
Let 's not repine; for men and names muſt die,
Since ſtone-built houſes dead and ruin'd lie."

3. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Stanford, wife of John Stanford the elder.
She departed this life 17 June, 1611.
As thou art breathing, ſo were all us three:
Thou muſt be breathleſs once as well as we."

4. A monument of . . . . . Beresford, gent. whoſe lands in Barkby Thorpe were then in the tenure of Mr. Johnſon.

The abovementioned monuments, of alabaſter, remain in the chancel, on a raiſed part; the heads of the ſtones lying under the ſtep of the altar, which covers part of their inſcriptions.

On a flat alabaſter ſtone now in the chancel:

1. "HERE LYETH FRANCIS FOE, VICAR, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE JULY THE 3, 1662.
MY DET TO DEATH IS PAIDE UNTO A SAND, AND PAIE THOU MUST THAT THERE
DOST READING STAND; AND AM LAID DOWN TO SLEEPE,
TILL CHRIST FROM HIGH
SHALL RAISE ME HENCE, ALTHOUGH GRIM DEATH STAND BY."

On other flat ſtones:

2. "P. M. S.
Here lieth the body of Barbara, the wife of Hopkin Thomas, M. A. vicar of Barkby, daughter of Richard Pyott, of Streety, in the county of Stafford, eſq. by Barbara,
the daughter of ſir Wolſtan Dixie, bart.
She deceaſed March 21, 1713, aged 57 years."

3. "Hopkin Thomas, M. A.
rector of Kaythorpe, in the county of Lincoln,
and vicar of Barkby,
died February 1, 1743, aged 76 years."

4. "Waiting for the reſurrection to eternall life through our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, here lieth interred the body of Barbara Thomas, youngeſt daughter of Mr. Richard Thomas, late alderman of Neath, in the county of Glamorgan.
She died June the 5th, 1741, aged 29 years."

In the North aile.

On a mural marble monument by Ryſbrach, fig. 14.

Arms: Pochin; on an eſcutcheon of pretence, Vert, three ſtags courant, Argent, armed Or, within a border Argent; Greene; fig. 15.

On another ſhield on the ſame monument:

Pochin; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. a croſs Vert, Huſſey; 2 and 3. Barry of ſix, Ermine and Gules, Trollope; fig. 16.

"Underneath lies the body of Charlotte, wife of Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, eſq.

---

[1] Burton, p. 39.
[2] From the MS notes of Mr. Sanderſon of Bitteſwell.
[3] Walker, p. 244.

[4] "18 die menſ. Sept. 1556, d'ns admiſit Gregorium Kynge, clericum, ad vicariam perpetuam parochie de Barkeby, Lincoln' dioc', ſede epiſcopali ibidem vacante, per mortem d'ni Richardi Reynold, clerici, ult. vic. ibid. vac', ad preſentationem Elizabeth' Stanfeld vidue, relicte & executricis teſtamenti & ultime voluntatis Ricardi Stanfeld, armigeri, nuper dum vixit civis & pannarii civitatis London', defuncti, vicarie veri patroni." Reg' Pole, archiep. Cantuar. fol. 43.

[5] Mr. Woodcock had a diſpenſation, in November 1783, to hold the vicarage of Rothley with the rectory of Coſſington; and another, in 1784, to hold Rotheley with the vicarage of Barkby; and a third, in 1788, on reſigning Rothley, to hold with Barkby the rectory of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln.

eldeſt daughter of ſir Edward Huſſey, of Wellbourne, in the county of Lincoln, bart.;
deſcended, by her mother, from the honourable family of the Carterets:
ſhe left two daughters, viz. Sarah and Charlotte.
Herſelf, and Thomas their only ſon, died of the ſmall-pox, the 2d day of December, 1726;
her age 42, his 8.
Near them lies the body of Mary,
ſecond wife of the ſaid Thomas Pochin, eſq.
only daughter of Thomas Trollope[1], of Bourne, eſq.
by Mary, ſiſter to William lord Craven.
She left two ſons and one daughter;
viz. William, George, and Mary;
and died May the 7th, 1732, aged 31.
In memory of them, the ſaid Thomas Pochin, eſq.
cauſed this monument to be erected;
intending it both for them and himſelf.
Near this place lies the body of the ſaid Thomas Pochin, eſq.
He died Auguſt the 30th, 1751, aged 68."

On three atchievements:
Pochin; impaling Huſſey; fig. 17.
Quarterly; 1. Pochin, 2. Huſſey, 3. Greene, 4. Trollope; fig. 18.
Pochin; impaling Greene; fig. 19.

On flat ſtones in the North aile:

1. "John Pochin, ſon of Matthew Pochin, eſq.
died March 12, 1630, aged 34."

2. "Elizabeth Pochin, wife of George Pochin, eſq.
departed this life the 7th day of Auguſt, 1652."

3. "Bethiah Pochin, wife of Thomas Pochin, eſq.
departed this life the 20th day of May, A. D. 1658."

4. "Here lieth the body of Barbara Pochin, being the ſecond wife to Thomas Pochin, eſq.
and daughter of ſir Wolſtan Dixie, baronet.
She died September 5, 1667."

5. "Here lies the body of George Pochin, eſq.
eldeſt ſon of Matthew Pochin, eſq. owner of the manors and rectory of Barkby, Barkby Thorpe, Hambleton, and the North end of Thurmaſton.
He died the 31ſt of October, 1669, aged 76."

6. "Thomas Pochin, eſq. died November 26, 1693,
aged 74."

7. "In memory of George Pochin, eſq.
who died Auguſt 18, 1707, in the 64th year of his age.
And of Mary his wife, who was the ſecond daughter of Chriſtopher Packe, of Coates, in this county, eſq.
formerly lord-mayor of London.
She died September 21, 1706,
in the 60th year of her age."

8. "Here lieth the body of Leventhorpe, youngeſt daughter of Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, eſq.
who died Feb. 12, in the year of our Lord 1714,
in the 21ſt year of her age.
Alſo the body of Ann, 4th daughter of the aboveſaid Thomas Pochin, eſq.
who died March the 17th, 1744, aged 63."

9. "Here lyes the body of Thomas Pochin, late of Barkby, eſq.
He died Nov. 23, 1732, in the 82d year of his age."

10. "Thomas Pochin, eſq.
died Auguſt 30, 1751, aged 68."

11. "Here lieth the body of Charlotte Pochin, fifth daughter of Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, eſq.
by Mary, daughter of ſir Charles Huſſey,
of Caythorpe, in the county of Lincoln, baronet.
She died May the 26th, 1760, aged 73."

12. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Pochin[2], eſq. M.D.
He was the eldeſt ſon of George Pochin, late of Loughborough, in this county, eſq.
He died Auguſt the 6th, 1781, aged 67."

13. "Here lieth the body of Ralph Woodcock, gent.
deſcended from an antient family which for many generations reſided at Keyham, in this county.
He died Sept. 28, 1791,
in the 72d year of his age."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "George Monk died October 15, 1600."

2. "John Monk departed this life November . . . ."

3. "Here lieth the body of Robert Pepper, who departed this life October 28, 1662.
Here lieth alſo the body of Joſiah Johnſon, third ſon of Thomas Johnſon, gent.
who departed this life the 28th day of November,
1721, aged 29 years."

4. "Hic jacet Hen. Stafford, de Barkby Thorpe,
A. M. Eccl. Angl. preſbyter.
Obiit 4° Julii, anno ætatis 42, anno Salutis 1686.
Reſurgam."

5. "Here lieth the body of Mary Johnſon, wife unto John Johnſon, of Barkby, gent.
who departed this life the 3d day of March,
in the year of our Lord 1703,
in the 61ſt year of her age."

6. "Here are interred the remains of William Johnſon, of Thurmaſton, gent.
He departed this life the 24th of July, 1706,
aged 39 years.
Mrs. Suſanna Johnſon, wife of the above William Johnſon,
was alſo interred beneath.
Here alſo lieth the body of William Johnſon, gent.
ſon of the above William Johnſon and Suſanna;
who departed this life the 16th day of March, 1782,
aged 77 years."

7. "Here lyeth the body of Mary Johnſon, the wife of William Johnſon, of Barkby Thorp, gent.
who departed this life the 10th day of Auguſt,
anno Domini 1706, her age 63 years."

8. "Here lieth the body of John Johnſon, of Barkby, gent. who departed this life
the 7th of November, anno Domini 1709,
in the 76th year of his age."

9. "Here lyeth interred the body of Elizabeth Barry, of Thurmaſton, who departed this life September 4, anno Dom. 1711,
aged 8 years."

10. "Here lyeth interred the body of William Johnſon, of Barkby Thorpe, gent.
who departed this life the 23d day of November, annoq. Dom. 1712, in the 80th year of his age.
Memento mori."

11. "Here lieth interred the body of Elizabeth Johnſon, eldeſt daughter of Thomas Johnſon, of Barkby, gent.
She departed this life September the 12th, anno Domini 1718, in the 26th year of her age."

12. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Johnſon, gent.
who departed this life the 25th of October, 1720,
in the 60th year of his age."

13. "Here lieth the body of Mary Johnſon, wife of Thomas Johnſon, gent.
who departed this life the 24th day of November, 1721,
in the 55th year of her age."

14. "In memory of Anne Hutton, daughter of Jockton Hutton, of Wigtoff,
in the county of Lincoln, gentleman, who departed this life February the 28th, 1725,
ætat. ſuæ 26.
Well done, thou good and faithful ſervant!"

15. "In memory of William the ſon of William Marſhall, officer of Exciſe, who departed May the 22d, 1727, aged 30 years.
His mother, Honour Marſhall, lieth on his left ſide; who died September the 9th, 1728, aged 56:

---

[1] By the death of William Pochin, eſq. in 1798, ſ. p. the eſtates which came by the Trollopes reverted to that family.

[2] Of whom ſee farther under Loughborough; of which town he compiled a particular Hiſtory.

His father on his right;
who was 26 years in the Exciſe,
and ſchool-maſter here 16 years:
he died September the 14th, 1748,
aged 73 years."

16. "Here lieth the body of John Cooper,
who departed this life the 7th day of Auguſt, 1727,
in the 64th year of his age."

17. Near the belfry-door:
"Thomas Welch,
late ſchool-maſter and pariſh-clerk here,
died March 29th, 1729."

18. "Here lieth the body of Hannah Cooper, wife of John Cooper,
who departed this life Auguſt the 1ſt, 1740,
aged 70 years."

19. "Here lieth interred the body of Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Anne Garton, of Rotherby; who departed this life November the 3d, 1752,
aged 63.
To rich, to poor, to friend, to all,
She was as good as we dare call
Frail fleſh: kind paſſenger, give praiſe
To her who liv'd thoſe happy days.
Go thou, and do likewiſe."

20. "Here lie the bodies of John Johnſon, of Loughborough, gent. and Elizabeth his wife;
who were buried Auguſt 31, 1753:
he died Auguſt the 15th, aged 66 years;
ſhe died Aug. 18, aged 63 years.
Alſo here lie the bodies of John, Palmer, and Elizabeth, ſons and daughter of the ſaid John Johnſon
by Elizabeth his wife:
John died September the 17th, 1733, aged 15 years;
Palmer died Auguſt the 2d, 1724, aged 3 weeks;
Elizabeth died June the 18th, 1726, aged 4 months."

21. "Here lies interred the body of Sophia Johnſon, daughter of Nathanael-Palmer Johnſon, eſq.
She departed this life the 17th day of January, 1780,
aged 8 years."

22. "Here lieth the body of Mr. William Cooper.
He departed this life the 6th day of Auguſt, 1783,
aged 56 years."

23. "Jeremiah Tupman died April the 25th, 1789,
aged 68 years.
He was 36 years butler to William Pochin, eſq.
ſtrictly faithful, and highly eſteemed.
Mary Tupman, his wife, died July the 26th, 1790,
aged 57 years;
whoſe bodies lie cloſe to this ſtone on the North ſide."

24. "To the memory of Thomas Percival, of Cold Newton, in this county.
He departed this life March 12, 1796,
aged 47 years."

On flat ſtones in the South aile:

1. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Anne Cooper, relict of Mr. William Cooper, and daughter of Luke and Conſtance White.
She departed this life the . . . . . day of Nov. 1794,
aged 70 years."

2. "Here lies interred the body of John Johnſon, ſon of Nathanael-Palmer Johnſon, eſq.
He departed this life March 24, 1795,
aged 21 years."

In the church-yard.

On the South ſide is an altar-tomb, compoſed of layers of Swithland ſlate, pebbles, and lime-mortar; on the North ſide of which, on two freeſtone tablets, is this inſcription:

"GEORGE GILSON, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE
MAY 16, ANNO DOM. 1681,
HIS AGE 39,
LIETH HERE INTERRED UNDER THIS STONE;
A FRIEND TO ALL, BUT FOE TO NONE:
THE PIOUS LIFE WHICH HE HATH LED
SHEWS FORTH HIS WORTH, THO' HE BE DEAD:
BOTH IN HIS LIFE, AND AFTER DEATH,
MEANS TO THE POOR HE DID BEQUEATH.
READER, WHOE'ER THOU ART, THOU MUST SOON, LIKE HIM, AT LAST CRUMBLE TO DUST."

Adjoining to the laſt, is a brick tomb, with a Swithland ſlate cover; at the end of which, on a Swithland ſlate:

"Here lieth the body of Anne Lacy, daughter of William Lacy, of Humberſton;
who departed this life November 2,
in the year of our Lord 1707,
anno ætatis 73."

On upright ſtones:

1. "William Cooper died October 5, 1753,
in the 82d year of his age.
Anne his wife died June 1, 1750,
in the 79th year of her age."

2. "Sacred to the memory of Mary and Elizabeth Allen. Mary died Aug. 17, 1759,
in the 76th year of her age;
and Elizabeth died the 14th day of June, 1770,
in the 85th year of her age.
Longa dies noctem."

3. "Here lie the earthly remains of Anna, the wife of Edward Riley, and daughter of Thomas and Conſtance Clayton, of Humberſtone. She departed this life the 29th day of October, 1770, in the 82d year of her age."

4. "William Chamberlain died Feb. 24, 1774,
aged 74 years.
Jane his wife died Jan. 12, 1782,
aged 73 years."

5. "John Berry died March 1, 1782,
aged 74 years."

6. "John Stubbs died June 1, 1782,
aged 81 years.
Mary his ſecond wife died Jan. 23, 1770,
aged 74 years."

7. "Thomas Wooldridge died Sept. 11, 1785,
aged 73 years.
Hannah, his relict, died Sept. 24, 1791,
aged 83 years.
In Death's uncertainty thy danger lies."

8. "John Radwell, ſenior, late of Wanlip, died Sept. 12, 1786, aged 74."

9. "Joſeph White died Aug. 12, 1789, aged 79.
Mary his wife died Jan. 23, 1782,
in the 71ſt year of her age."

In the chancel of All Saints Church, Oxford.

On the Eaſt wall, on a black marble tablet, in gold letters:

Arms: Barry of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Ermine[1].

"P. M. S. D.
THOMÆ MARSHALL, S. T. D.
quem, in agro Leiceſtr', Barkbeya genuit;
Oxonium educavit; ex paſtore Mercat. Dordrect.;
Lincoln. collegium primò ſocium,
deindè rectorem, fecit.
Glouceſtriæ decanus impiger, concionibus potens & creber,
pietate inſignis, doctrinâ ſummus,
linguarum Oriental. & Occidental. aquila perſpicax,
Ægyptiæ phœnix unicus.
Ex muſæo inſtructiſſimo academiæ libros in B. P. deſideratos, collegio reliquit & pecunias amplas legavit;
ſui depoſitum huic reliquit,
XVIII Apr. MDCLXXXV."

---

[1] See an impalement of theſe arms in Plate VI. fig. 16.

Pedigree of BERESFORD, of BARKBY and SHAKERSTON.

Arms: 1. and 4. Argent, three fleurs de lis between ſeven croſslets fitchy, Sable; 2. Argent, three garbs Azure, bended Or; 3. Argent, three eagles diſplayed, wings downwards, Gules, within a border engrailed Sable; fig. 20.

John Beresford, of Derby.=

John Beresford, of Barkby, married 21 Edw. IV.=Margery, dau. of John Fowler.

Robert Beresford, of Barkby.= . . . . dau. and heir of . . . . Lole.

William Beresford, of Shakerſton.= . . . .

Arthur Beresford, of Skakerſton=Dorothy, dau. of John Danvers, of Swithland.

1. Robert Beresford, of Shakerſton and Nailſton, ætat. 40, 1619.=Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Aſhley, of Patteſhall, co. Stafford.
2. Adrian, æt. 35.
3. Arthur, æt. 33.
4. George, 5. Thomas, both died ſ. p.
6. Edward, died ſ. p.
Dorothy, married Nicholas Aſhley, of Wollaſton, co. Stafford.

1. John Beresford, æt. 10. 2. Francis, æt. 8. 3. Bryan, æt. 6. 1. Elizabeth. 2. Joyce. 3. Iſabel. 4. Mary.

Pedigree of STANFORD, of BARKBY THORPE.

Arms: Argent, three bars Azure; on a canton Or, a feſs; and in chief, three maſcles voided Sable. Creſt, a cubit arm in complete armour Or, holding a broken ſword Argent, hilted Sable; fig. 21.

Thomas Stanford, of Leiceſter, third ſon of Thomas Stanford.= . . . .

John Stanford, of Barkby Thorpe, gent. mayor of Leiceſter 1592; died 1602.= . . . .

1. John Stanford, of Barkby Thorpe, recorder of Leiceſter 1603; and died that year.=Elizabeth, dau. of Will. Bainbridge, of Lockington.
2. Henry Stanford, of Slawſton, 1619.
Elizabeth.=William Foxe, of Ratcliffe Culey.

Katharine, married Thomas Bellers, of Wymeſwould; and after to Richard Hacker, of Waley, co. Nott.
1. Thomas Stanford, of Barkby Thorpe, living 1630.=Anne, dau. of Thomas Staveley, eſq. of West Langton.
Elizabeth.

Margery, æt. 14 days.

Pedigree of POCHIN, of BARKBY.

From the Viſitations of 1619 and 1682; an illuminated Pedigree in the Office of Arms, 1770; and Epitaphs.

Arms: Quarterly, 1. Or, a chevron Gules, between three horſe-ſhoes Sable, Pochin; 2. Argent, on two bars Gules, three water-bougets Or, Willoughby; 3. Argent, on a croſs Azure, five mullets Or, Lincoln; 4. Argent, on a bend Sable, five bezants, Palmer; 5. Azure, a fleur de lis Argent, within a border engrailed Or, Palmer; 6. Gules, a feſs indented between ſix billets Or, Brett; 7. . . . . Wincope; 8. Or, a croſs Vert, Huſſey; 9. Argent, a bend wavy between two gemelles Sable, Neffield; 10. Barry of ſix, Argent and Gules, Huſſey; 11. Per pale, Gules and Azure, three chevrons Argent, voided, and counterchanged of the field, Say; 12. Gules, five lozenges conjoined, in feſs Argent, on each an eſcallop Sable, Cheyney; 13. Vert, three ſtags courant, within a border Argent, Trollope; 14. Pochin. Creſt, a harpy with wings proper, full-faced, and tail twiſted round the leg; fig. 22.

Walter Power, of Barkby.= . . . . . .

Peter Lincoln, of Barkby.=Anne, daughter and heir.

William Willoughby, of Barkby.=Anne, daughter and heir.

Richard Pochin, of Barkby.=Alice, daughter and heir.

John Pochin, of Barkby.= . . . . .

Thomas Pochin, of Barkby.=Elizabeth, eldeſt daughter of Ralph Shirley, eſq.

William Pochin, of Barkby.=Mary, third daughter and coheir of William Palmer, of Stony Staunton.

1. George Pochin, of Barkby, buried there Aug. 19, 1597.=Katharine, dau. of . . . . Skeffington, of Skeffington, co. Leiceſter, buried at Barkby Jan. 6,
2. William, died ſ. p.=Alice, dau. of Edward Brokeſby, of Shouldby.
Richard Chambre, of Gaddeſby, died 1558.=Barbara.

1. Edward, d. ſ. p. 2. George, d. ſ. p. 3. Valentine, d. ſ. p.
Mary. Elizabeth. William, died 1564. John, æt. 26, in 1575.

Ellen[1], married to Rich. Harrington, of Bagworth, co. Leic.
1. William[2]. 3. Thomas, a prieſt.
2. Matthew Pochin, of Barkby, buried there July 2, 1639.=Katharine, dau. of . . Blewitt.
Dorothy, marr. William Cogan, of the Iſle of Axholme, co. Linc.
Robert More, of Knighton, co. Nott.=Mary.

Elizabeth, daughter of Tho. Dove, D.D. biſhop of Peterborough, first wife; died Aug. 7, 1632. 3 =1. George Pochin, of Barkby, baptized at Barkby Feb. 20, 1592.=Heſter, dau. of . . . . Arthington, of Arthington, co. York, 2d wife.

[See p. 52.]

2. John, bapt. April 20, 1596.
3. Francis, bapt. June 30, 1597; marr. . . . dau. of . . . Boyer, and had iſſue William, who went into Ireland.
4. Robert, bapt. April 29, 1601; married, and had iſſue Francis, Thomas, and Robert, all died ſ. p.
5. Matthew, bapt. Sept. 29, 1594.

1. Alice, bapt. March 29, 1599; married . . . . Pitman, of Lond.
2. Dorothy, bapt. Mar. 20, 1600; marr. . . . . Goſſage, of Lond.
3. Katharine, bapt. Oct. 1603.
4. Grace, bapt. Nov. 1, 1606.
5. Roſe[3].
6. Mary.
7. Margaret.

---

[1] Married at Barkby, Nov. 2, 1592.

[2] Buried at Barkby, April 17, 1588.

[3] Paſcha, in another copy.

Elizabeth Dove, firſt wife. = George Pochin. = Heſter Arthington, ſecond wife.

Bethia, dau. and coheir of John Wincope, of Morton, co. Linc. eſq. died May 20, 1658; and was buried at Barkby. = 1. Tho. Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. eldeſt ſon, bapt. Mar. 7, 1618, high-ſheriff of Leic. 1647. = Barbara, dau. of ſir Wolſtan Dixie, bart. of Market Boſworth, Leic. relict of Rich. Piot, of Streety, co. Staff. 2d wife; died Sept. 5, 1667.

Abigail, dau. of John Smith, of London, merch. died about 1667. = 5. G. Pochin, citizen and ſalter of London, baptized Nov. 4, 1634. = Mary, dau. of Robert Fryer, of Wigſton, co. Leic.

George, æt. 20, 1687.
Abigail, unmarried 1687.

John, æt. 16, 1687.
Robert, æt. 13, 1687.
Mary, æt. 11, 1687.

6. Joh. Pochin, of Wigſton, born April 8, 1636, living 1687. = Jane, dau. of Robert Fryer, of Wigſton Magna.

George, and ſeveral others, died young.
Robert, æt. 9, 1682.
John, æt. 13, 1682.

George, æt. 15, 1682.
Jane, æt. 11, 1682.
Elizabeth, æt. 6, 1682.

2. Matthew, bapt. at Barkby Sept. 4, 1625; ſlain in the royal ſervice 1646, ſ. p.
3. George, bapt. at Barkby July 20, 1628.
4. Francis, bapt. at Barkby Aug. 20, 1632.

1. Dove, bapt. in Peterborough cathedral Sept. 2, 1615.
2. Catharine, bapt. there April 4, 1622.
3. Elizabeth, bapt. March 21, 1630.
4. Margaret, bapt. at Barkby March 1, 1632; married Ralph Tunſtal, of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln.

1. George Pochin, ſon and heir, of Sileby, co. Leic. d. Aug. 18, 1707; buried at Barkby in his 64th year, ſ. p. = Mary, dau. of Chriſt. Packe, of Cotes, co. Leiceſter, lord-mayor of London 1655; died Sept. 21, 1706, æt. 60.

2. Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, born at Barkby; married Oct. 19, 1676; high-ſheriff of Leiſhire 1681; died Nov. 23, 1732; and buried at Barkby the 26th; æt. 81. = Mary, dau. and at length heir of ſir Charles Huſſey, of Caythorpe, co. Lincoln, bart.; ſhe died at Walton, Aug. 1, 1697, and there buried; æt. 44.

3. John, died young.
4. Joſeph, æt. 24, 1681; then in Jamaica.

Elizabeth, married William Smith, merchant of London.
Leventhorpe, bapt. Aug. 27, 1642; married William Trollope, of Thurlby.
Abigail.
Catharine.

1. Elizabeth, born at Barkby, Sept. 19, 1677; married Laurence Bourne, of Marſh Green, co. Derby.
2. Bethia, born at Barkby Oct. 15, 1679; married Samuel Shirwin, vicar of Sileby, co. Leic.
3 Jane, born at Barkby Feb. 21, 1680; married Robert Finlay, of the city of Dublin.
4. Anne, b. at Barkby Thorpe March 17, 1681; died ſingle March 17, 1744-5, and buried at Barkby.
5. Charlotte, born at Walton March 26, 1685; died unmarried May 26, 1760, and buried at Barkby on the 26th.
6. Mary, born at Walton Nov. 16, 1691; married Thomas Woodcock, of Keyham, and was buried at Barkby Nov. 9, 1729.
7. Leventhorpe, born at Walton, died unmarried Feb. 12, 1714-5; buried at Barkby the 14th, æt. 21.

Charlotte, eldeſt dau. of ſir Edw. Huſſey, of Welbourne, co. Linc. bart. 1ſt wife; died of the ſmall-pox Dec. 2, 1726, ætat. 42; buried at Barkby the 4th following. = 1. Thomas Pochin, born at Barkbythorpe April 15, 1685; high-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in 1711; died Aug. 30, 1751; and buried at Barkby Sept. 5. = Mary, only dau. and heir of Tho. Trollope, of Bourne, co. Linc. eſq. by Mary, ſiſter to William lord Craven; 2d wife; died May 7, 1732; and buried at Barkby.

2. George Pochin, of Hamerſmith, co. Midd. eſq. born at Walton April 28, 1686; and afterwards in the commiſſion of the peace for Leiceſterſhire; died at Loughborough Nov. 26, 1756; and was buried at Walton Dec. 1. = Frances, dau. and heir of Will. Hodgkins, of Seale, Kent, eſq.

3. Charles, born at Walton 12 March 1690; died an infant at Walton.

Thomas Pochin, only ſon, born the 1ſt, and bapt. the 14th June, 1718, at Barkby; died of the ſmall-pox Dec. 2, 1726; and buried with his mother the ſame day.

Sarah, b. Feb. 15, 1715; bapt. the 4th of March following at Barkby; married Geo. Pochin, of Morcote in Rutland, her couſin, at Barkby, Oct. 19, 1751.

Charlotte, b. March 27, 1717; bapt. at Barkby; and there mar. Sept. 29, 1750; died 1772. = Charles-James Packe, eſq. of Preſtwould, co. Leic. (See their deſcendants under Preſtwould.)

1. William Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. born at Barkby Apr. 7, 1731; high-ſheriff 1756; one of the knights of the ſhire, in four parliaments, from 1780 till his death, Sept. 10, 1798.
2. George Pochin, of Bourne, co. Linc. b. at Barkby April 28, 1732; married Eleanor-Frances, dau. of ſir Wolſtan Dixie; and died at Bourne May 13, 1798.
Mary, born at Barkby Feb. 23, 1729-30; living 1798; and the preſent owner of the Leiceſterſhire eſtates.

Prudence, dau. of Paul Jenkinſon, rector of Weſton, co. Nott. relict of ſir Jonathan Jenkinſon, bart. of Walton, co. Derby; died 178 . . = 1. Thomas Pochin, of Loughborough, M. D. b. Jan. 1, 1713, in the pariſh of St. Mary Outwich, London; M. B. of Emanuel Coll. Cambridge 1736; married 1741; d. Aug. 6, 1781, æt. 67; bur. at Barkby.

2. Geo. Pochin, born in Milk-ſtr. Cheapſide, London; M. A. of Emanuel college 1742; rector of Morcote, Rutland, and of Caythorpe, co. Linc. 1754; died March 31, 1788, ſ. p. = Sarah, dau. of Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. marr. at Barkby Oct. 19, 1751; died 1780.

Elizabeth, dau. of Phil. Speed, of London, relict of Daniel Pogſon, B. A. of Emanuel coll. died Nov. 14, 1780, æt. 63; bur. at Walton. = 3. William Pochin, gent. born in Milk-ſtreet, London, July 4, 1719; attorney at law at Loughborough, died Dec. 25, 1794, æt. 75; buried at Walton. = . . . widow of Mr. ——— Preſton, of Loughborough; 2nd wife; living 1798.

1. Sarah, born at Loughborough April 4, 1748; married to Mr. Tho. Clarke, of Loughborough; and has a ſon, Thomas, born 1778; living 1798.

2. Thomas Pochin, eſq. b. at Loughborough, March 22, 1750; died 1789. = Elizabeth Bird, dau. of . . . . . . Bird [1], eſq. of Weſt Leke, co. Nott. marr. 178 .; living 1798.

1. Charles-William Pochin, eſq. born at Loughborough, and baptized May 30, 1777; living 1798; heir to the Leiceſterſhire eſtates of the late William Pochin, eſq. who left them by will to his ſiſter Mary for her life.
2. Frances, baptized at Loughborough May 21, 1779; living 1798.
3. George Pochin, eſq. baptized at Loughborough Sept. 26, 1786; living 1798; to whom Colonel George Pochin deviſed all his eſtates after the death of his brother William.

1. Frances, born at Loughborough March 20, 1746-7; married, June 7, 1786, to the Rev. John Aſkew, D. D. rector of North Cadbury, co. Somerſet; by whom ſhe has one ſon, Anthony, born 1787.
2. Rev. Will. Pochin, born at Loughborough Dec. 4, 1750; M. A. of Emanuel Coll. 1775; rector of Morcote 1788; living 1798; has ſeveral children living.
3. Elizabeth, born at Loughborough Feb. 16, 1753; marr. Mr. John Thorpe, of Loughborough, ſurgeon; and has iſſue Sarah-Frances-Anne, born 1789; Thomas, born 1790; both living 1798.

---

[1] Mr. Bird lived at Sutton Bonnington, in Nottinghamſhire, and had property at Sileby. He left one ſon and one daughter, by his will, to the care of the late counteſs of Huntingdon, who brought them up. The widow of Mr. Bird, mother to Mrs. Pochin, married the late ſir Henry Every, bart. of Egington; and to her third huſband the brother of ſir John Moſeley, bart.

HAMILTON

is a ſmall lordſhip, bounded by Scraptoft, Humberſton, Barkby Thorpe, and Beby; and was once the property of Hugo de Grenteſmainell.

"Hamilton," ſays Mr. Burton in 1642, "is in the pariſh of Barkby, and had a chapel within it. In this town was the ſeat of the antient family of Hamilton, which belonged to the old earls of Leiceſter; from whoſe grant they had this land, and therefore bare for their arms, Gules, three cinquefoils Ermine[1], alluding to the ſaid earl's coat, who bare Gules, one cinquefoil Ermine; both which ſtand together in St. Mary's church in Leiceſter[2]. Of this houſe was ſir Gilbert de Hamilton, knight; who, in the reign of king Edward II, having ſlain one of the family of Thomas Deſpencer, fled into Scotland; and there, marrying with Iſabell, daughter of Thomas Randolfe earl of Murray, planted himſelf, and was honourably entertained by Robert Bruce king of Scotland; of whoſe gift he held lands in Cadzowe in Chifedale, whoſe iſſue were after made barons of parliament; of whom deſcended James lord Hamilton, that married Mary the daughter of James the Second, king of Scotland; who by her had iſſue James earl of Arran, created duke of Caſtle Herault in Poictou in France, and knight of the order of St. Michael, by Henry the Second, the French king; who had iſſue John marquis of Hamilton, who had iſſue James marquis of Hamilton, earl of Arran, baron of Evon and Aberbroth, created earl of Cambridge, and baron of Ennerdale in Cumberland, by his majeſty, 1619, and counſellor of ſtate for both the kingdoms of England and Scotland, who died 1624, leaving iſſue James marquis of Hamilton [who was beheaded in Old Palace Yard March 9, 1648.][3]."

The MSS. of Mr. Roper furniſh the two following ſtatements of proceedings in the Court of Exchequer relative to this hamlet:

1. "Petrus de Lincolniâ petit versùs Geroldum de Hamilton unam carucatam terre, cum pertinentiis, in Hamelton, ut jus ſuum, per breve de ingreſſu, &c.; Geraldus venit, & defendit jus ſuum, quando, &c.; & dicit, quòd non debet ei indè reſpondere, quia dicit quòd non tenet integrè predictam terram versùs eum petitam, eò quòd quedam Juliana, mater predicti Geroldi, indè tenet tertiam partem in dote, & que non nominatur in brevi: Et Petrus non poteſt hoc dedicere: Ideò conſideratum eſt, quòd predictus Geraldus eat ſine die, & Petrus in maneria; & perquirat ſibi aliud breve versùs predict' Julianam, ſi voluerit[4]."

2. "Henricus de Somervile, filius & heres Jōhis de Somervile, fratris Alexandri, monſtrat d̄no regi, per petitionem ſuam Gallicam, quòd Rad̄us Burgeis, per fraudem & covinam, ipſum exhereditavit de manerio de Hamilton, in eo quòd implacitavit predictos Alexandrum & Johannem per breve de recto in banco, & ibidem locavit duos attornatos, unum pro ſe, & alium pro predictis Alexandro & Jōhe; & tantum fecit quòd attornatus predictorum Alexandri & Jōhis fecit defaltam, per quod judicium redditum fuit quòd dictus Rad̄us recuperaret manerium predictum versùs ipſos, in perpetuum tenendum ſibi & heredibus ſuis, prout patet, tam per placitum hìc, quàm per petitionem & indortiamentum ejuſdem, unà cum brevibus miſſis ad bancum commune & bancum regis: Ideò preceptum eſt vicecomiti, quòd venire faciat predictum Rad̄um; qui venit, & dicit quòd breve per quod venit hìc non concordat cum indorſiamento petitionis, neque declaratio ſua concordat cum placito priori, per quod recuperavit verſus predictos Alexandrum & Jōhem: Et indè petit judicium[5]."

Among the records in the Chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, called "Pedes Finium," or "Placita temp. Hen. III." in the cheſt marked B. are ſome deeds relative to Hamilton, marked 38. There are alſo ſome relative to Blaſton, marked 9 and 30[6].

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had a chapel here, dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, with the tithes of corn and hay, appendant to the church of Barkby; and the vicar of that church was bound to ſupply the chapel three days in the week.

A virgate of land here was aſſigned to the uſe of the chapel, with a toft near the orchard, four ſelions, and the land which Adelicia held in Thorpe; all which were granted, by abbot Paul, about the year 1200, to Herbert, ſon of Joceline the prieſt of Barkby, by the ſervice of 16*d.* a year.

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1325, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, this entry occurs:

"De feodo Wiłłi Daubeny, de vet̃i feoff' d̄ni regis.

De feodo unius militis & dim' & 8^{ve} partis unius militis q̃d Thom' Deincourt tenet in Barkeb', & in Queneb', & in Hungreton, & in Croxton, & in Hamed', & in Thorp, & in Hoveſie, & in Cumptone, 43s̃. 4d̄."

In Barkby, Hamilton, South Croxton, Hungarton, Quenby, and Thorpe, Peter de Lincoln, in 1240, held three parts of a knight's fee of the honour of Belvoir[7].

The abbey held ten acres of land in Hamilton, for which they paid ſcutage at the rate of 3½*d.*

From certain lands in Thorpe and Hamilton, part of which abutted on the garden of Richard the ſon of Gerard Hamilton, and other parts ſuper Blye and ſuper Brodale, the ſaid Gerard paid a free rent to the abbot of 10*d.* They had from him a farther free rent of 3*s.* the gift of Wallis, the ſon of William Herbert of Barkby; and of 4*s.* the proper gift of Gerard.

They had alſo a free rent of 7*s.* 6*d.* from Richard Wylloby, who held under the abbot in capite, with homage and ſervice, eſcheats, &c.[8]

In 1346, Roger de Willoughby held the fourth part of a knight's fee in Barkby and Hamilton, of the fees of Ros and Huntingdon[9].

"This manor came afterwards to Thomas Keble, ſerjeant at law in the reign of king Henry VII; and is now (1641) the inheritance of Henry ſon of Ferdinando Sacheverell, of the Old Hays[10]."

The ſite of the old manor-houſe of Hamilton is now entirely green graſs field; not a ſtone ſeen peeping out of the ſward: but from inequality of the ground, and the veſtiges of the different indentations or intrenchments, there are evident indications of its having been a family reſidence in antient times.

There is at preſent only a ſingle houſe in the lordſhip, which is inhabited by a ſhepherd.

---

[1] Plate VI. fig. 23.

[2] Burton, p. 45.

[3] From Mr. Burton's printed volume, p. 127; corrected by his MS. in 1641.

[4] Placita 31 Hen. III. in receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 22.

[5] Placita de termino Hillarii, 17 Edw. III. Rot. 74, coram domino rege, in receptu Scaccarii.

[6] The Repertorie of Records, 1631, p. 37.

[7] Vol. I. p. liv; from the Teſta de Nevill.

[8] See the Appendix, p. 4.

[9] See before, p. 45.

[10] Burton, MS.

THURMASTON,

antiently called Thurmodeſton, "a large and pleaſant village near the Soar, placed by the Foſs as it goes on to Lewen bridge, and to Radcliffe[1]." The turnpike-road leading from Leiceſter to Melton, from the former of which it is diſtant about three miles, from the latter about twelve, paſſes through the village; and, being at ſuch an eaſy diſtance from Leiceſter, many reſpectable perſons have handſome houſes here. It is bounded on the Weſt by the river, on the North by Syſton, on the Eaſt by Barkby, and on the South by Humberſton.

The village of Thurmaſton is divided into the North end and the South end; the former, within the pariſh of Barkby, the property of William Pochin, eſq.; the latter, in that of Belgrave, the property of ſir William Manners, bart.

Thurmaſton was, ſo far back as the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, divided into two diſtinct lordſhips; but both portions were, at the Conqueror's ſurvey, part of the large poſſeſſions of Hugo de Grenteſmainell; who would have held them as one manor, but the jury of the county would not allow it[2].

One of the portions, containing ten ploughlands, was, in the reign of king Edward, worth ſixty ſhillings; and at the Conqueror's ſurvey continued of the ſame value. The land was equal to ſeven ploughs. In the demeſne were three ploughs and five bondmen; and fifteen villans, with two ſocmen and ſeven bordars, had four ploughs and a half. There were twenty-four acres of meadow; and a mill worth ſix ſhillings and eight pence[3].

The other portion (the North end), containing three ploughlands and a half, was valued, in the reign of king Edward, at ten ſhillings; and at the Survey was worth ſixty ſhillings, being then held by William as tenant to Hugo de Grenteſmainell. The land was equal to two ploughs and a half; one was employed in the demeſne, three villans had another. There were ſeven acres of meadow[4].

This lordſhip deſcended from Hugo de Grenteſmainell to Robert de Mellent earl of Leiceſter; who granted three carucates and one yard-land here to the ſecular canons of the collegiate church of St. Mary de Caſtro in Leiceſter; which were afterwards transferred by his ſon earl Robert Boſſu, with other conſiderable benefactions, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis, of his own foundation.

The counteſs Petronella (together with her body) gave to that abbey the whole of the meadow called Belleholme; which was confirmed by her ſon, earl Robert Fitzparnell.

Ralph Pincerna, or Boteler (whoſe family were enfeoffed in a principal part of this lordſhip by the earls of Leiceſter) granted to the abbot and convent 30*s.* yearly rent here.

Their other principal benefactors were, Roger de Quincy earl of Winton (who gave them ſome lands, and ſold ſome others, together with all liberties appertaining to view of frankpledge from divers tenants of Henry Anlep, Elias Lynſey, and the prior of Caldwell, at an eaſy price, to abbot Henry, who bought ſome other lands of William Kysforde); Henry de Anlep (who gave four virgates of land, and the capital meſſuage which about 1470 was inhabited by William Skeyth); Henry and Richard, ſons of Herbert of Barkby (from whom they had the whole meadow of Adam Ketelbern in Neſſe); William de Galby; Thurſtan ſon of William de Thurmaſton, and Robert his ſon; William ſon of Peter the Carpenter (who gave a moiety of the windmill and of the ground on which it ſtood); John ſon of William Avice of Thurmodeſton (who gave half an acre of meadow land in that part of Thurmaſton-field near Wanlip which in 1470 was in the tenure of John Drayton, and from which the abbey paid annually 1*d.* to Merton College[5] (collegio Sc̄i Mart̄i) at Oxford); William Alnath; Robert Preſbyter (elſewhere called Capellanus) ſon of Thomas Froſt; Robert Wyſman; Robert ſon of Bertram of Helegate; Simon ſon of William Oſmond (a parcel of land oppoſite Le Haw, between the land of the canons and that which Hugo Barry formerly held); William ſon of Martin de Hertford (who gave a toft and three ſelions which had been Simon the Miller's); John Ketilbern (who gave them the place which had formerly been his capital meſſuage, ſituate between the toft of Thomas Brown and the river Sore, and in a certain ſtore-pond (ſervitarium) near that river; with all his right and title to the ſervice of a race of ginger[6], due from Michael the Carpenter for three acres of land; and of a clove-gilliflower from Simon of Hamilton for half an acre of land, and all other the demeſne rights and ſervices he held in the townſhip of Thurmaſton); Gerard de Hamilton (who gave them his right of naifſhip, or villanage, over Simon of Thurmaſton, ſon of Reginald Cole of Hamilton, with all his ſequela[7], and all his chattels); Edward ſon of John Lewyn (who gave a toft formerly belonging to Jordan rector of Carleton, and all the lands in Thurmodeſton which had belonged to John his father); Thurſtan of Galby; Robert the Smith and Agnes Qenyl; Robert ſon of Reginald; Thurſtan of Stoughton and Maud his wife; and William Blakeberd, one of their naifs. The whole of the land poſſeſſed by the abbot and convent in Thurmaſton amounted to at leaſt 428 acres.

Their tenants at will are enumerated in the Appendix, p. 6; and their free tenants, p. 7.

Amongſt the latter, John Draper held of the abbot, by knight's ſervice, one meſſuage, on an annual acknowledgement of two races of ginger, one flight of arrows, and a birdbolt (bozon'); and performed homage to abbot William Sadington, in St. Auſtin's chapel, on All Saints day 1433.

The biſhop of Lincoln paid 3*d.* and a quartern of pepper, for a toft and half a virgate of land; and 1½*d.* for ſix roods of land, formerly William Bateman's, afterwards John Reynolds's.

The prior of Caldwell held four meſſuages, four virgates and a half of land, by the ſervice of 7*d.* and ſuit of court.

The prior (præpoſitus) of Shene held a virgate of land, with a croft, by the rent of 2*d.* and an annual roſe-flower.

The church of Syſton, for two acres in the tenure of John Lye, paid 1*d.*

Amongſt the places named in Charyte's Rentale as parts of Thurmaſton are, The Ward of the Foreſt called Northhaye, the Neſſe, Moldehale, the Hurſt on Northorpmore, the Honyakar, Brodwong, Lawnhath, Ryefurlong, Longlande, Brownſol, Lampnars, Mylnecroft, Brodmedow, and Seynt Mariemedow.

---

[1] Wyrley, MS. in 1590.

[2] "Hanc habet Hugo pro uno manerio; ſed Scira negat." Domeſday, fol. 232. a. 2.

[3] "Idem [Hugo] tenet 10 carucatas terræ in Turmodeſtone. Terra eſt 7 carucarum. In dominico ſunt 3 carucæ, & 5 ſervi; & 15 villani, cum 8 ſochmannis & 7 bordariis, habent 4 carucas & dimidiam. Ibi molinum de 6 ſolidis & 8 denariis; & 24 acræ prati. Valuit, & valet, 60 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 232. b. 2.

[4] "Willielmus tenet de H[ugone] in Turmadeſtone 3 carucatas terræ & dimidiam. Terra eſt 2 carucarum & dimidie. In dominico eſt una; & 3 villani habent aliam. Ibi 7 acræ prati. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 40 ſolidos." Ibid.

[5] In the roll of 20 Edw. III. the Magiſter de Merton hall is noticed as holding the fourth part of a knight's fee in Barkby of the fee of Ros. See before, p. 45.

[6] See vol. II. Appendix, p. 69; where to the authorities given for interpreting gengiber, or zenziber, may be added a ſecond quotation from Johnſon's Dictionary: "RACE of ginger (rayz de gengibre in Spaniſh), a root or ſprig of ginger."—The Regiſter of the Abbey of St. Mary de Pratis ſhews, that, in the times of the priory, the reddend' of this aromatic was to be by the race. See alſo Cowell.

[7] This Bracton interprets to be, "id quod ſequatur corpus nativi; i. e. liberos, catalla, & tenementa, ſi quæ habuerit nativus."

They had weyf and ſtreyf; and free-warren on all their demeſne lands, with view of frankpledge and all its liberties; at which all their tenants of Thurmaſton were bound to appear; with thoſe of Howes, Kirkby Beler, Gaddeſby, Croxton, Quenyboro, Barkby, Thorpe Barkby, Bareſby, Coſſington, and four tenants of the prior of Caldwell.

Towards the common fine, the tenants of Thurmaſton paid 3*s.*; Barkby, 12*d.*; Quenyboro, 12*d.*; and the prior of Caldwell's four tenants, 2d.

All their tenants at Thurmaſton and Northorp, as tenants de Bordelond, were bound to levy a fine to the lord abbot in Seynt Marie's meadow (which in 1470 was in the tenure of John Hanſon of Burſtall); and to perform certain ſtipulated works and cuſtoms. And the tenants in Thurmaſton, on taking poſſeſſion, were to pay to the abbot ſuch ſum as they could beſt agree with him; and at the death of every tenant an hariot was to be paid.

All the lands and tenements of the abbot and convent were held in pure alms, and not by any ſervice; and were conſequently exempt from aids towards knighting the king's eldeſt ſon; but they paid tenths to the king for their reliefs and rents in Thurmaſton, and for the cuſtomary works (opera) of 12 virgates there, as appears by the taxation of the reſt of the religious houſes in Leiceſter.

Their total annual receipts were, £16. 8*s.* 2½*d.*

Out-goings: To Robert Kyng and John Byll, 4*s.* 3*d.*; to Merton College, Oxford, 1*d.*

For farther particulars of the cuſtoms of this village reſpecting the Abbey of Leiceſter, ſee the Appendix to vol. I. pp. 76, 77.

In the fine terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, (Galba E. III.) Thurmaſton occupies ſix pages.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Thurmaſton, Belgrave Gate, Humberſton, and Segrave, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Margaret de Quincy, counteſs of Winton, gave to Hugo de Vere, in free marriage with her daughter Hawiſia, 50*s.* and 6*d.* rent in Thurmodeſthorpe, which Alexander de Wileby had conveyed to her, with his homage and ſervice [1].

An agreement between the abbot of Leiceſter and his homagers at North Thurmaſton, and Thomas of Lincoln lord of Barkby, reſpecting their common of paſture at Barkby, is extracted from Charyte's Rentale in our Appendix [2]; and from the ſame authentic ſource is the following agreement of 1298 tranſcribed:

"Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus preſentes ſcripturas viſuris vel audituris, Robertus de Thurmeſton capellanus ſalutem in Dño ſempiternam. Cùm, ex dono Thome de Nycole, domini de Barkeby, quandam hayam indefenſam tenui, jacentem medio communis paſture de Barkeby & de Northorpe de Thurmeſton, & ſingulis annis in ſeparalitate tantùm à feſto Purificationis Beate Marie uſque ad horam nonam die Nativitatis Sc̄i Joh̄is Baptiſte: Volo de cetero & concedo, pro me & heredibus meis, quòd omnes tenentes de villatâ de Thurmeſton in Northorp, & eorum heredes ſeu aſſignati, vel eorum ſucceſſores, tam liberi quàm villani, qui terram tenent in dictâ Thorp, ad quam communia paſture pertinet, habeant & teneant totam communiam paſture in dictâ hayâ, cum omnimodis averiis ſuis, toto tempore anni, liberè, quietè, benè, & in pace, ſine contradictione mei vel heredum meorum in perpetuum; ſalvâ tamen mihi & heredibus meis communiâ paſture in dictâ hayâ, cum averiis meis, quantum pertinet ad terram meam in Northorp de Thurmeſton, quolibet tempore anni; ita tamen quòd nec liceat mihi nec heredibus meis aliquam paſturam in dictâ hayâ alicui alteri quàm dictis tenentibus dare nec aliquo modo aſſignare. In cujus rei teſtimonium, huic ſcripto ſigillum meum appoſui. Hiis teſtibus; d̄no Willo le Waleys de Anlep, milite, Rogero Moñvyle de Coſynton, Willo de Rotheley de Sytheſton, Rogero Lawrence de Belgrave, Waltero Gerond de Barkeby, Henrico Halyday de eâdem, Willo Magotts de Thurmaſton, cum multis aliis. Dat' apud Thurmeſton, die Dominicâ in octav' Paſche, anno regni Edwardi filii regis Henrici viceſimo-ſexto [3]."

In 1325, it was found that Roger Beler, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held a moiety of a place in Thurmaſton; but of whom the jurors knew not [4].

Among the evidences of ſir Robert Cotton, Mr. Roper mentions a deed of ſir Robert Beler, ſon and heir of Roger, "pro certis terris in Thurmaſton," dated in 17 Edw. III. [1344] [5].

In 1346 (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon), the biſhop of Lincoln was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of a knight's fee; the abbot of Leiceſter 5*s.* for half a quarter of a knight's fee; the prior of Caldwell 5*s.* for half a quarter of a knight's fee; and the abbot of Garendon 12*d.* for a fortieth part of a knight's fee; all which were ſituated in Thurmaſton, and parcel of the honour of Winton [6].

In 1347, the warden and fellows of Merton College in Oxford held 4*s.* yearly rent in Thurmaſton [7].

In 1353, John de Segrave at his death held lands in Thurmaſton [8].

In 1355, abbot William de Cloune granted to Robert Foſter, his heirs and aſſigns, the wardſhip and marriage of John ſon of William de Morton of Thurmaſton; and (if the ſaid John ſhould die under age) the wardſhip and marriage alſo of his two ſiſters and heirs, Joan and Agnes [9].

In 1360, the following releaſe occurs in Charyte's Rentale:

"Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, Joh̄es de Noverey junior ſalutem in Dño. Noveritis me remiſiſſe, relaxâſſe, & omninò de me & heredibus meis in perpetuum quietum clamâſſe, Thome filio Thome de Thurmeſton, Henrico Morkere de eâdem, Wyllmo Magotts de eâdem, & Wyllmo Lawrence de eâdem, Wyllmo Thurſton de eâdem, Simoni de Hamulton de eâdem, Joh̄i Browne de eâdem, Hugoni Thurſton de eâdem, & ceteris tenentibus tam liberis quàm ſpecialibus, & eorum heredibus & aſſignatis, de villatâ de Thurmeſton in Northorp, totum jus & clameum quod habui, vel aliquo modo habere potui, in totâ heyâ de Barkeby & Northorp; ita quòd nec ego nec heredes mei, vel aſſignati mei, in aliquibus pro me, ſeu nomine meo vel heredum meorum ſeu aſſignatorum, aliquod jus vel clameum in dictâ hayâ, cum omnibus ſuis pertinentiis, de cetero exigere potuerimus, vel vendicare, in perpetuum. In cujus rei teſtimonium, preſenti ſcripto ſigillum meum appoſui. Hiis teſtibus; Wyllmo de Rothley de Sytheſton, Willmo Power de Barkeby, Henrico Halyday de eâdem, d̄no Willmo Everard de eâdem, Ric̄o de Belgrave, Henrico de Freſton de Thurmeſton, Thomâ Fabro de eâdem, Joh̄e Clerico de eâdem, & aliis. Dat' apud Thurmeſton, Dominicâ proximâ poſt feſtum Apoſtolorum Simonis & Jude, anno regni Edwardi Tertii triceſimo-quarto."

The abbots William de Cloune and William de Keyrby had the wardſhip of the lands, &c. in Thurmaſton, of William Stevyns; which abbot Keyrby about 1370 relinquiſhed for £40.

The abbot had alſo for ten years the wardſhip of the ſon of Thomas the Smith of Thurmaſton [9].

In 1387, Thurmaſton paid annually to the abbey £12. 19*s.* 4½*d.*; four flights of arrows, eight races of ginger, two roſe-flowers, and a quartern of pepper [9].

In 1399, it was found that Thomas Mowbray, late duke of Norfolk, had certain lands in Thurmaſton; and, the ſame year, that Margaret late ducheſs of Norfolk held lands there [10].

In 1408, Thomas Mowbray earl Mareſcal died ſeiſed of meſſuages, lands, and rents, in Thurmaſton [11].

Oct. 5, 1422, two oxen and two bovioli, which had been feloniouſly driven away from Thurmaſton, were attached per feod' lib', and delivered to the celerar of the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis [12].

---

[1] See the Appendix to vol. I. p. 40.

[2] See the Appendix to this volume, p. 4.

[3] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 98. Leic.

[4] See the ſeal, with the arms of Beler, Plate VI. fig. 24.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[6] Eſch. 21 Edw. III. N° 91. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[8] Appendix, p. 7.

[9] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71, 72, Leic.

[10] Eſch. 8 Hen. VI. N° 76. Leic.

[11] Appendix, p. 7.

[12] Ibid.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Thurmaſton was rated at 2*l.* 5*s.*; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; when an abatement was made of 2*s*.

In 1472, Thomas Hotofte, brother and heir of Richard Hotofte, eſq. releaſed all right in his lands and tenements in Thurmaſton to John Staunton, eſq.[1]

Walter Kebell, eſq. who died July 31, 1522, poſſeſſed ſome lands, &c. at Thurmaſton[2].

In 1544, Thomas earl of Rutland died ſeiſed of certain lands in Thurmaſton, held of the king in capite[3].

In 1564, there were 25 families in Thurmaſton.

By an inquiſition taken Aug. 21, 1585, it was found that Henry Sacheverell, eſq. died ſeiſed of a moiety of divers lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Thurmaſton[4].

By an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter in 1594, it was found that Robert Cowper died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, and two virgates of land, meadow and paſture, in Thurmaſton, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late-diſſolved monaſtery of Garendon, co. Leiceſter, held of the king in capite; that he died 16 March, 1593; and that Alice, Lucy, Mary, and Amice, his daughters and coheirs, were all within age[5].

In 1596, we find the following decree in the Court of Exchequer, relative to The Biſhop's Fee being diſſtinct from Thurmaſton:

"Termino Sc̄i Mich̄is, xxxviii regine Eliz'.

Jovis, quarto die Novembris.

"Leiceſter. Whereas, in Trinity Term, in the 36th year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Elizabeth, &c. in accompliſhment of one order in this Court the ſame term made, ſir Kelly Merrick, then eſquire, now knight, together with Thomas Crompton and Robert Wright, eſqrs. patentees of the lands and tenements in Thurmaſton, in the county of Leiceſter, hereafter mentioned (for the benefit of the right honourable Robert earl of Eſſex), exhibited into this Court one bill of complaint againſt ſir Henry Harrington, knt. John Harbert, John Foxe, William Swyre, Richard Skampton, William Foxley, John Cowper, and Thomas Duckett, containing, in effect, that the Queen's Majeſty was lawfully ſeiſed in her Highneſs's demeſne, as of fee, in the right of her Highneſs's Crown of England, of and in all and ſingular thoſe meſſuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Thurmaſton, in the county of Leiceſter, which ſometimes were in the tenure, holding, or occupation, of the ſaid John Harbert, John Foxe, William Swyre, Richard Skampton, William Foxley, John Cowper, and Thomas Duckett, and others; and, ſo being thereof ſeiſed, at the ſuit of the ſaid earl, and for his benefit, did, by her Highneſs's letters patents under the great ſeal of England, dated the 4th day of July, in the 33d year of her Majeſty's reign, give and grant unto the ſaid complainants, amongſt other things, the ſaid meſſuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with their appurtenances, to have and to hold unto the ſaid complainants, their heirs and aſſigns for ever, to the only uſe of the ſaid complainants, their heirs and aſſigns for ever; and that, by force thereof, the ſaid complainants thereinto entered, and were thereof ſeiſed in their demeſne as of fee; and that the ſaid John Harbert, John Foxe, William Swyre, Richard Skampton, William Foxley, John Cowper, and Thomas Duckett, by confederacy with ſir John Harrington, knt. and by colour of certain letters patents, dated the 8th day of May in the 32d year of our ſaid Sovereign Lady, under the great ſeal of England, made unto John Wells and John Williams, and their heirs, of the manor called Byſhop's Fee, otherwiſe called The Manor of Leiceſter, in the county of Leiceſter, ſometime parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late marquis of Northampton, and before parcel of the poſſeſſions of the biſhoprick of Lincoln, did enter into the tenements in Thurmaſton upon the complainants' poſſeſſions, and the rents and profits thereof held or converted to their own uſe; and that the ſaid defendants did ſo enter into the premiſes, and held and converted the profits thereof to their own uſe, under pretence that the premiſes in Thurmaſton ſhould paſs to the ſaid Wells and Williams by the ſaid grant of the manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias The Manor of Leiceſter; where the complainants alledged that the premiſes in Thurmaſton were not at any time parcel of the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias Leiceſter: And that the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias Leiceſter, and the premiſſes in Thurmaſton, were two ſeveral and diſtinct things, of two ſeveral and diſtinct values, viz. the Manor of Biſhop's Fee, £16. 3*s*. 4*d*.; and the premiſſes in Thurmaſton, £7. 0*s*. 1½*d*.; and the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias Leiceſter, had been ſeveral times demiſed and leaſed to ſundry perſons by that name; and that the premiſſes in Thurmaſton did not at any time paſs to the leſſee or leſſees of the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias Leiceſter, by force of ſuch grant; neither did any ſuch leſſee or leſſees of the ſaid manor, by force of any ſuch leaſe, make any title or claim to the premiſſes in Thurmaſton: And that the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee was purchaſed by the ſaid Wells and Williams of her majeſty at the yearly rate of £16. 3*s*. 4*d*. and the particular thereof made accordingly; and that, after the ſale thereof to the ſaid Wells and Williams, the premiſes in Thurmaſton remained in her majeſty's hands till the grant thereof to the complainants and her majeſty was duly anſwered by the rents thereof: And after the grant thereof to the complainants, the firſt half year's rent was paid to the complainants by ſuch of the defendants as then held the ſaid premiſſes in Thurmaſton; and that the ſaid complainants did paſs the ſame premiſſes in Thurmaſton, at the requeſt and mediation of the ſaid ſir Henry Harrington to them made by Thomas Gyles and John Standley; and they the ſaid Gyles and Standley agreed, for the ſaid ſir John Harrington, to pay the complainants for the premiſſes, as the premiſſes in Thurmaſton, £400.; and therefore and foraſmuch, as if the premiſes in Thurmaſton were not well paſſed to the complainants by her majeſty, that then the ſaid earl was to have from her majeſty the like value of £7. 0*s*. 1½*d*. in other her majeſty's lands, tenements, and hereditaments; and that the records proving her majeſty's title do remain in this honourable court; and therefore the ſaid complainants prayed the aid of this honourable court: To which bill the defendants have appeared by proceſs; and the ſame John Harbert, John Foxe, William Swyer, Richard Skampton, William Foxeley, and John Cowper, ſix of the ſaid defendants, anſwered, that the queen's majeſty was lawfully ſeiſed of the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias The Manor of Leiceſter, in her demeſne, as of fee, in the eighth of her highneſs's reign; and that the ſaid ſix defendants did ſeverally hold ſeveral meſſuages and lands in Thurmaſton of the ſaid manor, by copy of court-roll, to them and to their heirs, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor; and that they and their ſeveral anceſtors, whoſe heirs they are, have beyond the memory of man held the ſame their ſeveral meſſuages and lands of the ſaid manor by copy of court-roll, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, and did their ſeveral ſuits and cuſtoms at the ſaid manor, and uſed to take their copies at the courts of the ſaid manor holden at Leiceſter, and paid their rents to the bailiffs of the ſaid manor, until the ſaid grant made to the ſaid Wells and Williams; and ſince that time, and after the death of ſir James Harrington, knt. they have paid their ſaid rents unto the ſaid ſir Henry Harrington, whom they take to be lawful owner of the ſaid manor by the ſaid patents made to Wells and Williams, and the material points of the ſaid bill: And the ſaid ſir Henry Harrington by himſelf anſwered, that he did take himſelf to be lawfully ſeiſed in his demeſne as of the fee of the manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias Leiceſter, granted to the ſaid Wells and Williams as aforeſaid; and that the ſaid other defendants held of the ſaid ſir Henry Harrington, as of the ſaid manor, the ſaid ſeveral meſſuages and tenements in their ſeveral occupations in Thurmaſton, to them and their heirs, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor; and that the ſame premiſſes in Thurmaſton, then and time before out of mind, were parcel of the ſaid manor; and that the ſaid other defendants and their anceſtors all the ſaid time held the ſaid meſſuages and tenements as of the ſaid manor to them and to their heirs, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, and paid, and did their ſeveral rents, ſuits, and ſervices to the lords of the ſaid manor, and ſurrendered their copies, and took new copies at the courts of the ſaid manor holden at Leiceſter; and ſo juſtified the taking and receiving of the rents and ſervices in Thurmaſton ſince the ſaid grant made to the ſaid Wells and Williams: Unto which ſeveral anſwers the complainants replied, and maintained their bill and all the matters therein contained, and traverſed the material points of the ſaid ſeveral anſwers; and farther ſhewed, that the biſhop of Lincoln had ſundry manors, lands, and hereditaments, in or near unto the town of Leiceſter; and, for avoiding of trouble, and the eaſe of his officers, drew all the tenants of his manors ſo near adjoining to the ſaid town of Leiceſter, where good receipt and proviſion was to be had, and there held court, and granted copies, and did end many other buſineſſes, as in like caſe many other great lords have done, and yet do; all which make not the ſaid ſeveral out-manors or parcels of lands to be parcel of the manor of the place where ſuch aſſembly is; but the ſaid out-manors and parcels of land remain manors, or otherwiſe ſeveral diſtinct things, as before: Upon which bill, anſwer, and replication, the parties did grow to iſſue upon the chiefeſt points in them mentioned, and ſome witneſſes thereupon exhibited in this Court; the moſt material points whereof were, whether the premiſes were parcel of the ſaid manor granted to the ſaid Wells and Williams or no; which was thought by this Court needfull to be tried by matters of record in this Court, and ſo ordered: And thereupon divers days of hearing were appointed, and the matter often ſolemnly opened and heard before the right honourable the lord high treaſurer of England and the barons of this Court: And, upon hearing thereof in Eaſter Term now laſt paſt, and becauſe the ſaid records were long and many, and did require exact replication, it was by them ordered, that the ſaid cauſe ſhould be referred to the right worſhipful Mr. Baron Owens, one of the barons of this court, to be by him examined, calling to him Alexander King, eſq. her Majeſty's auditor of her Highneſs's revenues within the ſaid county of Leiceſter, or his deputy, with her Majeſty's records touching the ſame manor to be proved; and the defendants, with their proofs and allegations, to be alſo by him heard; and as thereupon the ſaid Mr. Baron Owens ſhould think fit the ſaid cauſe to be ended, and ordered ſo to be finally ended and ordered by the Court: And whereas alſo thereupon the ſaid Mr. Baron Owens, in preſence of the ſaid Mr. Auditor King, and of both the ſaid parties, and of the learned counſel, divers times, in Trinity Term laſt, did ſolemnly hear and examine the ſaid cauſe, and all the allegations and proofs of each of the ſame parties, and exactly proved with great diligence ſundry records, as well remaining in this Court, as other antient rolls of accompts and court-rolls belonging to the biſhop of Lincoln, touching the premiſes, with other things yet parcel of the ſaid biſhop's poſſeſſions; all which to the ſaid Mr. Baron Owens were then ſhewed; and thereupon, after deliberate conſideration thereof, he made and returned into this court his report in hec verba, viz.

---

[1] Clauſ. 12 Edw. IV.

[2] Inq. at Leiceſter, 27 Nov. 14 Hen. VIII. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) p. 138. See alſo under Humberſton.

[3] Eſch. 36 Hen. VIII.

[4] Eſch. 21 Aug. 27 Eliz.

[5] Eſch. 37 Eliz.

The Report of Matthew Owens, one of the barons of this court, in the cauſe between Thomas Crompton, eſq. and other patentees, for the earl of Eſſex, complainants, and ſir Henry Harrington and others, defendants:

I have, in preſence of Mr. Auditor King, and of both the ſaid parties, and of their learned counſel (according to the order of this Court), at ſeveral times heard and fully conſidered of the ſame matters, which is only whether certain lands, of the yearly value of £7. 0s. 1½d. lying in Thurmaſton, in the county of Leiceſter, do paſs by her majeſty's letters patents, dated viii° Maii, anno xxxii^{do} regine nunc, unto John Wells and John Williams, by the grant of the manor of Biſhop's Fee, otherwiſe called the Manor of Leiceſter; and do find that the manor of Biſhop's Fee, otherwiſe called the Manor of Leiceſter, mentioned in the Bill and Anſwer, and purchaſed from her Majeſty by the ſaid Wells and Williams by the ſaid letters patents, by which the defendants claim the ſaid lands in Thurmaſton, was purchaſed by them at the yearly rent of £16. 3s. 4d. and the particular ſo rated: And the ſame letters patents do mention, that the manors ſo purchaſed by the ſaid Wells and Williams was parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late marquis of Northampton; and that it had been leaſed by her Majeſty, in the 9th year of her majeſty's reign, to one Aſheby, for 31 years, at the yearly rent of £16.; and do find that the ſaid Manor of Leiceſter, otherwiſe called Biſhop's Fee (which the defendants claim), was given by king Edward the Sixth, by letters patents, dated the 12th day of June, in the fourth year of his reign, to the ſaid marquis of Northampton in fee: But I think that the lands and tenements in Thurmaſton now in queſtion did not paſs to the ſaid late marquis; for that he did not enjoy the ſame, but the ſame remained in charge ſtill to the ſaid late king Edward the Sixth; and the rents and profits thereof, after the grant to the ſaid late marquis, duly anſwered to the ſaid late King, and not challenged by the ſaid late marquis, for any thing that appeareth to me: And I find that one Aſheby had a leaſe for 31 years of the ſaid manor of Leiceſter, otherwiſe called Biſhop's Fee, which ended the 30th year of her Majeſty's reign, who never enjoyed nor claimed the ſaid lands in Thurmaſton by force of that leaſe; which, if it had been parcel of the manor of Leiceſter, alias Biſhop's Fee, he might lawfully have done: And the defendants do alledge that the ſaid lands in Thurmaſton are parcel of the ſaid manor of Leiceſter, alias Biſhop's Fee, which was granted to the ſaid Wells and Williams; and, for proof thereof, do ſhew forth divers antient copies of court-rolls, made in the time of Edward the Fourth, king Henry the Seventh, king Henry the Eighth, and ſithence, of divers tenements in Thurmaſton, now parcel of the lands in queſtion, at the courts holden at Leiceſter; which was by the complainants anſwered, that there is a manor of Leiceſter, Thurmaſton, and Seweſterne, other than the ſaid manor of Leiceſter, alias Biſhop's Fee; and that the ſaid copies were granted at that manor, and not at the manor of Leiceſter, alias Biſhop's Fee: And to prove that there is ſuch a manor of Leiceſter, Thurmaſton, and Sewerſtern, there were very many accounts ſhewed forth, and ſome very antient, to prove the ſame; and it appeareth that, after the purchaſe of the manor of Leiceſter, alias Biſhop's Fee, by Wells and Williams, and until the grant of the ſaid lands in Thurmaſton to the complainants, the ſaid lands in Thurmaſton continued in charge with the auditors to her majeſty, and that her majeſty did receive the profits thereof until the grant to the complainants: For all which cauſes, I am of opinion that the lands and tenements in Thurmaſton, now in queſtion, did not paſs to the ſaid Wells and Williams by the ſaid letters patents; and in equity I think plainly that the lands in Thurmaſton ought not to be enjoyed by the ſaid Wells and Williams, nor their aſſigns; for that it was no part of the value of the lands meant or intended to be granted to them: All which I humbly refer to the farther ordering of the right honourable the lord treaſurer and this Court."

And whereas alſo, in the ſaid Trinity Term laſt, viz. the firſt day of July laſt, upon the hearing of the ſaid report openly read in this Court, before the right honourable lords, the lord high treaſurer of England and the lord chief baron, and the right honourable the chancellor, with other barons of the ſame Court, it was ordered by this Court, that an abſolute decree ſhould be drawn up and inrolled for the ſaid plaintiffs, according to the tenor and effect of the ſaid report made by the ſaid Mr. Baron Owens; and that the ſaid defendants ſhould pay to the plaintiffs all the arrearages of the rents of the ſaid lands in queſtion after the rent of £7. 0*s.* 1½*d.* ſince the time of the purchaſe made by the complainants; except the defendants, at or before the then next ſitting in this Court, ſhould ſhew good and ſufficient cauſe to the lord treaſurer and barons of this Court to the contrary, as by the ſaid ſeveral orders more at large doth and may appear: And now, foraſmuch as neither at the firſt ſitting of this term, being the 14th day of October laſt, nor at any other time ſithence, the defendants have not ſhewed any cauſe why the ſaid matter ſhould not be ordered and decreed according to the ſaid report; and yet this Court, in favour of them, gave them day over till the next ſitting of like favour until this day; on which day, the matter being again moved in open Court by Mr. Samuel Kingſmell, of counſel for the defendants, there was not ſhewed any cauſe to ſtay the proceeding with or unto the recording and perfecting of the ſaid order and decree: Therefore it is now, this Thurſday the 4th day of November, in the 38th year of her ſaid Majeſty's reign, finally ordered and decreed, by the right honourable the lord treaſurer, the chancellor, and the lord chief baron, and the other barons of this Court, that, foraſmuch as it doth appear plainly the premiſes in Thurmaſton aforeſaid neither are, nor at any time were, any part or parcel of the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, ortherwiſe called the Manor of Leiceſter, which was granted to the ſaid Wells and Williams, but a ſeveral and diſtinct thing of itſelf, of a ſeveral and diſtinct value from the ſaid manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias the Manor of Leiceſter, and that the ſaid premiſes do not paſs, nor were meant or intended to be paſſed, to the ſaid Wells and Williams, by the ſaid letters patents to them made: And that therefore the ſaid complainants, their heirs and aſſigns, for ever hereafter, may and ſhall quietly have, hold, and enjoy, the ſaid premiſes in Thurmaſton, and the rents, revenues, and profits of the ſame, without any claim, lett, trouble, or ſuit in law, of the ſaid defendants, or any of them, or their or any of their heirs or aſſigns, or any claiming by, from, or under, the ſaid defendants, or any of them, or by or under the ſaid letters patents made to the ſaid Wells and Williams: And that the ſaid defendants ſhall, before the end of Hilary Term next enſuing, pay unto the complainants all ſuch ſums of money as the arrearages of the yearly rents of the premiſes in Thurmaſton aforeſaid doth or may amount unto, which to the complainants ought to have been paid by the true meaning of the ſaid letters patents to them made. Provided always, that neither this decree, nor any thing herein contained, ſhall be hurtful or prejudicial to ſuch lawful eſtate as the defendants, or any of them, lawfully have in the premiſes in Thurmaſton aforeſaid by any lawful copies in their anſwer mentioned; they paying, doing, and performing, to the complainants, their heirs and aſſigns, the antient rents, ſervices, duties, and cuſtoms."

Sir Henry Harington, knt. held the manor of Biſhop's Fee, alias Leiceſter manor, of the king, as of the honour of Hampton Court [1].

Robert Pepper, gent. died Sept. 23, 1630, poſſeſſed of a meſſuage and three virgates of land at Thurmaſton; leaving Robert his ſon and heir, then aged 15 [2].

The freeholders here in 1630 were Ralph Wells, high conſtable, Thomas Wells, gent. Thomas Wyat, Thomas Cooper, Thomas Duckett, and William Herbert.

Robert Watts, clerk, died June 17, 1633, ſeiſed of a meſſuage and two virgates of land in Thurmaſton, and of a meſſuage and half a virgate at Syſton [3].

In 1655, there was collected in Thurmaſton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 14*s*.

In 1722, 23 freeholders polled from Thurmaſton; and in 1775, we find 25 names.

In an act paſſed in 1762, for dividing the open fields of Thurmaſton, containing about 1600 acres, part of which were in the pariſh of Belgrave, and the reſidue in Barkby; part alſo of the town of Thurmaſton, where ſeveral of the antient incloſures were, being in the pariſh of Belgrave, and the reſidue in Barkby; it is ſtated, that ſuch of the ſaid fields as were in Belgrave pariſh were parcel of a manor then belonging to lord William Manners; and ſuch of them as were in Barkby were parcel of a manor belonging to William Pochin, eſq. The Biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry, in right of his ſee, is deſcribed as rector of the rectory impropriate and pariſh-church of Belgrave; and as ſuch entitled, amongſt other things, to a ſmall parcel of glebe-land in one of ſuch of the ſaid fields as are in Belgrave, and to the ſwap or firſt math of about two acres, part of a certain meadow ground, in ſuch part of Thurmaſton aforeſaid as is in the ſaid pariſh of Belgrave, called The Bellholme; and alſo to all the tithes and payments, as well rectorial as vicarial (except ſurplice-fees) ariſing in ſuch part of the town of Thurmaſton aforeſaid, and in ſuch of the fields and antient incloſures there, as are within the pariſh of Belgrave; which tithes, &c. (except as before excepted) were held by William Aiſlabie, eſq. under a leaſe of 21 years from the ſaid Biſhop. Samuel Gamble, gentleman, was entitled to the tithes of all the corn, grain, hay, and other rectorial tithes; and alſo to all rectorial dues ariſing in ſuch of the ſaid fields as are within the ſaid pariſh of Barkby; and alſo to part of all the aforeſaid fields, and to right of common in, upon, and over the ſame. Mr. Pochin was patron of the vicarage and church of Barkby, and a proprietor of land in ſuch of the ſaid fields as were in the ſaid pariſh of Barkby, and entitled to right of common in thoſe fields. And the Rev. Ralph Heathcote, D.D. as vicar of Barkby, was entitled to all the vicarial tithes in kind, dues, and payments, ariſing in ſuch parts of Thurmaſton aforeſaid as are in the ſaid pariſh of Barkby; and alſo to both the rectorial and vicarial tithes in kind, dues, and payments, payable for ſuch of the antient incloſures in Thurmaſton as are within the pariſh of Barkby; and the Rev. Nicholas Simons, the Rev. George Pochin, and others, as proprietors of the reſidue of ſuch of the ſaid fields as are in the pariſh of Belgrave, were entitled to the reſidue of the right of common; and William Gutteridge, William Adcock, John Choice, gentlemen, and others, as proprietors of the reſidue of ſuch of the ſaid fields as are in the pariſh of Barkby, were entitled to the reſidue of the right of common in ſuch laſt-mentioned fields. To lord William Manners, for his intereſt in ſome of the waſte grounds as were within the pariſh of Belgrave, four acres were directed to be allotted, through which no road was to be made on any account whatever. To Mr. Pochin, for the like intereſt in Barkby, half an acre. To the Biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry and his leſſee, in lieu of all tithes and dues (mortuaries and tithes of old incloſures excepted), a ſeventh of ſuch land to be incloſed as was in Belgrave pariſh, and ſuch farther part as ſhould be equal to a tenth of the gardens, orchards, homeſteads, and old incloſures; and ſuch farther part as ſhould be of the clear yearly value of 31*s.* (the amount of a modus of 8*d.* a yard-land) heretofore paid to the rectory of Belgrave. To Mr. Gamble, in lieu of the rectorial tithes, a ſeventh part of the common fields, and ſuch farther allotment as ſhould be worth a clear 5*s.* a year, in lieu of 3*d.* a yard-land, to which he was before entitled. And to Dr. Heathcote and his ſucceſſors, vicars of Barkby, in lieu of all vicarial tithes in kind, dues, and payments, ariſing in ſuch part of the town and the fields as are within the pariſh of Barkby, and of the rectorial and vicarial tithes and payments of ſuch of the antient incloſures as are in the pariſh of Barkby (except mortuaries, ſurplice-fees, and payments, ariſing out of the houſes, yards, gardens, orchards, or antient incloſures there, which did not belong to proprietors of land in the ſame fields, or were payable by the owners or occupiers for the time being of ſuch houſes), ſuch parcel of land in ſuch of the ſaid fields as are in the pariſh of Barkby as ſhould, when incloſed, be of the yearly value of £9.; to be veſted in the vicar and his ſucceſſors for the time being, in full diſcharge of their tithes, dues, and payments (except as before excepted), and ſubject to the ſame ſort of taxes and levies as the ſame tithes, &c. then were. The reſidue to be divided proportionably amongſt the ſeveral proprietors. Proviſion is alſo made, that nothing contained in the act ſhould authorize the commiſſioners, or any of them, to allot, alter, or vary the right or intereſt which any perſon had in certain meadows in the pariſh of Barkby, ſeverally called The Meadow under Wanlip, The Langworth Meadow, and The Neſt Meadow, which were changeable between the proprietors of ſuch of the fields intended to be incloſed as were in the pariſh of Barkby, and the proprietors of the open fields of Barkby, or the right or intereſt which any perſon, ſave the proprietors of ſuch of the ſaid fields intended to be incloſed as were in the pariſh of Barkby, had in ſeveral furlongs of land (part of ſuch fields), called The Wheatholm or Wheatam, or in certain meadows or places ſeverally called Southerdole and Thurmaſton Upper-end Meadow, or the right or intereſt which ——— Beaumont had in a certain meadow in Thurmaſton, called The Bellholme, or the right or intereſt which the ſaid ——— Beaumont, and ——— Dickſon, and ——— Warner, ſeverally had, in a certain meadow in Thurmaſton, called The Eaſt Meadow.

---

[1] See vol. I. p. cxxxii.

[2] Inq. 16 Dec. 6 Car. I; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) p. 314. See his arms, Plate VI. fig. 27; and his Pedigree hereafter, under Burſtall, p. 187.

[3] Inq. 29 Aug. 9 Car. I; Cole, ubi ſupra, p. 302.

The late Mr. Gutteridge's houſe, which was uſually called Thurmaſton Hall, had been purchaſed by his and Mrs. Percy's father, about 75 years ago, of the executors of a Mrs. Davies, who charged the eſtate with a ſmall rent or annual ſum to be paid to the miniſter of Barkby, and another to the poor of the North-End; and it is now, by marriage, the property of my very learned and right reverend relation Thomas Percy, D.D. Lord Biſhop of Dromore.

Adjoining to it are the remaining veſtiges of the old chapel engraved in plate XXXI.

The village at preſent contains about 150 houſes, Mr. Simons being the principal proprietor in the South manor; and Mr. Samuel Day, who reſides here, the principal land-owner in the North manor.

Mr. Henry Walker, of Thurmaſton, obtained a patent, July 20, 1796, for his invention of a method by which houſes or buildings, of any deſcription or dimenſions, might be erected in one entire maſs or body at a much eaſier expence, eſpecially in the articles of timber, lime, and workmanſhip, and which would be equally as durable in themſelves, and leſs liable to accidents by fire than buildings erected upon common conſtruction [1].

The oldeſt regiſter begins in 1696.
1696—1700, baptized 54; buried 39.
1786—1790, baptized 101; buried 39.

The CHAPELS (ſee them both, in Plate XXXI.)

The Regiſters of Leiceſter Abbey ſtate, that in Thurmodeſton were two chapels; one of them, in the fee of the earl of Winton, belonging to Belgrave church, which was to be ſupplied with a reſident chaplain by the mother church; the other, in the earl of Leiceſter's fee, belonged to Barkby church, whence it was to be ſerved three days in a week, as appears by the Matriculus of Biſhop Welles, and by a decree of the Ordinary, paſſed in All Saints church in Derby.

The chapel which was appendant to the church of Barkby, together with the tithes of corn and hay in that part of Thurmodeſton, was given to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis by Robert le Poer; and a diſpute, which had long ſubſiſted, between the abbot of Leiceſter and the rector of Belgrave, concerning the tithes of Belgrave mill, and certain tithes of corn in the part of Thurmodeſton within the limits of Barkby, was adjuſted, in 1350, by an agreement that the rector of Belgrave for the time being ſhould in future receive the tithes of the mill, and of two virgates of land in Thurmodeſton field, then in the tenure of John Alye and John Tyrlington of (Northorp) the North end of the village; and the abbot and convent to retain in future the tithes of the cultura called Clipſthorpe, the original cauſe of the diſpute, and which thenceforth was included in the Stokkyngwood. This chapel, dedicated to St. John the Evangeliſt, is not noticed in the return of 1564, having long been deſecrated. Within theſe few years it was uſed as a malt-houſe; but at this time is not at all employed. The North ſide of the old building, however, remains nearly perfect, and an antient window at the Weſt end. There are alſo the ſmall remains of a Saxon arch [2], over what was once the South door of entrance.

The other chapel, dedicated to St. Michael, in that part of the village called the South end, and is in the pariſh of Belgrave, conſiſts of a ſmall embattled tower (in which are four bells), a South porch and North door-way, nave, and chancel; a North and South aile, each ſeparated from the nave by four pointed arches. The roof was originally higher than it is now; the lower part of two South clereſtory windows, blocked up, juſt appearing.

This chapel, from which Matthew Patchet is recorded in the Nonconformiſts Memorial to have been ejected [3], was originally only a chapel of eaſe to Belgrave, and had ſervice only once in a fortnight; but is now an independent church, having a miniſter of its own, and conſtant ſervice, by the aſſiſtance of the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, from whom the augmentation was procured by a liberal donation of £200. which the Biſhop of Dromore thought proper to give, ſince he ſucceeded, in right of his wife, to the eſtate of her late brother. Though in the adjoining pariſh, yet the whole village will equally ſhare the benefit.

A gallery has been erected at the Weſt end for the choir; above which are a modern South and a North clereſtory window.

The font is octagon, on a ſlender baſe, not very antient.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS in the SOUTH END CHAPEL.

In the chancel.

On three marble monuments on the North ſide:

1. "Here lies interred the body of Mrs. Johanna Edwin, relict of Matthew Simons, of Thurmaſton,
in the pariſh of Belgrave, gent.
She died December 20, 1741, aged 82."

2. "Here lies the body of John Simons, late of Belgrave, eſq.
He died January 19, 1749, aged 64 years.
Alſo near this place lies the body of Helen,
wife of the abovesaid John Simons, eſq.
She died July 24, 1760, aged 73 years."

Arms at the top, Azure, a feſs engrailed between three demi-lions rampant Or; Simons; fig. 25.

3. "Near this wall lies interred Mrs. Hellen Simons, third daughter of John Simons, eſq.
of Belgrave, in this county.
She departed this life the 12th day of May, 1773,
in the 58th year of her age.
She lived beloved by her acquaintance;
and died lamented by the diſtreſſed, which ſhe always relieved, if in her power to do it."

On flat ſtones:

1. "Mrs. Hellen Simons, MDCCLXXIII."

2. "Here lyeth the body of John Simons, eſq.
the ſecond ſon of John Simons, eſq. and Hellen his wife (of Belgrave), who departed this life the 20th of January, 1722,

---

[1] See the ſpecification of this patent in the Repertory of Arts and Manufactures, for April 1797.

[2] See this arch in Plate XXXIV. fig. 1.

[3] Ed. 1778, vol. II. p. 130.

in the 6th year of his age.
" Here lyeth the body of Valentine, fiſth ſon of John Simons, eſq. and Hellen his wife, of Belgrave;
who departed this life the 12th day of April, 1723,
in the 2d year of his age."

Arms of Simons on the ſtone between the two above inſcriptions; on the feſs a creſcent for difference.

Two atchievements with the ſame arms, with an ineſcutcheon of pretence, Per chevron, Azure and Argent; in chief two falcons riſing Or, Stephens; fig. 26.

3. " Here lieth the body of Hannah,
the wife of John Scampton.
She died December 31, 1728, aged 38.
Near this place lies the ſaid John Scampton.
He died Oct. 26, 1732, aged 40.
Here alſo lies John their ſon.
He died Sept. 14, 1743, aged 25."

4. Within the rails:
" Here lieth the body of Thomas Allen,
ſon of Thomas Allen by Hannah his wife;
who departed this life the 11th day of February,
1753, in the 31ſt year of his age.

Stay, Reader, prepare; reflect, whilſt this you view,
Who next ſhall die,—uncertain—why not you?"

5. " Here lies buried Elizabeth, daughter of Benjamin Simons, a gentleman by birth, as well as a gentleman in the law, and Anne his wife;
born, together with her ſiſter Anne, Feb. 3, 1764, and died May the 8th following."

6. " Here lieth the body of Nicholas, third ſon of Benjamin Simons, a gentleman by birth, attorney at law, and lawyer, and Anne his wife;
who departed this life July the 26th, 1765,
aged 5 years and 6 months."

7. " Here lie the earthly remains of Anne,
the wife of Benjamin Simons, gent. of Gumley.
She departed this life on the 8th day of May, 1768,
aged 41 years."

8. " Here lieth Joanna Orme, wife of Robert Orme, eſq. and youngeſt daughter of John Simons, eſq. by Hellen his wife.
She died the 1ſt of October, 1766, aged 42 years."

9. " Beneath are interred the remains of Elizabeth, wife of John Biſhop, and relict of Thomas Allen.
She departed this life January 4, 1777, aged 58 years.
Dormit, non mortua eſt."

10. " Here lie the earthly remains of Benjamin Simons, gent. of Gumley.
He departed this life the 28th day of July, 1784,
aged 63 years."

On a monument on a pillar in the nave:
" Sacred to the memory of Samuel Gamble, eſq.
many years deputy-lieutenant and juſtice of peace for the county of Leiceſter;
alſo upwards of 20 years a captain in the Militia,
in which he obſerved diſcipline without being rigorous.
His natural feelings led him to tenderneſs, being a good friend and companion, and kind relation.
He died July 19, 1788, aged 63 years.
Mrs. Elizabeth Gamble, mother of the above Samuel, died Auguſt 19, 1783, aged 84 years."

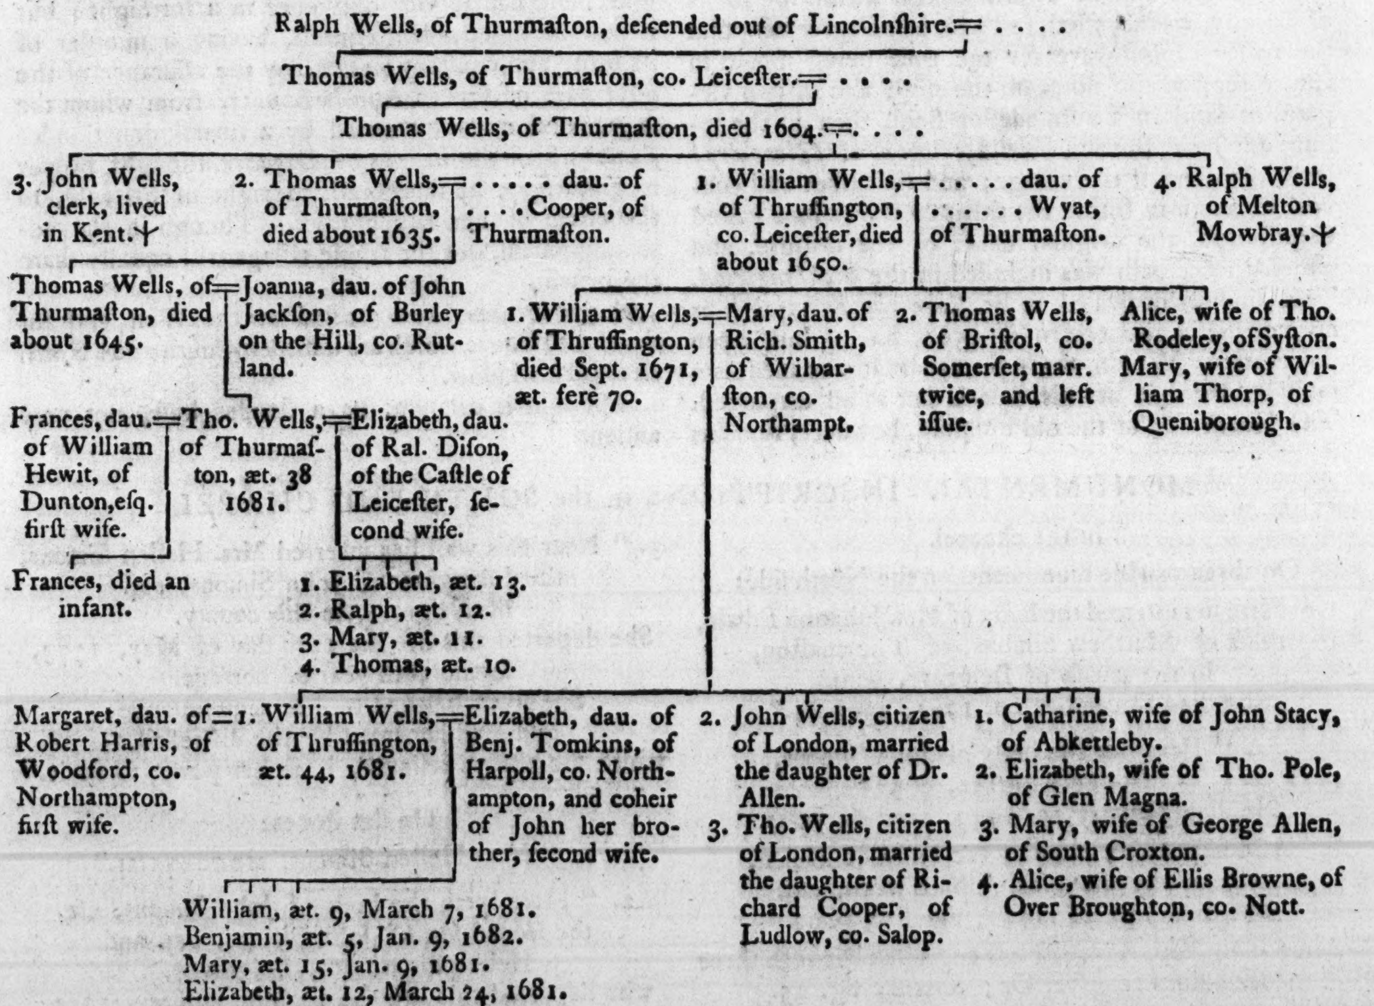
Pedigree of WELLS, of THURMASTON and THRUSSINGTON.

Entered at Leiceſter, by Thomas Wells and William Wells, March 23, 1681-2.

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Or, a lion rampant Sable; 2. . . . . a feſs dancetté Or, in chief three croſs croſslets . . . . . 3. Barry of ſix, Ermine and Gules, ... over all three creſcents; Sable, Waterton. Creſt, out of a ducal coronet Or, a demi lion Sable. Plate VI. fig. 28.



Ralph Wells, of Thurmaſton, deſcended out of Lincolnſhire. = ...

Thomas Wells, of Thurmaſton, co. Leiceſter. = ...

Thomas Wells, of Thurmaſton, died 1604. = ...

3. John Wells, clerk, lived in Kent. †

2. Thomas Wells, of Thurmaſton, died about 1635. = ... dau. of . . . . Cooper, of Thurmaſton.

1. William Wells, of Thruſſington, co. Leiceſter, died about 1650. = ... dau. of . . . . . Wyat, of Thurmaſton.

4. Ralph Wells, of Melton Mowbray. †

Thomas Wells, of Thurmaſton, died about 1645. = Joanna, dau. of John Jackſon, of Burley on the Hill, co. Rutland.

Frances, dau. of William Hewit, of Dunton, eſq. firſt wife. = Tho. Wells, of Thurmaſton, æt. 38 1681. = Elizabeth, dau. of Ral. Diſon, of the Caſtle of Leiceſter, ſecond wife.

Frances, died an infant.

1. Elizabeth, æt. 13.
2. Ralph, æt. 12.
3. Mary, æt. 11.
4. Thomas, æt. 10.

1. William Wells, of Thruſſington, died Sept. 1671, æt. ferè 70. = Mary, dau. of Rich. Smith, of Wilbarſton, co. Northampt.

2. Thomas Wells, of Briſtol, co. Somerſet, marr. twice, and left iſſue.

Alice, wife of Tho. Rodeley, of Syſton.
Mary, wife of William Thorp, of Queniborough.

Margaret, dau. of Robert Harris, of Woodford, co. Northampton, firſt wife. = 1. William Wells, of Thruſſington, æt. 44, 1681. = Elizabeth, dau. of Benj. Tomkins, of Harpoll, co. Northampton, and coheir of John her brother, ſecond wife.

William, æt. 9, March 7, 1681.
Benjamin, æt. 5, Jan. 9, 1682.
Mary, æt. 15, Jan. 9, 1681.
Elizabeth, æt. 12, March 24, 1681.

2. John Wells, citizen of London, married the daughter of Dr. Allen.
3. Tho. Wells, citizen of London, married the daughter of Richard Cooper, of Ludlow, co. Salop.

1. Catharine, wife of John Stacy, of Abkettleby.
2. Elizabeth, wife of Tho. Pole, of Glen Magna.
3. Mary, wife of George Allen, of South Croxton.
4. Alice, wife of Ellis Browne, of Over Broughton, co. Nott.

ADDITIONS TO BARKBY, HAMILTON, AND THURMASTON.

To the Queries circulated through the county in 1790, I have received no anſwers ſo fully ſatisfactory as thoſe of the Rev. Henry Woodcock, vicar of Barkby; and though unfortunately, from that gentleman's many important avocations, they came too late to be regularly incorporated with the preceding pages, I make no apology for introducing them here in their original form. The queries may be ſeen in the beginning of the preſent volume, p. xii.

1. Barkby.

2. Five miles and a half from Leiceſter on the North-eaſt, upon a good turnpike-road, branching into and repaired as part of the turnpike from Leiceſter to Melton, in conſideration of a road ſtopped up when this turnpike was formed; which would have enabled a great part of the country to have evaded the toll-gate.

3. The pariſh of Barkby, excluſive of its hamlets, contains about 1600 acres. It is bounded on the North by Syſton and Queneborow; on the Eaſt by South Croxton and Beby; on the South by Hambleton, Barkby Thorpe, the North end of Thurmaſton, and the river Soar; and on the Weſt by the ſame river. Its greateſt length two miles and three-quarters, and its greateſt breadth three-quarters of a mile.

4. In the pariſh of Barkby are the following hamlets; on the South, Barkby Thorpe (paying to its own poor, but church-rates to Barkby); on the South-ſouth-eaſt, Hamilton (paying church and poor-rates to Barkby). At Hamilton there was formerly a chapel; and in a cloſe called The Townſhip may yet be traced the lines of many buildings, particularly the chapel and chapel-yard; and in that, and the cloſe to the Eaſt of it, the boundaries of gardens, ramparts, fiſhponds, &c. This lordſhip contains about 400 acres; but has now upon it only one ſhepherd's houſe. On the South-weſt, the North end of Thurmaſton, ſupporting its own poor, but paying church-rates to Barkby. There are the remains of a chapel belonging to the church of Barkby, now uſed as a malting-office; and the chapel-yard as a garden and ſtack-yard.

5. The houſes aſſeſſed to the window-tax, returned under the new Act in 1795, were 55. Under that deſcription there are 11 people keep teams. The freeholders here in 1798 were, William Pochin, eſq. Henry Woodcock, John Illſton, John Percival, John Pick, William Goude, Luke Lewin, Edward Lewin, John Sarſon, John Sarſon, cordwainer; and in Barkby Thorpe, Richard Carter, James Sharples, John Sharples, and Thomas Lewin. There are alſo ſundry copyhold tenants under the fellows and ſcholars of Merton college, Oxford. Freeholders in the North end of Thurmaſton: James Day, T. Moor, John Johnſon, W. Simpkin, Henry Cook.

6. The earlieſt Regiſter for this pariſh is a folio upon parchment, in the cuſtody of William Pochin, eſq. impropriator. It has the following title: "Hæc omnia nomina ſubſequentia ad annum ſereniſſimæ Reginæ Elizabethæ quadrageſimum, ex veteri exemplare fideliter deſcripta ſunt, & cum eo per omnia concordant; reliqua nomina qui poſtea baptizati, aut matrimonio conjuncti, ſepultive fuere, immediatè in hoc libro inſcripta ſunt."

In the firſt ten years the baptiſms, marriages, and burials ſtand thus:

1586	Births	8	Marriages	2	Burials	4
1587	—	7	—	3	—	7
1588	—	12	—	3	—	26
1589	—	15	—	6	—	8
1590	—	11	—	3	—	8
1591	—	5	—	1	—	7
1592	—	12	—	4	—	9
1593	—	10	—	4	—	8
1594	—	14	—	-	—	3
1595	—	14	—	-	—	4

The entry of baptiſms is perfect till Oct. 16, 1642, where there is a chaſm until Aug. 9, 1660. It is again perfect till Feb. 24, 1660; and then no entries till April 22, 1674; and very irregularly kept till May 10, 1685; regular till Dec. 12, 1687; no entries in 1688, nor in 1689; and it finiſhes on Feb. 3, 1690.

Marriages are regular till 1594; and then for four years there are no entries. From 1599 till 1640 they are again regular. And upon a leaf at the end of the burials are a few irregular entries to Feb. 14, 1688.

Burials are regularly entered till March 21, 1731. No entries in 1632; regular in 1633, and until Jan. 5, 1652; when this part of the Regiſter ends.

The next Regiſter (kept alſo by William Pochin, eſq.) is a quarto upon paper, with this title, "A Regiſter of all Births, Marriages, and Burials, that have happened from the 1ſt day of May, in the year of our Lord 1695, within the pariſh of Barkby, in the county of Leiceſter, purſuant to an Act of Parliament made in the 6th and 7th Years of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King William the Third, intituled, "An Act for granting to his Majeſty certain Rates and Duties upon Marriages, Births, and Burials."

Baptiſms are regularly entered from May 3, 1695, to May 18, 1707; marriages from May 28, 1695, to May 21, 1706; funerals from Sept. 28, 1695, to March 23, 1705.

There is alſo a folio Regiſter upon parchment, in the hands of the vicar, with this title: "Nomina eorum, qui aut baptizati, aut matrimonio conjuncti, ſepultive fuere, in parochiâ de Barkeby, ab anno 1691."

From 1775 to 1794, the numbers ſtand thus:

Baptiſms 280; marriages 83; burials 218.

In the Regiſter are the following remarks:

"Memorandum. 1779, Barkby fields were incloſed by act of parliament.

1784. The greater part of the vicarage-houſe was rebuilt, with the addition of a back-kitchen, pump, cellar, larder, and garrets, by H. Woodcock, vicar.

1784, April 11. Fourteen houſes were burned down at Thruſſington; and, on the following day, £13. 15s. was collected in this town for the ſufferers by H. Woodcock, vicar.

April 18. That part of the South ſide of the middle aile of the church oppoſite the deſk was new-leaded, and a beam there ſupported by a clamp. At the ſame time one bay of the Weſt end of the South aile had new lead and timber.

1786. Part of the bells were new-hung by Mr. Arnald, of Leiceſter, bell-founder. The remainder of the South aile was alſo new-leaded this year.

1788. The ſteeple, being decayed, was new-topped, and a new weather-cock put upon it, which was given by William Pochin, eſq. lord of the manor and patron of the church: his creſt, an harpy, is at the top of the vane.

Extracts from the Regiſters, relative to the vicars:

July 15, 1612. William Gibſon, vicar of Barkby, was buried. He had been vicar above 50 years.

June 20, 1616. John Towle, vicar of Barkby, was buried.

June 22, 1617. Francis Gibſon, late vicar, was buried.

June 18, 1633. Robert Wattes, vicar, was buried.

July 4, 1662. Francis Foe, who ſucceeded Mr. Wattes, was buried. He died the day before, and was buried in the chancel.

It does not appear who was the next vicar.

March 13, 1688. Thomas Rawſon was inſtituted to the vicarage of Barkby, and inducted the 19th of the ſame month. It does not appear when he died, or where he was buried; but from the Regiſter it is very evident that he was immediately ſucceeded by Mr. Thomas.

Sept. 25, 1693. Hopkin Thomas was inſtituted to the vicarage of Barkby, and inducted the 9th of October following. He died the 11th of February, 1744, aged 76, and was buried in the chancel the 14th of the ſame month, having been vicar above 50 years.

June 10, 1744. Thomas Woodcock, the next vicar, was inducted. He reſigned the living in 1746.

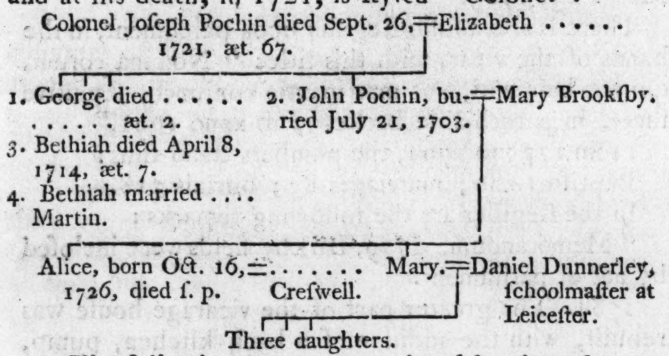
The next vicar was Ralph Heathcote, D.D. He reſigned the living May 25, 1767.

The next vicar was Samuel Belton, A. B. He died October 31, 1783, and was buried at Radcliff on the Wreke, of which place he was alſo vicar.

Mr. Belton was ſucceeded by the preſent incumbent, Henry Woodcock, LL. B. 1784.

7. Lands in Thurmaſton were held in 1588 by Chriſtopher Middleton by leaſe under the Crown[1]. William Pochin, eſq. is now (1798) lord of the manor, as he is alſo of Barkby Thorpe, Hamilton, and the North end of Thurmaſton. The fellows and ſcholars of Merton College, Oxford, have a good eſtate in Barkby and Barkby Thorpe. They claim alſo a manor in this lordſhip as for their land therein, and hold a court once in ſeven years in the town.

8. Mr. George Pochin (p. 52) citizen and ſalter of London, purchaſed a fair manſion at Fifield in Eſſex; for which county he was high-ſheriff in 1700; and, dying June 16, 1704, was buried at Fifield; as was Mary his wife in 1706, aged 60; and their ſon John, who died in 1725, aged 50.—Mr. John Pochin, brother to George, purchaſed the manor of Frayes, in Beauchamp Roding, Eſſex; where he was ſucceeded ſucceſſively by his ſon George, and by his grandſon of the ſame name.—Joſeph Pochin, gent. who in 1681 was reſident in Jamaica, ſettled afterwards at Sileby[2]; where in 1714 he occurs under the title of "Major;" and at his death, in 1721, is ſtyled "Colonel[3]."



Colonel Joſeph Pochin died Sept. 26, 1721, æt. 67.
Elizabeth ......
1. George died .... æt. 2.
2. John Pochin, buried July 21, 1703.
Mary Brookſby.
3. Bethiah died April 8, 1714, æt. 7.
4. Bethiah married .... Martin.
Alice, born Oct. 16, 1726, died ſ. p.
...... Creſwell.
Mary.
Daniel Dunnerley, ſchoolmaſter at Leiceſter.
Three daughters.

9. The following letter concerning felons' goods was thus addreſſed: "Theis for the much honoured Thomas Pochin, eſq. at Barkby:

"Sir, it is no ſmall trouble to me that I could not, upon your invitation, wait upon you at Barkby, I being at the beſt in winter-time very crazy, and at this time, and for ſome weeks laſt paſt, worſe than ordinary, being afflicted with a very great cold. I have conſidered of your buſineſs in the Crown-office as much as poſſibly I can, and am confirmed that you muſt pay the £60. found in the inquiſition after the death of Edward James, felon of himſelf, together with the charges of the ſeveral proceſs made out upon that account. When I firſt ſaw your patent I did fear as much, becauſe that felons goods, with the other regal rights which are inherent in the crown, and cannot be in a ſubject but by ſpecial grant from the crown, were in the patent granted to Mr. Standford in as ample manner and form as the abbot and convent of Leiceſter abbey had them before the diſſolution. Now we cannot make it appear that the abbot and convent ever had felons goods in Barkby, which inclined me to think that you could not plead any right to them. But, becauſe the queſtion was upon matter of inheritance, I dareſt not rely upon my own judgement; but adviſed with Mr. Saunders, an eminent lawyer, who (as I hear) is now lord chief juſtice of England, before whom your buſineſs now muſt be determined, in caſe you ſhould plead your patent; and he was clear of opinion that you can have no right to felons goods, unleſs you can clearly prove that the abbot and convent had them by ſpecial grant from the crown; for by preſcription they could not have them; and if you could prove (which I think to be impoſſible) that they had them, yet that would be accounted an uſurpation only, unleſs you could alſo prove that they had them by ſpecial grant from the crown. Then for the parchment-book which you ſent me, I found it to be an exact ſurvey of every thing whatſoever that the abbey made any title to in Barkby or elſewhere; and there is in that a mention of waifs and ſtrays in Barkby belonging to the abbey, which are things by preſcription, and the common law appendant to a manor. But there is not in that ſurvey one word of felons goods, which would not have been omitted if the abbey had had any pretence to them; and if you could make your title ſo fair by pleading your patent as to give you ſome ſmall hope of prevailing, yet the plea with the incident charges would coſt you a great deal more than the £6. in queſtion; and when you have pleaded, 'tis above 40 to one that the thing will be determined againſt you: ſo that upon the whole matter it will be the beſt way for you to pay the money, with the charge of the proceſs, before you be outlawed; for then the burthen will be much more heavy. And as for your penſion payable out of the rectory of Galby, methinks it ſhould be well for you to ſet that matter on foot. For your ejectments I will take care of them; but for Mr. Abbotts, let him ſtand upon his own legs; you have no reaſon to do any thing for him who will not pay to you what is your due. He was with me, and I told him as much. I do herewith ſend you a bill of charges, upon which there is due to me £7. 14*s*. 4*d*.; which I deſire you to ſend me by the bearer Thomas Noble, and his receipt ſhall be your diſcharge. I pray fail not to ſend the money, for I have great occaſion for it. And if you pleaſe to take order for the payment of £6. and charges at London, for the taking off the buſineſs in the Crown-office, I will be very careful to have the thing effected. And ſo I take leave; and am your moſt humble ſervant, Ult. Jan. 1682. EDWARD PALMER."

10, 11. In the manſion-houſe of William Pochin, upon the wainſcot in the breakfaſt-parlour, are three antient eſcutcheons of his arms and creſt, curiouſly carved in wood; and in an antient manſion-houſe belonging to Dr. Thomas Percy, biſhop of Dromore, in the North end of Thurmaſton, within this pariſh, there is affixed to a door the creſt of a talbot carved upon wood. The timbers of this houſe (ſound oak) are many of them curiouſly carved, like the beams of ſome of our churches. Tradition ſpeaks of a religious houſe in this part of Thurmaſton; and the carved timbers ſeem as if they came from ſuch a place. In a cloſe to the South of the Biſhop's houſe are the traces of conſiderable buildings. Q. Might not the timbers have been a part of thoſe buildings?

12. In the manor of Barkby, deanry of Goſcote, and hundred of Eaſt Goſcote.

13. By whom and when built is not known. Its materials are principally ſtone, ſuppoſed to be from antient quarries at Leiceſter and Billeſdon; it has an octagon ſpire upon a ſquare baſe, apparently of more modern date; and was repaired, and ſomewhat heightened in 1788.

14. The pariſh-church is 22 yards 4 inches in length, and 21 yards 26 inches in breadth; the chancel 11 yards 5 inches in length, and 7 yards 17 inches wide. It is plain, but neat; and with open ſeats, except the chancel, which is handſomely pewed with oak for the convenience of the impropriator, William Pochin, eſq. The pulpit bears the date of 1613. It holds a peal of five bells, and a good pariſh-clock with an excellent dial of Swithland ſlate.

The following notes are copied from the handwriting of my lamented friend William Pochin, eſq.

"May 24, 1753, I put a new roof upon Barkby chancel: the wood was taken out of Kirkby houſe, and had been put up about two and twenty years.

"Sept. 3, 1753, I put new glaſs into Barkby chancel windows.

"Oct. 3, 1754, I gave a clock to Barkby church: it was made by Stephen Blackburn of Oakham; and I paid him for it £25."

15. The communion-plate conſiſts of one large and very elegant chalice, weight 35 oz. 18 dwts. with a glory and engraved upon it. One plate for the conſecrated bread upon a foot with the like glory, &c. at the bottom, weight 10 oz. 16 dwts. Both of them are alſo thus engraved: "The gift of William Pochin, eſq. to Barkby church, 1773." One plain ſilver cup, holding about a pint, and a ſmall plate for the collection of alms, have neither of them any inſcription.

✠
IHS

---

[1] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[2] In the Regiſter of Sileby are ſeveral entries of the name of Pochin; ſome of which are introduced in the above conciſe pedigree.—Among others are, "Thomas, ſon of Thomas Pochin, gent. by Jane his wife, born 1716."—"Robert Pochin, gent. and Elizabeth Smith, married, by licence, April 22, 1722."—"Jane, wife of Thomas Pochin, gent. buried Dec. 2, 1729."

[3] The portrait of a gentleman in a military habit at Barkby is ſuppoſed to his.

16. Not known.

17. There has been much painted glaſs in the windows; but very few fragments now remain.

Inſtead of the note from Gaſcoigne, p. 47. a. l. 68. inſert, in the words of Mr. Burton, "In this window is to be obſerved the antient manner of impaling coats, viz. half of the one ſcucheon, and half of the other. See the faſhion of the window," Plate VI. fig. 8.

18. See the epitaphs, p. 48—50; and add,

1. On a flat ſtone in the North aile:

"Thomas Pochin,
eldeſt ſon of Thomas Pochin, eſq. M. D.
died Nov. 16, 1789, aged 39 years."

2. On a monument in the North aile, finely executed by Mr. Brown of Derby.

"Near this place are depoſited the remains of William Pochin, eſq.
eldeſt ſon and heir of Thomas Pochin, eſq.
by Mary his ſecond and laſt wife,
only daughter of Thomas Trollop, eſq.
by Mary his wife, ſiſter to William lord Craven.
He repreſented the county of Leiceſter in four ſucceſſive parliaments by unanimous election, and retained that diſtinguiſhed honour until his death.
Univerſally and deſervedly eſteemed through life,
he died ſincerely lamented,
10th September, 1798, aged 67 years.
'A man take him for all in all
We ſcarce ſhall look upon his like again.'
To the memory of a kind and affectionate brother, this monument was erected by his ſiſter Mary Pochin,
the only ſurviving heireſs of the family."

Upon a flat ſtone beneath:

"William Pochin, eſq.
died September the 10th, 1798, aged 67 years."

19, 20. See the anſwers to N° 6.

21. A vicarage.

22. Nearly.

23. The Pochins for many generations.

24. See N° 6.

25. In a recent enquiry reſpecting the rights of the vicar of Barkby in the chapelry of Hamilton, the firſt object being the endowment of the vicarage, ſearch was made for it in the Augmentation-office; but no traces were there to be met with. The "Rentale" of Charyte in the Bodleian Library at Oxford was then adverted to; and the articles reſpecting Barkby and its hamlets were extracted, as printed in the Appendix to the preſent volume, and of which the ſubſtance ſhall here be repeated.

"We have (that is the abbot and convent) in Barkby, by the gift of Walter Power and Robert his ſon, the church to our proper uſes, with the tithes of corn and hay, flax and hemp, &c. rendering therefore to the canons of Trentham 8 marks and an half, at three terms of the year by compoſition, as it appears in the Biſhop's Matriculus in theſe words: Of the church of Barkby the abbot of Leiceſter is patron, by gift of Robert le Poer having it to his proper uſes of old time, paying to the canons of Trentham 8 marks and an half, by what authority the chapter know not; and hath the chapel of Thurmaſton in the fee of the earl of Leiceſter, which ought to be ſerved three days in the week by the mother church; item, the chapel of Hamilton, which in like manner ought to be ſerved three days in the week by the mother church.

"Memorandum, that the vicar of Barkby ought to ſerve in the chapel of Thurmaſton and Hamilton; to wit, each of them three days in the week; as appears by ſentence given before the ordinary judges, on the Wedneſday next after the feaſt of the Apoſtle St. James, in the church of All Saints of Derby, &c.; and we receive from the vicar there yearly 20*s.*[1] as appears in the ordination of the ſame vicarage, made by Hugh biſhop of Lincoln.

"Ordination of the vicarage.

"The vicar in the church of Barkby ſhall have, in the name of his vicarage, the whole altarage in the ſame; and ſhall pay yearly to the abbot and convent of Leiceſter 20*s.* The vicar ſhall alſo pay ſynodals only.

"We have there the tithe of mills.

"And we till there ſix virgates of land and a half, and the land which we had of John Blunde, to wit, half an oxgang of land and one rood; and the whole land aforeſaid contains 156 acres, 3 roods and a half, which acres were wont to bring £15.; and we have meadow there in divers parcels, as appears in the book of the demeſne lands. The tithe of corn uſed to bring £34.; now about £26.; with the tithe of Thorpe and Thurmaſton.

"Hamilton. Parcels of land by certain donors, as appears by their deeds.

"We had formerly in Hamilton one chapel. The tithe of corn and hay appertain to the church of Barkby; which, according to the biſhop's Matriculus, ought to be ſerved three days in the week by the mother church. Item, the vicar of Barkby was bound to ſerve thoſe three days, by ſentence given before the ordinary juſtices in the church of All Saints at Derby.

"They had there one virgate of land which was aſſigned to the chapel of St. John the Baptiſt in the ſame town, with one toft near the Grove and four ſelions, and the land which Adelize held in Thorp of the aforeſaid virgate of land; all which the abbot Paul and the convent granted to Herbert Fitz-Joceline prieſt of Barkby, to hold of us by the ſervice of 16*d. per annum*, as appears among the deeds of feoffment in Hamilton.

"Item, we had there 10 acres of land, as appears by the deed of William de Ros lord of Hamilton in Barkby, &c.

"We have there, from one oxgang of land and a half in the fields of Thorp and Hamilton, and from one culture at the head of the garden of Richard Fitz-Gerald of Hamilton, and from four ſelions at Blye, and five ſelions upon Brodale, the free rent of 10*d. per annum* from Richard Fitz-Gerald of Hamilton; all which brother Paul and the convent of Leiceſter gave to the ſaid Richard and his heirs, for their homage and ſervice, &c.

"We have there, by gift of Walter Fitz-William-herbert of Barkby, 3*s.* &c.

"We have there, by gift of Gerald de Hamilton, 4*s.* &c."

By theſe extracts it appears that the vicarage of Barkby was endowed with the altarage. The word altaragium has been held to include all ſmall tithes; but, according to the above extracts, that ſeems not to be the caſe here; for the monks are ſtated to have had, beſides corn and hay, which are great tithes, certain ſmall tithes, viz. of flax and hemp, and the tithes mills.

In 26 Henry VIII. a ſurvey was taken (under the authority of an act of parliament) of all eccleſiaſtical benefices throughout the kingdom. By this ſurvey it appears that the vicarage of Barkby was then of the yearly value of £10.; ariſing, as the record ſtates it, from certain tithes, great and ſmall, with a manſion, orchard, and other profits; being, one year with another, of the value before-mentioned, namely, £10.

If this record is therefore accurate, ſome augmentation muſt have taken place ſubſequent to the endowment, and prior to the ſurvey of 26 Henry VIII. becauſe nothing more is mentioned in the endowment than the word altarage; and that has never been known to include any other than ſmall tithes.

The date of the endowment is not mentioned; but Hugh biſhop of Lincoln was choſen into that ſee in 1209, and remained in it till 1235; and as it is ſtated to have been made during his time, it muſt have been within thoſe years.

In 32 Henry VIII. the following bill was filed in the Court of Augmentations.

"To the worſhipful ſir Richard Ryche, knight, chancellor of the King's Court of Augmentations of the revenues of his crowne.

"In moſt humble wiſe complaining, ſheweth unto your good maſterſhip, your poor and daily orator, Philip Wreythe, of the town of Leiceſter, yeoman; that, where John late abbot of the monaſtery of our Lady in the meadows of Leiceſter, and the convent of the ſame place, by an indenture under their convent ſeal, bearing date the 2d day of May, in the 30th year of the reign of our ſovereign lord king Henry the Eighth that now is, in conſideration of the good, true, and faithful ſervice unto them and the ſaid late monaſtery by your ſaid orator done, hath granted, demiſed, and to farm letten, unto your ſaid orator and his aſſigns, their tithe-barn at Barkby, with their appurtenances, and the tithes of corn and all manner of grain, growing and coming within the fields of Barkby and Thorpe Barkby, to have and to hold the ſaid tithe barn, with the appurtenances, and the ſaid tithes of corn and all manner of grain, to your ſaid orator and to his aſſigns, from the feaſt of Saint Barnaby the Apoſtle next enſuing the date thereof, unto the end and term of 60 years then next enſuing, and fully to be complete, as by the ſame indenture of leaſe thereof, made ready to be ſhewed, more plainly appeareth; by force whereof your ſaid orator into the premiſes entered, and was thereof poſſeſſed, one George Kingſton, of Rotheley in the county of Leiceſter, gentleman, of his inſatiable covetous appetite, intending wrongfully to defraud your ſaid orator of his right, intereſt, and firm in the premiſes, ſince that time hath obtained a leaſe of the premiſes out of the ſaid court for certain years yet to come; and hath bargained and ſold the ſame leaſe, and all ſuch right, intereſt, and term, as he claimeth and pretendeth to have of, in, and to, the premiſes by virtue thereof, unto one Richard Langley, of Barkby aforeſaid; who now of late, that is to ſay, about 14 days laſt paſt, by colour thereof, hath wrongfully entered into the premiſes, and from thence expelled your ſaid orator, and will not permit and ſuffer your ſaid orator to have and enjoy the premiſes according to his rightful title and intereſt in the ſame, againſt all right and good conſcience, and to the utter impoveriſhing and undoing of your ſaid orator in this world for ever, unleſs your good maſterſhip's help and ſuccour to him be ſhewed in this behalf: In tender conſideration, and for ſpeedy remedy whereof, it may pleaſe yoor good maſterſhip to grant the king's gracious letters of privy ſeal, to be directed to the ſaid Richard Langton, enjoining and commanding him by the ſame, not only at a certain day, and under a certain pain, by your good maſterſhip to be limitted, there to anſwer to the premiſes; and farther to abide ſuch order and direction therein as by your maſterſhip ſhall be thought to ſtand with right and good conſcience; but alſo that the ſaid Richard Langley in the mean time may avoid and depart from his wrongful poſſeſſion and occupation of the premiſes, and peaceably to permit and ſuffer your ſaid orator to enter into the premiſes; and the ſame to have and enjoy as in his former eſtate, without any farther let, vexation, or diſturbance of the ſaid Langley, or of any other perſon or perſons, by his aſſent, commandment, or procurement, until the ſaid matter be fully diſcuſſed and determined by your good maſterſhip. And your ſaid orator ſhall daily pray to God for the proſperous preſervation of your good maſterſhip long to endure."

---

[1] This ſum is ſtill paid annually by the vicar to the impropriator.

By reaſon of the ſtatute 31 Henry VIII. the monaſtery of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter came to the Crown; and the next year after that event the Crown's ſteward or receiver made a return of the rents and profits of the rectory, of which the following is a correct tranſlation:

"The account of Thomas Dylks, bailiff there during the time aforeſaid.

"Farm of the ſite of the rectory there, with other things.

"And for £4. 8*s*. 8½*d*. for the farm of the ſite of the rectory there, with all lands, meadows, and paſtures, and their appurtenances, of the ſaid ſite, together with cloſes in Thorp Barkby, and the tithes of hemp and flax, willows and firs, growing in the fields within the pariſh of Barkby aforeſaid, and the ſhreddings of the aſhes and willows growing there; and alſo with the lands incloſed, called the Pinfold, and the lands and rents of aſſize of the lord of Carliſle, reliefs excepted, ſo demiſed to William Wigſton, of Leiceſter, junior, and merchant of the Staple, by indenture under the conventual ſeal aforeſaid, dated the 27th day of July, in the 22d year of the reign of king Henry VIII. to have and to hold the ſaid ſite, with other the premiſes, except as before excepted, to the aforeſaid William and his aſſigns, from the feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel, which will be in A. D. 1532, unto the end of the term of 21 years then next enſuing, and fully to be completed, rendering therefore yearly to the abbot and convent and their ſucceſſors £4. 8*s*. 8*d*. at the feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel, the Purification of the bleſſed Virgin Mary and Pentecoſt equally; with other clauſes, as in the ſame indenture more fully is contained, this being the 9th year of his term. Sum £4. 8*s*. 8*d*.

"And for 8*s*. for the tithe of hay in the fields of Thorpe Barkby and Hamilton, ſo demiſed to the aforeſaid William Walker, amongſt other things, by indenture under the ſeal of the convent aforeſaid, dated the 6th day of December, in the 29th year of the reign of King Henry VIII. to have and to hold the ſaid tithe to the aforeſaid William and his aſſigns, from the feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel then next enſuing, unto the end of the term of . . . . years then next enſuing and fully to be compleated, rendering therefore yearly to the abbot and convent and their ſucceſſors 8*s*. at the feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel only; with other clauſes, as in the ſaid indenture more fully is contained, this being the ſecond year of his term. Sum 8*s*.

"And for £21. 13*s*. 4*d*. for the tithes of corn and grain, with one tithe barn there, in the county of Leiceſter, demiſed to George Kyngſton, gent. by indenture under the ſeal of the Court of Augmentations, as it is ſaid. Sum £21. 13*s*. 4*d*.

"And for 20*s*. for an annual and perpetual penſion, received by the hands of . . . . vicar of Barkby aforeſaid per annum, payable at the feaſt of St. Michael the Archangel only, as appears by the ſaid rental. Sum 20*s*."

Theſe are all the tithes and profits accounted for as parcel of the rectory; and it therefore may be reaſonably imagined that no others belonged to the Crown in the right of the abbey, which is at leaſt negative evidence that all ſuch other tithes as are not here expreſſed belong to the vicarage.

The late Mr. Martin of Palgrave had a grant from Peter de Lincolniâ to the bleſſed Lady of Langley juxta Bredon, & monialibus ibidem, &c. of lands in Barkby prope Leiceſtriam, &c. S. PETRI DE NICHOL; dated in 1241; and an agreement between the abbot and convent of Leiceſter and ſir Thomas of Lincoln, lord of Barkby, concerning one acre of paſture in hayâ de Barkby, and the tenants of the abbey in Northorp in Thurmodeſton; ſans date.

26. William Pochin, eſq. No modus paid therefrom.

27. See N° 4.

28. See the returns made to parliament in vol. I. p. 38; and the following extracts from the wills of benefactors.

Extracts from Hugh Botham's will, reſpecting the poor of Barkby, Syſton, Humberſton, Stoughton, and the Old and New Hoſpitals at Leiceſter, 1623.

"In the name of God; Amen. I Hugh Botham, of the borough of Leiceſter, in the county of Leiceſter, gentleman, being ſick in body, but whole in mind, and of perfect memory (I thank God), do here make my laſt will and teſtament in form following. Firſt, I bequeath my ſoul into the hand of Almighty God my Creator and Redeemer Jeſus Chriſt, and my body to be buried in the church of Barkby within the ſaid county of Leiceſter. And, as for my worldly goods which God hath bleſſed me withal, my will is, and I do firſt give and bequeath unto the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor within the town of Barkby, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, and their ſucceſſors, for the good and benefit of their poor for ever, the ſum of twenty pounds of lawful money of England and the uſe thereof, after the rate of forty ſhillings yearly, to be employed towards the relief of the poor there; and the ſtock to remain whole in the churchwardens' and overſeers' hands, and of their ſucceſſors for ever. Item, I give and bequeath unto the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor within the pariſh of Syſton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, and their ſucceſſors for ever, the like ſum of twenty pounds of good and lawful money of England, and uſe thereof, after the rate of 40*s.* a year, towards the relief of the poor there; and the ſtock to remain whole in the churchwardens' and overſeers' hands, and of their ſucceſſors for ever. Item, I give and bequeath unto the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor within the pariſh of Humberſton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, and their ſucceſſors for ever, the like ſum of £20. and the uſe thereof, after the rate of 40*s.* a year, to be employed towards the relief of the poor there; and the ſtock to remain whole in the ſaid churchwardens' and overſeers' hands, and of their ſucceſſors for ever. Item, I give unto the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor within the pariſh of Stoughton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, and their ſucceſſors for ever, the like ſum of £20. and the uſe thereof, after the rate of 40*s.* the year, to be employed towards the relief of the poor there; and the ſtock to remain whole in the ſaid churchwardens' and overſeers' hands, and of their ſucceſſors for ever. Provided always, and my will is, that the churchwardens and overſeers for the time being of all the ſaid ſeveral pariſhes do, upon execution of this my laſt will and teſtament, give their bond in double value, or otherwiſe good ſecurity as ſhall be very ſufficient, for the true employment thereof according to the true meaning of this my laſt will as aforeſaid; or otherwiſe the ſame not to be paid or performed to ſuch of them as ſhall fail of ſuch ſecurity; any thing herein contained to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding. Item, I give and bequeath to each one of the poor of the New Hoſpital 4*d.* apiece, and to every one of the poor of the Old Hoſpital 3*d.* apiece, at my funeral. Dated July 16, 1623."

Part of the will and teſtament of Mrs. Elizabeth Davies, late of Hatton Garden, in the pariſh of St. Andrew, Holborn, London; reſpecting the vicars of Barkby, and part of the North end of Thurmaſton, dated July 29, 1723.

"And I hereby give, order, and appoint, one annuity, or yearly rent-charge, of five pounds of lawful money of Great Britain, to be iſſuing and going yearly for ever out of all my ſaid freehold meſſuages, land, tenements, and hereditaments, with their appurtenances, in or near Thurmaſton and Barkby aforeſaid, or elſewhere, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, by equal half-yearly payments, at Michaelmas and Lady-day, to and for the uſe of the vicar of the pariſh of Barkby aforeſaid for the time being, for the better ſupport and maintenance of the vicars of the ſaid pariſh for ever; the firſt payment thereof to begin and be made on ſuch of the ſaid days of payment as ſhall happen next after my deceaſe. And I alſo give, order, and appoint, an annuity, or yearly rent-charge of 20*s.* of like money, to be iſſuing and going for ever out of my ſaid freehold eſtate in or near Thurmaſton aforeſaid, at Chriſtmas yearly, to the vicar and churchwardens, for the time being, of the ſaid pariſh of Barkby, to and for the uſe and benefit of the poor people inhabiting or reſiding, or who ſhall inhabit or reſide, in the North end of Thurmaſton aforeſaid, in the ſaid pariſh of Barkby, and not in any other part of the ſaid pariſh; to be diſtributed and divided amongſt them by the ſaid vicar and churchwardens, within ten days after the receipt thereof, in ſuch proportion as they, or any two of them, ſhall judge fit and ſuitable to the wants and neceſſities of ſuch poor people. And my deſire and will is, that, if any of thoſe perſons who have been ſervants to my late mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Barry, deceaſed, and who reſide, or ſhall reſide, in the ſaid North end of Thurmaſton aforeſaid, are or ſhall be ſo reduced, as to want any aſſiſtance out of the ſaid annuity, they ſhall be preferred during their lives in the diſtribution thereof. And, in caſe either of the ſaid annuities of £5. or 20*s.* per annum ſhall not be duly paid at the reſpective times above-mentioned or limited for the payment thereof, or within ten days afterwards, being lawfully demanded by the perſon or perſons reſpectively to whom the ſame ſhall be payable by virtue of theſe preſents, then I give and grant to ſuch perſon or perſons reſpectively full power and authority to diſtrain for the arrears thereof, and to deal with the diſtreſſes according to the law concerning diſtreſſes; and, after the ſaid ſeveral ſums of money hereinbefore given as legacies, together with ſuch coſts, charges, and expences, as the ſaid truſtees, or any of them, ſhall diſburſe, expend, or be put unto, in or about the raiſing or paying of the ſaid ſums of money ſo given as legacies, ſhall be fully paid and ſatisfied, &c."

29. There are no Diſſenters [1].

30. None.

31. For the diſcovery of the monaſtery at Stane [2], recourſe muſt probably be had to the Stanfords. And query, whether Werewereden [3] may not be Garendon?

32. None.

33. 34. Near the Foſs Road, and within a few yards of the branch of the turnpike that joins the Melton road, there is an oblong mound of earth, of conſiderably greater height than mills were formerly ſet upon, which is generally ſuppoſed to be a Roman tumulus. Its poſition is due Eaſt and Weſt.

35. In getting gravel out of the brook at the bottom of the garden belonging to William Pochin, eſq. in 1796, the copper plate and creſt herewith communicated (ſee Plate LXXIV.) were found. In Burton's account of Barrow exactly the ſame figure is given as the arms of William D'Aubigny earl of Arundel. In Barkby church, he ſays, were theſe arms: Gules, a lion rampant Argent, Mowbray.

36. In a cloſe called Abbot's cloſe, adjoining to the town of Barkby Thorpe, on the South ſide, the ſurveyor of the highways, in 1796, found the bones, apparently of a man, about three feet beneath the ſurface of the earth, in unbaring for gravel.—37. No.

38. The wake of the pariſh is on the firſt Sunday of September, and continues a week.—39. None.

40. A ſtatute-fair for hiring of ſervants has of late years been generally held in the North end of Thurmaſton in this pariſh. The uſual wages of men-ſervants in huſbandry from £3. to £8. or £9.; and of women from £2. to £5.

41. A conſiderable manufacture of woollen and cotton-ware in the frame is carried on here; and the work uſually taken to Leiceſter from moſt of the neighbouring villages.

42. Labourers wages in winter 1*s.* a day; in ſummer 2*s.* 6*d.* and maintenance. Carpenters, maſons,

43. Beaf, veal, mutton, lamb, and pork, 6*d.* a pound; geeſe 3*s.* each; ducks 2*s.* 6*d.* a couple; chicken 2*s.*; butter from 9*d.* to 1*s.* 2*d.* a pound; cheeſe 6*d.* and 7*d.*

44. About £1. an acre; poors rates 3*s.* in the pound.

45. 46. None.

47. Coal 9*d.* a hundred weight.

48. The turnpike from Leiceſter to Melton leads through the pariſh, with a branch to Barkby town. Part of the Foſs Road from Leiceſter to Newark goes alſo through this pariſh; and a branch, called the Wanlip turnpike road, connecting the road from Leiceſter to Melton with that from Leiceſter to Loughborough, for which an act was obtained in 1771.

49. The river Soar bounds part of the pariſh to the Weſt; and the Leiceſter navigation, for which an act was obtained in 1791, branching out of the Soar at its junction with the Wreke, purſues the courſe of the latter river about a mile; and then, in a Southward direction, paſſes through the lordſhips of Syſton, Barkby, and the North end of Thurmaſton, and falls into the Soar at the town of Thurmaſton.

A brook of conſiderable current runs through the pariſh from Beby, down one part of the ſtreet of Barkby, and ſo to Syſton town. On this there once ſtood a mill, at the bottom of the town of Barkby. There are two brick bridges over it; one below the town, of two arches, built by the truſtees of the Leiceſter and Melton turnpike road, 1794; the other in the town, of one large arch, built by William Pochin, eſq. 1795.—The red ſtone, mentioned in p. 46, is frequently found in the rivulet at Barkby; but the lumps of it are very ſmall, none larger than a walnut. It was ſuggeſted by a painter, that it might probably be an acquiſition to oil colours. A bit of it had been rubbed dry upon a white ſtone quite expoſed to the weather, about 31 years ago, which in 1798 appeared as freſh and bright a colour as when firſt rubbed on. Dr. Pulteney, to whom a ſmall piece of this ſtone was ſent, ſays, "As far as I can judge from the very ſmall ſpecimen ſent me, it appears to be an iron ſtone, or iron ore, nearly allied to the Hæmatites, and anſwering in pacture, colour, hardneſs, and ſpecific gravity, (which is 3,444) to the compact Red Iron-ſtone of Kirwan's Mineralogy, vol. II. p. 170." R. P.

---

[1] There may be no Diſſenters in the village of Barkby, nor perhaps in that part of Thurmaſton which is in Barkby pariſh. But in Thurmaſton at large are many Diſſenters, having both a meeting-houſe of Anabaptiſts and of Methodiſts.

[2] Stane is noticed as a Benedictine nunnery in the Catalogue of religious houſes aſcribed to Gervaſe of Canterbury, and taken thence by Speed and others. Mr. Burton, however, makes no mention of it; and Bp. Tanner ſuppoſes it to have been a miſtake for Stone in Staffordſhire. Or may it not rather have been Humber-ſtane in Lincolnſhire?—Humberſtone in Leiceſterſhire, it may be alſo obſerved, is an adjoining pariſh to Thurmaſton.

[3] This is clearly right; and is ſo noticed by Bp. Tanner.

52. None.

53. In the manſion of William Pochin, eſq. are very good portraits of king Charles I. and his queen, half-length; lord chancellor Bacon, an head; and a miniature of Charles I. in needle-work; beſides a great number of family-portraits.

Mr. Pochin has alſo two inſcriptions upon copper plates, relating to the family of Danett of Danetts Hall; which are copied under South Croxton p. 236.

54. Riſing ground and meadow. The field, containing nearly 1800 acres, was incloſed by act of parliament in 1779; William Pochin, eſq. being lord of the manor, and owner of a good part of the lordſhip.

55. Arable, paſture, meadow, and a ſmall proportion of wood.

56. Firm and fertile.

57. There is ſand, gravel, and marle; but the general ſoil is a loam.

58. In the brook are found the ſtar-ſtone, limpit, muſcle, oiſter, cornu ammonis, blood or iron ſtone, thunderbolt, and many marine foſſils; as alſo fragments of lime, containing a great quantity of ſulphur, and apparently ſome mixture of copper ore.

59. 60. 61. 62. None.—63. Nearly equal.

64. Wheat, barley, oats, beans, rye.

65. The uſual manure, horſe-dung, and compoſt, with lime, and occaſionally marl. Horſe-dung, 5*s.* per cart-load; Barrow lime, 2*s.* 6*d.* per quarter; Critch lime, 4*s.* per quarter.

66. The broad-leaf elm is in the greateſt abundance, and thrives well. In Mr. Pochin's home-cloſe, called The Warren, is a very large and antient tree of this ſort.—67. No.

68. The feed of ſheep is, in ſummer graſs, in winter turneps.

69. The air is moderately dry, and not ſubject to produce any particular diſorder.

70. There are none other than the ordinary kinds.

71. The river and brook produce pike, perch, eels, and white fiſh, in moderate quantity, with ſome few carp and tench, rarely ſold openly.

72. 73. 74. None.

In the South-weſt extremity of this pariſh lies part of the village of Thurmaſton, ſituate on the highway to Melton, which here exhibits evident marks of having been the old Roman road. This is a conſiderable village; but the greater part of it lies within the pariſh of Belgrave. In the North end of Thurmaſton, which is in Barkby pariſh, ſtands a great old houſe, formerly called Thurmaſton Hall, to which was appendant a very antient chapel, now in ruins[1]; as were certain lands, which, in a deed of 39 Eliz. (1596) are ſaid to have been "ſome tyme to the monaſterie of the bleſſed Virgyn Marie in the meadowes of Leiceſter, now diſſolved, belonging or appertaining." Part of theſe lands were, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, poſſeſſed by Richard Pepper, near reſident; and towards the end of that reign, and in that of her ſucceſſor, this, with other parts of the ſaid lands which had been purchaſed by him, belonged to Robert Pepper[2], of Staple Inn, co. Middleſex, gent. The ſaid houſe and lands deſcended to his grand-daughter Elizabeth Pepper; who, having firſt married a huſband of her own name, William Pepper of London, and, ſecondly, John Davies, of Hatton Garden, eſq. without iſſue by either, and ſtill retaining the diſpoſal of this her paternal inheritance, bequeathed thereout the perpetual payments already ſtated in the extracts of her will, printed in the preceding page.

After her death, this houſe and the lands thereto annexed, were ſold in 1726 by her ſurviving huſband, John Davies, eſq. then very far advanced in years, to Bartin Gutteridge[3], of Deſborough, co. Northampton, gent.; who, dying in 1757, bequeathed the ſame to his ſon William Gutteridge, gent.; and in 1779, theſe, with other adjoining lands, were incloſed as is mentioned in p. 46. In 1783, Mr. William Gutteridge deceaſed without iſſue; and his eſtate deſcended to his two ſiſters, Mary, widow of the Rev. Samuel Edwards, vicar of Welford, co. Northampton, and Anne, wife of the Right Reverend Dr. Thomas Percy, Biſhop of Dromore in Ireland[4]; who, acquiring by purchaſe Mrs. Edwards's ſhare in 1796, applied to the governors of queen Anne's bounty to procure an augmentation for perpetual ſervice in the church of Thurmaſton; which, being ſituate in the South end of this village, and within the pariſh of Belgrave, was only a chapel of eaſe to Belgrave church, and entitled to divine ſervice but once a fortnight[5], although Thurmaſton is a large and populous village, containing not leſs than eight hundred ſouls. This application was ſo favourably received by the governors, that the augmentation, which was completed in 1799, affords now a ſalary for a miniſter to officiate regularly and conſtantly in Thurmaſton church, and to perform all divine offices to his congregation; for, beſides the ſurplice-fees and dues ariſing within his cure, his endowment conſiſts of a regular payment of £22. a year from the vicar of Belgrave, and of 13 acres and 22 perches of land, in the lordſhip of Kirkby Beler in this county, purchaſed of Thomas Belſey, eſq. for about £630.

In completing this endowment, the Biſhop of Dromore (now patron of this church) was aſſiſted by the Lord Biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry, who is impropriator of the great tithes of Belgrave, and by his Lordſhip's leſſee Mrs. Alanſon, daughter and heir of William Aiſlabie, eſq. a very charitable lady; as alſo by the generous donations of £100. from the late William Pochin[6], eſq. then member of parliament for this county, and of £34. from his ſiſter and heir Mrs. Mary Pochin, who, by this moſt important of all charities, have thus contributed to the temporal and eternal happineſs of this poor people.

---

[1] This is thought to have been the Chapel referred to in p. 59. The traces of the old building, mentioned in p. *62, were probably thoſe of a Grange belonging to the Abbey, the reſidence of two or three of its monks, as was uſual in ſuch eſtabliſhments.

[2] See p. 58; and the pedigree of Pepper, p. 187. Elizabeth was the only daughter and heir of Robert Pepper the younger.

[3] The family antiently wrote their name Goodriche, but latterly Gutteridge.

[4] See the clear deſcent of Dr. Percy from the Earls of Northumberland, in Dr. Naſh's Hiſt. of Worceſterſhire, vol. II. p. 318; and in Val. Green's Hiſt. of Worceſter, 2 vols. 4to, 1796, in his account of Thomas Percy, eſq. Mayor of Worceſter in 1662, vol. II. p. 37.

[5] The ſervice was alternately between Thurmaſton and Burſtall (ſee p. 187); ſo that by this augmentation Burſtall has now conſtant ſervice alſo.

[6] We gladly take this opportunity to vindicate the memory of this worthy Gentleman from a groſs miſrepreſentation in a former part of this Work (vol. I. p. clv.) concerning the Roman mileſtone, which, our reſpectable Correſpondent had, moſt untruly, been informed, Mr. Pochin intended ſhould be broke to pieces for the repair of the roads, &c.: whereas, in truth, he cauſed it to be ſet up in the ſafeſt and moſt convenient place adjoining to the ſpot where it was found (being the garden near the turnpike-gate), that curious travellers might the more conveniently examine it; and he gave it in ſtrict charge to the gate-keeper to have it carefully preſerved. This he did, after the inſcription had been conſidered and explained, as far as was at firſt legible, by the Rev. Dr. Percy, now biſhop of Dromore; who firſt aſcertained * that moſt important part of the legend, A RATIS II; having ſeen and examined it at the houſe of Mr. Gutteridge; who reſcued it from the labourers, when they uncovered it as they were levelling and repairing the turnpike-road; and who, when he diſcovered the inſcription, which at firſt was not very apparent, had it ſecured with great care; and to him it is owing that it was not then deſtroyed or defaced.

* This is proved by a letter of the Rev. George Aſhby to Dr. Percy himſelf, which is now before me; wherein, ſpeaking of the inſcription, he ſays, "You are the only perſon I know, who has viewed it with learned eyes;" and concludes by aſking him, "Are you ſure of A RATIS, which appears perfectly fair" [ſcil. in your tranſcript]; "and, if ſo, gives a great value indeed to the ſtone?"

BARROW UPON SOAR,

in antient writings called Baro, Baroo, Barhoo, Barwe[1], Barwa, Barewa, a pleaſant village, containing about 200 houſes and 1000 inhabitants (ſituate chiefly on a riſing ground, below which runs the river Soar), is about three miles South-eaſt from Loughborough, by which it is bounded on the North; and on the other quarters by Walton on the Woulds, Segrave, and Quorndon. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, this pariſh is part of the deanry of Akeley; and hath within it four towns; viz. Barrow, wherein is the mother-church; Quorndon; Woodhouſe; and part of the town of Mountſorell. It includes alſo the extraparochial liberties of Beaumanor and Charley.

Barrow ſeems to have taken its name from its ſituation, being built on a little mount, or riſing ground; the Saxon word Beoꞃh, or Býꞃiᵹ, in Low Dutch Berge, ſignifying a mount, or hill; and thence little hills, or tumuli made of ſtones heaped together, over deceaſed perſons (by way of ſepulchral monuments, which are common in many parts of England), are called barrows. It has the diſtinguiſhing addition of Soar, becauſe not many miles diſtant upon Trent is another Barrow, remarkable for that rich meadow which is ſurrounded by the ſerpentine compaſs of the river Trent in that place, and uſually called Barrow Holme[2].

The pariſh is very large, taking in the ſite of Beaumanor (which, notwithſtanding, is extraparochial), Beaumont Leys, Charley (likewiſe extraparochial), Mountſorel Inferior, Quorndon, Woodhouſe, and Woodhouſe Eaves; and the liberty belonging to the townſhip of Barrow alone is computed to contain 2250 acres of land, a great part of which is ſtrong clay. From the Weſt ſide of the village is a moſt delightful proſpect to Quorndon wood and Charnwood foreſt, &c.

The original boundaries are thus deſcribed:

"Limitationes & fines parochie de Baro, per diverſos fideles juratos, &c. limitate, ut patet in commiſſione & inquiſitione ſuper eiſdem factâ; qui dicunt quòd eſt crux inter campum de Syleby & campum ville de Baro, que ſtat ſuper meram, que mera extendit ſe auſtralitèr uſque ad Barrelane, & tunc extendit le uſque ad locum vocatum Parkforth; & à Parkforth extendit ſe uſque ad Mapulwell; & à Mapulwell extendit ſe uſque ad Rededyke de Ulveſcroft. Et tunc incipit alia mera, & tranſit occidentalitèr uſque ad Coppedoke; & abhinc extendit ſe uſque ad refectorium prioratûs de Charley; & abhinc extendit ſe uſque ad Charleyſton. Et tunc incipit alia mera, que incipit abhinc, & tranſit borealitèr uſque ad Rodley-croſſe; & abhinc extendit ſe uſque ad Fayroke. Et tunc incipit una nova mera, que venit orientalitèr, & tranſit per medium ſilve vocat' Bewmaner-parke; & abhinc extendit ſe uſque ad Thorp-dyke; & abhinc extendit ſe uſque ad aquam vocat' Sore; & tunc extendit ſe uſque ad villam de Baro, &c. ut in commiſſione, vel in inquiſitione.

Limites parochie de Baro ex parte Foreſte.

Inprimis, incipiendo ad vad' ſub parco de Querndon, ſequatur foſſat' inter Edyhinehyrſt & le Rydyng uſque Toftſyke, & ſic per Calvecroft-dyke uſque in le Clatryngeforde, quod eſt apud ſtagnum molendini de Swythelonde; & indè per ſycam uſque Mapulwell; & ſic, ſequendo predictam ſicam antiquam, prout jacet per Longedales, uſque Coleweyforth ferè, ad caput predicte ſyce per Coleweyforth, & trans ſuperiorem partem illius ſice rectè in viam que ducit uſque Swythelond inter Lihtelyes & Brombrigge. Et de Colweyforth ex tranſverſo Lyhtelyes uſque Falconerſheye uſque ad locum quendam in quo aliquando quedam crux fuit. Et indè uſque le Redelane, que in illâ parte incipit ad ſuperiorem partem de Falconerſhey, & ſe extendit inter Falconerſhey & antiquum caput campi de Ulveſcroft uſque Hanurcliff; & ſic, ſequendo le Redelane uſque Redyſyke, que diſtendit ſe ex tranſverſo le Redlane uſque Ulveſcroft; & ſic, ſequendo le Redyſyke per inferiorem partem de Falconerſheye uſque Corwelleſyke, que diſtendit de Coppedok uſque inferius angulum novi clauſi de Ulveſcroft, ſcil' Hanurcliff; & ſic, ſequendo Corwelleſyke uſque le Coppedok, uſque diviſum inter le Coppedok, ſequendo Corwelleſyke & antiquum Birchewod. Et ſic de predictis Corwelleſyke, tranſverſando per predictam diverſam inter Coppedok & antiquum Byrchewode, uſque ad le hyeway ſuper acernum lapidem ubi quedam crux ſtare ſolebat, & ſuper le hyeway uſque Donthorndike, & ſic ſequendo foſſat' illud uſque ad antiquum campum de Charley. Et per foſſ' antiq' campi de Charley uſque introïtum curie de Charley; & ibi conjunguntur feoda de Baroo & de Schepiſhed; & ſic uſque ad hoſtium occidentale eccleſie de Charley; & indè uſque le Sbyntlenes que ſunt in campo orientali de Charley. Et indè uſque ad Charleyſton, & indè uſque le heywey ſub Bryndcleves; & ſic, ſequendo le heyway, dimittendo le Baſclif à dextris uſque le Netilbuſhe, ubi dividuntur feoda & parochie de Baro & Schepiſhed. Feodum n. & parochia de Baro extendit ſe ibi à departis le hyewaye uſque ad Schepeſhedway, que eſt via tendens ex tranſverſo le Louſykar uſque le Wodhows, & ſic de illo loco apud le Nettilbuſhe, ſequendo predictam ſemitam de Schepiſhed uſque ad Ailiſkar[3], & ſic uſque ad angulum parci de Bewmaner, comprehendendo medium parci de Bewmaner; ſic uſque ad Thorpmedewe, & ſic deinceps. Require terrarium de terris dominicalibus in terrario fratris W. Charyte[4]."

In the time of Edward the Confeſſor, this extenſive manor, containing fifteen ploughlands, belonged to earl Harold, afterwards for a ſhort time king of England; who being ſlain in the battle of Haſtings, 1066, the Conqueror gave it to his nephew, Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter[5]; who held it, at the time of the general ſurvey, immediately under the king; and had in the demeſne four ploughs and a half, and two bondmen with one bondwoman; and fourteen villans, with thirteen bordars, had eleven ploughs. There were three mills, of thirty ſhillings value; and a wood, one mile long and four furlongs broad, which yielded five ſhillings.

When this manor was held by earl Harold, it had the under-written appendages:

In Dunintone, five ploughlands, and a meadow three furlongs long and one broad.

In Coſintone, ſix ploughlands.

In Hohtone, ſix ploughlands.

In Setgrave, ten ploughlands, and ten acres of meadow.

In Seglebi, one ploughland.

In Redreſbi, ten ploughlands, all but one oxgang, and eight acres of meadow.

In Brockeſbi, two ploughlands, ſeven acres of meadow, and a mill of five ſhillings value.

In Friſebi, one ploughland and a half, and four acres of meadow.

In Preſtwald, two ploughlands, a meadow three furlongs long and one broad, and a wood ſix furlongs long and one broad.

In Cernelega, four ploughlands. [This portion, at the Survey, lay waſte; the value unknown.]

In Gadeſbi, one ploughland, four acres of meadow, and a mill of three ſhillings value.

In Redebi, 3 carucates of land all but 2 bovates, and three acres of meadow.

---

[1] It is remarkable, that Barrow in Suffolk is ſometimes ſo ſpelt; elſe Barwell is as like. So Arwe in Gough's Sepulchral Monuments, vol. I. p. cxxi: and Morwe, clix. G. A.

[2] MS. Chetwynd.

[3] On Allerkar was a mill belonging to the monks of Bermondſey.

[4] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xiv. b. Many of the names mentioned within the above limits are now wholly loſt or forgotten.

[5] Arms: Azure, a wolf's head eraſed Argent; Plate VII. fig. 1.

In Friſeby[1], one carucate and a half of land, four acres of meadow, and a mill worth 28 pence.

Of theſe lands, four of the earl's knights, at the time of the Survey, held twelve ploughlands. The earl himſelf held four ploughs and a half in demeſne, and thirty ſocmen, and twenty-five villans, and thirteen bordars, who had fifteen ploughs and a half, with one bondman. The four knights had in demeſne three ploughs and twelve villans, with one ſocman and two bordars, who had three ploughs[2].

In the reign of king Stephen, Ranulph de Gernoniis earl of Cheſter gave the church here, with the chapel of Querndon belonging to it, and one carucate of his demeſne lands, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter, ad proprios uſus; all which was confirmed and continued by Hugh Cevelioc the ſucceeding earl of Cheſter, and alſo by king Henry II.[3]

For the very high importance of the feudal earls of Cheſter it may not be improper to refer to Madox's "Baronia Anglica[4];" where it appears "that the earls and great lords did then in many particulars imitate the form and faſhion of the king's court. As the king had, ſo had they, dapifers, or ſeneſchals, chamberlains, and other officers in their houſholds, and likewiſe abroad their barones, their chief chivalerian tenants."

In the poſſeſſion of the earls of Cheſter this lordſhip continued till the time of earl Ranulph Blondeville, ſon of Hugh Cevelioc; who poſſeſſed this manor by inheritance in 1181; and, dying without iſſue, it devolved to his ſecond ſiſter and coheir Mabell, who married William de Albini earl of Arundel; whoſe daughter Nicola brought this manor to Roger de Somery, baron of Dudley, co. Stafford, who by her had iſſue four daughters; one of whom, called Maud, was married to ſir Henry de Erdington (lord of the manor of Erdington, near Birmingham, co. Warwick), who by his wife acquired this manor; and whoſe ſon Henry in conſequence aſſumed his mother's coat, counterchanging the colours; Azure, two lions paſſant Or[5].

Peter Picott had an inheritance in Barrow in 1183; and in 1195, Gilbert, the ſon of Picott, a knight, had fair poſſeſſions at Barrow, Segrave, Glen, &c.[6]; and in 1219 had iſſue William, whoſe property, about the middle of the reign of king Henry III, paſſed by daughters to Murdack and Ireys, and one third part to John-Nicolas Picott, which came ſoon after to Gilbert Petemon; yet Alexander and Robert Picott, and others of that family, continued reſidents here in the reigns of Henry III, Edward I, and Edward II.[7]

William de Albini earl of Arundel was a benefactor to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis, by giving them all the great and ſmall tithes of Barrow, except thoſe payable to the monks of St. Severus[8], which the abbot and convent afterwards purchaſed.

Other benefactors were, ſir Thomas Erdington; Hugo Herbert; John Stevens, aleraper[9]; Adam le Salſer, and Richard his ſon; Ralph le Boteler (Pincerna, who gave them ſome land extendentem ſe uſque ad aqueductum labentem in vinarium domini comitis Ceſtrie); Richard le Wes; and Gilbert Pedman.

The abbot and convent had the royalty at Barrow; weyfs and ſtreyſs; view of frankpledge, at which their tenants at Barrow and Quorndon were bound to attend; thoſe of Barrow paying 2*d.* or 4*d.* and of Quorndon 8*d.* to the common fine.

They had alſo the privilege of depaſturing a flock of 250 ſheep; and, from a windmill given by Giles de Erdington, and from the water-mill at Barrow, had a tithe of the profits.

They had 68 acres and 3 roods of land in the common fields of Barrow[10]; and, in the fine Cottonian MS. referred to under Barkby, p. 45, is a particular terrier, of two pages and a half, of lands here, belonging to the abbey[11]; and another, in three pages more, of lands in the Southfield, the Morefield, the Weſtfield, the Blopoolakyrlande, &c. at Quorndon.

They had the tithe of the fiſhery; and of all ſtone ſold for the purpoſe of being made into lime.

They had alſo a quit-claim, from William ſon of Richard ſon of Elias of Barrow, from two wax-tapers which had formerly been paid by the ſacriſt of the abbey for an acre of land called St. Mary's land.

Hugh de Albini earl of Arundel, who died ſ. p. in 1243, confirmed to the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis "omnes decimas majores & minores infra limites parochie de Baro[12];" and gave to the abbey of Garendon common of paſture for all their cattle in the lordſhip of Barrow, his park excepted[13].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Barrow, Querndon, and Wodehows, anſwered collectively as one vill; and the hamlet of Montſorell for another entire vill.

In 1292, it was found that Roger de Somery died ſeiſed of the manor of Barow, parcel of the inheritance of Nicola de Albini his mother; and held of the king in capite, as of the honour of Cheſter, by the ſervice of finding one knight when the king marched into Wales[14].

In 1302, William de Biſield and Matilda his wife held divers tenements at Barrow upon Soar of the king in capite, by the ſervice of grand ſerjeancy[15].

In 1304, it was found that Nicholas de Segrave at his death held the manor of Barrow as of the inheritance of Alice his wife; and that the ſaid manor was of the fee of Gilbert de Gaunt, and held by the ſervice of a knight's fee and an half[16].

In 1309-10, licence was granted to Philip de Burley to hold one quarter of the manor of Barrow upon Soar, and one quarter of the manor of Olney, co. Bucks (which Reginald de Sulley had procured for life without the king's licence), with a pardon for the tranſgreſſion of the ſaid Reginald[17].

In 1311, it was found that Mabell de Sulley, deceaſed, ſome time held one quarter of the manor of Barrow upon Soar, with the appurtenances, of the king in capite, as of the honour of Cheſter, then in the king's hands, by the ſervice of one quarter of a knight's fee; and that Raymund de Sulley, her ſon and heir, was then aged 40, and upwards[18].

Peter Picott, the laſt heir male of his family, died ſ. p. in 1313, Simon Senvile the ſon of his ſiſter Margery, and Iſabel Touke his other ſiſter, being his heirs[19].

In 1316, Raymund de Sulley died ſeiſed of £20. rent, ariſing out of a quarter of the manor of Barrow ſuper Sore; which Philip de Burley held, for term of life, of the king in capite, as parcel of his earldom of Cheſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and Elizabeth wife of William de Brewes, daughter and heir of the aforeſaid Raymund, was then aged 20[1].

---

[1] Friſeby, having been already mentioned, ſeems here to have been repeated for the ſake of adding the mill. But ſo it ſtands in the original record.

[2] "Comes Hugo tenet de Rege Barhoo. Ibi ſunt 15 carucatæ terræ. In dominico habet 3 carucas & dimidiam, & 2 ſervos cum 1 ancillâ; & 50 villani, cum 13 bordariis, habent 11 carucas. Ibi 3 molini de 30 ſolidis. Silva 1 leuvæ longitudinis, & 4 quarentenarum latitudinis, que reddit 5 ſolidos.—Hoc manerium tenuit Heraldus comes, cum appendiciis infraſcriptis: In Dunintone 5 carucatæ terræ, & 3 quarentenæ prati longitudinis, & 1 quarentenæ latitudinis. In Coſintone 6 carucatæ terræ. In Hohtone 6 carucatæ terræ. In Setgrave 2 carucatæ terræ, & 10 acræ prati; & molinum 5 ſolidorum. In Friſebi 1 carucata terræ & dimidia, & 4 acræ prati. In Preſtewald 2 carucatæ terræ; pratum 3 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 1 quarentenæ latitudinis; ſilva 6 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 5 quarentenarum latitudinis. In Cernelegâ 4 carucatæ terræ. (Vaſta eſt. Require precium.) In Gadeſbi 1 carucata terræ, & IIII acræ prati, & molinum 3 ſolidorum. In Redebi 3 carucatæ terræ, & 2 bovatæ minus; & 3 acræ prati. In Friſebi 1 carucata terræ & dimidia, & 4 acræ prati, & molinum 28 denariorum. De his terris tenent 4 milites de comite 12 carucatas terræ. In his habet ipſe comes in dominico 4 carucatas & dimidiam, & 30 ſochmannos, & 25 villanos, & 13 bordarios, habentes 15 carucas & dimidiam, cum 1 ſervo. Milites ejus habent in dominico 3 carucas, & 12 villanos, cum 1 ſochmanno & 2 bordariis, habentes 2 carucas." Domeſday, fol. 237. a. 1.

[3] Cart. 14 Edw. III. n. 17. per Inſpeximus.

[4] P. 133.

[5] Plate VII. fig. 3.

[6] Dugdale, Warw. p. 715; & Reg. Decan. & Capit. Wigorn. fol. 41.

[7] Thoroton's Nottinghamſhire, p. 11.

[8] A Benedictine abbey in a town of that name, within the dioceſe of Coutance in Normandy, founded about 558 by Severus biſhop of Avranches, and re-founded by Hugo de Abrinces, viſcount d'Avranches, afterwards earl of Cheſter.

[9] In one place he is called "Joh'es Stefanus Ale Raper;" in another, "Stephanus le Ropere."

[10] Terrarium dominicale abbathiæ de Pratis.

[11] P. 87. a.—88. a.

[12] Cotton MSS. Vitellius, F. XVII.

[13] Cart. 17 Hen. III. m. 17.

[14] Eſch. 20 Edw. I. ex Libro de Lovel.

[15] Eſch. 30 Edw. I. N° 45. Leic.

[16] Eſch. 32 Edw. I. N° 61. Leic.

[17] Cart. 3 Edw. II. m. 9.

[18] Eſch. 5 Edw. II. N° 12. Leic.

[19] Thoroton's Nottinghamſhire, p. 11; where ſee their pedigree.

In 1325, it was found that Stephen de Segrave, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held 18*d.* rent ariſing out of a certain free tenement in Barrow, then conſidered as a member of the honour of Segrave, of Henry de Erdinton[2]. In the ſame year, John de Segrave and Chriſtian his wife held divers rents in Barrow; and John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior,) was his next heir[3].

In the Segrave Chartulary is a grant, by which Hugo le Deſpenſer gave to Stephen de Segrave, in marriage with his ſiſter Roeſia, a virgate of land in Barrow, and a deed by which Gilbert Cat engages to pay to the ſaid Stephen and his heirs an annual rent of 2*s.* for ten virgates of land at Barrow, which he held under Roger de Memelavain and his anceſtors[4].

In 1340, Henry de Beaumont (then earl of Boghan) was found to have died ſeiſed of the hamlet of Barrow, as a member of Loughteborough[5].

In 1331, the following proceſs occurs, relative to the performance by the prior of Laund of ſuit at the court of Barrow, for two meſſuages and three bovates of land held by the ſaid prior at Friſby:

"Rex dilectis & fidelibus ſuis Galfrido le Scroop & ſociis ſuis, juſticiariis ad placita coram nobis tenenda aſſignatis, ſalutem. Monſtravit nobis dilectùs nobis in Chriſto prior de Landâ, per petitionem ſuam coram nobis & concilio noſtro in parliamento noſtro exhibitam, quòd ipſe nuper in curiâ đni Henrici nuper regis Anglie, patris noſtri, coram eodem patre noſtro, per conſiderationem ejuſdem curie, diſrationâſſet versùs Joh̄em de Boivill, conſanguineum & heredem Hugonis de Murdak, quòd idem Joh̄es ipſum priorem acquietare deberet de ſervicio faciendi ſectam ad curiam de Barwe de tribus ſeptimanis in tres ſeptimanas; quod quidem ſervicium ejuſdem curie ab eodem priore tunc exegerunt de duobus meſſuagiis & tribus bovatis terre, cum pertinentiis, in Friſeby, que idem prior de ipſo Joh̄e tenet in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, ad nos poſt modum ex parte ipſius prioris accipientis, quòd ipſe per dominos curie predicte pro ſectâ ad eandem curiam faciendâ pro tenementis predictis, per defectum, pretextu acquietancie ejuſdem Joh̄is, qui ipſum in die conſiderationis predicte acquietare debuit, gravatus, diſtrictus fuit, & multiplicitèr inquietatus; precepimus, per diverſa brevia noſtra, de jure vicecomitis noſtri Rotl', quòd diſtringeret predictum Joh̄em ad prefatum priorem de ſervicio faciendi ſectam ad dictam curiam extra dominos ejuſdem curie, juxta conſiderationem predictam acquietand', predictus Joh̄es machinavit ipſum priorem de acquietanciâ ſuâ in hâc parte excludere ſe de terris & tenementis, que die conſiderationis predicte & circiter tenuit, totalitèr dimiſit; quo pretextu idem prior, pro eo quòd idem Joh̄es nihil habet per quod hujuſmodi ſectam faciendam diſtringere voluerit juxta formam conſiderationis predicte, ab executione judicii predicti hucuſque extitit impeditus, & adhuc exiſtit, ad grave dampnum ipſius prioris, & eccleſie ſue Sc̄i Joh̄is Baptiſte de Landâ exhereditationis periculum manifeſtum; ſuper quo nobis ſupplicavit ſibi per nos remedium adhiberi: Nos, nolentes quòd executio judicii predicti per hujuſmodi malitiam ulteriùs differatur, vobis mandamus, quòd, viſis recordo & proceſſu coram nobis, ut premittitur, habitis, in terris & tenementis que idem Joh̄es, die quo prefatus prior acquietanciam illum versùs ipſum Joh̄em, per conſiderationem curie ipſius patris noſtri, ſic diſracionavit, habuit, diſtringi, de mandatis ad dictum priorem de ſervicio ad faciendam ſectam ad dictam curiam acquietand' juxta formam conſiderationis predicte[6]."

The abbot and convent of Garendon had common of paſture for all their cattle in Barrow, except within the park there; which was confirmed to them in 1341[7].

In 1343, it was found that Ralph Baſſet of Drayton died ſeiſed of a certain park at Barrow, and 4*l.* 16*s.* 3½*d.* rents of the naifs and cottagers; all which he held of lord Edward earl of Cheſter (the Black Prince eldeſt ſon of king Edward III.) by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's fee[8].

In 1345, king Edward III. by a charter of Inſpeximus, recognized the right of the abbey of Leiceſter to the church of Barrow, and to the carucate of demeſne land, with which Ranulph earl of Cheſter had augmented the rectory (accrevit eccleſie).

In 1346, Giles de Erdington (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Barrow, Quorndon, and Woodhouſe, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon[9].

In 1356, Roger Hillary, at his death, held 15 acres of meadow in Barrow upon Soar (of the inheritance of Katharine his wife) of Giles de Erdington, by the ſervice of paying one roſe in a year[10]. Elizabeth his widow lived till 1375, and held in dower a moiety of this manor of the king in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; and Thomas their ſon, next heir, was aged 28 and upwards[11]. But hear the inquiſition:

"Inquiſitio facta coram Thomâ Walſhe, eſcaetore đni regis in com' Leyc', apud Leyceſtr', die Mercurii ꝓx' poſt feſtum Sc̄i Barnabe Apl̄i, anno regni regis Edwardi Tercii poſt Conqueſtum quadrageſimo nono, virtute cuiuſdam b̄ris đni regis de cancellariâ ſuâ, eidem eſcaetori directi, & huic inquiſicioni conſuet', ꝑ ſacramentum Joh̄is de Knyghthorp, Joh̄is Hikeling, Joh̄is Martyn, Thome Jeke, Rob̄ti Pegg, Will̄i Baily, Thome Warde, Joh̄is Rowle, Rad̄i Calſ', Will̄i Ellys, Joh̄is Steueneſſon, & Rob̄ti Clerk, jur'; qui dicunt ſuper ſacramentum ſuum, quòd Elizabeth, que fuit uxor Egidii de Erdyngton, non tenuit de đno rege in capite ligna, terras, ſeu tenementa, in feodo die quo obiit in com' Leyceſtr'. Et dicunt, quòd tenuit de đno rege in com' Leyc' die quo obiit manerium de Barwe ſuꝑ Sore, cum ꝑtin', ad terminum vite dc̄e Elizabethe, ex dono & conceſſione Will̄i le Walſhe quondam ꝑſone eccl̄ie de Upton & Thome Wilde capell̄i, qui p̃dc̄um manerium, cum ꝑtin', quondā dederunt Egidio de Erdyngton, quondam viro ejuſdem Elizabethe, & eidem Elizabethe, in totam vitam eorꝝdem Egidii & Elizabethe; ita quòd, poſt mortem dc̄orum Egidii & Elizabethe, p̃dc̄um manerium, cum ſuis ꝑtinent', remaneret Thome filio p̃dc̄or' Egidii & Elizabethe, & Margarete uxori ejus, & heredibus de corporibus eorꝝdem ꝓcreatis; &, ſi iidem Thomas & Margareta obirent ſine herede de corporibus eorꝝ exeunte, tunc idem manerium, cum ꝑtinent', remaneret p̃dc̄o Egidio, hered' & aſſignat' ſuis, in ꝑpetuum. Et dicunt, quòd p̃dc̄um manerium tenetur de đno rege in capite ꝑ ſervic' dimid' feodi militis. Et dicunt, quòd ſunt plures domi infra p̃dc̄um manerium, que nichil valent ultra repriſ' ꝑ ann'. Et dicunt, quòd eſt ib̄m unū columbar', quod valet ꝑ ann' ultra repriſ' IIs̄. Et quòd herbag' infra dc̄um maner' valet ꝑ annū Vs̄. Et quòd ſunt ib̄m II caruc' terre in đnico ejuſdem maner'; quòd valent ꝑ annū ultra repriſ' LIIIIs̄. IIIId̄. quia major pars dc̄e terre jac' fricta & inculta ꝑ defc̄um ſervic'. Et quòd ſunt ib̄m XX acre prati, que valent ꝑ annū Ls̄.; videl̄t, quelb̄t acra IIs̄. VId̄. Et quòd ſunt ib̄m viginti-tres virgat' cū meſſuag' & toſto adjacent', unde reddit ꝑ annū XIlī. Xs̄. feſtis Sc̄i Andree Ap̄li, Annunciacōis beate Marie, Apl̄orꝝ Petri & Pauli, & Sc̄i Mich̄is, equis porcōibꝫ; videl̄t, ꝓ quâlibet virgat' terre, cū meſſuag' vel toſto, Xs̄. ꝑ annū. Et quòd eſt ib̄m de reddit' exeunt' de lib̄is tenentibus ꝑ annū XXXIIIs̄. IXd̄. ſolvend' terminis p̃dc̄is. Et quòd ſunt ib̄m XIII cot', que valent ꝑ annū ultra repriſ' XIXs̄. VId̄. ſolvend' ter̄mis p̃dict'. Et quòd quart' ꝑs molendini aquatici ib̄m, ꝑtinent' ad dictum manerium, valet ꝑ annū ultra repriſ' XIIIs̄. IIIId̄. Et quòd ꝓficue & perquiſ' cur' ib̄m valent ꝑ annū ultra repriſ' Xs̄. Et dicunt, quòd eſt una caruc' terre in dominico in Querndon & Wodhows, que ſunt ꝑcelle maner' p̃dicti, in com' p̃dc̄o, que valent ꝑ annū ultra repriſ' XXs̄. Et dicunt, quòd ſunt III acre prati ib̄m, que valent ꝑ annū VIs̄. Et quòd eſt ib̄m una paſtura ſeꝑal' vocat'

---

[1] Eſch. 10 Edw. II. N° 52. Leic.

[2] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 91. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[4] See the Appendix to vol. II. p. 113.

[5] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[6] Clauſ. 5 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 11.

[7] Cart. 14 Edw. III.

[8] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.

[9] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[10] Eſch. 30 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 46.

Querndon Medewe, que valet ꝑ annũ xxs̃. Et quòd ſunt ib̃m iii acre ſin boſc', que valent ꝑ annũ ultra repriſ' vs̃. Et quòd ſunt ib̃m vi cot', que valent ꝑ annũ ultra repriſ' ixs̃. Et quòd eſt ib̃m de reddit' exeunt' de lib̃is tenement' ꝑ annũ ixs̃. viđ. ſolvend' terminis ſupradictis. Et quòd eſt un' rod' terre lib̃e in Montſorell, in com' p̃dc̃o, que eſt ꝑcella p̃dc̃i maner', que valet ꝑ annũ iđ. Et dicunt, quòd p̃dc̃a Elizabetha tenuit in com' p̃dc̃o, die quo obiit, maner' de Naſſington, &c. Et quòd p̃dc̃us Thomas, fil' & heres p̃dc̃orꝫ Egidii & Elizabethe, eſt heres ejuſdem Elizabethe ꝓpinquior, qui eſt etatis xxviii annorꝫ & amplius. In cujus rei teſtim', p̃dc̃i jur' ſigilla ſua p̃ſenti appoſuerunt. (Convenit cum Recordo [1].")

Sir Giles de Erdington, knt. died in 1375, ſeiſed of the manor of Barrow; leaving his ſon and heir, ſir Thomas; who had the honour of marrying Margaret, daughter of Thomas de Brotherton earl of Norfolk, who in her own right ſucceeded to the title of counteſs on her father's death. This lady had before been married to John lord Segrave, who had left her a widow in 1355, and by whom ſhe had one daughter, Elizabeth, mother to Thomas lord Mowbray, earl marſhal and duke of Norfolk. She had alſo been married ſecondly to ſir Walter Manny, K. G. who again left her a widow in 13 . . .

In 1372, John Plomme, of Barrow upon Sore, was vicar of All Saints church, Northampton [2].

In 1390, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Barrow, with the appurtenances, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice [3].

In 1394, on the death of ſir Thomas de Erdington, it was found that William Walſhe, rector of the church of Upton, and Thomas Wilde, a capellan, had formerly aſſigned to Giles de Erdington, knt. (father of Thomas de Erdington, knt. ſince deceaſed), for term of life, the manor of Barrow upon Soar, and the view of frank pledge there; that the ſaid manor was held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and that Thomas, ſon of the ſaid Thomas and Margaret his wife, counteſs (afterwards ducheſs) of Norfolk, was next heir of the ſaid Thomas [4].

In 1402, it was found that Roger Hillary, deceaſed, was ſeiſed (jointly with Margaret his wife then living) of fifteen acres of meadow, with the appurtenances, in Barrow, held of Thomas Erdington by the ſervice of one roſe a year; that John ſon of Saer, ſon of Joan (one of the ſiſters of the ſaid Roger Hillary), and Elizabeth, wife of John Ruſſel, knt. daughter of Elizabeth (another of the ſiſters of the ſaid Roger) were his next heirs. In the ſame year, it was found that Joan (widow of Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knt.) died ſeiſed, for term of life, of a third part of the manor of Barrow, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice; and that ſhe had no heirs [5].

In 1404, it was found that Margaret ducheſs of Norfolk (widow of Thomas de Erdington, knt.) died ſeiſed of the manor of Barrow, with the appurtenances, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice; alſo of one meſſuage, and a moiety of one virgate of land, and a third part of twelve acres of meadow, with the appurtenances, in Barrow aforeſaid, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a ſixtieth part of one knight's fee; that all the lands ſhe held in Barrow and Quorndon were held of the king in capite by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; and that Thomas de Erdington, knight, was her ſon and next heir [6].

Sir Thomas Erdington, who then ſucceeded to his father's moiety of the manor of Barrow, became afterwards poſſeſſed of the other moiety on the death of his relation Reymond de Sully; as appears from the following record, among the MSS. in the Britiſh Muſeum, intituled, "Deed relating to the claims made to and for the manor of Barrow, co. Leiceſter, by divers deſcendants from Roger de Somery.

"Leyc', pro Barowe. Bee it remembred, that Roger Somery was ſeiſed in his demeazne, as in fee, of the mannor of Barowe, and other certaine mannors, lands, and tenements, in divers ſhires; and had iſſue two daughters, Mabill and Mawd; and dyed ſeiſed. After whoſe death, Mabill and Mawd entred into the ſame mannor; and Mabill took to huſband Walter Sulby; Mawd tooke to huſband Henry Erdington. The wch Walter and his wife, and Henry and his wife, made purpartie betweene them of the ſaid mannors and all other lands and tenem^ts^ that the ſaid Roger dyed ſeiſed of; ſoe that the halfe manor of Barowe was allotted the purpartie of the ſaid Walter and Mabill, and that other halfe of the ſaid mannor was allotted to the purꝑty of the ſaid Henry and Mawd. Walter had iſſue Reymond: Walter and Mabill dyed. After whoſe deceaſe, Reymond, as ſonne and heire, entred into the ſaid half deale of the ſaid mannor of Barowe, and on all other lands and tenem^ts^ that were allotted to his father and mother in purꝑty, and dyed ſeiſed w^th^out iſſue of his body: wherefore the right of the halfe of the ſaid mannor of Barowe, that was allotted to the purparty of the ſaid Walter and Mabill, is deſcended to Thomas Erdington, knt. coſen and heire to the ſame Reymond (that is to witt), the ſaid Thomas is ſon to Thomas, ſon to Thomas, ſon to Giles, ſon to Mawd, ſiſter to Mabill, mother to the ſaid Reymond: And ſoe the ſaid Thomas Erdington, knt. aſketh the halfe of Barowe ag^t^ Rauf Shirley, &c. [7]."

In a book of fifteenths and tenths, granted by the laity in 1416, Barrow was rated at 6*l.* 16*s.*; Beaumont fee (de priore Hoſpitalis S. Johannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ) at 6*s.* 8*d.*; Mountſorell burghe, at £3.; Quorndon, at £2.; and Wodhouſe, at £2.; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſums; but an abatement was made of 3*l.* 4*s.* at Barrow; of 5*s.* at Mountſorell; of 10*s.* at Quorndon; and of 6*s.* at Woodhouſe [8].

In 1427, Elizabeth widow of Henry de Beaumont died ſeiſed of Barrow, as a member of Beaumanor [9].

In 1433, it was found that Thomas Erdington, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Barrow, held of the king, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee, and that Thomas Erdington was his ſon and heir [10].

In 1434, it was found that Sibilla, widow of Thomas Erdington, knt. died ſeiſed of a third part of the manor of Barrow, held of the king, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee [11].

In 1439, Beatrix, wife of ſir Hugh Shirley, died ſeiſed of a third part of the manor of Barrow, which land formerly belonged to ſir Ralph Baſſet of Drayton [12]; and was afterwards ſold by ſir Robert Shirley, bart. as appears by evidences in the poſſeſſion of the earl Ferrers.

In 1443, Elizabeth lady Clynton died ſeiſed of three meſſuages and three carucates of land, with the appurtenances, in Barrow upon Soar and Shakerſton, held of the abbeſs of Poleſworth; and William Lucy was her couſin and next heir, being the ſon of Alice, daughter of Margery, daughter of James, ſon of Joan, ſiſter of William, father of the aforeſaid Elizabeth [13].

The manor of Barrow upon Soar continued in the family of Erdington (as appears by their genealogy in p. 50.) till 1461, when the laſt ſir Thomas de Erdington enfeoffed ſir Richard Neele ſerjeant at law and others in this manor and divers lands in this county, to the uſe of the ſaid ſir Thomas during his life, and afterwards to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten; in default of ſuch iſſue, remainder to William lord Haſtings and his heirs for ever. Which ſir Thomas [14] dying ſoon after without iſſue, it came to the ſaid William lord Haſtings accordingly.

In 1463, it was found that William Beaumont viſcount Beaumont, attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of 24 acres of land and three roods of meadow in Barrow [15]; and, 26 Oct. 1464, king Edward IV. granted divers lands in Barrow and Quorndon, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Henry lord viſcount Beau-

---

[1] MS. Dodſw. CXV. 234; ex bundello Eſcaet. de anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii quadrageſimo-nono, parte 1, N° 46.

[2] Bridges, vol. I. p. 442.

[3] Eſch. 14 Ric. II. N° 9. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 18 Ric. II. N° 15. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 4 Hen. IV. N° 36. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 6 Hen. IV. N° 27. Leic.

[7] Harl. MSS. 1985. 27. fol. 257. a.

[8] See vol. I. p. xc.

[9] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 12 Hen. VI. N° 22. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 13 Hen. VI. N° 23. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 18 Hen. VI.

[13] Eſch. 22 Hen. VI. N° 36. Leic.

[14] Mr. Burton, p. 30, ſays, this Thomas Erdington was attainted in 1467; and that the king then granted it to William lord Haſtings; but this is uncertain. See Dugdale's Warwickſhire, 1730, vol. II. p. 891. b.

[15] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.

mont, to William Haſtings his chamberlain[1]; and again, 9 Aug. 1467, granted divers lands and poſſeſſions at Barrow, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of William Beaumont, to the ſame William Haſtings, to hold of the king and his heirs by homage only, in lieu of all ſervice[2]. On the attainder of lord Haſtings in June 1483, this lordſhip and all his immenſe eſtates reverted to the crown; and, on inquiſition, it was found that Edward late king of England, by his letters patent, bearing date at Weſtminſter, 9 Aug. 7 Edw. IV. had granted the manor of Barrow to William lord Haſtings, deceaſed; that it was held of the king by homage only; and that the ſaid William lord Haſtings was alſo ſeiſed of ten meſſuages, 6 virgates of land, 10 acres of meadow, 20 of paſture, 100 acres of wood, and 40*s.* rent in Barrow[3]: all which, on the acceſſion of king Henry VII, in conſideration of the laſt lord's ſervices, were reſtored, Nov. 22, 1485, to his ſon ſir Edward Haſtings, father of George the firſt earl of Huntingdon of that name, who died lord thereof in 1534[4]; as did his ſon Francis, the ſecond earl, June 20, 1561; and two grandſons, Francis the third earl, Dec. 14, 1595; and George the fourth earl, Dec. 30, 1604; who is ſtated to have died ſeiſed, inter alia, of the manor of Barrow, then of the annual value of £66. 13*s.* 9½*d.* and held of the king, as of the fee of Cheſter, by fealty only; and, Francis lord Haſtings his ſon and heir being then dead, Henry earl of Huntingdon (then aged 18 years and 6 months) was his grandſon and heir. He held alſo the manors of Loughborough (worth 133*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*); with Aſhby de la Zouch, Evington, Langham, Gopſal, Packington, Belton, Thringſton, and Oſgathorpe, with Alton Grange, Donington Park, the hundred of Framland, and a ninth part of the honour of Winton[5].

Walter Kebell, eſq. died July 31, 1524, ſeiſed, inter alia, of lands at Barrow ſuper Sore[6].

Ralph Marſhall died May 10, 1543, ſeiſed of ſome meſſuages and lands at Barrow, held under the earl of Huntingdon, on a rent of 12*s.*; but by what ſervice was unknown; and Thomas his ſon and heir was aged 16. He held alſo ſome meſſuages and lands at Hathern, under Henry marquis of Dorſet, as of the manor of Shepeſhed, by the fourth part of a knight's fee, and a rent of 66*s.* 8*d.*; and at Rothley, under the priory of St. John of Jeruſalem, as of the manor of Rothley ſoke, by a rent of 7*s.*[7] The deſcendants of this family were long after poſſeſſors of property in this pariſh, and alſo at Sileby and Burton on the Woulds.

In 1564, there were 64 families in Barrow; 60 in Quorndon; 40 in Mountſorrel; and 44 in Woodhouſe.

In 1567, this manor, which had been ſeized by the queen, was reſtored to John Hunt and others[8].

In 1580, the following friendly letter, relative to a claim of common right at Barrow, was ſent by ſir Walter Mildmay, chancellor of the Exchequer, to Adrian Stocks, eſq.

"After my verye hartie cōmendacōns unto you. The inhabitants of Woodhouſe in Leiceſterſhire, whereof divers be her majeſties tenaunts, as I am informed, doe pretend to have common of paſture, for certaine ſpace of wynter-tymes, in dyvers parcels of land, in the pariſh of Barrow, in the ſame ſhiere, belonginge to Adrian Farneham, ſonne and heire of Thomas Farneham, of Querndon, eſquier, deceaſed; and greate ſuite and debate in lawe ys like to inſue thereuppon, to the vexacōn and diſquietnes and hyndraunce of both partyes, which mighte or were better to be prevented by ſome good meanes beforehand. Theis are therefore moſt hartelie to deſire you (the rather at my requeſte) to take ſome ſuche gentleman as you think moſte meete to be aſſiſtaunt unto you for that purpoſe, and to call the ſaid parties before you, and, by their aſſents, to take ſome ſuche order in the premiſſes as maie not onelie ſtaie trouble and vexacōn in lawe betwene them, but alſo be for the eaſe, profit, and quietnes of the ſaid parties: for it is ſignified unto me, that the title of the ſaid inhabitaunts to the ſaid common is verye doubtfull and queſtionable; and that ſome other good waye, with your helpe, mighte be taken to their ſatisfaction, and more to their proffit than the ſaid common would be, and to the contentacōn of the ſaid Adrian, in his mynoritie nowe beinge; to whome, I praye you, ſhowe your friendſhippe and furderaunce in anie reſpecte that maie pleaſe him therein, without the hinderaunce of the ſaid inhabitaunts. And what friendſhip you ſhowe to the ſaid Adrian for my ſake, I will gladly requite the ſame, as occaſion hereafter ſhall ſerve; as knoweth God, whoe have you in his kepinge. From London, this vith of Februarye, 1580.

Your veary loving freinde, Wa. Mildmay.

To my verye freinde Mr. Adrian Stocks,
Eſquier, at Beaumanor."

Certain lands in Barrow upon Soar were let to ſir George Haſtings, knt. by crown-leaſe dated 20 June, 1584, at the yearly rent of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*[9]

In 1595, a purchaſe of 141 acres of land in Barrow and Quorndon was made by William Heyrick, eſq. of Beaumanor; who bought at the ſame time the great and ſmall tithes of Quorndon and Mountſorell; and appointed Richard Rabye, of Beaumanor, Sept. 15, 1597, his attorney, to receive rents of all the tenants of Barrow, Quorndon, Woodthorp, Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, Loughborrow, and Mountſorell, all holding of the manor of Beaumanor.

In 1608, ſir William Herrick purchaſed, from Juſtinian Povey and George Warde, for 144*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* the fee-farm rents of Barrow; and in 1614 he held, under a leaſe from the Crown, certain Concealed Lands in that lordſhip, at an annual rent of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* In the ſame year, he paid 36*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* for the charge of paſſing the rectory of Barrow under the great ſeal[10].

William Judſon, who made his will July 12, died Aug. 1, 1619, poſſeſſed of one cuſtomary meſſuage and 32 acres of land in Barrow, parcel of the manor, and held of the king, on a rent of 5*s.* by knight's ſervice. He held alſo another cloſe and certain lands there, by the like ſervice, at a rent of 20*d.* By his wife Cecilia he had two ſons; William, who died an infant; Thomas, aged 6 years and 2 months; and one daughter, Philippa[11].

About the middle of the ſeventeenth century the following caſe was ſtated, by Mr. Coppin, to Serjeant Ellis:

"The towne of Barrow ſuꝑ Soare hath in it divers feilds, which doe lye open and cōmonable; there is an ancient cuſtome in the towne, that all ſuch ꝑſons as live in ancient meſſuages or cottages have cōmon in the feilds for their cōmonable cattle at cōmonable tymes in the yeare, though they have noe land belonging to their houſes; and it is alledged, that they which have land in the feilds are to have noe cōmon, unleſs they have houſes alſo. A. hath in the feilds 96 acres of land, but hath no houſe: his lands have large hades and more graſſe-ground than any other men's land; and the reſt of the landholders doe cōmon upon his land, but doe deny him to have any cōmon, he or any before him (that wee can remember) not haveing made uſe of any cōmon yet: Qu. whether A. hath not right to cōmon according to the ꝓportion of his land? and whether he may not make uſe of cōmon upon other men's lands, as well as they doe upon his? or whether (if he putts his cattle upon his owne land firſt, if they goe upon other men's,) it ſhall be a treſpaſſe? (It was once in the Crown.) In caſe he hath noe cōmon, whether he may not plow up his hades?"

Anſwer. "In this caſe of cōmon right, he ought to have common upon other men's lands, as well as they upon his: but ſuch a cuſtome, or p̃ſumption, that none ſhall have cōmon, except he have an houſe, is good; for, it may have a reaſonable commencement.

I conceive he may plow upp his hades. W. Ellys[12]."

---

[1] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. pars 2. m. 18.

[2] Pat. 7 Edw. IV. pars 1.

[3] Eſch. 1 Ric. III. N° 32. Leic.

[4] MS. Chetwynd.

[5] Inq. at Aſhby de la Zouch, 5 Jac. I; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 200.

[6] Inq. 27 Nov. 14 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) p. 138.

[7] Inq. at Market Boſworth, 27 Nov. 34 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. II. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 25.

[8] Hil. Rec. 9 Eliz. Rot. 9.

[9] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[10] From the original receipts.

[11] Inq. at Leiceſter, 9 Jan. 9 Charles I; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. II. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 322.

[12] Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 290.

PEDIGREE of QUINCY, COMIN, and BEAUMONT.

Saher de Quincy, 1190.=Maud de St. Lis.

1. Robert de Quincy, 1194.= . . . . .

Hawiſe, ſiſter and coheir of Ranulph earl of Cheſter; firſt wife.=1. Saher de Quincy[1], created earl of Wincheſter 1207; died in Paleſtine 1220.=Margaret, dau of Robert Blanchmains earl of Leiceſter, and ſiſter and coheir of Robert Fitzparnell, died 1234.

1. Robert lord Quincy, eldeſt ſon, being in the Holy land at his father's death, his younger brother ſucceeded to the title.=Hawiſe, 4th dau. of Hugh Cevelioc earl of Cheſter, counteſs of Lincoln.

1. Arabella, marr. to ſir Rich. Harcourt, knt of Stanton Harcourt, Oxon, and Ellenhall, Staff. and alſo of Boſworth by his wife; from whom Harcourt of Boſworth and Ellenhall, and the preſent earl of Harcourt.

2. Hawiſe, married Hugh de Vere earl of Oxford, from whom the other earls of the name.

2. Roger de Quincy[2], earl of Wincheſter, died April 25, 1264.=Helen, dau. and coheir of Alan earl of Galloway, lord conſtable of Scotland.

3. Robert junior, died 1257.=Helen, dau. of Leoline prince of Wales, and widow of John le Scot earl of Huntingdon and Cheſter.

Margaret, dau. and heir; re-married to Walter Marſhall earl of Pembroke.=John Lacy, conſtable of Cheſter, and earl of Lincoln in right of his wife.

1. Margaret, married to William de Ferrers earl of Derby; by whom the lords Ferrers of Groby and Chartley.
2. Helen, marr. to Alan lord Zouch baron of Aſhby; died 1296.

3. Elizabeth de Quincy, dau. and coheir.=Alexander Comin, earl of Bucquan.

1. A nun.

2. Joan, dau. and coheir.=Humphrey Bohun, ſon of Humph. earl of Hereford, died ſ. p.

3 Margaret, ſole heir at laſt.=Baldwyn lord Wake, died 1282.

1. John Comin, earl of Bucquan, died ſ. p.

2. Alexander Comin, earl of Bucquan.= . . . . .

Henry lord Beaumont, fourth ſon to Lewis lord Beaumont of France, heir to his ſiſter Iſabel de Veſcy, baron of Folkingham, co. Lincoln, and earl of Bucquan in right of his wife; died 1340.=1. Alice, dau. and coheir, died 1349.

2 Katharine, married to David earl of Athol in Scotland.

3. Margaret, married to the earl of Roſs in Scotland.

1. John lord Beaumont, died 1342, æt. 24.=Eleanor, ſiſter of Henry earl of Lancaſter grandſon to king Henry III.

2. Thomas Beaumont, heir to his mother 1349.

Elizabeth.=Nicholas lord Audley, died July 22, 1391, ſ. p.

Iſabel.=Henry, duke of Lancaſter, died 1361.

Henry lord Beaumont, æt. 2 on the death of his father; died 1370.=Margaret, dau. of John de Vere earl of Oxford.=Nicholas de Lovaine, 2d huſband.=Sir John Devereux, 3d huſband.

Katharine, dau. and heir of ſir Thomas Everingham, knt. of Laxton, co. Nott 1ſt wife.=John lord Beaumont, K. G. died 1397.=Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Mowbray, earl marſhall; 2d wife.

1. Henry lord Beaumont, died 1427.=Elizabeth, dau of William lord Willoughby of Ereſby.

2. Sir Thomas Beaumont, knt. of Cole Orton, lord of Baſqueville in Normandy 1427.=Philippa, dau. and heir of ſir Thomas Maureward, of Cole Orton, knt.

3. Richard.

Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Will. Phelip lord Bardolph and Joan his wife, dau. and heir of Thomas Bardolph, of Wormgey, Norfolk; died 1441.=1. John viſct. Beaumont, K. G. and lord high chancellor of England, æt. 3 on the death of his father; ſlain at the battle of Northampton, 1460, on the part of the king.

2. Henry Beaumont, of Wedneſbury, co. Staff. eſq= . . . .

Henry Beaumont, of Wedneſbury, eſq. in right of his wife.=Joan, dau. and heir to William Leventhorpe, of Wedneſbury, eſq.

1. John Beaumont, of Cole Orton, from whom deſcended Thomas viſcount Beaumont.

2. Tho. Beaumont, of Thrinkſton, co. Leic. from whom deſcended the Beaumonts of Gracedieu.

1. Henry, died 1442.

Joan, dau. to Humphrey Stafford, duke of Buckingham, firſt wife.=2. William viſcount Beaumont and lord Bardolph, attainted 1461; reſtored 1485; died without iſſue Dec. 20, 1507.=Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Scrope, 2d wife.

1. Mary, d. unmarried.

2. Joan, ſiſter and heir.=John lord Lovel, of Tichmarſh.

Henry Beaumont, eſq.=Eleanor, dau. of John Sutton lord Dudley.

Sir Henry Beaumont, knt.= . . . .

Francis viſcount Lovel, attainted 1485; killed at the battle of Stoke near Newark, 1487.
1. Joan, married to ſir Brian Stapleton[3], knt. of Carleton, co. York; from whom the Stapletons there.
2. Frideſwide, married to ſir Edward Norris, knt. of Yaſenden in Berks; from whom lord Norris of Rycote.

Sir John Beaumont, knt.= . . . .

1. Joan, dau. and coheir, with whom Tinmore, Staffordſhire; wife to Will. Babington, eſq. a younger ſon of Thomas Babington, of Dethick, co. Derby, eſq. by whom the Babingtons of Tinmore.
2. Dorothy, married Humphrey Comberford, of Comberford, co. Staff. eſq. and of Wedneſbury in right of his wife; by whom the Comberfords there.
3. Eleanor, married Humphrey Babington, brother to William; from whom the Babingtons of Rothley.

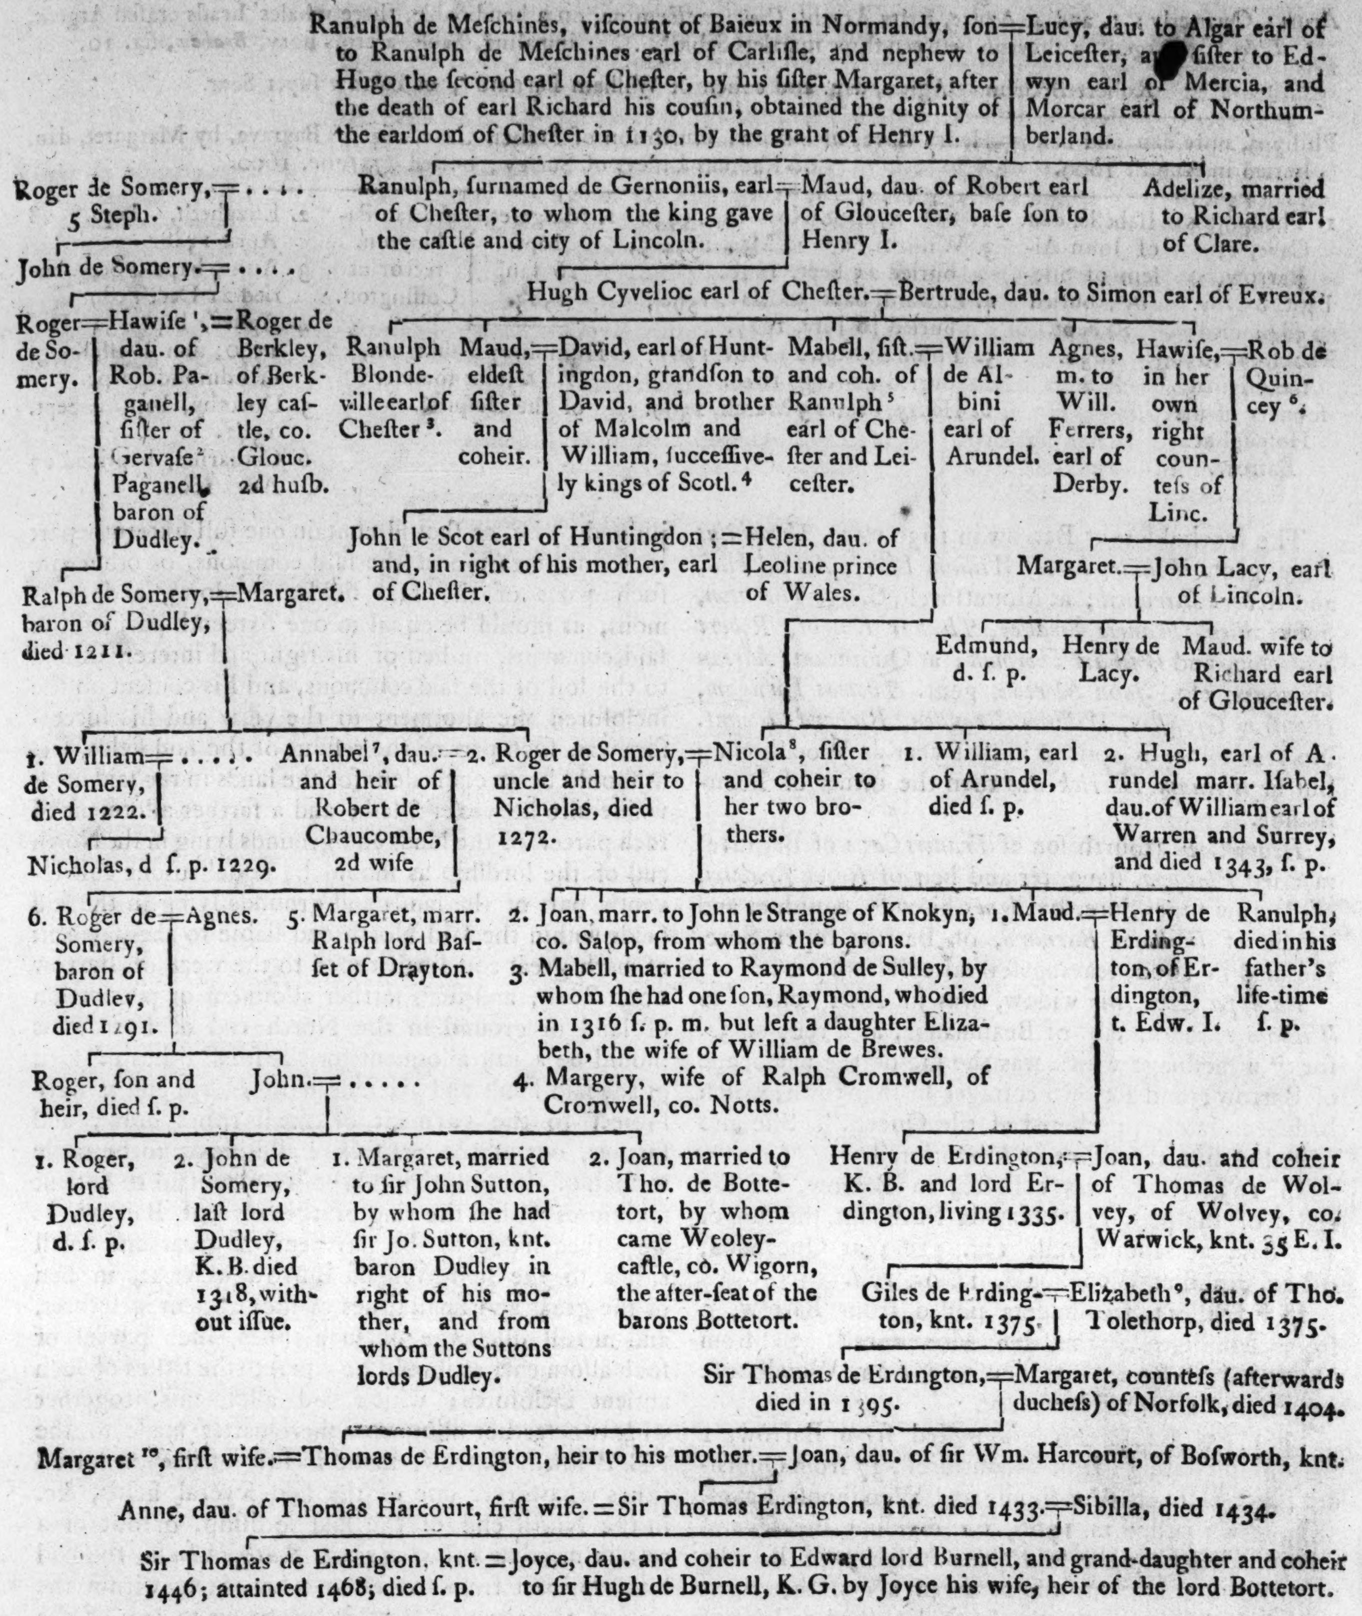
---

[1] Saher de Quincy, in 1205, fined to the king 5000 marks, that he might have the whole Honour of Grenteſmainell, with the appurtenances; and 1000 marks, that the king would commit to him all the land which the earl of Leiceſter had in England; and in 1207 entered into a concord with Simon de Montfort, for a diviſion of the lands which had belonged to Robert earl of Leiceſter. Madox, Baron. Angl. pp. 34. 35.

[2] See a curious law-caſe, concerning a claim of this earl, for the extenſion of the Honour of Leiceſter, in Madox, ibid. p 170.

[3] Great grandfather to Richard Stapleton; whoſe ſon Gilbert married Ellen daughter of ſir John Gaſcoigne of Bernebow." Gaſcoigne, MS Notes on Burton.

PEDIGREE of ERDINGTON of BARROW.



Ranulph de Meſchines, viſcount of Baieux in Normandy, ſon to Ranulph de Meſchines earl of Carliſle, and nephew to Hugo the ſecond earl of Cheſter, by his ſiſter Margaret, after the death of earl Richard his couſin, obtained the dignity of the earldom of Cheſter in 1130, by the grant of Henry I. = Lucy, dau. to Algar earl of Leiceſter, a[illegible] ſiſter to Edwyn earl of Mercia, and Morcar earl of Northumberland.

Roger de Somery, = ... 5 Steph.

John de Somery. = ...

Roger de Somery. = Hawiſe[1], dau. of Rob. Paganell, ſiſter of Gervaſe[2] Paganell, baron of Dudley. = Roger de Berkley, of Berkley caſtle, co. Glouc. 2d huſb.

Ralph de Somery, baron of Dudley, died 1211. = Margaret.

Ranulph, ſurnamed de Gernoniis, earl of Cheſter, to whom the king gave the caſtle and city of Lincoln. = Maud, dau. of Robert earl of Glouceſter, baſe ſon to Henry I.

Adelize, married to Richard earl of Clare.

Hugh Cyvelioc earl of Cheſter. = Bertrude, dau. to Simon earl of Evreux.

Ranulph Blondeville earl of Cheſter[3].

Maud, eldeſt ſiſter and coheir. = David, earl of Huntingdon, grandſon to David, and brother of Malcolm and William, ſucceſſively kings of Scotl.[4]

Mabell, ſiſt. and coh. of Ranulph[5] earl of Cheſter and Leiceſter. = William de Albini earl of Arundel.

Agnes, m. to Will. Ferrers, earl of Derby.

Hawiſe, in her own right counteſs of Linc. = Rob de Quincey[6].

John le Scot earl of Huntingdon; and, in right of his mother, earl of Cheſter. = Helen, dau. of Leoline prince of Wales.

Margaret. = John Lacy, earl of Lincoln.

Edmund, d. ſ. p.

Henry de Lacy.

Maud. wife to Richard earl of Glouceſter.

1. William de Somery, died 1222. = ...

Nicholas, d ſ. p. 1229.

Annabel[7], dau. and heir of Robert de Chaucombe, 2d wife = 2. Roger de Somery, uncle and heir to Nicholas, died 1272. = Nicola[8], ſiſter and coheir to her two brothers.

1. William, earl of Arundel, died ſ. p.

2. Hugh, earl of Arundel marr. Iſabel, dau. of William earl of Warren and Surrey, and died 1343, ſ. p.

6. Roger de Somery, baron of Dudley, died 1291. = Agnes.

5. Margaret, marr. Ralph lord Baſſet of Drayton.

2. Joan, marr. to John le Strange of Knokyn, co. Salop, from whom the barons.

3. Mabell, married to Raymond de Sulley, by whom ſhe had one ſon, Raymond, who died in 1316 ſ. p. m. but left a daughter Elizabeth, the wife of William de Brewes.

4. Margery, wife of Ralph Cromwell, of Cromwell, co. Notts.

1. Maud. = Henry de Erdington, of Erdington, t. Edw. I.

Ranulph, died in his father's life-time ſ. p.

Roger, ſon and heir, died ſ. p.

John. = ...

1. Roger, lord Dudley, d. ſ. p.

2. John de Somery, laſt lord Dudley, K. B. died 1318, without iſſue.

1. Margaret, married to ſir John Sutton, by whom ſhe had ſir Jo. Sutton, knt. baron Dudley in right of his mother, and from whom the Suttons lords Dudley.

2. Joan, married to Tho. de Bottetort, by whom came Weoley-caſtle, co. Wigorn, the after-ſeat of the barons Bottetort.

Henry de Erdington, K. B. and lord Erdington, living 1335. = Joan, dau. and coheir of Thomas de Wolvey, of Wolvey, co. Warwick, knt. 35 E. I.

Giles de Erdington, knt. 1375. = Elizabeth[9], dau. of Tho. Tolethorp, died 1375.

Sir Thomas de Erdington, died in 1395. = Margaret, counteſs (afterwards ducheſs) of Norfolk, died 1404.

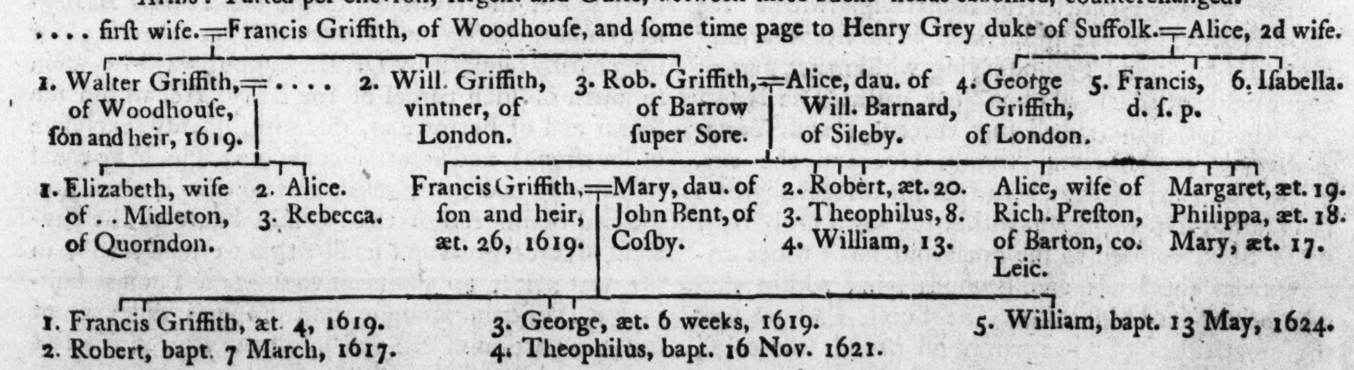
Margaret[10], firſt wife. = Thomas de Erdington, heir to his mother. = Joan, dau. of ſir Wm. Harcourt, of Boſworth, knt.

Anne, dau. of Thomas Harcourt, firſt wife. = Sir Thomas Erdington, knt. died 1433. = Sibilla, died 1434.

Sir Thomas de Erdington, knt. 1446; attainted 1468; died ſ. p. = Joyce, dau. and coheir to Edward lord Burnell, and grand-daughter and coheir to ſir Hugh de Burnell, K. G. by Joyce his wife, heir of the lord Bottetort.

Pedigree of GRIFFITH, of BARROW. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Parted per chevron, Argent and Gules, between three bucks' heads caboſhed, counterchanged.



.... firſt wife. = Francis Griffith, of Woodhouſe, and ſome time page to Henry Grey duke of Suffolk. = Alice, 2d wife.

1. Walter Griffith, of Woodhouſe, ſon and heir, 1619. = ...

2. Will. Griffith, vintner, of London.

3. Rob. Griffith, of Barrow ſuper Sore. = Alice, dau. of Will. Barnard, of Sileby.

4. George Griffith, of London.

5. Francis, d. ſ. p.

6. Iſabella.

1. Elizabeth, wife of .. Midleton, of Quorndon.

2. Alice.

3. Rebecca.

Francis Griffith, ſon and heir, æt. 26, 1619. = Mary, dau. of John Bent, of Coſby.

2. Robert, æt. 20.

3. Theophilus, 8.

4. William, 13.

Alice, wife of Rich. Preſton, of Barton, co. Leic.

Margaret, æt. 19.

Philippa, æt. 18.

Mary, æt. 17.

1. Francis Griffith, æt. 4, 1619.

2. Robert, bapt. 7 March, 1617.

3. George, æt. 6 weeks, 1619.

4. Theophilus, bapt. 16 Nov. 1621.

5. William, bapt. 13 May, 1624.

---

[1] Rot. Pip. 1 Hen. II.

[2] Dugdale, p. 612, calls him John.

[3] Twice married; but died in 1232, ſ. p.

[4] King Richard I, in 1189, "conceſſit & confirmavit comiti David fratri regis Scotie, & heredibus ſuis, & hominibus ſuis de honore de Huntedon, ut habeant omnes libertates quas David rex Scotie, avus predicti David comitis, & Malcolmus frater ejuſdem David comitis, habuerunt tempore Henrici avi domini regis, & tempore regis Henrici patris noſtri." Cart. Antiq. X. n. 29.

[5] This Ranulph earl of Cheſter was never earl of Leiceſter; for Robert Blanchmaines lived until 1191 earl of Leiceſter; and Ranulph Blundevile died in the 17th year of Henry III. 1253.

[6] Son and heir of Saher earl of Winton.

[7] Relict of ſir Gilbert Segrave, of Segrave, and mother of ſir Nicholas Segrave, from whom the lords Segrave.

[8] Her three ſiſters and coheirs were, Mabell, wife of Robert de Gatteſhul; Iſabel, wife of John Fitzallen, knt.; Ciceley, wife of Roger de Montalto.

[9] Widow of Giles de Erdington, died 49 Edw. III. leaving Thomas Erdington, her ſon and heir, 27 years old.

[10] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. n. 46.

PEDIGREE of CAVE, of BARROW.

Arms: Quarterly; 1. and 4. Azure, fretty Argent, Cave; 2. Ermine, on a bend Sable, three whales' heads eraſed Argent, Liſley; 3. Argent, a chevron between three martlets Sable, ...; impaling, Sable, a croſs flory, Braham, fig. 10.

Robert Braham.=Agnes, dau. and coheir of William Barnard [1], of Barrow ſuper Soar.

Philippa, only dau. and heir; buried in Auguſt 1609.=Henry Cave, of Barrow, fourth ſon of Francis Cave, eſq. of Bagrave, by Margaret, dau. of Thomas Liſley, of Surrey; buried 27 June, 1600.

1. Theophilus Cave, of Barrow, bapt. 8 Nov. 1584; died March 31, 1656; the original founder of the Hoſpital at Barrow.=Iſabella, dau. of John Allen, of Sileby; buried 30 Sept. 1650.

2. Robert, bapt. Nov. 14, 1593.
3. William, bapt. 14 Mar. 1594-5; buried 25 Sept. 1648.
4. Edward, bapt 30 May, 1596; buried 16 July, 1627.
5. Thomas, bapt. 27 Nov. 1597; buried 20 Aug. 1646.
6. Henry, bapt. 25 March, 1599.

1. Margaret, bapt. 16 Jan. 1585.=Adrian Babington, rector of Coſſington.

Humphrey Babington, D. D. joint founder of the Hoſpital.

2. Elizabeth, bapt. 28 April 1588.
3. Anne, bapt. 4 Sept. buried 21 Dec. 1589.
4. Agnes, bapt. 31 Jan. 1590; mar. Will. King, of Edmondthorpe.
5. Dorothy, bapt. 4 Sept. 1592.
6. Catharine, baptized 27 Aug. 1600.

The freeholders at Barrow in 1630 were, Theophilus Cave, gent. William Love, William Lilley, Arnold Hill, and Robert Barnard; at Mountſorell, George Thornton, John Allen, Francis Smalley, Thomas Knight, Robert Scampton, and William Thorman; at Quorndon, Adrian Farnham, eſq. John Morton, gent. Thomas Farnham, Humfrey Greaſley, William Brandon, Richard Blount. No freeholder is noticed in that year at Woodhouſe; but ſir William Herrick was then the owner of Beaumanor.

Henry Cave (fourth ſon of Francis Cave of Bagrave) married Philippa, daughter and heir of Roger Braham, of Barrow ſuper Sore, by Agnes his wife, daughter and coheir of William Barnard, of Barrow ſuper Sore. He died in 1600, leaving ſeveral children.

Philippa Cave, his widow, was in 1601 tenant to William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, at a rent of 5*s*. for "a meſſuage which was the ſite of the parſonage of Barrow; and for two cottages in that town, which had been lately purchaſed of the Queen." She alſo rented of him the tithes in Mountſorell.

In 1655, there was collected in Barrow, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 18*s*. 8*d*.; at Mountſorell, 11*s*. 11*d*.; at Quorndon, 9*s*. 2*d*.; and at Woodhouſe, 1*l*. 9*s*. 10*d*.

In 1722, 41 freeholders polled from Barrow, 2 from Maplewell, 50 from Mountſorell, 38 from Quorndon, 8 from Woodhouſe, 3 from Woodhouſe Eaves, and 1 from Beaumanor.

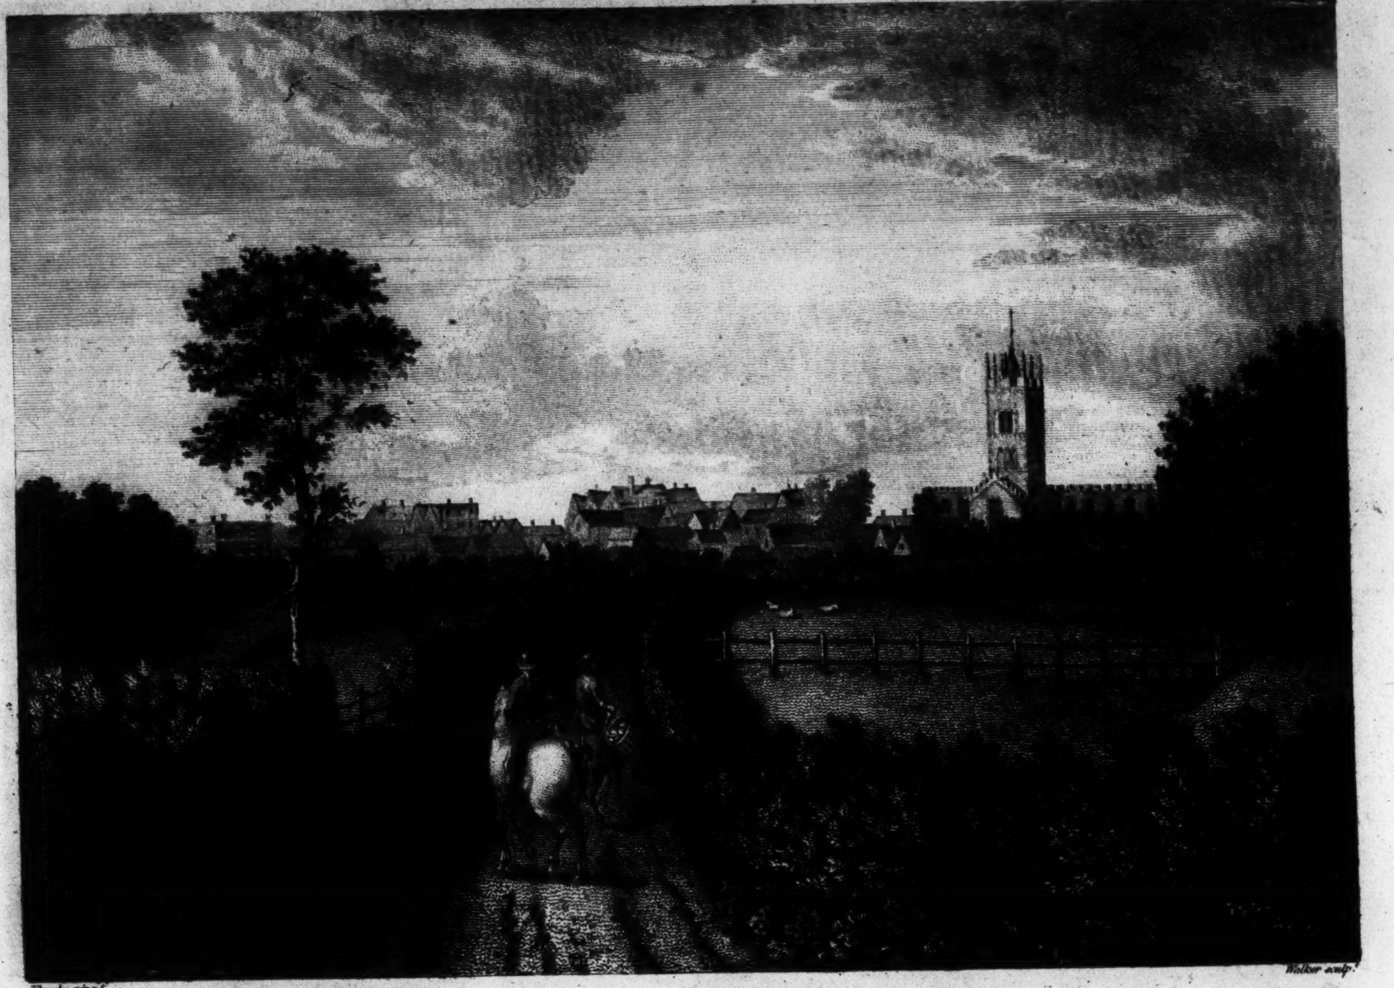
In 1775, 62 freeholders polled from Barrow, 1 from Maplewell, 51 from Mountſorell, 37 from Quorndon, and 12 from Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves.

In an act paſſed in 1766, for dividing the ſeveral open fields within the lordſhip or liberty of Barrow upon Soar, containing about 2250 acres, the right hon. Francis earl of Huntingdon is deſcribed as lord of the manor; the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars of St. John's College, Cambridge, as patrons of the vicarage; and the rev. William Burrow, the then vicar, in right of the vicarage, entitled to lands lying within the ſaid fields, and to the great and ſmall tithes ariſing from the lands and grounds lying within that part of the liberty of Barrow upon Soar called The North End (except as to a ſmall part thereof); and Thomas Babington, eſq. William Ruding, eſq. and the rev. Thomas Alleyne, clerk, as truſtees for certain charities founded by Dr. Babington within the town of Barrow upon Soar, entitled to the great and ſmall tithes ariſing from the lands and grounds lying within that part of the lordſhip called The South End (except the great tithes of ſome parts and parcels thereof); and the ſaid earl of Huntingdon, ſir Thomas Parkyns, bart. Joſeph Boyer, gent. and ſundry other perſons, were then the owners and proprietors of the lands and grounds lying within the ſaid fields and meadows, and entitled to the right of common in the ſaid commons in different proportions. The allotment to the earl of Huntingdon (excluſive of his allotment in lieu of land in the ſaid fields and meadows, and his right in the ſaid commons in reſpect of ſuch land and ground) was, ſuch parcel of ground in the ſaid commons, in ſuch parts or places thereof where limeſtone is adjudged to be, as ſhould contain one full ſixteenth part in ſtatute-meaſure of the ſaid commons, or otherwiſe ſuch parts of the ſaid fields, meadows, and commons, as ſhould be equal to one ſixteenth part of the ſaid commons, in lieu of his right and intereſt in and to the ſoil of the ſaid commons, and his conſent to the incloſure; the allotment to the vicar and his ſucceſſors was, ſuch part of the reſidue of the ſaid fields, &c. as ſhould be an equivalent for the lands in the ſaid fields whereunto he was entitled; and a farther allotment of ſuch parcels of the lands and grounds lying in the North end of the lordſhip as ſhould be equal to one full ſeventh part of the lands and grounds lying in the ſaid fields within the ſaid North end liable to the payment of both great and ſmall tithes to the vicar of Barrow upon Soar; and ſuch farther allotment or proportion of land or ground in the North end of Barrow as ſhould be a juſt allotment for the ſmall tithes of ſuch of the ſaid lands and grounds in the North end as were ſubject to the payment of ſmall tithes only; and farther, out of the reſpective allotments to be made to ſuch of the proprietors who were entitled to antient incloſures within the ring of the town of Barrow, as were then liable to the payment of great and ſmall tithes to the ſaid William Burrow as vicar, in lieu of the great and ſmall tithes of ſuch antient incloſures, and in full diſcharge of ſuch tithes, ſuch parcel of ſuch allotments as ſhould be equal to the tithes of ſuch antient incloſures; which ſaid allotments, together with the farther allotments thereinafter made to the ſaid William Burrow, to be in full ſatisfaction for all tithes whatſoever out of the ſaid ſeveral fields, &c. in the North end of the ſaid lordſhip, or out of a certain meadow called Barrow South Holm in the ſaid lordſhip, and from the antient incloſures within the ring of the town of Barrow belonging to any of the ſaid proprietors, whereunto the ſaid vicar was entitled, ſurplice-fees and the proper proportion of Eaſter dues and mortuaries always excepted. In the next place, the allotment to the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, as truſtees for the charity founded by Dr. Babington, was to contain ſo much of ſuch parcel of the lands, &c. within the South end of Barrow, as, quantity, quality (excluſive of limeſtone), and ſituation conſidered, ſhould be equal in value to one full ſeventh part of the lands within the ſaid South end of the lordſhip liable to the payment of both great and ſmall tithes to them; and, in the next place, an allotment to the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, of ſuch proportion of the reſidue of the land in the ſaid South end, ſubject only to the payment of ſmall tithes, as ſhould be a juſt allotment for all ſuch ſmall tithes; and a farther allotment for the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, truſtees of the ſaid charities, of ſuch proportion of certain parcels of ground within the ſaid meadow in the ſaid lordſhip of Barrow called Barrow South Holm which were liable to the payment of both great and ſmall tithes, as ſhould be a juſt allotment for ſuch tithes; and a farther allotment to the ſaid William Burrow, and the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and

---

[1] Mr. William Barnard was buried Jan. 16, 1587.

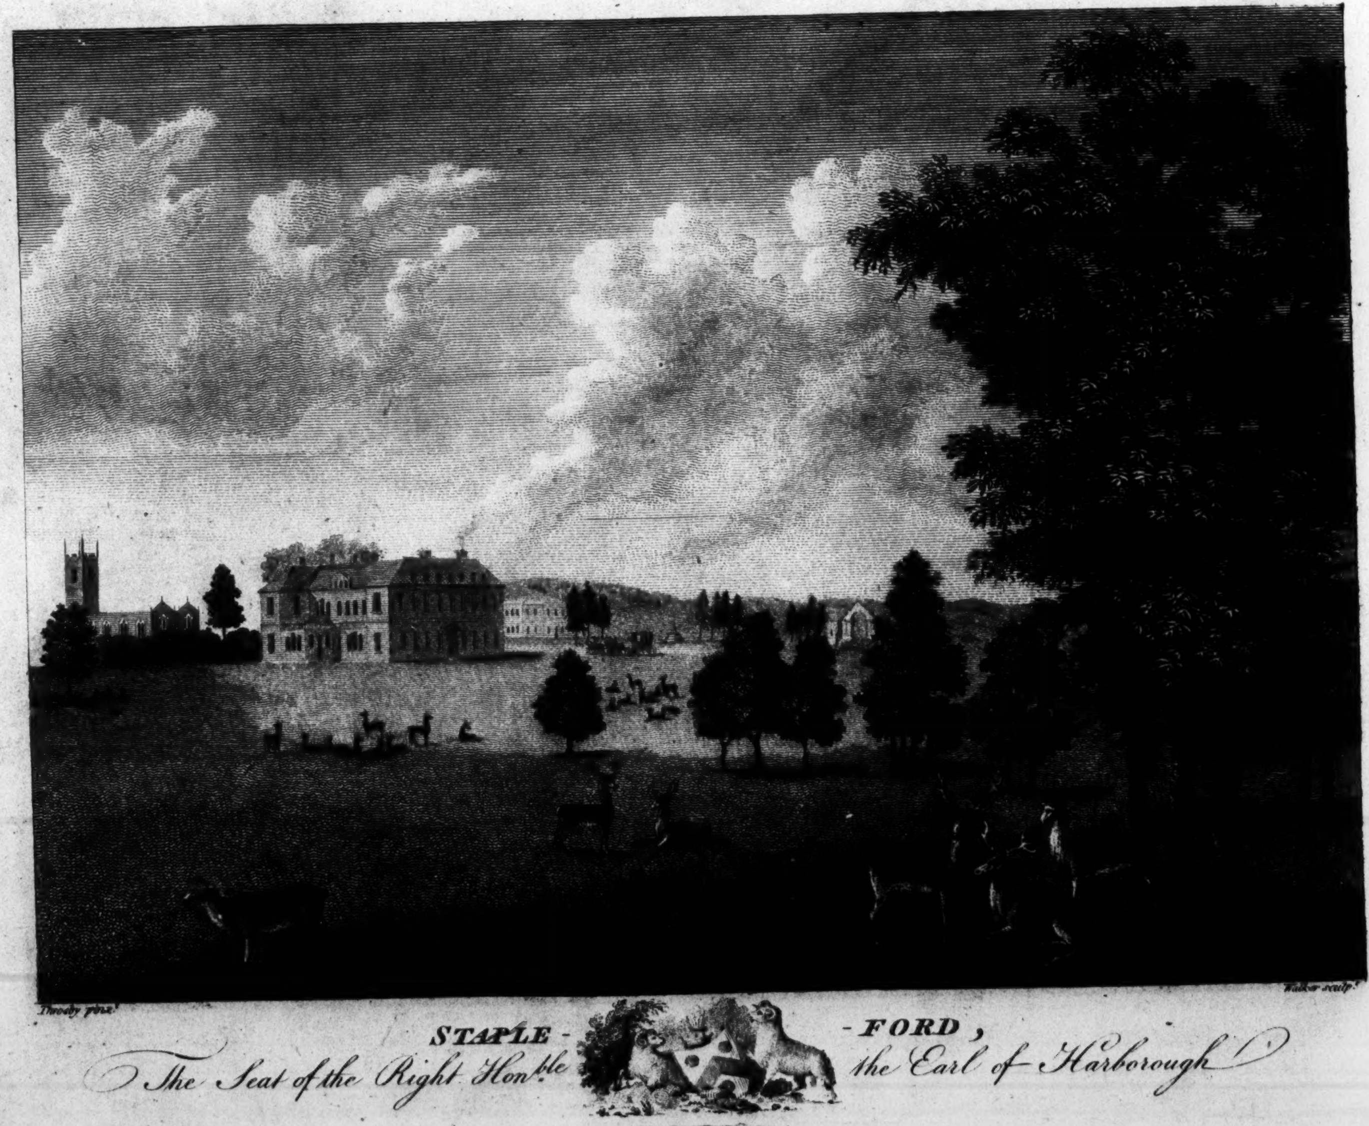
Vol. III. Pl. CLXIII. p. 69.



Throsby pinx.t

Walker sculp.t

MELTON MOWBRAY.



Throsby pinx.t

Walker sculp.t

STAPLE-FORD,

The Seat of the Right Hon.ble the Earl of Harborough.

Thomas Alleyne, in equal moieties, of ſuch parcel of the reſidue of the ground in the ſaid Barrow South Holm, which was liable only to the payment of ſmall tithes, as ſhould be a juſt allotment for ſuch ſmall tithes: And, out of the reſpective allotments to be made to the reſpective proprietors entitled to antient incloſures in the South end of Barrow upon Soar aforeſaid, which were liable to the payment of great and ſmall tithes to the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, to ſet out and allot to the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, as aforeſaid, in lieu of the great and ſmall tithes of ſuch antient incloſures, and in full diſcharge of ſuch tithes, ſuch parcel of ſuch reſpective allotments as ſhould be equal in value to the tithes of ſuch antient incloſures; ſuch ſaid ſeveral allotments to be in full ſatisfaction for all tithes ariſing from the lands intended to be incloſed in the ſaid South end of the lordſhip in Barrow South Holm, and the ſaid antient incloſures, ſubject and liable to the payment of the tithes to them as aforeſaid (ſuch proportion of the Eaſter offerings, mortuaries, and other money-payments, as were payable to the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, as truſtees as aforeſaid, always excepted), and in full diſcharge of the ſame: And then the allotments of the reſidue of the ſaid fields, meadows, and commons, unto and amongſt the ſaid earl, ſir Thomas Parkyns, ſir John Danvers, Joſeph Boyer, and Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne (as truſtees for the ſaid charities), and the reſt of the proprietors and owners of lands and grounds and right of common in the ſaid fields, in proportion to their reſpective ſhares, rights, and intereſt therein reſpectively: And in making the allotments to the ſaid William Burrow, and to the ſaid Thomas Babington, William Ruding, and Thomas Alleyne, in lieu of the ſaid ſeveral tithes, the commiſſioners to allot any parts of the lands intended to be incloſed, wherein limeſtone ſhould be adjudged to be, ſo as to conſider the value of the limeſtone therein, and make a deduction of land in ſuch allotments in proportion to the value of ſuch limeſtone. And, in caſe the allotment before provided to be made to the earl of Huntingdon in lieu of his right and intereſt in the ſoil of the ſaid commons ſhould be adjudged not to be a ſufficient and reaſonable allowance and ſatiſfaction for the ſame, then to ſet out for the ſaid earl, his heirs and aſſigns, ſuch farther allotment as ſhould be proper and reaſonable.

In the above-deſcribed act the earl of Huntingdon is ſtyled lord of the manor of Barrow, in right of Erdington manor [1], which he then poſſeſſed, and which is now the property of the earl of Moira. The greater part of the lordſhip, however, belongs to gentlemen-farmers, who occupy it themſelves, not only for the profits of huſbandry; but there are ſeveral who get up and burn large quantities of lime, which brings them no ſmall profit.

Several framework-knitters are alſo here employed.

In the autumn of 1795, an unfortunate event took place in this town, from the miſguided indignation of the populace on the removal of a load of corn at a time of great ſcarcity; when two perſons fell victims to their own raſhneſs, and ſome others were ſeverely wounded. The ſentiments of the pariſh on this occaſion were thus expreſſed in the public papers:

“ Barrow upon Sore, Sept. 29, 1795.

“ At a veſtry, held this day, it is agreed, That the thanks of this pariſh be given to the Leiceſter cavalry, and to the Rev. Philip Story and the Rev. Thomas Burnaby, His Majeſty's juſtices of the peace, for their ſucceſsful exertions in quelling the late riot here, and diſperſing the lawleſs mob in a manner they deſerved on account of their very inſulting and violent behaviour.

“ William Eaſton, vicar.
G. Perkins, } church-
Fra. Brotherhood, } wardens.
N. Bramley.
S. Beaumont.
George Tomſon.
Thomas Beaumont.
Thomas Stone.
Thomas Bradſhaw.
Tho. Chamberlain.
John Chapman.
William Beaumont.
Henry Beaumont.
Joſeph Haddon.”

Parish Registers.

The Regiſter-book for Barrow upon Soar begins in May 1563; William Ruſtat being then vicar; and is full of entries, and well preſerved, except that a few years during the unhappy troubles of the laſt century are wholly loſt.

Anne Braham buried Nov. 1, 1564.

William ſon of William Ruſtat, vicar, baptized Oct. 1, 1564; buried Jan. 18, 1564-5.

Barnabas Babington and Joan Sutton married Jan. 14, 1565-6.

Barnaby Babington buried June 7, 1566.

Euſtace Babington, of Mountſorell, buried Nov. 7, 1566.

Theophilus Braham baptized Nov. 16, 1573; buried Feb. 15, 1573-4.

Benjamin Braham baptized March 12, 1575.

William Burton and Anne Barnard married Aug. 9, 1575.

Thomas Cave buried May 24, 1583.

Theophilus Cave, ſon of Mr. Henry Cave, baptized Nov. 8, 1584.

William Barnard buried Jan. 16, 1587.

Thomas Hood and Alice Barnard married Jan. 19, 1588.

William Ruſtat, vicar of Barrow, buried Sept. 5, 1588.

Thomas Marſhall and Mary Hood married Jan. 26, 1589.

Robert Veſtue buried Aug. 15, 1591.

Henry Cave, gent. buried June 27, 1600.

Mr. Robert Braham buried in November 1600.

Richard Cave buried 24 Sept. 1605.

Philippa Cave, gentlewoman, buried in Auguſt 1609.

Robert Griffith buried 3 October, 1614.

Godfrey Herrick and Elizabeth Love married Jan. 21, 1624.

John ſon of Jeffrey Whatton, of Mapplewell, baptized Nov. 13, 1625.

Alice daughter of John Boſſe, of Mapplewell, baptized at Swithland, with licence, Oct. 22, 1626.

Mary daughter of Geoffrey Whatton baptized Jan. 7, 1627.

Euſtace Braham, of Quorndon, gent. buried March 31, 1627.

Alice daughter of John Swifte baptized May 5, 1627.

Margaret Whatton, daughter of Jeffrey Whatton, baptized April 10, 1632.

William Merwyn, of Woodhouſe, the ſon of Nicholas Merwyn, of Thornton, co. Leiceſter, married Margaret Whatton, daughter of Jeffry Whatton, of Woodhouſe aforeſaid, yeoman.

Clement Smalley and Bridget Fletcher married Jan. 15, 1633.

Elizabeth wife of Francis Smalley, of Mountſorell, buried Jan. 29, 1636.

Iſabel Grey, daughter of Thomas Grey, gent. and Eugenia his wife, baptized April 18, 1638.

Francis Varnam, ſon of John and Elizabeth his wife, baptized Feb. 18, 1645.

Thomas Cave, gent. buried Aug. 20, 1646.

Mary Varnam, daughter of John and Elizabeth his wife, baptized May 5, 1648.

William Cave, gent. buried Sept. 25, 1648.

Iſabel Cave, gentlewoman, buried Sept. 30, 1650.

John Moreton the younger, of Quorndon, gent. married Suſanna Raynes, of Stanford, co. Nottingham, Jan. 1, 1653.

Mrs. Barbara Farnham, the daughter of Edward Farnham, eſq. of Quorndon, was buried March 14, 1653.

October 6, 1653. This is to ſignify that, the day and year abovewritten, Thomas Buck, of Quorndon in this county, gent. was made regiſter for the pariſh of Barrow upon Soar, and took his oath before me for the executing of the ſaid office according to the act of parliament in that caſe made. Witneſs my hand, William Danvers.

The publication of a marriage between John Goodman, of Woodhouſe within the pariſh of Barrow upon Soar in the county of Leiceſter, and Elizabeth Carr, daughter of Daniel Carr, of Woodhouſe aforeſaid, being publiſhed three ſeveral Lord's days, at the cloſe of the morning exerciſe, in the public meeting-place of Quorndon commonly called the church; that is to ſay, the 11th of December, the 18th of December, alſo the 25th of December, in the year of our Lord God 1653; the aforeſaid John Goodman and Elizabeth Carr were married by William Danvers, of Swithland in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. a juſtice of peace of the ſame county; whereas publication was made as aforeſaid. William Danvers, Dec. 27, 1653.

---

[1] This antient manor extends alſo to the liberties of Quorn and Woodhouſe.

Edward Farnham, of Quorndon, eſq. was buried at Quorn Jan. 11, 1654.

Mr. George Willock, of Quorndon, was buried in Barrow church Feb. 26, 1654.

Phebe Farnham, the daughter of Edward Farnham, of Quorndon, eſq. born May 29, 1654.

A child of Thomas Raworth, of Mapplewell within the pariſh of Barrow upon Soar, born Nov. 14, 1654.

A marriage between John Beeſley, of the city of London, gent. and Mrs. Katharine Danvers, daughter of William Danvers, of Swithland, co. Leiceſter, eſq. March 26, 1655.

Benjamin Herick, the ſon of Mr. William Herick the younger, of Beaumanor, was born June 1, 1655.

Mrs. Anne Herick, the wife of Mr. William Herick the younger of Beaumanor, was buried at Woodhouſe June 6, 1655.

Peter Chaveney, the ſon of Mr. Peter Chaveney, was buried Sept. 4, 1655.

John Chaveney, the ſon of Peter Chaveney, gent. and Philippa his wife, was born Nov. 10, 1655.

Elizabeth, daughter of Ralph Smalley, of Mountſorell, and of Dorothy his wife, born Jan. 30, 1656.

Benjamin Farnham, the ſon of Edward Farnham, of Quorndon, eſq. and of Iſabel his wife, born July 15, 1656.

Robert Farnham, of Quorndon, clerk, buried Feb. 9, 1657.

The publication of a marriage between William Herick, of Beumanor, eſq. in the pariſh of Barrow upon Soar, and Mrs. Frances Millward, of St. Peter's pariſh, Nottingham, being publiſhed without contradiction in the pariſh-church of Barrow aforeſaid three ſeveral Lord's days at the cloſe of morning exerciſe, that is to ſay, on Sunday 8, Sunday 15, and Sunday 22, 1656; the aforeſaid William Herick and Frances Milward were married before Toplady, eſq. of Nottingham, juſtice of peace for the town aforeſaid, March 30, 1657.

Jeffry Bordman buried at Woodhouſe Sept. 3, 1658.

Frances Farnham, of Quorndon, buried Nov. 20, 1658.

William ſon of William Herrick, of Beaumanor, eſq. and Dorothy his wife, baptized Aug. 10, 1689.

Benjamin ſon of Robert Smalley, of Mountſorell, buried April 22, 1694.

Benjamin Bewicke, clerk, inſtituted March 29, 1701; inducted April 10, 1701.

[From 1701 to 1720 every page is ſigned by Mr. Bewicke; and in 1724 by Benjamin Bewicke and Ralph Heathcote.]

Ralph ſon of Ralph Heathcote, clerk[1], and Mary his wife, baptized Jan. 16, 1721.

Godfrey ſon of Ralph Heathcote, clerk, and Mary his wife, baptized March 20, 1723.

Sarah Marſhal, of Segrave, buried May 2, 1723.

Samuel Marſhal, of Burton Bandalls, buried May 15, 1724.

Charles ſon of Ralph Heathcote, clerk, and Mary his wife, was baptized Jan. 14, 1725; and buried March 10, 1726.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

This pariſh, as has been already noticed, has within it four towns; Barrow, Quorndon, Woodhouſe, and part of the town of Mountſorell; and every one of theſe towns hath its ſeveral diſtinct officers, as conſtables, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor; and every town hath its chapel, acknowledging Barrow to be the mother-church; and all theſe towns have, ever ſince the Statute of 43 Elizabeth for relief of the poor, agreed to keep their own poor, and not to caſt the pariſh together, according to the Statute.

The Rev. Dr. Humphrey Babington, vice-maſter of Trinity College, Cambridge, by his will dated in 1686, gave certain eſtates (amounting in 1786 to £201. 15*s*. 10*d*. a year) to erect an hoſpital at Barrow[2], for ſix poor men, widowers or antient bachelors[3]; five to be choſen out of Barrow, and one out of Quorndon. He died in 1691[4]; and the building was completed in 1694. See a view of it, Plate VII. fig. 2.

On the outſide of the gate: Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4, Argent, ten torteauxes, a label Azure, Babington; 2. and 3, Cave; Plate VII. fig. 14.

"Hoc quicquid ſit, in Deum pietatis, in pauperes charitatis monumentum,
Teſtamento ſuo legavit primùm, optimo exemplo, vir pius Theophilus Cave, de Barrow ſuper Sore, armiger, Summâque deindè fide, etiam teſtamento ſuo, extrui juſſit, datumque ſibi dedit, Humfridus Babington, hæres, S. T. B. coll. SS.
Trin. apud Cantab. vice-magiſter,
Abſolutum hoc ædificium quod vides, A.D.M.DC.XCIV."

On the inſide:

"Thomas Bywater, overſeer of the building of this hoſpital, 1694."

Rules, to be obſerved by the beadſmen in the Hoſpital, for the promotion of good order and peace.

1. That every beadſman ſhall regularly attend Morning and Evening Prayers.
2. That every beadſman ſhall, in his turn with the reſt, buy-in all proviſion ſufficient for the week; and that no one ſhall take out of the Hoſpital any of this proviſion without the conſent of the other ſaid beadſmen.
3. That they all breakfaſt together at 8 o'clock in ſummer, and 9 o'clock in winter; and dine at 12 o'clock.
4. That every beadſman be in the Hoſpital at night at proper time to ſup at 7 o'clock, attend Evening Prayers at 8 o'clock, and the doors to be locked up at 9 o'clock.
5. That, if any one of the ſaid beadſmen ſhould not think proper to conform himſelf according to theſe rules, or ſhould behave in a turbulent, riotous, diſorderly manner, the truſtees (according to the donor's will) will diſplace him, and put in ſome perſon of better behaviour in his room."

On two tables of benefactions in the church:

"Humphrey Babington, clerk, D. D. by his will[5] dated the 17th of Auguſt, 1686, for the glory of God, and that the name of his dear uncle, Theophilus Cave, deceaſed, and that the name and memory of his anceſtors might be preſerved in Barrow, did give and deviſe his eſtate in Barrow, Quorndon, and Mountſorrel, to ſix truſtees (being neighbouring gentlemen and divines) and their heirs, in truſt, out of the rents thereof to erect in Barrow an almſhouſe for ſix poor men, who ſhould be called the Beadſmen of Theophilus Cave, and ſhould have £8. a year for ever (to be paid weekly) for their maintenance; which beadſmen ſhould be all of them inhabitants of long continuance in Barrow and Quorndon, either widowers or antient batchelors; whereof five ſhould be choſen out of Barrow,

---

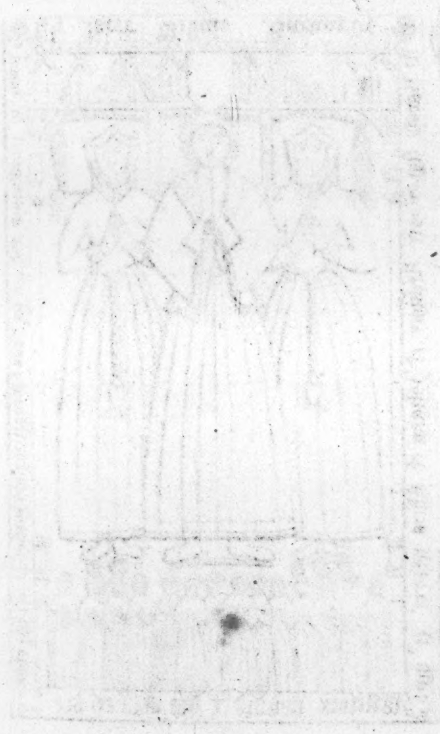
[1] Mr. Ralph Heathcote became curate of Barrow March 17, 1721. See an account of him, hereafter, under Sileby.

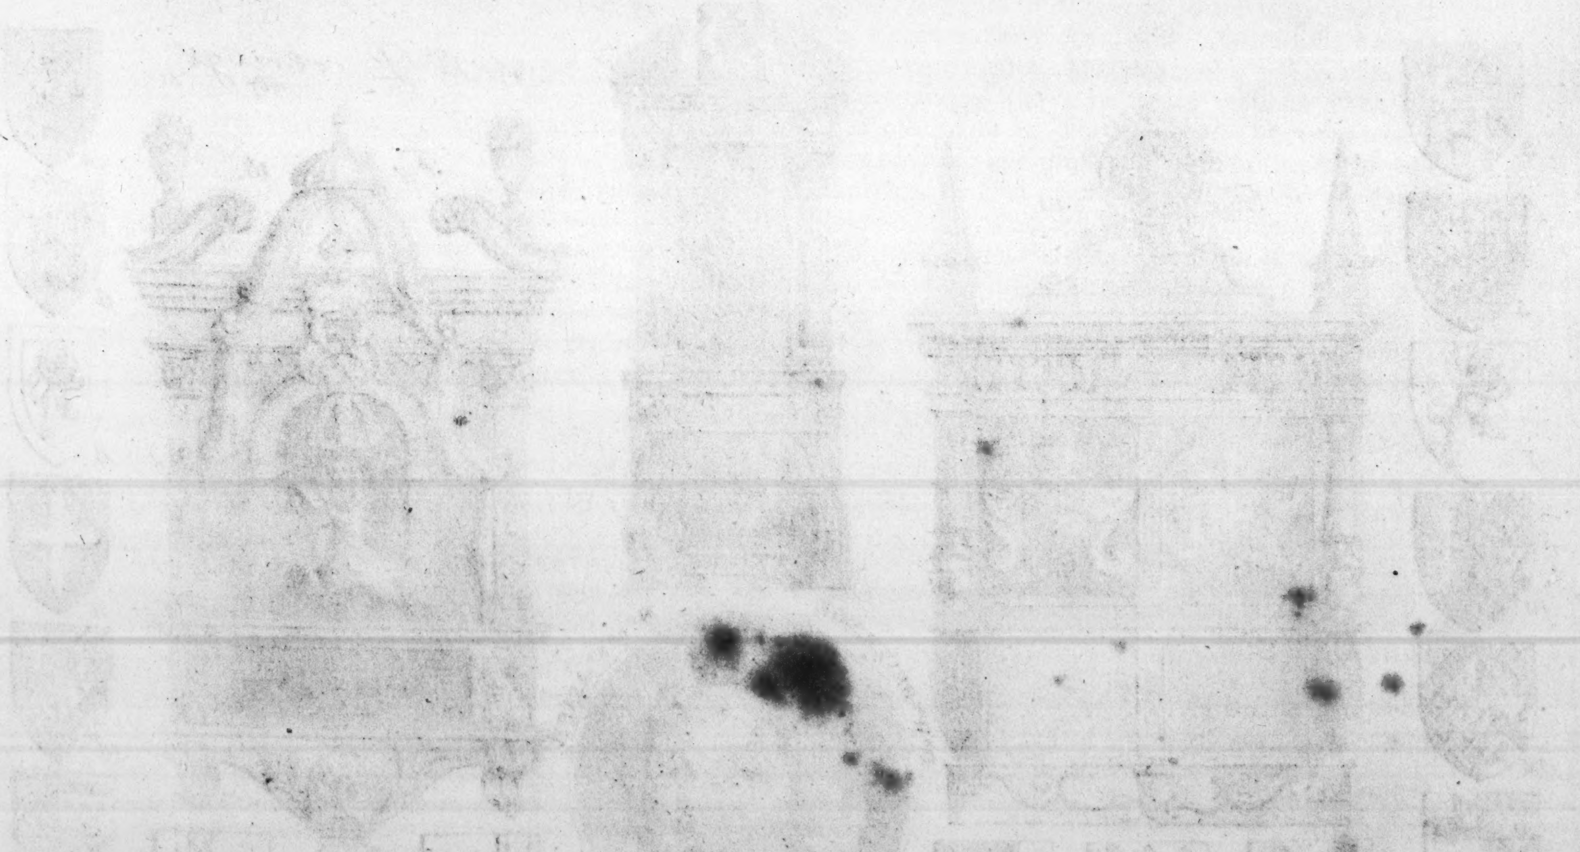
[2] An acknowledgement of a pound of pepper is paid to the lord of the manor of Beaumanor, by the truſtees of this Hoſpital, for a meſſuage and land formerly held by John Raye; and a roſe-bud for another meſſuage.

[3] "A foundation not very common," as Mr. Bray obſerves in his Tour, p. 99.

[4] He was buried in the chapel of Trinity College, with this epitaph: "D. O. M. HUMPHREDO BABINGTON, S. T. P. hujus Collegii vice-magiſtro; qui quantus vir fuerit, quàm probus, eruditus, magnificus (nobis præſertim) largiter beneficus, in archivis olim noſtris, interea lector, apud etiamnum ſuperſtites, hic et alibi quærat licet, quos bene merendo fecerit ſui memores, quibus utique deſideratiſſimus obiit, Jan. 4°, a° D'ni 1691, æt. 75." See vol. II. p. 684.

[5] See his hand-writing in vol. II. Plate CXV. fig. 20; and inſtructions for an earlier will, dated Sept. 15, 1679. He gave alſo 3*l*. 10*s*. "for a collation, or love-feaſt; and 10*s*. more for the tenant of the rectory, who was to have all the trouble of it."

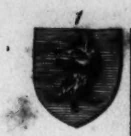


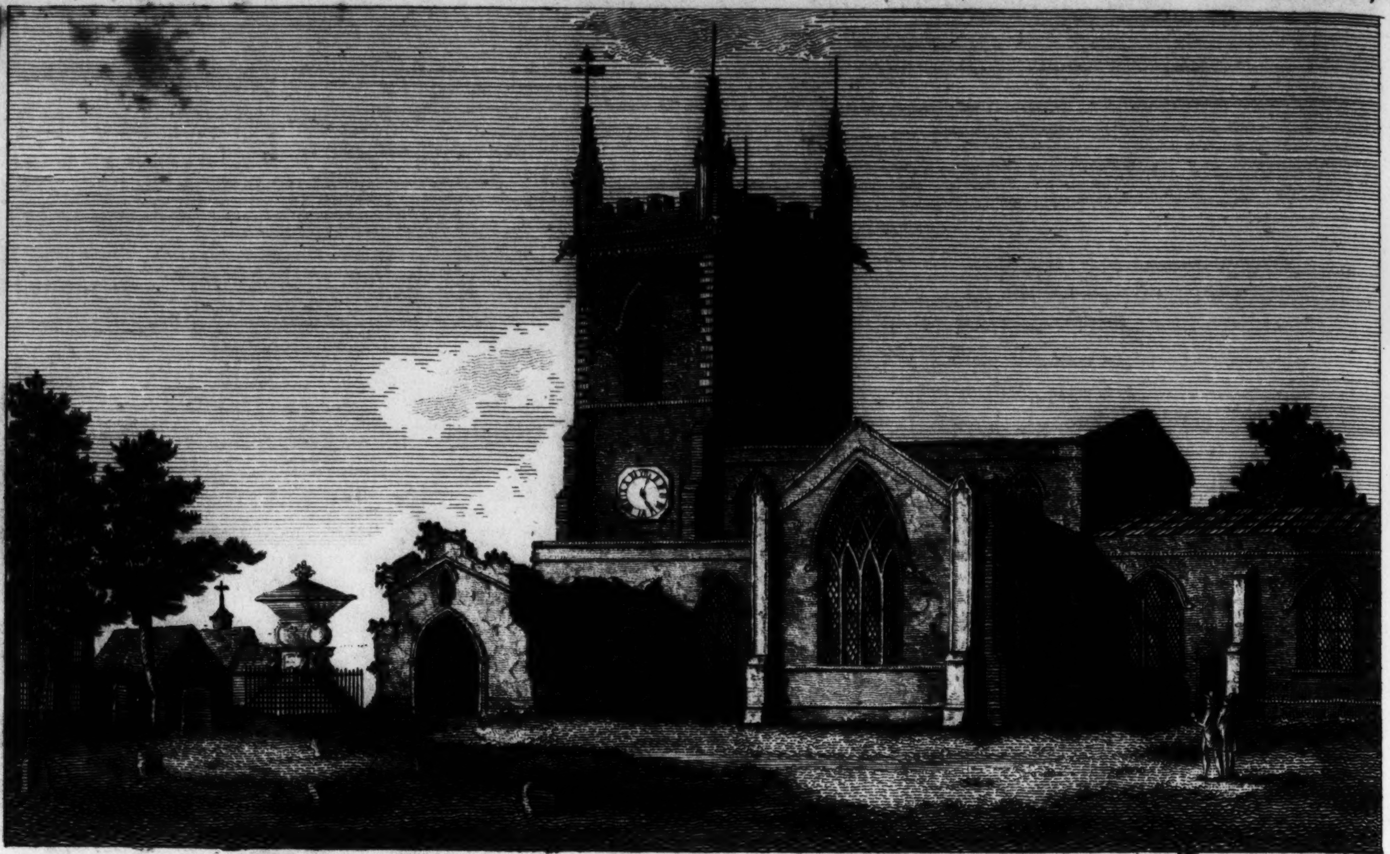


BARROW, S.E.

Vol. III. Pl. VII. p. 71.

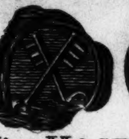
1



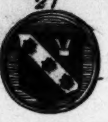


J.P.M. 1792.

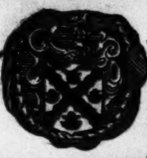
Willm Beueredge 1627



21



Jo. Beveridge 1683



Anthony Beridge 1641

Fig. 2. HOSPITAL at BARROW, p. 70.

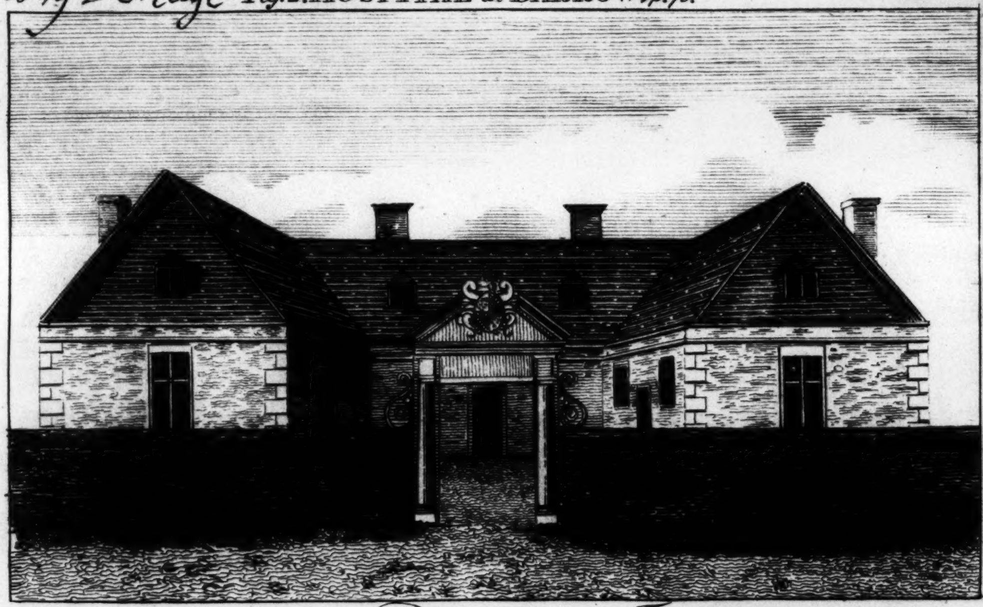


Fig. 9.

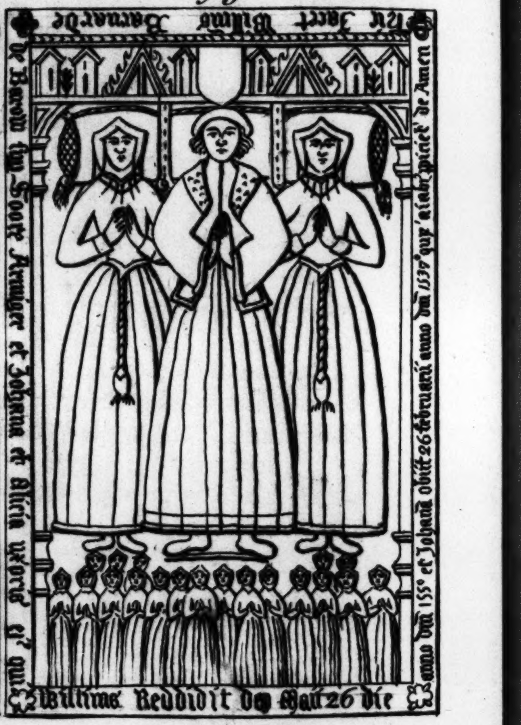

Hic Jacet Willms Barnarde
de Barrow in Com Soore Armiger et Johanna et Alicia uxores ei⁹ qui Willms Reddidit Deo Maii 26 die anno Dni 155° et Johanna obiit 26 Februarii anno Dni 1537 quor' aiab' ppiciet' De Amen

Jo. Beveridge 1693

Fig. 10.

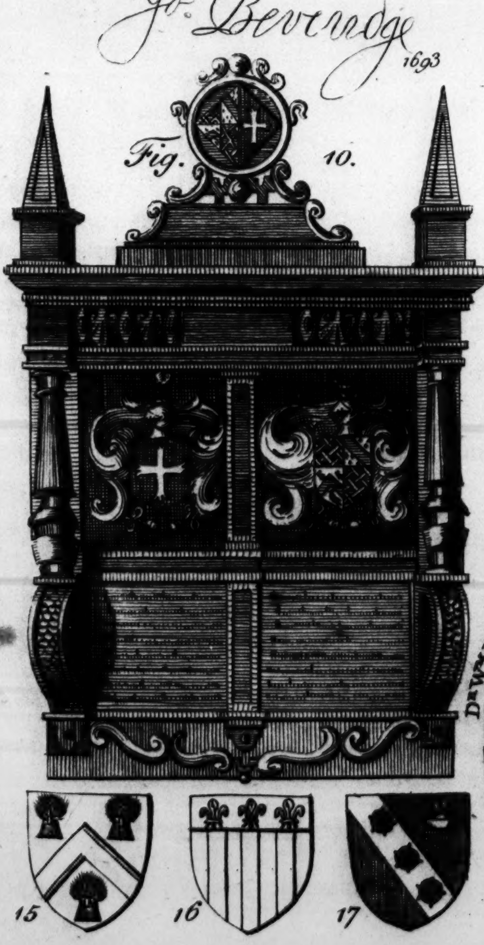

Fig. 13.

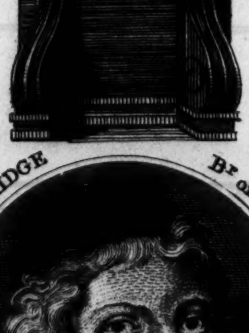
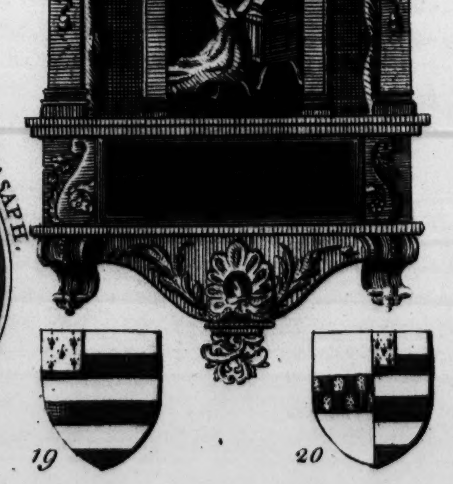
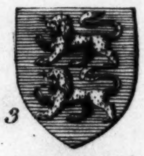


Will. Beveridge 1687

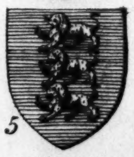
Fig. 18.



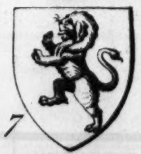
3



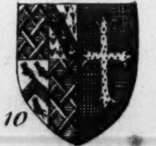
5



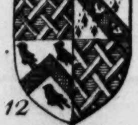
7



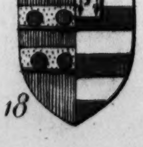
10



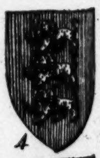
12



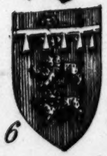
18



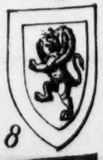
4



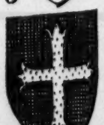
6



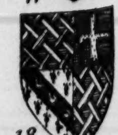
8



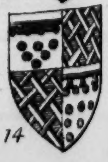
11



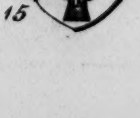
13



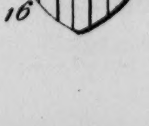
14



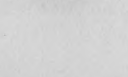
15

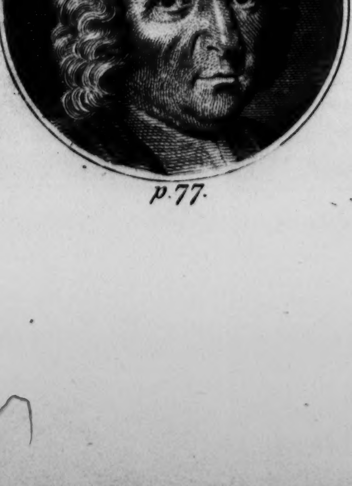


16



17

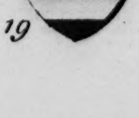




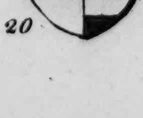
DR WM BEVERIDGE Bp OF ST ASAPH

p. 77.

19



20



and but one out of Quorndon, unleſs great need be; each beadſman on his admittance to have a gown of blue cloth faced with white, and to have a load of coals yearly [1].

"The teſtator alſo directed three commemoration-ſermons to be yearly preached in the church of Barrow; viz. two upon Trinity Sunday, and the other upon the laſt Sunday in October; and for each day the preacher to receive 20 ſhillings; and on each of thoſe days 30 ſhillings to be given to the poor of Barrow; and 20 ſhillings laid out in buying Bibles with the Liturgy of the Church of England, and given unto ſuch poor children as could read in that town, on the covers of which ſhould be impreſſed in gold letters theſe words; 'The Gift of Theophilus Cave, Eſq.'

"The teſtator charged his ſaid eſtate with two annuities and other charges; and directed the reſidue of the profits of the ſaid eſtate to be divided equally amongſt the ſaid ſix beadſmen for an increaſe of their allowance [2].

"The rev. Humphrey Perkins, rector of Holme Peirpoint in the county of Nottingham, by his laſt will, bearing date Feb. 7, 1717, gave the reverſion of a farm at Ratcliff upon Trent for the foundation and maintenance of a free-ſchool in this town; which farm is now let at the annual rent of £.55.

"James Jackſon, by his laſt will, bearing date June 15, 1680, gave, to be paid out of his own eſtate yearly, the ſum of 24 ſhillings, for the inſtruction of ſix of the pooreſt children in that town."

Thomas Rawlins, gent. alſo, by deed, dated Aug. 10, 1691, provided for the education of ſix poor boys of Barrow at the free-ſchool at Woodhouſe [3].

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 38.

	Barrow [4].			[5] Mountſorell N.			Mountſorell S.			Quorndon.
	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	273	11	9	63	17	10	77	18	2	162	12	8
Expended in county rates, &c.	7	1	2	11	14	6	77	18	2	3	0	0
——— on the poor, —	265	19	9	59	12	6	18	12	8	159	12	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	7	13	9	3	10	5	59	5	6	6	19	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0	3	9	0	4	15	0	23	5	2
Money raiſed for 1783, —	263	6	5	184	13	10				189	12	9
——— 1784, —	263	9	1	165	1	9				188	3	3
——— 1785, —	298	7	10	180	5	7				93	17	8
Medium of theſe three years,	275	1	1	176	13	9				157	4	7
——— of county expences,	0	0	0	3	3	3				4	15	0
——— of expences not relating to the				11	13	11				5	7	5
poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0	161	16	7				147	2	2
——— of nett annual expences,	275	1	1	59	5	6				3	18	5
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	4	10	6	0	18	8				0	11	3
——— of entertainments at meetings,	1	5	7	0	19	4				0	15	8
——— of law expences, —	0	0	0	18	13	9				0	0	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	17	7	0	1	1				0	0	0

These include the Returns from the South end.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate VII.)

dedicated to The Holy Trinity, is large and neat. It is built in the form of a croſs; and conſiſts of a ſtout and beautiful tower [6] (in which are a clock and five bells); a large South porch (over which is a handſome niche for an image); a nave, chancel, North and South ailes, and North and South tranſepts.

On the largeſt of the bells is this inſcription:

"All they that hear my mournfull ſound
Repent before they 're laid in ground.—Caſt 1699."

The ailes are ſeparated from the nave by four arches, over which are ſix clereſtory windows.

The font is ſmall, and not very antient.

The ſeats are open and ſpacious.

Mr. Burton deſcribes here the following arms (Plate VII. fig. 3—7):

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, England.

Gules, a lion rampant Or, armed and langued Azure; William de Albini earl of Arundel.

Azure, two lions paſſant in pale Or; Erdington.

Azure, three lions paſſant in pale Or; Erdington.

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, a label of five points Argent; Thomas de Brotherton, earl of Norfolk, whoſe daughter was wife to Henry de Erdington.

The church of Barrow was given to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter by Ranulph earl of Cheſter; confirmed to them by king Henry II; and fully appropriated, about 1207, by William de Blois biſhop of Lincoln.

"De vicariâ eâdem ordinatum per Willm̃ ep̃m in Matriculo, q̃d conſiſtit in medietate omnium obventionum ad altaragium dc̃e eccleſie pertinentium, & in tertiâ parte garbarum totius decime de parochiâ de Barewâ, cum meſſuag' inter dominica in eâdem villâ; cum curiâ canonum, & cemeterio, & uno meſſuagio in Querndon ad capellam ibidem pertinentibus [7]."

In the Matriculus of 1220, it is ſtated that the then vicar, William, received the moiety of all the profits of the altar, and a third part of all the corn-tithes; and was bound to ſerve the church, and to ſuſtain all epiſcopal and archidiaconal payments. The chapel of Quorndon was alſo to be ſerved thrice a week from the mother church. The monks of St. Severus received from old time one third part of the tithes of blades in the demeſne land of the earl of Cheſter in Barrow, with all ſmall tithes ariſing de curiâ [8] comitis. They had alſo two parts of the blades from the land of William Blundel and Hugo Cantor, and from the new incloſures (novis bundis) of the earl in Barrow. Alſo the whole tithes of corn from the new incloſures (aſſartis) of Mountſorell, from which they ought properly to receive only a third part. They received alſo the whole tithe of corn and all the ſmall tithes at Woodhouſe; except the oblations on holy days, Peter-pence, and wax-ſhot (ceragium [9]).

---

[1] This load of coals is now about one ton, worth about 14 ſhillings.

[2] The beadſmen's allowance is now more than £.10. a year each; and the pariſh-clerk, though he is blind, attends as chaplain every night at the almſhouſe, and reads prayers with the beadſmen; for which he has 40*s.* a year. His name is Hull, and he is a very intelligent man. He has loſt his ſight 20 years; yet it is very ſeldom that he ever miſtakes any part of his duty.

[3] See the particulars hereafter, under Woodhouſe.

[4] In 1776 the workhouſe at Barrow contained 50 perſons.

[5] In 1776 there were 16 perſons in Mountſorrel workhouſe.

[6] Originally ornamented with four elegant pinnacles; one of which was wholly loſt when the annexed drawing was taken in 1792; and another has ſince been taken down.

[7] Reg. Hugonis Welles, ann. 19.

[8] Sir Henry Spelman gives three interpretations of Curia; 1. "pro ædibus nobilium, & manſo capitali, ſeu aulâ manerii;" 2. "pro dominio, quod manerium dicitur, & manſus in dominicatus;" 3. "pro atrio, ſeu areâ cujuſvis habilaculi, Gallicè Court, Anglicè a Yard.

[9] "Tributum quod in eccleſiis pendebatur ad ſubminiſtrationem ceræ & luminum.—Vicaria de Wragby (co. Linc.) conſiſtit in toto altaragio, & in ceragio vulgaritèr dict. Wax-ſhot, in panibus vulgaritèr dict. Manport, & in incremento denariorum S. Petri vulgaritèr dict. Fyer-harth." Spelman, Gloſſary, v. Maineporte & Wax-ſhot.—This ſuperſedes the conjecture in vol. I. p. lviii.

The ſeveral endowments of the vicarage ſhall here be fully ſtated from Charyte's Rentale:

"Vicarius de Barow habet medietatem altaragii & minutas decimas ibidem. Et abbas Leyceſtrie habet aliam medietatem.

Mem̃', quòd vicarius ibidem ſolvit nobis xls̃. pro penc͞one ſuâ, ſicut patet in primâ inſtitutione vicarii. Et, per ordinationem factam per Hugonem ep̃um Linc', vicarius ſolebat percipere de altaragio quantum valeret x marcas. Et de abbate de Sc̃o Severo, de proparte decimarum quas tunc habuit in Wodhows & Quernedon, contribuebantur annuatim dc̃o vicario v marce. Et poſt conveniebatur inter W. Malv̄ne abbatem & Thomam de Preſtwold tunc vicarium, pro tempore unius anni, quòd ipſe perciperet medietatem decimarum garbarum de Baro, ſcil' de campo auſtrali, & indè pro omnibus foret contentus, prout patet per quandam indenturam indè factam. Poſtea, ut dicitur, conventum erat inter eoſdem abbatem & vicarium, quòd idem vicarius percipiet medietatem decimarum garbarum de Baro predict', ſcil' de campo boreali, & indè pro omnibus foret contentus. Et iſta conventio facta eſt & indentata inter eoſdem.

Item alia ordinatio & conventio inter abbatem Leyc' & vicarium de Baro, videlicet, quòd abbas Leyc' & vicarius de Baro recipient decimas garbarum de iſtis terris in parochiâ de Baro: De terrâ monachorum de Aldermaneſhaw, ſcil' Flitwong, abbas habet viii garbas, & vicarius nonam garbam. De Dedewong abbas viii, & vic' nonam garbam. In medietate de Fotwong nos vii, & vic' viii & ix garb'; & in aliâ medietate nos ii garbas, & vic' tertiam. Item de Benelondeſlade uſque diviſas de Sethgrave nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item in le Wong & iiii toftis nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item in culturâ đni, que fuit monachorum, nos viii, & vic' ix garbas. Item in Breche, uſque in le Broke & uſque le Gore ad Storte Wellebrok, nos ii, & vic' tertiam. In eâdem Breche, uſque ad caput, nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item in Heſelcroft nos omnes garbas. Item in Holmo per tot' nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item in Stodwelle-wong nos ii garbas, & vic' tertiam. Item ad Donnet°ſteſhende nos ii, & vic' tertiam. Et de viii ſelionibus nos ii, & vic' tertiam; & totum reſiduum de Holme nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item in Michehul & ad Mulnedore nos ii, & vic' tertiam partem. Item in Caldewelle-wong nos ii, & vic' tertiam. Item Aff̃rebroke uſque Benelondedale nos ii, & vic' tertiam. Item in villâ de Baro, de feodo Rađi le Boteler, de unâ carucatâ nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item de feodo H. Cantoris de i carucatâ in Baro nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item de ii virgatis Hugonis Herbert nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item mem', quòd de feodo le Boteler ſunt tenentes; ſcil', Robertus Butler tenet i bovatam, W. Duket i bovatam, Joſep' ad pontem i virgatam, Joħes Rekeles i virgatam, Joħes de Anſty i virgatam. Item, de feodo Cantoris, Judde Heyward tenet vi acras, Hychecok fil' Gilberti prepoſiti i bovatam, T. Cat i bovatam, Ric' clericus i virgatam. Mem', quòd Ric̄us de Leuwes tenet de feodo Cantoris. Item de feodo Cantoris .....[1] Hichecock, ſcil' i virgatam, H. Strongbowe i bovatam, Ric' Anver de feodo Blundel i bovatam, Rađus Burd ii virgatas, Hugo Herbert de ii virgatis fil' Helie fil' fabri de i bovat'. De omnibus predictis nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Item de feod' Blundel Joħes Syleby i virgat', nos vii, & vic' viii & ix. Joħes Marta i virgat' de feodo Blundel, Wiłłs Hind i virgat', Alanus Preſtman i virgat', Hugo filius Serlonis i virgat', Adam filius Rađi clerici i virgatam, Ric' Codhep i bovatam. Et de omnibus iſtis nos vii, & vic' viii & ix garb'. Item de omnibus brechis de Monteſorell & Querndon abbas totum, & vic' nichil. Summa per abbatem $^{\text{xx}}_{\text{vi}}$iiii, per vic' xxxv.

Modò vicarius habet totam decimam garbarum de campo boreali de Baro; & medietatem altaragii ibidem, & medietatem omnium decimarum minutarum niſi in manerio & in loco qui vocatur Burnegarte. Et in Querndon habet medietatem altaragii, & medietatem omnium decimarum minutarum. Similitèr & in Montſorell. Et in Wodhows etiam habet medietatem mortuariorum. Item vicarius de Baroo inveniet unum pro celebratione miſſarum per totum annum in dictâ eccleſiâ, & in die Paſce pro communicac͞oe parochianorum. Et incenſum & oleum inveniet in dictâ eccleſiâ, & partem de Rompenis in Wodhows minimè habebit, ſicut planè patet in veteri Regiſtro Chartwary cum magno coopertorio, ubi liquidè probatum fuit quòd vicarius tenetur ad hujuſmodi onera, & abbas Leyc' non. Et notandum eſt, quòd vicarius nil habet de decimis boſcorum, paſturarum, vaccarum, vitulorum, piſcarie, calcis, petrarum venditarum, molendinorum, & feni.

Alia ordinatio vicarie de Barow, facta per Hugonem ſecundum ep̃um, ſicut patet hìc:

'Vicarius de Baro conſtat in toto altaragio, niſi valeat ultra x marc'. Abbas autem de Sc̃o Severo, percipiens de ipsâ eccleſiâ xx marcas, quinque marcas ſolvet in dicte vicarie ſupplementum.'

Notandum, quòd vicarius de Baro non debet habere aliquas decimas minutas, ut puta ova, aucas, agnos, vitulos, fenum, canabum, nec principalia, &c. in manerio đni de Haſtyngs ibidem, nec in loco ubi jam eſt un' ſcheypkote vocat' Burnegarte.

Mem', quòd omnes parochiani eccleſie Sc̃e Trinitatis de Baro obligantur abbati Leyc', &c. per ſcriptum ſuum, ad ſuſtentandam & reparandam capellam beate Marie de Baro juxta cancellum, & gutteram ejuſdem capelle inter idem cancellum & eandem capellam, ſumptibus ſuis propriis, quotieſcunque & quandocunque neceſſe fuerit; ita quòd cancellum nullum damnum ſeu deteriorationem per dictas capellam & gutteram percipiet ſeu incurret, &c. ut in compoſitione.

Nomina locorum & boſcorum in parochiâ de Baroo, ubi abbas Leic' debet habere decimam.

In Buddunwode, in Mapulwell, in Brakley-kar, in medietate parci de Bellomont, Fer̃ywode, Lowſikar, Philypwode, Barolawnde, Manyclefe, Wylynghaw, & Dryhyrſt, Cloſſefeld juxta Bewmaner, boſcum de Querndon vocatum Farnamwode, Bewmaner-lawnde, Calvercroft, Wellawmedewe, Fawkeneyrhey, Mukkelynge & Thorplande, Waleyſwode, Halywell, Aldurmanhey, ye Lawnde, Heyrdmanhaucliffe, & multa alia, Sowthewode, Dañſwode, Schepeywode, Turnelleys, Newcloſe, Bukhyll, & in aliis locis diverſis, ſicut patet in rotulis Celariorum[2]."

In 1235, the abbot and convent of Leiceſter gave licence to Geoffrey le Deſpenſer to build a chapel at his manor of Little Haw, within the pariſh of Barrow; which fell into diſuſe when the chapel was erected at Woodhouſe, by Henry lord Beaumont, in 1338.

In 1344, the procurations for Barrow ſuper Sore, Woodhouſe, Quorndon, and the chapel of St. John the Baptiſt at Mountſorel, were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 40 marks; the vicarage at 18 marks. The church paid 3*s.* for Peter-pence; and the abbot of Leiceſter then had it in proprios uſus, together with a penſion of 60*s.*

A record of 1386 ſtates that the "decimæ, oblationes, &c. infra hamelettum de Wodehouſe" belonged at that time to the church of Barrow upon Sore[3].

May 7, 1484, William Saxulby obtained from the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis a leaſe for 80 years of the rectorial manſe[4] of Barrow, with 6 virgates of land, a dovecote, a croft of 110 acres, two cottages, the tithe of hemp and flax, and all other ſmall tithes (viz. geeſe, pigs, &c.) alſo of the mortuaries, chriſomes, &c.; a piece of meadow in Barrowholme, worth 13*s.* 4*d.*; the tithes of hay in the duke of Norfolk's meadow, and of the demeſne meadows domini de Chamberleyn, worth together 6*s.* 8*d.*; for all which he paid 53*s.* 4*d.* a year. The abbot received alſo 12*s.* for the tithe of hay in Barrowholme[5].

---

[1] Sic in Originali.

[2] Charite's Rentale, fol. xiv—xvi.

[3] Clauſ. 10 Ric. II.

[4] At this period manſus was not only merely the rector's or vicar's houſe, but the land annexed to it for a yard, &c. "Scilicet quod vicarius perpetuus eccleſiæ de Stodham habebit, nominæ vicariæ ſuæ, totum altaragium ejuſdem eccleſiæ, cum manſo competente, & continente cerciter ſeptem acras," &c.—"Vicarius ſimiliter perpetuus de Chaugrave habebit, nomine vicariæ ſuæ, totum altaragium illius eccleſiæ, & duas croftas, & gardinum, quæ ſunt extra eccleſiam, quarum major crofta, quæ eſt ex parte occidentali, continet in ſe quatuor acras, & minor crofta cum gardino, quæ eſt in parte auſtrali, aſſignabitur ei pro manſo." Chron. de Dunſtable, ed. Hearne, in Append. p. 678.

[5] Charyte's Rentale, ubi ſupra.

At that period the abbot and convent had the tithe of hay in kind of ſuch of the hades and leys as were mowed; and received from ſuch as were not mowed 3*d.* or 4*d.* ad valorem. But the tenants of late had neglected to ſet out their tithe of hay; which was unjuſt; and the abbot had determined to take legal advice. This was alſo the caſe of ſeveral paſtures and cloſes both in Barrow and Quorndon.

The tithe of hay in kind from the duke of Norfolk's meadow amounted to two or three loads, and was worth 3*s.* a year; and in lieu of tithe-hay from the meadows of the lord Haſtings, they had ſeveral parcels of land allotted, to the annual amount of at leaſt 6*s.* 8*d.*

At the diſſolution, a portion of the rectory of Barrow belonged to the nunnery of Langley, of the annual value of 1*l.* 10*s.*[1]; and an annual penſion of 13*s.* 4*d.* was paid out of this rectory to the abbot and convent of Oſulveſton at the ſame time, and probably for many years before[2].

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 10*s.*; and the value of the vicarage £12.

In 1583, the ſite of the rectory of Barrow, with certain tithes in Querndon, Woodhouſe, Barrow, and Mountſorell, were leaſed for 30 years to Thomas Wyndebanche[3].

In 1599, the following report was made concerning the advowſon of this pariſh:

"Barrowe valet in profic' provenien' de vicariâ ibidem, ubi Willmus Gillote[4] clericus eſt vicarius, tam in decimis majoribus quàm minoribus, unà cum exit' manſ', cum aliis proficuis, communibus annis, 15*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.*

Indè in denar' ſolut' archidiacono Leiceſtr' pro ſynod' & procurac' —	11*s.* 1*d.*
Et remanet — —	15*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.*
Decima indè — —	30*s.* 3¼*d.*

The Auditor of the Revenue for the county is to certify whether this advowſon be appendant unto any of her Majeſty's lands in the ſaid pariſh, or what other lands her Majeſty hath there.

W. TAILER, deputat. EDW. STAFFORD.

The Queen's Majeſty hath not any lands or tenements in Barrow aforeſaid in charge before me; but her Highneſs hath certain tithes there, that ſometime were parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late monaſtery of St. Mary in the Meadows of Leiceſter, which are of the yearly value of £13; but whereunto this advowſon is appendant or belongeth, I cannot certify.

5° die Dec. 1599; ex' per ALEX. KING, Audit'."

The advowſon was purchaſed in 1608 by ſir William Herick; and in 1609 the following correſpondence paſſed concerning the rectory; of which the leaſe granted in 1583 was then nearly expired:

"To the right worſhipfull ſir William Hericke, knighte, at Richemonde, theiſe be d'd with ſpeede.

"Sir, To cleare all doubte concerninge the paſſage of the rectorye of Barrowe, ſir Francis Bacon deſireth that you wolde but wryte twoe or three wordes unto him under your hande, thereby aſſuringe him that you have paſſed the ſcite of the ſaid rectorye and all the tythes belonginge thereunto, beſyde thoſe that are contained in this particuler that dothe now paſſe; and that this particuler is whollye to be paſſed for youre behoofe (as indeede it is), noe man havinge compounded with the contractors for the ſame but youreſelfe: And beinge ſatisfied of theiſe twoe by you, the booke ſhall paſſe withoute anye further queſtion or impedimente. Wherefore, I praye you, write your lettre to this effecte as ſoon as poſſible, and ſende it unto me, that I maye deliver the ſame myſelfe. And ſo I humblye reſte, this fourthe of Maye 1609, youre moſt aſſured friende to command, RICHARD MORE."

This occaſioned the following letter from ſir William Herick to ſir Francis Bacon.

"Sir, I was advertiſed from Richard More, ſervaunt to ſir Walter Coupe, whom I doe uſe in the paſſinge of my particuler, you deſired to be ſatiſfied in ſome points concerninge the ſame. Therefore theis are, upon my credit, to aſſure you that I purchaſed, ſome twelves yeares paſt, or thereabouts, in the time of the late queene Elizabeth, the ſcite of the rectorie of Barrow, with two cottages in the ſame towne, and all other tithes belonging thereunto, in fee ſimple, to be helde of the manor of Eaſt Greenwich, (thoſe excepted which are out and paſt) in a boke wherein Henry Beſt and Robert Holland were patentees. And of this particuler I doe in like manner proteſt unto you that it is written to my own uſe. I wold have attended you myſelf, for your better ſatiſfyinge; but, being hindered by my infirmitie in my head, I hope you will excuſe me; praying for your good labour for the allowaunce in paſſinge of my book."

The patent was completed May 20, 1609, in the names of Francis Phillips and Richard More and their heirs; who afterwards conveyed to ſir William Herrick in fee all thoſe 91 acres of land and 7 acres of paſture, by eſtimation, diſperſed in the common fields of Barrow upon Soar, and thoſe two cloſes of paſture, containing by eſtimation 4 acres of paſture, within the village of Barrow; and all thoſe 28 acres of land, and 10 acres and a half of meadow, by eſtimation, lying diſperſed in the common meadows and fields of Quorndon; and all thoſe tithes of grain and hay, with their appurtenances, in Quorndon[5]. Theſe tithes were afterwards re-ſold to ſir William Courteen; by whom they were again ſold to Juſtinian Povey and Robert Morgan; who obtained a confirmation of their purchaſe by letters patent from king Charles, dated Jan. 20, in the 6th year of his reign[6].

In 1642, the impropriation was the property of ſir William Herrick, knt.; and the glebe and tithes belonged to Theophilus Cave, eſq.[7]

In 1650, the church was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; the vicarage £8; and the incumbent as "ſufficient, but a Pluralitan."

In 1653, a diſpute about the tithes of Barrow was adjuſted by a legal proceſs; and Henry Farnham, gent. of the Nether Hall in Quorndon, poſſeſſed the advowſon in 1661.

The preſent value in the king's books, ariſing from great and ſmall tithes, is 15*l.* 2*s.* 8½*d.*; and the vicarage is eſtimated at £200. a year.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 7*s.*; for the vicarage 2*s.*; the archidiaconal 11*s.* 1*d.*

For the repairs of the church, the ſum of 1*l.* 4*s.* is annually charged on the rectory.

The great tithes belong partly to the truſtees for Barrow hoſpital[8], and partly to the vicarage; the value of which was greatly augmented by Dr. Beveridge, bp. of St. Aſaph, and the patronage thereof given to St. John's college, Cambridge[9].

To this church are ſtill appendant the chapelries of Mountſorell Inferior, Quorndon, and Woodhouſe.

Here is alſo a meeting for the followers of Weſley.

---

[1] Miniſters' Accompts, in the Augmentation Office, 31 Hen. VIII.

[2] Ibid.

[3] From an original memorandum in the Augmentation Office.

[4] Mr. Gyllote was the vicar in 1534-5; when the regular ſurvey was taken.

[5] The ſmall tithes of Quorndon remained in the Herrick family in 1691.

[6] All this appears from original deeds preſerved at Beaumanor.

[7] MS. Chetwynd.

[8] Who pay to William Heyrick, eſq. as lord of the manor of Beaumanor, a pound of pepper annually as a chief rent.

[9] Willis's St. Aſaph, p. 95.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
William, 1220.	Prior and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter.
William de Hungerton [1], 1228.
Thomas de Creke, 1235.
Philip de . . . . . . 1240.
William de Summerdeby, 1265.
Simon de Lechefield, 1267.
William Gillote, 1534.
William Ruſtat, 1563; buried 1588.
John Beveridge, D. D. ſigns vicar in 1617.
William Beveridge, B. D. Oƈt. 24, 1620; buried 29 Oƈt. 1640.	John Beveridge, D. D.
Anthony Beridge, M. A. Nov. 26, 1640.	Henry Farnham, gent.
John Beveridge, M. A.; inſtituted May 8, 1661.	The Beveridge Family.
John Beveridge, March 22, 1688-9; buried Dec. 1, 1695.	William Beveridge, D. D.
John Richardſon, Jan. 22, 1695-6.
Benjamin Bewicke, March 29, 1701; died Aug. 21, 1730 [2].
Vere Foſter [3], B. D. Oƈt. 3, 1730; died 1756.	St. John's College, Cambridge.
William Burrow [4], B. D. preſented Feb. 15, 1757; died 1794.
William Eaſton [5], B. D. Dec. 12, 1794.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

Mr. Burton mentions, in a North window, the picture of a knight in armour, kneeling, oppoſite to his lady; on both whoſe ſurcotes were the arms of Erdington; and underneath,

"Henricus de Erdington, ... a de Erdington."

He notices alſo a flat tomb of ſir Thomas Erdington, with theſe eſcutcheons; 1. Two lions paſſant, fig. 3; 2. A lion rampant within a border; fig. 8: and another flat tomb, on which were engraven, on one eſcutcheon, two lions paſſant, as before; and on another a lion rampant, fig. 7, inſcribed, "Hic jacet Walterus filius Thome Erdington, militis, qui obiit 1430."

On the chancel floor, on an old flat alabaſter ſtone, are tricked, under rude pediments, with finials, and a blank ſhield over his head, the figure of a man in ſhort hair, with a round cap, in a long cloſe gown with full ſleeves and an ermine cape, between two wives, in the veil head-dreſs, belts, and cordons; their hands all elevated in prayer; and below them eighteen children [6] (fig. 9.); thus inſcribed:

"Hic jacet Will'm's Barnard,
de Barrow ſup: Soore, et Johanna et Alicia uxores ej';
qui Will'm's reddidit Deo Maii 26 die, anno Dom: 1550°; et Johanna obiit 26° die Februarii, anno Dom: 1537°; quor' a'i'ab's ꝓpiciet' Deus. Amen."

On the South wall, on a fair alabaſter monument:

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Cave; 2. Liſley; 3. . . . . impaling Braham; fig. 10.

"Memorials upon the lives and deathes of Henry Cave, of Barrow upon Sore, eſq. who married Philip daughter and heir of Robert Braham, of Barrow aforeſaid, eſq. who died ſucceſſively; viz. Hēry Cave the 26 of Iūe, 1600; Ro. Braham 16 of Nov. 1600."

"Impiety yt were, when men be dead and gone
Their virtuous acts ſhould ſleep, and be reviv'd by none."

Under the pediment, Braham ſingle, fig. 11; and, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Cave; 2. Liſley; 3. . . . . fig. 12; and on two tablets:

1. "In Robertum Braham.

If hiſtories be cald the regiſters of time,
Wherin the worthy actes of anceſtors doe ſhine;
Or, yf that trophes be memorialls of our name;
Or, yf that monuments be recordes of our fame;
Then may I well adorne thy toumbe with thy deſert,
Whoe for thy wiſdome grave with ſages equal werte;
For, thee the Graces taught, and thee the Angels kept;
For thee thy frendes doe mourne, for thee the Muſes wept:
Thy love and zeale to God, the vertue of thy mynde,
Prepared thē for heaven, and lefte thy prayes byhinde.
Braham from Abraham derivede by faythe olone,
Lyke Abraham, for hopefnll ſonne had daughter one;
From whome ſucceeding times may many comfortes have
By iſſew of bothe ſectes begotten by a Cave:
In Cave they comforte had; in Cave they all ſhall reſt;
In Cave from cares thē ſleepe their ſoules be ever bleſt:
Heāen for their preſence joyes, on earthe wee wayle theire loſſe;
Heāen holdes their pureſt partes, the earthe conteynes theire [droſſe."

"2. In Henricum Cave.

Let him that hath a wōnded hart,
And feels my greefe, come beare a parte;
For, publicke woe, in pryvat borne,
Confoundes a mynde with ſorrow torne.
Moſt deere, as deere as any wight,
No Death ſhall once eclipſe thy light,
Nor Tyme deprive thee of thy prayſe,
Who art the ſtorye of our dayes;
Thy living fame ſhall never dye,
Allthough thy body here doth lye;
That glory which thy vertue wonne
Shall lyve when ages all be donne;
Thy modeſt minde, enricht with art,
Doth lyve in every lovinge hart:
Thou, in deſpyte of Envyes pen,
Shalt be a mirror unto men,
For love to wyfe, for faith to friend,
For upright lyfe and godly end:
Theſe have poſſeſs'd thy ſoul in peace,
Through Chriſt, with whom no comforts ceaſe."

In an adjoining window is an impalement of Cave and Braham.

On a monument on the North wall: Quarterly, 1. and 4, Cave; 2. Braham; 3. Liſley; fig. 13.

"Cave, ave, æternitatem.
Siſte gradum, Viator; moræ pretium ſpondeo.
Dum legis hæc, teipſum perlege,
& memorare noviſſima tua.
Hìc ſitus eſt Theophilus Cave, armiger,

---

[1] "Will'm's de Hung'ton, capellanus, preſentatus per abbatem & conventum Leic' ad vicariam eccleſie de Barew; factâ priùs inquiſitione per Will'm archidiaconum Leiceſtr', comite etiam Ceſtr' apell'oni facte per ſervicium ſuum ſing' dictam vicariam literatori renunciante, per quem negotiatum fuit in expedito, ad eandem admiſſus eſt, & in eâ cum onere & penâ vicarii inſtitutus. Et mandatum eſt dicto archidiacono, ut ipſum in corporalem dicte vicarie poſſeſſionem inducat." Reg. Hug. Welles, ann. 19.

[2] By his epitaph at Hallaton (ſee vol. II. p. 604.) it appears that Mr. Bewicke gave £100. towards building a ſchool-houſe at Barrow; and £200. towards augmenting the curacy of Quorndon.

[3] Of whom ſee hereafter, p. 81.

[4] He had a diſpenſation in 1794 to hold this vicarage, with North Wingfield, co. Derby, where he ſucceeded his father in 1753; and where he died, Sept. 9, 1794, æt. 83, and was buried, but has no epitaph. Mr. Burrow took the degree of B. A. at St. John's, 1746; M. A. 1750; B. D. 1780.

[5] B. A. of St. John's, 1773; M. A. 1776; B. D. 1784. Mr. Eaſton (to whom, and alſo to the Rev. N. Bramley, the preſent maſter of Barrow-ſchool, I am under great obligations for their kind attention to my enquiries) married, in Auguſt 1795, Miſs Atkinſon, ſiſter to the Rev. Mr. Atkinſon, rector of Hillington in Norfolk.—The vicarage-houſe, barn, and ſtables, a part of which are ſhewn in Plate VII. have been repaired, and in good meaſure rebuilt, by Mr. Eaſton, at the expence of above £1000.

[6] A conſiderable number of entries of the family of Barnard may be ſeen in the Barrow Regiſters.

quem patri Henrico Philippa Braham peperit ſecundo de tredecim puerperio;
1584, natus Octobris ultimâ LVCe; Denatus prIMâ [1];
en, licèt Vitæ prior potior eſt Mortis dies.
Vir erat probati moris & intemeratæ fidei;
qui, furente bello pluſquam civili Britannico, & novas res rituſque parricidis molientibus,
nec Deo nec regi infidus unquam extitit;
candidus Irenarches, & juris aſſertor rigidus,
nemo minùs ſæculo ſerviit, aut proſpexit meliùs.
Connubio cum Iſabellâ, matronâ lectiſſimâ, junctus, annos quadraginta vixerat.
Hunc tamen, liberis vacuum, voluit Deus pauperibus & orphanis ut eſſet pater.
Humfredum Babington, Margaretæ ſororis filium, quem priùs è pueritiâ orphanum aluerat, & Deo & eccleſiæ conſecraverat, legitimum teſtamento hæredem conſtituit.
Moritur, ut vixit, Deo dignus; & eo certè dignior, quòd piè ſe judicavit indigniſſimum.
Diſce, tandem, Viator, beatos eſſe qui in Domino moriuntur. Vale.
Mœſtus } & { compoſuit,
Memor } { poſuit,
H. Babington,
T. C. S. T. B. R."

"HERE IN THIS GRAVE THERE LIES A CAVE:
WE CALL A CAVE A GRAVE:
IF CAVE BE GRAVE, AND GRAVE BE CAVE,
THEN, READER, JUDGE, I CRAVE,
WHETHER DOTH CAVE HERE LYE IN GRAVE,
OR GRAVE HERE LYE IN CAVE:
IF GRAVE IN CAVE HERE BURY'D LYE,
THEN, GRAVE, WHERE IS THY VICTORY?
GOE, READER, AND REPORT HERE LYES A CAVE
WHO CONQUERS DEATH, AND BURYES HIS OWN GRAVE."

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. "Here lieth the body of George Waldram the elder, who departed this life the 10 day of Feb.
in the 68th year of his age,
in the year of our Lord 17$\frac{20}{21}$."

2. "William Waldram, May 18, 1726; and died Aug. 18, 1717."

In the nave.

1. "Henry Boryſon, gent. 1687."

2. .... a chevron ...... between three garbs ....; fig. 15.

"Here lieth the body of Thomas Ferriman, gent.
who departed this life the 17 day of Dec.
in the year of our Lord 1742,
in the 82d year of his age."

3. "Here lieth the body of Mary, relict of Thomas Ferriman, gent.
She departed this life the 21ſt day of Nov.
in the year of our Lord 1748, aged 60."

4. Arms: .... three pales .... on a chief .... thre fleurs de lis ....; fig. 16.

"Here lieth the body of the rev. Mr. Thomas Squire, M. A. late of Quorndon in this county.
He departed this life on the 21ſt day of April,
in the year of our Lord 1768, aged 38 years."

In the South tranſept:

1. On a mural monument:

Arms: Sable, on a bend Argent three roſes Gules, barbed Vert, ſeeded Or, in the ſiniſter chief point a cheſs-rook of the ſecond; Smalley; fig. 17.

"Near this place lie the bodies of Robert Smalley, of Mountſorrel, gent. and Margery his wife.
He died April 14, 1727, aged 76.
She died Feb. 5th, 1725, aged 62.
Elizabeth, relict of the late Ralph Smalley, gent.
ſon of Robert Smalley, gent.
out of the love ſhe bore to the family,
erected this monument."

2. On a light mural monument is the figure of a lady, kneeling at a deſk, with a book, on which is written, Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her works praiſe her in the gates. Over her a funeral garland. Arms: Gules, on two bars Or, four torteauxes, Utber; impaling, Barry of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Ermine, Marſhall. Creſt, a demi-man in complete armour, holding in his right hand a truncheon, all Proper; fig. 18.

"In a vault at the foot of this monument lies interred (together with her only daughter) the body of Martha Utber [2], relict of Thomas Utber, late of the city of Norwich, gent.
and fourth daughter of John Marſhall [3], of Barrow, gent. by Margaret his wife; whoſe family came into England with William the Conqueror, being a younger branch of that William Marſhall whoſe original was French, and was diſtinguiſhed with honours
agreeable to his martial merit with the Conqueror.
As the family of the Utbers, as well as of the Marſhalls, is very antient, and are now both extinct in the male line;
Mrs. Martha Utber has erected this monument, to ſhew a pious gratitude to them both,
and to perpetuate their memory, 1745."

3. On a neat, oval, mural tablet:

"In memory of the rev. Mr. Richard Eddowes, who departed this life the 1ſt day of April, 1780,
in the 49th year of his age."

4. On another neat mural tablet:

"Depoſited the remains of Mary, the wife of George Perkins, gent. who died
June 4, 1790, in the 47th
year of her age."

On flat ſtones:

1. Arms of Smalley, as before.

"Here lieth the body of Ralph Smalley, of Mountſorrel, gent.
He died Feb. 26, 1737, aged 43."

2. "Hereunder are repoſed the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Smalley, relict of Ralph Smalley, gent. She died Feb. 29, 1784, aged near 80 years."

3. "HERE LIETH THE BODY OF MICHAEL MIDDLETON,
WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE APRIL 13 DAY, 1687."

4. "Here lieth the body of Eaſho, the daughter of Michael Boſwell [4] by Ruth his wife.
She died June 19, 1729, aged 15 years."

5. "Here lieth the body of Philippa, daughter of Theophilus Lilley,
and widow of the late Richard Gilbert, deceaſed.
She departed this life the 23d of October,
in the year of our Lord 1739,
and in the 83d year of her age:
Who had iſſue three ſons and four daughters;
Theophilus, Richard, and George;
Elizabeth, Philippa the firſt, Philippa the ſecond, and Mary.
Near to this place five of their children lie;
Which five departed in their infancy.
Elizabeth Lilley was her ſiſter dear:
Unto this place her body lieth near.
She in her life did practiſe chirurgery:
Many great cures ſhe did for charity;
Thoſe that were poor, nothing ſhe did them charge;
As for the rich, their bills they were not large.

---

[1] No date of the year follows; but it is probably left to be collected from the capital letters in the line, MDCLVI. The Regiſter of that period is imperfect.

[2] Mrs. Utber lived about 20 years after the erecting this monument; and on her coffin her age was ſaid to be 99: but it was generally thought ſhe was ſtill older. The family of Utber, otherwiſe Utker, were of the city of Norwich, and of Hoo in Norfolk.

[3] A conſiderable number of entries of the family of Marſhall may be found in the Barrow Regiſters.

[4] Michael Boſwell was commonly ſtyled "King of the Gypſies."

For charity few with her might compare,
Nor piety in uſing conſtant prayer :
Zealous ſhe was, and made a godly end ;
A civil neighbour, and a dear miſs'd friend.
Their children all are dead of whom we ſpeak,
But Philippa wife of William Leak :
'Tis only ſhe, of ſeven, is left alone,
Who was at charge engraving of this ſtone.
Mary her ſiſter ſhe was married
At Sileby, died, and there was buried."

6. " William Frankes died July 23, 1735, aged 32.
Hannah his wife died Feb. 11, 1729, aged 55.
Mary their daughter June 20, 1743, aged 20."

On flat ſtones in the North aile :

1. " Here lyeth the body of Thomas Greaſly, gent.
who departed this life March 13, 17$\frac{16}{17}$,
in the 38 year of his age."

2. " Here lyeth the body of Mary Hall, wife of Thomas Hall, daughter of Thomas Greaſly, gent.
by Elizabeth his wife,
who departed this life December the 6th day,
ann. Dom. 1722, aged 20 years and 4 days."

3. " Here alſo lyeth the body of Thomas Greaſly, of Mountſorrel, gent.
ſon of the aboveſaid Mr. Greaſly, who departed this life September the 5th,
in the year of our Lord 1738,
and in the 29 year of his age.
He married Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Maſon, of Burton ſuper Woulds, gent. ;
by whom he left iſſue one daughter."

On a mural tablet in the ſame aile :

" Lucretia King,
only daughter of
Elizabeth and Anne Greaſley.
She departed this life
the 12th of April, 1795,
in the 56th year of her age."

In the North croſs.

In this part of the church, which has been new-paved with modern tiles, it is believed, were formerly ſome flat ſtones to the memory of the family of Beveridge [1]. This is the more probable from the following tributary memento placed on a ſmall ſlab by a grateful ſucceſſor to a long race of vicars of that name:

" M. S.
Joh^{is}, W^{ml}, etc.
gentis Beveridgianæ, inſtaurante V. F. [2]
1756."

Near this, on a flat ſtone :

" Carolus Heathcote,
Radulphi & Mariæ filius natu & ætate tertius,
felicitate autem primus,
obijt Martij die 8vo, ſepultus 10mo, anno Chriſti 1726, ætatis ſecundo."

6. " Here lieth depoſited the remains of George ſon of Mountjoy Fiſher, gent. of Cuſſington.
He died the 6th of April, 1726, aged 42 years.
And alſo of Millicent his wife, daughter of Thomas Greaſly, gent. of Mountſorrel.
She died the 23d of July, ~~1744,~~ aged 70."

1774 not 1744
J. Fisher

7. Arms of Marſhall ; fig. 19.
" Here lyeth interred the body of Samuel Marſhall, of Burton, ſon of John Marſhall, of Barrow ;
who departed this life June 13, 1724, aged 68."

8. " Here lyeth interred the body of Anne,
the wife of the aboveſaid Samuel Marſhall.
She departed this life,
at Beaumont Leys, in this county,
the 23 day of December,
in the year of our Lord 1737,
in the 88th year of her age."

9. Arms: Argent, a feſs Vaire, Or and Gules, Herrick; impaling Marſhall; fig. 20.

" Here lieth interred the remains of John Herrick, of Beaumont Leas, in the county of Leiceſter, gent.
ſecond ſon of William Herrick, late of Beaumanor, eſq.;
who departed this life the 1ſt of November, 1760,
aged 68 years."

10. " Here lieth interred the remains of Elizabeth,
the wife of John Herrick,
of Beaumont Leas, in the county of Leiceſter, gent.
and daughter of Samuel Marſhall, of Burton ſuper Woulds, gent. by Anne his wife.
She had iſſue by him two ſons and two daughters;
and departed this life the 27 of January, 1757,
aged 73 years."

11. " Alſo near this place lie interred the remains of Elizabeth, one of the daughters of John and Elizabeth Herrick, who departed this life the 24th of April. 1759,
aged 35 years."

12. " Here lieth the body of John Marſhall, of Burton Bandalls, gent.
ſon of John Marſhall, of Barrow, gent.
He departed this life September the 17th,
in the year of our Lord 1739,
in the 87th year of his age.
" Here lieth the body of Mrs. Margaret Marſhall, ſpinſter, daughter of John Marſhall, of Barrow, gent.
She departed this life Nov. 22,
in the year of our Lord 1755, aged 81."

13. " Here lieth the body of lieut. John Hutchinſon, the ſon of Major Hutchinſon, that was ſlain at Barcelona, in Spain, 1706 ;
dear ſpouſe of Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Thiſtlewaite, gent.
who laid this to his memory, and to be interred by him.
Obiit 13 Sept. ann. Dom. 1722, ætat. ſuæ 35."

14. " Here alſo lieth the body of Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Henry Thiſtlewaite, gent.
late of Montſorrel ;
who departed this life Jan. 5, 1743, aged 67."

15. " To the memory of George Engliſh, late of Mountſorrel, innholder,
who married Phebe, daughter of Thomas Greaſly, of Mountſorrel aforeſaid, gent.
and had iſſue by her nine children,
viz. George, Trueman, George, Phebe,
Mary, Thomas, Edward, Millicent, and Anne.
He departed this life December the 2d, 1757,
aged 62 years.
" Here alſo lies interred the body of Phebe, wife of the aboveſaid George Engliſh.
She departed this life October the 1ſt, 1766,
in the 54th year of her age."

16. " To the memory of George, Trueman, Thomas, Millicent, Edward, and George,
children of George and Phebe Engliſh :
George died Jan. 24, 1731, aged 8 months ;
Trueman March 7, 1732, aged 7 months;
Thomas Nov. 25, 1744, in the 6th year of his age;
Millicent Nov. 10, 1745, in the 3d year of her age;
Edward April 6, 1748, in the 8th year of his age ;
George May 24, 1754, aged 22 years."

In the church-yard remains the fluted ſhaft of an old croſs, about three feet long.

On a handſome cenotaph[3], ſurrounded with iron rails :

" This tomb was erected to the memory of Mr. John Beaumont and Elizabeth his wife. She died July 29, 1774.
He died Oct. 21, 1779, aged 81 years."

On upright ſtones:

" Thomas Beaumont died April 15, 1739,
in the 41ſt year of his age."
" Roſe Beaumont 12 June, 1793, aged 61."
John Butteris 24 Dec. 1759, aged 84.
Sarah Butteris 21 Jan. 1763, aged 69.

---

[1] Of whom ſee ſome memoirs, pp. 77 & ſeqq.

[2] Mr. Vere Foſter, the then vicar ; who died in that year ; and of whom ſee p. 81.

[3] This is introduced in Plate VII.

The

The GENS BEVERIDGIANA[1].

The pariſh of Barrow is ſo materially indebted to the paſtoral labours of this truly reſpectable family, that, I truſt, it will not be thought an intruſion, to enter ſomewhat largely into their perſonal hiſtory; which will be elucidated from the parochial regiſters; in which the firſt of them that occurs is the rev. John Berridge, or Beveridge (for they thus indifferently ſpelt the name), who in 1602, being then D. D. of the Univerſity of Cambridge, was inducted to the rectory of Kibworth Beauchamp in this county, which was of his own patronage; as was alſo Barrow, of which he firſt ſigns himſelf vicar in 1617 (Johannes Beveridge, de Barrow ſuper le Soore, vicar'); to which in 1620 he preſented his ſon William, on obtaining for himſelf the rectory of Shelton in Bedfordſhire; was inſtalled precentor of Lincoln, by proxy, Dec. 21, 1621; and prebendary of Thorngate[2], in that church, Sept. 1, 1622. He died in London, May 12, 1632, aged 60; and his memory is preſerved on a braſs plate in Kibworth church; which ſtates that, by Dorothy, daughter of Ferdinand Fielding, eſq. he had three daughters, Mary, Feſtina, and Goodith, who all died before him; and ten ſons, Baſil, William, Ferdinand, George, Baſil[3], Michael, James, Jonathan, Samuel, and John[4]; all of whom (except the firſt Baſil and Michael) ſurvived him, as did alſo Dorothy his wife[5].

William Beveridge, B. D. the ſecond (and eldeſt ſurviving) ſon, who had been inſtituted to the vicarage of Barrow Oct. 24, and inducted Nov. 29, anno Dñi 1620, juxta computationem eccleſiæ Anglicanæ, calls himſelf "Willihelmus Beveriggius, preſbyter, & dictæ eccleſiæ paſtor indigniſſimus." He ſucceeded alſo, on his father's death, to the rectory of Kibworth; and held both preferments till 1640. That he was a man of learning is evident from the following letter to the original Hiſtorian of Leiceſterſhire; which is alſo a proof of the general eſteem in which Mr. Burton was held as an Antiquary by his contemporaries:

"To the right worſhipfull Mr. William Burton, eſq.
at his houſe at Lyndley theſe be d'd.

"WORTHY SIR, Barow, Aug. 23, 1627.

"Your much kindneſſe to me, both by word and deed expreſſed, as it doth embolden me much to ſolicit you in all things as the very Oracle of Antiquities; ſo doth it much more oblige me to do whatever in my poor power may be, to make ſome part of retribution. And therefore, whereas you called me to look into Mr. Camden's Annals of Ireland, in his Britannia, concerning ſir William Burton, I have done it accordingly, but found it not altogether anſwerable to that which, as I conceived, you had been formerly informed. Yet, as it is, I have tranſcribed it verbatim; nor is there, to my remembrance, any more mention of him or of that name in all that book, either before or after. I have alſo taken out that relation of which I told you, concerning a certain dogged diſeaſe in Leiceſterſhire[6], for the truth whereof penes authorem fides eſto. And both theſe, as I found them, I did in haſt copy out, and tranſmitt them in this encloſed paper. Moreover, I have ſince my being here met with ſomething which maketh me to have the better conceit of that which formerlie I had read and written out of an old nameleſs Chronicle concerning the kings of Leyceſter; namely, that that learned Biſhop Jewell calls another old Chronicle (which, by his relation, is not the ſame with this, yet, treating of the ſame ſubject, toucheth, as I may ſay, at the ſame point) ſpeaking with little variation of the ſame king, of the ſame place; and that paſſage of his, as it lyeth in him, I have herewith alſo ſent to you, referring it to your farther conſideration; for, truſting to my beſt, it ſeemeth not altogether improbable, in regard of the time, as being about the year of Chriſt 605, as the ſame author doth there demonſtrate; and the Mercian kingdom began not till 626, according to Mr. Lyne his deſcription of the Saxon Heptarchy. And as it is doubtleſs that it was in the hands of the Britans till that time, ſo is it like that they had a king or governor hereabouts for defence of ſo fertile a country. Moreover, it is apparent that the Britans were not at that time all under one king, but had, in ſeveral parts of their remaining dominions, ſeveral kings, as Holinſhed proveth out of Gildas; ſhewing alſo, how that in the battle at Dyorth, by king Cheuling, there were preſent and ſlain three kings of the Britans; but this I refer to your greater reading and better judgement. Now, as concerning the parſonage of Bowden, I can learn nothing, but that Bowden and Harborough are both chapels to one church, ſtanding in the fields of Bowden near to Harborough, called St. Mary's in Arden; but of this I am not confident; but I have lately bethought myſelf of a convenient mean whereby to be more fully aſcertained, but have not yet had opportunity to make uſe of it; but ſo ſoon as I can I will not fail. But, willing to do my beſt endeavours in this, or any other thing that may be for your pleaſure, I do for the preſent commend you and Mrs. Burton to the gracious protection of the Almighty, with many thanks for your great kindneſs, deſiring you ſtill and ever to eſteem me.

"I remember, in your Treatiſe on Coins[7], ſome of king William, which ſeem to be inſcribed Pilliam; but the difference, as I conceive, is eaſily decided by the Saxon W, which hath this form Ƿ, as Ƿilliam, which was groſsly expreſſed, as others as groſsly; viz. IIIIIP for IMP, &c. Yours ever in what is myne, WILLIAM BEVEREDGE[8]."

The Regiſter of Barrow records the births of three of his ſons: 1. John, baptized Feb. 12, 1631 (afterwards vicar); 2. William, baptized Feb. 11, 1636 (afterwards biſhop of St. Aſaph); Thomas, baptized March 1, 1631; and five daughters, Helen, born 1622-3; Elizabeth, 1624; Anne, 1626; Lucy, 1629; Eleanor, 1634.

Three daughters and a ſon of an Edward Beridge occur alſo about this period; Iſabel, 1627; Elizabeth, 1629; John, 1630 (died 1633); Mary, 1632.

Roſamond wife of Nicholas Segrave was licenced to eat fleſh, March 12, 1632, by William Beveridge.

Goodith Beridge, widow, buried Sept. 21, 1640.

Elizabeth the wife of William Beridge, preſbyter, was buried Oct. 20, 1640; and William Beridge, preſbyter, B. D. vicar of the perpetual vicarage of Barrow, and rector of Kibworth Beauchamp, was buried Oct. 29, 1640.

Memorandum, that Anthony Beridge, clerk, was inſtituted into the pariſh-church of Barrow, by John lord biſhop of Lincoln, the 26th day of November, 1640; and was inducted into the real and actual poſſeſſion of the ſame church the 1ſt day of November; and read, and gave his full and real aſſent and conſent unto, the book of the XXXIX Articles, Nov. 6, 1640, in the preſence of Theophilus Cave, William Love, William Lilly, and many other inhabitants of the ſame.

---

[1] See the ſmall, but expreſſive, memorial of gratitude inſcribed to this family, by a modern vicar, in p. 76.

[2] Dr. Browne Willis, in his liſt of the prebendaries of Thorngate, ſuppoſes Dr. John Beveridge (the laſt perſon who thought that unendowed prebend worth accepting) to have been alſo rector of Great Maſſingham in Norfolk, and to have been there buried. It is evident, however, by the date of his death, and by the expreſs mention of the precentorſhip in his epitaph, that this prebendary and the rector of Kibworth were the ſame perſon; and the rector of Maſſingham was probably his youngeſt ſon.

[3] Baſil Beridge entered into holy orders; and had ſome preferment within the dioceſe of Lincoln; as we find him a proctor for the clergy in that dioceſe in 1661. Kennett's Regiſter, pp. 481. 585.

[4] "John Beridge, M. A. rector of Maſſingham Magna, Norfolk, publiſhed a Sermon preached on the 29th of May, 1661." Kennett, p. 699.—In Blomefield's Norfolk, vol. IV. p. 638, it is ſtated that John Berege, D. D. died rector of St. Mary's in Great Maſſingham in 1698 (a miſtake for 1690); as in the ſame page we find the following epitaph: "Per varios caſus, hic jacet (& inturbatum jacet) corpus Joh'is Beregii, D. D. (qui fuit filius Joh'is Beregii, S. T. D.) hujus eccleſiæ rector. Ob^t 9 die menſis Novemb. a° D'ni 1690.—Sacrificium Deo;" with the ſame arms as were uſed by the Biſhop.

[5] See vol. II. p. 642.

[6] The ſuppoſed wharling found at Carleton Curlieu; "Rhotaciſmo quodam laborant," ſays Camden. See this explained, under Carleton, vol. II. p. 544.

[7] This probably ſtill remains in MS.

[8] See his hand-writing and ſeal in Plate VII.

Anthony Beridge had for ſeveral years been curate of Woodhouſe; and was preſented to the vicarage of Sileby by king Charles I, May 11, 1639[1]; whence, as well as from Barrow, he was ejected by the Parliamentary Sequeſtrators[2].

The actual officiating miniſter during the ſuſpenſion of Mr. Anthony Beridge does not appear, the Regiſter being at that period imperfect; but the baptiſms, &c. of 1652 are ſubſequently atteſted by "Jo. Beridge, vic'," the eldeſt ſon of William. He married in 1654 Anne Booth; by whom he had one ſon, William, born 1655, who died an infant, and one daughter, Elizabeth, 1657; and who was herſelf buried, May 28, 1658.

"Memorandum, that, whereas it is ſaid in this regiſter by Thomas Buck, then regiſter, that John Beveridge and Anne Booth were married by William Danvers, eſq.; this is to certify that John Beveridge and the ſaid Anne Booth were married, indeed, before William Danvers, eſq.; but they were married by Mr. Batty, then miniſter of Swithland, according to the office preſcribed in the book of Common Prayer; and that in the preſence of Mr. Stephen Lincolne and Mr. Thomas Overing of Leiceſter, and George Wild of Barrow."

John Beveridge, clerk, and Elizabeth Wileman, widow, were married, April 19, 1659, at Barkby, by Mr. Foe; and, after the Reſtoration, was preſented to the vicarage of Barrow; where, for ſome few years, he ſeems to have officiated on ſufferance.

Memorandum, that John Beveridge, clerk, and vicar of the pariſh-church of Barrow upon Soar, did read the Articles of the Church of England publicly in the congregation upon the 28th day of October, 1660, and gave his full aſſent and conſent thereto, in the preſence of us, Thomas Farnham, Henry Farnham, Thomas Lilley, John Tompſon, John Ferriman, Thomas Hackett.

From ſome irregularity, probably, in the former preſentation, Mr. Beveridge again went through the regular ceremony of inſtitution and induction.

Memorandum, that John Beveridge, clerk, was inſtituted into the vicarage of the pariſh-church of Barrow, by Robert lord biſhop of Lincoln, 8 die Maii, anno Domini 1661[3]; and was inducted into the real and actual poſſeſſion of the ſame church the 20th day of the ſame month; and upon the 26th of the ſame month did read, and give his aſſent to, the XXXIX Articles of the Church of England, in the preſence of John Whitties Thomſon, John Ferriman, William Squire, Francis Staples.

In the following year, Mr. Beveridge was again called upon, by the Act of Uniformity, to make a public declaration of his religious ſentiments[4].

Memorandum, that John Beveridge, clerk, vicar of the pariſh-church of Barrow upon Soar, did, upon the 28th day of September, 1662, openly and publicly in the congregation, read the Morning-prayer appointed to be read by the "Book of Common Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies, according to the uſe of the Church of England;" and did then and there declate his unfeigned aſſent and conſent to all and every thing therein contained and preſcribed; in the preſence of Henry Farnham, John Tompſon, Edward Morris, Thomas Clarke.

By his ſecond wife, Mr. John Beveridge had (at leaſt) one ſon and four daughters; Elizabeth, born 1660; Catharine, born 1662, died 1691; John, born at Kegworth 1663; Anne, born 166..; Frances, born 1668.

In May 1669 (being then M. A. of St. John's college, Cambridge), he was admitted ad eundem at Oxford; and I have ſeen ſeveral of his letters "to his honoured friend William Heyricke, eſq. at Beaumanor from 1682 to 1684; one of which ends thus:

"This, with my humble thanks for all your ſervices, and with the tender of my faithful ſervice to the noble Doctor, the good old Lady, and the two incomparable young ones, is all the trouble you ſhall at preſent receive from, Sir,

Your moſt faithful ſervant, Jo. BEVERIDGE.

I pray you, Sir, give my ſervice to Mr. Fox."

Mr. John Beveridge died in 1688[5]; his widow in 1691; and their ſon John Beveridge, alias Beridge, clerk, and vicar of Barrow, was inſtituted March 22, 1688; and inducted April 1, 1689.

John Richardſon, of Stretton upon Dunſmore in the county of Warwick, clerk, and Anne Beveridge of Barrow, married Oct. 30, 1695.

John Beveridge, vicar of Barrow, buried Dec. 1, 1695[5].

The vicarage may be ſaid ſtill to have continued in the family; for the next ſucceſſor was, John Richardſon, clerk, inſtituted Jan. 22, 1695, and inducted April 1, 1696.

William Beveridge[6], ſecond ſon of the abovementioned William, was baptized Feb. 11, 1636-7, at Barrow; and, after receiving the firſt rudiments of his education under the tuition of a learned father, was ſent to the ſchool of Oakham in Rutland, where he continued two years under Mr. Frear the then maſter[7]. After he was turned 16 years of age, on the 14th of May, 1653, he was admitted a ſub or proper ſizar in St. John's college, Cambridge, having for his tutor a Mr. Bullingham, at that time one of the fellows there[8]. He took the degree of B. A. 1656; M. A. 1660; D. D. 1679; diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his early piety and ſeriouſneſs; and procured general eſteem by his œconomy, ſobriety, and integrity. He applied with great aſſiduity to the Oriental languages, and made ſuch proficiency therein, that at 18 years of age he wrote a Treatiſe of the excellency and uſe of the Oriental tongues, eſpecially the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, and Samaritan; with a Syriac grammar. Jan. 3, 1661, he was ordained deacon, by Robert biſhop of Lincoln, in the church[9] of St. Botolph, Alderſgate; was preſented, by biſhop Sheldon, to the vicarage of Ealing, in Middleſex, the very next day[10]; and was ordained prieſt the 31ſt. He reſigned that vicarage, after having held it 13 years; being elected, by the mayor and aldermen of London[11], to the rectory of St. Peter in Cornhill, where he was inducted Nov. 22, 1672[12]. He applied himſelf to the diſcharge of his duty with the utmoſt zeal and aſſiduity; was highly inſtructive in his diſcourſes from the pulpit; and his labours were crowned with ſuch ſucceſs, that he was ſtyled "The great reviver and reſtorer of primitive piety[13]." Dr. Humphrey Henchman, the then biſhop of London, as a mark of eſteem, collated him to the prebend of Chiſwick in St. Paul's, Dec. 22, 1674; and the ſucceeding biſhop, Dr. Henry Compton, having conferred on him the archdeaconry of Colcheſter, Nov. 3, 1681, he viſited in perſon every pariſh within the archdeaconry, ſetting down his obſervations in a book in the poſſeſſion of his ſucceſſors[14]. On the 27th of November 1681, he preached, before Biſhop

---

[1] Rymer, vol. XX. p. 390.

[2] His name is barely mentioned by Mr. Walker. His hand-writing is ſhewn in Plate VII.

[3] "Johannes Beveridge, clericus, admiſſ. ad vic. de Barrow ſuper Sore, com. Leic. die 8 Maii, 1661, ad preſ. Henrici Farnham, generoſi." Reg. Sanderſon.

[4] It was not till the 24th of Auguſt, 1662, that the Church of England can be conſidered as abſolutely reſtored; the Preſbyterians and other Diſſenting miniſters, whoſe ordinations as well as doctrines were rejected by that Church, being ſo long left in poſſeſſion of their livings: but on the aforeſaid day (or as ſoon after as conveniently might be), by virtue of the Act of Uniformity paſſed in the ſame year, all the Clergy in general were required, under pain of deprivation, to read the Book of Common Prayer in their ſeveral congregations; and, after reading the ſame, ſolemnly to declare their unfeigned aſſent and conſent to all and every thing contained and preſcribed in and by the ſaid Book. See farther on this head in Milner's Hiſtory of Wincheſter, vol. I. p. 423.

[5] See his hand-writing in Plate VII; with his ſeal and arms; Argent, a ſaltire engrailed, between four eſcalops Sable. Creſt, a wolf's head eraſed, ducally gorged.

[6] His hand-writing is alſo ſhewn in Plate VII.

[7] E Regiſtro Coll. B. Johan. Evang. Cant.

[8] Ibid.

[9] This is ſomewhat oddly expreſſed in Kennett's Hiſtory and Regiſter, p. 353; it being there ſtated, that William Beveridge was ordained deacon "in loco convenienti in parochiâ Sc'i Botolphi;" and prieſt "in eodem loco."

[10] Newcourt's Repertorium Eccleſiaſticum, vol. I. p. 764.

[11] Ibid. p. 526.

[12] Kennett's Regiſter, p. 810.

[13] Newcourt, ubi ſupra, vol. I, p. 93.

[14] Wood's Faſti Oxonienſes, vol. II. col. 176; and Biographia Britannica, in his article.

Compton, a moſt excellent Sermon[1], "on the Excellency and Uſefulneſs of the Common Prayer," at the opening of the new-built church of St. Peter in Cornhill; and another, in the year 1683, "on the Anniverſary Faſt for the Fire of London," which thus ſolemnly begins: "There are many, I believe, here preſent at this time, who this day ſeventeen years ſaw this great City all in a flame; the mercileſs element of fire raging ſo furiouſly in it, that, maugre all the art and induſtry that man could uſe, in a few days it reduced the greateſt part of the City to aſhes, and rendered the whole a dreadful and aſtoniſhing inſtance of Divine vengeance." Nov. 5, 1684, he was inſtalled prebendary of Canterbury; and when, in king James the Second's reign, briefs were granted for collecting money for the relief of the perſecuted French Proteſtants, and Dr. Tillotſon, then dean of Canterbury, was very zealous for the contribution, Dr. Beveridge, as one of the prebendaries of that cathedral, either from a coolneſs towards foreign Proteſtants, or an unneceſſary ſcruple with reſpect to forms even in affairs of weight and ſubſtance, objected to the reading of a brief there, as contrary to the rubric. But the Dean made him this ſhort and ſignificant reply; "Doctor, doctor, charity is above rubrics[2]."

Amongſt the MSS in the Britiſh Muſeum[3], three letters of his are preſerved[4]; one written in 1685, the other two in 1687, to a lady whoſe name does not appear, but who ſeems to have been his patroneſs. They are all replete with ſentiments of the ſtricteſt piety; and in one of them reſpectful mention is made of a Madam Horton. In 1689, as rector of St. Peter's, he delivered the "Concio ad Clerum" before his brethren of Sion College; in the ſame year was appointed chaplain to king William and queen Mary, before whom he preached, at Whitehall, Oct. 12, 1690, "on the Happineſs of the Saints;" and in 1691 was offered, but refuſed to accept of, the ſee of Bath and Wells, vacant by the deprivation of Dr. Kenn, on his refuſing to take the oaths to king William and queen Mary[5]. In December, 1701, being at that time a proctor in convocation for the archdeaconry of Colcheſter, he was an unſucceſsful candidate for the office of Prolocutor[6]; but ſome time after accepted of the biſhoprick of St. Aſaph; and was deſervedly conſecrated, July 16, 1704[7]. On his advancement to the epiſcopal chair, he wrote a pathetic letter to the clergy of his dioceſe, recommending to them "the duty of catechizing and inſtructing the people committed to their charge in the principles of the Chriſtian Religion, to the end they might know what they were to believe and do, in order to Salvation;" and, to enable them to do this the more effectually, ſent them a plain expoſition of the Church Catechiſm. This good Prelate preached before the Houſe of Peers Nov. 5, 1704; and again, Jan. 30, 1705-6. In that auguſt Aſſembly he was a frequent attender[8], and ſteady defender of the rights and privileges of the Church of England[9]; but did not enjoy his epiſcopal dignity above three years and ſeven months; for he died, in the 72d year of his age, at his lodgings in the Cloiſters of Weſtminſter Abbey, March 5, 1707-8[10], and was buried in St. Paul's cathedral[11], where he has no memorial. The Biſhop was married; but of his wife we know nothing farther than that ſhe was ſiſter either to William Stanley, gentleman, of Hinckley, or to Mr. Stanley's wife; and that ſhe died before the Biſhop. In December 1706, he had the ſatisfaction of beſtowing the deanry of St. Aſaph on his nephew Dr. Stanley; and, by his laſt will[12], dated May 11, 1706, proved March 9, 1707-8, in thankful remembrance of God's mercies vouchſafed to him, he left the Hall Orchard eſtate in the pariſh of Barrow upon Soar (which had been his father's) to William the ſon of Anne Richardſon (his brother John's daughter), with £200; and appointed Mr. Bewicke, then vicar of Barrow, his guardian. An eſtate purchaſed of Mr. Rayſon, of £53. a year (in the ſame pariſh), out of which the widow Rayſon had £25. a year; and her daughter £5. till of age, the Biſhop bought to give to the church of Barrow; and (ſhould he make no other ſettlement before he died) gave it, in truſt, to Mr. Benjamin Bewicke, for the almſhouſes which Dr. Humph. Babington willed to be erected in the pariſh; and, till the erection of the almſhouſes, the rents to be given to the curate of Mountſorell. Should William Richardſon die before he became of age, his eſtate (the Hall Orchard) was to be added to the other. And ſhould the curate of Mountſorell neglect the performance of his duty, the biſhop of the dioceſe might give the emoluments to ſome other market-town in Leiceſterſhire. He gave the vicarage of Barrow to the maſter and fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge; with a proviſion, that if William

---

[1] This Sermon, of which at leaſt four editions were circulated with great rapidity, is thus unaffectedly dedicated to Biſhop Compton: "Your Lordſhip having ſignified your pleaſure that the Sermon which you heard, when you did us the honour to be preſent at the opening of our Pariſh-church, ſhould be made public; notwithſtanding my averſeneſs to print any thing in Engliſh, yet, out of a juſt ſenſe both of that obedience which I owe to you as my Biſhop, and of that kindneſs which I have received from you as my Patron, I have now done it, and herewith made bold to preſent it to you. What effect a diſcourſe of this nature will have upon the minds of thoſe who ſhall have ſo much patience as to read it, I know not; but muſt leave that to Him who hath the hearts of all men in his hand. My ſubject, I am ſure, is good and neceſſary; and, as for my plain and practical way of handling it, it is that which my text requireth, in that it commandeth that, in our Chriſtian congregations, 'All things be done to edifying:' ſo that, unleſs I had endeavoured to ſuit it to the capacities of all there preſent, and to make it as edifying as I could to them, my Sermon had been a contradiction to my text; and, beſides that, I had loſt my deſign in preaching it, which was, to convince thoſe eſpecially whoſe ſouls, under your Lordſhip, are committed to my care and conduct, of the excellency and uſefulneſs of the Common Prayer; and ſo to perſuade them to the conſtant and conſcientious uſe of it; not only becauſe it is conformable to the doctrine, diſcipline, and practice of the Univerſal Church; nor only becauſe it is eſtabliſhed by the laws both of our Church and State (though they alſo be very great reaſons); but likewiſe becauſe of that extraordinary benefit and advantage which they would receive from it, for the edifying of their ſouls in whatſoever is neceſſary to their eternal ſalvation. I am very ſenſible that much more might have been ſaid upon this excellent ſubject; but, intending no more than a plain Sermon upon the occaſion, I was forced to omit many things, and to confine myſelf to ſuch only which were moſt obvious, and ſeemed moſt neceſſary for people to know and practiſe, in order to their being reconciled unto, and edified by, our public prayers; and if, upon your peruſal of that little which I have ſaid, you ſhall find any thing not agreeable to the doctrine of our Church, I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhip's judgement and cenſure; only deſiring that you would be as ready to pardon as I to retract it. My Lord, I have one requeſt more to make unto you; which is, that, as you was the occaſion of my printing this Sermon, ſo you would be pleaſed to accept of it now it is printed; and if, by the bleſſing of Almighty God, it may contribute any thing to thoſe great ends which you ſo continually proſecute with ſo great wiſdom and prudence, with ſuch exemplary care and diligence, in the management of that high office which He hath called you to, even to the glory of his great name, the good of his church, and the ſalvation of the ſouls of men; it is all that is deſired by, my Lord, your Lordſhip's moſt humble and moſt obedient ſervant, WILLIAM BEVERIDGE."

[2] Birch's Life of Tillotſon, p. 121, 122.

[3] Ayſcough's Catalogue of MSS. 4274. 11—13. In 4275, 45, is another letter of his, in 1700, to Mr. Gibſon, then chaplain to the Biſhop of London.

[4] See his ſignature in Plate VII.

[5] On this account was publiſhed, "A Vindication of their Majeſties' authority to fill the ſees of the deprived Biſhops, in a Letter out of the Country, occaſioned by Dr. Beveridge's Refuſal of the Biſhoprick of Bath and Wells, 1694-5." Anthony Wood ſays, "This Dr. William Beveridge, who declined the biſhoprick of Bath and Wells, was a right learned man, and hath publiſhed ſeveral books and ſermons which ſhew him ſo to be." Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 176.

[6] The election was carried for Dr. Woodward, dean of Sarum, (through the intereſt of Dr. Atterbury) by 37 againſt 29.

[7] Willis's Hiſtory of the Church of St. Aſaph, p. 95; and Le Neve's Faſti, p. 23.

[8] The laſt day he was able to appear there in perſon was on the 20th of January, 1707-8.

[9] See Atterbury's Epiſtolary Correſpondence, 2d edition, vol. I. p. 423.

[10] In a publication of the moment, he was ſtyled "a gentleman no leſs eſteemed in foreign parts for his profound learning and great integrity, than he was admired at home, by all true Sons of the Church of England, for his ſtrict adhering to the Diſcipline as well as the Doctrine eſtabliſhed in her pureſt œconomy. He was Author of many learned pieces; and had a peculiar felicity in compoſing Sermons; one of which, namely, that of the uſe and excellency of the Common Prayer, will live as long as that incomparable Form itſelf." From a Newſpaper, called "The Supplement, March 8, 1707-8."

[11] Willis, Hiſtory of St. Aſaph, ubi ſupra.

[12] Copied at length in Mr. Baker's MSS. vol. XXXIV. p. 446.

Richardſon, or any other of his relations, would accept it, he ſhould be preſented in preference to any other perſon. Afterwards, the vicarage was to go to the College. The Biſhop, in this clauſe (which is ordered to be read at the preſentation of every perſon to the living), ſolemnly exhorts the Maſter and Fellows to chuſe a proper perſon. He made an addition alſo to the ſtipend of the curate of Mountſorell; and gave £20. per annum to each place, that prayers might be read morning and evening every day, according to the Liturgy of the Church of England, in the chapel and pariſh aforeſaid; and the farther ſum of 40*s.* to be divided equally, on the eve of our bleſſed Saviour's Nativity, amongſt eight poor women of Barrow, as the miniſter and churchwardens ſhould agree; regard being had eſpecially to thoſe who had been moſt conſtant at prayers, and at the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, the preceding year. "And, if it ſhould ſo happen (which God forbid!) that the Common Prayer cannot be read in the church or chapel aforeſaid, my will is," ſays this good Father of the Church, "that what ſhould be given in either place for that, be in each place allowed to one choſen by the vicar of Barrow, to teach ſchool, and inſtruct the youth in the principles of the Chriſtian Religion according to the doctrine of the Church of England[1]."

It is ſaid by the Author of the Biſhop's Life in the Biographia Britannica, that he gave the greater part of his eſtates to the Societies for propagating the Goſpel in Foreign Parts, and promoting Chriſtian knowledge. But this is a miſtake. To the Society for propagating the Goſpel he gave £100. The other Society is not noticed in his will[2].

His books he gave, in truſt, to Dr. William Stanley (his wife's nephew, afterwards Maſter of Bene't College, and Dean of St. Paul's[3]), to be placed in the cathedral church of St. Paul, as a foundation of a library for the benefit of the City Clergy.

To Dr. Stanley £10.; and to his wife £10.

To Dr. Stanley's ſon[4] (the Biſhop's godſon) £100.

To his nephew, Thomas Parry, £100.; and to his ſon William (another of the Biſhop's godſons) £100.

To Joyce Jeans, who lived with him and ſerved him faithfully many years, £100. and his linen, much of it having been of her ſpinning.

Small legacies to his other ſervants.

To the poor of Barrow £10.

To the poor of Llanelwy (or St. Aſaph) £10.

To Timothy Gregory, his ſecretary and executor, £100.

His works ſhew him to have been an extraordinary perſon. They are, 1. "De Linguarum Orientalium, præſertim Hebraïcæ, Chaldaïcæ, Syriacæ, Arabicæ, & Samaritanicæ, præſtantiâ & uſu, cum Grammaticâ Syriacâ; 1658;" 8vo. 2. "Inſtitutionum Chronologicarum libri duo, unà cum totidem Arithmetices Chronologicæ libellis; 1669;" 4to, 3. "Συνόδικον; ſive Pandectæ Canonum S. S. Apoſtolorum & Conciliorum ab Eccleſiâ Græcâ receptorum, &c. Oxonii, 1672;" two vols. folio. 4. "Codex Canonum Eccleſiæ Primitivæ vindicatus & illuſtratus, with a Vindication and Illuſtration of the ſame; 1679[5];" 4to. 5. "The Church Catechiſm explained for the uſe of the Dioceſe of St. Aſaph; 1704," 4to; re printed ſeveral times ſince in a ſmall volume.—Beſides the above-mentioned works of this Prelate, we have the following, publiſhed after his death by his executor, Timothy Gregory, not intended for the preſs by himſelf. 6. "Private Thoughts upon Religion, digeſted into twelve articles, with Practical Reſolutions formed thereupon;" written in his younger years (when he was about 23 years old) for the ſettling of his principles and conduct in life[6]; 1709. 7. "Private Thoughts upon a Chriſtian Life; or, Neceſſary Directions for its Beginning and Progreſs upon Earth, in order to its Final Perfection in the Beatific Viſion; 1709." 8. "The great Neceſſity and Advantage of Public Prayer and Frequent Communion: deſigned to revive Primitive Piety; with Meditations, Ejaculations, and Prayers, before, at, and after, the Sacrament; 1710:" theſe have been reprinted ſeveral times in 8vo and 12mo. 9. "One hundred and fifty Sermons and Diſcourſes, on ſeveral Subjects, 1708," 12 vols. 8vo: re-printed in 1719, in 2 vols. folio. His life, prefixed to this edition of his Sermons, was written by Mr. Kimber, a Baptiſt miniſter in London. 10. "A Defence of the Book of Pſalms, collected into Engliſh Metre, by Thomas Sternhold, John Hopkins, and others; with Critical Obſervations on the New Verſion compared with the Old;" 1710, 8vo: in this book he gives the old verſion the preference to the new. 11. "Expoſition of the XXXIX Articles; 1710," 1716, folio[7]. 12. "Theſaurus Theologicus; or, a Complete Syſtem of Divinity, ſummed up in brief notes upon ſelect places of the Old and New Teſtaments: wherein the Sacred Text is reduced under proper heads, explained and illuſtrated with the Opinions and Authorities of the Antient Fathers, Councils, &c.; 1711," 4 vols. 8vo.

A ſmall portrait of him, at the age of 71, is here given in Plate VII.[8]; copied from one prefixed in 1710 to "The great Neceſſity of Public Prayer," thus inſcribed, "On the Right Reverend Father in God, William Beveridge, D. D. late Lord Biſhop of St. Aſaph:

"No more of frail Mortality complain,
Impartial Death, or his tyrannic reign,
That Beveridge with common duſt ſhould lie;
But learn like him to live, like him to die.
With pure Religion was his ſpirit fraught,
And practis'd what himſelf to others taught:
Humble and meek, learn'd, pious, prudent, juſt,
Of good report, and faithful to his truſt,
Vigilant, ſober, watchful of his charge;
Who fed his ſheep, and did their folds enlarge.
Follow your paſtor, who to Heaven is gone;
Read o'er his Works, and they will lead you on."

Dr. Felton ſays, that "our learned and venerable Biſhop hath delivered himſelf with thoſe ornaments alone which his ſubject ſuggeſted to him, and both written in that gravity and ſimplicity, which give authority to the ſacred truths he teacheth, and unanſwerable evidence to the doctrines he defendeth. That there is ſomething ſo great, primitive, and apoſtolical, in his writings, that it creates an awe and veneration in our mind; that the importance of his ſubjects is above the decoration of words; and what is great and majeſtic in itſelf, looketh moſt like itſelf the leſs it is adorned[1]." The author of "The Guardian" alſo, having made an extract out of one of the Biſhop's Sermons[2], tells us, "that it may for acuteneſs of judgement, ornament of ſpeech, and true ſublime, compare with any of the choiceſt writings of the Antients, who lived neareſt to the Apoſtles' times." The opinions of various other writers on his writings[3] and ſtyle may be ſeen in his article in the Biographia Britannica, and particularly in the Additions to it by Dr. Kippis in the ſecond edition of that work.

---

[1] See Stow's London, by Strype, vol. II. Appendix I. p. 138.

[2] Biſhop Beveridge preached the Anniverſary Sermon of the Society for propagating the Goſpel in Foreign Parts in 1706, not long before his death; his text, 2 Cor. ix. 2. And might not his own zeal be provoked to be a contributor by his laſt will to the charitable inſtitution he had ſo lately commended and recommended from the pulpit? The two Societies for propagating and promoting are too frequently blended by writers from inadvertency.

[3] An account of him will be given under Hinckley, his native place.

[4] Afterwards rector of Much Haddam, Herts, in 1723, on the reſignation of his father, who then was dean of St. Aſaph, and archdeacon of St. Paul's.

[5] This book is a vindication of the Author's opinion concerning the authority of the Apoſtolical Canons, and the time when they were made. In his Notes on theſe Canons he had fixed the date of them at the end of the ſecond, and beginning of the third century; taking a middle courſe between Francis Turrianus, who affirmed that they were all made by the Apoſtles at the Council of Jeruſalem; and John Daillé, who maintained that they were not compoſed till the fifth century, by ſome impoſtor, and did not appear till the end of that century. In the Notes above-mentioned, Mr. Beveredge had made ſome reflections on this opinion of Daillé, whereupon an anonymous author publiſhed "Obſervations upon Mr. Beveridge's Reflections;" to which the "Codex Canonum Eccleſiæ Primitivæ vindicatus" is a reply.

[6] This Work, from an imperfect MS copy, was reviſed and publiſhed (at the requeſt of the bookſeller into whoſe hand it fell) by Dr. Joſeph Smith, provoſt of Queen's College, Oxford, though without his name; who likewiſe made large additions and improvements to it of his own, but with a juſt regard to the ſentiments of its pious and learned Author. He was alſo concerned in publiſhing our Author's Expoſition on the XXXIX Articles. And the ſaid learned Editor, in his Preface to the firſt volume of thoſe incomparable Private Thoughts, has given a very excellent character of this truly primitive Prelate, who, he juſtly obſerves, was the great reviver and reſtorer of Piety.

[7] Upon the publication of this, there came out a pamphlet, intituled, "A Short View of Dr. Beveridge's Writings, which may ſerve as a preliminary Diſcourſe to an Examination of his Articles." Lond. 1711, 8vo; a pamphlet, wherein the good Biſhop's works are ſeverely attacked, and often perhaps juſtly. The Expoſition upon the firſt Article was publiſhed ſingly 1716.

[8] In the ſame plate is a ſpecimen of his hand-writing.

Some particulars relative to Mr. VERE FOSTER, vicar of Barrow, will be found in a future page[4].

NATURAL HISTORY.

Barrow has for many centuries been famed for a very hard blue lime-ſtone[5], deſervedly eſteemed for building, which fixes immediately in water like tarras, and is of ſuch quality, that, if rightly worked and mixed with proper ſand, and a hard ſtone-floor be laid with it, the ſtones will wear away, and the mortar ſtand above them. Lime-ſtone is found with the greateſt certainty under a clayey ſoil, but occurs under all ſoils, at a depth from 2 to 10 or 12 feet. It does not anſwer to get it where the upper floor of ſtone is deeper, as it coſts not leſs than 3*d.* a cubick-yard for digging it and bringing it out in hand-barrows. Sometimes the upper-floor, then called rummel, is worth nothing but to build bad walls. Seven floors of ſtone have been found. There may be more, but, on account of the depth, ſeldom more than five are got up. The floors dip towards the Eaſt; ſo that if the ground riſe that way, the increaſing depth of the lime-ſtone puts an end to the getting it up. Between the floors ſometimes is found a kind of ſlaty clay, called ſlaven; in other places a fine pure clay, which might perhaps be uſeful for pot-ware.

The ſlip of land dug up is called a lime-ſtone delph: it is uſually four yards wide; and that width, and nine yards in length, is termed a hade. The lime-men contract for a certain price per yard, or per hade. The diſtance between the floors of ſtone is uncertain, from ſix to 18 inches. The lower floors are more ſolid, more marble-like, than the upper-floor[6]. They are uſed for ſteps, houſe-floors, and chimney-pieces.

The lime-ſtone, when dug up, is piled in form of a cone, and burnt. The burning of one of theſe heaps takes up two days and three nights.

Mr. Marſhall obſerves, that "it is an intereſting fact, that the ſtone, from which the Barrow-lime is burnt, is, in colour, texture, and quality, of component parts, the ſame as the clay-ſtone of Glouceſterſhire, from which the ſtrong lime of that diſtrict is burnt; and, what is ſtill more remarkable, it is found in ſimilar ſituations, and depoſited in thin ſtrata, divided by thicker ſeams of calcareous clay, in the very ſame manner in which the clay-ſtone of Glouceſterſhire is found. One hundred grains of the ſtone contain eighty-ſix grains of calcareous matter; affording fourteen grains of an impalpable tenacious ſilt, which ſeems to be poſſeſſed of ſome ſingular properties; forming a ſubject well entitled to future enquiry. One hundred grains of the clay contain forty-ſix grains of calcareous matter, leaving fifty-four grains of reſiduum, a fine clay. Hence this earth, which at preſent lies an encumbrance in the quarries, is richer in calcaroſity than the CLAY MARL of the Fleg hundreds of Norfolk, with which very valuable improvements are made. Since writing this article, I have obſerved in the Vale of Belvoir, at the Northernmoſt point of Leiceſterſhire, a ſimilar ſtone[7], ſituated in a ſimilar manner, and producing a ſimilar kind of lime[8]."

It has been ſaid, that the uſe of the Barrow lime, even though it ſhould merit all its reputation, can never be general, becauſe of its being in the centre of the kingdom[9]. But this muſt be from old ideas, and by no means applicable to preſent times; when the Soar is made navigable through the pariſh, communicates with the Trent, and has an uninterrupted navigation to the great ſea-ports of Liverpool and Hull[10].

Barrow lime-ſtone was taken by land carriage to Nottingham[11], and thence by water to Ramſgate, for the conſtructing of its pier, being burnt there, and tempered into mortar by a maſon from Barrow: this was done after the Dutch tarras-mortar had failed[12].

This lime is alſo in ſuch repute for water-works, that much of it is exported to Holland[13]; and the demand has within theſe few years greatly increaſed.

New-burnt lime, well ſlacked and ſifted, and mixed with pure river-ſand by beating them together, forms a cement which is uſed, inſtead of lead, to line rain-water ciſterns. Is there any other lime, with which the like can be done with good effect?

Great quantities of it are alſo uſed, in Leiceſterſhire and other parts, for land. Laid on from 15 to 25 quarters per acre ſecures a good crop of clover, &c. after barley or wheat. On extending the incloſures in this county, many of the old ones are broken up; and it is found good policy ſo to do. They lime them; and in three or four years lay them down again.

Lime-ſtone will not bear heat or froſt; and therefore is little uſed for buildings, or mending of roads.

Icthyolithi, or foſſil-fiſh, have of late years been found here very frequently; and cornua ammonis, ſea-ſhells, and plants, alſo occur, though more rarely[14]. Marks of the Ammonites, however, are common in the ſlaven and rummel; ſometimes in the lime-ſtone. The fiſh are found in lime-ſtone; the ſhells are bedded in a gritty kind of calcareous ſtone.

The fiſh lie rather above ſome one of the floors of lime-ſtone. The workmen, after ſplitting them with their tools, offer them to ſale. The greateſt number together of theſe were found ſome years ago in digging up a homeſtead for the lime-ſtone. After digging through about ſix feet thickneſs of blue clay, a bed of gravel about a yard thick occurred, which was full of the kind of ſhells engraved in Plates VIII. and IX. and alſo of bones and horns of rein-deer.

The firſt of theſe foſſils particularly noticed contained a wonderfully fine impreſſion or petrifaction of an unknown fiſh, the impreſſion on each ſide equally perfect, the fins, tail, and ſcales, retaining the living form ſtrikingly preſerved[15]. The ſhape reſembled that of the Sea-bream, or Sparus Pagrus Linnæi[16]; but in that the tail is forked. The ſcales in the foſſil are alſo much larger. The ſubſtance of the fiſh was compreſſed, whilſt tender, by the ſurrounding fluid, in the ſwell of its body, to about a quarter of an inch; and had the appearance, in moſt part of its ſcales, of a blackiſh glaſs, equally brittle and impenetrable. It meaſured, over the broadeſt part of its body, near ten inches. The whole of this ſtone, which was accidentally expoſed to the weather during the winter, and ſplit with the froſt before any notice was taken of it, was in 1775 poſſeſſed by Mr. Storer Beaumont[1] of Barrow; who in 1777 gave the half which contained the moſt perfect form of the head, together with the ſtone engraved in fig. 7, to the late Rev. Thomas Green, M.A. Woodwardian Lecturer at Cambridge, ſon of the Rev. Thomas Green, late rector of Walton on the Woulds. The other half, ſtolen with ſome other articles from Mr. Beaumont's garden-houſe, was ſhown about for ſome time as a curioſity, and is now ſuppoſed to form part of the valuable collection of a Nobleman in Suſſex.

---

[1] Diſſertation on the Claſſics, 1730, p. 190.

[2] Sermon on Exodus iii. 14. See the Guardian, N° 74.

[3] In the Monthly Review for July 1792, p. 277, he is ſtyled the laſt Calviniſtical Biſhop.

[4] See before, p. 76; and hereafter, under Quorndon, p. 104.

[5] "Calx laudatiſſimæ firmitatis effoditur," ſays Camden.

[6] This is common in ſtone-quarries, and in lead ones too. G. A.

[7] Remarks on the Agriculture of the Midland Counties.

[8] The moſt like it that I have met with, and which alſo ſets under water like our lime, is what is burnt at Long Bennington, Lincolnſhire. W. E.

[9] Annals of Agriculture, vol. XIV. p. 402.

[10] When there was no ſuch thing, ſir Robert Walpole, about 1720, (perhaps partly to oblige his friend ſir Joſeph Danvers) had his ſlates for the offices at Houghton in Norfolk from Swithland. G. A.

[11] They have now a direct communication by water-carriage to this and many other conſiderable towns.

[12] Query, if Mr. Smeaton did not alſo uſe it in building the Edyſtone light-houſe?

[13] The induſtrious Dutch actually import lava; and though it is ſo hard a ſubſtance, they find their account in reducing it to a fine powder by mills, and vending it for pozzolana. This ſubſtance, thus manufactured, is what the Dutch call tras, and we tarras. It is generally ſuppoſed to be pozzolana; but I have very little doubt of its being factitious." See Mr. Profeſſor Martyn's very excellent Enquiry on the ſubject, referred to hereafter, under Mountſorell, p. 90.

[14] On this ſubject ſee more fully hereafter, under the Natural Hiſtory of the County.

[15] Another foſſil, found about the ſame time, had ſome little reſemblance to the ſkeleton of an animal's head (ſee Plate VIII. fig. 7.); and the detached ſtone which contained it (found alſo in the bed of clay) ſeemed rather more like free-ſtone than the other. Near one of the pits were alſo found ſome petrified ſea-ſhells, among the ſtrata above the lime-ſtone.

[16] See Pennant's Zoology, vol. III. 8vo, p. 242.

The Rev. George Aſhby, in a letter to a friend ſome years ſince, ſays, "I know nothing that better deſerves engraving than the very fine fiſh, about twelve inches long, now in excellent preſervation in the Muſeum at Cambridge, along with Dr. Woodward's foſſils; but it ſhould by all means be aſcertained whether it is a freſh or ſalt water fiſh."

This wiſh has ſince been very amply complied with; for, the ingenious Mr. Jones, in his "Philoſophical Diſquiſitions, 1781," 4to, concludes his Seventh Section with General Obſervations and Directions on the Subject of Foſſils; which may be conſidered as a philoſophical theory of this terraqueous globe[2]; and, under the head of "Squamous or Scaly Fiſh," after deſcribing ſeveral good ſpecimens of foſſil bodies, adds, "But our own country hath lately afforded what I apprehend to be the greateſt curioſity of the ſort that ever appeared[3]. It is the entire figure of a Bream[4], more than a foot in length, and of a proportionable depth, with the ſcales, fins, and gills, fairly projecting from the ſurface like a ſculpture in relievo, and with all the lineaments, even to the moſt minute fibres of the tail, ſo complete, that the like has never been ſeen before. It was taken from the ſtone quarries at Barrow; and is now, by a fortunate circumſtance, in the poſſeſſion of the learned Mr. Green, Woodwardian profeſſor of foſſils in the Univerſity of Cambridge, who has given me leave to preſent the reader with a copy of it."

For the following ſcientific explanation of the two annexed Plates, my Readers are indebted to the kind attention of Dr. PULTENEY. The additions within hooks are chiefly by my excellent friend Mr. CRABBE.

Plate VIII. fig. 1. exhibits one ſide of the very fine Ichthyolithus found at Barrow, and now preſerved at Cambridge, exactly copied from Mr. Jones's Plate.

[The ſpecies of this fiſh cannot be accurately told; for, it is doubtful whether it has ever been deſcribed. Several volumes have been turned over to very little purpoſe; and the ſpecies is probably entirely unknown to our ſeas.]

Petrified fiſhes, both whole and in parts, are not uncommon in various parts of the world; and are uſually found in argillaceous or ſchiſtoſe bodies; but, in moſt inſtances, in ſo mutilated a ſtate by compreſſion, or from ſome other cauſes, that it is ſeldom poſſible to refer them to the ſpecies to which they belong. The Iſland of Shepey abounds with them; where they are bedded in the cliffs with many other extraneous foſſils, and often decompoſe, on expoſure to the air, by the large admixture of pyrites in them. An account of theſe may be ſeen in the Foſſilia Shepeïana annexed to Mr. Jacob's Plantæ Faverſhamienſes. Some of the moſt elegant Ichthyolithi come from Pappenheim, in Germany, where they are found in what is called Margodes ſlate.

This figure cannot well be referred to the Sea-bream, as that is a more oblong fiſh, and could not be ſuppoſed, even under compreſſion, to take this form. Its outline has more reſemblance to a flat fiſh; but the rudiment of one eye only, and the ſize of the ſcales, do not allow its being referred to thoſe genera. Were a farther gueſs to be indulged, it ſeems rather to belong to the genus Chætodon, and anſwers in outline to the Chætodon Bengalenſis of Bloch. See vol. VI. p. 81. t. 213. f. 3.

Fig. 2. is a ſmaller fiſh of the ſame ſpecies, found alſo at Barrow, and now in the collection of the rev. William Mounſey, vicar of Sproxton; who ſuppoſes it to be of the flounder or plaice kind. The ſize is exactly the ſame as in the engraving. Mr. Mounſey has another of the plaice kind, 13 inches long and 9 broad, but by no means ſo perfect a ſpecimen.

Fig. 3, which is alſo in Mr. Mounſey's poſſeſſion, and engraved the ſame ſize as the original, is a ſkeleton embodied in calcareous ſtone, but of what animal there is not ſufficient ground to form a reaſonable conjecture. [Perhaps it may be the Sea-Crab.]

Fig. 4. is another of the Barrow flat fiſh, from the collection of Mr. Tailby. The engraving is the ſize of the original; the impreſſion of the fiſh very gloſſy, and of a duſky brown colour, but in ſome parts very faint.

[Upon a farther inveſtigation of figures 1, 2, and 4, this fiſh appears to be of the thoracic order; that is, the ventral fins are placed nearly beneath the pectoral, as in fig. 1; now, of that tribe, the figures ſtrongly reſemble the genus Sparus, the Gilt-head, of which one ſpecies is called the Sea-bream. The fins likewiſe reſemble thoſe of this family; and, though the common Gilt-head has a forked tail, ſome of the kind have it even, and like the figures. The ſcales alſo corroborate this opinion. But it muſt be confeſſed that the Sea-bream, ſometimes caught in our ſeas, is a different fiſh, whoſe tail is much forked: it is two feet long, and ſhaped like a Roach. See Pennant's Zöology, vol. III. pl. XLIII.]

Fig. 5. is a ſmall fiſh of a totally different ſpecies, bedded in calcareous clay; and is delineated by Mr.

---

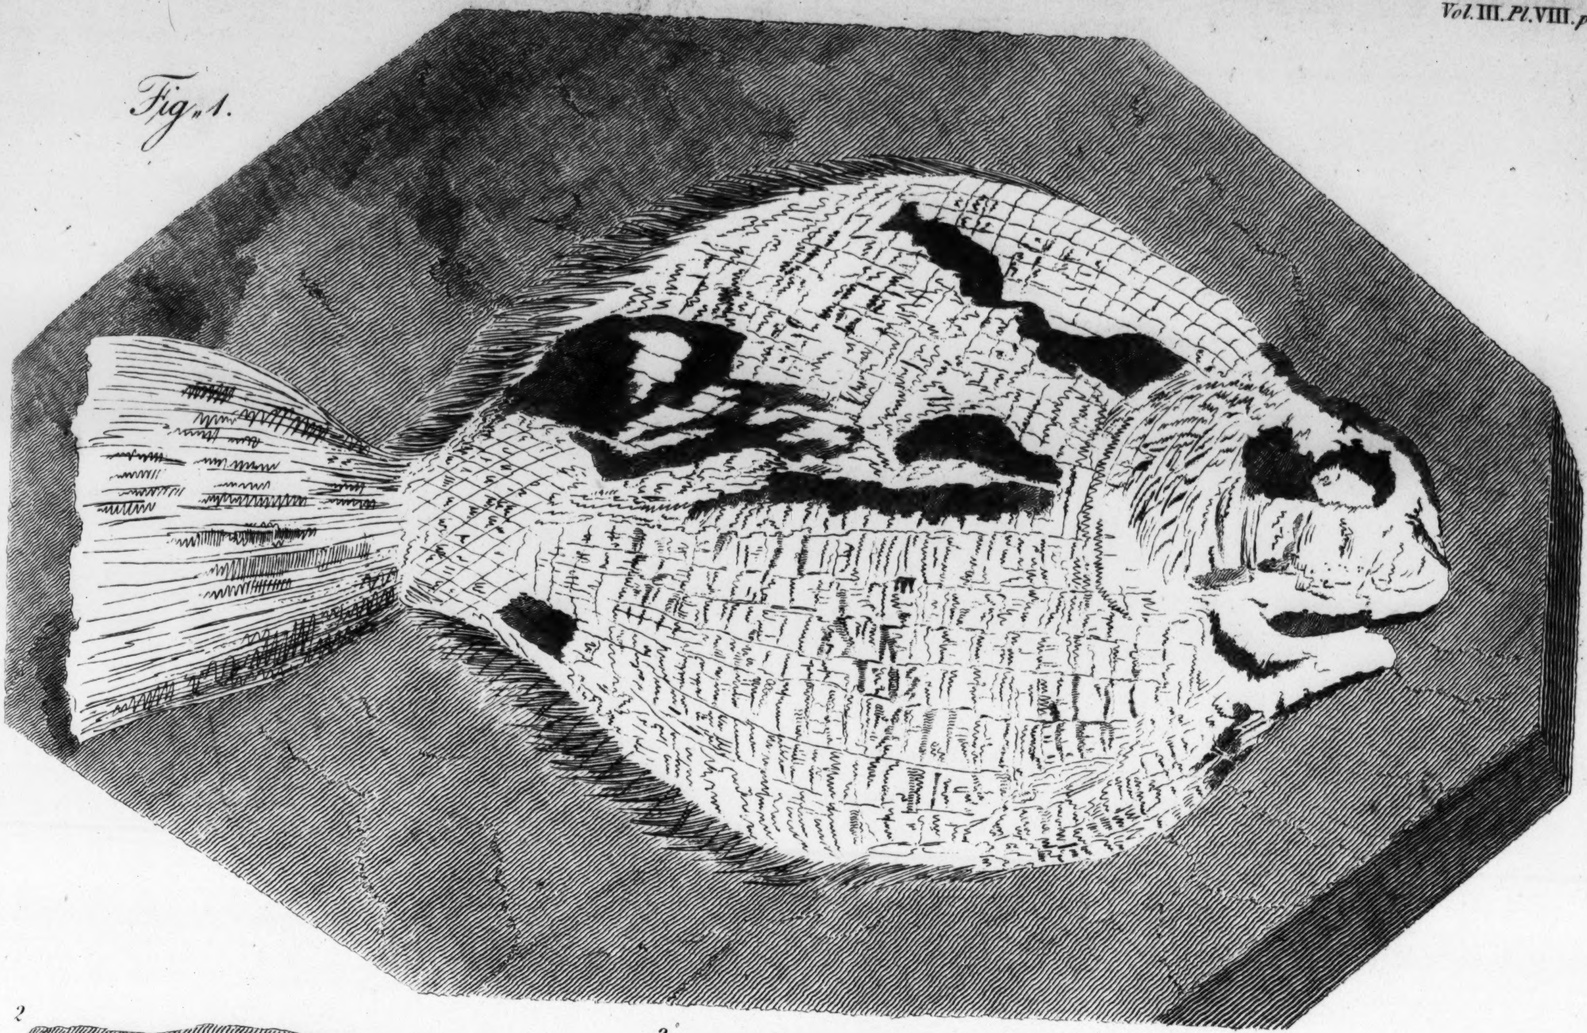
[1] Mr. Beaumont has, in his collection, part of an immenſely large animal's tooth, found at Mountſorell.

[2] "Mr. Leibnitz, in 1716, intended beginning his Hiſtory of Brunſwick by a diſſertation on the ſtate of Germany, ſuch as it was before all hiſtory, and which muſt be gueſſed at by the natural and unlettered monuments ſtill remaining; ſuch as petrified ſhells on the earth, ſtones marked with fiſhes and plants, particularly ſuch as were no longer natives of the country; medals undeniably of a deluge. Thence he proceeds to the moſt antient inhabitants of which there are any accounts; to the different people who ſucceeded one another in the country; and treats of their language, and of its mixture, as far as it can be judged of by etymology, the only monuments in theſe caſes; pp. 31. 191." G. A.

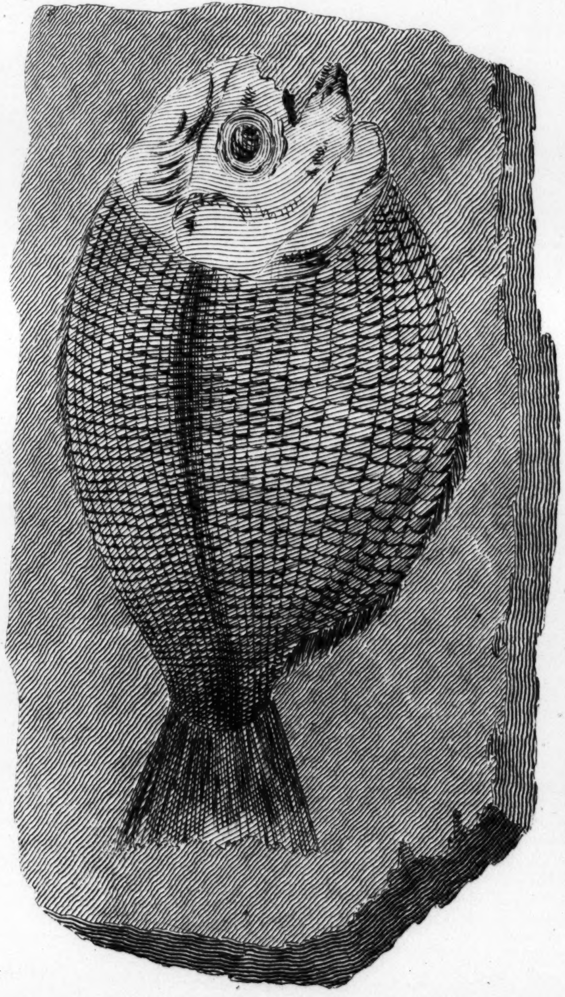
[3] Mr. Jones, p. 412, ſays, "Another very fine foſſil-fiſh of a different conſtitution was diſcovered in a block of Leiceſterſhire coal, at the houſe of the late ſir John Robinſon in Northamptonſhire. It is a conſiderable part of the body of a ſalmon (or rather the image of what once was its body) in a white ſand-ſtone, with the lineaments of the ſcales. The cavity of the belly is filled with coal; which is a very ſingular circumſtance. It was preſented (about 1780) by ſir George Robinſon to ſir Aſhton Lever, and is now preſerved in his Muſeum." This extraneous foſſil, however, is not a fiſh, but a vegetable; and is thus deſcribed in the Leverian Catalogue, by the late Mr. Da Coſta: "33. A flat caſt of grit-ſtone, 11 inches long and 5 broad. It is all over wrought with a quincunx work of contiguous rhombs; but is neither fair, nor ſtrongly impreſſed. It has alſo ſome ſmall fragments of coal-cruſt on it." A faithful ſketch of it is given in Plate VIII. fig. 8; taken by Mr. Baſire from the original, now (1798) in the matchleſs collection of Mr. Parkinſon; which (amongſt other truly valuable curioſities) can boaſt of an infinite variety of uncommonly fine foſſil fiſh from foreign parts; but has none that has been found in England in any degree to be compared with thoſe of Barrow.

[4] Mr. Aſhby obſerves, "If Mr. Jones's figure is correct, it never appeared to me more like to a bream than a mackarel, or any other fiſh. I do not argue this from its thinneſs, as that might naturally happen from compreſſion; but, from what was incapable of alteration, the fins ſurrounding the outline on both ſides from the ſhoulders to the tail, as in the order of flat fiſh, except that their fins begin at the very head; the ſcales alſo muſt be different."—This worthy and intelligent correſpondent (who has loſt his ſight, but not his zealous attachment to literary and philoſophical reſearches) ſince adds, "My ſcribe, who is a draftſman, tells me, that it appears to him much more like to the Sea-bream; Willoughby, Tab. V. fig. 5; or rather, as he thinks, fig. 1. and 7. of the ſame plate; and therefore ſhould not be called a Bream, a fiſh it differs from ſo eſſentially, and which is well-known to many. After all, as moſt of our foſſil plants, ſhells, &c. are of foreign extraction, this may be ſo, and unknown to us; but then it ſhould not be called by a name familiar to us.—Whether it is a River or Sea Bream is no otherwiſe material than as one loves to be right; for, both are often found intermixed in the ſame place; of which there are ſeveral inſtances. In a volcanic tract near Aix in Provence, 105 diſtinct ſpecies have been diſcovered, chiefly freſh-water; but parts of crabs, and one whole one, have been found, &c. &c. much to the purpoſe. Crit. Rev. 1798, 2d Appendix; from Sauſſure's late Tour. This union ſeems to have perplexed the learned; but I am either wiſer or more ignorant than they, for I can ſee no difficulty at all. Buffon and the French philoſophs allow that our globe has been covered with water to the height of 60 toiſes: muſt not therefore fiſhes of every kind have ſwam together promiſcuouſly in this vaſt circumambient body of water; and would not their bones naturally be lodged in the hollows of the land, on the oceans' retiring to their preſent beds? In another place, M. Sauſſure accounts for the appearance, from the lakes having been ſucceſſively filled, at different times, with ſalt and freſh water. It may be ſo: but does not the former ſuppoſition fully account for the fact?" G. A.

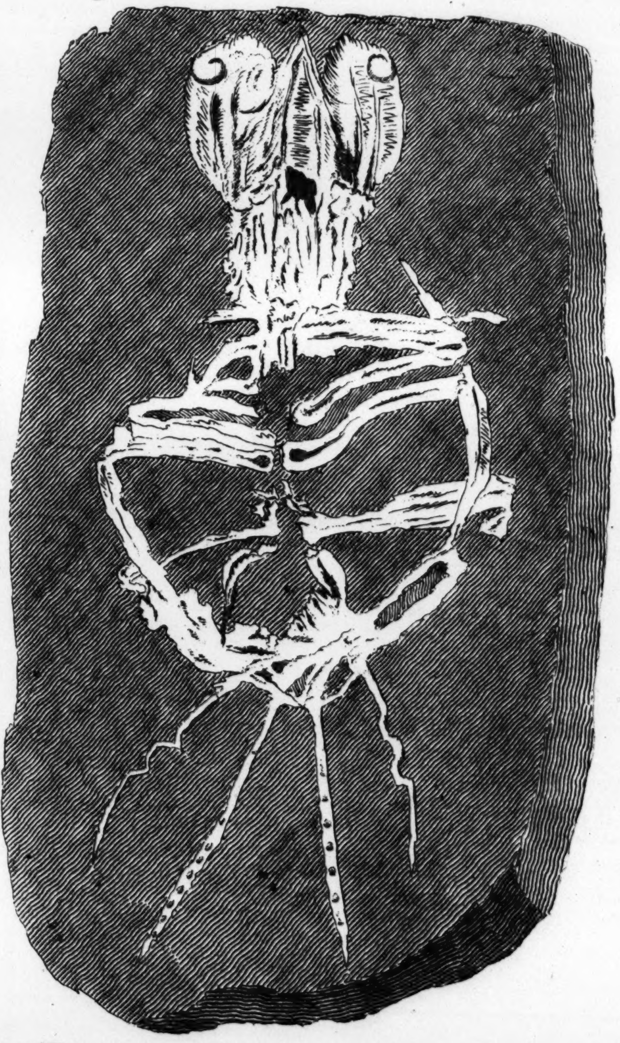
Fig. 1.



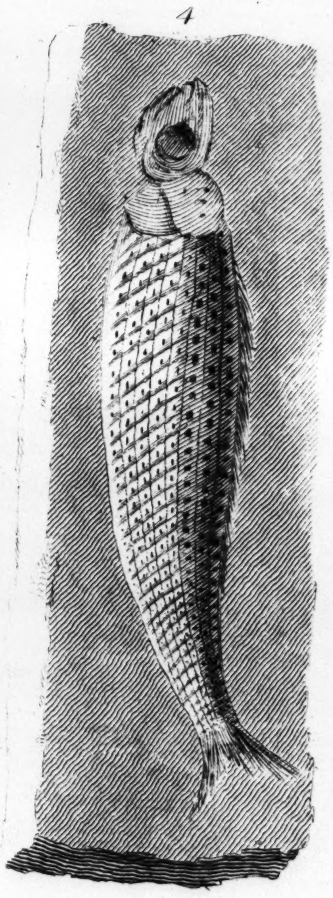
2



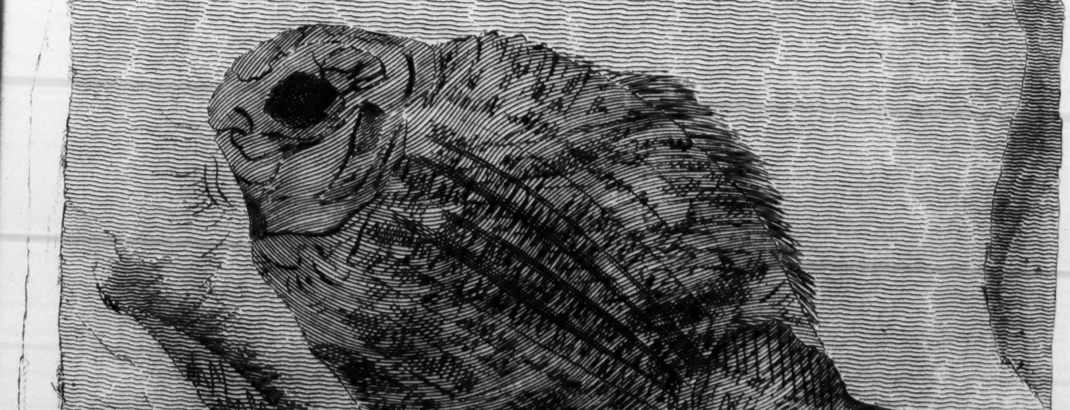
3



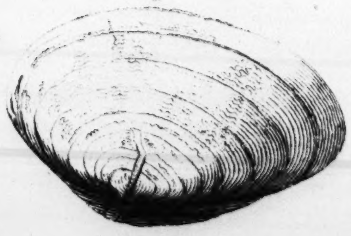
4



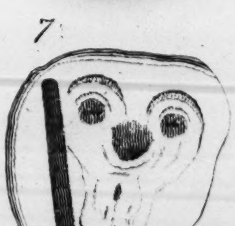
5



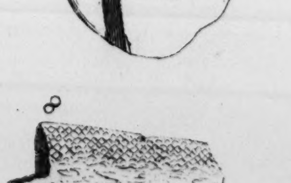
6



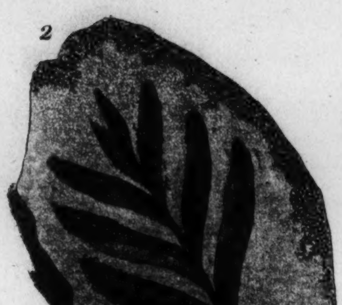
7



8



2



3

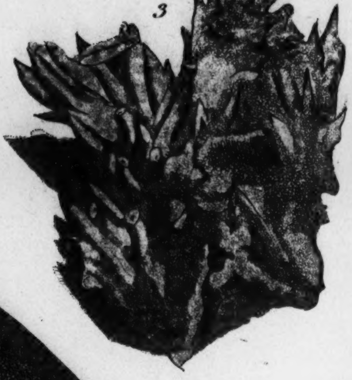


Fig. 1.

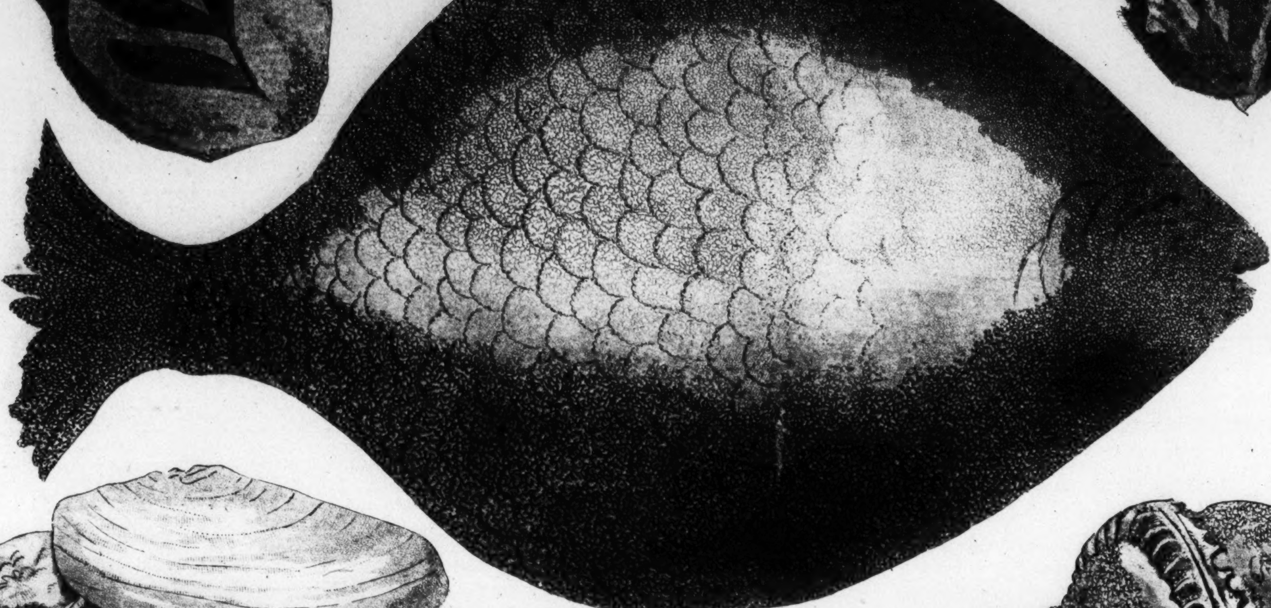
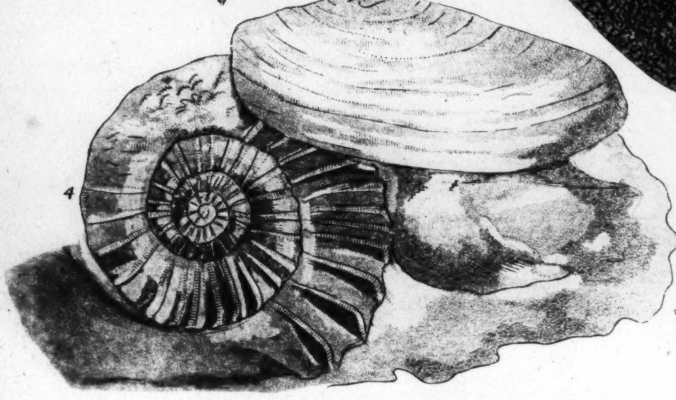
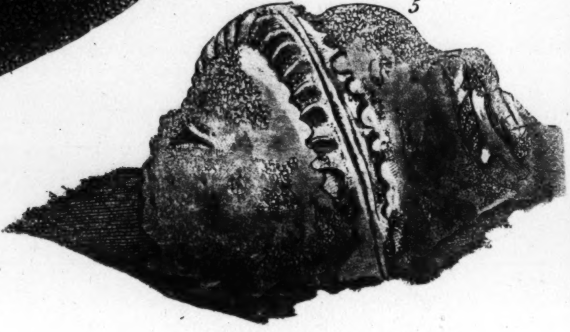


4

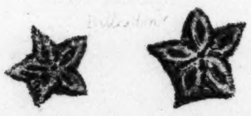


5

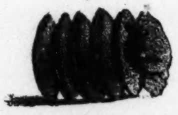


12

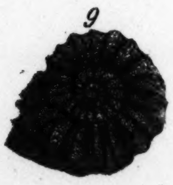
[illegible]



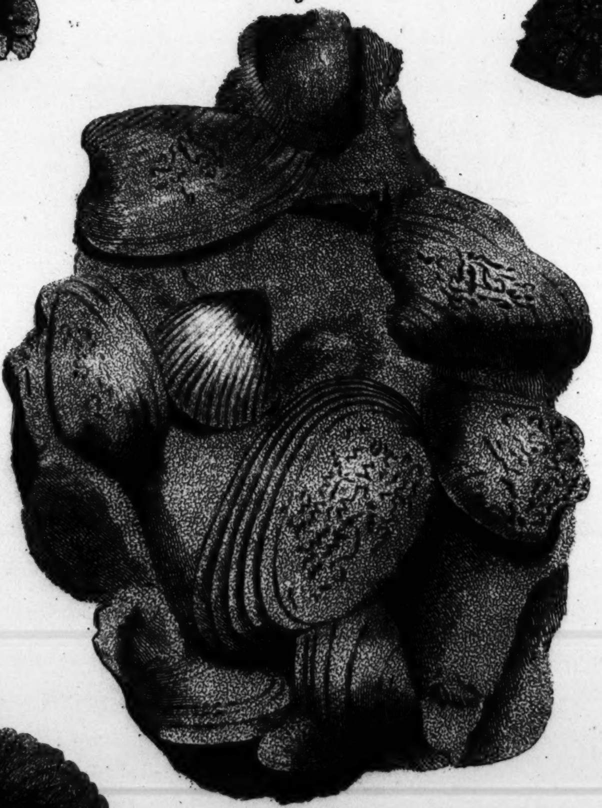
7



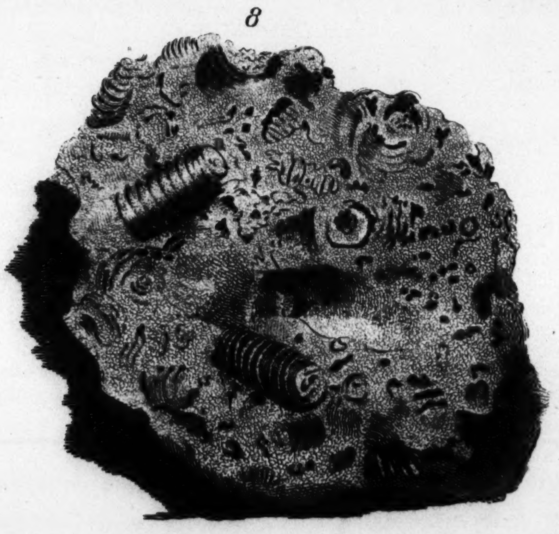
9



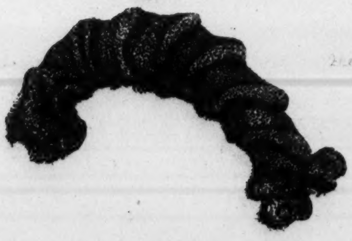
6



8

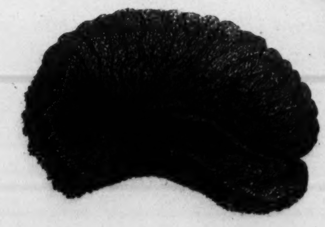


10



11

[illegible]



Baſire, from the original ſtone, which has been ſent up for that purpoſe by Mr. Storer Beaumont[1]. The general habit of this figure is that of the Blenny genus; but, as there are many ſpecies of fiſhes to be ſeen in a foſſil, which are not now recognized in a living ſtate; and as this ſpecimen ſeems alſo to have been diſtorted, and mutilated, before it became petrified; conjectures would be too vague to warrant the referring it to any ſpecies now known. [This curious foſſil-fiſh bears ſome reſemblance to the Labrus, or Wraſſe; for, there are of that family ſmall, ſtrait, ſpotted, and beautiful kinds, whoſe dorſal fin extends from head to tail; but it is difficult to determine its place. It is probably true of theſe impreſſions, as of many other foſſil bodies, that they once inhabited the depths of the Ocean, and have been but little expoſed to the reſearches of man.]

Fig. 6. is engraved from an original foſſil, in the collection of Mr. Tailby[2]. In the language of the oldeſt writers, and before the reformation of Conchology, this would have been called a Chamites; but, as the Cames of former authors belong to different genera in the Linnæan arrangement, according to the ſtructure of the hinge, which is not viſible in this inſtance, it is not eaſy to refer it to any particular ſpecies; ſince it may be either a Mya, Mactra, or Venus, from the general outline, and the direction of the ſtriæ. I ſhould incline to refer it to the Mactra genus. [This foſſil anomia (that genus of ſhells ſo common among our minerals, and ſo very rare in the European ſeas) ſerves as a proof of the remark ſuggeſted on fig. 5; for, the few anomiæ which have been found recent were taken in diſtant ſeas, and at a great depth.]

Fig. 7. is a ſlight ſketch of the ſtone[3] noticed in p. 81, note 15; which is, perhaps, nothing more than a luſus naturæ. On this figure, whatſoever it may be thought to repreſent, there ſeems to be ſuperadded the impreſſion of an Equiſetum, a genus of plants not uncommon amongſt extraneous foſſils, and of which ſpecimens frequently occur in the cabinets of the curious. [In the fifth volume of Brooks's Natural Hiſtory are figures not unlike owls' and horſes' heads; but the reſemblance is fanciful, and in all probability accidental. In this figure, the ſtriated and jointed body ſeems to be a petrifaction or impreſſion of a vegetable ſubſtance; for which ſee the Natural Hiſtory of the county.]

Plate IX. fig. 1. is a repreſentation of the other half of the Cambridge fiſh ſhewn in Plate VIII. fig. 1. from a drawing taken in 1777 by Mr. Throſby.

Fig. 2. a Phytolithus, or Phytotypolithus, of Wallerius. The impreſſion of the extremity of a leaf, which it is not eaſy to refer to its ſpecies. Ferns are more frequent than thoſe of other vegetables. Signatures of this kind are, in England, more particularly found in clayey nodules in Colebrook Dale. They are alſo frequent in the ſhale, or chiver, that lies immediately over coal ſtrata. The one here engraved is impreſſed on a ſort of iron-ſtone; and may, poſſibly, be of the order of Ferns; but it has ſcarcely enough of the pennated form. I ſhould rather incline to refer it to the umbelliferous tribe; in which it has a conſiderable reſemblance of the leaf of a Laſerpitium; particularly, that of the anguſtifolium. [It is ſeldom that we can judge accurately of the vegetable impreſſed in theſe nodules in ſtone. They are commonly different ſpecies of Adiantum, Polypodium, or Oſmunda, and ofteneſt thoſe which do not grow in this country, nor even in Europe.]

Fig. 3. [This petrifaction has acquired the ſhape of a groupe of cryſtallized figures, conſiſting of columns with pyramidical terminations after the manner of cryſtal: they are perforated at top like the ſparry incruſtations called Stalactites. The maſs itſelf is a vegetable blended with calcareous clay; and was taken out of a brook, where many ſimilar petrifactions have been found. —The late Sir John Hill, in his "Natural Hiſtory, 1748," p. 161, under the head of Macroteloſtylum perlucidum decolor, or "very bright, colourleſs Macroteſtylum," ſays, "This is a very elegant foſſil, and ſeems to be cryſtal in the utmoſt degree of perfection. It is a very rare ſpecies in England, but frequent enough in the mountains of Germany. It ſometimes lies in the ſtrata of looſe earth, but more frequently in the horizontal cavities in ſtrata of ſtone. I have ſeen it among the rocks at Mountſorell in Leiceſterſhire; and Dr. Woodward ſeems to have had a ſpecimen of it from Cornwall."]

Fig. 4. is an Ammonite, bedded in a ſort of ironſtone, with a bivalve ſhell, apparently of the Mya or Mytilus genus. The Foſſiliſts would therefore refer it to the Mytilites, or Muſculites, of which a variety of figures are to be met with in various authors.

Fig. 5. This figure exhibits an Ammonite of the more common kind, nearly buried in its ſtony bed.

Fig. 6. a groupe of bivalve ſhells (bedded in ironſtone), the genera of which it is not eaſy to diſcriminate. By the figures, moſt of them ſeem to be of the kind which are called Chamites; being either of the genus Chama, or Venus of Linnæus. The middle ſhell, longitudinally ſtriated, is probably a Cardium, and is therefore, in the language of the Foſſiliſt, a Cardites. [Theſe bivalves are of the kind called by ſome authors Cunei from their ſhape, and by Linnæus Mya, or Tellina; for, the hinge not being viſible, the genus, according to his Conchology, cannot be determined. Foſſil ſhells of this kind are common in the Vale of Belvoir, about Muſton, Eaſthorpe, &c. The ſmall figure in the middle, with ſtriæ the contrary way, appears to be a Cardium, or Venus.]

Fig. 7. A ſmall column of the Entrochus, or Helmintholithus (epitonium) diſſepimentis orbiculatis diſtantibus, filo centrali connexis. Squil. Nat. p. 170. The Entrochus, or St. Cuthbert's bead, is, without doubt, the foſſil remains of a marine animal, or coral; but the prototype is as yet, I believe, unknown. Theſe foſſils have been long known among the curious in this way, under the name of Trochitæ, or Trochites, when in ſingle joints; and under the name of Entrochi, or Entrochites, when in columns, whether ſimple or branched. They are found in various parts of England, as well as in different countries of Europe.

As far as I can learn by the aſſiſtances in my power, they were firſt deſcribed under the name of Trochitæ by George Agricola, a German, who wrote the firſt rational book on foſſils, after the reſtoration of letters. He was born in 1494, and publiſhed his great work on the "Mineral Kingdom," in 1546. After Agricola, they were next noticed by Geſner, Aldrovandus, Wormius, and others on the Continent. As far as I can find, the firſt Engliſh writer, who takes notice of the Trochitæ in a ſcientific way was Mr. (afterwards Dr.) Liſter. In a letter written by this indefatigable Naturaliſt, read to the Royal Society in 1674, and printed in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, N° 100, vol. VIII. p. 6181. many varieties of this foſſil are deſcribed and figured[4]. After this time, Plott, Lhwyd, and others, ſucceſſively deſcribe the ſame foſſil; and it appears, from their accounts, that it is found in many parts of England[5]. Much critical information may alſo be gained, relating to the Entrochi, by conſulting the ſecond Letter of Dr. Lhwyd, publiſhed in his "Lithophylacium Britannicum;" in which work ſeveral varieties are figured[6].

In the age of Agricola, and long after, figured foſſils were generally accounted as lapides ſui generis. When the Trochitæ, among many others, came to be conſidered as the foſſil remains of marine animals, theſe in queſtion were thought by many to be the petrified vertebræ of animals. It is not in England alone that they have obtained a name from a Romiſh ſaint: on the Continent they have been known by the name of "Nummuli Sancti Bonifacii[7]." Wallerius,

---

[1] In September 1798, I was highly gratified by the inſpection of many of the flat fiſh, moſt of them 12 or 13 inches long, and ſome few only 4 or 5 inches, in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Mr. Eaſton, the Rev. Mr. Bramley, Mr. Storer Beaumont, and Mrs. John Beaumont. J. N.

[2] This foſſil is frequently found at Barkby. See before, p. 46.

[3] A mark much like a horſeſhoe is common in lumps of lime-ſtone. W. E.

[4] An abridgement of this paper, with ſome of the figures, may be ſeen in "Lowthorp's Abridgement of the Tranſactions, vol. II. p. 493; which is followed by a paper on the ſame ſubjects by Mr. Beaumont, who had diſcovered the Trochitæ plentifully at Mendip.

[5] A great number of places in which it is common are enumerated by Woodward, in his "Hiſtory of Foſſils," vol. I. p. 78.

[6] See tab. 13, fig. 1153; tab. 25, fig. 1140. 1146. See alſo a late publication, Mr. Walcot on "Bath Foſſils," p. 46. fig. 61. D.

[7] See Bertrand's Dictionarie des Foſſiles, ad verb. Entroques, p. 202; Leland's Itinerary in nine volumes, ſecond edition, 1745, vol. III. p. 35. "Nummuli S'ti Bonifacii," our St. Cuthbert's beads, Entrochi. How two Saints came to give their names to the ſame thing, I know not: but the explanation of another Saint's beads, in Hudibras, Lady's anſwer, 59, "St. Martin's beads," lerius, who has very minutely claſſed figured foſſils, in his "Syſtema Mineralogicum," vol. II. deſcribes the Trochites, or ſingle joints, under the name of "Zöophytolithi articulorum orbicularium, ſingularium, ſtellarum marinarum, formæ rotæ, centro cavæ:" Trochitæ, Species 468; and the Entrochites as follows, "Z. articulorum compoſitorum, ſeu petioli cylindracei ſtellarum marinarum, formâ cylindricâ, centro diſtincto, ſuperficie extrinſecâ per circulos, indeterminatâ diſtantiâ diviſa." Entrochitæ[1], Species 469.

In the ſyſtem of Linnæus, it is called "Helmintholithius Iſidis Entrochæ," vol. III. p. 168. Conſidering it as the foſſil remains of an animal, which he ranks under his Zöophytes, calling it "Iſis Entrocha ſtirpe teſtaceâ terati, articulatis orbiculatis perforatis, ramis verticillatis dichotomis." See Syſt. Nat. p. 1288. It does not appear that the recent animal has yet been diſcovered; but theſe foſſil remains evidently point it out as generically allied to the Iſis Aſteria, or Star-ſtones. Liſter's figures in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, N° 100, tab. 1, fig. 25, 26, which he conſiders as the radix, or baſe of the animal, and that of Lhwyd, tab. 22, fig. 4, (but which are probably the head), ſeem to juſtify the generical analogy here ſpoken of. I will not conclude theſe remarks, however, without obſerving, that, from ſome of the figures of Entrochitæ in authors, and from ſpecimens which I have ſeen in the collections of the curious, and of which ſort I poſſeſs one, there is ſome room to ſurmiſe, that theſe foſſils are of two kinds, one of which, by its ramifications, ſeems rather to belong to the Genus Madrepora, than to the Iſis. From the inferences that may be deduced from theſe obſervations, eſpecially from the analogy between the Aſtroïtes and the Trochitæ; if they are at all conſentaneous to truth, it follows, that the Trochitæ and Entrochi are not produced by any kind of cryſtallization; that they do not increaſe by any appoſition of particles, like minerals, nor were formed in the limeſtone-rock; but are real petrifactions (generally of the calcareous kind) from organized bodies, or Antediluvian remains of marine animals, of what naturaliſts call the Zöophyte order, inhabiting the ocean in thoſe remote times when the waters covered the continent which we now inhabit[2].

Fig. 8. repreſents a maſs of theſe foſſils bedded in a ſoft, calcareous ſtone. The ſhell marble from Derbyſhire, or, as it is ſpecifically called, "the Derbyſhire marble," receives its name from the abundance of Entrochi it contains, and is hence called, by Wallerius, "Marmor teſtaceum Lumachella Entrochiticum;" and, by Dacoſta, "Marmor fuſco-cinereum Entrochis refertum." Hiſtory of Foſſils, p. 235. They ſometimes conſtitute quartzoſe rocks, which are convertible into excellent mill-ſtones. [The forms of theſe fragments appear to be many from their different ſituations, but the ſpecies are few: the kind in the maſs is called Entrochus lævis; and that above, Entrochus prominens. See Derbyſhire Foſſils, N° 1, fig. 1—8, Plates II. III; for the prominent ſpecimen.]

Fig. 9. a Cornu Ammonis, or Ammonite, of which the ſpecific architype is yet unknown, though the foſſil is among the moſt common of the extraneous kinds. It is, however, referred, generically, to the Nautilus, and is called by Linnæus, "Helmintholithus (Ammonites) Nautili, teſtâ ſpirali, aperturâ cordatâ, anfractibus contiguis, rugoſo-inæqualibus." Syſt. Nat. tom. III. 162. [This foſſil differs greatly in ſize, and ſometimes in form. This ſpecies is found, with ſeveral others, in the villages about Belvoir Caſtle.] The varieties, if not diſtinct ſpecies, are exceedingly numerous. John Bauhine, who ſeems to be the firſt who named this foſſil Cornu Ammonis, enumerates forty varieties; and other authors have gone much beyond that number. Wallerius himſelf mentions not fewer than 18 ſpecies. Several kinds are figured in Liſter's "Hiſtoria Animalium Angliæ," t. VI; in Walcot's "Bath Foſſils," N° 40—44; and in the "Muſæum Teſſinianum" of Linnæus, tab. iv. Woodward mentions this foſſil as found "at Barrow, in Leiceſterſhire, in a quarry the moſt famous in England for limeſtone."

Some of the fineſt Ammonites of this country are dug up at Marſton, in Somerſetſhire; where ſome, exquiſitely perfect, are found, meaſuring a foot in diameter. In that neighbourhood, they lie in a ſtratum, formed almoſt wholly of the ſame foſſil, of ſmall ſizes, cloſely bedded in blue clay, and ſo compact as to admit of being cut into large and beautiful ſlabs for tables, chimney-pieces, or other ornamental furniture.

Fig. 10. I am not able to refer this to any known claſs of the animal kingdom[3]; for, however the figure may ſuggeſt the idea of a caterpillar, there is not, as far as I know, any inſtance that will juſtify the appropriation of it to that origin; ſince the extremely ſoft texture of the animal does not ſeem to allow of its retaining the figure long enough to admit of the proceſs of petrifaction. My other conjectures relating to it are too vague to be mentioned.

Fig. 11, a common and well-known bivalve foſſil, called Gryphites. Although not yet diſcovered in a recent or living ſtate, it is referred by modern authors to the Genus Anomia. Linnæus calls it "Helmintholithus (Gryphites) Anomiæ Gryphi;" Syſt. III. p. 164. It is found in moſt parts of England; and is figured in a variety of authors; as by Liſter, in his "Hiſt. Animal. Angl. t. 8. f. 45; Walcot, "Bath Foſſils," N° 34. They are known in Leiceſterſhire under the name of Crow Stones, and in Yorkſhire under that of Ague Shell. It has varieties, ſmooth and rigid, which are deſcribed elſewhere.

Fig. 12. the Aſteriæ, or ſtar-ſtones of the older writers, called by Linnæus Helmintholithus Aſteria Columnaris (Syſt. Naturæ, tom. III. p. 168); and by Wallerius Zöophytolithi Aſteriæ Syſt. Miner. (vol. II. p. 457). Theſe figures repreſent the faces of ſingle joints; but they are frequently found in columns of various lengths, from one up to two or three inches; and ſometimes are found branched. Figures of them may be ſeen in various authors. Phil. Tranſ. abridged, vol. II. tab. 5, fig. 102—105; Lhwyd, Lithophylac. Britan. N° 1170.

Theſe foſſils were noticed by Camden himſelf, in his "Britannia," as being found near Belvoir Caſtle; and the Writer of theſe explanations, many years ago, picked up many of them in the brook at Knipton, in that neighbourhood. The preſent ſpecimens were found at Billeſdon. Many other places occur in authors, where they have been found in various parts of England. See Woodward's Catalogue of extraneous Foſſils, p. 80. The generality of figured foſſils belong to ſpecies which have not been diſcovered in a living ſtate; and the original, or architype of the Aſteriæ, for a long time, exerciſed the ingenuity of ſpeculative Foſſiliſts in vain, until, of late years, the recent animal was diſcovered in Barbados by Mr. Maſon, and ſent to the late Mr. Ellis, who has given a deſcription and figure of the animal in the Phil. Tranſ. vol. LII; and by this means has drawn aſide the veil that had ſo long obſcured the origin of this beautiful petrifaction, and at the ſame time thrown ſome light upon others of the ſame tribe. Mr. Ellis named it Encrinus capite ſtellato, ramoſo-dichotomo, ſtipite pentagono, equiſetiformi[4].

I know not that this Encrinus is found in any part of England, on ſo large a ſcale, or in a leſs mutilated ſtate, than at Lyme, in Dorſetſhire; where maſſes are ſeen with the head very diſtinct, and the tentacula attached to it, in a very complete manner, as figured in the Phil. Tranſ. abridged (loco ſupra citato); and in Lhwyd's Lithoph. Brit. N° 1132. & tab. 22. fig. 1. 5.

---

beads," has not found its way into the late magnificent edition: the reference is not to the Saint, as in the former inſtance; but to necklace-beads made in St. Martin's Lane, Cheapſide; where, it ſeems, workmen lived who made falſe wares; as we now ſay, Birmingham goods. Guthurun (perhaps a Saint), or Guttur-lane, is ſtill inhabited by working ſilverſmiths. The Knight had talked of ruby lips; but the Lady meant falſe coral beads, or perhaps red ſealing-wax. In Plain Percival, p. 4, 'Yet bear with me, if I doubt whether all be gold that gliſtereſt, ſith St. Martin's rings be but copper within, though they be gilt without, ſayes the goldſmith;" that is, the ſkilful and honeſt judge in ſuch matters. So the alluſion is to artificial works, not things natural; as are St. Cuthbert's beads, &c. &c.

[1] See Mr. Ellis's accurate deſcription and figure of the Iſis Entrocha, in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, vol. LII. p. 357.

[2] Several of theſe remarks on the Entrochi were firſt publiſhed by Dr. Pulteney in Gent. Mag. vol. LXII. p. 233.

[3] A gentleman who lived twelve years in Jamaica tells me he remembers ſeeing fiſh there very like this figure. W. E.

[4] See an engraving of an Enchrynus in Gent. Mag. vol. XXXVI. p. 323.

MOUNT-

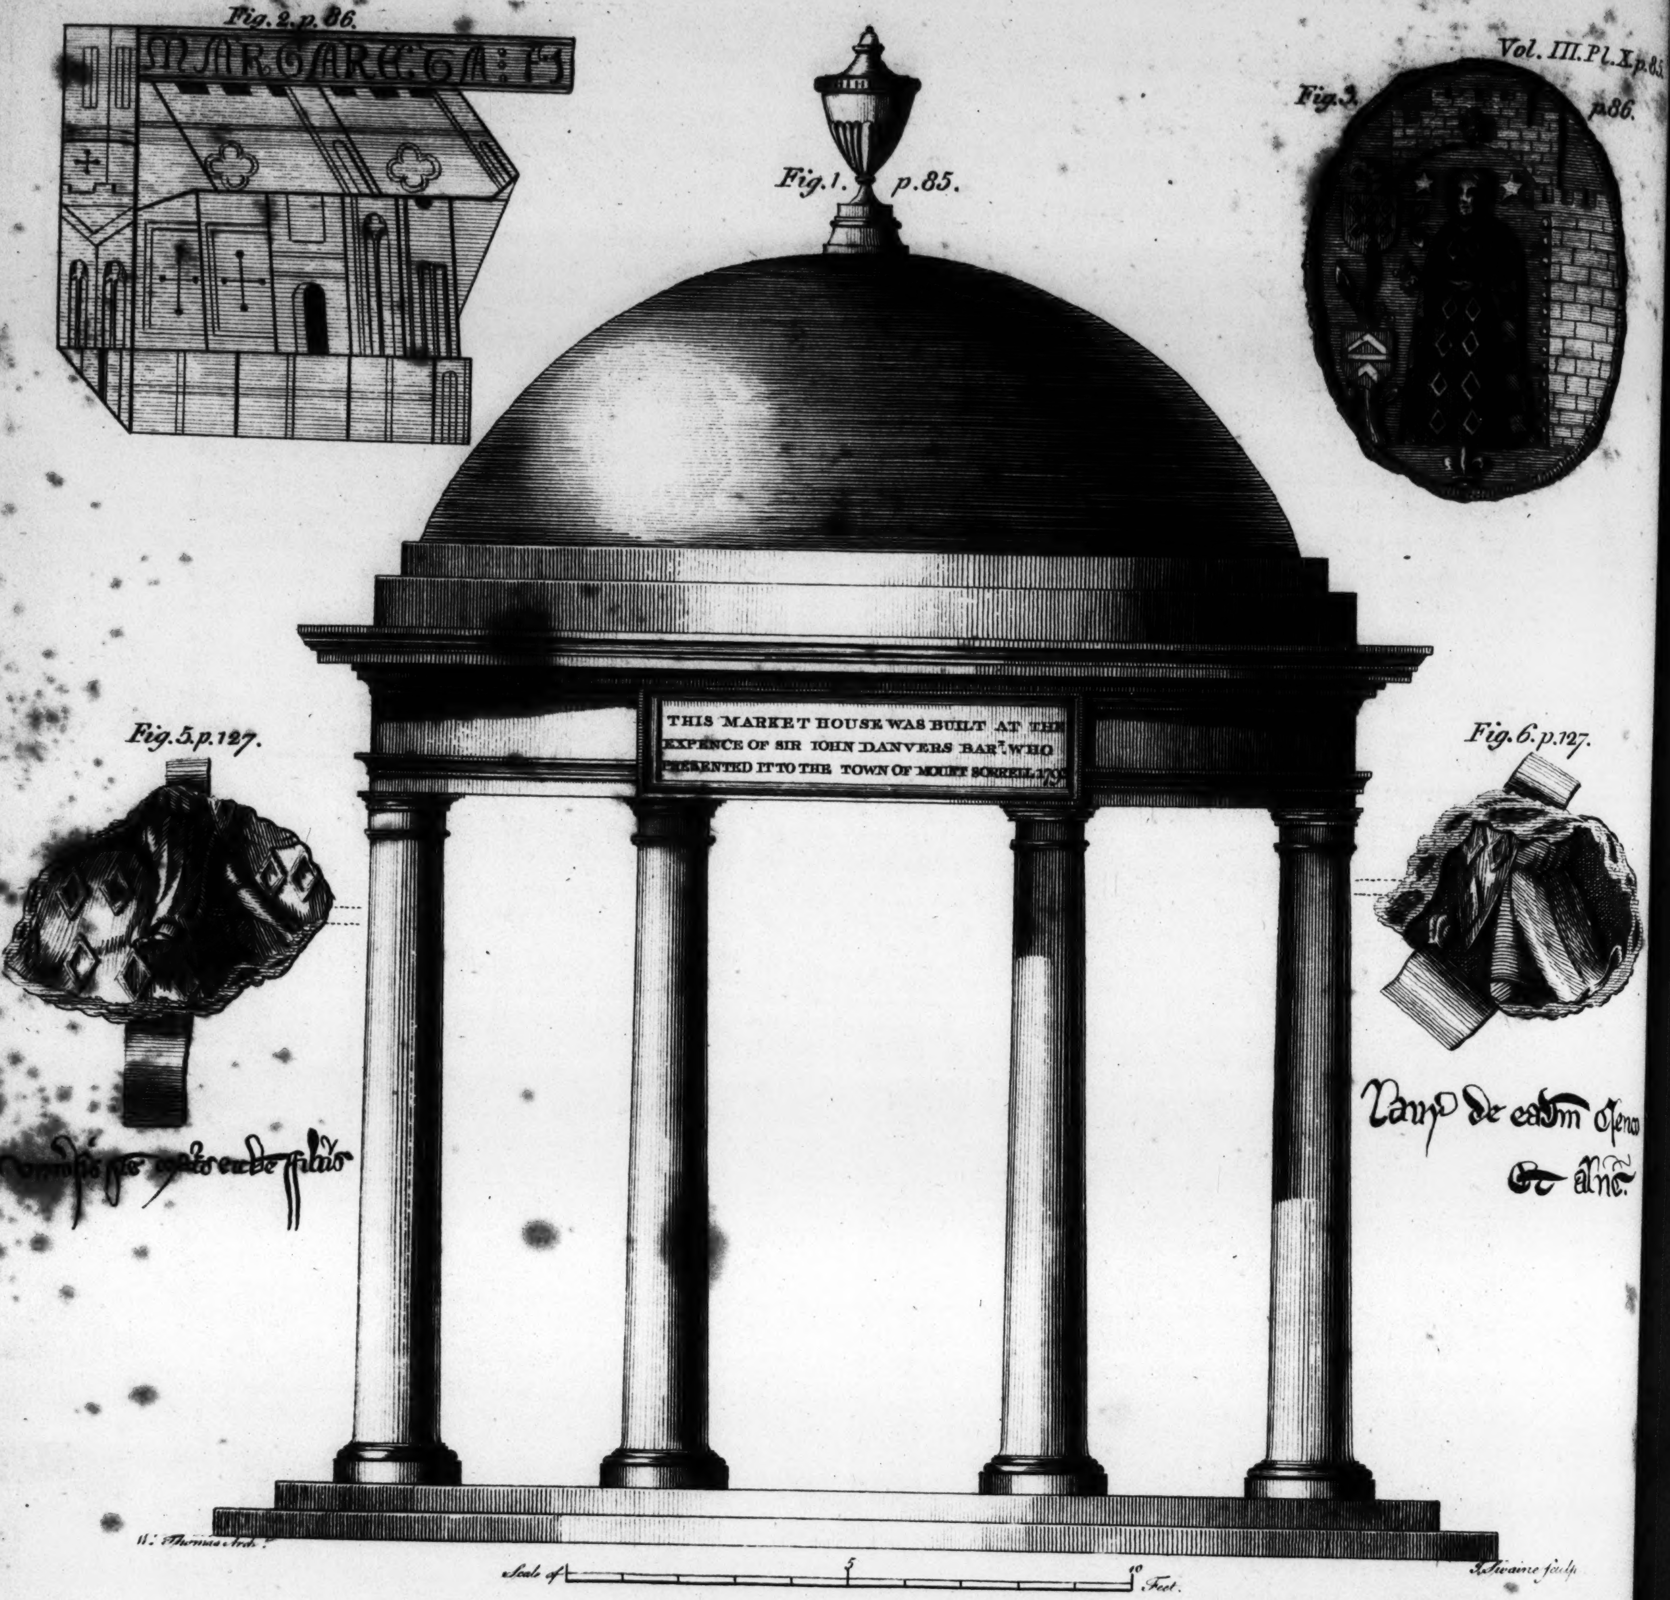

Fig. 2. p. 86.

MARGARETA

Fig. 1. p. 85.

THIS MARKET HOUSE WAS BUILT AT THE EXPENCE OF SIR IOHN DANVERS BAR^T. WHO PRESENTED IT TO THE TOWN OF MOUNT SORRELL 1793
W. Thomas Arch.
Scale of 5
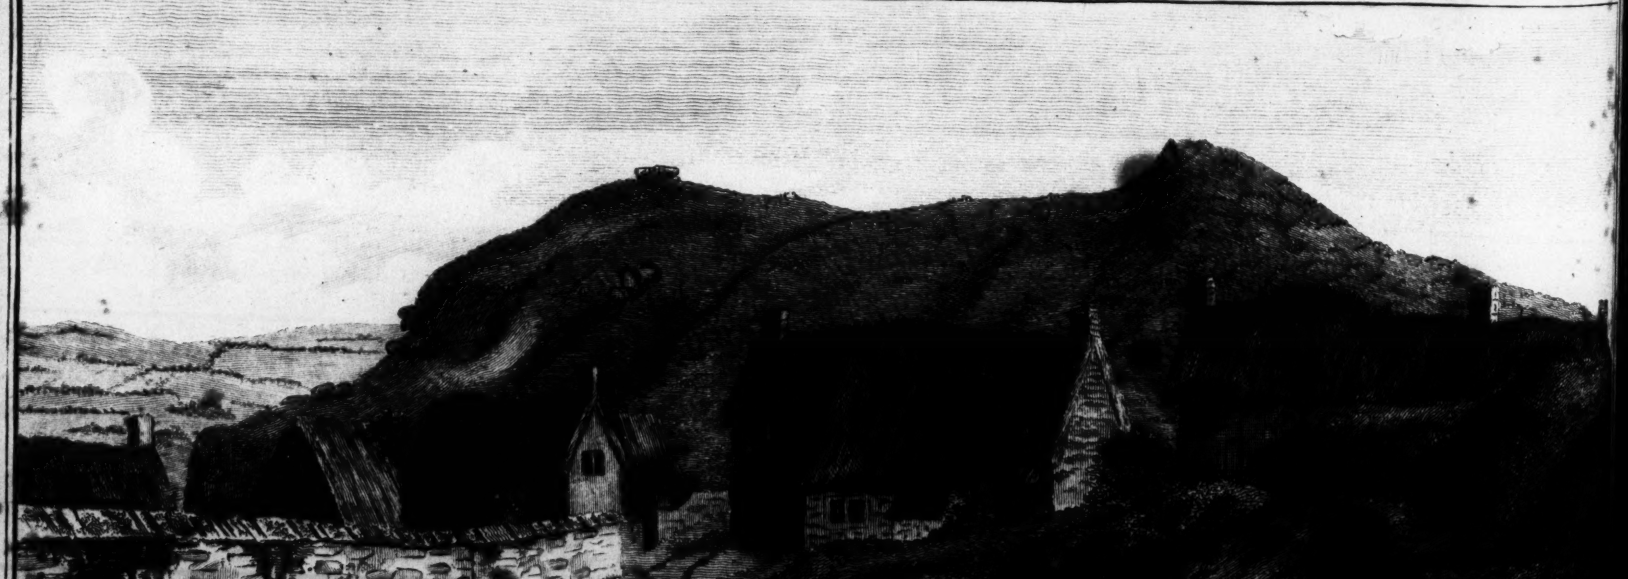
10
Feet.
J. Swaine sculp.

Fig. 3. p. 86.

Fig. 5. p. 127.

Fig. 6. p. 127.

Fig. 4. CASTLE HILL, 1757. p. 90.



MOUNTSORELL,

more commonly written Mountſorrel, otherwiſe Mount-Soar-hill, a long townſhip on the great London road, four miles from Loughborough, and eight from Leiceſter, received its name from the river Soar[1] (which runs on the Eaſt ſide of it, and over which it has a good ſtone bridge) and a remarkable hill, or rather rock, that riſes in the middle of the town. It was formerly proverbial for its rough pavement; but, in that and many other reſpects, has lately been conſiderably improved. It is in the Hundred of Weſt Goſcote; but is deſcribed here on account of its connexion with Barrow.

The North ſide (antiently called Mountſorell Inferior and Mountſorell Burgh) belonged to the feudal earls of Cheſter, and is within the pariſh of Barrow. The South part (Mountſorell Superior) belonged to the feudal earls of Leiceſter, and is in the pariſh of Rothley.

The reſpective boundaries are ſeparated by Barn-Lane; at the end of which ſtood formerly a curious old croſs, hid by a paltry building, incloſing the pedeſtal and part of the ſhaft, which was long and ſlender, of eight ſides, fluted, and in the flutes ſome carved heads, quatrefoils, and other ornaments. It was raiſed on three ſteps, and at each corner of the pedeſtal was a rude figure with wings. Two different ſketches of it (one by Mr. Pridden, the other by Mr. Carter) are here given in Plate XI. fig. 5, 6; with a ſmall ground-plan, fig. 7; and two heads on the ſides of the croſs, fig. 8, 9. The whole was taken down, in 1793, by ſir John Danvers, and removed into his private grounds; but, inſtead of it, he cauſed to be erected the Market-houſe engraved in Plate X. fig. 1.

Mountſorell, now only famous as a market-town, once boaſted a ſtrong and ſtately caſtle on its ſteep and craggy hill, and overhanging the river[2]. This caſtle was probably built by Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter; and the firſt mention of it that we have ſeen is in the amicable articles of agreement, made in the time of king Stephen, between Ranulph de Gernoniis earl of Cheſter (great nephew of the founder), and Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter (at that time one of the king's firmeſt champions), whoſe large poſſeſſions were here reſpectively bounded. By this ſolemn accord, which was made in the preſence of Robert de Cheſney then biſhop of Lincoln and other reſpectable perſonages, earl Ranulph gave to the earl of Leiceſter and his heirs the caſtle of Mountſorell, to be holden of the ſaid Ranulph and his heirs, in ſuch ſort that the earl of Leiceſter ſhould be bound to receive the ſaid Ranulph and his family in the borough and bailiwick of Mountſorell to war whenever he liſteth, as of his own fee; and if needful for earl Ranulph, his body to be received into the caſtle, in ſuch ſort that the earl of Leiceſter ſhould bear unto him faith (always the faith due to his liege lord excepted); and if it be behooful that the earl of Leiceſter go againſt the earl of Cheſter with his liege lord, not to carry with him above twenty knights; and if the earl of Leiceſter, or thoſe 20 knights, ſhall take any part of the earl of Cheſter's goods, it ſhall be all reſtored again. And the earl of Leiceſter may not, in any caſe, ympeach or hinder the body of the earl of Cheſter, except he hath defied him 15 days before; and the earl of Leiceſter is bound to aid the earl of Cheſter againſt all men, except the ſaid earl of Leiceſter's liege lord and earl Simon. The whole of this remarkable agreement, which ſhews the greatneſs of the Engliſh nobility at that period (particularly of the earls of Cheſter[3]), may be ſeen in a former volume[4].

Robert Boſſu continued in poſſeſſion of this caſtle till his death in 1167; but Robert Blanchmains his ſon rebelling againſt king Henry II, and being taken priſoner, was forced, in 1174, to ſurrender up this and all other his caſtles into the king's hands; and though he was the next year, 1175, at the great council held at Northampton, received into favour, and re-inſtated in all his other poſſeſſions, yet the king, claiming a right to this caſtle, retained it as his own[5]; nor do we find that it was afterwards reſtored to Robert Fitz Parnell (ſon of Robert Blanchmaines) though he was in favour with king Richard I, and attended him into the Holy Land; for, after his death, Saer de Quincy earl of Wincheſter (who married his ſiſter and coheir) having, in conſideration of £1000, a grant from the king of the cuſtody of the lands belonging to the ſaid Robert, this caſtle, with the appurtenances, was excepted, as being then in the king's hands[6]. In 1215, the aforeſaid Saer de Quincy was conſtituted by king John governor of it; who ſoon after ſiding with the rebellious barons, the king granted the cuſtody of it to Simon de Cantilupe the ſame year[7]; though he enjoyed nothing but the empty title; for Saer de Quincy, having put a ſtrong garriſon into it, kept it on behalf of Lewis the French king (whom the barons had called to their aſſiſtance) till the king's death; and, the caſtle being well fortified, the officers and ſoldiers who were in garriſon made incurſions frequently into the adjacent country, to pillage and plunder all they could; which the Royaliſts in the caſtle of Nottingham hearing great complaints of, they reſolved to ſet upon them, and, if poſſible, put an end to ſuch grievous calamities as the peaſants at that time groaned under; whereupon, at the next ſally-out, they met and fought them, took ſome of the chief leaders, diſperſed the reſt, and returned victorious to their caſtle. King Henry III, hearing of this brave exploit againſt his inteſtine enemies, commanded the high ſheriff of the county of Nottingham to gather the forces of the county together, and, with the garriſon of Nottingham, to beſiege and demoliſh the caſtle of Mountſorell. It was accordingly beſieged by William Mareſchal earl of Pembroke (then governor to the infant king), Ranulph Blundevill earl of Cheſter, &c. with the royal army; but they found ſo brave a reſiſtance from Robert de Braybroke the governor, and thoſe valiant knights with him, that, after a long and fruitleſs ſiege[8], they were forced to leave it untaken. Lewis the Dauphin, who then lay at London, hearing of the ſiege of his adherents, marched with 20,000 men to their relief; but, being met at Lincoln by king Henry's army, and defeated, he was forced to ſhift for himſelf, make the beſt conditions he could, and depart the nation, leaving the garriſon of Mountſorell to defend themſelves as well as they could; and, the Royaliſts having ſoon after totally defeated the rebellious barons in the battle at Lincoln, this caſtle fell into the king's hands[9], who gave the government of it to Ranulph Blondeville then earl of Cheſter, and afterwards earl alſo of Lincoln[10]; who the ſame year, by the king's command, and the ready help of the neighbourhood, entirely razed it to the ground, as a neſt of the Devil, and a den of thieves and robbers[1]; and it was never again repaired[2].

---

[1] "Jam ad Soarum flumen regredimur, qui, Leiceſtriam præterlapſus, primùm Montſorell, ſive potiùs Mont-ſoare-hill, ex Normannicâ & Anglicâ compoſitione, nomen præbet." Camden, p. 388.—Many fanciful derivations have been given to this name; but the obvious one ſeems that of the Mount κατ' ἐξοχὴν overhanging the Soar; hill being only a repetition. Gough's Camden, vol. II. p. 210, note.—"I do not," ſays a learned friend, "except to your derivation of Mountſorell from the tautologous initial and final ſyllable, as I know there are many ſuch inſtances; as Berrymounthill, Torpenhow, &c. &c.; but becauſe I think Mountſorel, i. e. difficile, fâcheux, &c. (ſee Ballet's Celtic Dictionary ad v.) much more natural. So Montaign, and many others."

[2] "Nunc tantùm mercatu celebre eſt; olim verò celeberrimum caſtro in prærupto & confragoſo colle flumini impendenti, quod priùs ad comitem Leiceſtriæ, poſtea ad Saherum de Quincy Wintoniæ comitem bello Baronico, ſpectavit; hodièque nihil eſt niſi rudetum." Camden, ibid.

[3] As has been particularly ſtated under Barrow, p. 62.

[4] Vol. I. p. 26.

[5] Rog. Hoveden, Annales, pars poſterior, f. 316.

[6] Rot. Fin. 6 Joh. m. 1.

[7] Rot. 17 Joh. m. 3.

[8] William de Cantelupe, who was preſent at this ſiege on the royal ſide, was many years ſheriff of the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick.

[9] Matth. Paris, p. 293.

[10] Pat. 1 Hen. III. m. 7.

Margaret de Quincy, counteſs of Winton, ſiſter and coheireſs of Robert Fitz Parnell earl of Leiceſter, granted to Richard Criſpe, of Mountſorell, a virgate of land in Northawe, &c. by a deed not dated; but witneſſed by William de Crupwell, ſir William St. George tunc ſeneſcallo, William Falconer, Henry de Mardefelt tunc clerico commune, Robert Fitz de Monte Sorello, and others[3]. In the ſeal affixed to this grant is repreſented the counteſs at full length ſtanding under the gate of her caſtle; and the ſeal is repeated to a deed which will be noticed under Belgrave and Thurmaſton.

In another, but very different ſeal[4], affixed to a grant made by the counteſs Margaret to Brian the ſon of William the Foreſter, which will appear under Whitwick, ſhe is again more perfectly repreſented as ſtanding under the gate of her caſtle.

I have amuſed myſelf, and hope I ſhall not offend the moſt faſtidious reader, by ſuppoſing that the caſtle-gate on theſe ſeals was intended to repreſent Mountſorell; and am ſtill farther ſtrengthened in the conjecture, by a beautiful fragment of painted glaſs, preſerved in the Eaſt window of the South aile of Thurcaſton church; which I have been tempted to engrave, with a part of one of the ſeals, in Plate X. fig. 2, 3. If I am right in the conjecture, the views are certainly curious, there not being any where elſe the leaſt trace of Mountſorell caſtle.

The manor of Mountſorell was not long after given to Stephen de Segrave, then chief juſtice of the common pleas, and afterwards chief juſtice of England; who, about 1228, purchaſed from the aforeſaid Ranulph earl of Cheſter all the lands which he then poſſeſſed in the ſaid manor.

The Segrave Chartulary preſerves the titles of the following deeds relative to Mountſorell Superior.

1. A grant of Margaret de Quincy, counteſs dowager of Winton, to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of all her land called Hunchant in Mountſorell, to be held of the counteſs and her heirs by homage, and an acknowledgement of a pair of white gloves annually at Eaſter, in lieu of all other ſervice.

2. A grant of confirmation and quit claim, from Roger de Quincy earl of Winton, to Gilbert ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, of the aforeſaid land, and of view of frankpledge, ſuit of court, &c. from all his tenants within the earl of Winton's fee at Mountſorell, on the payment of 12*d*. a year, in lieu of all other ſervice.

And theſe relative to Mountſorell Inferior.

1. A grant of Ranulph Blondevill earl of Cheſter and Lincoln, to the ſaid Stephen and his heirs, of all his land in Mountſorell, extra baliam caſtri, with the homage, ſervice, and ſequela of all his reſident homagers, and the common oven (furnum[5]) of the vill; alſo common of paſture, in the woods of Quorndon and all other places, for the cattle and hogs of the ſaid homagers, free from all pannage or other payment, as they enjoyed the ſame whilſt in the earl's hands; together with free ingreſs and egreſs; and all this, and the fee which the ſaid Stephen already enjoyed under the earl at Segrave, was to be held by the payment of what appertained to the fourth part of a knight's fee, in lieu of all other ſervice.

2. A confirmation of the aforeſaid grant by king Henry III.

3. A grant, by Hugo Fitz Walkelin, of Rothley, to the ſaid Stephen, of the ſervice of 2*s*. a year, from the tenement lately belonging to Juliana, wife of Ralph Cot, in Mountſorell.

4. A grant from Hugh the ſon of Thomas le Deſpenſer to the ſaid Stephen, of one mark yearly iſſuing out of the mill at Mountſorell, which he had (inter alia) in frank-marriage with Roeſia ſiſter of the ſaid Hugh[6].

5. A transfer from Roger Martell, to the ſaid Stephen, of all the ſervice due from his brother Richard Martell and his heirs for a toft in Mountſorell.

6. A grant from Hugh de Albiniaco earl of Arundel, to the ſaid Stephen and his heirs, of nine acres and one rood of meadow land between Mountſorell Bridge and le Durnford, 16 acres in Mountſorell Field, and one toft in Mountſorell, which Richard the Carpenter held inter alia (in exchange for a tenement which the earl had before given to the ſaid Stephen, in Mountſorell, Barrow, and Quorndon); to be held on the tenure of a fourth part of a knight's fee.

7. A grant from king Edward I. July 14, 1292, to Nicholas de Segrave ſenior, and his heirs, of a weekly market on the Mondays; and a yearly fair for eight days on the eve, day, and morrow of St. John the Baptiſt, and five days after, at Mountſorell, co. Leiceſter; as alſo liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands of Overton, Segrave, Sileby, and Ditheſworth, in the ſame county, and in divers other manors in Derbyſhire, Warwickſhire, and Northamptonſhire. "Hiis teſtibus; venerabilibus patribus R. Bathon' & Wellen' & A. Dunelm', epiſcopis; Humf' de Bohun, com' Heref' & Eſſex'; Rogero Brabazon; Waltero de Bellocampo; Gilberto de Briddleſhale; Ric' de Boſco; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram, apud Berewick ſuper Tweede, XIIII die Julii[7]."

In 1255, it was found that Gilbert de Segrave died ſeiſed of lands in Mountſorell, where there were two tenures; to wit, one tenure of the earl of Winton's fee towards the South part (and they hold in burgage), where the rent of aſſiſe is worth, at three terms of the year, 43*s*. 9¾ d.; and one tenure of the earl of Cheſter's fee towards the North part (and they likewiſe hold in burgage), where the rent of aſſiſe is worth, at four terms of the year, 8*l*. 5*s*. 3*d*. It appeared alſo, that Hugh le Deſpenſer paid one mark yearly out of the mill at Mountſorell to Gilbert de Segrave; that there were in the ſame town 9 acres of meadow, whereof Iſabel[8] counteſs of Arundel had 3 acres in dower; and that there remained 6 acres of meadow in demeſne, as alſo the perquiſites of court, and the fines and ſmaller dues (minutæ conſuetudines)[9].

Among the records in the Chapter houſe at Weſtminſter, called "Pedes Finium," or "Placita temp. Hen. III." in the cheſt marked B. are ſome deeds relative to Mountſorell, marked 9. and 11.[10]

In 1296, Nicholas de Segrave died ſeiſed of £10. aſſiſe-rent of the freeholders of Mountſorell, of the fee of Cheſter; and John de Segrave, his ſon and heir, was then aged 30[11].

In 1325, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held the farm of the mill of Mountſorell, together with a certain rent in Mountſorell, of the earls of Cheſter and Winton, by the ſervice of 12*d*.; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin and heir of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior) was his next heir[12].

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had large poſſeſſions at Mountſorell, the gift of Hugh le Deſpenſer and others; and, amongſt other things, had 12*s*. a year for the tithe of the mill, by a compoſition with Hugh le Deſpenſer.

Ralph Enſwort was the tenant of the tithes of corn, and paid 30*s*. a year for what had before produced 33*s*. 4*d*.

---

[1] "Anno Crucis 1217, poſt gravem obſidionem captum, incolæ, tanquam nidum Diaboli, ſpeluncam latronum & prædonum, ſolo tenùs diruerunt." Camden, ubi ſupra, ex Hiſtor. Minor.

[2] Annales de Burton, m. 1207; and Memoriale Walteri de Coventry.

[3] See the Appendix to vol. I. p. 407; and an engraving of the ſeal in vol. I. Plate XII. fig. 11.

[4] "In this ſeal," ſays Mr. Burton, "now in my cuſtody, two things may be obſerved; firſt, the maſcles on her inner garment, and the upper eſcutcheon next the head; whereby it is evident that her huſband, Saher de Quincy, bore them for his arms; and that Roger his ſon was not the firſt that aſſumed them, as ſome have lately written; ſecondly, the lining of her garment, which is of the fur called Vairy; which I take to be very rare, having never ſeen the like on any garment before." Chetwynd MS.

[5] "Furnagium, Gallicè fournage, eſt tributum quod domino furni à ſectatoribus penditur ob furni uſum. Multis enim in locis tenentur vaſſalli ad coquendum panes ſuos in furno domini, eâque de causâ hoc tributum reddere. Qui etiam infra limites habitant ad furnum pertinentes dicuntur habitare Gallicè en ban de fore, aliàs en le bancage; id eſt, infra territorium furni, ſeu evocationem ad furnum. Eſt etiam furnagium lucrum ſeu emolumentum quod piſtori conceditur in piſtionis ſumptum & mercedem." Spelman.

[6] E collectionibus Roberti Glover, Somerſet.

[7] Cart. 20 Edw. I. N° 17.

[8] Daughter of William earl of Warren and Surrey; and widow of Hugh de Albini earl of Arundel, who died in 1243.

[9] Eſch. 39 Hen. III. N° 32. Leic.

[10] The Repertorie of Records, 1631, p. 37.

[11] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 54. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N 88. Leic.

Thomas Chaveney rented the tithes of hay (worth 10*d.* or 11*d.* a year), and a moiety of the tithes of hemp and flax, eggs, pigs, geeſe, and doves; and paid 2*s.* a year. He had alſo a cottage and 3 ſelions of land, for which he paid 6*d.*

John Maſon had a cloſe, formerly Roger Routhorn's, at 2*s.* a year; Robert Routhorn, 3 ſelions at 6*d.*; and John Glover, a meſſuage and lands in Bondecroft at 6*d.*

The abbot and convent had at one time a farther annual rent of 18*d.*; but, as the particular lands could not be traced, the rent was loſt.—Of this, John at the Halle, and formerly William Spicer, held ſix ſelions, which paid 6*d.*

The monks of Croxton had an annual rent of 20*s.* in this townſhip by royal grant. "Habemus in Mountſorell, de dono regis Heurici, 20s̃. annui redditûs, recipiendas ad feſtum S. Michaelis[1]."

They held alſo certain lands here by various grants, which paſſed, with their other eſtates, to Thomas earl of Rutland and Eleanor his wife, by grant from the crown in 1539[2].

In 1332, John (ſon of William) Dogell, who was outlawed for felony, held a certain meſſuage, with the appurtenances, in the town of Mountſorell (in villâ de Mountſtrelli) of the abbot of Crokeſdene, by knight's ſervice[3].

The abbot and convent of Garendon had one toft and two meſſuages in Montſorell, the gift of Walter Fiſher of that place, Robert Phis, and Richard Criſp.

July 20, 1336, king Edward III. granted divers lands in Mountſtrel (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Deſpenſer earl of Winton) to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife[4]; and in 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan held, at his death, the hamlet of Mountſorell, as a member of Loughborough[5].

In 1346, on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon, John de Segrave was aſſeſſed 5*s.* for half a quarter of one knight's fee in Mountſorell and Weſton, parcel of the fee of Winton[6]; and in 1359 he died ſeiſed of the manor of Mountſorell[7].

In 1369, it was found that Henry de Beaumont died ſeiſed of one knight's fee and the moiety of one knight's fee in Wheſton and Mountſorell, which John de Segrave ſome time held[8].

In 1372, ſir Walter de Manny, K. G. held, at his death, the manor of Mountſorell, of the honour of Winton, by the ſervice of 12*d.* to be paid at the manor of Groby; and Anne his daughter (wife to John Haſtings earl of Pembroke) was his ſole heireſs[9].

In 1375, Elizabeth the widow of Giles de Erdington held, at her death, one rood of free land in Mountſorell, parcel of the manor of Barwe ſuper Sore[10].

In 1394, Thomas de Erdington, knt. died ſeiſed of a third part of one knight's fee in Mountſorell[11].

In 1391, John de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of one knight's fee and the moiety of one knight's fee in Wheſton and Mountſorell, which John de Segrave held[12]. By Elizabeth heir-general of the Segraves this lordſhip came afterwards to the Mowbrays; and, in 1399, it was found that Thomas Moubray, late duke of Norfolk, was ſeiſed of the manor of Mountſorell[13]; and, in the ſame year, that Margaret late ducheſs of Norfolk was alſo ſeiſed of the ſame manor[14].

In 1406, Thomas Moubray earl Mareſcal died ſeiſed of the manor of Mountſorell; and John Mowbray was his brother and next heir[15].

In 1413, Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Wheſton and Mountſorell, which John Segrave held[16]; in 1427, Elizabeth his widow died ſeiſed of Mountſorell, as a member of Beaumanor[17]; and in the ſame year Conſtantia counteſs Marſhall died ſeiſed of ſome property here, appurtenant to the manor of Segrave[18].

In 1432, John duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of the manor of Mountſorell[19]; which is held of the honour of Wincheſter, and hath a court-leet belonging to it.

The ſucceſſive owners from that period to the preſent day may be ſeen, under the hiſtory of the Hundred of Goſcote, at the beginning of this volume.

In 1559, Francis Neele, eſq. died ſeiſed of certain lands in Mountſorell, held of the queen in capite[20].

In 1577, John Lee held the water-mill at Mountſorrel, with its appurtenances, as a copyhold tenement under the manor of Beaumanor, for his own life and that of his ſon Thomas, at an annual rent of 100*s.*[21]

Nov. 23, 1597, John Lee the younger, of Mountſorell, yeoman, ſurrendered into the hands of William Herricke, eſq. lord of the manor of Bewmanor, one copy, whereby he held three water-mills and two waſh-mills in Mountſorell aforeſaid, and certain other old copies of the ſaid mills[22].

18 April, 1607, a leaſe was granted by ſir William Hericke, knt. to John Allen, of three water-corn-mills, and two fulling-mills, ſtanding upon the river Soar, near unto the town of Mountſorell, for 100 years, if John Allen, his wife, and two daughters, ſhould ſo long live, at the yearly rent of £5. and a fine of £370; and a covenant for Allen to ſerve upon juries, to appear at every court to be holden for the manor of Beaumanor, or to forfeit £20.[23]

May 20, 1617, Elizabeth lady Berkeley, widow, demiſed to ſir William Herick the manor of Mountſorell, with the manor, liberty, bailiwick, and hundred of Goſcote, for £20. a year, for the term of five years, if the right hon. ſir George Berkeley, knt. lord Berkeley, Malory, Segrave, and Bruce, ſhould ſo long live; the rent to be paid at her houſe in Redcroſsſtreet, London[24].

The water-mills, a meadow called Barrow-meadow and Oſier-bed, and the fiſhery of Mountſorell, are all within the manor of Beaumanor, and the tenants do ſuit and ſervice to that court[25].

In Mountſorell 16 houſes do ſuit and ſervice to Rothley court; and above 50 more are in the pariſh of Rothley, and therefore in the eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction, but do ſuit and ſervice to Mountſorell court. Four houſes on the Weſt ſide of Mountſorell ſtreet near the Crown Inn, and two houſes on the Eaſt ſide adjoining the Mill Lane, are within the manor of Loughborough, and do ſuit and ſervice at Loughborough court.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, George Thornton, John Allen, Francis Smalley, Thomas Knight, Robert Scampton, and William Thorman; in 1722 the number of freeholders was 50; and 51 in 1775.

In 1660, there was collected at Hinckley, on a brief for the inhabitants of Mountſorell, 1*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*

In 1687, the following report was made by the commiſſioners for charitable uſes in this county:

An inquiſition indented, taken by vertue of a commiſſion hereunto annexed, under the great ſeal of England, bearing date at Weſtm. the twentyeth day of June, in the third year of the raigne of our moſt gracious ſoveraign lord James the Second, by the grace of God, king of England, &c. to us, Thomas Babington, eſq. George Bright, doctor of divinity, Nathan Wright, eſq. and William Whatton, gentleman, and others, directed, for the due execution of a certain ſtatute, made in the fourty-third year of the raigne of our late queen Elizabeth, intituled, "An Act to redreſs the Miſimployment of Lands, Goods, and Stocks of Money, heretofore given to Charitable Uſes:" Wee the commiſſioners aforenamed, ſitting to execute the ſaid commiſſion at Mountſorrell, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, the ſeaven and twentyeth day of September, in the third year of his ſaid majeſtye's raigne, enquiring, by the oathes of John Peake, John Varnham, Peter Sykes, Francis Whitehead, Thomas Webſter, John Harriman, Robert Wilkins, Thomas Ward, John Ranſdale, Nicholas Lowe, Henry Boſs, William Starky, Thomas Bennet, Thomas Chapman, Thomas Coates, William Stevenſon, and John Bird, lawfull men of the county aforeſaid, returned and ſworne to ſerve as jurors, to enquire of all abuſes, breaches of truſts, negligences, miſimployments, not-imployinge, concealing, defraudeing, miſconverting, or miſgovernment, of all lands, tenements, rents, annuityes, profitts, hereditaments, goods, chattells, money, or ſtocks of money, heretofore given, limited, appointed, or aſſigned, to or for any charitable uſe or uſes, and of all other matters inquirable within the ſaid ſtatute, in the ſaid countye of Leiceſter; the ſaid jurors being in particular charged with an inquiry concerning the miſimployment, miſconverting, or miſgovernment, of certaine lands and tenements, rent, profitts, and hereditaments, in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, heretofore given, limited, appointed, or aſſigned, to or for ſome charitable uſe or uſes; upon due notice given to all the partyes intereſted, and a full hearing of evidence on both ſides, doe, upon their oathes, finde and preſent, that certaine rents yearly iſſueing out of certain meſuages, cottages, cloſes, lands, and tenements, in Mountſorell aforeſaid, Quorndon, Barrow ſuꝑ Soarum, and Roathlye, in the ſaid countye of Leiceſter, were long ſince given or appointed, by ſome perſon or perſons unknown to the ſaid jurors, to ſeverall inhabitants of the ſaid town of Mountſorell, and their heirs, to be by them employed towards charitable uſes within the ſaid town of Mountſorrell, the certainty and the particulars of all which ſaid uſes are not as yet known to the ſaid jurors; but the ſaid jurors doe find and preſent, that formerly the truſtees for the receiving the ſaid rent have for ſeveral years employed the ſame part thereof, in the firſt place, towarde the encouragement and better maintaineing of the curate reſideing within the ſaid towne of Mountſorell, who is to celebrate divine ſervice within the chappell of and in the ſaide towne, parte thereof to the ſaid chappell clarke of the ſaide towne, and the reſidue thereof to the repaireing the highwaies, and other neceſſarye uſes, within the ſaid town of Mountſorell; the particulars of which ſaid lands and rents, and by whome payable, and out of what lands and tenements, the ſaid jurors have, for more certainety, in a ſchedule indented, to this preſent inquiſition annexed the ſame: And the ſaid jurors doe further finde and preſent, that John Smith and Adrian Gregory are the preſent ſurviveing truſtees for the collecting, receiving, and paying, of the ſaid rents; and the ſaid jurors do further finde and preſent, that one Ralph Thurman, mentioned in the ſaid ſchedule, hath not payd his town-rent of eleaven ſhillings and eight pence per annum, for eleaven years and halfe ending the four and twentyeth day of June laſt, amounting in the whole to ſix pounds, fourteen ſhillings, and two pence; the ſaid jurors doe further finde and preſent, that all the trees of oake, aſhe, or elme, ſtanding or growing, or that hereafter ſhall ſtand or grow, upon all the ſaid ſeverall parcells of land mentioned in the ſaid ſchedule annexed, are, and ought to be, applyed to ſome charitable uſes within the ſaid town of Mountſorell, except the trees growing or to grow upon the chappell-yard, and one cloſe of John Jarrars called Bagnall's Cloſe. In witneſs whereof, to this preſent inquiſition as well the ſaid commiſſioners as the ſaid jurors have put-to their hands and ſeals the ſaid ſeaven and twentyeth day of September, in the ſaid third year of his ſaid majeſtye's raigne king James the Second over England, &c. annoq; Domĩ 1687.

---

[1] Croxton Regiſter.
[2] Grants in the Augmentation Office.
[3] Eſch. 6 Edw. III. N° 30. Leic.
[4] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.
[5] Eſch. 15 Edw. III. N° 25. Leic.
[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.
[7] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.
[8] Eſch. 43 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 12.
[9] Eſch. 46 Edw. III. N° 38. Leic.
[10] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 46.
[11] Eſch. 18 Ric. II. N° 15. Leic.
[12] Eſch. 20 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.
[13] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.
[14] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 72. Leic.
[15] Eſch. 8 Hen. IV. N° 78. Leic.
[16] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.
[17] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.
[18] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 60.
[19] Eſch. 11 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.
[20] Eſch. 1 Eliz.
[21] From the Court Books at Beaumanor.
[22] Ibid.
[23] Ibid.
[24] Ibid.
[25] Ibid.

A ſchedule indented, taken Sept. 27, 1687, of the ſeverall lands and tenements, and the town-rents iſſueing and payable out of the ſame, in Mountſorell, Quorndon, Barrow ſuꝑ Soram, and Roathlye, in the county of Leic':

	£.	s.	d.
Impris, Thomas Marſhal, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the tenure of William Heirrick, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	4	6
2. Anne Ryder, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in her owne occupacõn, payes town rent ꝑ annũ	0	3	8
3. Adrian Gregory, for one cottage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his own occupacõn, payes town-rent ꝑ annum	0	1	0
4. Robt Baylye, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his owne occupacõn, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	7	0
5. Ralph Thurman, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his owne occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	11	8
6. John Greet, for one meſſuage in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his owne occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	5	4
7. Widdow Purſſe, for one cottage and one cloſe in Mountſorell aforeſaid (the cottage in the occupation of George Jarrat and the cloſe in her own occupation) payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	6	4
8. John Jarrat ſen. for one ꝑte of Haucliffe-hill in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his owne occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	3	4
9. Mr. John Olderſhaw, for one ꝑte of the Hawcliff-hill in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the occupation of Thomas Hull, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	3	4
10. George Morton, eſq. for one cloſe, three acres, and the halfe of one acre in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the occupation of William Hull, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	2	10
11. Francis Glover, for one roode in the Stockin in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his own occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	1	4
12. Mr. Chavenye, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the occupation of Edward Smith, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	10	7
13. Mr. Chaveney, for one cloſe called Dawwell-cloſe aforeſaid, in the occupation of William Hull, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	6	4
14. Mr. Smallye, for one cloſe called Chappell-yard, and one other cloſe in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his owne occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	8	8
15. Richard Greaſley, for one meſſuage and backſide, called The Taubut, in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his own occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	3	0
16. Nathan Knight, for one meſſuage and backſide in his own occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	4	0
17. John Caſterton, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his owne occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	5	4
18. Mary Jones, widdow, and John Caſterton, for one halfe acre lyeing in the Stocking in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in their own occupation. paye town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	0	8
19. Thomas Toone, for one cottage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his own occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	0	10
20. William Peck, for one cottage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the occupation of William Wilde, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	3	4
21. Elizabeth Harriman, widdow, for one cottage in Mountſorell, in her own occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	1	6
22. John Wood, roper, for one cottage in Mountſorell, in his own occupation, payes towne-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	3	0
23. Richard Kitchin, for one cottage and backſide in Mountſorrell, in his own occupation, payes towne-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	0	6
24. John Jarrett, for one cloſe called Blunt's Cloſe, one other cloſe called Bagnall's Cloſe, one little cloſe at Boncroft-end, in Mountſorell aforeſaid; one fourth ꝑte of a Daw-peice lyeing in Quorndon meadow; and other lands in the feilds of Mountſorrell, Barrow ſuꝑ Soar, Quorndon, and Roathlye aforeſaid, in his owne occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	1	1	0
25. Richard Ireland, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, called The White Lyon, in the occupation of Samuel Hood, and one other cottage in the occupation of John Marſhall, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	11	2

26. Mr. Bernard, for one meſſuage and backſide in the occupation of John Boſs; and one cottage and backſide in the occupation of Peter Neal, in Mountſorell aforeſaid, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	1	8
27. William Boleby, for a cottage in Mountſorell, in the occupation of Samuel Knight, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	0	10
28. Henry Martyn, for a cottage in Mountſorell, in his owne occupation, payes town rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	0	10
29. William Bolebye, for three acres in the paddock commonly called Blackwell's Land, one cottage and backſide, in his own occupation, and one cottage and backſide in the occupation of Samuell Sheffeild, in Mountſorell aforeſaid, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ	0	2	0
30. Edward Marriott, for the gardens adjoyneing to the houſe he now lives in, in Mountſorell aforeſaid, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — — —	0	5	0
31. Eſter Palmer, widdow, for one cottage and backſide in Mountſorrell aforeſaid, in the occupation of William Brown, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	2	0
32. Nicholas Scampton, for one peice of paſture in Thorncliff-feild in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in his own occupation, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	2	8
33. John Burton, for one meſſuage and backſide in Mountſorell aforeſaid, in the occupation of Mr. Vander Eyden [1], payes town-rent ꝑ annũ — —	0	0	10
34. Mr. John Olderſhaw, for one meſſuage, called or heretofore known by the name of The Swan Inne, in Mountſorrell aforeſaid, in the occupation of William Olderſhaw; and two acres and an halfe of arable land in Haweliff-feild near the wood called Hawcliff-wood; and two roods in Thorncliff-feild, in the occupation of Edward Thornton; payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	5	4
35. Mr. Thiſtlethwaite, for a certaine peice of lande in Quorndon aforeſaid, called Daw-peece, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	1	8
36. George Thornton, for ꝑte of Dyſon's Land, payes town-rent ꝑ annũ —	0	0	4
	£.7	10	1

A Copy of Mr. Nedd's will.

Item, I give and bequeath to the mayor and burgeſſes of the towne or burrough of Leyceſter, in the county of Leyceſter, or by what other name or names ſoever they bee incorporate, called, or knowne (for the tyme beinge), the ſomme of three hundred pounds in money, to and for this uſe, intent, and purpoſe; and that they, the ſaid mayor and burgeſſes, or their ſucceſſors (for the tyme beinge), ſhall, within five yeares next after my deceaſe, buy and purchaſe, in ſuch manner and forme as by their learned counſell ſhall be adviſed and deviſed, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, of an eſtate of inheritance in fee-ſimple, of the cleere yearly valew of fifteene pounds per annum, or thereabouts, to and for the uſe of the poore people which ſhall inhabite and dwell in the towne of Mountſorell; which ſaid yearly rent of fifteene pounds per annum, or thereabouts, ſhall from time to time be diſtributed and given yearly to and amongſt the ſame poore people, by and at the diſcretion of the churchwardens there (for the tyme beinge), and of twoo or three more of the moſt antient and ſubſtantiall men of the ſaid towne of Mountſorell (for the tyme beinge), for ever. And I will, and my mynd is, that the ſaid ſumme of three hundred pounds ſhall, within two yeares next after my deceaſe, be paid and delivered, by the executors of this my laſt will and teſtament before-named, or one of them, to the ſaid mayor and burgeſſes, or to three or fowre of the chiefeſt of them, to the intent before-mentioned, ſo as they the ſaid mayor and burgeſſes ſhall and doe, uppon the receipt hereof, give unto my ſaid executors good and ſufficient ſecurity and aſſurance, by bond or otherwiſe; to this effect; viz. that if in caſe the ſaid lands, tenements, and hereditaments, ſhall not be purchaſed within the ſaid terme of five years next after my deceaſe, that then the ſaid ſomme of three hundred pounds to bee repaid to my ſaid executors within three months next after the expiration of the ſaid terme of five years; which ſaid ſomme of three hundred pounds, if it ſhall be repaid to my executors as aforeſaid, I give and bequeath the ſame to the releife of the poore children of Chriſt's Hoſpital in London for ever. And yf the ſaid mayor and burgeſſes ſhall and doe purchaſe lands, tenements, or hereditaments, of the yearly rent or valew aforeſaid, according to the true intent and meaning of this my laſt will, then I give and bequeath to them, for their paynes therein taken, a cupp of ſilver and gilt, to the valew of ten pounds of current money of Englande, to remayne to their corporation for ever. And I will, that the chardges for makinge and paſſing the aſſurance of the ſame land ſhall bee deducted and allowed out of the firſt yeare's rent thereof.

The three following traders' tokens are engraved in Plate XI. fig. 10—12:

1. "JOHN DAVIS, 1665, IN MOVNTSORREL, HIS HALFPENNY."

2. "RALPH BOSSE, OF MOUNTSORELL, HIS HALFEPENNY. R. B."

3. "JOSEPH LEVETT, OF MOUNTSORELL, 1667, HIS HALFPENY."

In 1781, an act was paſſed, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, within the manor, lordſhip, and liberties, of Mountſorell, part whereof lies in the pariſh of Rothley, and the other part in the pariſh of Barrow upon Soar, ſeveral open fields and commonable grounds, containing about 300 acres, and a certain commonable place called Mountſorell Hills; in which ſir John Danvers, bart. is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Mountſorell, as impropriator of all the tithes of corn, grain, and hay, and all the great and rectorial tithes yearly ariſing from the ſaid fields and commonable grounds, and as lord of the ſoil of the ſaid commonable place called Mountſorell Hills; Thomas Babington, eſq. as patron of the vicarage of Rothley; the Rev. William Babington, clerk, as vicar of the pariſh of Rothley, and entitled to all the ſmall or vicarial tithes yearly ariſing from ſuch part of the lordſhip and liberties of Mountſorell as is in the pariſh of Rothley, and to one acre and three roods or thereabouts glebe; the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars, of the college of St. John the Evangeliſt in Cambridge, as patrons of the vicarage of Barrow; the Rev. William Burrow, as vicar, and entitled to one fourth part of the ſmall or vicarial tithes yearly ariſing out of ſuch part of the lordſhip and liberties of Mountſorell as is in the pariſh of Barrow; and the ſaid ſir John Danvers, as entitled to the other three-fourth parts of the ſaid laſt-mentioned ſmall or vicarial tithes. And ſir John Danvers, Francis earl of Huntingdon, the Rev. John Fiſher, clerk, Scampſon Wheatley, John Biddles, John Abbotts, John Simpſon, Thomas Gowen, John Place, and others, were the then perſons intereſted in the reſidue of the ſaid open fields and commonable grounds, and in the ſaid commonable place called Mountſorell Hills. An acre was directed to be ſet out for repairing highways; and an equivalent to ſir John Danvers for his manerial intereſt; with ſuch farther allotment to him, as impropriator, as ſhould be equal to a ſeventh of the common field, in lieu of all impropriate tithes, and of his ſhare of ſmall tithes; a compenſation to the vicar of Rothley for his glebe; and alſo to the vicars of Rothley and Barrow, reſpectively, of equal value to their ſmall tithes and other dues, ſurplice-fees alone excepted. Proper compenſations alſo to be made to the impropriator and vicar, in lieu of tithes of old incloſures, and ſuch tithes of old incloſures as are not compenſated for to continue payable. Mountſorell Hill to be reſerved as a commonable place for ſuch perſons as the commiſſioners ſhould determine to have a right of common thereon.

Mountſorell is ſtill denominated a market-town, and contains about 150 dwellings.

---

[1] A celebrated portrait-painter; ſee vol. II. pp. 335. 681.

Mr. Bridges, about 1720, ſays, "On part of the road from Loughborough to Mountſorell are ridges of hills on the right hand, cloathed with trees, in particular one with large looſe ſtones hanging over Mountſorell; and between Quorndon and Mountſorell are willow-trees aſpiring to a remarkable height [1]."

"Mountſorell is placed on the baſe of a memorable rock, which looks venerable with age. Its countenance, like the human frame which was once beautiful, now extended to the utmoſt ſtretch of life, commands our veneration. Dare we ſay it is primeval with Time? Not a foſſil or marine ſubſtance [2] was ever ſeen in it; the chiſſel and the mallet cannot work it into any form, excepting when there run through it fine veins of white and grey marble. When the noble caſtle of the earls of Leiceſter capped this hill, how grand muſt have been the ſcene from the meadows below! The river Soar and the town of Mountſorell were pretty and aiding objects beneath its influence. There are ſome pleaſant valley-views on the ſide of the Soar; and towards Quorndon and Loughborough, and over the Foreſt, theſe are finely contraſted [3]."

"It is well worth while to walk over this hill [4], inſtead of riding through the town. The rich meadows below, through which runs the Soar, and the riſing ground on the farther ſide of it, with the towns of Sileby, Barrow, &c. form a fine view. The meadows are very flat; and, after heavy rains, the river ſpreads to a great width. At ſuch times, this hill is ſaid to bear a reſemblance to Gibraltar [5]."—A view of it, by Captain Groſe, is engraved in plate X. fig. 4; and two others, by Mr. Throſby, in Plate XI. fig. 3, 4.

Mr. Gilpin ſays, "The country between Derby and Leiceſter is flat. Quorndon-wood, a little beyond Loughborough, riſing on the right, makes an agreeable variety amidſt ſuch a continuation of uniformity. Mountſorell alſo has the ſame effect. From Leiceſter the country ſtill continues flat and woody; ſtretching out into meadows, paſtures, and common fields [6]. The horizon, on every ſide, is generally terminated by ſpires: oftener than once we were able to count ſix, or ſeven, adorning the limits of one circular view [7]."

Some very ſmall fragments of the foundation of the Caſtle are to be ſeen on a round part of the hill above the town, called Caſtle-hill. As ſome workmen were getting ſtone from this hill, in 1787, they found ſeveral pieces of old coin, and an antient ſpur of caſt copper, which had been gilt, as was viſible in the engraved ſtrokes of the Moſaic; and having, inſtead of a rowel at the neck, a pointed knob, much blunted by the hand of Time [8]. It is ſuppoſed by the form to be of ſome antiquity, and that rowels were of a later invention. It was dug up on a part of the ſite of the old caſtle, and probably belonged to ſome knight or other warrior there preſent, who, during the ſiege, might have been ſlain, and buried on the ſpot, as was the cuſtom, in his boots and ſpurs. The coins and ſpur were found in a cavity; and, with them, ſome large bones, and apparently fragments of leather, a certain appendage alſo to the ſpurs: both theſe laſt mouldered away on being expoſed to the air [9]."

"Many of the rocks in Charnwood Foreſt are compoſed of an imperfect kind of granite, of which a much more complete ſort abounds in the neighbourhood of Mountſorell, where it is uſed in buildings, in the pavement of the ſtreets, and to mend the high roads: the moſt perfect of the Mountſorell granite is compoſed of red quartz, white felt-ſpat, and black ſhirl or cockle, blended in a nearly equal proportion; it is one of the moſt compact of all granites, none of the red granites of Cornwall being ſuperior to it in hardneſs [10]."

Mr. Bray ſays [11], "Mountſorell hill is a rock of reddiſh granite, with pieces whereof the ſtreets are paved. They are commonly called Charley Foreſt ſtones; and in many places ſtand out bare, and are of ſuch hardneſs, after being expoſed to the air, as to reſiſt all tools. Such pieces as can be got from under-ground are broken with a ſledge, and uſed in buildings in the ſhape in which they are broken. Many houſes are built with them, and make a very ſingular appearance [12]. They are often imperfect cones; and, being too hard to be cut or broken, the ſmootheſt face is laid outermoſt in beds of the excellent lime of Barrow. Theſe ſtones, from their uncommon hardneſs, are coveted for painters' mullets [13]."

---

[1] Sir Thomas Cave, from Mr. Brydges's MSS. 12°, vol. AA. 3.

[2] "I heartily wiſh that Mountſorell was ſo happy as to be ſurveyed by the oculus eruditus of a Condamine or Faujas St. Fond; the ſubject ſeems to deſerve it. Or at leaſt that ſome perſon properly qualified would caſt a philoſophic eye over the ſpot and neighbourhood; and determine, whether this is not the ſpot where the long ridge of elevated ground begins and extends, with ſome interruption, through Derbyſhire, Lancaſhire, and ſo on to the Northern extremity of the kingdom; and probably may have been formed, as in other parts of the globe, by volcanic diſcharges, though no traces of ſuch are diſcoverable. Mountſorell is ſeated equidiſtant between Swithland-ſlates and Barrow-lime. The pumices thrown from them may probably be originally ſlates; and the lime may be volcanic, as much as pozzolana." G. A.—"Wherever there are traces of volcanos, it is to be expected that pozzolana may be diſcovered. It was not known until of late years that there are any marks of antient volcanos in theſe kingdoms; and though the Giant's Cauſeway in Ireland was long admired as a wonder, yet it has but lately been underſtood to be a huge aſſemblage of baſaltine columns, or lava in chryſtallization, like that at Bolſena, and many other places. The Scotch granite, as it is called, with which the ſtreets of London are now paved, is not generally known to be a lava; and the ſame with the Derbyſhire toad ſtone, which has alſo but lately been announced to the publick as a volcanic ſubſtance (by Mr. Whitehurſt, in his Theory of the Earth). I have ſpecimens of Veſuvian lava, of the Scotch granite, and of the Derbyſhire toad-ſtone, which ſo reſemble each other, that, if they were ſhaken together in a bag, it would be no eaſy matter to aſſign them to their reſpective countries. The baſaltine columns of the beautiful cave of Fingal, in the Iſle of Staffa, have alſo been brought out of obſcurity (ſee Pennant's Scotland); and the ſame ſubſtance is known to exiſt in Wales (ſee Phil. Tranſ. vol. LXV. Part I.)—A black ſtone, yielding factitious pozzolana, which has been found in Sweden by Mr. Baggé, proves to be nothing elſe but a hard, pure ſlate, that has not the leaſt efferveſcence with acids, and ſeparates into pretty thick plates. It is common with us in Derbyſhire and Leiceſterſhire; and would certainly be worth the trying, for the purpoſe of obtaining a factitious pozzolana. This ſtone, when calcined, is charged with a conſiderable quantity of ferruginous particles; and it is probably owing to this circumſtance, that it approaches in its effects to the volcanic pozzolanas. It muſt not, however, be imagined that this factitious pozzolana has the ſame texture with theſe; or even, when well examined, the ſame appearance. For the true pozzolana is porous, and, as we have obſerved before, has little grains of black ſchorl ſhining in it; whereas this is compact, and not at all porous, and contains no ſchorl. This is mentioned, only that we may not be too haſty in concluding, that volcanic ſubſtances owe their origin to ſlate. It is highly probable, however, that ſlate, or horn-ſtone, or both, are the principle origin of lava. See Mr. Profeſſor Martyn's very learned "Enquiry into the Nature and Uſe of Pozzolana Earth," in Arthur Young's Annals of Agriculture, vol. XIV. 1790, pp. 395-400.

[3] Throſby.

[4] "At leaſt this was good advice a few years ago, if a man did not deſire to have his neck broke." G. A.

[5] Bray's Tour, p. 91.

[6] Gilpin's Northern Tour, vol. II. p. 244.

[7] See, in vol. II. p. 611, Mr. Gilpin's remarks on ſteeple-hunting; to which may be added, on the authority of the Leiceſter Journal Dec. 2, and of the Bury Poſt Dec. 7, 1796, the following inſtances of this ſpirited exerciſe: "The long-depending ſteeple-race, or hunter's ſweepſtakes for 100 guineas each, from Barkby Holt to Billeſdon Coplow, Leiceſterſhire, and back again, was won on Tueſday laſt by Mr. C. Meynell, beating Mr. Forreſter and ſir Gilbert Heathcote, bart. The diſtance was 9 miles acroſs the country, which was rode in 25 minutes. The gentlemen and horſes performed it in a manner that did them credit. Mr. Cholmondeley paid forfeit."

[8] See Plate XI. fig. 13.

[9] Letter from the late David Wells, eſq. in Gent. Mag. vol. LVII. p. 790. But ſee hereafter, under Charnwood, p. 127.

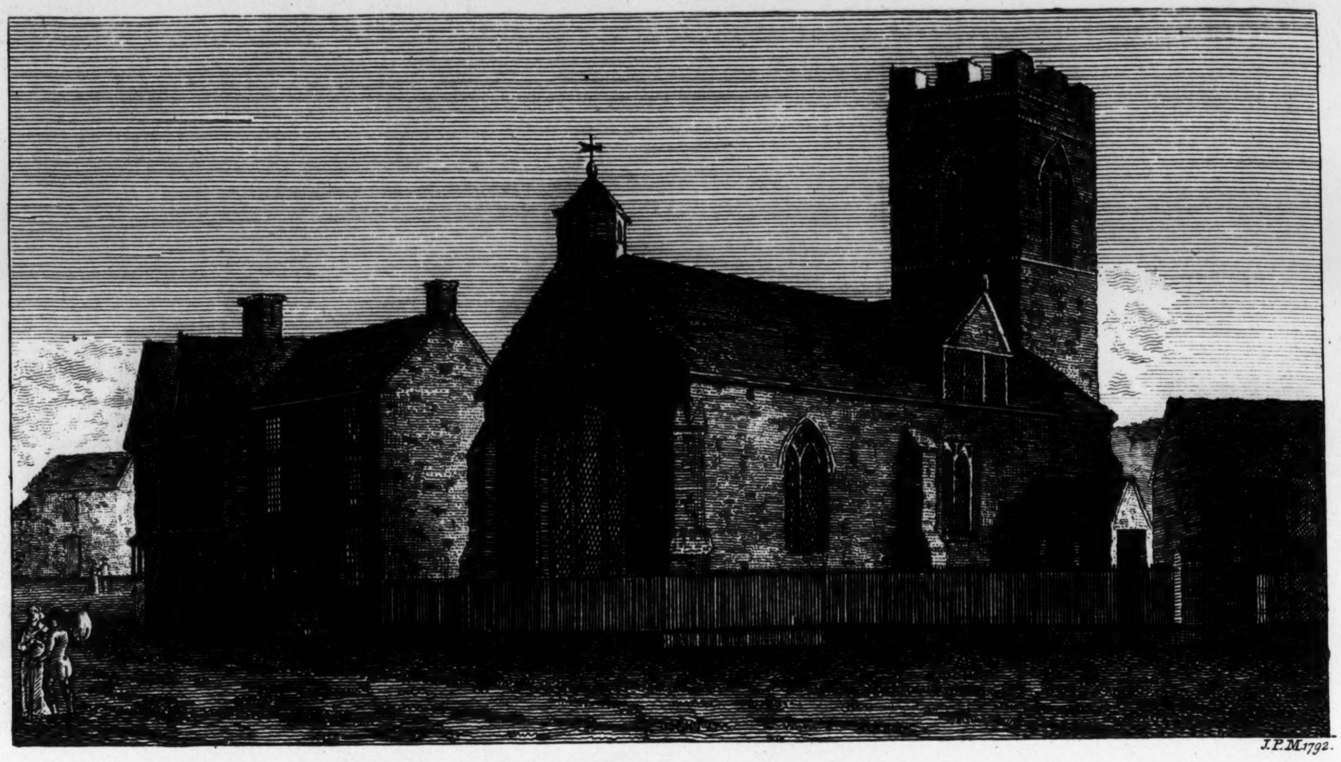
[10] Dr. Pulteney, in his Catalogue of Plants growing in this neighbourhood; ſee vol. I. p. clxxvii.

[11] Tour, ubi ſupra.

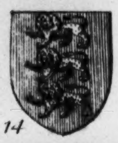
[12] "The houſes repreſent the ſection of a plumb-pudding; the oval plumbs in all directions in a large body of batter." G. A.

[13] "Porphyry is a body ſo exceeding hard, that the art of working it is ſuppoſed to be quite loſt. To foreign Porphyry I ſhall add one that I brought from Mount Sorill in Leiceſterſhire, where is great variety of colours, ſo that the houſes built of the rough ſtones look very beautifully, though not a ſquared one to be met with; it is ſo hard to be wrought. It was not without difficulty that I got a ſample broken off; one part is a pale red; the other dark-coloured, with ſhining particles. That very curious Artiſt, Mr. Place of York, got a piece poliſhed, to grind colours upon, for which it exceeds marble. In the ſame tour, I obſerved a ſort of black marble, the product of the ſame county; of which I ſaw ſeveral graveſtones at Leiceſter, and ſeems capable of improvement." Thoreſby's Leeds, p. 466.

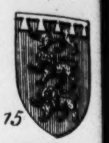
MOUNTSORELL, N.E.



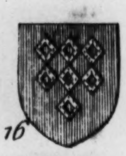
J. P. M. 1792.



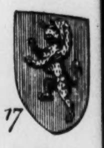
14



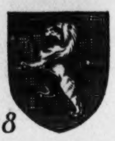
15



16



17



18

19 20

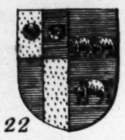
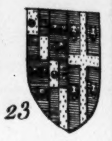
21

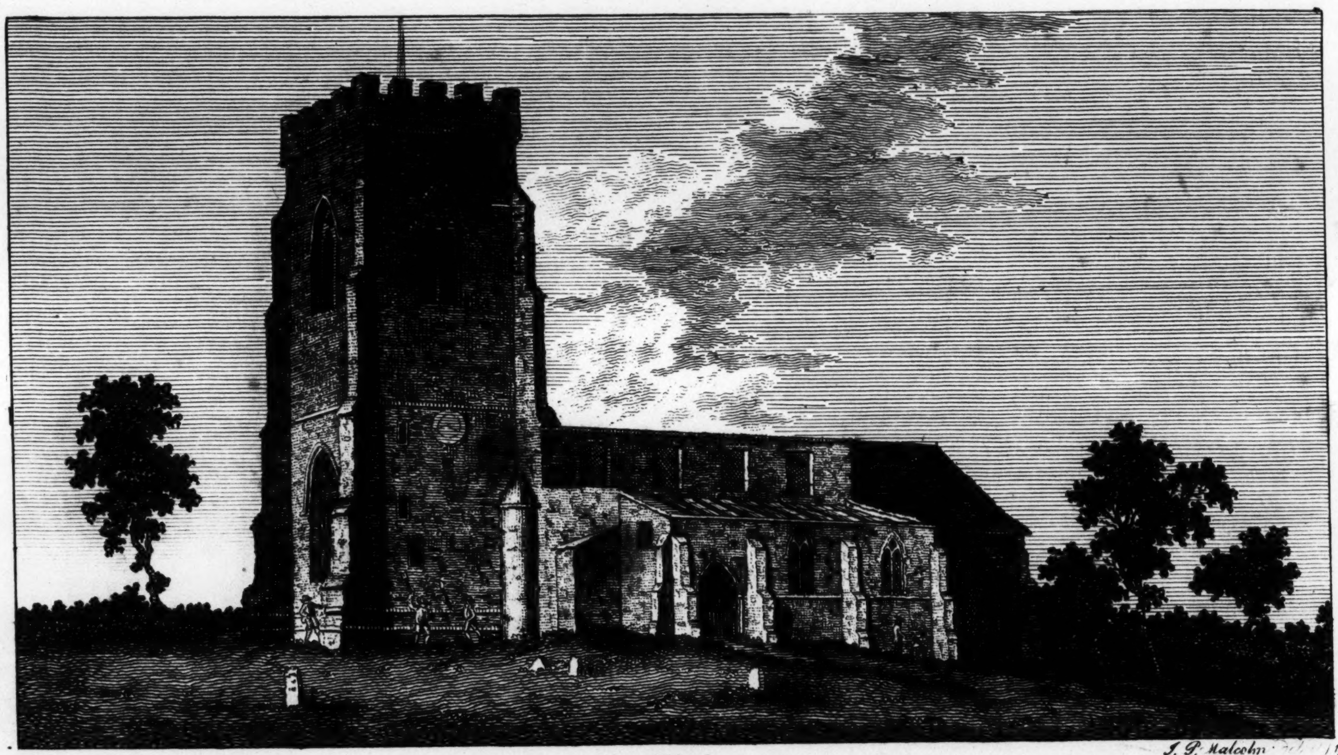


22

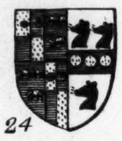


23

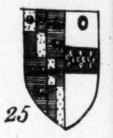
QUORNDON, S.W.



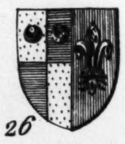
J. P. Malcolm del. 1792.



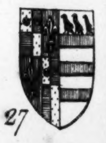
24



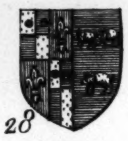
25



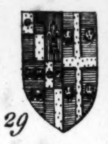
26



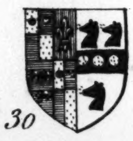
27



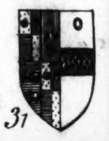
28



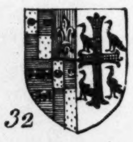
29



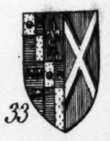
30



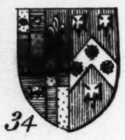
31



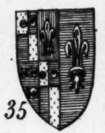
32



33

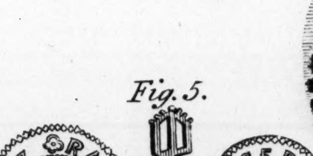


34



35

10



1665 IONAS DAVIS
IN MOVNTSORELL
HIS HALF PENY

Fig. 3.

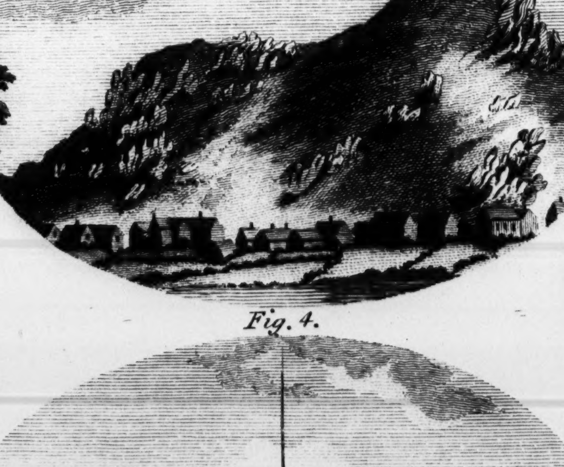


Fig. 13

Fig. 6.

8

9

7

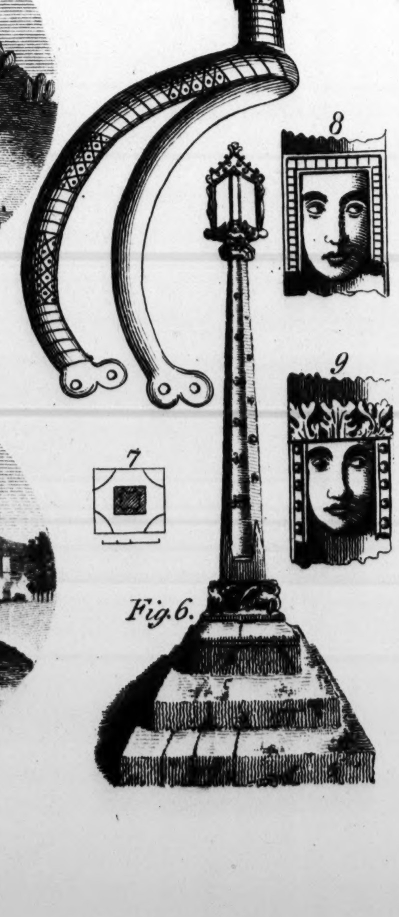

Fig. 5.

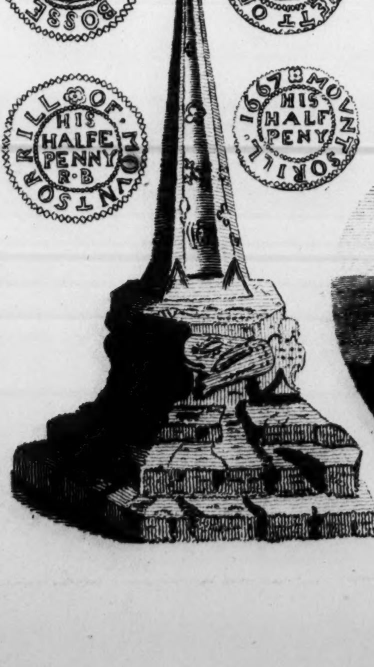
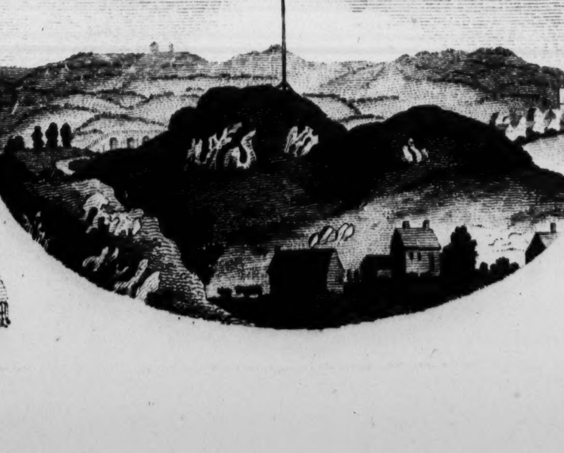
11

12



RALPH BOSSE 1667
IOSEPH LOVETT OF
OF MOVNTSORRILL
HIS HALFE PENNY R·B
1667 MOVNTSORILL
HIS HALF PENY

Fig. 4.



The CHAPEL (ſee Plate XI.).

"Montſorell in duabus parochiis eſt; ſcilicet, una pars in parochiâ de Baro, que vocatur pars inferior; in quâ parte habemus decimam garbarum & feni, & medietatem lini & canabi, lane, agnorum, & omnium minutarum decimarum pertinentium ad medietatem de Baroo eccleſiam. Monachi de Sc̄o Severo, ſecundùm matriculum epiſcopi, percipiunt totam decimam garbarum de novis aſſartis in Montſorell, unde non debent recipere niſi tertiam partem.

"Vicarius de Baroo habet medietatem altaragii, & medietatem decimarum minutarum ibidem; & abbas Leic' habet aliam medietatem. Decima feni de hades & leyes valet per annum xđ. vel xiiđ."[1]

"Mountſorell," ſays Burton, "had two chapels, only one now (1622) remaining in uſe; which has theſe arms in the Eaſt window of the chancel:

1. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale, Or; England.

2. The ſame, with a label of five points Argent; Norfolk.

3. Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or; Quincy.

4. Gules, a lion rampant Or, armed and langued Azure; De Albini earl of Arundel.

5. Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or; Segrave.

6. The ſame; impaling Thomas de Brotherton earl of Norfolk.

7. Vert, a lion rampant Or; Norton[2]."

This chapel, which belongs to the pariſh of Barrow, and is dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt[3], was rebuilt in the reign of king Henry VI; and in 1552 contained ſeven little bells[4]. In 1794 it conſiſted of a handſome old tower (in which were three bells), a nave, chancel, and a ſmall lean-to, and was very much darkened with galleries; but in the following year the whole was conſiderably widened and enlarged by public ſubſcription; which, though liberal, being inſufficient to defray the neceſſary expences (amounting to £672. 7*s*. 7*d*.) a ſermon in aid was preached, March 19, 1796, by the Rev. Thomas Robinſon, vicar of St. Mary's, Leiceſter; which produced a collection of £30.

The great and ſmall tithes of Mountſorell were purchaſed from the Queen's Majeſty in 1595 by William Herrick, eſq.; from whom the tithe of certain corn and hay in Mountſorell was rented in 1601 by Philippa Cave, of Barrow upon Soar, widow, for 40*s*. a year. He gave them to his ſecond ſon, Dr. Richard Herrick, warden of Mancheſter; by whom they were ſettled in 1646 on his wife Anna-Maria, and bequeathed in 1666 to his daughter Helena after the death of her mother[5]. But they afterwards reverted to William Herrick, eſq. who let ſeveral leaſes of parts of them, and ſold other parts.

In 1650, the chaplain at Mountſorell was declared to be "inſufficient, but maintained by the town."

An exact account of all the rents and profits belonging to the curacy of Mountſorell[6].

Imprimis, there are £5. per annum iſſuing and payable out of certain houſes in Mountſorell, and certain pieces of land ſituate and being in the fields of Mountſorell, Barrow, Quorndon, &c. commonly called Town Rent.

Item, £5. per annum iſſuing out of certain lands at Barrow, which were purchaſed by ſome moneys given by ſeveral perſons deceaſed, for the uſe of the miniſter, poor, and highways; commonly called Barrow Land Rent.

Item, £5. per annum for a ſermon, to be preached in the chapel of Mountſorell on St. Thomas's day yearly, by the reſident miniſter or curate there, being the gift of Mr. Ralph Smalley, deceaſed.

Item, 40*s*. per annum for two ſermons, to be preached at the chapel of Mountſorell (the one, on the firſt Sunpay in Lent; the other, on the firſt Sunday in Auguſt yearly) being the gift of Mr. Richard Nedd, deceaſed[7].

Item, 40*s*. per annum for the reſident miniſter or curate that doth officiate or ſerve the cure at Mountſorell, being the gift of Mr. Staveley, of Coſſington, deceaſed.

Item, 10*s*. per annum for a ſermon, to be preached in the chapel of Mountſorell, on the Sunday next before Twelfth day yearly, by the miniſter or curate there, being the gift of Mr. Thomas Statham, deceaſed.

Item, there is an eſtate of £33. per annum[8], lying at Barrow, and another of £11. 10*s*. per annum, given by the reverend father William Beveridge, late lord biſhop of St. Aſaph, for prayers to be read twice every day[9] in the week in the chapel of Mountſorell (it being a market-town and a large town); out of which 10*s*. apiece yearly to the truſtees; 40*s*. per annum to the chapel-clerk for tolling the bell; and 2*s*. 3*d*. chief rent.

The ſum total of all which the rents and profits belonging to the curacy of Mountſorell, when the 10*s*. apiece belonging to the truſtees (of whom there are at preſent four), and the 40*s*. to the clerk, and the 2*s*. 3*d*. chief rent, are deducted, is £59. 17*s*. 9*d*.

Nov. 3, 1714, the tithes of Hockley field, within the liberties of Mountſorell, were demiſed by William Herrick, eſq. to Thomas Taylor, for ſix years, at an annual rent of £18.; and in 1716 were ſold in fee ſimple to Thomas Greaſley of Mountſorell for £390.[10]

Near the foot of the higheſt part of the rock, at the North end of the town, a ſchool was founded, in 1767, by the late ſir John Danvers, for the inſtruction of boys of this place and of Swithland.

The vicar of Barrow has the right of preſentation to the perpetual curacy of Mountſorell; and the Rev. William Eaſton, the preſent vicar of Barrow, has lately been licenſed to the curacy, on his own petition to the biſhop, it being vacated by the death of the Rev. Mr. Simpſon, who held it upwards of 50 years[11].

The chapel regiſter begins in 1677.

1677—1682, baptized 47; buried 41.

1786—1790, baptized 103; buried 102.

The chapel belonging to Rothley, dedicated to St. Nicholas, contained in 1552, two bells, a ſaints bell and hand bell[12]; and was wholly decayed before the year 1622[13]. It ſtood near the preſent ſchool; and a piece of ground behind the ſchool is ſtill called The Chapel-piece. No traces of a foundation are now remaining; but when the inhabitants of Rothley go their perambulation, they come to the chapel-yard, and have a ceremony at a buſh now there.

Here are alſo three meeting-houſes, for Preſbyterians, Baptiſts, and Methodiſts.

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale.

[2] Burton, p. 192; and R. Holme's Collections, in Harl. MSS. 2113. And ſee Plate XI. fig. 14—20.

[3] This chapel is noticed, as dedicated to St. John, in the Roll of 1344; yet Ecton and Bacon (confounding it with Quorndon) ſay to St. Peter.

[4] See vol. I. p. cxxxix.

[5] See hereafter, under Woodhouſe.

[6] Peck, MS. è Collectionibus viri reverendi David. Trimnell, A. M. archidiaconi Leic.

[7] See his will, p. 89.

[8] 92 acres; now (1798) worth more than £100. a year.

[9] "So this good and charitable man ordered, when lukewarmneſs was leſs prevalent than at preſent; when prayers are ſeldom read except on Sundays, chiefly for want of people to attend. You mention under Medbourne Dr. Watts's reading Prayers, and that his ſucceſſor diſcontinues it. Did any body attend in Dr. Watts's time? I can only ſay, that when I firſt came to this place [Barrow in Suffolk], I was well diſpoſed to do for the beſt; accordingly, I ſet out with reading Prayers in Paſſion-week, for every day of which our Church has provided ſpecial ſervice; but nobody came; and the meaning of the attempt was much wondered at. If you are at all acquainted with the diſpoſition and manners of a country village, you will not think this ſtrange. Even at eleven o'clock of a Sunday morning, hardly 20 can be got together in my pariſh of 560 perſons, though the congregation is tolerably numerous in the afternoon. And at Bury, where there are ſo many unemployed perſons, very few indeed attend on Wedneſdays and Fridays, when there are ſermons, and one of theſe by the neighbouring clergymen, which one would think might raiſe curioſity. The founders of theſe weekly lectures fixed on the market-day as moſt likely to furniſh hearers. In theſe degenerate days, the townſmen alledge it in excuſe for their non-attendance. The caſe is the ſame in the Univerſities. Formerly a lecturer was well attended; not ſo now. Can we wonder, therefore, if both the reader and lecturer ceaſe from doing their duty, though the whole blame is laid on them?—I once attempted to wait on Dr. Watts, but was not allowed to ſee the great man, after ſtaying half an hour in the houſe becauſe it was Saturday, on which he ſaw no viſitor, being engaged in making his ſermon, which he burnt immediately on returning home. Do you think that Farinelli or Garrick could poſſibly have continued ſinging or acting to £15. or £20. houſes? Action and re-action muſt be in ſome degree equal." G. A.

[10] From the original leaſe.

[11] Mr. Simpſon died in 1797.

[12] See vol. I. p. cxxxix.

[13] MS. Chetwynd.

MONU-

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On mural tablets in the chapel:

1. "Near this place are depoſited
the remains of William Tyler, who departed this life the 2d day of July, 1788,
aged 72 years."

2. "Near this place lie the remains of William Kirk,
who died Feb. 26, 1794, aged 52 years.
Alſo four of his children, viz.
William, George, George-Doughty, and Sarah,
who all died in their minority."

3. "Depoſited below, the mortal part of George Doughty,
who departed this life the 19th day of June, 1792,
aged 78.
Alſo of Ann his wife;
ſhe died May 17, 1790, aged 76 years."

4. "Here reſt the mortal remains of Thomas Spicer, ſon of William and Jane Spicer;
he reſigned this life on the 13th day of Auguſt, 1795,
aged 38 years.
Ye Young, who glory in your youth,
Here pauſe, and learn this ſolemn truth:
Diſeaſe may quickly ſpoil your pow'rs;
Deſtroy your bliſs; cut ſhort your hours.
Go then; be wiſe; for death prepare,
That you immortal joys may ſhare."

On a flat ſtone in the chancel:

"Near this place lieth the body of Thomas Greaſley, gent. who departed this life the 21ſt of January, 1765, in the 52d year of his age.

"Alſo the body of Anne, the wife of Thomas Greaſley, gent. She departed this life the 3d of January, 1773, aged 63 years.

"And alſo near this place lies Sophia, daughter of Thomas Greaſley, gent. by Anne his wife.
She departed this life the 12th of October, 1767,
aged 16 years."

In the nave.

1. "Beneath lie interred
the remains of Prudence Jackſon, relict of John Jackſon, late of Kettering.
She departed this life the 29th of Auguſt, 1786,
aged 74 years.
The virtues of a Mother dear,
Of Friend and Chriſtian, center'd here:
Her glaſs is run; ſhe's laid in duſt:
Go hence!—prepare—for, die you muſt!"

2. "Here reſt the remains of Mary, wife of Edward Tompſon,
who died the 6th of Auguſt, 1719, aged 44 years.
To pride averſe, to gentleneſs ſhe join'd
All moral virtues of the mind:
The beſt of wives, the boaſt of wedlock, here
Lies dormant: Reader, drop a tear."

3. "John Abbots, gent. died Dec. 5, 1781, aged 50. Elizabeth, wife of John Abbots, and daughter of John Jackſon, maſter of Wigſton's Hoſpital, died June 17, 1775, aged 47."

4. "Mary, relict of Francis Briggs, of Much Urſwick, Lancaſhire, died Dec. 12, 1758;
and Elizabeth their daughter,
wife of John Simpſon, clerk, miniſter of Mountſorrel, died Aug. 16, 1772.
And of Sarah Briggs, daughter of Francis and Mary Briggs,
April 6, 1789."
Truſt not to future years, unknown to thee
How near thy final hour of life may be;
Some early day the ſolemn bell may ſound
A call to thy laſt lodging under ground.
Convey'd to Heaven's high court, an awful ſcene,
How ſhall thy ſoul face Majeſty ſupreme,
As well or ill thy day of life is ſpent
Hope thou, or fear, the laſt great day's event.
By penitence, by faith in Virtue's road,
Prepare to meet, or dread to meet thy God.
His word thy rule, attentive hear and read;
And be thy life conſiſtent with thy creed.
For numerous failings to thy Saviour truſt,
Yet grace aſſiſting, what thou canſt thou muſt.
The ſoul whoſe duty is its conſtant care
(Diſtant alike preſumption and deſpair)
Shall be, by faith, in Chriſtian graces dreſt,
At Heaven's perpetual feaſt a welcome gueſt.
In Wiſdom's ſchool, ſhould prayers and lectures fail
To mend the heart, verſe may perchance prevail.
Whoſo is wiſe will ponder theſe things. Pſ. cvii. 43."

There is not yet any monument for Mr. Simpſon, the late curate; nor for Francis Bruxby, gent. who died July 1, 1794, aged 93.

In the chapel-yard:

"Robert Adderley, ſon of Robert and Alice, died Dec. 9, 1778, aged 18."
Beneath this ſtone, enquiring Reader, ſleeps
A youth, whoſe fall each fond acquaintance weeps;
Juſt at that time, when childhood's pleaſing ſpan
Draws to its verge, and riſes into man,
He fell an early ſacrifice to death.
How vain man's hope! how fleeting human breath!
Yet know, though plac'd in no exalted ſphere,
He did the beſt of deeds—his duty here."

James Freeman died Nov. 19, 1765, aged 85.

Elizabeth, wife of Edward Loach, died Aug. 9, 1760, aged 70.

Benjamin Fowkes died Dec. 22, 1776, aged 73.

Ann his wife died Dec. 24, 1775, aged 72.

John Caſtledine died Nov. 7, 1773, aged 67.

Anne, relict of John Caſtledine, died Oct. 17, 1781, aged 71.

Jonathan, ſon of John and Anne Caſtledine, died June 9, 1767, aged 27.

Elizabeth Hallam, daughter of Thomas and Mary Brown, died Dec. 6, 1776, aged 74.

Mrs. Doughty (who had lived with her huſband 49 years) died 178.. aged 77.

The following names of inhabitants of this town are from head-ſtones in the church-yard of Rothley[1]:

Elizabeth, wife of John Jarratt, of Mountſorell, died Nov. 16, 1691.

William, ſon of William and Harriet Farmer, died March 20, 1701, aged 2.

Walter Barrs, gent. of Mountſorell, died Oct. 28, 1752, aged 70.

Walter Barrs, of Mountſorell, died July 10, 1779, aged 49.

Elizabeth Wheatley, died June 18, 1773, aged 72.

Hugh Phipps, died June 12, 1781, aged 63.

William Buck, died Sept. 22, 1782, aged 46.

John Biddle, died Feb. 2, 1782, aged 59.

William Biddle, died May 2, 1784, aged 46.

Mary Biddle, relict of John Biddle, late of Mountſorell, May 5, 1792, aged 57.

Elizabeth, wife of Robert Biddle, of Mountſorell, died Aug. 6, 1794, aged 62.

Sarah, relict of John Noon, died July 14, 1785, aged 57.

John Pitt, late of Mountſorell, died Aug. 1, 1795, aged 37.

Samuel Daft, died Jan. 12, 1791, aged 59.

Sarah Daft, died Jan. 1794, aged 70.

---

[1] The North ſide of Rothley church-yard was formerly appropriated to the burial of the inhabitants of that part of Mountſorell which is within their diſtrict; but a new burial-ground was conſecrated, in 1759, for the uſe of both ends of the townſhip.

Pedigree of SMALLEY, of THORPE ERNALD, BARROW, MOUNTSORELL, NEWBOLD, &c.

From Vincent's Leiceſterſhire, N° 127, p. 429, in Coll. Arms; ſigned at Leiceſter, by SAMUEL SMALLEY.

John Smalley, of Bulton, gave his lands there to Robert Smalley, of Alwaſton, 8 Hen. IV.

Robert Smalley, of Alwaſton, in the county of Derby, to whom and Margaret his wife the Abbot of the Vale gave the manor of Alwaſton, 1 Oct. 1 Hen. IV.; and to whom Robert of Hampton gave lands there 10 Hen. V. This Robert Smalley enfeoffed Henry Lord Grey, John Sacheverell, and others, in his lands of Alwaſton, Bulton, Ambaſton, Thurleſton, Barrow upon Trent, Chaddeſdon, Spondon, Little Derby, Eyton, Breydſale, Smalley, and Kirkehallome, in the county of Derby, 10 Hen. VI. He made his will 1 Sept. 1444, 22 Hen. VI. in which he bequeathed his collar, which he had by the gift of King Henry V. to the church of Alwaſton towards the ſupport thereof. = Margaret his wife.

John Smalley, eſq. to whom Richard Sowre, of Ambaſton releaſed his right in his lands of Bulton, 36 Hen. VI. = ... Joan, 22 Hen. VI.

Robert Smalley, ſon and heir apparent of John Smalley, of Alwaſton, eſq. 2 Ric. III.

Robert Smalley, the younger ſon, to whom his brother confirmed and granted his right in his lands of Alwaſton, Bulton, Thurleſton, Barow, Chaddeſdon, Spondon, Little Derby, Eyton, Breydſale, Smalley, and Kirkehallome, 1 R. III. and which his father John had before given to him, 20 Edw. IV. = ...

Anthony Smalley, ſon and heir apparent of Robert Smalley, of Thorpe Ernald, co. Leiceſter, 25 Hen. VIII. = Eleanor his wife ſurvived her huſband, and made her will 20 October, 10 Eliz.

Modwena, the wife of .... Venables; m. afterwards to ..... Cateſby.

George Smalley, of Stoneſby, co. Leic. = ... dau. and heir of .... Croke, of Ringſtead, co. Northampton.

Mary, marr. to .... Slighe.

.... ma. to .... Gulſton, of Wymondham, co. Leic.

John Smalley, of Thorpe Ernald, and of the borough of Leiceſter, gent. ſold the manor of Thorpe Ernald to Thos. Hartop, of Burton, yeoman, 11 Eliz. = Frances, dau. of Michael Purefoy, of Caldecot, co. Warwick, eſq.

.... marr. to ...... Atkins, of Pickwell, co. Leic.

Edward.

Anthony Smalley, of Alwaſton, co. Derby, and Ringſtead, co. Northampton. = ...

Nicholas. = ...

Henry.

Maurice.

Adam, 2d ſon, ſ. p.

Frances, wife of Lionel Bradſhaw, of Broughton Grange, co. Leic.

Elizab. wife of Will. Sainte, of Woodhurſt, co. Hunt.

Samuel Smalley, of Newbold, co. Leic. ſon and heir, living 1619. = Joice, d. of Rich. Walker, of Fillongly, co. Warwick.

Heſter, marr. to John Farington, of Fen-Drayton, co. Camb.

George Smalley, of Alwaſton, 1619.

Anthony, 2d ſon, living 1619.

Thomas.

John Smalley, 3 years old in 1619.

SMALLEY OF LEICESTERSHIRE

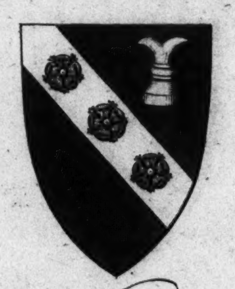
From a Sketch of the Seal of Robert Smalley of Alwaston, in the County of Derby, who lived in the Reigns of Henry IV, V, and VI. as entered in Vincent's Visitation of Leicestershire A.D. 1619. N.° 127. P. 429 in the College of Arms.

SMALLE or SMALL
OF GLOUCESTERSHIRE



George Smalle sen^r.
George Small Junior

From the Autographs annexed to the Pedigree of Small at the Visitation of Gloucestershire A.D. 1682 in K. 5. folio 50 in the College of Arms.

SMALL OF LEWISHAM

Confirmed by Patent 14 August A.D. 1795 to Martha, Widow of John Pybus Esqr of Cheum, and Grandaughter of George Small, Junior; & to the other Descendants of her Father, the late Charles Small Esqr of Lewisham in Kent.

From the Heralds Viſitation of Glouceſterſhire in 1682 [1], it appears that the family of Smalle, or Small, of Cirenceſter, Minchin-Hampton, and Uley in that county, ſtated themſelves to be of the ſame family as the Smalleys of Leiceſterſhire; but the pedigree entered at that Viſitation is not ſufficiently full to aſcertain the link of connexion between them. Bigland, in his Collections for Glouceſterſhire [2], expreſſly mentions them, with Earl Bathurſt's and three others, as being "the principal families of property, and of the longeſt eſtabliſhment at Cirenceſter;" but the pariſh regiſter does not ſupply any information anterior to the year 1560; being the date of its firſt commencement. Charles Small, Eſq. the repreſentative of the eldeſt branch of the family, who ſettled at Lewiſham in Kent, left three daughters his coheirs; and was the maternal grandfather of Charles-Small Pybus, Eſq. M. P. for Dover, and one of the Lords Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury.

---

[1] K. 5. fol. 50, in the College of Arms.

[2] Vol. I. p. 350.

Pedigree of SMALLE, or SMALL, of GLOUCESTERSHIRE, and LEWISHAM, in KENT. Of the ſame Family as the SMALLEYS of LEICESTERSHIRE, in Vincent, Nº 127. p. 429. in Coll. Arm.

Arms: 1. and 4. Sable, on a bend engrailed Argent, three roſes Gules, in the ſiniſter chief a cheſsrook of the ſecond, for Small; 2. and 3. Azure, three demi-lions rampant Or, gutté de ſang, for Newnam.

Sir John Hody of Stowel, in co. Somerſet[1]. = Margaret, daughter and heir of John Cole of Nitheway, in co. Devon, and Pilleſdon, in co. Dorſet. Her anceſtor William Cole held Nitheway, temp. R. II.

Sir John Hody of Pilleſdon, Stowel, and Nitheway, eldeſt ſon and heir, LORD CHIEF JUSTICE OF ENGLAND, 18 H. VI. died 1442. = Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Jewe of Whitfield and Beerehall, in co. Devon, and Pilleſdon, in co. Dorſet; marr. 2dly, to Robert Cappes, and died about 13 E. IV.

Mary, youngeſt daughter, mar. 1453, 31 H. VI. = Robert Bond of Beauchamp's Hache, in co. Somerſet, and Lutton, in co. Dorſet[2].

William Bond, of Lutton, b. 1455, 33 H. VI. = Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of John Prowz of Bridy, in co. Dorſet, married 1496, 12 H. VII.

John Bond of Chickerel, in co. Dorſet, and Frierning, near Ingateſtone, in co. Eſſex, ſecond ſon. = Anne, daughter and heir of John Holmſted of Frierning, in co. Eſſex.

Alice, eldeſt daughter, living 1566. = Thomas Symonds of Woodsford Caſtle, and Weſt Stafford, in co. Dorſet, died 1566[3].

Giles Symonds of Woodsford and Cliff, in co. Dorſet, and Hilleſley, in co. Glouc. eldeſt ſon and heir, living 1596. = Anne, only daughter of John Browne of Frampton, in co. Dorſet, ſiſter to Sir John Browne of Frampton, and Sir Robert Browne of Godmanſton, in co. Dorſet, married 1581[4].

Robert Symonds, of Hilleſley, in co. Glouceſter, barriſter at law, living 1623. = Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Rogers, of the city of Briſtol.

Matthew Symonds of Bickham, in the pariſh of Winbourne Minſter, in co. Dorſet, and Hilleſley, in co. Glouceſter, eldeſt ſon and heir, born 1619, died 1669. = ... daughter of . . . . Executrix to her huſband in 1669.

JOHN SMALLE, or SMALLEY, of Cirenceſter, in co. Glouceſter, buried 8 July, 1578. = Alice, buried 6 Jan. 1577.

John Smalle of Cirenceſter, bur. 15 June, 1585. = Joane.
Elizabeth, mar. 12 Sept. 1574, to John Davis.
Hugh Smalle of Cirenceſter, bur. 19 Feb. 1588-9. = Joane, buried 19 Mar. 1599.

Mary, 1ſt wife, bur. 24 Jan. 1604. = Giles Smalle, or Small, of Cirenceſter, eldeſt ſon and heir, bur. 15 May, 1617[6]. = Elizabeth, 2d wife, buried 20 April, 1642.
Alice, b. Jan. 1560, mar. John Spencer.
Thomas Smalle, b. 6 Jan. 1562, had three wives; Catharine, Chriſtiana, and Alice. Had iſſue only by the ſecond. He was buried 23 Dec. 1637.
Margaret, b. 29 Apr. 1565, bur. 24 Jan. 1571.
Eleanor, b. 28 Auguſt, 1567, m. to John Hodjkinſon.

Elizabeth. Jane. Eleanor.
Mary. Joane. Alice.
George Small, born and died 2 Sept. 1598.
Giles Small, 2d ſon and heir, b. 11 Feb. 1600, buried 22 May, 1625, unmarried.
George Small of Cirenceſter, 3d ſon, heir to his brother Giles, bur. 14 Jan. 1669. = Anne, daughter of William Litton, m. 16 Jan. 1626, bur. 1 Apr. 1665.
Two daughters, not baptized, bur. 16 June, 1603.

George Small of Minchin Hampton, in co. Glouceſter, eldeſt ſon and heir, juſtice of peace for the county, born 22 Nov. 1627, died 3 Oct. 1704. = Mary, dau. of Daniel Webb of Beverſtone, died 3 Sept. 1719, aged 89.
Iſaac of Cirenceſter, 2d ſon, died 14 Feb. 1713, left iſſue.
Giles, 3d ſon, died an infant.
Thomas of Naylſworth, 4th ſon, left iſſue.
William of Painſwick, 5th ſon.
James, died an infant, 6th ſon.
James, of Cirenceſter, 7th ſon, buried 4 Oct. 1688, left iſſue.
Anne, wife of Mathew Beale of Tetbury, 1ſt dau.
Mary, wife of William Lawrence of Brinsfield, 2d dau.

Anne, eldeſt daughter, 2d wife, (marr. 1. to Mathew, 2d ſon of LORD CHIEF JUSTICE HALE[5],) b. at Hawkeſbury 10 June, 1656, bur. at Alderley, in co. Glouceſter, 18 Aug. 1726. = George Small of Uley, and Minchin Hampton, in co. Glouceſter, eldeſt ſon and heir, ætat. 26, 1682. Will proved Feb. 1708. = Eleanor, 1ſt wife, daughter of Thomas Phipps of Weſtbury Lye, co. Wilts, bur. 7 Dec. 1685.
2. Daniel of London, æt. 24, 1682.
3. Thomas, æt. 22, 1682.
4. John of Pudhill, &c. æt. 18, 1682, d. 3 July, 1725, left iſſue.
5. James, æt. 14, 1682, buried at Lechlade.
6. Joſeph of Burthorpe, æt. 9, 1682, ſheriff of the county of Glouceſter 1729, left iſſue.
1. Mary, m. James Mitchell of Hareſcombe, æt. 24, 1682.
2. Anne, m. Nath. Cambridge of Pudhill, æt. 20, 1682.
3. Elizabeth, m. Robert Bathurſt of Lechlade, æt. 15, 1682.
4. Sarah, died young.

Robert Small of Uley, eldeſt ſon by ſecond marriage, b. 25 April, 1688, di. 19 June, 1733. = Elizabeth, daughter of . . . Arundel, d. 19 July, 1767.
Anne, b. 25 July, 1689, m. to Ralph Chaloner, of Hale's Hall, co. Stafford.
Charles Small of Lewiſham, co. Kent, 2d ſon, b. 3 July, 1691, bur. 4 Aug. 1736. = Rebecca, 2d ſurviving daughter, and at length coheir of Charles Newnam, born 22 Feb. 1699-1700, marr. 2. David Hunter, Governor of St. Helena, and d. his widow, 1763.
Mary, b. 22 Nov. 1692, m. to George Barnes of Cheadle, in co. of Stafford.
Gabriel, 3d ſon, b. 26 Oct. 1694, d. ſ. p.
Elizabeth, b. 25 July, 1696, m. to John Freeman, d. Nov. 1749, ſ. p.
Rachel, b. 15 June, 1699, m. John Smallwood of Cheadle, co. Stafford.
George Small of Uley, eldeſt ſon and heir, died 18 Dec. 1758, aged 81. = Margaret, d. 24 July, 1743, aged 59.
Iſſue extinct in his grandſon John Small, whoſe widow married T. Purnell Purnell of Kingſhill, co. Glouceſter.
2. Thomas.
3. William.
5. John.
6. Samuel.
Ob. ſ. p.
4. Daniel Small, b. 23 July, 1683, d. 1725. Iſſue extinct. = Sarah, eldeſt ſurviving daughter, and at length coheir of Charles Newnam, and ſiſter to Rebecca, wife of Charles Small of Lewiſham, bur. 18 June, 1756.

Daniel, d. 1722.
Charles, d. 1711.
Mary, firſt wife of Col. Frederick Hamilton.
George, d. 1714.
Rebecca, d. 1716-7.
John, d. 1759.

Anne, eldeſt daughter, b. 20 June, 1710, died unmarried.
Elizabeth, only ſurviving daughter and heireſs, b. 17 April, 1712, ma. to John Wheeler, d. ſ. p. 18 March, 1789.
Rebecca, b. 18 Jan. 1721-2, bur. 28 June, 1735.
Anne, b. and d. April 1724.
Charles-Small, b. 16 Aug. and bur. 11 Sept. 1725.
Charles-Small, 2d ſon, b. 28 May, 1728, bur. 17 April, 1731.
Catharine, eldeſt ſurviving daughter and coheir, b. 19 Jan. 1728-9, m. 1. Felix Baker; 2. John Berens; and is now the widow of John Blackburn of Buſh Hill, in co. Middleſex, 1799.
Elizabeth, 2d ſurviving dau. and coheir, b. 24 May, 1732, m. Rich. Fairfield, and d. 28 Jan. 1768, leaving iſſue.
Martha, youngeſt ſurviving daughter and coheir, b. 31 July, 1734, m. 20 Oct. 1753, and is now living a widow, at Cheam, 1799. = John Pybus of Cheam, co. Surrey, and Greenhill Grove, co. Herts, b. 22 Nov. 1727, d. 22 June, 1789, bur. at Cheam[7].

Elizabeth, youngeſt dau. and coheir of Alexander Mac Donnell of Dublin, 2d wife, m. 24 Oct. 1799. = John Pybus, eldeſt ſon and heir, born 19 Nov. 1754. = Anne, daughter of Richard Cooper, 1ſt wife, m. 11 July, 1788, died 7 June, 1798, buried at Cheam.
Catharine, b. 21 Nov. 1755, d. 1 Jan. 1756.
Anne, b. 16 Nov. 1756, m. 21 Dec. 1774, to Brigadier-General Sir Robert Fletcher, and died his widow 16 Feb. 1791, buried at Cheam.
Martha, born 16 April, 1758, m. 1. Arthur Lyſaght; 2. John Briggs; and d. 30 July, 1788, leaving 1 ſon by her firſt, and 2 ſons by her ſecond huſband.
Margaret-Clive, b. 14 May, 1761, died 13 Auguſt, in the ſame year.
Elizabeth, b. 8 Oct. 1764, d. 8 Nov. following.
Charles-Small Pybus, 2d ſon, M. P. for Dover, and one of the Lords of His Majeſty's Treaſury, born 3 Nov. 1766.
Catharine-Amelia, b. 20 Jan. 1776, now living unmarried 1799.

Martha, born 29 April, 1789.
John-Bryan Pybus, born 12 Feb. 1792.

---

[1] Pedigrees of Hody in Coll. Arms; and Hutchins's Hiſtory of Dorſet, vol. I. p. 532. 2d edit.

[2] Pedigree of Bond; Viſitation of Dorſetſhire, 1623; 1. C. 22. fol. 203. b. in Coll. Arms; and Hutchins's Dorſet, vol. I. p. 326.

[3] Pedigree of Symonds; Viſit. Glouceſterſhire, 1623; C. 17. 58. b. in Coll. Arms; and Hutchins's Dorſet, vol. I. p. 532.

[4] Pedigree of Browne of Frampton, in Hutchins's Dorſet, vol. I. p. 583.

[5] Pedigree of Hale, Viſitation of Glouceſterſhire; K. 5. p. 228, 229. in Coll. Arms.

[6] Pedigree of Small, Viſitation of Glouceſterſhire, 1682; K. 5. fol. 50. in Coll. Arms.

[7] Pedigree of Pybus, in College of Arms, Lib. Norfolk.

QUORNDON,

in antient writings called Querne, Querndon, Quernedon, Quaryndon, Querindon, Querondon, Quornedon, &c. and now moſt uſually Quorn, is a large village, within the pariſh of Barrow, on the great London road, two miles and a half from Loughborough, and nine from Leiceſter, ſituated in a pleaſant fruitful ſpot near the river Soar; and ſouthwardly contains about 500 acres of hilly and rocky ground, covered with woods, which afford a pleaſing view from places at a proper diſtance, and in which are a great variety of different ſpecies of ſnakes.

This village is not noticed in Domeſday Book; but, among the records in the Chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, called "Pedes Finium," or "Placita temp. Hen. III," in the cheſt marked B, are ſome deeds relative to Querndon, marked 4[1]. Sir Robert de Farnham (deſcended from Robert de Farnham, who came over with the Conqueror, and whoſe name appears in the Roll of Battle Abbey) poſſeſſed a conſiderable eſtate here in that reign, though he was not lord of the manor; and had iſſue ſir John, temp. Edward I; who had iſſue ſir Robert; and he had iſſue John de Farnham, who married Margaret, daughter and ſole heir of —— Billington, lord of Billington, co. Stafford, who bore, Gules, a fleur de lis Argent, billetté Sable[2].

In 1235, Hugo Cantator paid 14*s*. 6*d*. for a fifth part of a knight's fee which he held in Quorndon; and Stephen de Segrave 4*s*. 5*d*. for the fifth part of a knight's fee in Mountſorell[3].

In the Segrave Chartulary is a quitclaim from Ranulph earl of Cheſter to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of certain lands at Cotes, "de clauſurâ parci ſui de Quorndon[4];" and a quit-claim from Yvo Roel, to the ſaid Stephen, of 2*s*. 6*d*. a year, being the homage and ſervice of Richard Martel, ariſing from a bovate of land at Querndon.

In 1325, it was found that Stephen de Segrave, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held 11*s*. 8*d*. rent, ariſing out of divers free tenements in Gerondon, Reriſby, and Querondon, of the honour of Winton; but by what ſervice was not known; and that John de Segrave was his ſon and heir[5].

In 1336, king Edward III. granted divers lands at Querindon (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Deſpenſer earl of Winton) to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife[6]; and, in 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan died ſeiſed of Quorndon, in right of Alice his wife, daughter and coheir of Alexander Comyn earl of Boquan; it being then accounted as a member of the manor of Loughborough[7].

In 1343, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton died ſeiſed of a fixth part of one knight's fee in Querndon, which Richard de Lewes held; alſo a ſixth part of one other knight's fee there, which Thomas de Sextenby held[8].

In 1346, Giles de Erdington (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon,) was aſſeſſed 20*s*. for half a knight's fee in Barrow, Quorndon, and Woodhouſe; Alice de Beaumont 5*s*. for half a quarter of one knight's fee; Robert de Farnham 2*s*. for a twentieth part of one knight's fee; and Ralph Baſſet of Drayton 15*s*. for three [half quarter] parts of one knight's fee; all in Quorndon and Woodhouſe, and parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon[9].

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter poſſeſſed at Querndon, of the gift of Ranulph earl of Cheſter, three meſſuages with two virgates of land, and two cottages with five acres of land, formerly part of the lord's demeſne; and which paid a rent of 13*s*. 4*d*. They had liberty to employ three carts conſtantly in the woods, to collect fuel for the abbot. The earl gave them alſo a carucate of land, part of his demeſne, in Barrow and Quorndon.

Their other benefactors here were, Roger Blundel, Ralph ſon of Peter Burt, Robert Gras of Quorndon, and William ſon of Hugo le Chantour, who quitted claim to two wax-tapers which the abbot was bound to pay him annually.

They had a meadow called Ballondſyke, and one forera in a meadow called Ballondſyke hadeland, containing 4 acres, one rood and a quarter, which had been of old time aſſigned to them in lieu of the tithe of hay, and for the demeſne meadow called Blopoldacurlands and Boroughbrigmeadows. They had alſo a piece of meadow called Hyllydols, in lieu of tithe of the meadows called Outredholme and Greneholme, containing 4 acres; and another piece called Halfeacoſſitill near Coſſitilforthe, for the tithes of Coſſitil meadows, containing a rood and a half. All theſe were collected by their own tenant. They had ſeveral other parcels of tithe hay, which, when collected, were about ten cart-loads, and were leaſed to Thomas Chaveney of Mountſorell; who alſo rented their moiety of the tithe of orchards, hemp, and flax; and paid for the whole but 30*s*. a year, much leſs than they were worth, the tithe of hay alone being eſtimated at 40*s*.

They received the tithes of the toll and profits of the water-mill and fulling-mill in Quorndon, and of the mill newly built in le Allercar[10], all belonging to the monks of Bermondſey; and alſo of the lord Beaumont's mill[11], formerly Hugh Deſpenſer's.

Their tenants were, William Parker, their farmer, who held the tithes of corn and hay, with the tithe barn, worth £10. a year; and the tithe of hay was worth 21*s*. a year more. He paid, however, but £8.

Thomas Chaveney, for ſmall tithes, paid 30*s*.

William Walker held a meſſuage and lands, for which he paid 16*s*. 8*d*. and ſuit of court at Barrow; alſo the fulling mill and water-mill, both under the ſame roof, at 4*s*.; and another water-mill at 20*d*.

John Sawnder held a meſſuage, and ſome lands, at 6*s*. 8*d*.; and Thomas Barbur held a cottage, 3 acres and a rood of land, and paid 4*s*.

The vicar of Barrow held an acre and a half of land, and a cottage in which was the common oven; but by what title he held this cottage was not known, except that the occupier was bound to attend the view of frankpledge, and to perform ſuit at the abbot's court.

The abbot had weyf and ſtreyf at Quorndon; the tenants paid 7*d*. to the common fine; every tenant of a virgate of land paid three hens and 30 eggs, and performed certain other ſpecified ſervices; "metet per 11 dies, & falcat per 1 diem; & levet fenum, & ſolvet merchetam[12]."

A chantry was founded at Quorndon, in 1328, by ſir John Hamelyn, who endowed it with lands at Wymondham in this county[13]; and it ſhould ſeem there was once a little priory here; for, in 1352, it was found that William de Ros of Hamelak died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee in Houby, which the prior of Quorndon held[14]. This probably, however, might deſignate the prior of Alderman's Haw[15].

Another chantry was founded at Quorndon in 1379, by the above-mentioned John de Farnham[16], John Smyth, and John Herbert[17].

In 1404, Margaret[18] widow of Thomas de Erdington, knight, died ſeiſed of a meſſuage, two virgates and a third part of a virgate of arable land, twelve acres of meadow, 3*s.* rent, with the appurtenances, in Barrow and Quorndon, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a two-hundredth part of one knight's fee; and all her lands in thoſe townſhips were held of the king in capite by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.

---

[1] The Reportorie of Records, 1631, p. 37.

[2] See Plate XII. fig. 26.

[3] Teſta de Nevill.

[4] See vol. II. p. 114.

[5] Eſch. 10 Edw. II. N° 91. Leic.

[6] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[7] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.

[9] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[10] In the antient boundaries of the pariſh of Barrow, Ailiſkar occurs between the road leading from Shepeſhed and the corner of Beaumanor Park See p. 61.—The mill then newly built in the Allercarr was probably that which, in a very old roll without date, is called Beaumanor-mill (of which ſee p. 135). The meadows below this mill were formerly much covered with alder-trees.—In the ſame old roll it is ſtated that Robert Farnham holds a mill in Quorndon, called the Malt-mill, late Robert Walker's, for 10*s*. Item, the abbot of Leiceſter holds a meſſuage, with certain lands, late John Farnham's, and pays by the year 6*d*.; item, the abbot of Leiceſter holds freely a meſſuage, late John Leiceſter's, 1*s*. 1*d*.; item the chantry of Quorndon holds yearly ..... in the holding of John Hawkins, and pays 2*s*.; all in Quorndon.

[11] This was probably the old mill at Quorndon, in contradiſtinction to the mill then newly built.

[12] Appendix, vol. I. p. 75. The mercheta was a fine paid by the tenant to his lord, for permiſſion that his daughter might marry.

[13] See p 105.

[14] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[15] See p. 123.

[16] One rood of the abbot of Leiceſter's land at Barrow was bounded on both ſides by the land of this John Farnham. Cotton MSS. Galba III.

[17] See p. 107.

[18] Eſch. 6 Hen. IV. N° 37. Leic.

In 14[illegible]3, ſir Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of one water-mill in Quorndon, as a member of the manor of Loughborough[1]; and in 1427, Elizabeth his widow died ſeiſed of Quorndon, as a member of Beaumanor[2].

In 1458, Henry Putrell, of Quaryndon, yeoman, conveyed to ſir Thomas Erdynton, knt. Thomas Staunton, eſq. and others, all his lands in this townſhip[3].

In 1461, it appeared that William viſcount Beaumont was ſeiſed of one meſſuage, two cottages, 52 acres of land, and 14 acres of meadow, in Quorndon[4]; and in 1462, king Edward IV. granted divers lands at Quorndon (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of William lord viſcount Beaumont) to ſir William Haſtings[5]; and, by letters patent, dated 9 Aug. 1467, re-granted divers lands at Quorndon (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of William Beaumont) to William lord Haſtings, to hold of the king and his heirs, by homage only, in lieu of all ſervice[6]; and it was held by lord Haſtings[7].

In 1486, two acres of meadow at Quorndon were bequeathed by Bartholomew Kingſton, as part of the endowment of his obit in Rothley church[8].

In this place is the antient ſeat of the Farnhams[9]; who derive themſelves from ſir Robert de Farnham, the companion of the Conqueror.

Robert Farnham, a lineal deſcendant, who died in 1440, had two ſons; Robert, who continued owner of the old family-manſion at Quorndon, called The Upper Hall, or Over Hall; and Thomas, who was anceſtor of the Farnhams of The Nether Hall.

The earlieſt monument now legible is that of Thomas Farnham, eſq. and Margaret Kingston his wife; but their exact date cannot be aſcertained nearer than the beginning of the ſixteenth century[10].

Their ſon Robert and his wife Mary Langham are next to be noticed; whoſe praiſes are thus celebrated:

“ A ſartan waye to laſtinge lyefe
By deathe the good ſhall have;
As corne in gronde muſt fyrſt be ſoune,
Before we frut receave.
And as we reape aboundantly
In harveſte tyme agayne,
So better ſhall ouer boddeis ryſe,
And wyth the juſt remayne;
Where glorye great we ſhall receave,
Moche better then the welthe
That ever here on eyrthe we have,
Or any worleldye pelfe.
This lyttell toumbe, which here you ſee,
A gentyll man doeth holde,
Whoes vertues wth ye man ſhould die
Yff thay ſhould not be tould.
A godly welthye lyfe he ledde
Greate patience he poſſeſte;
A wittie heade to healpe the neede
Of ſhuch as counſell wyſte.
His tennants he did not oppreſſe,
Nor of his neighboures non
In harmefull ſorte he dyd tranſgreſſe;
His death they ſore did mone.
Full fourſcore years his lyfe did laſt,
In health and happie dayes,
His youthe in courte for moſte he paſte,
The reſte with us allwayes.
But now to Heaven his faith hath raught,
His godly ſoule to have
With Chriſt for aye, who hath us bought,
By death from death to ſave.”

The memory of two ſons of this Robert and Mary is alſo preſerved on their tombs. Of theſe, Francis, who married Margaret Cave, was bred to the law; and in 1553 was recorder of Leiceſter. He died in 1557 before his father; and Thomas, his brother, who married Anne Eyre, died in 1574.

In 1508, Thomas Farnham, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor called The Aſhes Manor (otherwiſe Stafford Orchard manor, or The Nether Place), with its appurtenances, in Quorndon, which was held by the ſervice of a twentieth part of one knight's fee[11].

Of him we find no memorial in the church; but he left one ſon, William, who is thus commemorated:

“ Under this graven ſtone dothe lye,
Here hydden in the moulde,
The corpys of him whoſe upright lyfe
Ys wourthye to be toulde.
A man that came of gentyll bloude
Frome tyme that far ys ſpent;
And yett of lands and lyvings ſmall,
Suche fate to hym was lente.
Much wealthe he never did poſſeſſe,
Nor never did he wante;
Thoſe worldlie goods that God hym ſente,
To no man wer thei ſcante.
Inſtede of worldlye pompe and lands,
With love he purchaſyd fame;
And that he to his children left,
That they might do the ſame.
By wrongfull means he hurted none,
But wyſhed all mens good;
And helpinge was to ſuche as nede,
If in his power it ſtoode.
By upright lyffe he lernyd to dye,
By deathe to lyve agayne:
Though yearthe to earthe of courſe converts,
Yet ſperett dothe remayne;
But as for earthly thyngs are paſte,
And he lyeth here in grave;
For longer then the appoynted tyme
No cure his lyffe might ſave:
For thoſe that lyve to ſee and reede
This ſenttence writte on ſtone;
Muſt ronne their race as he hath won,
And then they muſt be gonne.
So fykell is the fleeting ſtate
Of lyff and worldlie wele;
That when wee thinke we ſtonde moſt ſure,
Then ſooneſt will they feale;
For god, that vital breathe dothe give,
Gave fate that goodes to gyde,
Will let us know how long that lyff
Or wealth with us ſhall byde.
Therefore as he with perfyt lyffe
Let all your dedys be juſte.
For that before the lord ſhall ſhyne,
When all your goods ſhall ruſt.
And as he to the wourldely ees
Did leade a life moſt pure;
So let us praye his ſoule in bliſs
Maye, hie and eke enduer.”

By his wife, Dorothy Nevill, William Farnham had ſeven ſons, three of whom were of great eminence.

Thomas Farnham[12], eſq. the ſecond ſon, obtained, July 4, 1548, at a yearly rent of £4. 14*s.* a leaſe from king Edward VI, for 21 years, of the ſite of a chantry in Quorndon, which had been founded by one of his anceſtors; in which was included the chantry-houſe, three meſſuages, two cottages, and ſix acres of arable land; all which were ſituate within the hamlet of Woodhouſe, and had been the property of the monaſtery of Bermondſey in Surrey[13]. He was honoured in 1552 with the office of one of the Tellers of the Exchequer[1]; and obtained in that year a grant of the two mills in Quorndon, with the appurtenances, which had alſo been the property of the abbot and convent of Bermondſey; but this latter grant was ſoon after revoked, on the interceſſion of Henry duke of Suffolk, in behalf of his tenant Chriſtopher Thompſon, at that time the farmer of the mills[2]. Mr. Farnham's loſs on this occaſion was repaired, by a new grant, March 12, 1552-3, to himſelf and ſir Thomas Moriſon, of divers other lands belonging to the ſame chantry[3]. He continued to enjoy his office in the Exchequer under queen Mary; and afterwards purchaſed the lordſhip of Stoughton; where he died, and was buried, in 1562[4].

---

[1] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.
[2] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.
[3] Clauſ. 37 Hen. VI. n. 12.
[4] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.
[5] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. pars 2. m 18.
[6] Pat. 7 Edw. IV. pars 1.
[7] Eſch. 1 Edw. V. and Eſch. 1 Ric. III. N° 32. Leic.

[8] See his epitaph, and the engraving of his tomb, in the deſcription of the church, at Rothley; where ſeveral of the ſame family (who were of conſiderable conſequence in this neighbourhood, and one of them a Knight of the Garter) were buried.

[9] So early as 1238, a Nicholas de Farnham had the honour of declining the proffered biſhoprick of Coventry. See Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 267; and, in 1265, the king granted to Pentecoſt de Farnham, his porter, two-pence a day, to be paid by the ſheriff of Eſſex for the time being, “donec ei aliter providerit.” Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 239; ex Trin. Commun. 49 Hen. III. Rot. 11. b. A John de Farnham (moſt probably of this family) was preſented by ſir Henry de Ferrers of Groby, in 1328, to the rectory of Wodeham-Ferrers in Eſſex; and in 1364 to the rectory of St. Bennet Fincke in the city of London, on the preſentation of Alice de Hereford lady Nevil. Newcourt's Repertorium, vol. I. p. 299; vol. II. p. 681.—The arms of Farnham were found by Mr. Wyrley in Gaddeſby church in 1590. They were alſo, a few years ago, in the church of the village of Farnham in Yorkſhire; but are not to be found there at this time.

[10] See Plate XV. fig. 18.
[11] Eſch. 24 Hen. VII.

[12] One of the repreſentatives in parliament for the town of Leiceſter in 1553.
[13] See p. 105.

In 1560, there were 60 families in Quorndon; in 1565, Roger Cave and others were cited, to ſhew why the manor of Quorndon ſhould not be ſeized, on account of alienation[5]; and in the next year Henry earl of Huntingdon was alſo cited, to ſhew by what title he held Erdington[6] manor in Quorndon[7].

By the laſt will of Thomas Farnham, The Nether Hall became the property of his elder brother John; who in his youth had ſignalized himſelf as a ſoldier, was for many years one of the honourable band of gentlemen penſioners[8] to queen Elizabeth; and, on the 20th of July, 1576, obtained the following ſubſtantial and honourable teſtimonial from his Royal Miſtreſs:

"Elizabeth, Dei gratiâ, Anglie, Francie, & Hib̄nie Regina, fidei defenſor, &c. Omnibus ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Sciatis, quod nos, tam in conſideratione boni, veri, & fidelis ſervicii, per dilectum & fidelem ſervientem noſtrum Johannem Farnham, unum generoſorum penſionariorum noſtrorum, antehac nobis impenſ', quam pro diverſis aliis bonis cauſis & conſiderationibus nos ad preſens ſpecialiter moventes, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, ac ex certâ ſcientiâ & mero motu noſtris, dedimus & conceſſimus, ac per preſentes, pro nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, damus & concedimus, prefato Johanni Farneham, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, in perpetuum," &c. &c. This preamble is followed by a long recital of a grant in fee-farm of the ſeveral hoſpitals of St. Thomas the Martyr[9], near the Eaſt Bridge, at Canterbury; Boulton, in Northumberland; Newbury[10], in Berkſhire; and St. John's[10] at Bedford; of the rectories of Wiſſet in Suffolk (which had been forfeited on the attainder of Thomas duke of Norfolk); Terringe in Suſſex, with lands at Compton in that county; and of divers lands, which had been either appropriated to chantry prieſts, or for providing lights, or other ſuperſtitious uſes, at Letcombe Regis, Hanny, and Wantage, in Berkſhire; Morton Henmarſhe, Wolſton, Haresfield, Harescombe, Standiſh, Quedeſley, Eſtington, North Leach, Payneſwick, and Stynchecombe, in Glouceſterſhire; Asfordby, in Leiceſterſhire[11]; lands at Chalton in the county of Southampton, belonging to Nuneaton in Warwickſhire; at Cadington in Hertfordſhire, belonging to the priory of Sanningfield; at Beconsfield in Bucks, with the decayed chapel there; a large parcel of land in Poplar and Stepney marſhes, called the Wete Marſhes, or Outer Grounds, formerly (as is ſaid) inundated with water, and belonging to the priory of St. Mary Grace; a garden in Roper Lane, in the pariſh of St. Mary Magdalen at Bermondſey; with a parcel of land, 40 roods long and three broad, adjoining to Bermondſey Grange; two parcels of land, called Dryvinges Wales, one extending from Bermondſey Grange to Prieſt Marſh, the other from the ſaid Grange to Redriffe; lands and tithes at Beverley, Raventhorpe, and at Eſton near Bridlington, Tolyflatt, Beſwicke, Kylnewicke, Molleſcroft, Ruſton, Lowſthorpe, in Yorkſhire, with a fyſhe-houſe and a certain fiſhery at Rowthe in that county; Be[illegible]us and Cardiff in Glamorganſhire; ſeveral lands and houſes in the pariſhes of St. Michael and St. Peter at St. Alban's, with a tenement in that town called The Vynde, and ſeveral other poſſeſſions of the abbey; lands, &c. in Frome Selwood, Marſton, and Melles, in Somerſetſhire; ſeveral tenements, &c. in the city of Lincoln; a tenement, with divers ſhops, &c. belonging to Our Lady of Order's Chambers at Spalding, with ſeveral other meſſuages, lands, &c. in that town, and at Quadring, Oſbornebye, Water Willoughby, Dowſbye, Hemſwell, Spyttle on Street, Skellingthorpe, Coryngham, Upton, Glamford Brygg, Wrawbye, Boſton, Barton ſuper Humber, Haxey, and Epworth, and other parts of the iſle of Axholme, all within the county of Lincoln; ſeveral tenements alſo, with ſhops, gardens, &c. in and near the city of London; particularly two tenements in the pariſh of St. Martin Outwich; a parcel of waſte ground in Limeſtreet, in the pariſh of St. Dionyſius Back Church, formerly belonging to Trinity College (commonly called Knolle's almſhouſe) at Pontefract in Yorkſhire; a meſſuage in St. Peter's, Weſtcheap, and one in St. Mary Magdalen's, Milkſtreet; three tenements, with gardens, &c. juxta les Mynoryes Sancti Botolphi extra Aldgate; 200 feet in length and 10 wide in St. Giles's in the Fields; a meſſuage, with ſeveral ſhops, gardens, &c. in St. Michael's, Crooked Lane; two tenements, with gardens, &c. in St. Clement's, Eaſtcheap, one the ſign of the Horſe-ſhoe, the other the Horſe's head; three chambers (cameræ) in the pariſh of St. Olaves in the Old Jewry; a meſſuage in St. Peter's near Paul's Wharf; a tenement in St. Mary Somerſet; ten tenements in St. Margaret's Pattens; a meſſuage and garden in St. Leonard's Shoreditch, with another meſſuage and garden called The Prieſt's Houſe (formerly the habitation of divers prieſts, who were to pray daily in Haliwell chapel for the ſoul of ſir Thomas Lovel.)

With the full extent of this very copious grant we are unacquainted, the copy from which theſe extracts were made being imperfect at the end; but it appears by the Index to the Records in the Exchequer, that this John Farnham had various other grants from the Crown, in the counties of Kent, York, and other places, between the years 1573 and 1580[12].

He died in 1587, aged more than 80; and is thus noticed on his tomb in Quorndon church:

"John Farnham here within this tombe interred doth remaine, Whoſe life reſigned up to God, the heavens his ſoul containe;
And if you do deſire to knowe his well deſerved praiſe,
Go aſke in court what life he ledd, and how he ſpent his days.
Where princes great he truly ſerv'd, with whō he ſtood in grace,
For good conceit and pleaſaunt wit favor'd in every place.
Beloved of the nobleſt ſorte, well liked of the reſt;
Unto his friend a faithfull friend, and fellowe to the beſt.
In warres he ſpent his youth, for youth the beſt expence of days,
And did transfer from field to court his juſt rewarde of praiſe.
Deſcended of an antient houſe, with honour ledde his life,
Only with one daughter bleſt, and with a vertuous wife.
God gave him here on earth to live twiſe fortie years and odd,
With life well ſpent he liveth now for aye with God.

On the wall adjoining his tomb, in alto relievo, now much defaced, is the broken figure of a man in armour, conducting the ſiege of a caſtle. To the left of him are the heads of ſix men, with helmets and lances; and on the right, two gun-carriages, with faſcines, &c.;

---

[1] Memoranda, 1 Pars Original. 6 Edw. VI. Rot. 77.

[2] See hereafter, p. 144.

[3] 5 Pars Orig. 7 Edw. VI. Rot. 24.

[4] See his epitaph, and an engraving of his tomb, vol. II. Plate CXXXV. pp. 848. 854.

[5] Paſch. Rec. 7 Eliz. Rot. 94.

[6] This antient manor, called Erdington Manor (ſee p. 64), extends over parts of the hamlets of Quorndon and Woodhouſe; other parts of which hamlets, it appears by court-rolls and evidences, are within the manor of Beaumanor.

[7] Mich. Rec. 8 Eliz. Rot. 82.

[8] The reader who may deſire to ſee an accurate and entertaining account of the origin and preſent ſtate of this reſpectable "demi-military Corps," will be amply gratified by a peruſal of a learned treatiſe, intituled, "Curialia; or an Hiſtorical Account of ſome Branches of the Royal Houſhold," Part. II. by Samuel Pegge, eſq. 1784.

[9] The hoſpital of St. Thomas at the Eaſt Bridge of Canterbury was re-conveyed, by Mr. Farnham, to George Hayes, in liquidation of an out-ſtanding debt, and an additional ſum of £550.; and was ſoon after reſtored, by the interceſſion of archbiſhop Whitgift, to the original purpoſes for which it was firſt eſtabliſhed, and ſtill continues in uſe. See Bibl. Topog. Brit. N° XXX.

[10] The hoſpitals at Newbury and Bedford alſo eſcaped the general wreck; and are both ſtill applied to the original purpoſes.

[11] See this more particularly ſpecified before, under Asfordby, p. 16.

[12] 2 Pars Orig. 15 Eliz. Rot. 152. 3 Pars Orig. anno 17, Rot. 48; & 4 Pars ejuſdem anni Rot. 63. 3 Pars Orig. anno 18, Rot. 62; 3 Pars Orig. anno 19, Rot. 127; & 4 Pars ejuſdem anni, Rot. 71; 3 Pars Orig. anno 20, Rot. 200; & 3 Pars Orig. anno 22, Rot. 107.

and behind, at a diſtance, ſeveral tents[1].

Matthew Farnham, eſq. the third of the brothers above alluded to, obtained from the Crown, in 1578, a grant of ſome lands in Leiceſterſhire, in conjunction with ſir George Turpin of Knaptoft[2]; and on the death of John, in 1587, ſucceeded to the eſtate of The Nether Hall.

By an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter, Oct. 22, 1574, before ſir George Turpin, knt. Nicholas Beaumont, and Thomas Aſhby, eſquires, Robert Braham, gent. feodary of the county of Leiceſter, and Matthew Farnham, gent. the queen's commiſſioners, under a writ de diem clauſit extremum, after the death of Thomas Farnham, gent. on the oaths of John Danvers, eſq. William Bradgate, Nicholas Gravener, Edmund Eyton, William Syſon, Robert Ithell, gentlemen, John Parker, Thomas Bennett, John Marſhall, Thomas Barowdale, William Kinge, John Nedeham, George Birde, Edward Pike, Robert Bareſbie, Thomas Woodcock, and John Kirke; it was found that the ſaid Thomas Farnham died ſeiſed in demeſne, as of fee, of the manor of Querne, alias Quernedon, alias Querendon, with its appurtenances, called The Over Hall; and of one cottage, 80 acres of arable, 300 of meadow, 20 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 16½*d.* rent in Quorndon; alſo of two meſſuages in Quorndon, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, and 10 of paſture, in the ſeveral occupations of Francis Griffin and John Staples; one meſſuage in Quorndon, with 20 acres of arable, ſix of meadow, and four of paſture, in the occupation of John Draper; a cottage in Quorndon, held by Mary Mugge, widow; and two acres of meadow, with appurtenances, and one toft, all in Quorndon: The manor of Ruſhall, and of 2 meſſuages, 4 cottages, 40 acres of meadow, 140 of paſtures, and 60 of wood, with one halfpenny of free rent, in Ruſhall and Woodhouſe, in the ſeveral tenures of Elizabeth Smalley, widow, Thomas Bowſhaghe, William Folds, Thomaſine Stevenſon, William Grine, and Francis Johnſon: A meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, 4 of meadow, and 2 of paſture, in Barrow ſuper Soar, in the tenure of Peter Duckett; a cottage in the tenure of Richard White; and a meſſuage, 20 acres of arable, and 2 of meadow, in the tenure of Lawrence Braham, George None, William Eſtwell, and Robert Robſon: A meſſuage, 6 cottages, 80 acres of arable, 15 of meadow, and 10 of paſture, in Mountſorell, in the tenures of William Mounke, John Aſton, John Taylor, George Barrowdale, John Burbage, Ralph Rowlyns, William Beſton, John London, William Bretfeld, William Allen, and Margaret Mounke: And that, the ſaid Thomas Farnham being ſo ſeiſed, a fine had been levied, on the Octaves of St. Michael, 1561, between William Willoughby and John Preſſe, querents, and the ſaid Thomas Farnham and Henry Nedeham, deforcients, of the manor of Ruſhall, and of one meſſuage, 60 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, and 10 of paſture, in Quorndon, then in the tenure of Thomas Ward, and afterwards of Francis Griffin, by the name of the manor of Ruſhall with the appurtenances; and of 3 meſſuages, 4 cottages, 7 gardens, 7 orchards, 30 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 600 of wood, 100 jampnorum and heath ground, and 100 of marſh, in Woodhouſe and Quorndon; which fine was recorded in Hilary Term 1562; and in due form reſettled on the ſaid Thomas Farnham and Anne his wife, or the ſurvivor, to be held by the accuſtomed ſervices; and for default of iſſue, to the right heirs of the ſaid Thomas: And that the ſaid Thomas, March 30, 1574, in his laſt will, inter alia, gave as follows: "And as concerning my lands, tenements, and hereditaments, my will is in manner and forme enſueing; that is to ſaye, I doe give unto Roberte Braham, of Barrow upon Soar in the ſaid countie, gentleman, and to George None, of the ſame towne and countie, yeoman, and to their heires for ever, to the uſes and intente hereafter in this my will ſpecified and declared, and to none other uſes, all that my manor or capital manſion-houſe in Quernedon, with the appurtenances, and all other my lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Quernedon, Mountſorell, and Rotheley, in the countie of Leiceſter, to the uſe of Adrian Farneham my ſonne, and to the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of my welbeloved wief Anne Farnham, for terme of her natural lief; and after her deceaſe, that then I will my ſaid feoffees ſhall be ſeiſed of all thaforeſaid manor, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, to the uſe of the heires males of the body of me the ſaid Thomas lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of John Farnham, of London, eſquier, and to the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of Mathewe Farnham, and to the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of Humfrey Farnham, and to the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of the right heires of me the ſaid Thomas Farnham for ever: Provided always, and my will neverthele ſs is, that whereas Thomas Farnham, late of Stoughton in the countie of Leiceſter, eſq. deceaſed, by his laſt will and teſtament in wryting, did, after certayne remaynders, give unto me the ſaid Thomas, and to the heires male of my body lawfully begotten, all that his manor or capitall meſſuage, called The Nether Hall, in Quernedon, with thappurtenances, and all other his manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in the towne and felde of Quernedon, Allderman Hall, Woodhouſe, and Woodhouſe Eves: If now therefore the aforeſaid John Farnham, eſquier, nowe being lawfully ſeiſed by force of the ſaid laſt will of the ſaid Thomas his brother, or any other which att any other tyme hereafter ſhall be ſeiſed of the ſaid lands in Quernedon, Alderman Hall, Woodhouſe, and Woodhouſe Eves, ſhall doe or commytt any acte or thing, deviſe, or deviſes, to the undoing, defeating, or alteration of the ſaid intaile; that then, and from thenceforth I will that my ſaid feoffees and their heires ſhall be ſeiſed of all my aforeſaid manor, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Quernedon, Mountſorell, and Rotheley, to the uſe of my right heires for ever, any graunt, lymitacion of eſtate, clauſe, ſentence, or words, in this my will conteyned to the contrarye thereof in any wiſe notwithſtanding. And as concerning my manor of Ruſhall, Thorny Cloſe, and all other my lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eves, I doe give the ſame my manor, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, to my ſaid feoffees, Robert Braham and George None, and to their heires for ever, to the uſes likewiſe hereafter in this my will ſpecified, and to none other uſes; that is to ſaye, to the uſe of my deare and welbeloved wyfe Anne Farnham, for terme of her lief naturall; and, after her deceaſe, I will my ſaid feoffees ſhall be ſeiſed of the ſaid manor, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, to the uſe of Adrian Farnham my ſonne, and of the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of the heires of the body of me the ſaid Thomas lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of the ſaid Adrian, and of the heires of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of Francis Belgrave my next heire, and to the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of William Saunders, and to the uſe of the heires males of his body lawfully begotten; and for default of ſuch iſſue, then to the uſe of my right heires for ever." Mr. Thomas Farnham dying ſeiſed as aforeſaid, his ſon Adrian, agreeably to the will, became poſſeſſed of the ſaid manors, tenements, &c.; and in conformity to the act of 27 Henry VIII. concerning uſes in poſſeſſion, became ſeiſed in fee-farm of the manor of Quorndon, and of the lands in Mountſorell and Rothley; and Anne, the widow, became ſeiſed in free dowry of the manor of Ruſhall, and of certain lands in Quorndon, for the term of her life. It was alſo found that the manor of Quorndon, called The Over Hall, one cottage, 80 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 20 of paſture, 40 of wood, &c. in Quorndon, were held of the queen, as of her manor of Beaumanor, in free ſocage, by the rent of one garland of roſes, one roſe-flower, and one barbed arrow of iron, to be annually paid on the feaſt of St. John the Baptiſt, in lieu of all other ſervices, ſuits of court, wards, reliefs, and heriots, cuſtoms, and demands; and were worth, all out-goings deducted, £7. 8*s*. And that the aforeſaid 2 meſſuages, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 10 of paſture, in the occupation of Francis Griffin and John Staples, were held of John Farnham, eſq. as of his manor of Stafford Orchard in Quorndon, in free ſocage, by fealty, but by what rent was not known, and were worth, after all out-goings, £13. 6*s*. 8*d*. Two meſſuages, &c. in Quorndon, rented by John Draper, were held of Henry earl of Huntingdon, as of the manor of Barrow, in free ſocage, at 6*d*. a year, ſuit of court, and fealty, and were worth 20*s*. a year. The manor of Ruſhall, &c. was held of the ſaid earl in free ſocage, at the rent of 1½*d*. a year and fealty, and was worth, after all outgoings, £13. The meſſuage and lands in Barrow were held of Henry lord Berkeley, as of his honour of Segrave, in free ſocage, by fealty, and a rent of 14*s*. and were worth 26*s*. 8*d*. The meſſuage, &c. in Barrow, held by Lawrence Braham and others, were held of the earl of Huntingdon, as of his manor of Barrow, in free ſocage, and fealty, and a rent of 8*d*. and were worth 20*s*. a year. The meſſuage, &c. in Mountſorell, was held of the lord Berkeley, as of his honour of Mountſorell, in free ſocage, by fealty, and a rent of 12*s*. 4*d*. and were worth £5. 10*s*. 4*d*. The cottage at Barrow, in the tenure of Mary Mugge, was held under the earl of Huntingdon, in free ſocage, by fealty only, and was worth 8*s*.; and the toft in Barrow was alſo held of the earl by fealty and ſuit of court, and was worth 7*d*. The jurors alſo ſtated, that the ſaid Thomas Farnham died on the 2d day of April, 1574, poſſeſſed of no other eſtates than are herein deſcribed; and that Adrian his ſon and heir was five years old Nov. 18, 1573 [1].

---

[1] See an engraving of his monument, Plate XVI. fig. 22, 23, 24.

[2] 3 Pars Original. 20 Eliz. Rot. 186.

Certain lands in Quorndon were leaſed by queen Elizabeth, in 1588, to Chriſtopher Midleton, for 21 years [2].

In the rent-roll of William Herrick, eſq. 1597, occur theſe entries: "Adrian Farnham, eſq. 6*d*. as a chief rent for The Hall Carr (ſituated near The Upper Hall), and 11*s*. for Turvile's land in the manor of Ruſhall, called Ruſha or Ruſhall fields, in the liberty of Woodhouſe.

At the ſame time Humphrey Farnham paid 28*s*. a year for The Cunnery and Barley Cloſe (the ſite of The Nether Hall);" and had another tenement in Quorndon, which he held freely, paying a chief.

In 1608, Ralph Allen held a cottage here in capite [3].

Richard Chamberlaine, eſq. obtained, July 15, 1612, a grant, in fee ſimple, of a cottage next the abbot's barn in Quorndon; and of two other cottages, with the appurtenances; one in the tenure of Thomas Hogen, the other of Thomas Thompſon; a meſſuage in the tenure of William Staples, with a cloſe in the tenure of William Staples (which had been demiſed to William Barnard, by a leaſe from the abbot and convent, dated May 7, 1534, for a term of 80 years from the feaſt of the Annunciation then laſt paſt, at a rent of 20*s*. to be paid at the feaſt of the Purification of the Virgin and St. Peter ad Vincula). The tenant was to have ſufficient hedgeboot and fireboot in the Garret-haie for his own uſe, but not to cut down or carry away any trees there growing; to perform all repairs; to uphold the chancel of Barrow church (the main timbers, meremiis groſſis, excepted), and les flattes & flattinges; to pay all the chief rents to which the premiſſes were liable; a fat ram worth 3*s*. 4*d*. on Michaelmas-day; and a farther annual rent of £4. 9*s*. Mr. Chamberlaine had alſo another cottage aſſigned to him, of the yearly value of 8*d*. [4]

From a receipt ſigned by Thomas Wayght, receiver, it appears that ſir William Herrick paid in 1614 eight pounds a year for a fee-farm rent in Quorndon.

Thomas Farnham, gent. of the Nether Hall, 16 April, 1628, conveyed a meſſuage and parcel of land at Quorndon to his ſiſter Margaret, and Thomas Alderſey, of Kent, her huſband; and Margaret, ſurviving her huſband, by her will dated Dec. 16, 1658, conſtituted her ſon Farnham Alderſey reſiduary legatee [5].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Adrian Farnham, eſq. John Morton, gent. Thomas Farnham, gent. Humfrey Greaſley, William Brandon, and Richard Blount. In 1722 there were 38; and 37 in 1775.

May 11, 1650, a cauſe, which had then been pending more than ten years, was heard in the Exchequer, in which ſir William Herrick, knt. was plaintiff, and Thomas Farnham, gentleman, defendant, for adjuſting a claim made by ſir William Herrick, ariſing from a cottage and half a cottage, and certain lands, in Quorndon, which had for more than 50 years been held by Mr. Farnham and his anceſtors, as of the manor of Beaumanor, by fealty, ſuit of court, and a yearly rent of 28*s*.; which meſſuages and lands Mr. Farnham ſtated "to have been parcel of a chantry in Quorndon, belonging to the abbey of Bermondſey, in Surrey; and, on the diſſolution of monaſteries, having devolved to the Crown, were granted by king Edward VI. 10° Martii, anno regni ſui 7°, to Thomas Farnham; and that, in the ſaid grant, was a covenant to free the ſame from all leets, rents, and ſuits of ſervices whatſoever (except certain rents in the ſaid letters patent excepted); from the which Thomas Farnham the ſame deſcended to his grandſon the defendant [6]." The Court directed the merits of this cauſe to be tried at common law at the next aſſizes for the county; and the arrears of rent to be in the mean time paid to ſir William Herrick.

Mr. Thomas Farnham died in Auguſt 1666; and on his monument, which is not dated, is thus characterized:

"HERE LODGETH THOMAS FARNEHAM, LATE ESQUIER, WHO HATH HIS HOWSE IN DARKENES AS YOU SEE;
HE SAIETH TO ROTTENES, THOU ART MY SIRE;
AND TO THE WORMES, MY BRETHREN MUST YOU BEE.
HIS BLOUD HAD SOMETIMES HEAT, HIS NOSTRELLS BREATH;
THE ONE NOWE CHILLDE, THE OTHER CHOKTE BY DEATH.
HIS LINADGE FR'M A KNIGHT, HIS LIFE UNSTAINDE,
HIS HAND NOT SLACK IN BOUNTIE TO THE PORE,
BUT NEITHER BOUNTIE, LIFE, NOR LINADGE GAINDE RELEASE FROM DEATH, NOR ANYE VERTUES MORE.
YET SUCH HIS VERTUES AS, IF DEATH HAD SENSE, MIGHT PARDON CRAVE, AND MOVE DEATH TO DISPENSE.
THE DEADE EVEN CRY, THE LIVINGE ARE BUT VAINE
HOWSES OF EARTH, THAT MUST TO RUINS FALL:
FROM DUST TO DUST, FROM ASHES BACK AGAINE;
THIS DOOME IS WRITTEN IN THE FLESHE OF ALL.
THIS LAWE WAS SETT THEM FROM THEIR MOTHERS WOM, A CRADELL FOR THEIR FIRST, THEIR LAST A TOMBE.
BUT BLESSED IS THE MAN WHOSE FIRST AND LAST IS LIKE THAT MAN'S, THAT LIES ENTERRED HERE.
WHOSE BODIE THOUGHE IN DUST, HIS SOULE DOTH TAST
THE HIDDEN MANNA WHICH IS AUNGELLS' CHEERE.
HE CHRIST BENEATH, CHRIST HONOURS HIM ABOVE;
HE LOV'DE HIS LORDE, AND HIM HIS LORDE DOTH LOVE."

Edward Farnham, eſq. of Quorndon, in Auguſt 1646, was fined £480. by the Parliamentarians, for his attachment to the Royal cauſe; and obtained an ordinance of pardon for his delinquency, and to diſcharge the ſequeſtration of his eſtate. His offence was ſtated to be, "living in the enemies' quarters;" and "his eſtate, in fee, £300. a year; whereof £60. a year was demiſed, for 99 years, to Mr. Francis Farnham his brother; and, out of the remainder, £60. a year more was payable for one life [7]." He died in 1652; leaving two ſons, Edward and Charles.

---

[1] From a contemporary copy of the original Office, preſerved amongſt the Beaumanor papers.

[2] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[3] See vol. I. p. cxxxi.

[4] Rawlinſon's MSS. in the Bodleian Library, N° 1341. fol. 85; referring to Pat. 22 May, 7 Jacobi.

[5] Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 203.

[6] Mr. Farnham, in his anſwer, acknowledged that for ſome years after his father's death (not having ſeen his evidences), he did, to avoid ſuits, pay the rent of 28*s*. a year; but for what lands, or for what tenure, he knew not; and denied that he did any ſuit to the court at Beaumanor, ſaving that ſometimes, he being about 24 years of age, when he dwelt in the houſe of one Caldwell in Woodthorpe (which houſe was within ſir William Herrick's leet and parcel of the manor), he did appear at the ſaid courts as an inhabitant in the ſaid houſe.

[7] Catalogue of Compounders; and Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. IV. p. 646.

Edward died in 1684; and his only ſon Edward dying at 19 years of age, the family eſtates went from his five daughters to his brother Charles Farnham, eſq. who reſided in the preſent family-houſe, which had been bequeathed to him in 1691 by his relation Mrs. Margaret Kay[1]. He died in 1722 without iſſue; and (the elder branch of the family being then extinct in the male line[2]) deviſed his eſtates to his nephew Edward, eldeſt ſon of Mr. Benjamin Farnham[3], the then repreſentative of the younger branch.

The Nether Hall (which there is ſome reaſon to think was formerly one of the chantries deſcribed in p. 105) was a capital meſſuage, ſituated in The Barley Cloſe; and in 1548 was the property of Thomas Farnham, eſq. whoſe nephew Humphrey, in 1608, held in fee-farm, to him and his heirs for ever, one capital meſſuage and .... acres of land, leys, and meadow, thereto belonging, then in his own tenure, and paid yearly for chief, with ſuit of court, 28*s*. Humphrey died here about 1620; his eldeſt ſon, William, in 1624-5; and third ſon, Thomas, in 1666[4]. By the next owner, Captain Henry Farnham, this manſion was entirely re-built; and, after his death (which happened in 1684), was purchaſed by George Morton, eſq. who occurs owner from 1686 to 1698. Mr. Rainsford was owner in 1712; and his widow (then ſtyled Madam Kimſey) reſided here from 1714 to 1719; as did William Kimſey, gent. in 1724; George Collingswood, eſq. in 1730; Mrs. Kimſey in 1732; Eveling Chadwick, eſq. in 1741; Lawrence earl Ferrers in 1750; and Juſtinian Rainsford, eſq. from 1751 to 1758; about which time it was purchaſed by Mr. Meynell.

Mrs. Martha Farnham (Captain Henry's widow) removed, with her family, to the houſe now Mr. Cock's[5], where ſhe had reſided when firſt married in 1660, and where ſhe continued to reſide, univerſally beloved, till her death in 1722. Thomas Farnham, her eldeſt ſon, alſo lived in Mr. Cock's houſe; and Margaret his wife, ſurviving him, continued to live there. That this was an old reſidence of the Farnhams appears by their arms in the windows[6]. It is a good building; was generally conſidered as a ſort of dowager-houſe; and appears to have been inhabited by ſome of the family till the death of Mr. Charles Farnham in 1722.

The Stafford Orchard is about 150 yards Eaſt from Mr. Cock's, on the oppoſite ſide of the ſtreet, adjoining Mr. Farnham's property, at the back of a ſmall neat houſe lately inhabited by Mr. Hudſon.

The Upper Hall, ſituated in The Carr Cloſe, about 250 yards from the preſent houſe, on the other ſide of the brook, was long the reſidence of the elder branch of the family. We find Adrian Farnham[7] living there from 1597 to 1632; his ſon Edward from 1632 to 1644; and grandſon Edward[8] till 1680. It was afterwards the property of Charles Farnham, eſq (brother to the laſt Edward) who, being already ſettled in a comfortable houſe, demiſed the Upper Hall to Charles Lewis[9], gent.; and the rector of Preſtwould (Mr. Charles Lewis[9]), who had married a Farnham, reſided here from 1712 till his death in 1716. This was a good old manſion, with a pair of large gates at the entrance, and a porch at the door as large as a room, with benches or ſeats round the inſide of the porch; and was pulled down by the laſt Edward Farnham, eſq. who built a farm-houſe on part of the ſite.

Mr. Edward Farnham died in 1775; having had, by his wife Eaſter Lake of Canterbury (whom he married March 3, 1725), ſeven ſons and four daughters:

1. Eaſter, born March 15, 1727; married to John Willows, of Leiceſter, gent.; and died in June 1764.
2. Anne, born Aug. 22, 1729; married to Noah Bolaine, eſq. of Canterbury; living, a widow, 1798.
3. Charles, born July 11, 1730; died an infant.
4. Edward, born Jan. 2, 1732; died an infant.
5. Sarah, born Sept. 26, 1734; died an infant.
6. John, born April 20, 1737; was killed, Oct. 22, 1773, by the accidental diſcharge of a fowling-piece, as he was ſporting.
7. William, born Oct. 6, 1738, was educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B. A. 1762; and was preſented to the vicarage of Shepeſhed in 1765 by the late Samuel Philips, eſq. of Garendon, on the death of Mr. Heath; and, after he became poſſeſſed of the family eſtate, very handſomely reſigned that vicarage, in 1775, in favour of the Rev. Charles Alſopp, who was related to the late lady Gordon. He died, unmarried, June 26, 1784.
8. Edward-Beſtere, born Nov. 18, 1740; died an infant.
9. Sarah, born Oct. 25, 1741; was married, firſt, May 3, 1769, to ſir Charles Halford, bart. of Wiſtow, who died in 1780; and, ſecondly, July 21, 1783, to Baſil Fielding, the preſent earl of Denbigh.
10. Thomas, born Oct. 30, 1743; was a captain in the Royal Navy, much reſpected in private life, and greatly eſteemed as an officer, having particularly diſtinguiſhed himſelf on ſeveral occaſions, particularly during the American war. On the 14th of Auguſt, 1779, being then commander of the Nautilus frigate, he burnt and deſtroyed ſeveral galleys of the enemy in the Bay of Penobſcot; for which gallant action he received the approbation and thanks of Sir George Collier; and was afterwards promoted to the command of the Winchelſea frigate. He died Nov. 24, 1793.
11. Edward Farnham, eſq. the youngeſt ſon, born May 27, 1753; married, June 1, 1795, Harriet the youngeſt daughter and coheireſs of the rev. Durand Rhudde, D. D. rector of Brantham with Eaſt Bergholt, as alſo of Great Wenham, in the county of Suffolk, and chaplain in ordinary to his Majeſty, by whom he has one daughter, Sarah-Anne, born July 17, 1796.

In an act of parliament paſſed in 1762, for dividing and incloſing the common fields of Quorndon, computed to contain 1620 acres, or thereabouts; Francis earl of Huntingdon is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Quorndon, and a proprietor of lands in the ſaid fields; and Anne Bowles, widow, as impropriatrix of the great tithes ariſing within the ſaid open fields (except as to ſome particular parts and parcels thereof), and alſo within certain antient incloſures within the ſaid lordſhip, and a proprietor of lands and grounds there; the maſter, fellows, and ſcholars, of St. John's College within the Univerſity of

---

[1] Of whom ſee p. 106; and a view of the houſe in Plate XIII.

[2] Mrs. Philippa Hudſon, widow of the late rev. Thomas Hudſon, is now living, in her 85th year, being the laſt ſurvivor of the elder branch of the Farnham family, of the Upper Hall. Mrs. Hudſon's mother died at the age of 90.

[3] Who died in 1747; ſee his epitaph, p. 107.

[4] In 1656, Thomas Farnham, gent. held in fee-farm, to him and his heirs for ever, certain lands in Quorndon, part whereof was then in the occupation or poſſeſſion of the ſaid Thomas Farnham, and was, or had been, known or called by the name of Barley Cloſe, then incloſed, joined or laid to a certain piece of ground called The Cuningrye. In the ſaid Barley-cloſe did formerly ſtand a capital meſſuage; to which did belong .... acres of land, leys, and meadow; which premiſes have ever paid the yearly rent of twenty-eight ſhillings. From the Court Rolls at Beaumanor.

[5] This houſe, in which Mr. Cock and his father have lived many years, is now the property of the Rev. Mr. Willows of Wiſtow; whoſe father purchaſed it of Mr Charles Farnham, together with the North chancel in Quorndon church, and alſo ſome part of the Wellows-ground in Quorndon, and Stafford Orchard, of Charles Farnham, eſq. about the year 1720.

[6] The parlour window ſtill contains three coats of the matches of the Farnhams of the Nether Hall; Quarterly, 1. and 4. Farnham; 2. Billington: 3. Whatton; with the three ſeveral impalements, Chaloner, Nevill, and ——, as engraved in Plate XI. fig. 32, 33, 34. (See p. 103.) In the kitchen of this houſe alſo, on a large coat, is, Argent, a chevron Sable, between nine martlets, Gules, Colepeper; Plate XVI. fig. 29.

[7] In 1597, Adrian Farnham, eſq. held, by the words of his copy, dated the 30th day of March, in the 39th year of the reign of queen Elizabeth, of the grant of William Herick, eſq. one piece of ground in Quorndon, called Lytle Myle-dam, for the lyves of the ſaid Adrian, lyving, Anne-Catharine, deceaſed, and of Edward Farnham, ſon of the ſaid Adrian, lyving; which premiſes were found to be and contain one piece of ground lyenge in a cloſe of the ſaid Adrian, called The Hall Carr, near the dwelling-houſe of the ſaid Adrian, between the tenement or ground in the occupation of Francis Staples North, and of Thomas Fynnes South, the ground of the ſaid Adrian Weſt, and the common brook Eaſt and Weſt; containing in itſelf .... acres, and paying rent per acre XII*d*. —In the ſame year, Francis Chaveney, Humphrey Scultborpe, and many others, occur, as holding leaſes of lands for lives in Quorndon.

[8] His widow, Mrs. Mary Farnham, continued to pay the annual 6*d*. and 11*s*. for the Hall Carr and Turvile lands from 1680 to 1693.

[9] Charles Lewis, gent. and the rev. Charles Lewis, it is believed, were the ſame perſon.

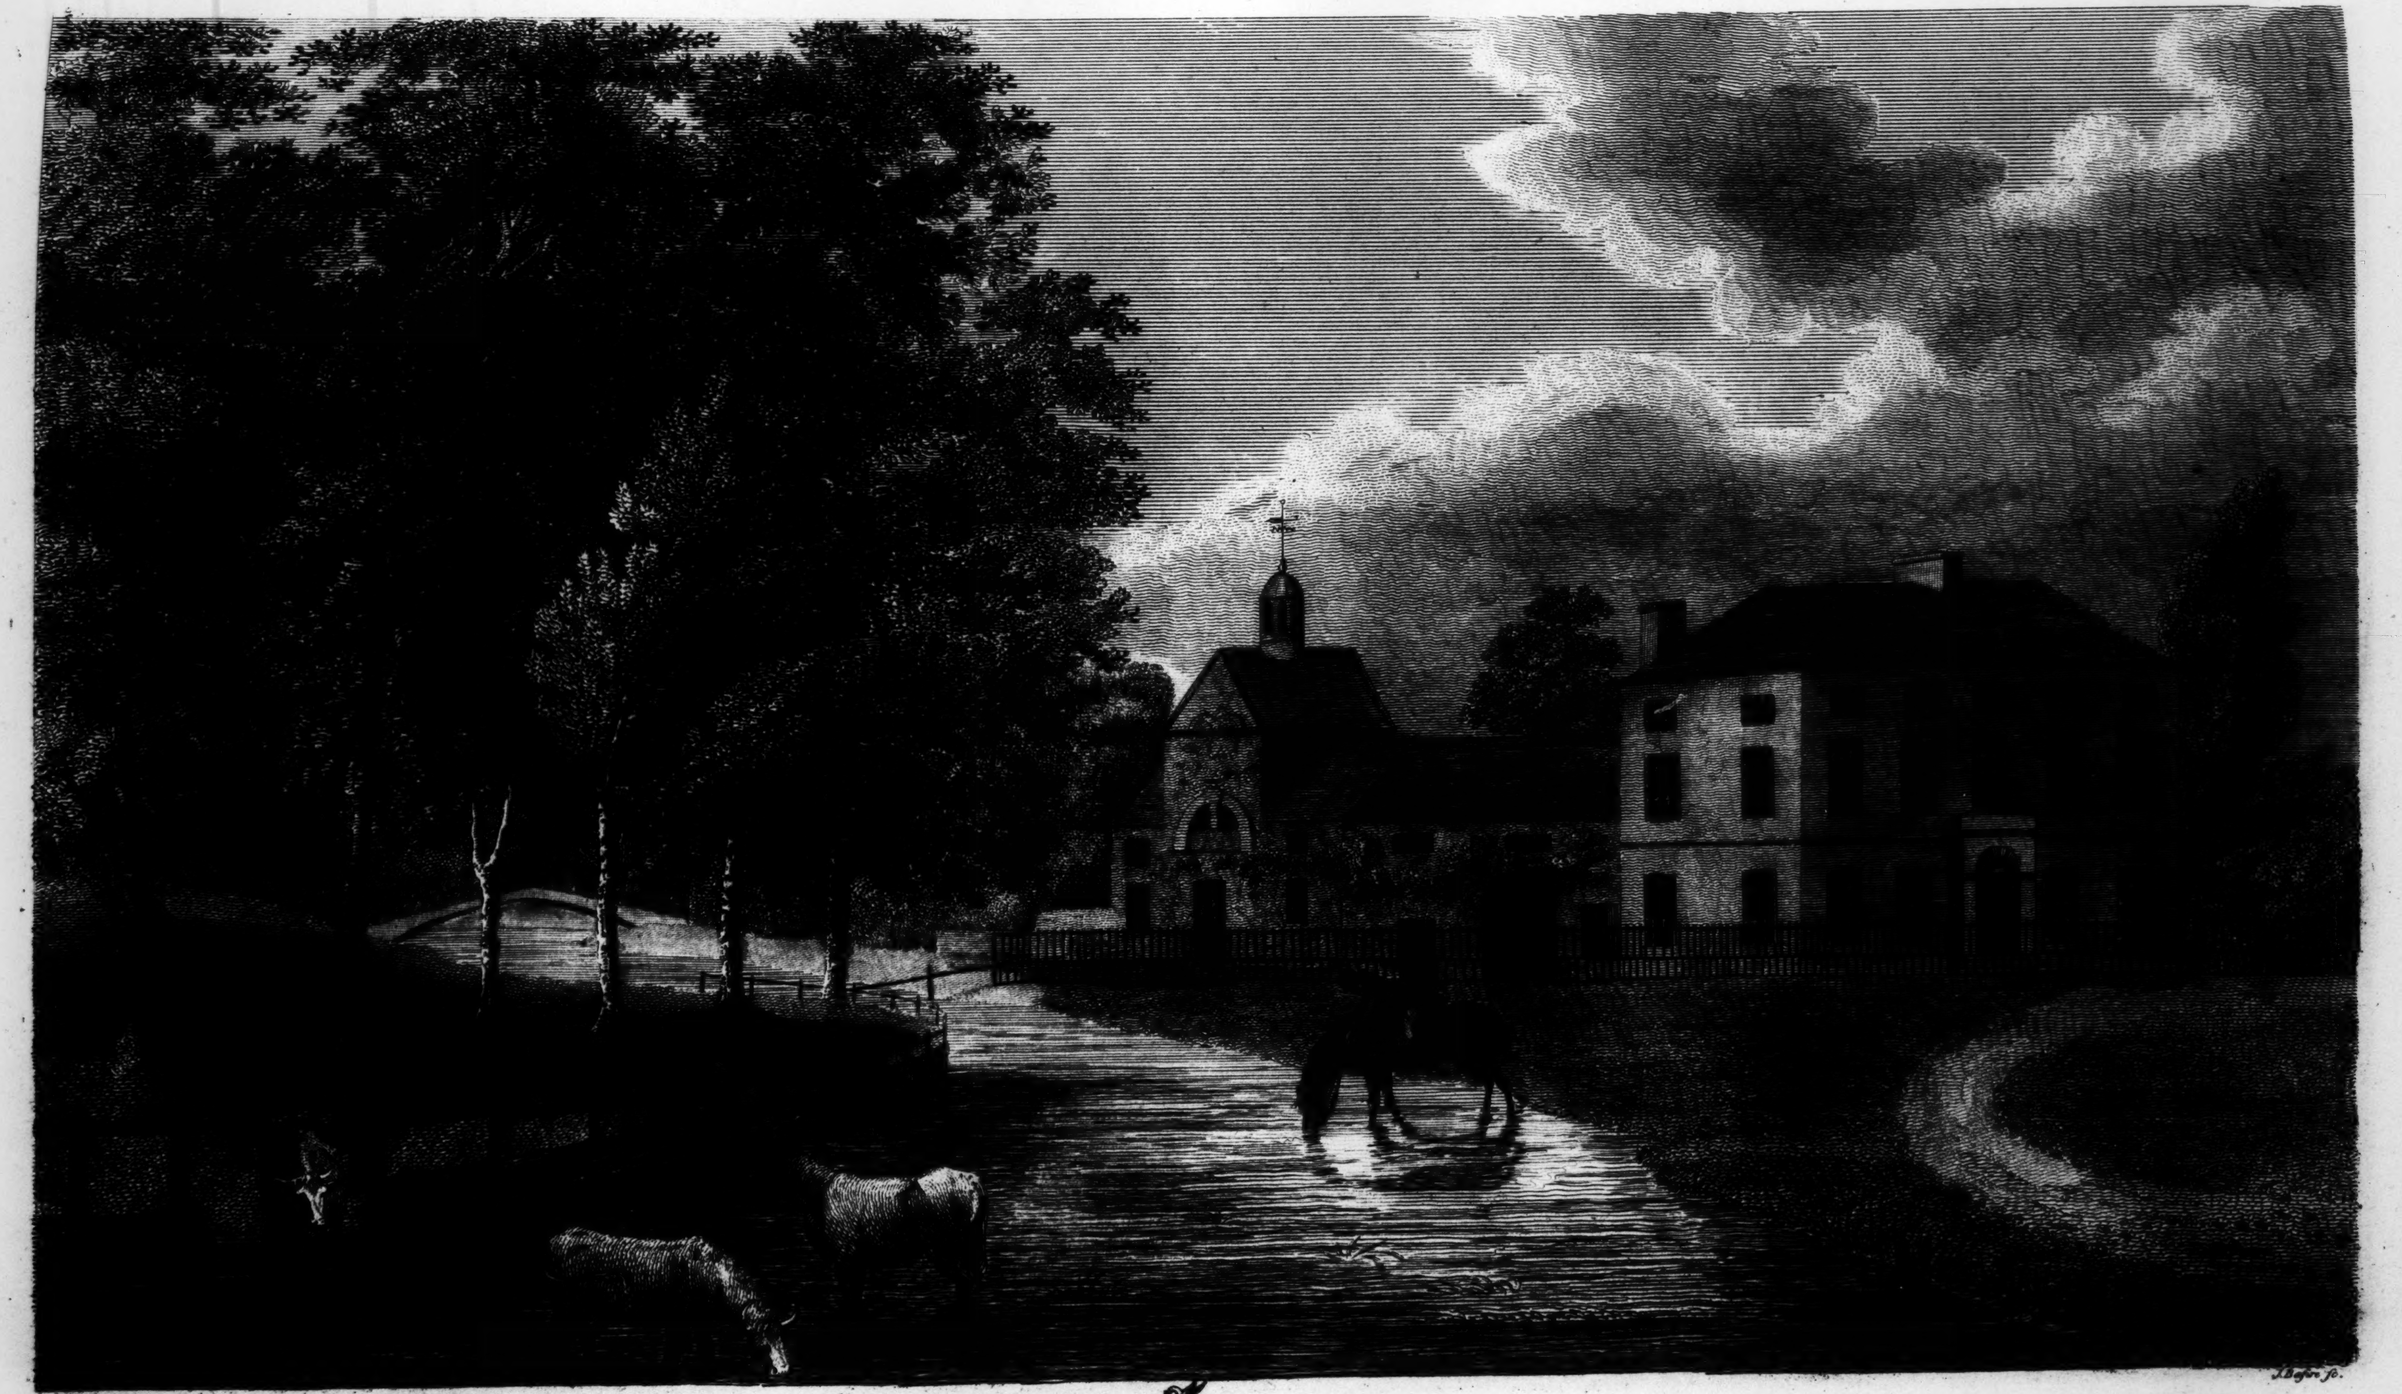
Vol. III. Pl. XIII. p.



J. Basire sc.

To EDWARD FARNHAM Esq.r this View of his House at QUORNDON, is respectfully inscribed by his much obliged and very humble Serv.t
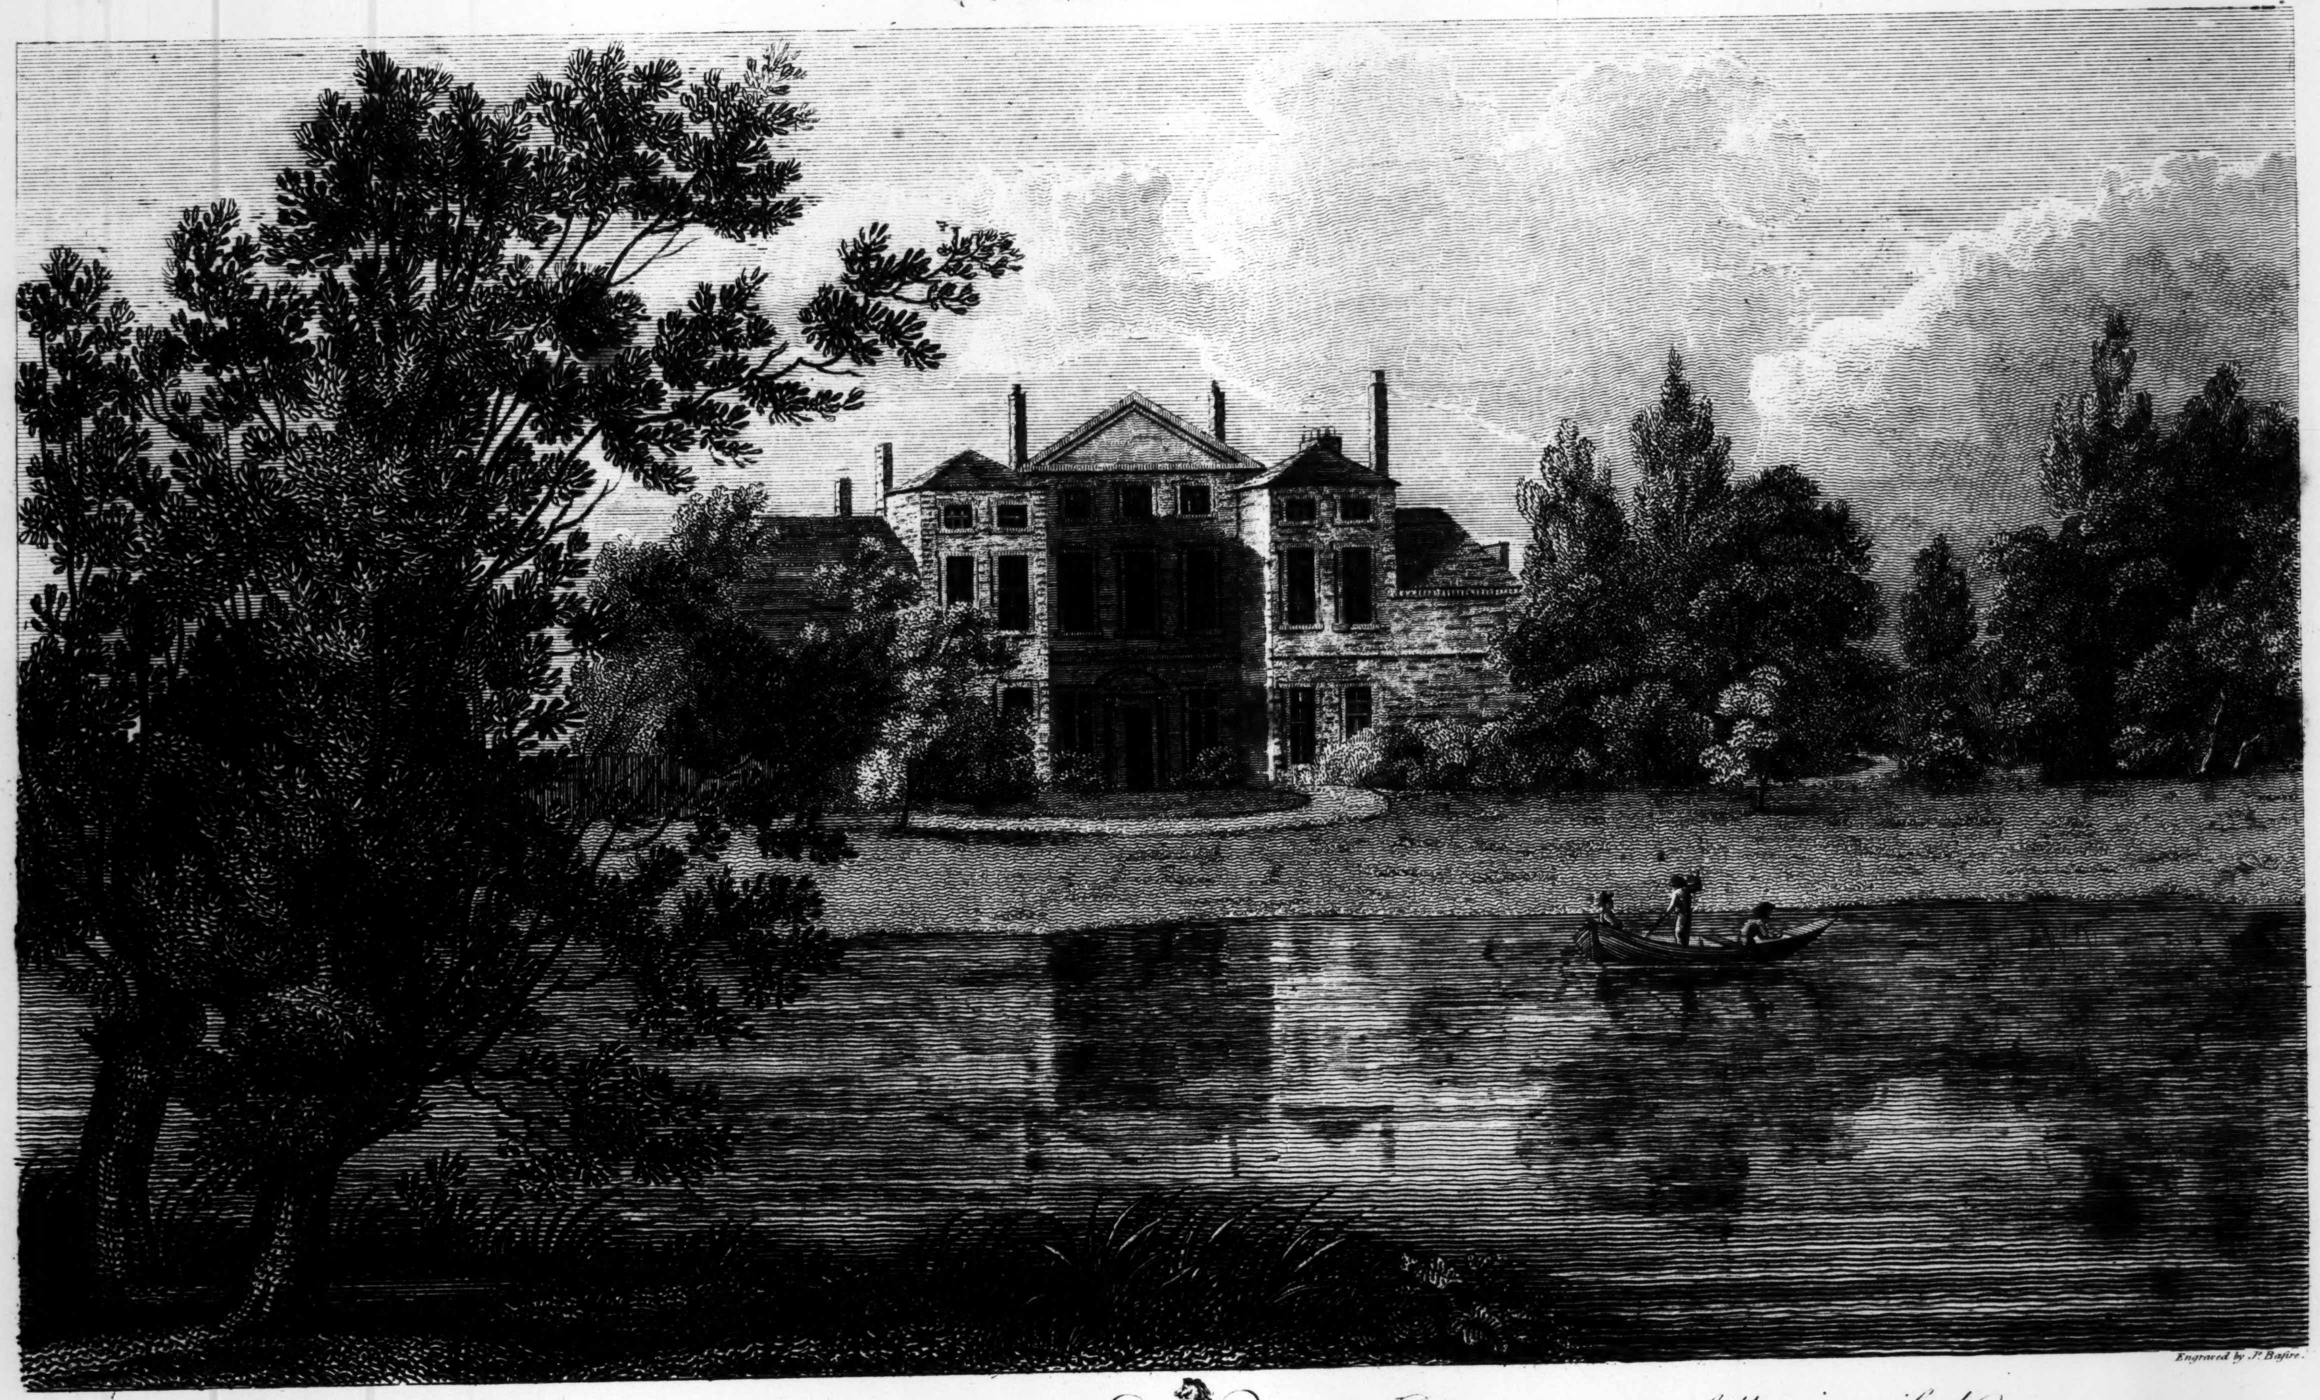
J. Nichols.

Vol. III. Pl. XIV. p. 101.

QUORNDON HALL.



Engraved by J^{o}. Baſire.

To HUGO MEYNELL Junr. Esqr. this Plate is respectfully inscribed by his much obliged and very humble Servt. J. Nichols.

Cambridge as patrons to the vicarage of Barrow; and the rev. William Burrow, as vicar, entitled to half of the ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid open and common fields (except as to ſome particular parts thereof), and within certain of the ſaid antient incloſures; and Edward Farnham, eſq. as entitled to the other moiety of the ſmall tithes within the ſaid open fields (except alſo as to ſome particular parts thereof), and within certain of the ſaid antient incloſures, and alſo as a conſiderable proprietor of lands and grounds there; and ſir Wolſtan Dixie, bart. ſir John Danvers, bart. Hugo Meynell, eſq. James Modyford Heywood, eſq. William Burrow, and others, as owners and proprietors of the reſidue of the lands and grounds in the ſaid fields and meadows, and, together with the ſaid earl and other the proprietors, entitled to rights of common in the ſaid commons, in different proportions. An allotment was directed to be made to the vicar and his ſucceſſors of ſo much of the ſaid fields as ſhould be an equivalent for the lands whereunto he was entitled; and a farther allotment to the vicar of ſuch parcel of the reſidue of the ſaid fields as upon the incloſure thereof ſhould be of 6*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* clear of all taxes and aſſeſſments; which ſaid allotments to the vicar to be in full ſatiſfaction for his moiety of the ſmall tithes ariſing from the ſaid fields and ſuch antient incloſures as paid tithes (ſurplice-fees, Eaſter-dues, and mortuaries, and other payments payable to the vicar, excepted). The reſt of the lands to be divided in regular proportions amongſt the ſeveral proporietors.

This lordſhip is not very large; but the greater part of it is exceedingly good land, chiefly a lightiſh ſoil, upon which are raiſed and fed ſheep not much inferior to any in the county. Sir William Herrick of Beaumanor had a large property at Quorndon in the reigns of Elizabeth and James the Firſt; part of which ſtill belongs to his lineal deſcendant William Herrick, eſq. The other principal land-owners are, the honourable Auguſtus-Richard Butler-Danvers, Hugo Meynell, eſq. Edward Farnham, eſq. Savile-John Hyde, eſq. the Rev. Thomas Stevens, D.D. Euphemia daughter of the Rev. Richard Gifford of Duffield in Derbyſhire, Mr. Stone, &c. &c.

The Chaveneys were a very antient and reſpectable family in this village and at Mountſorell. At the end of Quorn town, a lane leading to Woodhouſe is ſtill called Chaveney's Lane. The widow of the late Henry Chaveney, eſq. married Thomas Squire, gent. of Quorn. After her death, the family property went to Mrs. Simms, of Lathbury-hall near Newport Pagnell; who, about 20 years ago, ſold to the late ſir John Danvers the whole of the eſtates, conſiſting of the Hall-houſe, with all the contiguous land, and other parcels of land in Quorn, together with Quorn-mill [1], on the brook on the South ſide the houſe near Buddon wood, and a great portion of Buddon wood.

The village abounds with good houſes; amongſt which the largeſt is Quorndon-hall, the ſeat of Hugo Meynell, eſq. who, about ſeven years ſince, made ſome addition to the North end of the houſe, and built a dining room and drawing room over it on the Weſt front, which filled up the vacancy between the two wings; the hall and ſtaircaſe, with the other part of the houſe, remaining as they originally were. It is finiſhed in a plain, but neat ſtyle; with every convenience for a comfortable family-manſion (ſee a view of it in plate XIV.); and ſome conſiderable pleaſure-grounds have been laid out near the river by Mr. Meynell. This gentleman, who has been long eſteemed the firſt fox-hunter in the kingdom, purchaſed this place for a hunting-ſeat [2]; but his regular reſidence is at Bradley Park [3] in Derbyſhire. He is deſcended from a family of long ſtanding in the counties of Leiceſter and Derby [4], and by his maternal grandmother from the families of Pointz and Littelton of North Okendon in Eſſex; was born in June 1735; high-ſheriff for Derbyſhire in 1758; repreſented the city of Lichfield from 1762 to 1768, the borough of Lymington in 1774, and that of Stafford in 1778. He married, firſt, in June 1754, Anne, daughter of John Gell, eſq. by whom he had one ſon, Godfrey [5], born at Quorn, Oct. 4, 1755. Mrs. Meynell died at Hopton in Derbyſhire in June 1757; and was buried at Bradley. And in June 1758 Mr. Meynell married, ſecondly, Anne, daughter of Thomas Boothby-Scrimſhire, eſq. of Tooley Park, by whom he has two ſons, Hugo Meynell, eſq. (the preſent captain Meynell) born in Hill-ſtreet, Berkeley-ſquare, March 25, 1759; and Charles Meynell, eſq. the preſent maſter of the royal tennis-court, born alſo in Hill-ſtreet, Feb. 24. 1768.

Godfrey Meynell, eſq. the eldeſt ſon of Littleton-Pointz Meynell, ſettled at Yelderſley, in Derbyſhire; married Frances, daughter of —— Dealtry, eſq. of Beckingham; and died Feb. 4, 1760. He had four daughters; 1. Frances, who was the firſt wife of Edward-Miller Munday, eſq. of Shipley, co. Derby, the preſent repreſentative in parliament for that county, but died in the prime of life; 2. Harriott, married May 16, 1789, to ſir John Cauldwell, of Cauldwell Caſtle in Ireland, bart. and count of Milan in the Sacred Roman Empire;

---

[1] The cloth-mill (antiently denominated the fulling-mill) was on the river cloſe to Mr. Meynell's court-yard, and has been pulled down by that gentleman; ſo that there is no mill now at Quorn but that which was Chaveney's.

[2] This deſcription of Quorndon would be imperfect, were I not to mention the ſplendid entertainments given by Mr. Meynell to his friends at the commencement of the hunting ſeaſon. In 1791, on the firſt day of hunting, upwards of 300 horſemen and ladies in carriages were aſſembled at cover.—An admirable eſſay by Mr. Meynell, on canine madneſs, is printed in the Medical Commentaries, vol. XIX. p. 90; and in Gent. Mag. vol. LXVIII. p. 949.

[3] A Meynell of Sturſon near Bradley had the honour of being in the firſt call of ſerjeants in the reign of king James the Firſt; and the manor of Bradley was purchaſed in 1655 by Francis Meynell, eſq. alderman and goldſmith of London, and ſheriff in 1661-2; who had three ſons, Godfrey, Francis, and Richard; and died Oct. 6, 1666. Godfrey married twice; firſt to Margaret, daughter of George Vernon, eſq. by whom he had no iſſue; but by his ſecond wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Edward Littleton, eſq. he had one ſon and one daughter (Dorothy, married to ſir John Every, of Eggington, co. Derby, bart.). The ſon, Littleton-Pointz Meynell, eſq. married Judith, daughter of Thomas Ailkyne, eſq. of Barbados; by whom he had three ſons, Godfrey, Hugo (of whom ſee above), and Littleton (who died unmarried), and two daughters; and afterwards married a ſecond wife (the widow of —— Dutton, eſq. an officer at Rocheſter) by whom he had no iſſue. This lady died July 2, 1780.

[4] The Meynells are believed to be of the family of Hugo de Grentemaiſnell, of the race of the Geroians, companion of William the Conqueror, and one of his barons. Of the ſame origin were the Meynells of Cold Overton (ſee vol. II. p. 139.); as was alſo ſir Hugo Meynell, who married the heireſs of the lord Robert de la Ward, and died in 1333 (ibid. p. 532); and who changed his family arms for thoſe of De la Ward, Barry, nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable; the ſame which are at this day uſed by the Meynells of Quorndon. The returns to parliament for the county of Derby are highly honourable to this family, as may be ſeen by the following extracts from Browne Willis's "Notitia Parliamentaria:"

EDW. I.
23 Parl. at Weſtm. Hen. de Kniveton, Giles de Meynell.
34 Council at Weſtm. Rob. de Dethick, Giles de Meynell.
EDW. II.
17 Parl. at Weſtm. Hugh de Meignell, Nich. de Langeford.
EDW. III.
4 Parl. at Winch. Rob. de Meignell, Hugh de Meignell.
5 Parl. at Weſtm. Hugh Fitz-Hugh de Meynhall, Roger de Okmore.
6 Parl. at Weſtm. Rob. de Miegnill, Will. Michell.
6 Parl. at Weſtm. Hugh de Miegnill, Rob. de Miegnill.
6 Parl. at Weſtm. Rob. de Meignill, Peter de Wakebrigge.
7 Parl. at York. Rob. de Miegnill, Peter de Wakebrigge.
11 Parl. at Weſtm. Giles de Meynill, Rob. Franceys.
11 Parl. at Weſtm. Giles de Meynill, John Cokain.
12 Parl. at Weſtm. Giles de Meynhill, Rob. Frannceys.
20 Parl. at Weſtm. Giles de Maignill, Roger de Emerton.
RICHARD II.
21 Parl. at Weſtm. J. Dabriggeworth, Chr. W. Meynill, Chr.
HENRY VI.
8 Parl. at Weſtm. John Curſon, Gerard Meynell.
13 Parl. at Weſtm. John Curſun, Gerard Meynill.

How much longer this very antient family may have continued to repreſent the county of Derby, we cannot ſay, as the writs, returns, and indentures, from 17 Edw. IV. to 23 Hen. VIII. are all loſt. But, from a volume of inquiſitions now before us, it appears that Gerard Meynell, gent. died 30 Sept. 18 Hen. VIII, ſeiſed of divers meſſuages and lands at Willington, King's Norton, Melburne, and Yeveley; leaving a ſon, Henry, then aged 36, who died 30 Jan. 32 Hen. VIII; leaving a ſon, John, then aged 22, who died 29 March, 4 Eliz. leaving John, his ſon and heir, æt. 16. In 19 Hen. VIII. and 3 Edw. VI. Hugo Meynell occurs as lord of the manor of Totenby; and in 1 Eliz. Mark Meynell was lord of the manor of Winſter.

[5] Who married, Oct. 7, 1782, the widow of —— Eſtridge, eſq.

and died at Bath in 1795; 3. Anne, married to Thomas Davidſon[1], eſq. of Yorkſhire; and is living, 1798, a widow; 4. Charlotte, died very young.

Mary, eldeſt ſiſter of the elder Hugo Meynell, eſq. was married to William Fitzherbert, eſq. of Tiſſington, recorder of Derby, and M. P. for that borough in 1762 and 1768. She died in 1753. Her children were, William, alſo recorder of Derby; created a baronet Dec. 10, 1783; and died July 30, 1791; 2. John, died young in the Eaſt Indies; 3. Thomas, a lieutenant in the army, died under age; 4. Selina, married to Henry Galley, eſq.; 5. Alleyne, born 1753, and created a peer of Ireland by the title of Baron St. Helens Jan. 26, 1791.

Judith-Hillaria, the other ſiſter[2] of Mr. Meynell, was married, in 1763, to Roger-Hope Elletſon, eſq. who was afterwards appointed governor of Jamaica.

Hugo Meynell, eſq. the younger married, Aug. 2, 1782, Elizabeth, one of the daughters and coheirs of the late Charles lord viſcount Irwin of the kingdom of Scotland[3]; and has three ſons and three daughters. Hugo-Charles, born in Hill-ſtreet, in 1784; Iſabella, baptized at Quorndon May 10, 1785; Elizabeth, June 18, 1786; Henry, Aug. 24, 1789; Edward-Francis, Feb. 23, 1795; and Frances-Adeline, Jan. 23, 1797.

There are ſome good pictures in Quorndon Hall. A fine portrait of the preſent marchioneſs of Hertford, ſiſter to Mrs. Meynell, hangs in the drawing room. In the dining room are ſome excellent pictures of horſes by Mr. Boultbee of Loughborough; a beautiful candle-light piece, &c. &c.

Other good houſes are thoſe of Edward Farnham, eſq.; Savile-John Hyde, eſq. (ſee Plate XV.) in which are ſome good pictures[4]; the Rev. Dr. Stevens (let for ſome time to ſir Harry Featherſtone); Mr. Squire (let ſucceſſively to lord Maynard, the duke of Bedford, and Harvey Aſton, eſq.); Mrs. Peach; Mr. Ward Cocks (a reſpectable maltſter); Mr. Stone (a conſiderable breeder of ſheep[5]); and ſeveral neat hunting-boxes.

A fire, which happened in Jan. 1783, burnt the ſtables of the White Hart Inn, and ſeveral valuable horſes.

Extracts from the Regiſters of QUORNDON, which begin in 1661.

Maſter Edward Farnham and Mary his wife baptized Phillis[6] his daughter June 27, 1677.

Maſter Edward Farnham and Mary his wife baptized Phœbe his daughter May 16, 1679.

Mr. Will. Herrick, eſq. was buried Aug. 14, 1693.

Mr. Francis Caufield and Mrs. Mary Farnham of Quorndon married by licence Dec. 30, 1697.

Charles, the ſon of Will. Stevens, bapt. July 2, 1707.

Morton, the ſon of William Stevens, was baptized March 11, 1708.

Anne, the daughter of William and Roe Stevens, baptized July 18, 1711.

Mary, daughter of Edward and Philippa Prior, baptized Sept. 10, 1711.

Philippa, daughter of Edward and Philippa Prior, baptized Sept. 5, 1714.

Robert, the ſon of William and Roe Stevens, baptized March 19, 1715.

Hannah Stevens buried Nov. 21, 1724.

Mrs. Anne Hartopp bur. at Rotherby Feb. 7, 1725.

Mr. Henry Chaveney buried Oct. 25, 1727.

Memorandum. April 25, 1730, George Collingſwood gave to John Chapman the foremoſt pew belonging to him the ſaid George Collingſwood, in the church of Quorndon, for his own proper uſe.

Thomas Allen, clerk; Edward Farnham.

William Stevens, gent. and Mrs. Anne Farnham, both of this town, married by banns Jan. 16, 1738.

Margaret Farnham[7], widow, buried Feb. 21, 1738.

Roe, the wife of William Stevens, gentleman, buried Sept. 4, 1738.

Evelyn, daughter of Evelyn Chadwick[8], eſq. by Elizabeth his wife, bapt. Dec. 25, 1741.

William, ſon of William Stevens and Ann his wife, baptized Feb. 11, 1742.

Savill, ſon of Samuel Stevens, by Hannah-Sophia his wife, buried July 2, 1742.

Elizabeth, daughter of Evelyn Chadwick, eſq. by Elizabeth his wife, baptized April 6, 1743.

Francis Corfield, gent. buried March 15, 1746.

Barbara, daughter of William Stevens, by Anne his wife, baptized Aug. 30, 1747.

Ann, daughter of Robert Bird, gentleman, and his wife, baptized Aug. 30, 1747.

"An excommunication againſt Anne Turlington, the wife of Thomas Turlington, of Quorndon, for contumacy, in not ſending an inventory by an order of the Eccleſiaſtical Court in Leiceſter, was publiſhed this 4th day of Feb. 1749-50, by me, MOOR SCRIBO."

Ann, wife of Mr. Wm. Stevens, buried July 9, 1750.

William Stevens married Henrietta Scattergood, Nov. 2, 1750.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chaveney buried March 19, 1753.

Mrs. Mary Corfeild, widow, buried Dec. 27, 1753.

Mr. William Stevens buried Sept. 3, 1755.

William Stevens buried Feb. 28, 1759.

Tho. Herrick, of Mountſorell, buried July 12, 1763.

Eaſter, wife of John Willows, buried June 7, 1764.

Mrs. Philippa Prior buried March 25, 1767.

The Rev. Thomas Hudſon and Philippa Prior married Nov. 24, 1767.

Margaret-Ann, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Stevens, baptized April 8, 1768.

John Willows, gent. buried Nov. 14, 1774.

Edward Farnham, eſq. buried June 6, 1775.

John Stone, gent. buried Jan. 22, 1783.

Rev. William Farnham buried July 2, 1784.

Iſabella, daughter of Hugo Meynell, eſq. and the hon. Elizabeth Meynell his wife, bapt. May 10, 1785.

Elizabeth Meynell, baptized June 28, 1786.

Brook Bridges, ſon of the Rev. Thomas and Sarah Stevens, baptized Aug. 31, 1787.

Mrs. Hannah Stevens, widow, bur. April 1, 1789.

Hannah Stevens, daughter of the Rev. Thomas and Sarah Stevens, baptized May 22, 1789.

Henry Meynell, ſon of Hugo, bapt. Aug. 24, 1789.

Ann Bolaine, daughter of Mrs. Ann Bolaine of Canterbury, buried June 6, 1791.

Edward-Francis, baptized Feb. 23, 1795.

Sarah-Ann Farnham, daughter of Edward Farnham, eſq. and Harriet his wife, baptized Oct. 4, 1796.

Frances-Adeline Meynell, baptized Jan. 23, 1797.

---

[1] Who afterwards took the name of Bland.

[2] This lady dying without iſſue, Mr. Elletſon married ſecondly Anna-Eliza, ſiſter of Richard Gamon, eſq; who, ſurviving the Governor, was re-married, June 11, 1777, to James Brydges duke of Chandos.

[3] See hereafter, p. 152.

[4] Particularly two very large portraits of King William and Queen Mary, whole-lengths, in their robes; Sir Nicholas Strode and his Lady; a fine painting of Suſanna and the Elders; and ſeveral portraits of the Hyde family.

[5] June 11, 1798, Mr. Stone made a public ſhew of rams; when, within two hours, the following were let for the ſeaſon at the prices ſtated: N° 10. a ſhearling, by S. hired by Mr. Duddin, for 400*l.*; N° 11. a ſhearling, by R. hired by Mr. Coke, for 500*l.*; N° 7. a ſhearling, by R. hired by Mr. Dalby, for 200*l.*; N° 6. a ſhearling, by R. hired by Meſſ. Trueman, for 300*l.*; N° 7. a two-ſhear, by L. hired by the duke of Bedford, for 500*l.* (and to tup 20 ewes before he is ſent to his Grace); N° 9 a two-ſhear, by L. hired by Mr. Whinfield, for 300*l.* Total 2,200*l.*—N° 11. and N° 7. were the produce of one ewe.

[6] This is a miſtake for Philippa; ſee p. 103.

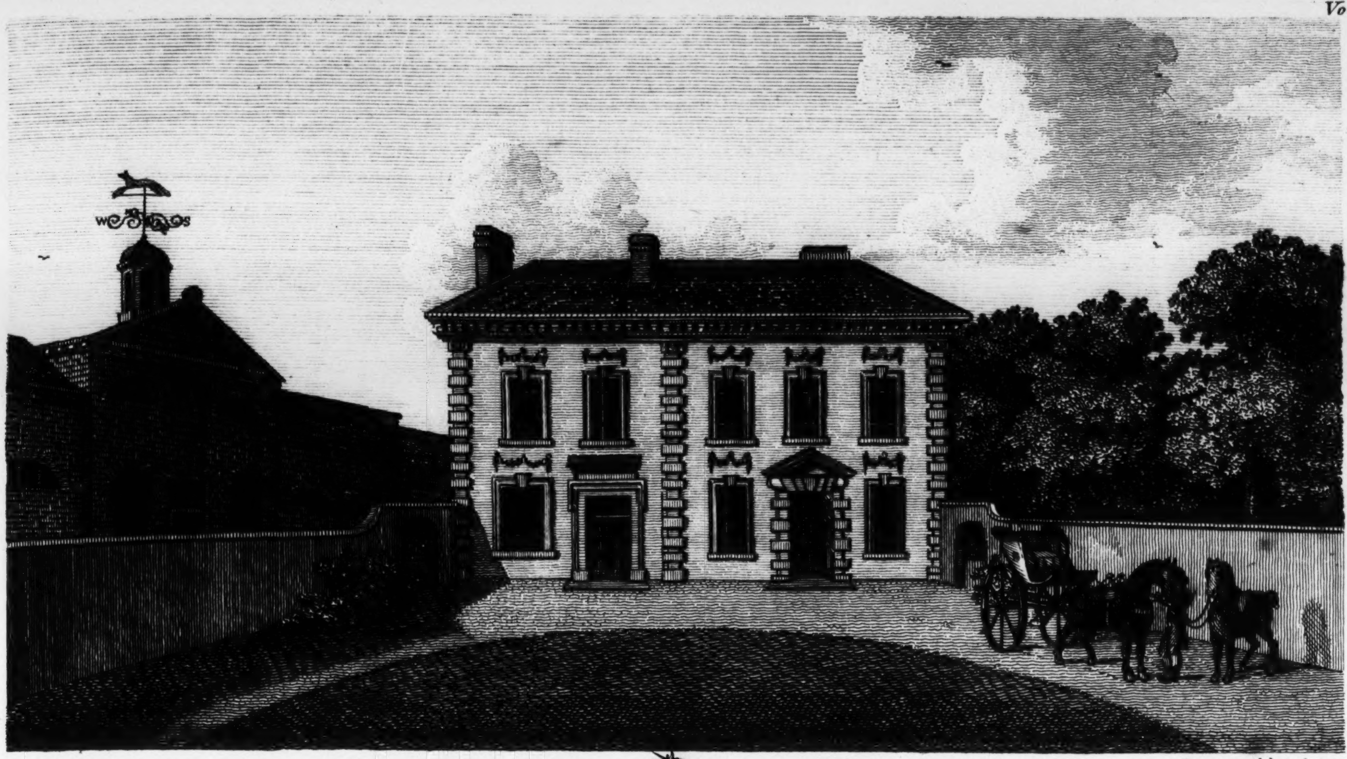
[7] Widow of Mr. Thomas Farnham.

[8] Mr. Chadwick at this time reſided in the manſion at Quorndon Hall, now Mr. Meynell's; and afterwards removed to Stanford hall, co. Notts, now Mr. Daſhwood's. He was a colonel in the army, and much eſteemed by William duke of Cumberland. He owned the greateſt part of the lordſhip of Weſt Leke in Nottinghamſhire; which now belongs to lord Middleton, who alſo lived at the old houſe there, now pulled down. By Elizabeth his wife (who was a grand-daughter of Abp. Tillotſon) he had three daughters, two of whom appear in this Regiſter. One of theſe married the late —— Sutton, of Norwood in Nottinghamſhire; another, John Whetham, eſq. of Kirklington hall, co. Notts. The other, Georgiana, was married, March 14, 1770, to Thomas Willoughby, eſq. afterwards lord Middleton; and ſecondly, Jan. 14, 1788, to Edward-Miller Munday, eſq. of Shipley in Derbyſhire, M. P. for that county; and died in July 1789. Neither of theſe ladies left iſſue, except lady Middleton, who had one daughter by her ſecond huſband Mr. Munday, now living.



Longmate del. et sc. 1793.

To SAVILLE JOHN HYDE ESQ. This View of his House, at QUORN, is inscribed by his obliged humble Servant J. Nichols.

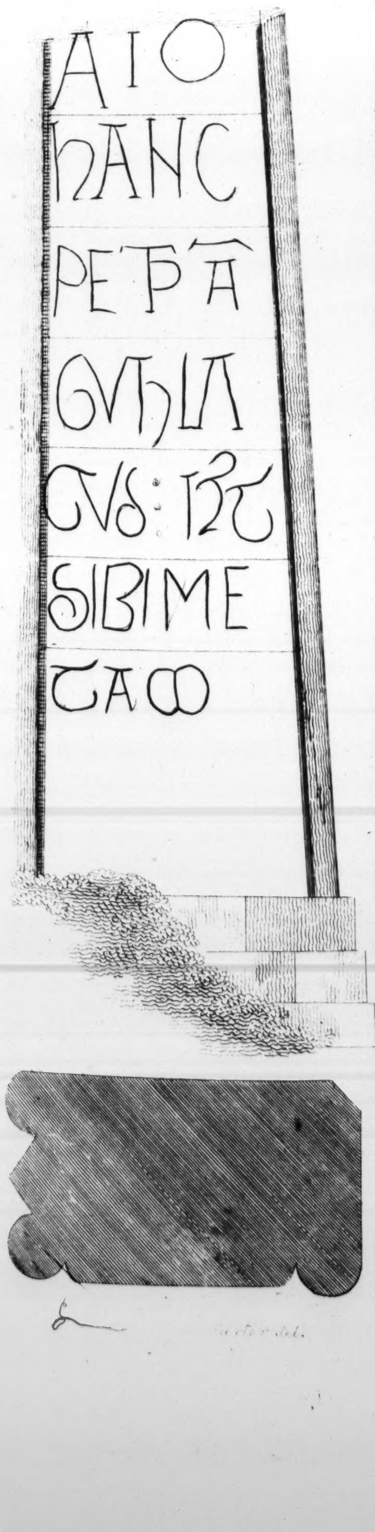
p.167.a.



AIO
HANC
PE PA
GVHLA
CVS: PZT
SIBIME TACO

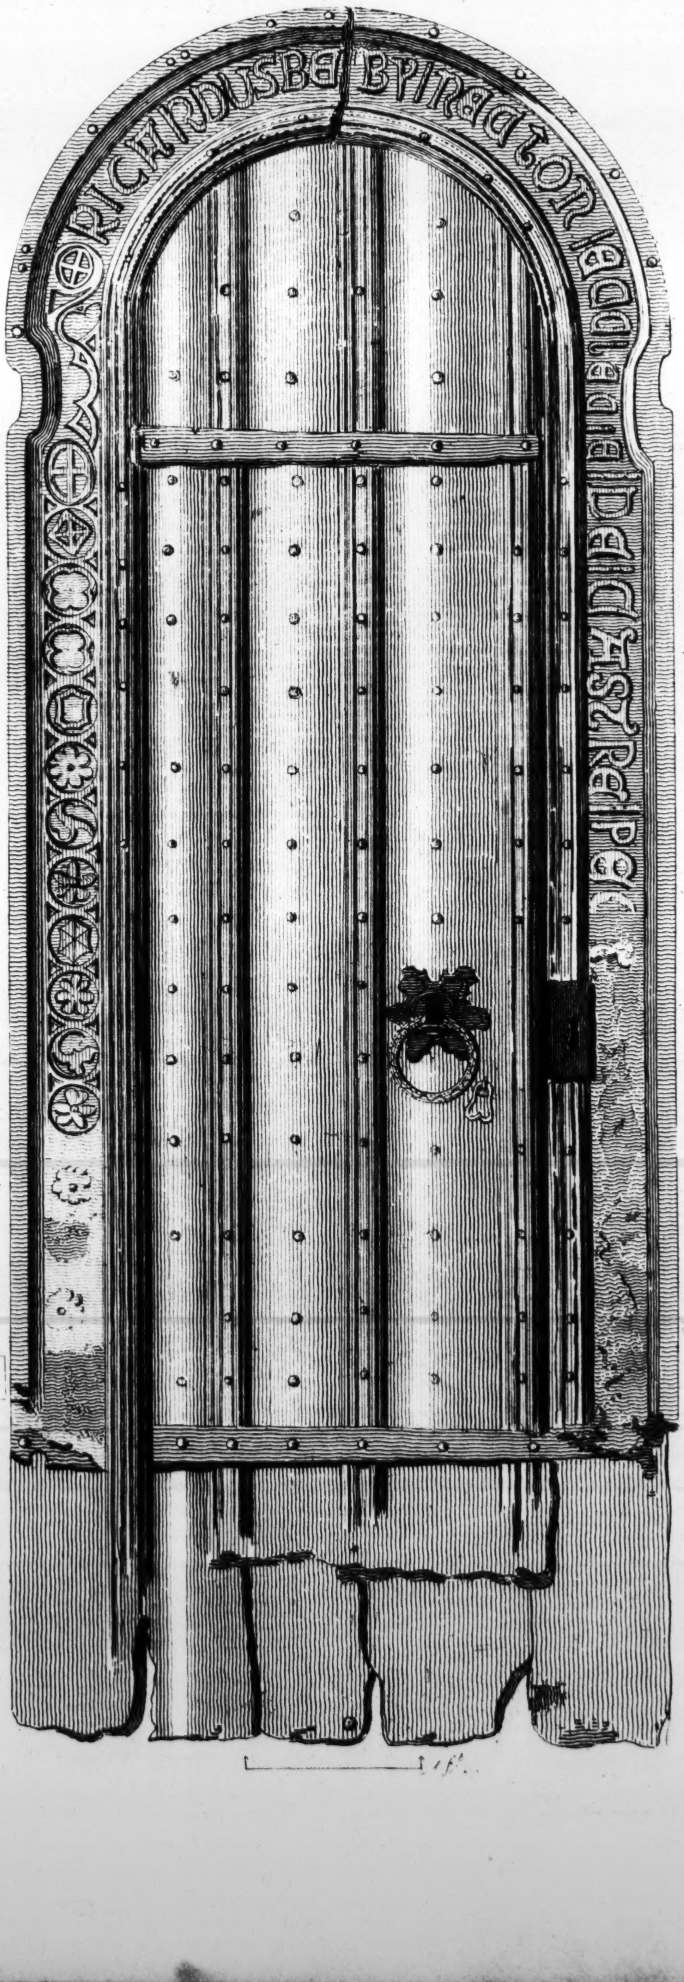
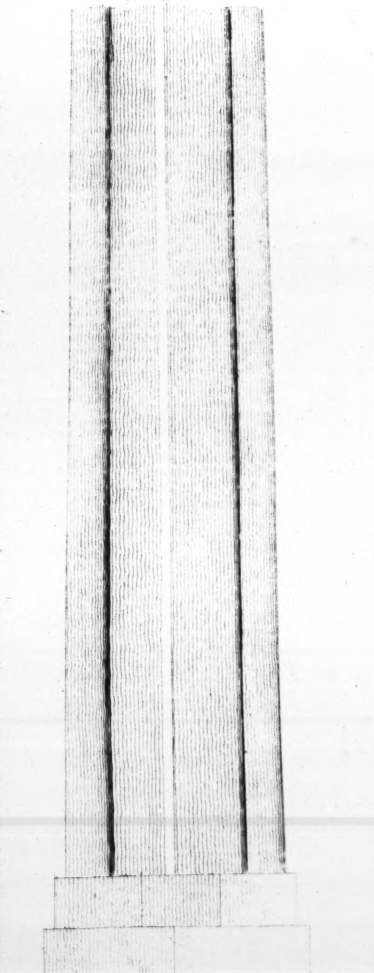
p.168.



1 f.

p.167.b.



Carter del.

[illegible]

Pedigree of FARNHAM, of QUORNDON.

(From an Original Pedigree, taken in 1597, ſigned "R Cooke, alias Clarencieulx Roy d'Armes;" and thus counterſigned: "Reviewed and entered in the time of the Viſitation of the Countie of Leiceſter, 10 September, 1619, by us, Samſ. Lennard, Blewmantle; Aug. Vincent, Rougecroix." And continued from the Viſitation at Loughborough, March 15, 1681-2, ſigned by "Henry Farnham;" and from the Regiſters of Barrow, Quorndon, and Woodhouſe.

On the Pedigrees of 1597 and 1619 are blazoned the following arms (Plate XI. fig. 21—35.):

21. Quarterly, Or and Azure, in the two firſt quarters a creſcent counterchanged. Creſt, an eagle Or, wings cloſe, preying on the back of a rabbit Argent; Farnham.

22. Farnham; impaling, Azure, three boars paſſant Or, Whatton.

23. Quarterly, Farnham and Whatton; impaling, Azure, a croſs Or between four leopards' faces Argent, Kingston.

24. Quarterly, Farnham and Whatton; impaling, Argent, on a feſs between three bears' heads eraſed Sable, muffled Or, three bezants, Langham.

25. Quarterly; Farnham and Whatton; impaling, Argent, on a feſs Sable three quatrefoils of the firſt, in chief an annulet Gules, Eyre.

26. Farnham; impaling, Gules, a fleur de lis Argent, billeté Sable, Billington.

27. Quarterly; Farnham and Billington; impaling, Argent, three bars Gules, in chief three parrots Vert, Jeke.

28. Quarterly; Farnham and Billington; impaling, Whatton.

29. Quarterly; 1. and 4. Farnham; 2. Billington; 3. Whatton; impaling, Kingston.

30. Quarterly; as before; impaling, Langham.

31. Quarterly; as before; impaling, Eyre.

32. Quarterly; as before; impaling, Argent, a croſs potence raguled Sable between four Corniſh choughs proper; Chaloner.

33. Quarterly; as before; impaling, Gules, a ſaltire Argent, Nevill.

34. Quarterly; as before; impaling, Gules, on a chevron Argent between three croſſes patée, fitché at the foot, Or; on the chevron three roſes Gules.

35. Quarterly; as before; impaling, Azure, a fleur de lis Argent, Digby.

Robert Farnham, eſq. lord of Querndon, as appears by a deed without date. = ...

Sir Robert Farnham, knt. lord of Querndon, as appears by a deed without date. = ...

Sir John Farnham, knt. was lord of Ruſhall and Querndon in the county of Leiceſter; lived temp. Edw. I. = ...

Sir Robert de Farnham, knt. [1346]. = ...

John Farnham, eſq. founder of a chantry here in 1393. = Margaret, only daughter and heir of . . . . . Billington, of Billington, co. Stafford.

1. Robert de Farnham[1], 1440. = Katharine, daughter of John Jeke, of Wikington, co. Stafford.
2. Thomas Farnham, of the Nether Hall. (See the next Pedigree, p. 104.)

1. Robert Farnham, of the Upper Hall. = Margaret, daughter and ſole heir of Robert Whatton, of Mountſorell.

Thomas Farnham, died 15 . . . = Margaret, daughter of Ralph Kingſton, of Dalby. co. Leiceſter; died 15 . . .
Three other ſons, and two daughters.

Robert Farnham, died 1561, aged more than 80. = Mary, daughter of Robert Langham, of Gopſal, co. Leiceſter.

1. Francis Farnham[2], eſq. recorder of Leiceſter 1553; died 1557. = Margaret, daughter of ſir Thomas Cave, of Stanford, knt.
Thomas Farnham, eſq. died April 2, 1574. = Anne, daughter of Richard Eyre, of Normanton, co. Notts.
Two other ſons, and two daughters.

Joan[3], mar. in 1545. = George Belgrave, eſq. of Belgrave and Blaby.
Adrian Farnham[4], eſq. of Quorndon, 1614; buried Dec. 20, 1632. = Conſtance, daughter of Edward Munday, eſq. of Markeaton, co. Derby.
Three other ſons, and two daughters.

1. Edward Farnham, eſq. ſon and heir, baptized March 3, 1593-4; married 1614; buried Jan. 11, 1654. = Iſabella, daughter of . . . . . Veſtue, of Quorndon, died 1702.
2. Thomas.
3. Robert[5].
4. Adrian, b. 1601.
5. John, b. 1607.
6. Francis[6], b. 1612.
1. Conſtance, married to John Brimſley.
2. Elizabeth, born 1595.
3. Frances, b. 1599.
4. Jane.

1. Edward Farnham, eſq. buried Sept 1, 1680. = Mary, dau. of Peter Chaveney, eſq. of Quorndon.
2. Charles Farnham, eſq. buried July 15, 1722, ſ. p. = Rebecca . . . died Oct. 12, 1724, æt. 74.
3. Benjamin, born July 15, 1656[7]; d. young, ſ. p.
1. Olive, married, at Preſtwould, to Henry Boſs, of Woodthorpe.
2. Barbara, buried Mar. 14, 1653.
3. Phœbe, b. May 29, 1654.
4. Mary, b. 1655; marr. the Rev. Cha. Lewis, M.A. curate of Preſtwould. She d. Nov. 24, 1716; he Mar. 18, 1726, æt. 71.

1. Edward Farnham, died, at the age of 19, of the ſmall-pox, at Repton-ſchool.
1. Mary, buried Dec. 27, 1753. = Francis Caulfield, gent. died March 13, 1746-7.
2. Philippa[8], baptized June 27, 1677; married October 2, 1710; buried March 25, 1767. = Edward Prior.
3. Sarah, married, in 1703, Benjamin Farnham, eſq.; and had three ſons (ſee p. 104.)
4. Phœbe, baptized May 1679; died at Mountſorell, unmarried, Sept. 1, 1766.
5. Mercy, married Edward Sculthorpe. They had, Rebecca, bapt. June 19, 1707; Edward, bapt. June 9, 1708; Anne, bapt. July 10, 1710; Charlotte, bapt. April 10, 1711.

Children of Mary and Francis Caulfield:
1. Mary, b. Oct. 3, 1698.
2. Frances-Farnham, born Feb. 2, and buried July 8, 1708.
3. Jane, baptized Jan. 29, 1711; died at Cropſton about 1795.

Children of Philippa and Edward Prior:
1. George, baptized June 22, 1711; buried Nov. 25, 1714.
2. Mary, baptized Sept. 10, 1711.
3. Philippa, baptized Sept. 5, 1714; married, Nov. 21, 1767, to the Rev. Tho. Hudſon. He died Jan. 30, 1798, æt. 58; ſhe living in her 85th year.

---

[1] The Viſitation of 1619 begins with ſir John Farnham; who had a ſon Robert, grandſon Robert, and great grandſon Robert, who was father of Robert and Thomas.

[2] Recorder of Leiceſter in 1553; and M. P. for that borough in 1553, 1554, and 1558.

[3] By Mr. (afterwards ſir George) Belgrave (whoſe third wife ſhe was) ſhe had two daughters; 1. Dorothy, married firſt to John Ravens, and afterwards to John Glaſcock; 2. Margery, married to George Eyre, of Normanton in Nottinghamſhire. Dame Joan Belgrave was afterwards re-married to Clement Saunders, eſq. of Little Bowden and Eaſt Haddon in Northamptonſhire.

[4] Good portraits of Adrian Farnham, eſq. and Conſtance his wife, are preſerved at Markeaton, now the ſeat of Francis Munday, eſq.

[5] Robert Farnham, of Quorndon, clerk, was buried at Quorn, Nov. 20, 1658.

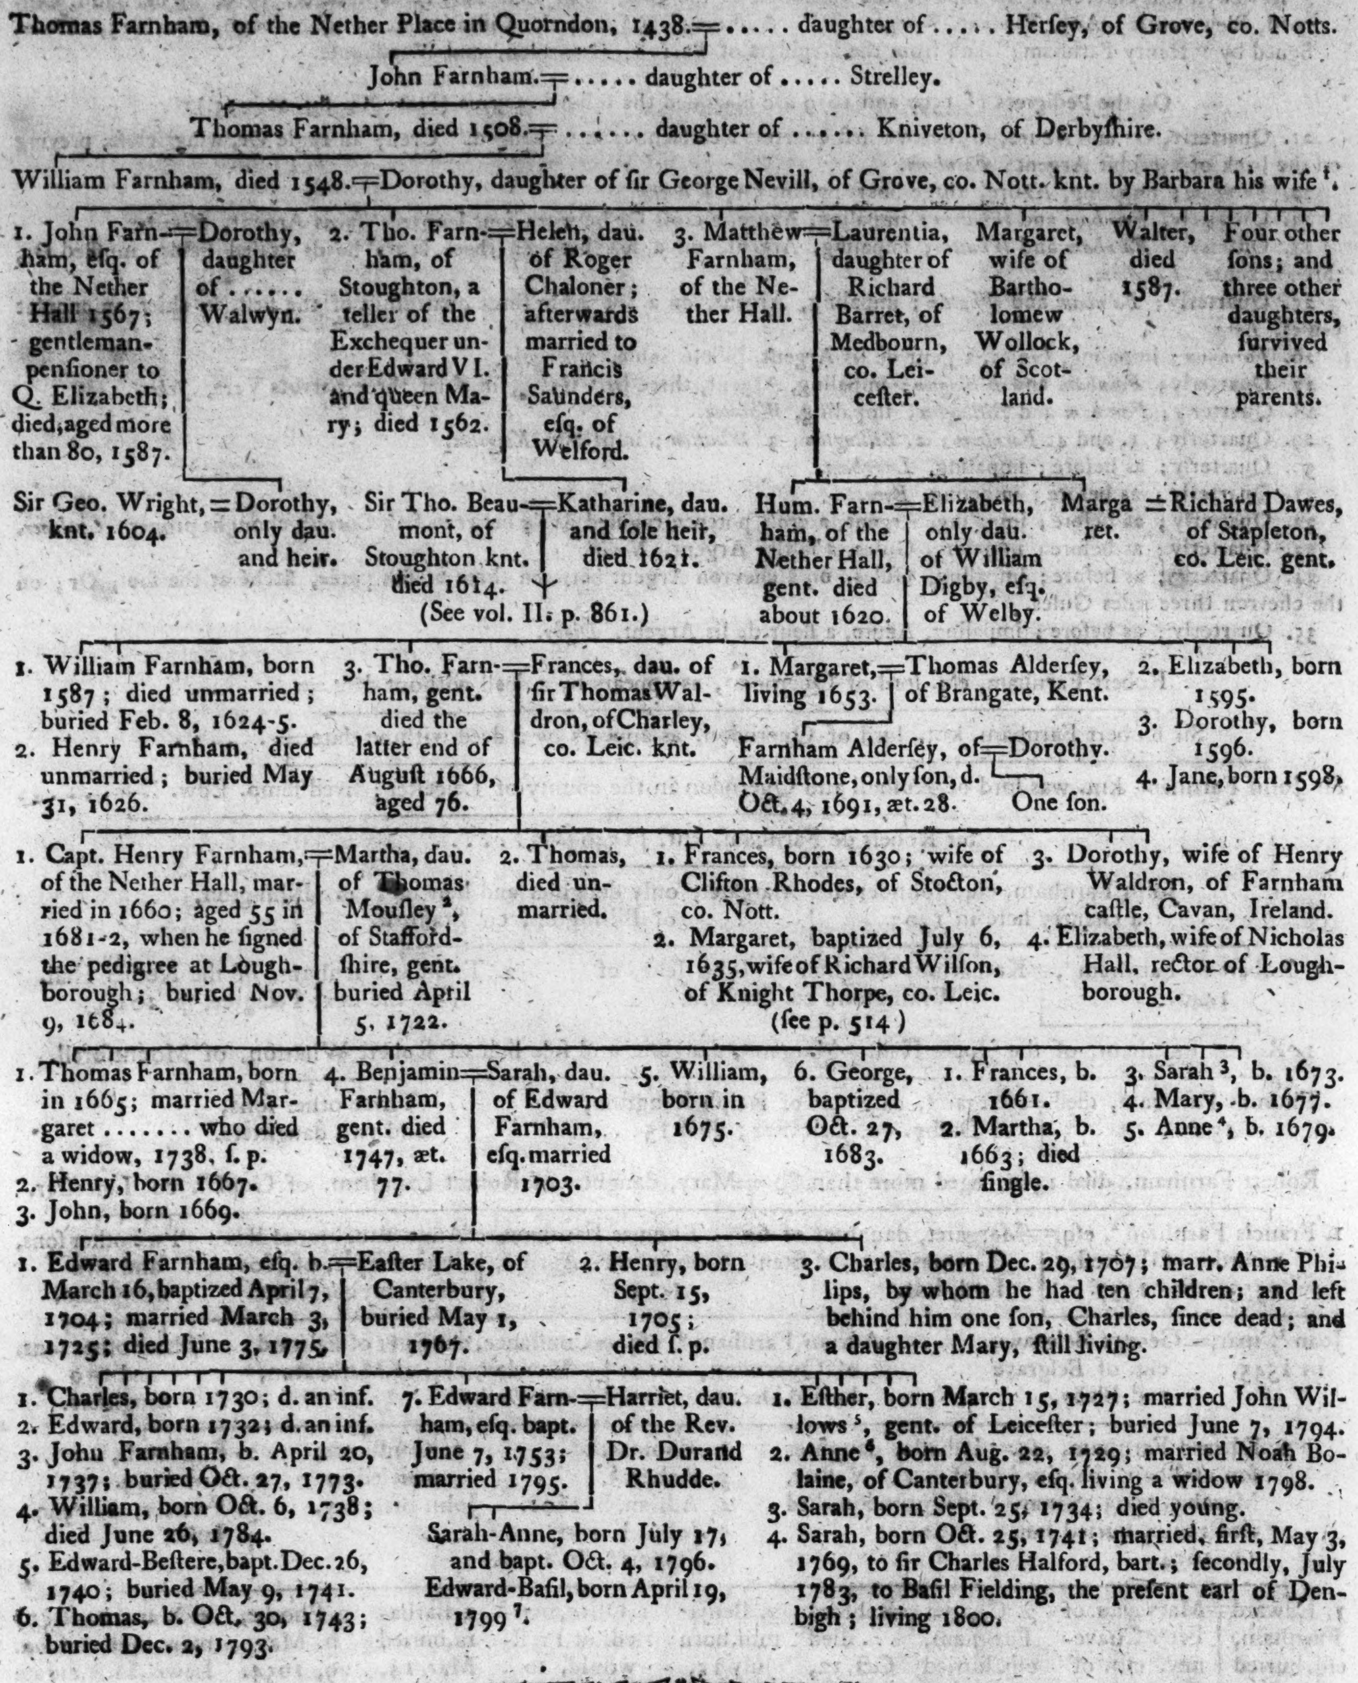
[6] He held, in 1646, a demiſe, under his brother, of £60. a year, for 99 years.

[7] So the entry appears in the Regiſter; probably a miſtake for 1665.

[8] In the Quorn Regiſter ſhe is by miſtake called Phillis.

Pedigree of FARNHAM, of the NETHER HALL, in QUORNDON.

Entered at the Viſitation at Loughborough, 15 March, 1681-2, p. 117, by Henry Farnham, of the Nether Hall, the eighth in deſcent from Thomas the ſecond ſon of John Farnham, eſq. of the Over Hall.



Thomas Farnham, of the Nether Place in Quorndon, 1438.=..... daughter of ..... Herſey, of Grove, co. Notts.

John Farnham.=..... daughter of ..... Strelley.

Thomas Farnham, died 1508.=...... daughter of ...... Kniveton, of Derbyſhire.

William Farnham, died 1548.=Dorothy, daughter of ſir George Nevill, of Grove, co. Nott. knt. by Barbara his wife[1].

1. John Farnham, eſq. of the Nether Hall 1567; gentleman-penſioner to Q. Elizabeth; died, aged more than 80, 1587.=Dorothy, daughter of ..... Walwyn.

2. Tho. Farnham, of Stoughton, a teller of the Exchequer under Edward VI. and queen Mary; died 1562.=Helen, dau. of Roger Chaloner; afterwards married to Francis Saunders, eſq. of Welford.

3. Matthew Farnham, of the Nether Hall.=Laurentia, daughter of Richard Barret, of Medbourn, co. Leiceſter.

Margaret, wife of Bartholomew Wollock, of Scotland.

Walter, died 1587.

Four other ſons; and three other daughters, ſurvived their parents.

Sir Geo. Wright, knt. 1604.=Dorothy, only dau. and heir.

Sir Tho. Beaumont, of Stoughton knt. died 1614.=Katharine, dau. and ſole heir, died 1621.

(See vol. II. p. 861.)

Hum. Farnham, of the Nether Hall, gent. died about 1620.=Elizabeth, only dau. of William Digby, eſq. of Welby.

Margaret.=Richard Dawes, of Stapleton, co. Leic. gent.

1. William Farnham, born 1587; died unmarried; buried Feb. 8, 1624-5.

2. Henry Farnham, died unmarried; buried May 31, 1626.

3. Tho. Farnham, gent. died the latter end of Auguſt 1666, aged 76.=Frances, dau. of ſir Thomas Waldron, of Charley, co. Leic. knt.

1. Margaret, living 1653.=Thomas Alderſey, of Brangate, Kent.

Farnham Alderſey, of Maidſtone, only ſon, d. Oct. 4, 1691, æt. 28.=Dorothy.

One ſon.

2. Elizabeth, born 1595.

3. Dorothy, born 1596.

4. Jane, born 1598.

1. Capt. Henry Farnham, of the Nether Hall, married in 1660; aged 55 in 1681-2, when he ſigned the pedigree at Loughborough; buried Nov. 9, 1684.=Martha, dau. of Thomas Mouſley[2], of Staffordſhire, gent. buried April 5, 1722.

2. Thomas, died unmarried.

1. Frances, born 1630; wife of Clifton Rhodes, of Stocton, co. Nott.

2. Margaret, baptized July 6, 1635, wife of Richard Wilſon, of Knight Thorpe, co. Leic. (ſee p. 514)

3. Dorothy, wife of Henry Waldron, of Farnham caſtle, Cavan, Ireland.

4. Elizabeth, wife of Nicholas Hall, rector of Loughborough.

1. Thomas Farnham, born in 1665; married Margaret .... who died a widow, 1738, ſ. p.

2. Henry, born 1667.

3. John, born 1669.

4. Benjamin Farnham, gent. died 1747, æt. 77.=Sarah, dau. of Edward Farnham, eſq. married 1703.

5. William, born in 1675.

6. George, baptized Oct. 27, 1683.

1. Frances, b. 1661.

2. Martha, b. 1663; died ſingle.

3. Sarah[3], b. 1673.

4. Mary, b. 1677.

5. Anne[4], b. 1679.

1. Edward Farnham, eſq. b. March 16, baptized April 7, 1704; married March 3, 1725; died June 3, 1775.=Eaſter Lake, of Canterbury, buried May 1, 1767.

2. Henry, born Sept. 15, 1705; died ſ. p.

3. Charles, born Dec. 29, 1707; marr. Anne Philips, by whom he had ten children; and left behind him one ſon, Charles, ſince dead; and a daughter Mary, ſtill living.

1. Charles, born 1730; d. an inf.

2. Edward, born 1732; d. an inf.

3. John Farnham, b. April 20, 1737; buried Oct. 27, 1773.

4. William, born Oct. 6, 1738; died June 26, 1784.

5. Edward-Beſtere, bapt. Dec. 26, 1740; buried May 9, 1741.

6. Thomas, b. Oct. 30, 1743; buried Dec. 2, 1793.

7. Edward Farnham, eſq. bapt. June 7, 1753; married 1795.=Harriet, dau. of the Rev. Dr. Durand Rhudde.

Sarah-Anne, born July 17, and bapt. Oct. 4, 1796.

Edward-Baſil, born April 19, 1799[7].

1. Eſther, born March 15, 1727; married John Willows[5], gent. of Leiceſter; buried June 7, 1794.

2. Anne[6], born Aug. 22, 1729; married Noah Bolaine, of Canterbury, eſq. living a widow 1798.

3. Sarah, born Sept. 25, 1734; died young.

4. Sarah, born Oct. 25, 1741; married, firſt, May 3, 1769, to ſir Charles Halford, bart.; ſecondly, July 1783, to Baſil Fielding, the preſent earl of Denbigh; living 1800.

◆

P. 74. Mr. VERE FOSTER, the ſon of a clergyman in Glouceſterſhire, was of St. John's college, Cambridge; B. A. 1718; fellow of St. John's, April 4, 1720; M. A. 1722; B. D. 1730. He was a good ſcholar, and of great wit and humour, as may be ſeen by two pleaſant letters of his, in 1722 and 1723; the one addreſſed to Mr. Bowyer, the other to Mr. Bonwicke, in Gent. Mag. vol. LXIX. p. 249. In his time, St. John's was reckoned a Tory college: and a young fellow, who was looked upon as a Whig, was appointed to ſpeak in the college-hall an oration on the 5th of November. After having dwelt ſome time upon the double deliverance of that day, in his peroration he paſſed from king William to king George, on whom he beſtowed great encomium. When the ſpeech was over, Mr. Foſter and the young orator being at table together; ſays the former to the latter, "I did not imagine, ſir, that you would decline King George in your ſpeech."—'Decline! what do you mean? I ſpoke very largely and handſomely of him.'—"That is what I mean too, ſir; for, you had him in every caſe and termination; Georgius-gii-gio-gium, O Georgi."—He was preſented to the vicarage of Barrow in 1732; died there in October 1756; and was buried, by his own deſire, in one of the church-yard paths, without a ſtone, or any memorial.

P. 101. Leland, in his Itinerary[8], notices "one Menelle, a gentilman of reputation in Darbyſhire, owner of Langley," &c.—Francis Meynell, eſq. citizen and goldſmith, of London, was elected alderman of Alderſgate ward in 1660, and ſworn into office Sept. 25[9].

---

[1] One of the eight ſiſters to whom ſir John Herſey, of Grove, knight, (who died in 1570), left his large property. Her mother, Elizabeth Herſey, was daughter to ſir John Digby, of Eyekettleby.

[2] Mr. Mouſley was an attorney at Loughborough, and died Jan. 17, 1665, æt. 48. See his epitaph at Loughborough.

[3] Married to ſir —— Gething, an Iriſh baronet; and afterwards to Mr. Boyle.

[4] Married in 1738 to Mr. William Stevens, of Quorndon. See the epitaphs, p. 108.

[5] Mr. Willows left two ſons (one of them, John Willows, eſq. a very conſiderable wholeſale manufacturer at Leiceſter; the other, Thomas Willows, M. A. of Emanuel College, Cambridge, the preſent vicar of Wiſtowe); and one daughter.

[6] Anne Bolaine, a daughter of this lady, died at Briſtol, of a conſumption, in June 1791; and was buried in the family vault at Quorndon. See Gent. Mag. vol. LXI. p. 596.

[7] Sponſors, the preſent Earl and Counteſs of Denbigh; and his relation Mr. Keck, the member for the county, who is deſcended from Catharine, daughter of Thomas Farnham, eſq. teller of the exchequer to queen Mary; of whom ſee before, p. 97; and his epitaph, vol. II. p. 854.

[8] Vol. IV. p. 17.

[9] City Records.

The CHAPEL (ſee Plate XI.)

dedicated to St. Bartholomew, conſiſts of a ſtumpy tower (in which are ſix bells, which were caſt about 20 years ago); a chancel; and a nave ſeparated from the two ailes by four ſemicircular arches, ſurmounted by clereſtory windows. The roof of the South porch is ſupported with a groined arch.

Mr. Wyrley, in 1590, found here theſe arms[1]:

1. Quarterly; 1. and 4. Sable, a croſs engrailed Or, Ufford; 2. and 3. Gules, a croſs moline Arg. Beke; impaling, Gules, three lions paſſant in pale Arg. Gifford.

2. Azure, ſemé de fleurs de lis, a lion rampant Or, Beaumont; impaling Ufford and Beke.

3. Gules, ſeven maſcles voided conjoined Or; Quincey.

4. Azure, billetté, a feſs dancetté Or, Deincourt; impaling Beaumont.

5. Gules, a croſs double fitché Argent.

6. Quarterly, Per feſs indented Argent and Gules; in the two firſt quarters two croſs croſslets fitché counterchanged.

7. Azure, ſemé de fleur de lis, a lion rampant Or; Beaumont.

8. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant, in pale Or, a label of France; Edmund earl of Lancaſter.

9. Or, three piles Gules, a canton Ermine; Baſſet of Drayton.

10. Azure, ten bezants.

11. Azure, two lions paſſant in pale Or; Erdington.

12. Vaire, Argent and Gules; De la Beche.

13. Argent, cruſuly of croſs croſslets Gules, nine torteauxes; impaling, Argent, on a chevron Sable, three knots of three annulets interlaced Or.

14. Gifford.

15. Quarterly, Argent and Gules; in the two firſt quarters two mullets counterchanged; Farnham.

Here is a new and neat altar-piece of wood, painted well in imitation of marble; and the church has been lately pewed, and looks very neat.

At the Eaſt end of the South aile is a chapel appropriated to the family of Farnham; and another in the North aile called The Wellows Chancel (now the property of the Rev. Thomas Willows, vicar of Wiſtow); in which is the piſcina ſhewn in Plate XVI. fig. 16.

The font, which is octagon, on cluſtered pillows, is given in fig. 17.

This church was originally a chapelry to Barrow; and belonged to the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis.

"Habemus capellam de Querndon, ex dono Ranulfi comitis Ceſtrie, & ex confirmatione regis Henrici II. cum decimis garbarum & feni, &c. cum medietate altaragii, & omnium minutarum decimarum; que debet deſerviri tribus diebus in ebdomade per matricem eccleſiam de Baro, ut liquidè patet in Matriculo ep̄i. Sed modò habetur ibi plena cantaria, ſicut patet in indenturâ que eſt in ii° libro de Chartwary[2]."

In 1328, ſir John Hamelyn of Wymondham was the founder of a chantry in St. Peter's chapel at Quorndon:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum regis nec aliorum, ſi rex concedat Johanni Hamelyn, quòd ipſe unum meſſuagium & unam virgatam terre, cum pertinentiis, in Wymondham, in com' Leic', dare poſſet cuidam capellano divina in capellâ S. Petri de Burgh in perpetuum celebraturo; & quòd viginti libre terre & redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in Wymondham, tenentur de comite Lancaſtrie per ſervitium militare; & decem libre terre, cum pertinentiis, in Barrowe ſuper Sore, tenentur de Henrico de Erdinton, milite, per ſervitium vi đ. per annum[3]."

And, in 1392, "Juratores dicunt quòd non eſt ad dampnum, ſi rex concedat Johanni de Farnham, quòd ipſe unum meſſuagium & duas virgatas terre, cum pertin', in Querndon; & Johanni Smyth, quòd ipſe unum toftum & unum cotagium, cum pertin', in eâdem villâ de Querndon; & Johanni Herbert, quòd ipſe unum cotagium, cum pertin', in eâdem villâ de Querndon; dare poſſint cuidam capellano divina in capellâ de Querndon celebraturo; & quòd predicta meſſuagia, terre, toftum, & unum cotagium de cotagiis predictis, cum pertin', tenentur de Joh̄e de Bellomonte per ſervicium 11s̄. per annum; & ipſe de d̄no rege in capite, per quod ſervicium ignorant; & aliud cotagium de cotagiis predictis, cum pertin', tenetur de Joh̄e de Farnham per ſervicium vi đ. per annum; & ipſe de Joh̄e de Bellomonte, & ipſe de d̄no rege; & remanet ultra eiſdem, &c. ad valenciam x lī.[4]"

This chantry, in another record, is ſaid to have been founded "by one Thomas [John] Farnham, for one prieſt to ſing maſs within the chapel of Quarindon, and to celebrate all ſacraments and ſacramentals, which is within a hamlet called Quarindon within the pariſh of Barrow aforeſaid, and a mile diſtant from the pariſh-church. Alſo the ſame hamlet is a thoroughfare, and many people dwelling therein; and between the ſame and the pariſh-church runneth a water called Soare, divers times in the year ſo high that the pariſhioners of the ſame hamlet can have no paſſage to their ſaid pariſh church without great jeopardy and in peril of their lives." This chantry had a clear yearly income, 37 Hen. VIII, of 4*l.* 4*s.* 9½*d.*[5]

Margaret Belgrave, who died in 1434, bequeathed 13*s.* 4*d.* "fabrice corporis eccleſie parochialis Sc̄i Bartholomei de Quorndon, in com' Leic', ubi fui Chriſtiana[6]."

In 1534, Ralph Coſby was the chantry-prieſt here, with a ſalary of 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

"Terre & poſſeſſiones nuper cantarie de Quadrington, infra parochiam de Barrowe, com' Leic':

Tenent' ad voluntatem valent in Redditu unius domûs, cum certis terris ibidem, in tenurâ Willi Raſin, de anno in annum, reddendo indè per annum 34s̄. 10đ.

Redditu unius meſſuagii, cum certis terris ibidem, in tenurâ Willi Ellis, de anno in annum, ad voluntatem, reddendo per annum 16s̄. 1đ. ob̄.

Redditu unius alii meſſuagii, cum certis terris & tenementis ibidem, in tenurâ Willi Lowe, de anno in annum, reddendo indè per annum — — 14s̄. 2đ.

Redditu unius alii meſſuagii, cum certis terris & tenementis ibidem, in tenurâ Willi Symſon, de anno in annum, reddendo indè per annum — — 13s̄. 4đ.

Redditu ſex acrarum terre arabilis ibidem, in tenurâ Agnetis Ebbe, de anno in annum, ad voluntatem, reddendo indè per annum 3s̄.

Redditu unius cotagii, in tenurâ Elliſt Boodde de anno in annum, ad voluntatem, reddendo indè per annum — 4s̄.

Redditu unius alii cotagii, &c. in tenurâ Willi . . . . . . ad voluntatem, reddendo indè per annum — — 6s̄. 8đ.

4lī. 12s̄. 1đ. ob̄.

Dom' manſ' valet, in proficuis domûs, manſionis, cum gardino ante cantariam, per annum 5s̄.

Summa totalis hujus valoris, 4lī. 17s̄. 1đ. ob̄.

Repriſ' in Solut' annuatim domino marchioni Dorſet, pro capitali redditu exeunt' de domo in tenurâ Willi Raſyn, — — 2s̄.

Solut' annuatim Waltero Smyth, militi, pro capitali redditu exeunte de domo in tenurâ Allani Lowe, — — 2đ.

Solut' annuatim domino Barkeley, pro capitali redditu exeunte de domo in tenurâ Willi Ellis, — — 1đ. ob̄.

Solut' annuatim domino de Barkeley pro capitali redditu exeunte de domo in tenurâ Willi Raſin xđ.

3s̄. 1đ. ob̄.

Et ſic remanet clarè per annum 4lī. 14s̄.

JOHANNES BEAUMONT.

"4° die Julii, anno ſecundo regis Edwardi, pro [Thomâ] Farnham[7].

"My lorde protectour's grace's pleaſure is, that [Thomas] Farnham ſhall have in firme the premiſſes; and therefore commaundeth that a leaſe be made to hym of the ſame for xxi yeres under the ſeale of the Court of Augmentation, yeildinge to the kyng's majeſtie the ſaid yerelie rent according to ſuche order the other leaſſes uſe to be paſt in the ſame Courte[8]."

---

[1] See Plate XVI. fig. 1—15.

[2] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxii. b.

[3] Peck, MSS. 4938; ex Inq. ad quod dampnum 5 Edw. III.

[4] Peck, ibid. ex Inq. ad quod dampnum 16 Ric. II. pars 2. N° 97.

[5] Certif. Colleg, & Cantar. Offic. Augment.

[6] See hereafter, under Belgrave.

[7] Of whom, ſee p. 196.

[8] Harl. MSS. 605. p. 32.

The great and ſmall tithes of Quorndon, with 141 acres of land in Quorndon and Barrow, were purchaſed in 1595 by William Herrick, eſq.; whoſe ſon ſold the great tithes in 1655 to Thomas Coppin[1], eſq. of the Inner Temple, and William Courteen, eſq. The ſmall tithes remained in the family till about the year 1720.

"Feb. 18, 1647-8. Upon complaint made by Richard Raven[2], miniſter of Quorndon, co. Leiceſter, that he can receive no fruit of the order of the 21ſt of May laſt, whereby £40. a year was granted out of the impropriation of Diſhley, within the ſaid county, for increaſe of his maintenance, in regard of an order of the 28th of June laſt, whereby an augmentation was likewiſe granted out of the ſaid rectory to Mr. Angel[3], miniſter in Leiceſter: For that the ſaid augmentation was firſt granted to the ſaid Mr. Raven, it is ordered that the ſame be paid in the firſt place, unleſs the ſaid Mr. Angel ſhew good cauſe to the contrary, on the 16th day of March next, before this Committee[4].

Martii 30, 1648. Whereas this Committee, the 18th of February laſt, ordered that the £40. a year, granted out of the impropriation of Diſhley, co. Leiceſter, to Mr. Richard Raven, miniſter of Quorndon, in the ſaid county, ſhould be paid to the ſaid Mr. Raven in the firſt place, before the augmentation granted out of the ſaid impropriation to Mr. Angel, miniſter in Leiceſter, ſhould be paid to him, unleſs the ſaid Mr. Angel ſhewed good cauſe to the contrary before this Committee on the 16th day of March inſtant: For that this Committee are now informed, by the counſel of the ſaid Mr. Raven, that the ſaid Mr. Angel is content, and ſubmitteth to the payment of the ſaid forty pounds a year to the ſaid Mr. Raven in the firſt place; it is therefore ordered, that the ſaid £40 a year be in the firſt place paid to the ſaid Mr. Angel; which the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay accordingly[5].

Maii 15, 1649. Whereas this Committee have, the 6th of March, 1646, granted forty pounds a year out of two parts of the tithes and profits of the impropriate rectory of Diſhley (aliàs Dixley) and Garradon, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Cicely counteſs dowager of Rutland, recuſant, for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this Committee ſhould approve of, to officiate in the parochial chapel of Quorndon, in the ſaid county; and ſince, viz. the 21ſt day of May, 1647, ordered that the ſaid forty pounds a year ſhould be paid to Richard Raven, then miniſter of the ſaid chapel, for an increaſe of his maintenance; and the ſaid Mr. Raven deceaſed about the Lady-day laſt: It is ordered, that Mrs. Raven, relict of the ſaid Mr. Raven, ſhall have a proportionable part of the ſaid forty pounds a year for the time that the ſaid Mr. Raven officiated the ſaid cure; which the Committee of the ſaid county are deſired to ſee paid unto her accordingly: And it is farther ordered, that the ſaid forty pounds a year be continued to ſuch miniſters as ſhall, by order of the ſaid Committee, officiate the cure of the ſaid church from time to time hereafter[6].

Oct. 10, 1649. Whereas this Committee have, the ſixth of March, 1646, ordered that the yearly ſum of forty pounds ſhould be paid out of two parts of the tithes and profits of the impropriate rectory of Dixley and Garradon, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Cicely counteſs dowager of Rutland, recuſant, to and for the increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this Committee ſhould appoint to officiate in the parochial church of Quorndon, in the ſaid county: It is ordered, that Mr. London, late miniſter of the ſaid chapel, ſhall have all arrears of the ſaid augmentation which became due and payable for and during ſuch time as the ſaid Mr. London officiated the cure of the ſaid chapel; and that before any payment be out of the profits of the ſaid impropriation to any other miniſter by virtue of an order of this Committee bearing date ſince the ſaid 6th of March, 1646. And the Committee of the ſaid county are hereby deſired to ſee the ſame forthwith paid unto the ſaid Mr. London accordingly[7].

In 1650, the chaplain was returned as "no preacher."

March 5, 1650. Whereas this Committee have, the 6th of March, 1646, granted forty pounds a year out of the tithes of the impropriate rectory of Diſhley (aliàs Dixley) and Garradon, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Cicely counteſs dowager of Rutland, for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſters as this Committee ſhould approve of; to officiate the cure of the church of Barrow and Quorndon, in the ſaid county: It is ordered, that the commiſſioners for ſequeſtration in the ſaid county do, and they are hereby required to pay the ſaid forty pounds a year, from time to time hereafter, unto John Geſnold, the 2d of July laſt ſettled miniſter of the ſaid church, according to the act of parliament in that behalf[8]."

This was but a temporary augmentation. By a more permanent fund, the bounty of Queen Anne, the preſent valuation of the perpetual curacies of Quorndon and Woodhouſe, to which the vicar of Barrow regularly appoints, is now about £130. a year.

A farm in Wartnaby is ſettled on the curacy of Quorn.

In December, 1766, ſome villains broke into the chapel at Quorndon, and robbed it of the communion-plate and linen, viz. a ſilver cup and cover, a table cloth and napkin, with a breadth of a new ſurplice, ſuppoſed to have been torn off to wrap up the booty.

Table of Benefactions.

"Several houſes, tenements, and buildings, known by the name of Town Houſes, ſituate in Quorndon, together with ſeveral pieces and parcels of ground, eſtimated at 25 acres, lying and being in the lordſhip of Quorndon, were given in truſt for charitable uſes to the townſhip of Quorndon. The donor's name unknown. The ſaid houſes and lands were conveyed by William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, the laſt ſurviving truſtee (by a deed[9] bearing date July 11, 1760), to Hugo Meynell, Thomas Babington, Edward Farnham, and John Hyde, eſqrs.; Samuel Stevens, gent.; rev. Richard Hurd (now biſhop of Worceſter), rev. George Cardale, D. D. (then vicar of Rothley), rev. William Burrow, rev. Moor Scribo; Thomas Squire, John Snappes, Mr. James and Mr. Samuel Sculthorpe, Mr. Thomas Chapman, and John Bradſhaw; in truſt, to diſpoſe of the rents and profits of the ſaid eſtate for the uſes they had formerly been, which had from immemorial cuſtom been as follow:

"To pay the curate of Quorndon for the time being £12. per annum. The reſidue of the rents and profits to be laid out in the repairs of bridges, and other charities, at the diſcretion of the truſtees.

"Mrs. Margaret Kaye, of Blyth in the county of Nottingham, and relict of Richard Kaye, of Bamborough, in the county of York, clerk, by her will bearing date Dec. 5, 1691, bequeathed an eſtate in Quorndon to her couſin, Charles Farnham, eſq. chargeable with the payment of 30*s. per annum* to the poor of Quorndon for ever."

"John Willows, late of the borough of Leiceſter, gent. by his will bearing date Sept. 15, 1774, gave £50. in truſt; to place the ſame out at intereſt, and to apply the intereſt in the purchaſe of bread, to be diſtributed annually on Chriſtmas-day to the poor of Quorndon for ever."

[Mr. Thomas Rawlins's gift to Quorndon is deſcribed at large under Woodhouſe, p. 119.]

So lately as about the year 1720, there were no perſons at Quorndon who could be denominated poor; but it is ſaid that 6*d*. a week was then given to one old woman, to prevent the hamlet's being taxed to the poors rates of Loughborough.

---

[1] Who held them in 1673, on a fee-farm rent of £8.

[2] He occurs miniſter here in 1642.—The orders of May 21, and June 23, are not entered in any of the volumes.

[3] See farther on this head under St. Martin's pariſh in Leiceſter.

[4] MS. Bodl. NE. E. 3. 13. fol. 15.

[5] MS. Bodl. ubi ſupra, fol. 145. b.

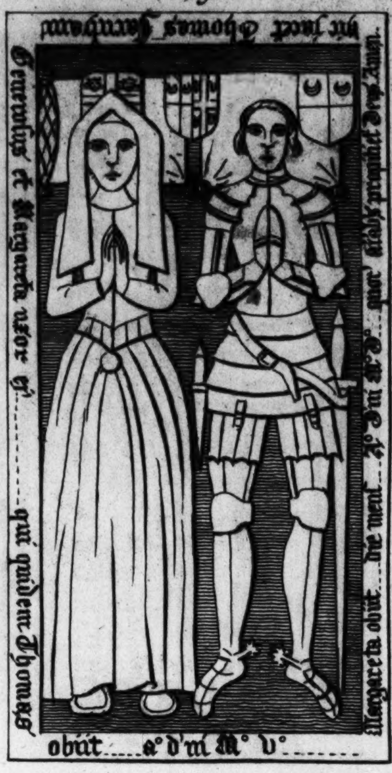
[6] Ibid. fol. 175.

[7] Ibid. fol. 177. b.

[8] Ibid. ubi ſupra, NE. E. 3. 16.

[9] A deed for renewal of the ſaid truſt, dated Dec. 27, 1782 (the lordſhip of Quorndon having been ſome time ſince incloſed), recites, that Samuel Stevens, George Cardale, Thomas Squire, Samuel Sculthorpe, and John Bradſhaw, were dead; and, in order to make up the number of truſtees, Hugo Meynell, John Hyde, Richard Hurd, William Barrow, Moor Scribo, John Simpſon, James Sculthorpe, and Thomas Chapman, the ſurviving truſtees, choſe William Farnham, Edward Farnham, party to the ſaid deed, Thomas Stevens, William Stevens, Thomas Hudſon, Saville Hyde, James Sculthorpe the younger, Thomas Bradſhaw, and Ward Cox, to ſucceed the ſaid Truſtees ſo dead, to diſpoſe of the rents and profits of the ſaid eſtate, for the uſes they had formerly been. The land is eſtimated, in the award, at 25 acres, one rood, and 28 perches.

Fig. 18.



hic jacet Thomas Farnham
Generosus et Margareta uxor ejus qui quidem Thomas obiit ... a° d'ni M° V° ...
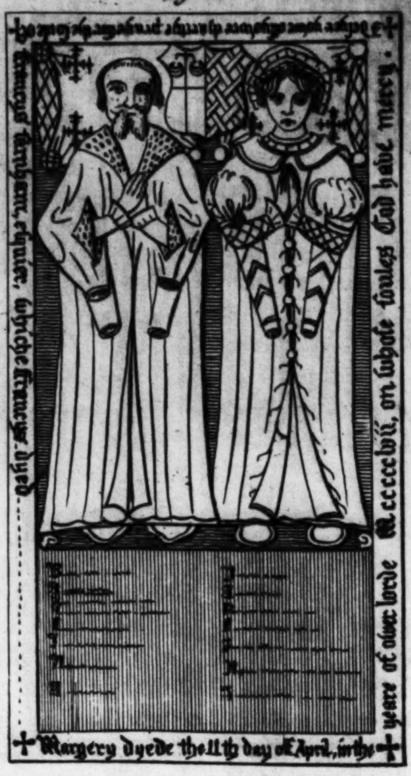
Margareta obiit ... die mens ... A° d'ni M° ... quor' a'iab' propicietur deus amen

Fig. 20.



Of your charitie pray for the soules of
Thomas Farnham, Esquire, whiche deceased the ... daye Margery dyede the 11th day of April, in the yeere of our lorde MCCCCCxvi, on whose soules God have mercy

Fig. 19.

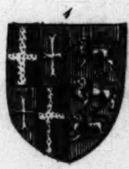
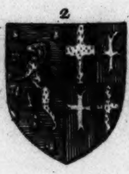
Pray you of your charitie to praye for the soule of Robert Farnham, Esquier, and Marye his wyfe, whiche Robert dyed the 21 daye of Marche in the yere of oure lorde ... on whose soules god have mercy

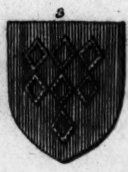
1



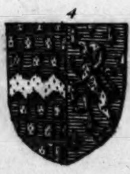
2



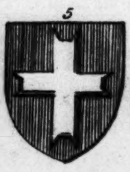
3



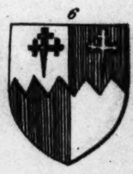
4



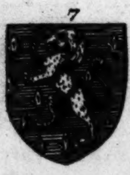
5



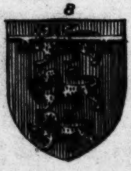
6



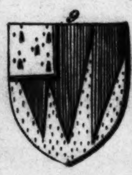
7



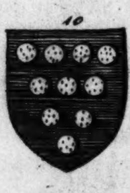
8



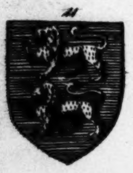
9



10



11



12

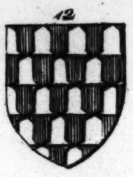


Fig. 25.

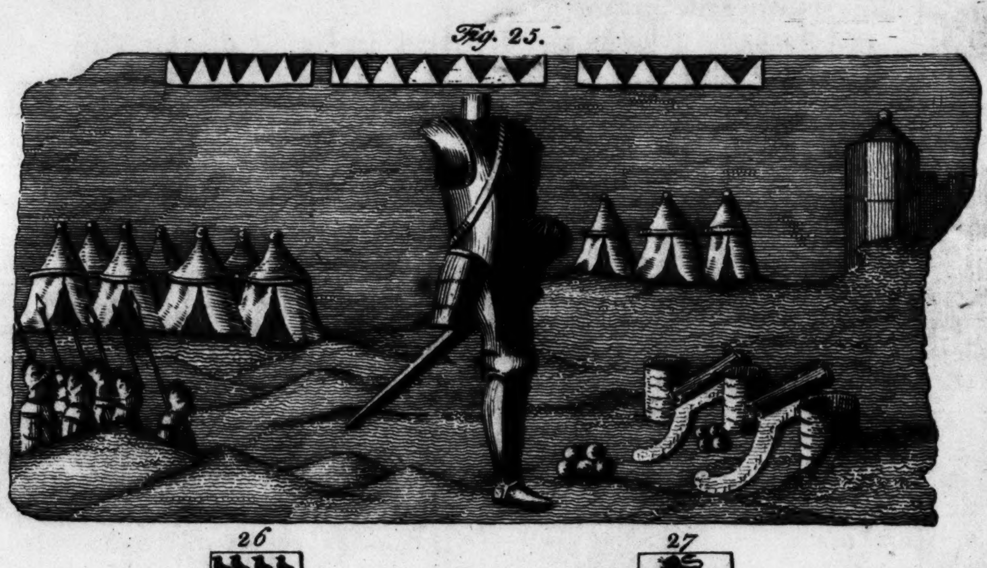

13

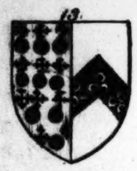

Fig. 17.

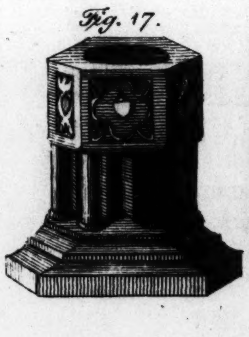

Fig. 16.

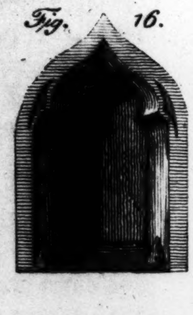

Fig. 21.

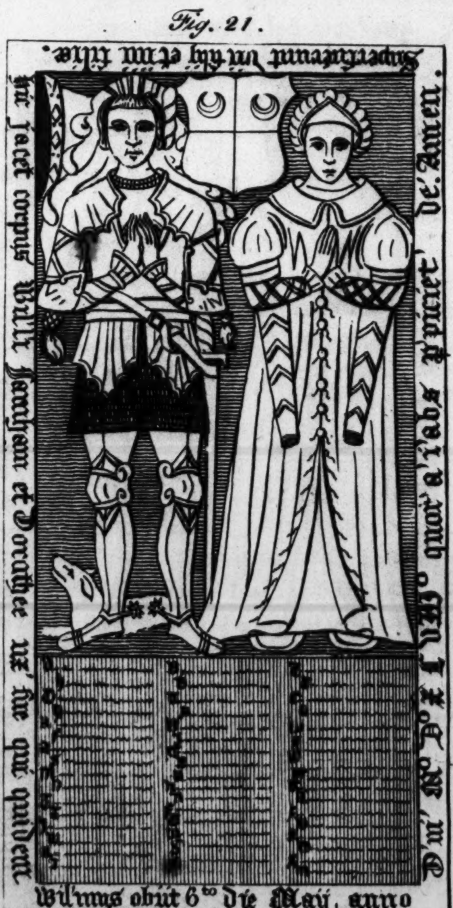

Supervixerunt ... filie.
hic jacet corpus Will'i Farnham et Dorothee ux' sue qui quidem Wil'mus obiit 6to die May, anno
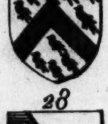
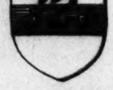
D'ni M CCCCC XL ... quor' a'iab' p'piciet' De' Amen

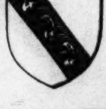
26



27



28



29

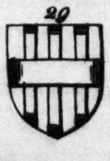


Fig. 24.

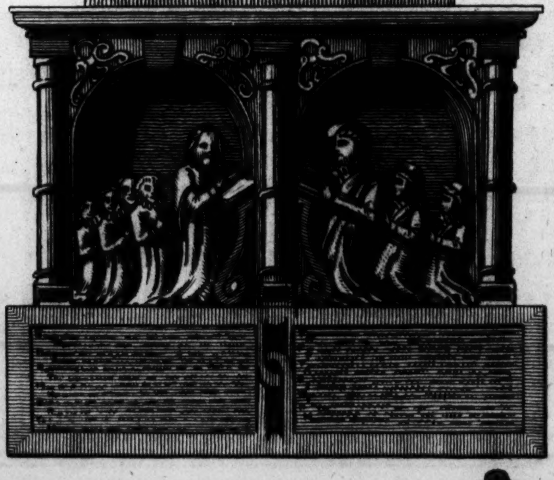

Fig. 22.

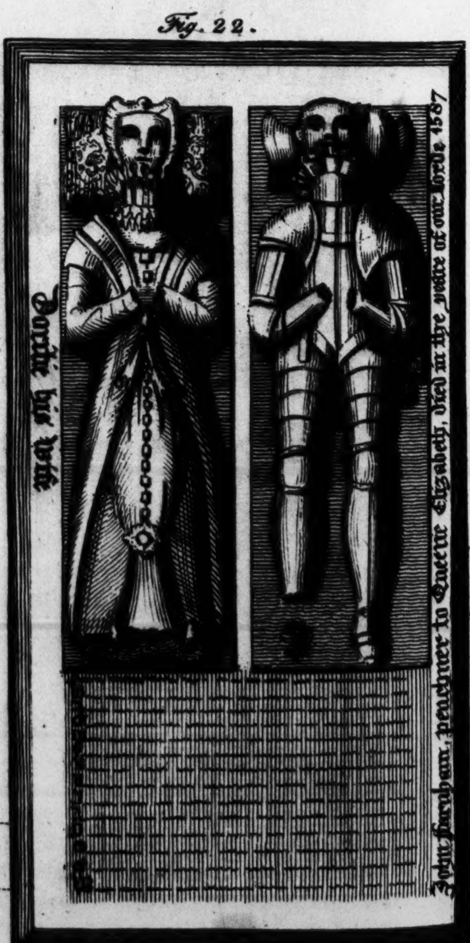
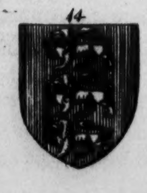
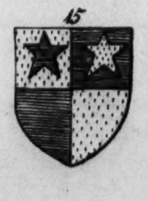


Dorothe his wife
John Farnham, gentleman, servaunt to Queene Elizabeth, died in the yeare of our lorde 1587

14



15



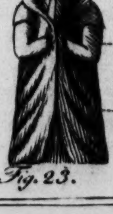


Fig. 23.

Longmate del. et sculp. 1794.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

1. In a chancel appropriated to the Farnham family, at the Eaſt end of the South aile, on an altar tomb, Plate XVI. fig. 18, is a knight in plated armour, with ſword and dagger; his hair cut ſhort, and his head reclined on a cuſhion. On his right, a lady in veil head-dreſs, cloſe gown, and belt; her head alſo on a cuſhion. Over them the arms of Farnham, impaling Kyngston.

"Hic jacet Thomas Farnham, ge-nēroſus, et Margareta uxor ej' . . . .
qui quidem Thomas obiit . . . . . . a° d'ni M° V° Margareta obiit . . . die menſ . . . . A° D'ni M° V° . . . .
quor' a'i'ab's propitiet' Deus. Amen."

2. On an altar tomb oppoſite the former one, fig. 19, a man in cropt hair, with a divided beard; gown faced with fur; long ſleeves, and cuffs like ruffles; his head on a cuſhion, on which are four croſſes. On his left, a lady in cloſe head-dreſs, and cloſe gown, faſtened before with tapes, but open below the waiſt. Below the elbows are long puffed ſleeves, from which iſſue ſmall ones ending in ruffles. Her head reſts on a cuſhion charged with croſſes; between them are the arms of Farnham, impaling Langham; and on the left ſide of his head the arms of Farnham quarterly.

"I deſſire you of your charytye to praye for the ſoule of Robert ffarnham, eſquier, and Marye his wyfe, whych Robert dyed the xxi daye of Marche, in the yere of ower Lorde m° v° lxi, of whoſe ſoules god have marcy.
They had iiii ſonnes and ii doughters."

[See the verſes on this tomb in p. 96.]

3. On another altar tomb, at the head of the firſt, fig. 20, an old man, with a divided beard; habited nearly like the preceding one; on his left, a lady, habited ſomething like the lady on that tomb, the only difference being in the head-dreſs; the ſame kind of cuſhions alſo with croſſes under their heads; and between are the arms of Farnham, with a label of three; impaling, Azure, fretty, Argent, Cave.

✠ "I deſyer yowe off yowre charitye praye ffor the ſoule of ffrancys farnham, eſquier, whiche diede
✠ the xith daye off April, in the yeare of ower lorde
Mccccclvii whoſe ſoule God have mercy.

Beholde the . . . .
And what . . . . . .
No ſtable ſtate nor . . . .
For as a flower . . . .
For prove this courſe to . . . . .
By no myſchance nor . . . .
A ſkylful tower of . . . .
The juſtyce ther did . . . .
A loſſe to all his . . . .
O cruell death . . . .
He left a ſynfull . . . .
A pleaſaunt chaunge good happ to hym
Nowe ſe thende of youth and age, which . . . .
And as he dyed he uprighte lyved to yelde a joyfull . . . ."

4. On an alabaſter ſtone on the floor are faint traces of a man in armour; on his right, a lady in gown with long ſleeves, and ſix children; and round them:

"Here lyeth the bodye of Thomas Farnham, eſquier, which Thomas dyed the ſecond day of April in the yere of our lord a thouſand five hundred three ſcore and fourtene."

5. In the North aile, on an altar tomb, fig. 21, a man in armour, with cropt hair, helmet under his head, and ſword by his ſide, at his feet a dog; on his left, a lady habited nearly like the former ones. Between them the arms of Farnham:

"Hic jacet corpus Wil'l'i Farnham et Dorothee ux' ſue qui quidem Wil'mus obijt 6to die Maij, anno D'ni M° v°xlviii° quor' a'i'ab's p'piciet' de'. Amen.
Superfuerunt vii filij et iiii filiæ."

[See the verſes on this tomb in p. 96.]

6. At the Eaſt end of the ſame aile, on a large altar tomb of alabaſter, about four feet high, ſupported by pillars, is the figure of a man in armour, with cloſe hair, whiſkers, pointed beard, and ruff; his head on a helmet. On his right, a lady, on an embroidered cuſhion, with falling ruff, gown, and petticoat, fig. 22. One kneeling daughter is broken off, and placed by the ſide of the tomb, fig. 23; at the North end of which are the arms of Farnham; and at the South end the creſt of Farnham; and a dragon, the lady's creſt. Theſe creſts were alſo repeated at the feet of each, but are broken off and loſt. On one ſide is,

"John Farnham, penchner to Queene Elizabeth, died in the yeare of our Lorde 1587."

On the other, "Doritie his wife."

Againſt the wall are the military trophies exhibited in fig. 24; and at the foot of the tomb the verſes already printed in p. 97.

7. On a mural monument on the Eaſt wall of the South chancel, fig. 25, is the effigies of a man in a ruff, and gown faced with fur, long ſleeves and ruffles, kneeling at a deſk; behind him four ſons in gowns and ruffs. His lady and two daughters behind her are all in cloſe gowns and ruffs. At top, the arms and creſt of Farnham.

On two tablets beneath are the verſes given in p. 97.

On a ſmall mural monument on the North wall:

Arms of Farnham ſingle.

"Here lyeth the body of Benjamin Farnham, gent.
who departed this life the 20th of Auguſt, A.D. 1747,
aged 77 years."

In the regular chancel.

1. On a mural tablet on the North ſide:

"Near this place is interred the body of
Mrs. Sarah Hyde, relict of Savile Hyde [1], of Sundridge Place, in Kent, eſq.
and ſiſter to Mrs. Hannah Stevens of this place.
She died Feb. 22, 1751, aged 45."

2. On a mural tablet on the oppoſite ſide:

Arms: Gules, a ſaltire Or, between four bezants; a chief Ermine. Creſt, an unicorn's head, eraſed Argent, armed and maned Or, collared Vaire [2].

"In a vault beneath are depoſited the remains of John Hyde, late of this place, eſq.
only ſon of Savile Hyde, formerly of Sundridge Place, in the county of Kent, eſq.
by Sarah his wife.
He departed this life the 8th day of January, 1789,
in the 56th year of his age.

"Alſo of Mary, late wife of the above John Hyde, eſq.
She died Sept. 3, 1787,
in the 52d year of her age.

"And of Anne their daughter, who died the 14th day of September, 1787,
aged 19 years."

On a flat ſtone in the Farnham chancel:

"Here lyeth the body of Mrs. Rebeckah Farnham, relict of Charles Farnham, eſq.
She departed this life the 12th day of October,
A. D. 1724, ætat. 72.

He firſt deceaſed; ſhe a little tried
To live without him; lik'd it not, and died."

On flat ſtones in the floor of the South aile:

Argent, on a feſs Azure, three boars' heads couped Or; in chief a lion paſſant Gules; fig. 27.

1. "Reliquiis ecce receptaculum
Caroli Lewis, A. M.

---

[1] The manor of Sundriſh was purchaſed, about the reign of king Charles I, by Mr. John Hyde, ſecond ſon of Bernard Hyde, eſq. one of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms to that king; and paſſed to his deſcendant Savile Hyde, eſq. (ſo named after his relation William Savile, marquis of Halifax); who, removing to Quorndon, pulled down the antient manſion-houſe of Sundriſh Place, and erected a farm-houſe in its ſtead. See Haſted's Kent, vol. I. p. 369. Several epitaphs, in Sundriſh church, on the Hyde family, are printed in Thorpe's "Regiſtrum Roffenſe."

[2] See theſe arms at the bottom of Plate XV.

Qui per annos plus minus quadraginta
Parochianis de Preſtwould, ſacroſancta Chriſti diſpenſatus munera.
Succubuit lætus, requiem capeſſens,
abſoluto curſu, ſempiternam.
Ob. Martii die 18vo, anno ætatis ſuæ 71mo, Salutis humanæ 1726."

2. "Sub hoc ſaxo requieſcit Maria uxor Caroli Lewis, clerici, necnon filia Edvardi Farnham, armigeri.
Ex hâc vitâ migravit 24 Nov. 1716."

On the ſame ſtone:

"Hic jacet Maria uxor Richardi Southwell, de Evington, in comit. Leiceſt. vicarii, quæ animam in puerperâ Creatori ſuo religiosè reddidit
5 Oct. 1705, ætatis 31, conjugij 6."

On two flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "William Guthridge, died Nov. 20, 1753, æt. 73."
2. "Dorothy Guthridge, died March 30, 1761, æt. 85."

Here are alſo ſome memorials of the Chaveneys, on flat ſtones, not eaſy to be decyphered.

In the church-yard.

On an altar-tomb:

Argent, on a bend Azure, three lions heads eraſed of the firſt, in chief a lion paſſant Gules; Stevens; fig. 28.

"Near this place lies interred the body of Mrs.
Elizabeth Stevens, late wife of Mr. William Stevens, citizen and one of the Common Council of London;
who died April 2, 1719, aged 82.

"And the body of Mrs. Roe Stevens, who died Sept. 2, 1739, aged 59.

"And the body of Mr. William Stevens [1], ſon of the above Mr. William and Elizabeth Stevens, and huſband of the above Mrs. Roe Stevens, who died Aug. 30, 1755, aged 79.

"As alſo the bodies of five children of the ſaid William and Roe Stevens; viz. Moreton, Hannah, Juliana, George, and Hannah-Shallcroſs;
who all died in their minority."

On another tomb:

Arms of Stevens.

"Here lies interred the body of Samuel Stevens, gent.
who died March 13, 1781, aged 79 years.
Alſo the body of his ſon, William Stevens, gent.
who died June 26, 1786, aged 42 years."

"Here lies interred the body of Hannah Stevens, relict of Samuel Stevens, gent.;
who died March 27, 1789, aged 80 years."

On an altar-tomb of brick, covered with a ſlab of ſlate:

"Richard Burgeſs, gent. departed this life
Oct. 6, 1759, æt. 38."

On the ſide of the ſame tomb:

"Mary, wife of Richard Burgeſs, gent.
She departed this life 22 Feb. 1734-5,
in the 32d year of her age.
James Burgeſs, died 14 May, 1739, aged 12."

Several altar-tombs to the family of White:
Mr. White, ſenior, died Aug. 16, 1721, æt. 57.
Elizabeth, his relict, died 5 Jan. 1756, aged 95.
George White, died Feb. 9, 1781, aged 77.
Martha White, died May 1, 1729, aged 55.
John White, died Sept. 5, 1766, aged 71.

On head-ſtones:

1. "Here lieth the body of Benjamin Bradſhaw, who departed this life Nov. 21, 1730, aged 60 years.
Here lies an honeſt man. Reader, if thou ſeek'ſt more,
Thou art not ſo thyſelf; for, Honeſty is ſtore
Of commendation; and it is more to praiſe,
To dye an honeſt man than full of days."

2. "Here lies the body of Thomas Parnham, who departed this life the 2d of March,
in the year of our Lord 1757, aged 50 years."

"Henry Seile, of Mountſorell, died Jan. 20, 1774, aged 83.
John Seile, brother of Henry,
and ſon of Richard Seile,
who was the Abbey-gardener in Leiceſter, died 31 Oct. 1793, æt. 83."

"Here lieth interred the body of Mary,
the wife of Thomas Parnam;
who departed this life the 11th day of October, 1769,
in the 76th of her age."

3. Arms: .... three pales .... and a feſs
......; Squire; fig. 29.

"This ſtone was erected by the rev. Thomas Squire, clerk, to the memory of his late father,
Mr. Thomas Squire, ſen.
who departed this life the 11th of September, 1765,
in the 79th year of his age.

Near this place lies interred the body of Catharine Squire, wife of the late Mr. Thomas Squire, and relict of the late Henry Chaveney, eſq.
who deceaſed this life 20 Aug. 1763, æt. 73."

4. "Sacred to the memory of John Stone;
who departed this life the 19th of January, 1783,
aged 52 years."

[The Rev. Thomas Hudſon [2], curate of Quorndon and Woodhouſe about 30 years, died Jan. 30, 1798, aged about 58, but has no monument.]

At Hanbury in Staffordſhire is an epitaph, for "Anne Woollocke, widow (to George Woollocke, of Quorndon, in Leiceſterſhire), 3d daughter of George Agard, of Newborough, gent. and Katharine his wife; ſhe died Sept. 1657, aged 71.
And gave to this pariſh 30 ſhillings annually;
10*s*. for a ſermon on New-year's day;
10*s*. to the poor after the ſermon that day;
and 10*s*. to the clerk for cleaning the monument [3]."

In the church-yard of Shenſtone, in the ſame county, (on a neat monument of azure-coloured ſtone, of a very fine grain, and well-poliſhed, ſtanding on a foundation of white ones, with pillars of white ſtone at the four corners neatly cut and poliſhed) is inſcribed:

"This is placed over the body of a gentleman, of 25 years old,
ſon of Richard and Mary Burgeſs, of Quorndon, in the county of Leiceſter;
who put an end to his own life at the Welch Harp, in Upper Stonhall, whither he came as a traveller in the ſtage-coach [4]."

CURATES of QUORNDON and WOODHOUSE.

Charles Lynes occurs in 1710.
Moor Scribo [5], B. A. occurs in 1747.
R. Green occurs as aſſiſtant curate in 1758.
J. Nixon occurs in 1764; ſucceeded that year by James Richardſon; who continued till 1766.
Thomas Hudſon, Nov. 24, 1766; buried Feb. 4, 1798.
John Boyer, preſented by the vicar of Barrow in the beginning of the year 1799.

---

[1] This Mr. Stevens married, ſecondly, Jan. 26, 1738, Mrs. Anne Farnham, of Quorndon. Woodhouſe Regiſter.—To Mr. Robert Stevens, a ſon of his, in his 83d year, ſtill living at Loughborough, I am obliged for ſeveral particulars relative to the family of the Farnhams.

[2] He has left a widow, now aged 85, daughter of Mr. Edward Prior of Quorndon and Philippa Farnham.

[3] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 75.

[4] Hiſtory of Shenſtone, 1794, p. 19.

[5] B. A. of Sidney Suſſex College, Cambridge, 1745. About 1758, this venerable Divine went from Quorndon, to live with his brother at Gedney in Lincolnſhire on account of ill health, that being his native air. R. Green, J. Nixon, James Richardſon, and Thomas Hudſon, were his aſſiſtant curates; but, on the reſignation of Mr. Scribo, about 20 years ſince, Mr. Hudſon was inducted in the perpetual curacies of Woodhouſe and Quorn, on the preſentation of the vicar of Barrow. Mr. Scribo obtained the rectory of Croyland in Lincolnſhire in 1763; where he is ſtill living, 1798.

Pedigree of HYDE, of SUNDRISH and QUORNDON. (See the Arms, p. 105.)

Bernard Hyde, eſq. of Kent, one of the three gentlemen that rented all the Cuſtoms belonging to England in king James the Firſt's time, is interred in the family-vault under the communion-table in St. Dunſtan's church in the Eaſt, London. He died in the year 1630 or 1631; and left three ſons.=

1. Bernard Hyde, eſq. of Bore-place in Kent; died January 1655, buried in the ſame vault with his father.= . . .

2. Humphrey Hyde, of Lantoft and Boſton in Lincolnſhire; ~~died without iſſue.~~

3. John Hyde, eſq. of Sundriſh, co. Kent, died in 1677, and was buried in Sundriſh church, aged 66. The manor of Sundriſh was purchaſed by him in 1641; from whom it deſcended to his nephew Humphrey.

1. Sir Bernard Hyde, knt. died Aug. 17, 1670, and was buried in a vault at Chiddingſtone, aged 48. He had only one ſon, who died about a month old, and was buried in the Eaſt vault of St. Dunſtan's church in the Eaſt, London, May 12, 1662.

2. Humphrey[1] Hyde, eſq. died March 16, 1719, aged 84, and was buried in Sundriſh church-yard.=Elizabeth, dau. of Francis Oſbaſton, eſq. of Alderbrook Hall, in Eſſex; died July 13, 1713.

1. John Hyde, eſq. marr. Mary Strode, one of the daughters of dame Katharine Strode, of Chipſted, Kent; died in 1729, made his wife executrix, and left his ſon Saville Hyde and his four daughters his reſiduary legatees, on the 22d Oct. 1743; adminiſtration de bonis non teſtamento annexis, is granted to Mary his wife.

2. William Hyde, died in 1740 inteſtate, leaving iſſue. He was the ſurviving executor of his father.

Elizabeth Hyde, married —— Harriſon, by whom ſhe had one daughter; and afterwards intermarried William-Payne King.

3. Edward Hyde, died a batchelor in 1726, leaving a will, deviſed to Edward, ſon of his nephew Stroud; and, in caſe he died before 21, to Bernard his brother.

1. Elizabeth, married —— King, died a widow, leaving her ſiſter Margaret Stevens executrix of her will.

2. Margaret, married —— Reynolds, leaving iſſue one ſon John, and afterwards intermarried with —— Stevens.

1. John Hyde, eſq. of Bore Place, d. unmarried in 1740[2], leaving his brother Saville ſole executor and reſiduary legatee.

2. Stroud Hyde, died in 1742 inteſtate, leaving iſſue two ſons.

3. Savile Hyde (ſo named after his relation Will. Savile marquis of Halifax). He died in 1741, and was buried at Sundriſh, leaving his wife ſole executrix and reſiduary legatee; alſo a ſon,= Frances Hyde, married Dr. Peter Shaw.

Savilla Hyde, married Tho. Fallowfield, and died without iſſue, leaving her ſaid huſband ſole executor, who took out letters of adminiſtration de bonis non to Humph. Hyde, alſo to John and William Hyde, alſo to Elizabeth King, executor of Mary wife of John Hyde.

Margaret Hyde, married —— Edgſon, by whom ſhe had two ſons; and afterwards married John Cupp.

Elizabeth Hyde, died unmarried.

1. Bernard Hyde[3], marr. Suſan. Harrow, and died in 1767; leaving his wife and Thomas Sibthorpe, executors.

Edward Hyde, died an infant.

Suſannah. Mary-Elizabeth.=James Butler.

Suſannah-Abigail.=Savile-John Hyde, eſq. of Quorndon. Elizabeth. James.

John Hyde, eſq. pulled down the capital manſion-houſe at Sundriſh about 1772; and erected a fair houſe on the ſame foundation. He died at Quorndon, and was buried in the chancel there in January 1789.=Mary Wyld, who died in September 1787, and was buried in the chancel of Quorndon church.

1. Savile-John Hyde, eſq. now of Quorndon, born 1755; and married to Suſannah-Abigail Butler, late of Greenwich.

2. Thomas Hyde, of Liverpool; born 1756.
3. William Hyde, of Hoby, co. Leiceſter, born 1761; married in 1793, at Coſſington, to D. Goode.
4. George Hyde, in the Eaſt Indies; b. 1761.
5. Clarendon Hyde, born 1771; died at Quorndon in September, 1797.

Mary Hyde, born 1752; buried at Gotham, Nottinghamſhire.
Sarah, born 1772; married Mr. Donnell; died 1787.
Savilla Hyde, born 1774; married Thomas Peach.
Elizabeth Hyde, born 1775; married Thomas King.

Mary-Ann Hyde, born 1793.
Elizabeth Hyde.
John-Savile Hyde, born 1796.

Since the preceding ſheets were printed, I have been favoured by Mr. Goodman with the following extracts from the Kibworth Regiſters; which are the rather inſerted, as ſupplying ſome of the defective entries at Barrow of the period in which they are imperfect[4].

"Guddith Beridge, baptized March 30, 1606.
Baſil, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. April 5, 1607.
William, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. April 24, 1608.
Ferdinand, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. Sept. 26, 1609.
George, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. Aug. 25, 1611.
Baſil, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. April 25, 1613.
Michael, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. June 24, 1614.
James, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. July 25, 1615.
Jonathan, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. April 26, 1617.
Samuel, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. May 6, 1620.
John, ſon of John Beridge, bapt. May 28, 1624.
Johannes Beridge, ſacræ Theologiæ profeſſor, ſepult. erat Maii 14, 1632.
John, ſon of William Beridge, bapt. Jan. 12, 1633.
William, ſon of Will. Beridge, bapt. May 24, 1635.
Dorothy, his daughter, baptized Jan. 22, 1636.
Margaret, another daughter, bapt. March 26, 1638.
Mary, another daughter, bapt. Jan. 6, 1639.
Will. Beridge, clerk, rector, buried Jan. 30, 1639-40.
William Hunt occurs rector March 12, 1640-41.

Mem. That John Yaxley was inducted into the real, actual, and perſonal poſſeſſion of the rectory of Kibworth Beauchamp, in the county of Leiceſter, by George Green, A. M. vicar of Thedingworth, upon the 5th day of March, anno Dñi, ſtilo Anglie, 1659[5].

John Yaxley's ſignature occurs for the firſt time at the bottom of the year 1652; and in 1658 he ſigns miniſter. No ſignature between his and William Hunt's, except a curate's.

---

[1] This Humphrey, by his indenture, dated Dec. 21, 1688, for good conſiderations, conveyed unto John Saville and Robert Beddington the manor, capital meſſuage, farms, lands, and hereditaments, of Sundriſh, co. Kent, with divers other eſtates, in truſt, for the uſe of his eldeſt ſon, John Hyde, for his life; afterwards to Mary Strode, his wife, for her life; with remainder to the firſt and every other ſon in tail male of their two bodies. This Mary afterwards, in conſideration of £20,000. paid her by her ſon John, releaſed all the premiſſes to him and his heirs.

[2] This John, by his indenture, dated March 8, 1739, and of a recovery ſuffered in purſuance thereof, releaſed and transferred the above manor, capital meſſuage, farms, and premiſſes, in truſt, to the uſe of himſelf for life, with remainder to the uſe of his brother Savile for life, and to the heirs male of his body.

[3] By indentures of leaſe and releaſe, of 27th and 28th of June, 1764, he conveyed his right and intereſt to Tho. Sibthorpe.

[4] Theſe dates, as far as they relate to the children of John Beridge, are perfectly ſatisfactory, and correſpond with the epitaph in vol. II. p. 642. But in reſpect to William Beridge and his children a difficulty aroſe, which I was unable to ſolve; till, on farther examination, I perceive that there were two Williams, ſucceſſively rectors of Kibworth, one of whom died in January 1639-40; the other, who was vicar of Barrow and rector of Kibworth (ſee p. 77.) Oct. 29, 1640.—Of the John and William who were born in 1633 and 1635, ſee vol. II. p. 651.—The entries at Barrow have been attentively re-examined by Mr. Eaſton, who finds them quite correct.

[5] J. Blackerby and Nicholas Keſtin (of South Langton and Gumley) are witneſſes to this induction.

WOODHOUSE,

a hamlet in the pariſh of Barrow, ſituate on the borders of Charnwood Foreſt, about three miles South from Loughborough, conſiſts of two diſtinct villages. One, called Woodhouſe (now containing 18 houſes[1], excluſive of the ſchool, and three poor houſes under one roof near the church), is about three quarters of a mile from the Foreſt; the greateſt part of the other (perhaps 80 houſes) is actually in the Foreſt, and ſeems as if the inhabitants had from time to time (which is at this day the caſe) built a little hut, and then made a ſmall incloſure about it in the Foreſt, till at length ſome perſon claimed it as his property. This latter, called Woodhouſe Eaves, is moſtly inhabited by frame-work-knitters; but there are amongſt them ſeveral labourers who work at the Swithland-ſlate pits, which are diſtant but about half a mile. Woodhouſe is a healthy and very pleaſant ſpot, eſpecially in the ſummer, being ſituated amongſt hills and woods. It affords ſeveral pleaſing views; and a proſpect of Lincoln cathedral, and of the two ſpires at Coventry, which places muſt certainly (by a line drawn) be 70 miles aſunder.

In 1346, Alice de Beaumont (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 5*s.* for half a quarter of a knight's fee; Robert de Farnham, 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee; and Ralph Baſſett of Drayton, 15*s.* for three half-quarter parts of one knight's fee; all which were in Quorndon and Woodhouſe, and parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon[2].

The property of the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter at Woodhouſe will be deſcribed under the account of the chapel.

Their ſheep-fold (bercaria[3]), with a toft and apple-orchard (pomarium), and a ſmall meadow, were valued at 6*s.* a year[4]; and in 1388 the abbot recovered the ſeiſin of a meſſuage in Woodhouſe againſt John Gerard, as appears by this entry in their Regiſter:

"Mem', quòd abbas Leyc' recuperavit ſeiſinam ſuam versùs Joh̄em Gerard de uno meſſ' in Wodhows, prout patet per quandam aſſiſam nove diſſeiſine inter eos ſum' & capt'. Et quòd recuperavit per aſſiſam coram Wil̄l̄o Thirnyng[5], tunc juſticiario, &c. Et Rob̄tus Gowſſil[6] vicecomes Leyc', virtute brevis d̄ni regis, habere fecit predicto abbati plenariam ſeiſinam de meſſ' predicto, cum pertin', per viſum recogn' aſſiſe predicte, videlicet, Thome Wyſe, Joh̄is Stevenſon, Radulphi Nevyll, & ceterorum, qui aſſignaverunt abbati predictum meſſ', totam clauſuram, & unum pedem & dimidium contiguos, extra clauſuram predictam, ad meſſ' predictum, & terram juxta alteram viam ſuper quam antique arbores nuper creverunt, & quas predictus Joh̄es Gerard ſuccidit. In cujus rei teſt', &c. anno regni regis Ricardi Secundi poſt Conqueſtum viceſimo-primo[7]."

In 1427, it was found that Elizabeth widow of Henry Beaumont died ſeiſed of Woodhouſe, as a member of Beaumanor[8]; and in 1463, that William Beaumont, viſcount Beaumont, attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of 200 acres of wood in Woodcote[9], co. Leiceſter[10].

In 1539, Francis Griffith ſurrendered, to the court at Beaumanor, a meſſuage and two acres of land at Woodhouſe; and was re-admitted, to the uſe of himſelf, of Alice his wife, and daughter Iſabella[11].

The great and ſmall tithes of Woodhouſe and Beaumanor, with a tenement in Woodhouſe, were granted in 1584 to Thomas Windebanck, one of the clerks of the queen's ſignet; who aſſigned them, June 12, 1598, to Henry Beſt and Robert Holland; from whom they were purchaſed in 1599 by William Herrick, eſq. together with the Garats hay[12], in the liberty of Woodhouſe, conſiſting of a capital meſſuage, with a large barn and ſtables at each end, and the orchard and garden, court-yard and out-yard, thereto adjoining (about 3 acres); together with 148 acres of land in free ſocage tenure; and 52 acres of land, called Little Wellows, in the ſame liberty[13].

17 Feb. 1617, the proceedings in a bill of Exchequer, in which Thomas Rawlins, on behalf of himſelf and the inhabitants of Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, were plaintiffs, and Adrian Farnham, Humfrey Farnham, and Nicholas Gravenor, defendants, were ſtopped, by order of the Court, becauſe ſome of the matters complained of, having been had for carriage for her majeſty in her progreſs, and for carriage for his majeſty's houſhold, were cogniſable by the lords and others of his majeſty's green cloth, and not by that court[14].

On Sunday, Aug. 5, 1627, at a public meeting of the moſt part of the inhabitants of Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, in the chapel and chancel of Woodhouſe, after evening prayers, on a repreſentation having been made by ſir William Herrick, "that in reſpect that the curate and inhabitants, upon warning given by the churchwarden's diſcretion, ſometimes upon the king's ſervice, ſometimes to audit the conſtables and churchwardens' accompts, and other neceſſary ſervice for the church and commonwealth, do not make ſuch appearance at the time and place appointed, ſo that the buſineſs for theſe ſervices are neglected, or not performed in their ſort as they ought to be;" it was referred to ſir William Heyrick, John Brian, clerk, and ten other ſubſtantial pariſhioners, or the majority of ſuch as ſhould appear, to tranſact the neceſſary buſineſs of the pariſh in the abſence of the churchwarden and overſeer[15].

The following ſtatement was ſoon after preſented at a public aſſembly of the inhabitants in veſtry:

"A particular of what Sir William Herrick and his ſonnes do give to the overſeers of the poor, to diſpoſe of in Woodhouſe.

	£.	s.	d.
"In money, per annum, —	3	0	0
They doe likewiſe give, in bread, voluntarily, where they ſee moſt neede, weekly, 2*s.* 4*d.*; which is per annum	6	1	4
They likewiſe give at Chriſtmas to the poore, in money and corne, at the leaſt	2	10	0
Summa totalis — —	11	11	4

Sir William Herrick hath for many years kept a painful miniſter in his houſe, who hath had his diett, lodging, and all other things neceſſary and fitting for him, for the good of himſelf, his family, and the whole towne, which may be valued at £20. per annum; and he and his ſonnes give him, in money, £20. more per annum; which comes to in the whole per annum £40.

---

[1] In 1560 there were 44 families in Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves.

[2] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[3] "Mandatum eſt Roberto de Lexington, quod abbati de Miravall faceret unam bercariam in paſturâ de Fayrefeld, ad oves ſuas cuſtodiendum." Clauſ. 9 Hen. III.

[4] See the Appendix to this volume, p. 9.

[5] Sir William Thurning, chief juſtice of the common pleas, declared the cauſe of ſummoning the parliament at Weſtminſter, 2 Hen. IV. 1400. Prynne, p. 404.

[6] Robert Gowſhull occurs in the Liſt of Sheriffs for the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick, 20 Ric. II, 1397.

[7] Charite's Rentale, fol. cxlvii. b.

[8] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49. Leic.

[9] This was another name either for Woodhouſe or Woodthorpe.

[10] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.

[11] From the Court-rolls of Adrian Stocks, eſq. 5 and 6 Philip and Mary.—At an inquiſition taken at Beaumanor in March 1559, the 2d of Elizabeth, it appeared that there were then 19 copyhold tenements in Woodhouſe, and 15 in Quorndon.—"In Woodhouſe Walter Griffith holdeth, by the words of his copy, dated the 7th of October, in the 14th year of queen Elizabeth, of the grant of Adrian Stocks, eſq. one meſſuage, with the appurtenances, in Woodhouſe; and one little cloſe, called Squire's Cloſe, for the lives of Francis Griffith, dead, Walter Griffith and Robert, ſons of the ſaid Francis, living 1608; which premiſſes we find to be and contain one tenement of ſix bays, one malt-houſe, two bays, one kiln adjoining, one acre, one cloſe called Squire's Cloſe, ſome time commonable, two acres with commons in the fields, and payeth yearly rent 3*s.* and common fine to Beaumanor. Walter Griffith alſo holdeth, by another copy of the ſame date and grant, one cloſe of paſture called The Little Wellows, for the ſame lives, divided into three cloſes." Court Rolls at Beaumanor.

[12] This paſſed from the Herrick family to the Cooks; and at that time was valued at £100. a year. It was ſold by Mr. Cook to Colonel Thomas Hartopp; from whom it deſcended to Chiverton Hartopp, eſq. who ſold it in 1745 to Edward Heanes, gent. And it has ſince been deviſed to George Watkinſon, gent. by the will of Mrs. Mary Heanes, proved in 1794.

[13] Theſe lands are adjoining to Quorndon Liberty; and in 1658 were conveyed by the family of Herrick to John Chapman for £566; with a reſerved rent of 6*s.* 8*d.*

[14] From an original paper at Beaumanor, ex parte Remembratoris Regis.

[15] From the original at Beaumanor.

Sir William hath likewiſe beſtowed upon the chapel of Woodhouſe a faire communion-cuppe gilte, with a cover[1]; a faire pulpitt, and the curate's reading place; and a handſome gallery [1613]; all which hath ſtood him in, at the leaſt, £40.

He likewiſe procured of Dr. Mounteigne[2], when he was biſhop of Lincolne, buriell for their dead, which before they could not be ſuffered to doe, which is a great eaſe and benefit to the inhabitants[3]; which he procured at his owne charge, under the biſhop's hand, and ſeale of his office.

Sir William hath in Woodhouſe neere thirty houſes; and, ſince Beaumanor came into his hands, he hath brought nor ſuffered none to be his tenants which have beene any charge to the towne; but the towneſmen doe, which is very burdenſome to the towne[4]."

Aug. 30, 1668, articles of agreement were entered into, between William Heyrick the elder, of Beaumanor, eſq. William Heyrick the younger, his ſon and heir apparent, Edward Farnham the elder, eſq. Edward Farnham the younger, his ſon and heir apparent, John Morton, eſq. Daniel Earle, eſq. Anna-Maria Heyrick, widow, Thomas Heyrick, gent. (her ſon), and the ſeveral other proprietors of houſes, lands, &c. in Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, for dividing and holding in ſeveralty the commonable lands called Holyrood Grounds, all parcel of the manor of Beaumanor, which cuſtomarily lay open from Holyrood-day to the day of the Faſt of the Epiphany. In theſe articles it is ſtated that Mr. Herrick then poſſeſſed the Eaſt and Weſt Garrett fields, the Large meadow, the Eaſt and Weſt Hawkwells, the Magg Meadow, the Eaſt and Weſt Crabtree cloſes, the Lane cloſe, and the Round cloſe.

The Turvile-leys, already divided into ſeveral cloſes, were the property of Anna-Maria Heyrick (widow of the Warden of Mancheſter), Thomas Heyrick, gent. (her ſon), Edward Farnham, eſq. and others[5]. The incloſure under theſe articles was to be made under the direction of Thomas Hood of Bardon Park, gent. Robert Barnard, of Sileby, gent. Henry Farnham and Peter Chaveney, both of Quorndon, gents. and John Fowler, of Loughborough, grocer; who were alſo appointed truſtees for the receipt of certain annuities, in proportion to each perſon's intereſt in the commonable grounds; in truſt, to pay in the firſt place the four ſeveral annuities following to the owners of cottages relinquiſhing their right of common; to Thomas Siddon, 8*s.*; Edward Okcr, 6*s.* 8*d.*; Margaret Duckett, 6*s.* 8*d.*; and William Foulds, 10*s.* The remainder, after defraying the neceſſary expences of the truſt, to be paid to ſuch preaching miniſter officiating in Woodhouſe chapel, and at ſuch time and manner, as ſhould be appointed under the hands and ſeals of William Heyrick the elder, Edward Farnham the elder, John Morton, or any two of them, or of their heirs[6].

In conſequence of this agreement, the following ſums were ſettled to be paid yearly, out of the ſeveral and reſpective lands, cloſes, and grounds, formerly called Holyrood Grounds, as they ſtand ſeverally and reſpectively charged, by articles of agreement for that purpoſe made and agreed upon by and between all the ſeveral and reſpective perſons which are owners or intereſted in the ſeveral lands and cloſes in Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, as they are herein and hereafter named:

	£.	s.	d.
William Heyrick the elder, eſq. for Garrett farm and Thomas Smith's cloſe,	2	7	0
Edward Farnham, eſq. for all his commonable lands in Woodhouſe, —	3	15	0
John Morton, eſq. for Pryor-fields and Conyclapper-leys, — —	0	15	0
Daniell Earle, eſq. for the High fields,	0	12	0
Anna-Maria Heyrick, widow, and Thomas Heyrick, gent. for the lands called Turvile-leys, — —	1	0	0
William Ludford, for the cloſe belonging to his houſe, — — —	0	4	0
Roger Wilſon, for the cloſe belonging to his houſe, — — —	0	3	0
Ann Foulds, widow, for the cloſe belonging to her houſe, — —	0	3	0
Robert Tarlton, for the cloſe belonging to William Page's houſe — —	0	2	0
Thomas Rawlins, gent. for lands late John Barſby's lands, — —	0	6	0
George Wilſon, gent. for Hedycroft,	0	13	0
Iſaac Wilſon, gent. for his Turvile-leys, and a cloſe belonging to his houſe, —	0	12	0
John Carr, for three little cloſes belonging to his houſe, — —	0	6	0
John Marſhall, gent. for a cloſe belonging to his houſe, — —	0	2	0
John Foulds, gent. for a cloſe belonging to his houſe, — —	0	3	0
Henry Somerfeild, for a cloſe belonging to his houſe, — — —	0	3	0
John Muſſon, gent. for a cloſe belonging to his houſe, — —	0	2	0
Thomas Wilſon, for land called Turvile-leys, — — —	0	4	0
Emmanuel Blackwell, for a cloſe belonging to his houſe, — —	0	2	0
Edward Calladine, for a cloſe belonging to his houſe, — —	0	3	0
Adrian Chettle, for the Eaves-field,	0	5	0
William Heyrick, eſq. for three cloſes,	0	7	0
	£.12	9	0

The foreſaid ſeverall ſums of mony are aſſigned, by the feoffees in truſt of the foreſaid annuity, to be collected and gathered by the churchwardens of the chappell of Woodhouſe aforeſaid for the time being; and by them to be payed out to the ſeverall uſes in the ſaid articles expreſſed and declared, for the year 1668.

Thomas Hood, }
John Fowler, } R. Barnard.

That the intended incloſure took place, appears by the ſubſequent letter, dated From the Outwoods, Feb. 5, 1685, and addreſſed,

"For my good friends Mr. George Wilſon, Mr. John Carre, and the preſent churchwardens of Woodhouſe.

"Mr. Willson, Whereas, uppon the takinge in or incloſinge of the Holy-rood grounds at Woodhouſe formerly, both yourſelfe and your neighbours of Woodhouſe, as alſo ſuch owners or landholders in youre ſaid towne, allthough dwelling in other places, did agree, under theyre hands and ſeales, uppon the encloſinge of the ſayd open grounds, in reſpect of the benefitt they ſhoulde receive thereby, every man to allow and pay yearly, and every yeare ſucceſſively, ſuch ſumme or ſummes of mony as theyre proportion was rated at and expreſſed and mentioned in the ſaid wrightinge under theyre hands and ſeales reſpectively, and by a generall conſent decreed to have it collected yearly by the reſpective and ſucceſſive churchwardens of Woodhouſe, and to be paid into my hande, for the uſe and benefitt and ſalarie of ſuch miniſter or curate of Woodhouſe as I thought good to pay it unto, if he ſerved the cure there, in reſpect of his paines and labour there; and to that end nominated ſeverall truſtees, into whoſe hands the ſubſcribers to that wrightinge conferred a power to cauſe thoſe ſeverall ſumms of mony to be collected accordingly; amongſt which truſtees I beinge one of them, all the reſt of them beinge dead except myſelfe onely, beinge no other were choſen in the roome of ſuch deceſed, though I often moved it to the neighbours, which they promiſed, but never performed; and ſince I am the only ſurvivinge truſtee; in reſpect of the advancement of the revenue of the church, I can do no leſſe, in point of true conſcience and honeſtie, than ſtand for the good of the ſame, and endeavour to have the mony collected accordinge to the true intent and meaninge of the landholders, as is expreſſed under theyre hands and ſeales in the forementioned wrightings; ſince I am very ſenſible that ſeverall of the neighbours either refuſe or deferre the payment of the reſpective ſummes they obliged themſelves to paye yearly uppon takinge in the ſaide grounds; with what pretence of honeſtie I know not, until juſt cauſe be ſhewed for detaininge the ſayde ſumes of monie. And underſtandinge that ſome neighbours in Woodhouſe are deſigned to remove Mr. Jackſon, the preſent curate, who came in by the conſent of the neighbours, and woulde putt in a ſtranger into the place; I ſuppoſe it is but morall honeſtie, and indeed common civilitie, to make juſt objections, and prove ſufficient crimes ſo objected, as may incapacitate Mr. Jackſon to ſerve the cure; and that either in his doctrine, which I ſuppoſe is ſound and learned, conſonant to the eſtabliſhed doctrine of the Church of England; or els other juſt faults in life and converſation, contrarie to honeſtie or good manners, which I have not found any way offenſive ſince he ſerved the cure amongſt us. One of theſe all rationall men muſt conclude wholly neceſſarie to be done before his removall; and if he be removed, I hope the towneſmen will be ſo carefull, in reſpect of common prudence, to chooſe ſuch ſucceedinge curate whoſe doctrine and converſation will be more pleaſinge to God and men then him that ſhould be diſplaced; and not one whoſe doctrine and life may be ſubject or inferior to the former; and therfore I write this letter unto you, as allſo to John Carre, and to the preſent churchwardens of Woodhouſe, and deſire you to communicate the ſame unto them, and to any other neighbours or landholders concerned; that they may conſider of the juſtneſſe of my actinge in this thinge; and deſire an anſwer to it ere it be longe. And if you and any concerned herein can ſhew any juſt cauſe for the diſplacinge of Mr. Jackſon, I will give you and them a meeting any day at Beaumanor, in order to compoſe any ſeeminge or pretended difference, amongſt ſuch as are concerned, in the payment of ſuch dues to the preſent curate of Woodhouſe, Mr. Jackſon. I ſuppoſe no man in your towne would turne off an ordinarie ſervant without a juſt cauſe—how much more youre curate in reſpect to his divine function! I deſire to have three or foure dayſe tyme when you appoint a daye to meete, that I may not be abſent in reſpect of my affaires. I have nominated my ſon William Herricke a truſtee in this concerne, accordinge to the power reſidinge in me as the only ſurvivinge truſtee; and accordingly expect that when the churchwardens gather up the ſaide monyes, that they depoſite the ſame in my hande, to be payde to the curate aforeſaide, untill juſt cauſe be ſhewed to the contrarie. And, not doubtinge of a fayre anſwer to my juſt propoſalls, I remaine a friend to youreſelfe, and all youre neighbours, ready to do them any good, knowne to them by the name of Wm. Herricke."

---

[1] On this chalice (which is of ſilver, double-gilt, weight 17 oz. and three eighths) is inſcribed, "Gulielmus Hericke, miles, amoris ergô dedit, 1610;" and the arms of Herrick and May; on the paten, the arms only. See p. 117.

[2] Dr. George Mounteigne was biſhop of Lincoln from 1617 to 1621, when he was tranſlated to the ſee of London.

[3] Before this time the Woodhouſe people buried at Quorndon; in return for which they gave a bell; and agreed to keep the North-wall of the church-yard in repair, and to find a rope for one of the bells.

[4] From the Original.

[5] Edward Farnham, gent. holdeth, by fealty of William Herrick, eſq. of the manor of Beaumanor, certain lands in Woodhouſe, formerly Turvile's Lands, and now called by the name of Thorney Cloſes, divided into two cloſes, and in the poſſeſſion of Edward Bordman, and payeth yearly, with ſuit of court, xi*s.* dated 1656. Richard Heyrick, clerk, Jeffery Bordman, William Squire, Ralph Smalley, William Judſon, Dorothy Lancaſhire, Thomas Ludford, Clement Foulds, Edward Oaker, Humphrey Fox, and others, are alſo noticed, as holding lands in Woodhouſe.

[6] From the Original.

At Maplewell, a ſmall hamlet within the Liberty of Woodhouſe, Mr. Geoffrey Whatton had, in the laſt century, a good moated manſion, and other conſiderable property; concerning which we find this document:

To the Right Honourable Henry Earl of Huntingdon, Lord Haſtings, Botreaulx, Molins, and Moiles, and Lord Lieutenant of his Majeſty's Counties of Leiceſter and Rutland.

The humble petition of the inhabitants within the conſtabulary of Woodhouſe, Sheweth unto your lordſhip, that one Geoffrey Whatton, one of the inhabitants of the ſaid conſtablary, being a very rich man, and owner of above 100 acars of incloſed ground, whereupon he kepeth a very greate ſtocke of cattle, which are liable to the levies and taxes of the ſaid conſtablary, for muſters, traynings, and other ſervices for the king's majeſtie, for which he is now in arrere for two ſeveral levies xxxxiš. viiiđ. But the ſaid Whatton (although he hath bene divers times required) refuſeth to pay the ſaid levies, but will put your peticõners to ſuite for the ſame, as he formerly hath done; wherin, although your peticõners, at the triall at the aſſiſes, proved the ſaid land to lye in the ſaid conſtablary, and thereupon had a verdict, judgment, and execucõn; yet your peticõners ſpent in that ſuite £5. more than was allowed by the courte, ſo that your lordſhip's peticõners muſt either looſe their levies, or ſpend much more than the levies come to, which will be a greate meanes of hindrance of his majeſtie's ſervice, and an encouragement to others to deny the payment of their levies, unleſs your lordſhip will be pleaſed to afforde youre peticõners releſe herein. That your lordſhip will be pleaſed to convent the ſaid Whatton before your lordſhip, to anſwer the premiſſes; and if he refuſe to ꝑforme your lordſhip's order therein, that your lordſhip will be pleaſed to certifie his contempt unto the right honourable the lords of his majeſties moſt honourable privy counſell; and your lordſhip's peticõners, as in all duty bounde, will ever pray for your lordſhip's health and happineſs, &c.

William Heyricke, Edward Smith,
Nicholas Henshaw, Geff. Bordman,
Ralph Rivitt, John Smally,
John Brodhurst, William Squire.

We certifie your Lordſhip, that Geoffrey Whatton hath not paid the taxes which your lordſhip enjoined him, and deſire that he may anſwere it before the lords of the counſell.

William Heyricke, Edward Savile,
Geff. Bordman, Thomas Ludford,
Edward (E. R.) Ratliffe, his marke,
George Dickeringe.

This caſe was referred, by Judge Crooke, to the deciſion of ſir Arthur Heſilrige and ſir Wolſtan Dixie.

From the family of Whatton Maplewell paſſed to that of Raworth; afterwards to Doctor Levet of Nottingham; from him to Mr. Barber, who ſold it to Mr. Crumpton, banker, of Derby, the preſent owner. It contains only five houſes; and the land is poor, and in ſome parts very rocky.

The principal freeholders in Woodhouſe are, William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor; Edward Farnham, eſq. of Quorndon; and Mr. George Watkinſon, a conſiderable breeder of ſheep.

Woodhouse School

was founded, near the end of the laſt century, by the liberality of an individual, who is thus recorded in an inſcription over the ſchool-door:

> "In the chapel of Woodhouſe lie depoſited > the remains of Thomas Rawlins, of Woodhouſe, > in the county of Leiceſter, > who died on the 30th of September, 1712,
> in the 70th year of his age.

This generous gentleman, to diſplay a ſingular charity, did even in his life time, and out of a ſmall eſtate, found a free-ſchool in the town of Woodhouſe, endowing it with four-and-twenty pounds by the year, for ever, for the inſtructing in Engliſh, Latin, Writing, and Arithmetick, two-and-twenty poor boys, born and living in Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, as likewiſe ſix poor boys of Barrow upon Soar, and ſix of Quorndon. He alſo gave forty ſhillings by the year to buy books and paper for the uſe of the poor boys of that ſchool. Beſides, he gave twenty ſhillings yearly to raiſe a fund for placing a poor boy an apprentice living in the town of Woodhouſe, which is a ſuitable addition to the ſame ſum left by his father for the ſame charitable purpoſe. Moreover, he gave forty ſhillings yearly to be employed in raiſing a ſtock to put out a poor boy an apprentice living in the town of Quorndon. He gave alſo the reſidue of the profit of his eſtate in Woodhouſe to the poor of Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves.

This renowned benefactor had the peculiar pleaſure of ſeeing the management of theſe charities under his own eye through a long courſe of years; and, being ſtill bent on good deſigns, he did by his laſt will beſtow the following charities yearly for ever; viz.

Fifty ſhillings to poor old people belonging to the Preſbyterian ſociety of Proteſtant Diſſenters at Mountſorrel; and twenty ſhillings to four of the pooreſt houſekeepers in Barrow.

Three pounds to the poor of Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves.

Two pounds to the poor of Quorndon.

Two pounds after Mrs. Morrel's death (a legatee) to the poor of Woodhouſe, Woodhouſe Eaves, and Quorndon.

Two pounds to each of the eldeſt truſtees of the aforenamed free-ſchool.

One pound for the repair of the highways in Woodhouſe.

And as to the overplus-money of his eſtate and effects remaining upon the diſcharge of debts and legacies, he gave it to be equally divided betwixt the two eldeſt truſtees and the poor of Woodhouſe, Woodhouſe Eaves, and Quorndon.

"The preſent Truſtees of this free-ſchool, being Thomas Hartopp, eſq. Samuel Smalley, and Joſeph Chapman,
have erected this monument,
to perpetuate the memory of their charitable Founder,
in 1726."

In 1691, Mr. Chambers was appointed the firſt ſchool-maſter, and continued till the end of 1693.

Mr. Johnſon was appointed in 1694, and continued to the end of 1696.

Mr. Matthews was appointed in 1697, and continued till 1704. He was a Preſbyterian miniſter; and had the meeting-houſe at Mountſorell. He publiſhed, in 1715, "The great Priviledge of a dying Believer, or living Chriſtian in a dying Hour; being a Funeral Sermon on the much-lamented Death of John Hood, Gent. who departed this life at Bardon Park in Leiceſterſhire, Jan. 19, 1714-15, in the 58th year of his age;" which is dedicated "To Mrs. Hood the relict, and Mrs. Willington ſiſter, of the deceaſed."

Mr. Boley was appointed ſchoolmaſter in 1704.

Mr. William Bainbrigge Herrick was ſchoolmaſter till 1722.

Mr. Robert Fouldes continued to 1733.

After him another Mr. Boley, from 1733 to 1744.

Mr. John Prior, the next ſchoolmaſter, was appointed at an early age; and entering into holy orders, was for ſome years curate as well as ſchoolmaſter here; but reſigned both in 1763, on ſucceeding to the ſchool of Aſhby de la Zouch, where he is ſtill the very reſpectable vicar.

Mr. Samuel Wylde, from 1763 till the beginning of 1770. He made the map of the Foreſt of Charnwood in 1754 which is engraved in Plate XXIII; of which only two copies were taken; one for the late William Herrick, eſq.; the other for ſir Joſeph Danvers of Swithland. He alſo publiſhed a book on Arithmetic; was a man of genius and abilities, but intemperate as to drinking.

Mr. Daniel Chapman, the preſent maſter, 1798, was appointed in 1770.

After the death of the ſecond Mr. Boley, the poor inhabitants of Woodhouſe, &c. in December 1744, preſented the following petition:

"To the right honourable the earl and counteſs of Huntingdon, William Herrick, eſq. Chiverton Hartopp, eſq. Edward Farnham, eſq. Francis Barber, gent. the rev. Dr. Foſter, the rev. Mr. Marten, Mr. Samuel Stevens, Mr. Statham, &c.

The humble petition of the poor and antient houſekeepers of Woodhouſe, Quorndon, and Barrow, widow men and women, whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, Sheweth that Thomas Rawlins, gent. by his deed dated 12 Aug. 1691, did convey to divers perſons in truſt a meſſuage and ſeveral parcels of land in Woodhouſe, of the yearly rent or value of 35*l.* 3*s.* a year; of which he gave £16. per annum to the uſe of a grammar-ſchool, wherein ſhould be taught all the poor boys of Woodhouſe; £8. per annum for twelve boys of Barrow and Quorndon; 40*s. per annum*, to buy the ſaid boys books and paper; and £4. per annum for apprenticing poor boys; the reſidue of the rents and profits (after taxes paid) to be diſpoſed of and paid yearly and every year to the poor of Woodhouſe—ſuch as your petitioners be.

That the ſaid Thomas Rawlins, by his will dated 19 April, 1710, did deviſe to his executors therein named a meſſuage in Pater Noſter Row[1], London, now of the value of £45. per annum, in truſt, that they for their lives, and after their deceaſe that the two eldeſt truſtees of Woodhouſe ſchool, ſhould receive the rents of the ſaid houſe in London, and diſpoſe of the ſame to charitable uſes in the ſaid will expreſſed. Among which charitable uſes, he the ſaid Mr. Rawlins gave an annuity of £3. to be diſtributed quarterly to poor widow men and women of Woodhouſe, who ſhould have a charge of children to keep; £3. to the poor of Barrow and Quorndon; 40*s.* more to the poor of Woodhouſe and Quorndon (after the death of his couſin Morrel, who, as your petitioners are informed, is now dead); 2*l.* 10*s.* to the poor of Mountſorell meeting; and £1. to repair the highways at Woodhouſe. The reſidue and overplus of the rent of the ſaid houſe (after taxes and incident charges paid), he gave one moiety thereof to his two eldeſt truſtees, and the other moiety to be by them diſtributed to the poor of Woodhouſe and Quorndon for ever.

That the preſent truſtees have, for 18 years laſt paſt, received the rents and profits of the ſaid houſe in London; during which time, they have only diſtributed a ſum of money once or twice to the poor out of the rents of the houſe, and have not given or diſtributed one farthing to the poor out of the Woodhouſe eſtate for 12 or 13 years laſt paſt, though often deſired and entreated by your petitioners ſo to do; but, on the contrary, have expreſſly declared that no money ſhall be given to the poor out of the ſaid eſtates, whilſt the ſaid truſtees live.

That, the ſchoolmaſter of Woodhouſe being lately dead, they, the ſaid truſtees, have placed therein a ſchoolmaſter too young to officiate[2].

That there now remain (as your petitioners are informed and believe) in the hands of the truſtees large ſums of money, amounting to 157*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* and £50. or ſome other or greater ſums, to be accounted for, which they, or one of them, have at divers times received from the donative eſtates aforeſaid, and by them, or one of them, applied to their own uſe and benefit[3].

Your petitioners therefore, by reaſon of poverty, not being able to help themſelves in the premiſſes, hope it from your charity, goodneſs, and pity, and humbly pray, that the truſtees may give a juſt and true account of the rents and profits by them, or either of them, received out of the donative eſtates beforementioned; and how, and to whom, and to what uſe, they have diſpoſed of the ſame; and that the money which on ſuch account ſhall be found to be in their or either of their hands may be diſtributed; a fit perſon elected for ſchoolmaſter; and that other perſons, and better qualified, may (by the interpoſition of an equitable court) be choſen truſtees in their place, who, having abuſed, or wilfully neglected, almoſt every article of their truſt, by the deed of ſettlement and will of the ſaid Mr. Rawlins ſpecified and directed, have thereby forfeited their place of truſtees, as your petitioners are informed and believe. And your petitioners ſhall pray, &c."

"We whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, inhabitants of Woodhouſe, Barrow, and Quorndon, do certify that the cauſe of complaint, in the petition above expreſſed, is juſt and true, according to our knowledge and belief; in witneſs whereof we have hereunto ſet our hands, this . . . day of December, 1744."

(Signed by ſeveral of the neighbours.)

"To Thomas Vaughan, eſq. Mr. Samuel Wyld, or any other attorney of the courts of law, or ſolicitor in the courts of equity at Weſtminſter, or proctor in any of the eccleſiaſtical courts.

Theſe are to deſire and authoriſe you, or any of you, in our names, and to our uſe and benefit, to aſk, demand, ſue for, recover, and receive, of of Woodhouſe, and of Quorndon, in Leiceſterſhire, the two eldeſt truſtees of the eſtate at London and Woodhouſe, by the late Mr. Thomas Rawlins deviſed to charitable uſes, all ſuch annuities, and ſum and ſums of money, iſſuing out of the ſaid eſtate, to ſuch uſes as are now in arrear and unpaid, and which, by deed of ſettlement and will of the ſaid Mr. Rawlins, are mentioned to be, and are by him given, and which ought by the ſaid truſtees to be annually and quarterly diſpoſed of, and paid to us poor and antient houſekeepers of Woodhouſe, Quorndon, and Barrow; and, farther, to ſue, and uſe all ſuch lawful and equitable ways and means whatſoever, in formâ pauperis, or otherwiſe, for the diſcovering, recovering, and receiving the ſame, as you ſhall judge to be meet and convenient; and to obtain relief and juſtice for us in or concerning all or any the non-ſeaſances, miſ-ſeaſances, and cauſes of complaint, in the petition before written ſet forth.

---

[1] Now (1798) in the tenure of Mr. Dawſon, an eminent bookſeller, and agent for the Oxford preſs.

[2] That theſe apprehenſions were ill-grounded, appeared by the ſingular ability with which the ſchool was for many years conducted by this young gentleman; who, when he undertook the management of the ſchool, was not quite 15 years old.

[3] Theſe charges were ſo far from being ſubſtantiated, that the truſtees were continued in their office.

Atteſted by { SARAH JOYCE, her mark +.
ELIZABETH JARVIS her mark +.
REBECCA CUNNINGHAM's mark +."

Specimen of the Account of the two eldeſt truſtees of Mr. Rawlins's donative eſtate at London and Woodhouſe; touching their receipts and payments out of the ſame.

(N. B. The taxes in this ſpecimen are computed at a medium of 3*s. per* pound, communibus annis.)

Received.	£.	s.	d.	Paid.	£.	s.	d.	Balance.
1727. A year's rent due at Lady-day, — —	20	0	0	Dr. Cheſelden, a year's intereſt of £350. — —	17	13	0	Due to truſtees.
				The tax due at Lady-day	3	0	0
				For receiving the rent, and returning the money, —	0	6	8	£. s. d. 0 16 8
1728. 1729. } Two years' rent	40	0	0	Two years' tax, intereſt, &c.	41	13	4	2 10 0
1730. A year and quarter's rent due at Midſummer —	25	0	0	A year and quarter's tax, a year's intereſt to Dr. Cheſelden, &c. — —	21	5	8	In hands of truſtees. 0 18 4

N. B. the ground-leaſe of the houſe expired at Midſummer 1730; and then it was let for £45. per annum.

Received.	£.	s.	d.	Paid.	£.	s.	d.	Balance.
1731. A year's rent due at Midſummer — —	45	0	0	A year's tax, intereſt, &c.	24	5	8	21 6 8
1732. A year's rent -	45	0	0	The tax, intereſt, &c. as above,	24	11	8	41 15 0

N. B. This year the truſtees received the balance of Mrs. Hartopp's London account, 54*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*; which, added to 41*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.* the balance then in their hands, was 96*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* which would almoſt have diſcharged the £100. laſt borrowed of Dr. Cheſelden without occaſion; but, inſtead of that, it is ſaid they diſtributed the ſaid 54*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* principal and borrowed money (or part of it), in a looſe, wanton manner, not regarding the directions of the donor's will.

But in this ſpecimen I ſhall ſuppoſe they did regard the wills and directions, and paid the annuities unpaid from Michaelmas 1726 (when Colonel Hartopp, the other truſtee, died): then the account will ſtand thus:

Received.	£.	s.	d.	Paid.	£.	s.	d.	Balance.
				1727. Paid a year's annuity to the poor, due at Michaelmas 1727,	15	10	0	In hands of truſtees.
				1728. Paid ditto —	15	10	0
				1729. Paid ditto —	15	10	0
				1730. Paid the ſame —	15	10	0	3 7 11
				1731. Paid ditto —	15	10	0
				1732. Paid ditto —	15	10	0
1733. A year's rent due at Midſummer 1733 — —	45	0	0	A year's tax — —	6	15	0
				A year's intereſt to Dr. Cheſelden	17	10	0	23 16 3
				Returning the money —	0	6	8
1734. 1735. 1736. } Three years' rent	135	0	0	Three years' tax, intereſt, and returning the money, —	73	15	0	23 16 3

N. B. About this time the houſe at London was repaired. The money expended (on their producing the workmen's bills) will be allowed in diſcharge of part of the balance in their hands.

Received.	£.	s.	d.	Paid.	£.	s.	d.	Balance.
1737. 1738. 1739. 1740. } Four years' rent	180	0	0	Four years' tax, intereſt, &c.	98	6	8	166 14 7

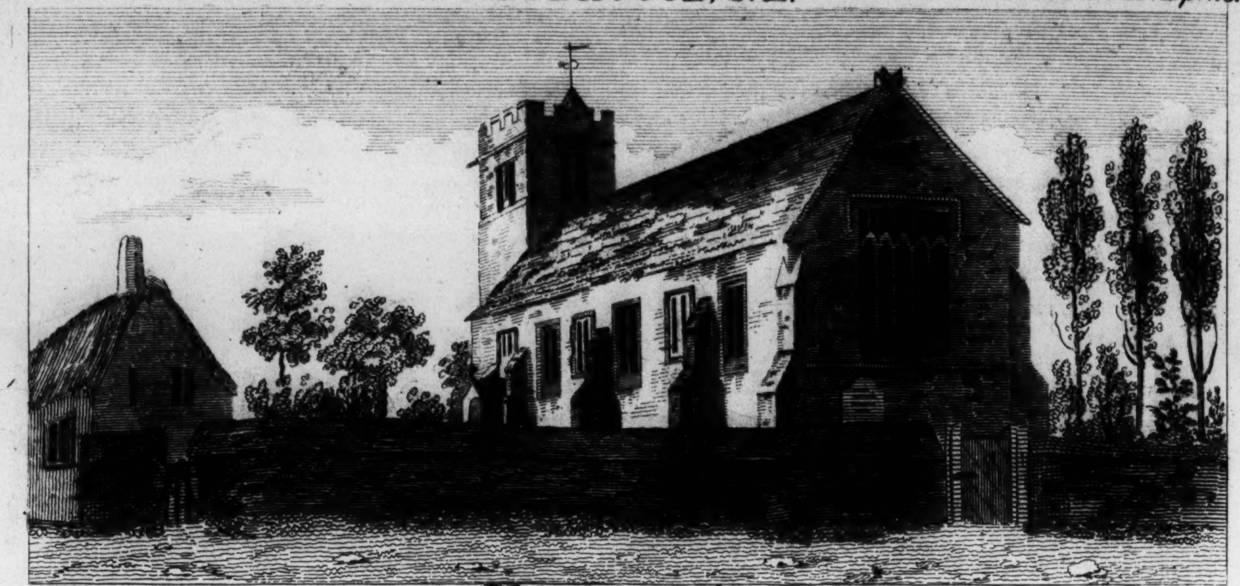
N. B. About this time ſome money was diſtributed for the poor annuitants; but, as the ſum is known only to themſelves, on their producing proper vouchers to whom by name, &c. diſtributed, &c. that will alſo be allowed, and ſtruck out of the charge.

Received.	£.	s.	d.	Paid.	£.	s.	d.	Balance.
1741. 1742. 1743. 1744. } Four years' rent	180	0	0	Four years' tax, intereſt, &c.	98	6	8	248 7 11

Specimen of the Woodhouſe account.

Received.	£.	s.	d.	Paid.	£.	s.	d.	Balance.
1727. The rents of the Vicardipards, due at Michaelmas —	26	10	0	Paid, as per account of Robert Fouldes the ſchoolmaſter,	27	2	11	In hands of truſtees.
—— Ditto of the School-cloſes, &c. — —	8	10	0					£. s. d. 3 12 0
Water rent — —	0	5	0
1728. 1729. 1730. 1731. } Four years' rent of the premiſſes due at Michaelmas 1731	141	0	0	Paid, as per ditto account, for four years — —	120	0	11	24 11 1
1732. The rents due at Michaelmas — —	35	5	0	Paid the tax due at Michaelmas	3	4	0
				Schoolmaſter's ſalary -	24	0	0
				Apprenticing a boy —	4	0	0	26 17 1
				Chief rent — —	0	5	0
				Mr. Herrick, for John Chapman's conveyance, —	1	10	0

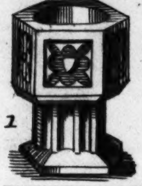
WOODHOUSE, S.E.

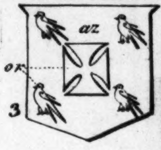


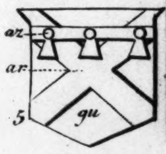
Schnebbelie del. May, 1791.

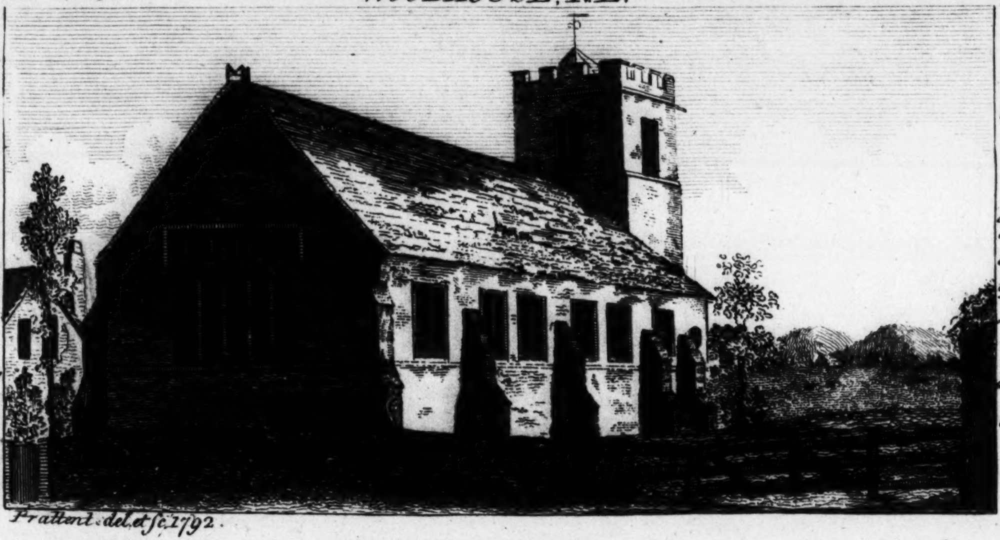
Cook sc.

WOODHOUSE, N.E.









Prattent. del. et sc. 1792.

4 or gu az ar or gu az
or gu az

WOODHOUSE SCHOOL.

16 az
or ar
az

J. Pridden del. July 13. 1793.

Longmate sc.

13 ar
az
gu az
ar

17 ar or az
or

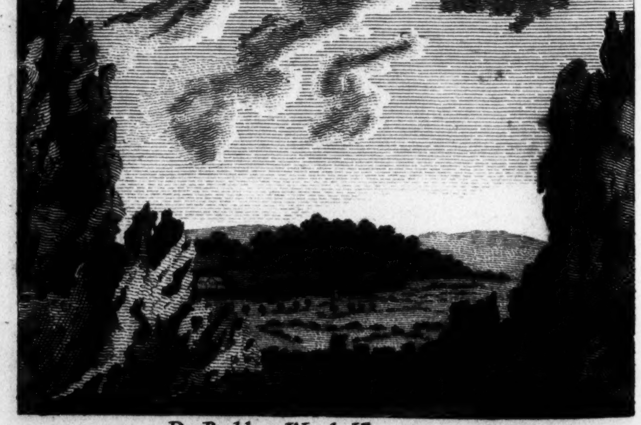
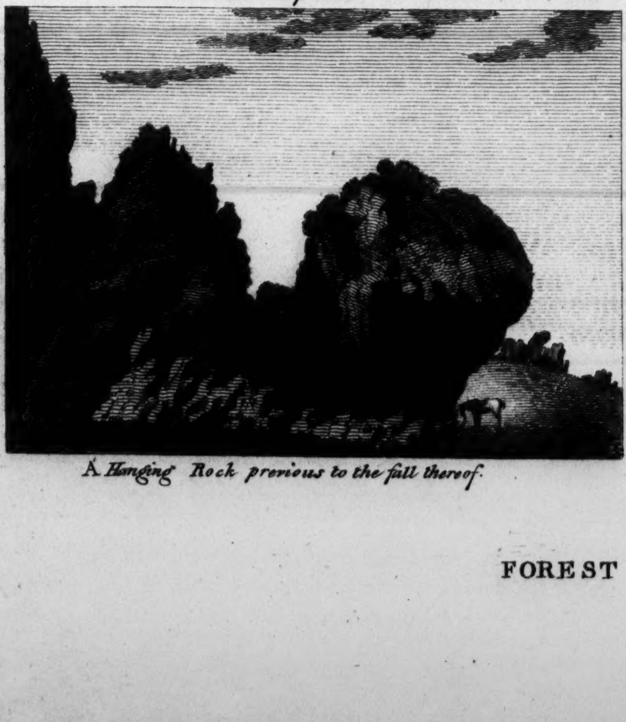
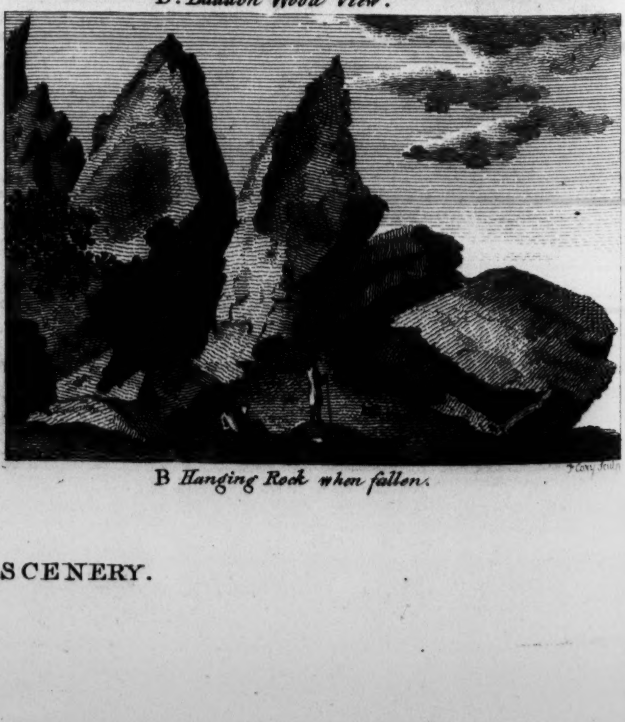
C. The Ship View.



D. Buddon Wood View.



A. Hanging Rock previous to the fall thereof.



B Hanging Rock when fallen.

FOREST SCENERY.

N. B. This year the truſtees received Mr. Hartop's balance, both of the Woodhouſe and London accounts, 79*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.*; which (or part of it) was diſtributed to the annuitants: but to whom by name, and in what proportions, may appear in their accounts.

Year	Received	£	s	d	Paid	£	s	d	£	s	d
1733.	The rents at Michaelmas	35	5	0	Paid the tax, chief rent, ſalary, and for apprenticing a boy, ut ſupra, — —	31	9	0	30	13	1

N. B. The old ſchool, two bays of good building, was removed into the Vicardipards (or Victary Party[1]), and a bay added for a dwelling-houſe; the charge of which is computed to have been about ....: towards which charge ſeveral parcels of wood were ſold off the eſtate; viz. one year, to the value of £20; at another time, £12, &c.; but the particular ſums, received and expended on account of this houſe, will appear in their account; and be allowed, if the building of it can be warranted by the deed of ſettlement.

Year	Received	£	s	d	Paid	£	s	d	£	s	d
1734. 1735. 1736. 1737. 1738.	Five years' rents due at Michaelmas 1738	176	5	0	The tax, ſchoolmaſter's ſalary, apprenticing a boy, and chief rent for 5 years, — —	157	5	0	49	13	1

N. B. No books and paper; no overplus paid to the poor.

Year	Received	£	s	d	Paid	£	s	d	£	s	d
1739. 1740. 1741. 1742. 1743. 1744.	Six years' rent due at Michaelmas 1744	211	10	0	Paid the ſalary, &c. as above, for ſix years — —	188	14	0	72	9	1

Woodhouſe.	£.	s.	d.	Beaumanor. £.	s.	d.	Charley. £.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	92	14	8	17	13	4	5	5	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	2	0	0	0	12	0	0	0	0
——— on the poor, —	90	14	8	0	0	0	5	5	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	4	9	6	0	0	0	0	0	0
Expended in litigations, — —	1	0	0	0	0	0	2	13	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	122	19	6	No poor.			4	18	3
——— 1784, —	113	0	3				4	18	3
——— 1785, —	128	19	5				2	9	2
Medium of theſe three years,	121	13	0				4	1	10
——— of county-expences,	2	16	8				0	0	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor, repairs of churches, roads, &c.	0	0	0				0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	118	16	4				4	1	10
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	3	4	11				0	11	6
——— of entertainments at meetings,	1	2	3				0	3	4
——— of law expences, —	3	13	4				0	0	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0				0	0	0

The Woodhouſe conſtable and pariſh officers are taken alternately, one year from Beaumanor hold, and ſworn in at Beaumanor court; the next year one taken from Barrow hold, and ſworn in at Barrow court.

The tithes, great and ſmall, all belong to William Herrick, eſq.

It has been cuſtomary at Beaumanor to give, on Valentine's day, a penny to every child who comes to Beaumanor Hall from Woodhouſe and the Eaves. About 15 years back they amounted to about 50; for the laſt two years upwards of 100 have had Valentines.

Woodhouſe maintains its own poor. A workhouſe was built a few years ſince in the Foreſt near Woodhouſe Eaves, and a piece of ground incloſed round the workhouſe.

A meeting-houſe for General Baptiſts has been lately built in Woodhouſe Eaves.

The CHAPEL (See Plate XVII.).

In 1220 and earlier, long before there was any chapel in this hamlet, the monks of the abbey of St. Severus poſſeſſed all the great and ſmall tithes of Woodhouſe; except only the offerings on the chief holidays, Peter-pence, and wax-ſhot.

The whole of the tithes here were afterwards purchaſed by the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis; who conſequently poſſeſſed the tithes of all the lands, leys, and meadows, eſtimated at about twelve loads, and worth more than 10*s.* a year; all which, with the tithes of the mill, they demiſed, with their tithe-barn, to Robert Hele, for an annual rent of £4.

They had beſides the tithes of Brakleykar, worth 4*s.* a year, and the whole of the Peter-pence.

The ground on which the tithe-barn was ſituated, the gift of William the ſon of Gerard, was 7 perches and 8 feet long, and 6 perches wide; for which they paid an annual acknowledgement of 4*d.*

About the year 1235, the abbot and convent gave permiſſion to Geoffrey Deſpenſer and his heirs, to build a chapel at his farm (fundum) called Little Haw (which muſt have been part of the hamlet of Woodhouſe) within the pariſh of Barrow; and to employ a chaplain there to celebrate divine ſervice; but not to have the privilege of ringing a bell (ſine campane pulſatione[2]).

"In this place Henry lord Beaumont earl of Boughan and Alice his wife, by the licence of the abbot of Leiceſter, built a very fair and ſtately chapel of aſhler ſtone in 1338. It was again repaired in 1450; for I have ſeen a deed of covenants made between Robert Farnham of Quorndon, of the one part, and a certain Free-maſon, for the new building of the ſteeple and the repair of the church, dated the ſaid 28 Hen. VI. It was then new glazed and repaired, as I ſhould gueſs by the arms of king Henry VI. ſtanding in the Eaſt window of the chapel, and at the coſts and charges (for the moſt part) of the viſcount Beaumont, as it ſhould ſeem by the coats and matches in the ſaid windows, and his badges the Elephant and the Lion carved in wood upon the foremoſt poſts of the ſeats, all which are curiouſly and neatly performed as in any place which I have ſeen[3]."

This chapel, dedicated to St. Mary, conſiſts of a low tower (which in 1552 contained two bells, as it does at preſent); a South porch; a nave, and chancel, to which the aſcent is by two ſteps; and Mr. Burton's account of its firſt foundation is confirmed by the following extract from Charyte's Rentale:

"Fundatio & compoſitio capelle de Woodhouſe.

"Memorandum, quòd abbas Leic' & ejuſdem loci conventus, ad ſpecialem rogatum nobilis viri đni Henrici de Bellomonte, &c. & đne Alicie uxoris ſue, conceſſit permittere, quantum in eis eſt, dictos đnum Henricum & Aliciam alioſque inhabitantes hamelettam de Wodhows, ut poſſint in predictâ hamelettâ unam capellam conſtruere, & unum tantummodò capellanum in eâdem celebraturum habere in futurum; diebus iſtis exceptis; ſcil', diebus Natalis Dñi, Sc̃i Thome Martyris doct', in Ramis Palmarum, diebus Paſce, Pentecoſte, Sc̃e Trinitatis, Omnium Sanctorum, dicti capellanus & parochiani de Wodhows debent intereſſe divinis in eccleſiâ de Baro memoratâ; diebus verò Circumciſionis Dñi, Epiphanie, Purificationis, die Cinerum, die Jovis in Cenâ Dñi, Paraſceves, Aſcenſionis Dñi, in feſtis Corporis Chriſti, Aſſumptionis, Conceptionis, Annunciationis beate Marie, vel aliquo dierum ſeu feſtorum prenominatorum, nullus in dictâ capellâ celebrabit; ſed in omnibus feſtis ſuperiùs memoratis ipſa capella clauſa maneat. Nullum ſacramentum in dictâ capellâ miniſtrabit, caſibus à jure permiſſis duntaxat exceptis. Item ſingulis annis futuris binâ vice, diebus Dominicis vel feſtivis, in prefatâ capellâ, cùm major populi multitudo convenerit, hanc indenturam exponet publicè in vulgari. Item nullus capellanus ibi deputandus eſt, niſi priùs per prefatos parochianos abbati & conventui preſentetur, ſuper vitâ & moribus, & ceteris ſui ſtatûs conditionibus, examinandus; &, ſi meruerit, admittendus eſt ad prefatam cantariam. Item dicti parochiani omnia & ſingula dictis capelle & cantarie, tam in libris, veſtimentis, ceteriſque ornamentis, & quibuſcunque aliis neceſſaria, toto tempore dicte capelle habende, ſumptibus ſuis propriis invenient condecentèr.

---

[1] Victary Party, which is ſituated near Buddon wood, was conveyed, by William Herrick, eſq. in the time of Charles II. to Mr. Thomas Rawlins, the founder of Woodhouſe ſchool, who made it a part of that endowment. Storer's Farm in Barrow paſſed alſo from the Herrick family to the ſame perſon.

[2] See p. 87.

[3] Burton, p. 315.

Multe ſunt alie ordinationes in predictâ fundatione & compoſitione, que non hìc ſcribuntur. Et, ſi contingat quòd tractu temporis per dictos parochianos ſeu capellanum aliquod prejudicium de iſtâ permiſſione dictis abbati & conventui, vel eccleſie de Baro, accidat in futurum, vel capellanus premiſſa capitula, ut premittitur, non obſervaverit, ſeu juramentum facere noluerit vel diſtulerit, &c. ceſſet omninò dicta cantaria, nec ſit aliquis capellanus ibidem de cetero, &c. Dat' anno Dñi MCCCXXXVIII [1]."

" Forma juramenti capellani de Wodhows, faciend' đno abbati.

In Dei nomine, amen. Ego Johannes Hulcok, de Barwe, capellanus, conductus ad celebrandum in capellâ de Wodhows, quamdiu ibidem ſtetero & celebravero, vobis abbati & conventui, & ſucceſſoribus veſtris, obediens ero in licitis & canonicis mandatis, paritèr & fidelis; & indenturam ſuper fundationem dicte capelle factam, & ſigillis đni Henrici de Beumont & offic' đni archidiaconi Leyc' conſignatam, firmitèr & fidelitèr ex parte meâ obſervabo [in omnibus capitulis capellanum ibidem celebrantem contingentibus qualitèrcunque]; ſicut Deus me adjuvet, et ſancta Dei evangelia. Acta ſunt hec VI non. Octobris, aº Dñi MCCCXXXIX. in parvâ aulâ abbathie Leic'; preſentibus, fratre Ric̃o de Caſtelton, magiſtro Joh̄e de Hathre, Thomâ de Thurmaſton, & Henrico de Burſtall.

" Mem, quòd anno Dñi MCCCCXXXXIIII°, XXVII° die menſis Novembris, đnus Richardus Beſton, capellanus de Wodhows, fecit fidelitatem in domo capitulari monaſterii Leic', đno Gilberto abbati ejuſdem monaſterii, ſecundùm formam cujuſdam indenture indè pleniùs confectam; preſentibus ibidem Joh̄e Peney priore, đno Wiłło Charite quondam priore, đno Joh̄e Nores, & đno Ric̃o Palet capellano, cum aliis [2]."

The chapel of Woodhouſe has twice had the benefit of Queen Anne's bounty; which about four years ago was laid out, by the Rev. Thomas Hudſon, in the purchaſe of eleven acres of land in Quorndon field, near what was called the Moors, not far from the river Soar, and now lets for 22 guineas per annum.

The Rev. John Boyer was preſented to the perpetual curacies of Woodhouſe and Quorndon in 1799 by the vicar of Barrow, in whom the right of appointment is veſted.

In the windows of this chapel remain the following coats of arms, &c. engraved in Plate XVII.

Fig. 1. ſhews the font.

2. Argent, a croſs Gules; Hoſpital of Burton Lazars.

3. Azure, a croſs patée between four martlets Or; Pleſſington.

4. Quarterly, France and England; impaling, Quarterly, 1. Barry of eight, Argent and Gules, Hungary; 2, Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis Or, a label of three points Gules, Naples; 3. Argent, a croſs croſslet between four croſſes humette Or, Jeruſalem; 4. Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis Or, a border Gules, Anjou; 5. Azure, ſemé of croſs croſslets fitché, and two barbels adorſed and erect Or, Barré; 6. Or, on a bend Gules, three eaglets Argent, Lorrain: King Henry VI. and queen Margaret, daughter of Renatus king of Naples and Sicily [3].

5. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, a label of three points Azure, charged with three harts, Nevil.

6. Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis, a lion rampant Or, Beaumont; Gules, a ſaltire Argent, Nevil of Raby.

7. Azure, a croſs flory between five martlets Or, king Edward the Elder.

8. Quarterly, France and England, king Edward VI.

9. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Or; 2. Gules, an eagle diſplayed Or; 3. Gules, a chevron between three ducal coronets.

10. Barry of twelve Argent and Azure, three chaplets Gules, Grayſtock.

11. Quarterly of ſix; 1. defaced; 2. Azure, ten bezants, 4. 3. 2. and 1; a label; 3. Barry of eight, Argent and Azure; 4. 5. and 6. defaced; impaling, Quarterly, France and England.

12. Gules, a croſs Or, Burnaville.

13. Per ſaltire Arg. and Azure, a ſaltire Gules, Gage.

14. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Or, a lion rampant Azure, Percy; 2. and 3. Gules, three lucies erect Argent, Lucy.

15. Argent, a feſs Vaire, Or and Gules, Herrick.

16. Beaumont; impaling, Per feſs, Argent and Azure; in baſe a mullet Argent, round pierced Or.

17. Herrick; impaling, Gules, a feſs between ten billets Or, May.

18. Checqué, Or and Argent.

The following arms alſo (Plate XVIII.) are either at preſent in this chapel, or are deſcribed as formerly there by Burton:

19. On an atchievement: Herrick, with eſcutcheon of pretence; Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gage; 2. and 3. Gules, a chevron Vaire, between three ducal coronets Or. Creſt, a buffalo's head couped, gorged with a chaplet.

20. Is deſcribed on the monument, p. 158.

21. Heanes; ſee p. 117.

22. Beaumont; impaling, Azure, three cinquefoils Or, lord Bardolph.

23. Azure, three garbs Or, Comin earl of Boughan.

24. A banner Or, a pennon Gules, count D'Auverne.

25. Azure, two bars Or, Burdett.

26. Or, two bars Azure, an orle of martlets Gules, Paynell.

27. Or, a ſaltire Azure.

28. Lord Bardolph.

29. Quarterly, Gules and Argent, in the firſt quarter an eagle diſplayed Or, Phelip.

30. Vert, an eſcutcheon within an orle of martlets Or, Erpingham.

31. Per pale, Argent and Vert, an elephant bearing a caſtle on his back Or, Corbet.

32. Quarterly, France and England, Edward duke of York; impaling, Gules, a ſaltire Argent, Nevil.

33. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant, in pale Or, a label Argent, Edward duke of York; impaling Nevil.

34. Nevil.

35. Quarterly, France and England, within a border Argent, Humphrey duke of Glouceſter; impaling Nevil.

36. Gules, a ſaltire Argent; a label gobony, Argent and Azure, Nevil.

37. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, charged with a pellet, Nevil earl of Saliſbury.

38. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, charged with a mullet Sable, Nevil.

39. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, charged with rings in-

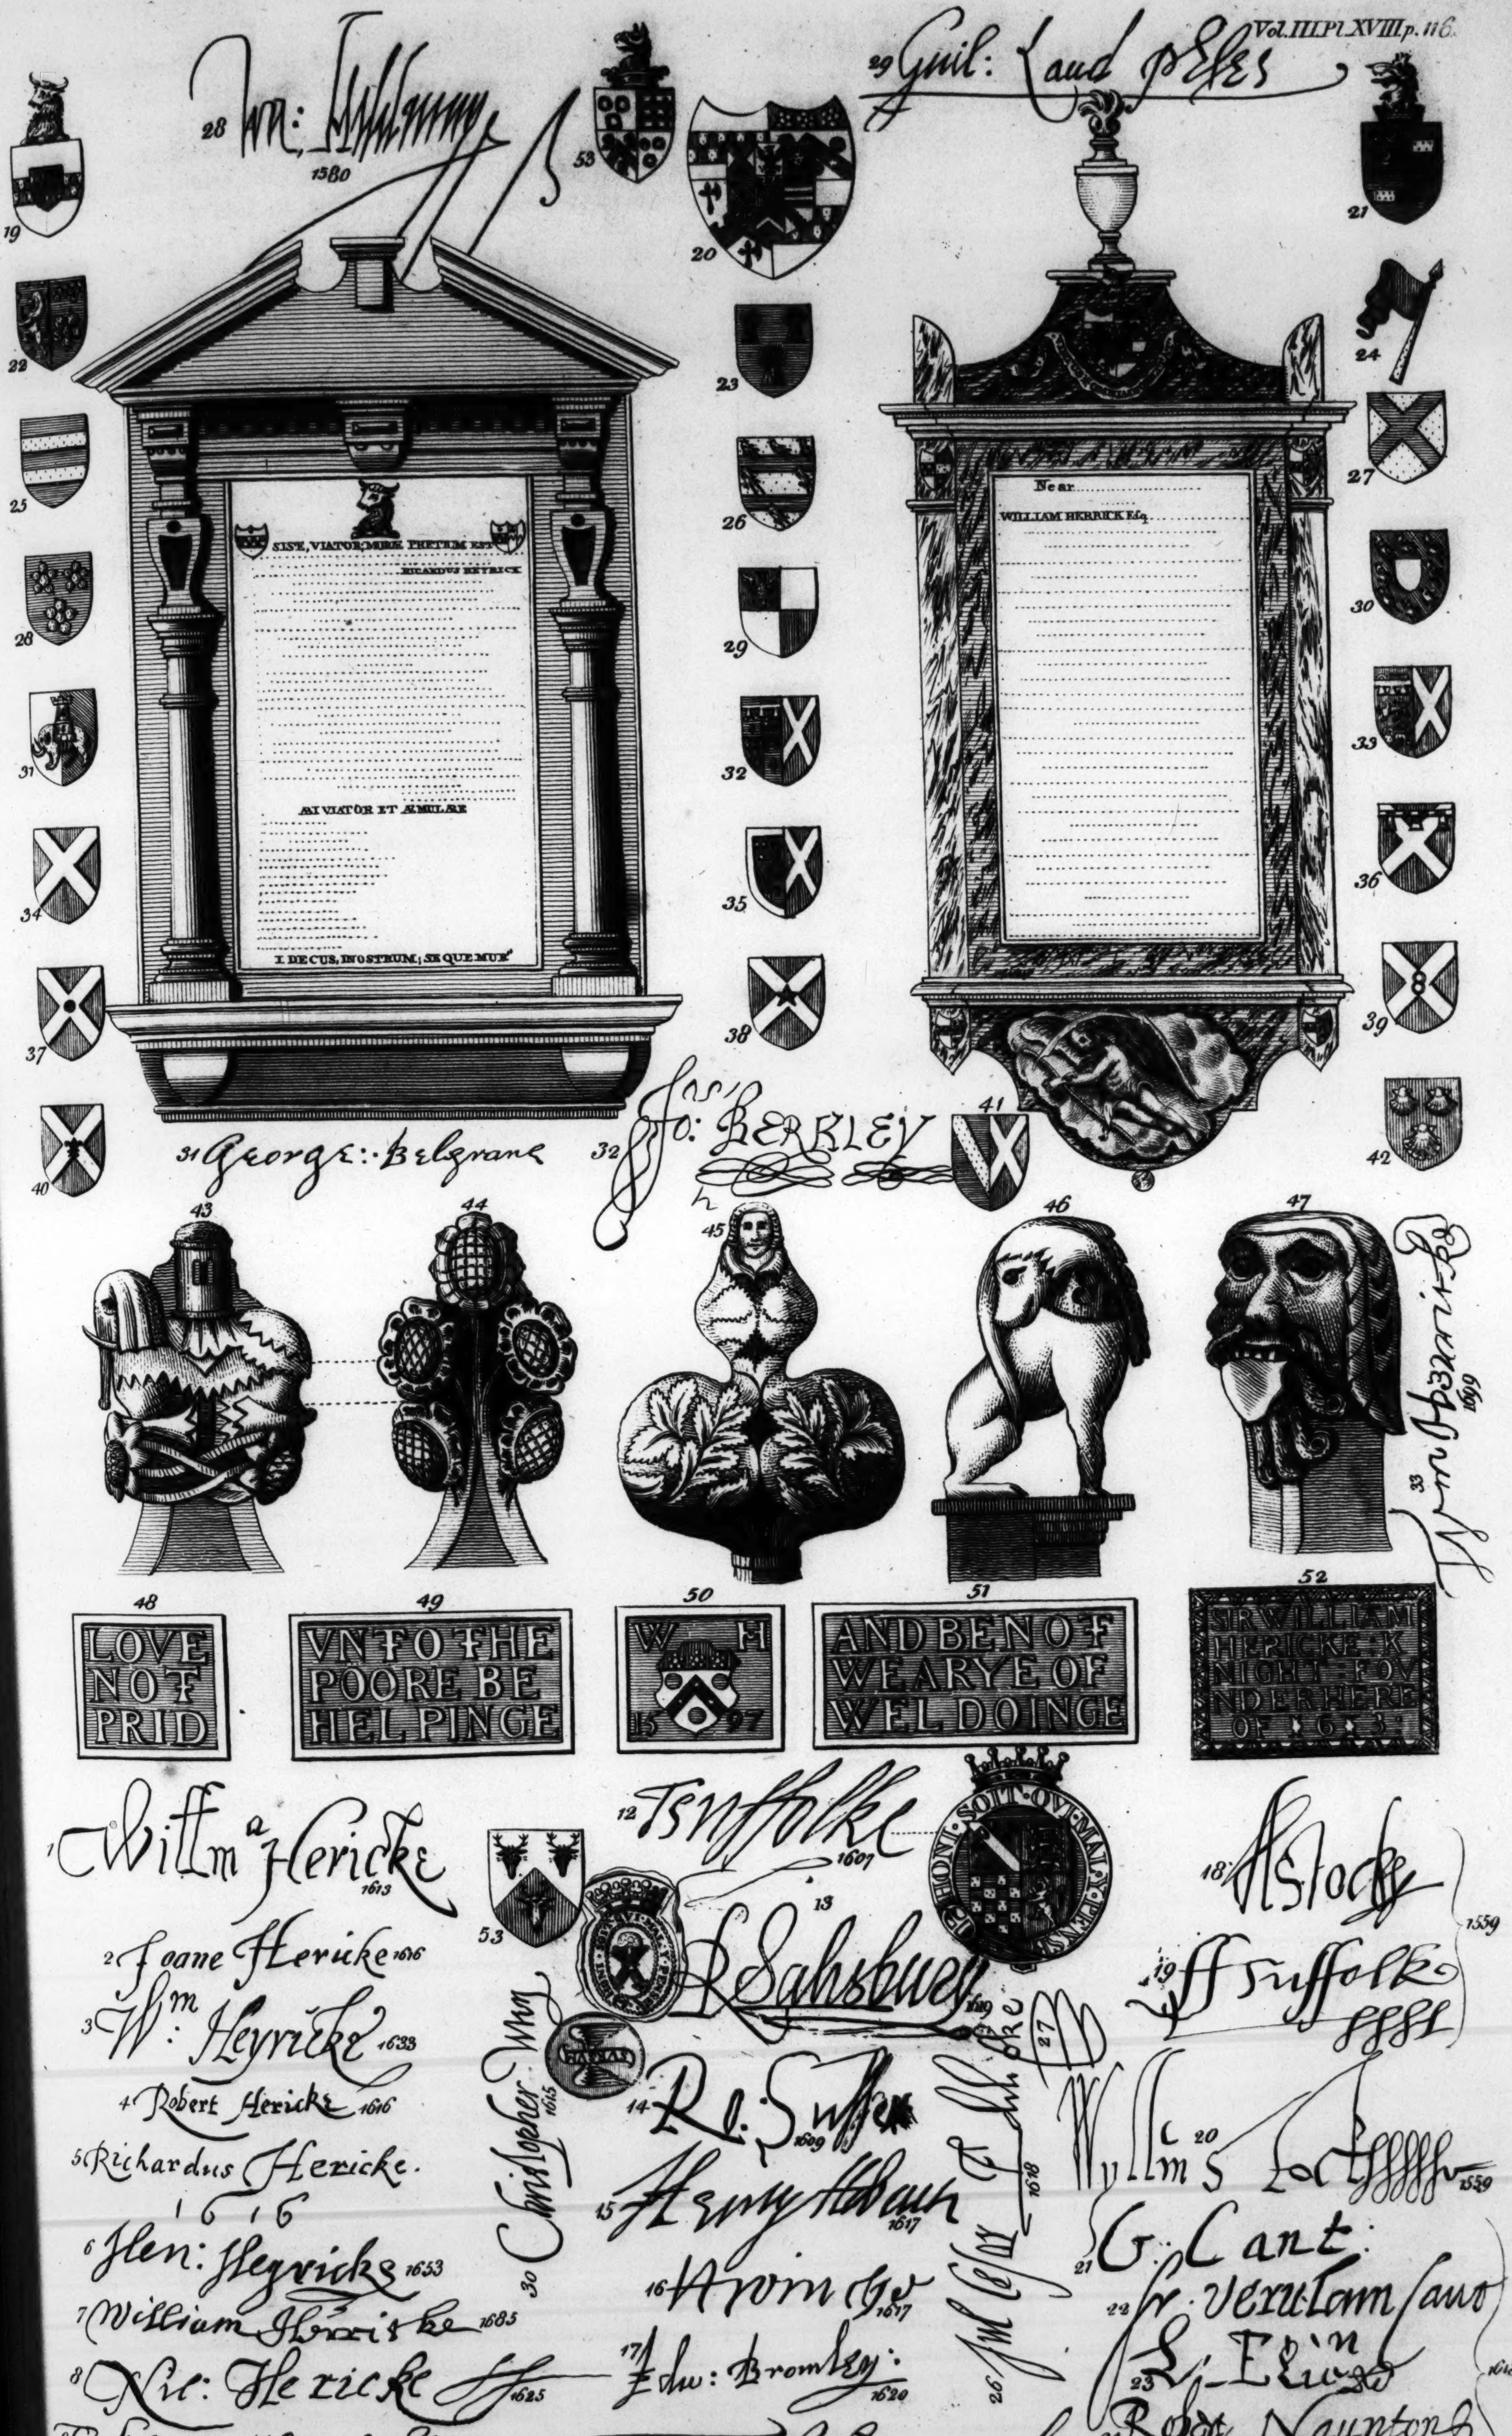
---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxlvii. b. cxlviii. a.

[2] Ibid. fol. cxlix.

[3] Sandford's Genealogical Hiſtory of Kings, ſays, p. 291, " Reyner duke of Anjou, titular king of Jeruſalem, Sicilie, Aragon, Valance, &c."

terlaced



28 Wm: 1380
29 Guil: Laud
19
53 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
SISTE, VIATOR, MERÆ PRETIUM EST
RICARDUS HEYRICK
ABI VIATOR ET ÆMULARE
I DECUS, I NOSTRUM; SEQUEMUR Near
WILLIAM HERRICK Esq.
31 George : Belgrave
32 Jo: Berkley
43
44
45
46
47
48
49
50
51
52
33 Wm Heyricke 1599
LOVE NOT PRID
VNTO THE POORE BE HELPINGE
W H 1597
AND BE NOT WEARYE OF WEL DOINGE
SIR WILLIAM HERICKE KNIGHT FOVNDER HEREOF 163
1 Willm Hericke 1613
2 Joane Hericke 1616
3 Wm: Heyricke 1633
4 Robert Hericke 1616
5 Richardus Hericke. 1616
6 Hen: Heyricke 1653
7 William Herricke 1685
8 Nic: Hericke 1625
9 Thomas Heyricke 1693
10 Will, Herrick 1725
11 Tho: Herrick 1725
12 T Suffolke 1607
13 R Salisbury 1609
14 Ro: Sussex 1609
15 Henry Hobart 1617
16 Arundel 1617
17 Edw: Bromley: 1620
18 Astocke
19 T Suffolk 1559
20 Wyllm's 1559
21 G: Cant
22 Fr: Verulam Canc
23 L Elin
24 Robt Naunton 1618
25
26 1618
27
30 Christopher 1615
HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE

Longmate. delt et sculpt 1797.

terlaced and croſt, Sable, Nevil.

40. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, charged with a fleur de lis Sable, Nevil.

41. Azure, a bend Or, Scrope; impaling, Nevil.

42. Gules, three eſcallops Arg. Dacres of Gilleſland.

At the end of the open ſeats are ſeveral carved figures, arms of Corbet, &c. fig. 43—47.

On the South ſide of the chancel is a ſmall locker; and on an antient pew belonging to the Herricks are theſe ſentences, in raiſed letters; fig. 48—51.

LOVE	VNTO THE	W. H.	AND BE NOT
NOT	POORE BE	(Arms)	WEARYE OF
PRID.	HELPINGE.	1597.	WEL DOINGE.

At the Weſt end of the chapel is a neat gallery, having in front the arms of Herrick ſingle; alſo of Herrick impaling May; and, on a ſmall board, in gold letters; fig. 52:

"SIR WILLIAM
HERICKE : K
NIGHT : FOV
NDER : HERE
OF : 1613 :"

On the pulpit are the arms of Herrick; and,

EX DONO WILL'MI MILITIS, DOMINI
BENIGNI HEYRICKE, ANNO 1615.

At the back of the pulpit:

I COR. IX. 16.
VE MIHI SI NON E-
VANGELIZAVERO.

On the ſounding-board:

HARKEN VNTO THE WORD OF THE LORD.

On the front of the reading-deſk:

THEY THAT LOVE GOD SPEAKE
WILL HEARE HIS WORD. TRVTH.
HEARKEN VNTO THE WORDE OF GOD.

Thomas Holmes, of Belton, gent. in 1736, gave to this chapel a ſilver flaggon; and the late Mrs. Herrick of Beaumanor, in 1778, gave a handſome crimſon velvet cuſhion[1] for the pulpit, with a broad gold lace, and a deep valance richly fringed; on which is written, in letters of gold, VIRTUS NOBILITAT.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Under the gallery is a flat ſtone to the memory of Mrs. Anne Herrick, who died in 1655; and on a tablet over the communion-table is a character of the ſame lady. [Both theſe are given in the memoirs of the family, p. 157.]

Another flat ſtone within the rails of the altar (with the arms of Herrick) records the interment of William Herrick, eſq. in 1705.

Three other flat ſtones, belonging to the Herrick family, are ſo worn as not to be eaſily legible.

A handſome mural monument has lately been erected (ſee p. 158.) for the late William Herrick, eſq. who died in 1773; and for whom an atchievement is placed in the chapel, as deſcribed in fig. 19. p. 116.

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "Here lieth interred
the body of William Rawlins, ſen. gent.
who departed this life the 31ſt day of March,
A. D. 1696, and in the 79th year of his age."

2. "Here lieth interred the body of Thomas Rawlins; who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by various charities,
diſpenſed both in his life and at his death;
a particular account of which is given on a fair monument erected at the free-ſchool of his donation near to this place, with the juſt view of perpetuating his worthy memory.
He died on the 30th day of September, 1712,
in the 70th year of his age."

3. "Here lieth the body of Mary the wife of Thomas Chapman, of Quorn, who departed this life the 5th day of July, 1708,
in the 39th year of her age."

4. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Chapman, ſon of Joſeph Chapman by Frances his wife, who departed this life Auguſt the 13th day, A. D.
1720, aged 53 years."

5. "Here lieth the body of Mary Holmes,
the wife of Thomas Holmes, late of Belton, gent.
who departed this life April 4, A. D. 1731.
Here alſo lieth the body of the aboveſaid
Thomas Holmes, gent. who departed this life Feb. 28, 1748, aged 83 years.
He gave to the chapel of Woodhouſe a ſilver tankard and a communion-cloth."

6. Quarterly, 1. and 4. . . . . . three creſcents . . . . Heanes; 2. and 3. . . . . . . a feſs . . . . Creſt, out of a mural coronet . . . . . a herald tiger's head; Plate XVIII. fig. 21.

"Here lieth the body of Edward Heanes,
who departed this life the 15th of July, 1749,
aged 74 years.
Here alſo lieth the body of Mary, the wife of Edward Heanes, and daughter of Skinner Ryther, of Bingham in Nottinghamſhire.
She departed this life the 8th of July, 1763,
aged 78 years."

7. Arms the ſame as the laſt.
"Sacred to the memory of Edward Heanes, gent.
ſon of the late Edward Heanes, gent.
and Mary his wife.
He departed this life the 1ſt day of November, 1789,
aged 72 years."

8. "Here lieth the body of Mr. Thomas Heanes, ſon of the late Mr. Edward and Mary Heanes.
He departed this life the 10th of January, 1779,
aged 59 years."

9. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Heanes, daughter of the late Mr. Edward and Mary Heanes.
She departed this life the 12th of November, 1785,
aged 69 years."

10. "Beneath are conſigned to earth's receſs
the mortal remains of Mary Heanes, daughter of Edward Heanes, gent. and Mary his wife.
She departed this life the 18th day of December,
1794, aged 85 years."

11. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Steviſon, who was ſervant to William Herrick, of Beaumanor, eſq. and his father, near 50 years.
He departed this life the 29th of Auguſt, 1750,
aged 75 years."

12. "Here lieth the body of Ann Pymme, who was houſe-keeper to William Herrick, eſq.
of Beaumanor, near 30 years, who departed this life the 28th of Auguſt, 1771,
aged 70 years."

13. "Here lie the remains of Harriott, Sarah, and Daniel Chapman, the offspring of Daniel and Suſanna Chapman.
Harriott Chapman died Jan. 21, 1794, aged 4 years.
Sarah Chapman died on December 2d, 1795,
aged 8 years.
Daniel Chapman died on February 9th, 1796, aged 4 months."

In the church-yard:

"Beneath are interred the remains of

John Gaze,	Sarah Gaze
late of	his wife,
Beaumanor Park,	who died the
who departed this life	13th day of July,
the 22d of July, 1788,	1788,
aged 87 years."	aged 69."

---

[1] It is remarkable that this cuſhion did not arrive from London till a few days after this lady's death; and the firſt uſe that was made of it was at her funeral ſermon. The chalice and paten, given by ſir William Herrick in 1610 (ſee p. 111), which had been new gilt at her expence, arrived at the ſame time. She left, by will, five pounds to the poor of Woodhouſe; and five pounds, to put out a poor boy apprentice from the town of Woodhouſe; which ſums were paid according to the intention of the donor.

Extracts from the Regiſter Book, on the back of which is written, "Woodhouſe Regiſter from 1623 to 1706. This Regiſter begins when the chapel was firſt founded [i. e. conſecrated]; before which perſons baptized—married—in the Regiſter of Quorndon."

ADRIAN FOULDES, } Churchwardens.
ROBERT NOVIE, }

In 1633, Henry Coleman was curate.

Richard Rabye, John Smalye, Churchwardens.

Anthony Beveridge occurs curate in 1634.

Thomas Ludford, Thomas Rawlins, Churchwardens.

"Anno Domini 1634. Antonio Beveregio munere preſbyterati 1610 pfungente."

From 1642 to 1651 ſome leaves of the Regiſter are loſt; and from 1651 to 1661 one alſo is loſt.

From 1662 to 1705 every page is ſigned Edward Callis, clerk; no curate mentioned. (He was the pariſh clerk.)

Charles Lynes was curate in 1710.

J. Nixon was curate in 1763.

Thomas Hudſon, curate of Woodhouſe and Quorndon, died Jan. 30, 1798.

MARRIAGES.

James Lancaſhire, gent. and Dorothy Hericke, gentlewoman, married the 1ſt day of July, 1628.

Per me, R. JUES, de WOODHOUSE, Curate.

Mr. Beaumont Pight and Elizabeth Hericke June 25, 1633.

James Tomſon and Chriſtian Heyrick, Thurſday, Feb. 20, 1696.

Robert Bunnys, of Mountſorell, and Elizabeth Farnham, of Woodhouſe, Nov. 30, 1701.

Mr. Benjamin Farnham and Sarah Farnham, of Quorndon, May 14, 1703.

Edward Prior and Philippa Farnham, both of Quorndon, were joined in marriage per me Charles Lynes, curate, with licence, Oct. 2, 1710.

John Heyrick, of Beaumanor, married Elizabeth Thirnby, of Beaumont Leyes, Sept. 21, 1715.

Thomas Hartopp, eſq. and Mrs. Ann Brown, April 18, 1724. [This was a ſecond wife.]

Mr. William Stevens and Mrs. Ann Farnham, both of Quorndon, Jan. 26, 1738.

BAPTISMS.

Suſanna Fouldes, daughter of Margaret Fouldes, the 9th day of Julie, 1623.

Thomas Branſon, ſon of Clement Branſon, the 7th of September, 1623.

Mary Lancaſhire, daughter of James Lancaſhire, the 18th day of June, 1629.

Elizabeth Pight, daughter of Beaumont Pight, the laſt of May, 1634.

Rebecca Beveridge, daughter of Mr. Anthony Beveridge, curate, and Judith his wife, Aug. 4, 1635.

Frances Heyrick, daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. on Tueſday, October 27, 1663.

Mary, the daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. and Frances his wife, Thurſday, Sept. 14, 1665.

Chriſtian, the daughter of William Heyrick, of Beaumanor, eſq. on Friday, Feb. 8, 1666.

Thomas, the ſon of Thomas Heyrick and of Suſannah his wife, Sept. 4, 1668.

Thomas, the ſon of William Heyrick of Beaumanor, eſq. February 9, 1693.

Dorothy, daughter of Robert Bunnys, gent. and Elizabeth his wife, Sept. 18, 1716.

Mary[1], daughter of Chiverton Hartopp, eſq. and Catharine his wife, July 20, 1732.

Lucy, daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. and Lucy his wife, March 20, 1741.

Dorothy, daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. and Lucy his wife, Dec. 27 1743.

William, ſon of William Heyrick, eſq. and Lucy his wife, March 4, 1745.

John, ſon of William Heyrick, eſq. by Lucy his wife, Nov. 12, 1749.

Thomas Bainbrigge Heyrick, third ſon of William Heyrick, eſq. and Lucy his wife, Dec. 8, 1754.

Lucy, firſt daughter of John and Anne Patchet, of Woodhouſe, April 11, 1760.

Lucy, ſecond daughter of John and Anne Patchet, baptized June 18, 1763.

Thomas, ſon of Daniel Chapman by Suſanna his wife, Dec. 26, 1771.

John, ſon of John and Ann Allen, Oct. 16, 1795.

Charlotte, daughter of John Hawkes, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, May 29, 1791.

Mary-Heane, daughter of George Watkinſon, gent. and Mary his wife, May 20, 1792.

William-John, ſon of John Hawkes, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, Sept. 2, 1792.

John, ſon of John Hawkes, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, Sept. 3, 1793.

Harriot, daughter of John Hawkes, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, October 17, 1794.

Ann, dau of John and Ann Allen, Auguſt 5, 1795.

Clara, daughter of John Hawkes, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, May 13, 1796.

Ann-Chriſtiana, daughter of George Watkinſon, gent. and Mary his wife, June 13, 1796.

BURIALS.

John Fouldes, the 24th day of May, 1623.

Ralph Ludford, the ſon of Thomas Ludford, the 3d day of December, 1623.

Mr. John Heyrick, the 9th of May, 1630.

Richard Jues, the 8th of March, 1632.

John Holmſtead, Oct. 30, 1635.

Frances, the daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. Wedneſday, January 20, 1664.

William Heyrick the elder, of Beaumanor, eſq. Friday the 16th day of February, 1671.

Thomas Heyrick, June 5, 1682.

Will. Rawlins, of Burley, gent. the 2d of Apr. 1696.

William Heyrick, eſq. the 9th day of December, 1705, being Sunday.

Mr. Thomas Rawlins, the 4th of October, 1712.

N. B. See Woodhouſe-ſchool, p. 112.

Mrs. Mary Bennet, relict of Peter Bennet, Oct. 12, 1713.

Thomas Chapman, Aug. 15, 1720.

John, ſon of Mr. John Herrick, Dec. 6, 1723.

Mr. John Heyrick, June 17, 1724.

Mrs. Mary Herrick, widow, Oct. 25, 1727.

Mr. William Bainbridge Heyrick, Jan. 20, 1733.

Mrs. Holbrook, Sept. 4, 1736.

Mr. William Heyrick, March 14, 1741.

Mr. John Boley, Aug. 7, 1744.

Elizabeth, wife of Robert Bunnys, of Mountſorrel, Jan. 21, 1745.

Dorothy, daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. and Lucy his wife, Sept. 17, 1745.

Dorothy, daughter of William Heyrick, eſq. and Lucy his wife, June 9, 1747.

Thomas Holmes, gent. March 1, 1748.

Dorothy, relict of William Heyrick, late of Beaumanor, eſq. July 7, 1749.

Mr. Edward Heane, ſenior, late from Bingham in Nottinghamſhire, July 12, 1749.

Thomas Stevenſon, Aug. 31, 1750.

Mary, the wife of Abbot Lewin, was buried November the 4th, 1754. N. B. The above Mary Lewin was moſt inhumanly and barbarouſly murthered by Abbot Lewin, her ſaid huſband, on a private difference betwixt them, on the firſt day of November in the year above-written.

Mrs. Anne Heyrick, of Beaumanor, Jan. 22, 1759.

Lucy, dau. of John and Ann Patchet, June 7, 1760.

Mrs. Mary Heane, widow, July 12, 1763.

Dorothy Bunnys buried in Woodhouſe chapel the 20th of June, 1769.

Anne Pym, Aug. 14, 1771.

William Heyrick, of Beaumanor, eſq. died Sept. 27; and was buried on Saturday Oct. 2, 1773, in the 85th year of his age.

Lucy Heyrick, wife of William Heyrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, died March 25, and was buried on Saturday, March 28, 1778, in the 64th year of her age.

Thomas Heane, gent. died Jan. 14, 1779.

Mrs. Eliz. Heane, gentlewoman, Nov. 16, 1785.

Mr. Edward Heane, gent. died Nov. 1, and was buried Nov. 6, 1789.

Mrs. Mary Heane, died Dec. 18, and was buried Dec. 26, 1794.

Harriot, daughter of Daniel and Suſanna Chapman, Jan. 21, 1794.

Daniel, ſon of D. and Suſ. Chapman, Feb. 10, 1796.

Harriot, daughter of Daniel and Suſanna Chapman, Feb. 13, 1797.

---

[1] This excellent lady is now the Counteſs Howe, and mother of Lady Sophia-Charlotte Curzon. The principal front of the houſe in which ſhe was born, being lately pulled down, is preſerved as a curioſity in Plate XXIV. fig. 4. The old garden-front, built of foreſt-ſtone, is preſerved.

CHARITABLE BENEFACTIONS.

Table I.

Thomas Wood[1], gent. gave £47. to William Herrick, eſq. Chriſtopher Smalley, Thomas Bennett, and Robert Foulds, truſtees, appointed by his will to be laid out in a purchaſe, the rents and profits whereof were to be divided at the diſcretion of the truſtees once a year, for ever, among poor houſekeepers of the town of Woodhouſe, who do not receive any collection or allowance from the pariſh. A cloſe or parcel of ground, called Smithie Cloſe, in the townſhip of Coſſington, was accordingly purchaſed with the above money December 24, 1690, now let at 40*s. per annum*, and veſted in truſt for the ſame charitable uſes, by a deed bearing date March 22, 1775, in the hands of William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, Mr. Thomas Bennett of Kirkby Mallory, Mr. Henry Hind, of Swithland, and Miſs Sarah Bennett of Woodthorpe.

William Rawlins, of Burleigh Park, gent. gave by his will, dated March 26, 1696, a houſe and cloſe in Woodhouſe, containing by eſtimation, three acres and a half, and then occupied by William Page, at the clear yearly rent of £4. in truſt, to William Herrick, eſq. Charles Farnham, gent. William Tarlton, and Edward Crompton, for the purpoſe of putting out one poor boy, belonging to Woodhouſe or Woodhouſe Eves, an apprentice to ſome trade in London every five years for ever. The whole rents and profits of the ſaid eſtate are to be paid into the hands of the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor for the time being, and every five years to be by them laid out as an apprentice-fee in putting out the ſaid poor boy.

The preſent truſtees of this charity are, the Rev. Mr. Farnham, Edward Heanes, gent. Mr. Thomas Hind, and Robert Fouldes[2].

Table II.

Thomas Rawlins, of Woodhouſe, gent. by a ſingular act of generoſity, veſted an eſtate in Woodhouſe, during his life-time, in 1691, in truſt, for charitable uſes. He founded a free-ſchool in Woodhouſe, and endowed it with a ſalary of £21. per annum, for ever, payable out of the ſaid eſtate, for the education of 22 poor boys of Woodhouſe, 6 of Quorndon, and 6 of Barrow, in Engliſh, Latin, Writing, and Arithmetic. He gave alſo 40*s. per annum* more to be laid out in buying books and paper for the uſe of the ſaid poor boys. He alſo gave £20. per annum, to be added to a like ſum left by his father, and payable out of the ſame eſtate, towards raiſing a fund for putting a poor boy of Woodhouſe out an apprentice. The reſidue of the rents and profits of the ſaid eſtate he gave to the poor of Woodhouſe Eaves.

The ſame generous benefactor, at his death, in 1712, left the remainder of his eſtate and effects, conſiſting of two houſes, ſituate in the pariſh of St. Michael in the Querne, in Pater Noſter Row, London, by will, to other charitable uſes; among which he bequeathed £4. per annum to the poor of Woodhouſe and Woodhouſe Eaves, together with a third ſhare of the overplus rents and profits ariſing from the ſaid eſtates, after payment of the ſeveral charities.

The other particulars of the charities left by this worthy benefactor are preſerved upon a monument erected over the ſchool-door for that purpoſe.

The preſent truſtees (1791) are, Thomas Chapman of Quorndon, William Chapman, and George Watkinſon, gent. of Woodhouſe.

These Tables, together with the king's coat of arms, were put up at the expence of the pariſh.
"HENRY BRANSON and JOHN UPTON, churchwardens."

LITTLE HAW.

All that we now know of this place is, that it was within the pariſh of Barrow; apparently within the hamlet of Woodhouſe; and the reſidence of Geoffrey le Deſpenſer, who, about the year 1235, obtained permiſſion from the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis to build a chapel there, and to have divine ſervice regularly performed, but not to have the privilege of ringing a bell.

"Mem', quòd abbas & conventus Leyc' conceſſerunt Galfrido Diſpenſatori & heredibus ſuis conſtruere capellam in fundo ſuo de Littlehawe, intra parochiam eccleſie de Barowe, & in eâdem capellanum divina officia celebrantem ſine campane pulſatione, &c. ut in compoſitione[3]."

The preciſe meaning of Fundus is left unexplained by ſir Henry Spelman; but in Coke upon Littleton[4] it is ſaid, "quòd olim dicebatur fundus, nunc manerium dicitur;" a definition not adequate. Manerium was frequently an Honor, or large ſeignory; which fundus never was. It ſeems to be a ſmall manor, yielding corn, &c. for the houſhold; and differs from manerium, which ſometimes ſignified a barony, ſometimes the manor-houſe, and ſometimes a town; but fundus has eſpecial reference to agriculture, and proviſions for the ſuſtenance of life[5].

With this idea, it ſeems not unlikely that the fundus of Geoffrey le Deſpenſer, on which he built the chapel, was a manor ſubordinate to that of Loughborough; and, if ſo, might have been the ſite of the chantry on which Hugh Deſpenſer earl of Winton afterwards ſettled a yearly penſion of five marks, to be paid out of the revenues of his manor; with 18*d.* more for wine and wax; and eight cart-loads of wood annually from the woods belonging to the manor; for ſecuring of all which to the chantry-prieſt an eſpecial order was iſſued by king Edward III. in 1329[6]; and the identical ſpot on which Henry lord Beaumont (who obtained the manor of Loughborough in 1336) thought proper to place the noble manſion which he afterwards called Beaumanor; and, if this be ſo, the chapel demoliſhed at Little Haw was replaced by that at Woodhouſe.

---

[1] "Sept. 4, 1689, my balye, Thomas Wood, light of a fall of his horſe at Quorn Brigg, and died Sept. 10, 1689." From a memorandum of Mr. Herrick.

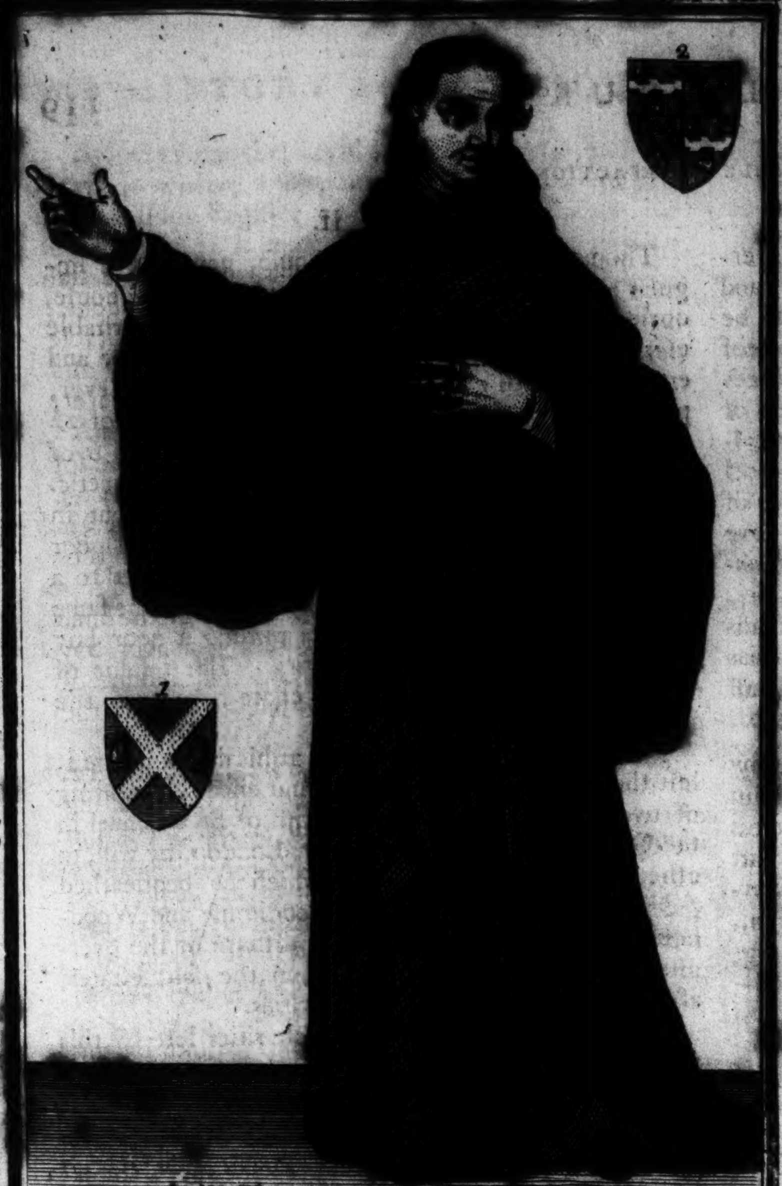
[2] Extracted from the original writings, April 12, 1777, by the Rev. Thomas Hudſon.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xv.

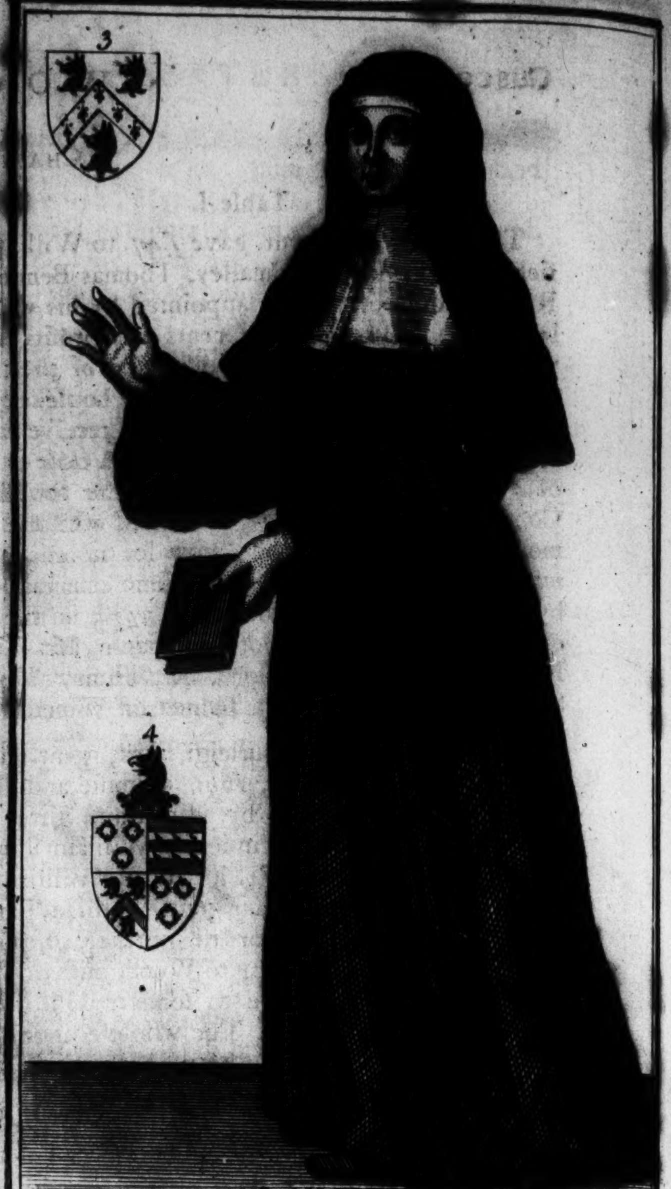
[4] Fol. 5.

[5] For this ingenious explanation I am indebted to the MSS. of Mr. Ruſſell.

[6] See hereafter, under Beaumanor, p. 134.



1. AN EREMITE AUGUSTINE OF CHARLEY.



2. AN EREMITE NUN.

C H A R L E Y,

though locally within the pariſh of Barrow, is a ſmall extraparochial hamlet, conſiſting of 10 farms, 18 houſes, and about 100 inhabitants; the ſoil very indifferent; and the roads exceedingly bad. It is ſituated in the moſt ſolitary part of the Foreſt of Charnwood, and was formerly ſurrounded by a thick wood. At the general ſurvey of 1086, it contained four ploughlands, which were at that time the property of Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter, the Conqueror's nephew[1]; but then lay waſte, and their value unknown[2].

In the poſſeſſion of the earls of Cheſter this lordſhip remained till the time of Ranulph de Meſchines, the third earl of the Norman race, and nephew of Hugh Lupus; who conveyed the lordſhip of Charley, with Alderman Haw, the foreſt of Charnwood, and all ſuch woods as were adjoining to the Foreſt of Leiceſter, as well thoſe of the fee of Cheſter as his own proper woods (his park at Barrow excepted), to king Henry I; by whom they were re-granted to Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter and his heirs, to hold and enjoy the ſame in as ample manner as the Foreſt of Leiceſter was held of the king; ſo alſo whatſoever he held in the city of Leiceſter, both in demeſne and in fee[3].

"Henricus[4], Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & dux Normannie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quia Ranulphus comes de Ceſtriâ dimiſit & conceſſit mihi habere in dominio Cernelegam, & Cernewodam, & Alderman-hagam, in defenſo, ſicut aliquod defenſum cariùs habeo, et omnia nemora que fuerant de feodo comitis de Ceſtriâ, que attingunt foreſtam Legreceſtrie, preter parcum ſuum, habere in defenſo, de waſtâ & de beſtiâ ſalvagiâ: ſicut autem predictus comes Ranulphus mihi hec dimiſit & conceſſit, ita et ego concedo Roberto comiti Legreceſtrie, habere hereditabiliter, cum alio feodo ſuo; & volo & præcipio ut benè & quietè & honorificè teneat, cum omnibus conſuetudinibus ſuis. Teſtibus; Theobaldo comite Bleſenſe, & Gualerano comite de Mellento, & Willielmo de Tano, & Nigello de Albini, & Willo de Luriaca, & Adamo de Portu, & Pagano filio Johis, & Gaufrido filio Pagani, & Andreâ de Baldement, & Roberto de Doneſtan-villâ. Apud Haveringas[5]."

By earl Robert Boſſu, who had founded in 1120, on Whittlebury foreſt, on the edge of Northamptonſhire, adjoining to the county of Bucks, the little priory of Luffield, aſſigning for that purpoſe "parvam landam que eſt inter Lumbreodam & Cepeleiam, ad manſiones & oratorium ibidem faciendum;" a grant was alſo made, "de aliâ terrâ de Cerneleiâ, tantum ad edificandum quantum ego convenienter conſiderabo per conſilium amicorum meorum[6]." To this priory of Luffield pope Alexander III, in 1174, confirmed "locum S. Mariæ de Charleiâ, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis[7]."

From Robert Boſſu, who died in 1168, this lordſhip deſcended to his ſon Robert Blanchmaines earl of Leiceſter; who, in the reign of Henry II, built a ſmall priory for Friers Eremites of the order of St. Auguſtin, to which, at the time of the foundation, was appropriated the church of Radcliffe on the Wreke; it being noticed in the Matriculus of biſhop Hugh Wells, in 1220, that the prior received from the vicar of that church an annual penſion of three ſhillings ab antiquo[8].

About the year 1210, a houſe at Donington on the Heath, which had been held by Gilbert de Seis under William the then prior of Charley, was conveyed by the earl of Winton, to Robert de Ibſtoke:

"Saherus de Quincy, com' Winton', ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd nos, ad conceſſionem & petitionem Margarete comitiſſe uxoris noſtre, & Roberti filii noſtri & heredis, conceſſimus Roberto de Ibſtoke meſſuagium in villâ de Dunenton, quod Gilbertus de Seis tenuit de domo de Charleâ, &c. Teſtibus; Willo priore de Charleâ, Robto Saraſceno, Willo de Senevill, Rico Sarraſcene, Warino de Snipeſton, Briano tunc foreſtario noſtro, Rogero Godebi, Reginaldo de Ibſtock, magiſtro Thomâ de Hetrâ[9]."

---

[1] Of whom ſee under the Diſſertation on Domeſday, vol. I. p. liii.

[2] "In Cernelegâ 4 carucate terre. Vaſta eſt. Require precium." Domeſday, fol. 237. a. 1.

[3] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 39; ex veteri Cartulario Lirenſis cœnobii.

[4] Inter Record. Turr. London. (per Inſpeximus) in Rot. Pat. 29 Hen. VI.

[5] MS. Chetwynd.

[6] See Appendix to vol. I. p. 26.

[7] Tanner's Not. Mon. ex Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 521. b.

[8] Burton, p. 231.

[9] The ſeal to this deed is the ſame as is engraved in vol. I. p. 99, Plate XII. fig. 10; and the reverſe the ſame as that of fig. 12.

In 1220, "Secundùm matriculum epiſcopi, patronus Charley, quondam heremitorum, comes Winton'. Ibi ſolent manere III fratres[1]."

Roger de Quincy earl of Winton and conſtable of Scotland[2] was then the owner of this lordſhip, by inheritance from Saber de Quincy his father, who had married Margaret, ſiſter and coheireſs of Robert de Bellomont earl of Leiceſter. In 1246, the earl of Winton obtained a confirmation grant[3]; and in 1270 died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the priory[4].

The arms of this priory were, Azure, a ſaltire, between in chief a ducal coronet, and in feſs two mitres Or. See Plate XIX. fig. 1; where the dreſs of one of the Friers Eremites of Charley is ſhewn; as is alſo the habit of an Eremite nun.

In 1271 it was found that Eleanor de Vaux, daughter of William de Ferrariis earl of Derby, and the third wife and relict of Roger de Quincy earl of Winton, held in dower the advowſon of Charley, Ulveſcroft, and Charnwood[5].

Sir William de Ferrars, knight, ſecond ſon of William earl of Derby, having at his father's death ſeated himſelf at Groby, became an eſpecial benefactor to this priory; to which, inter alia, he gave five acres and a half near their ſheep-fold, extending in length from the Black brook to the ditch near the wood of Challenge, and in breadth from the waſte of the lady Helen de Zouch to the waſte belonging to the pariſh of Barrow, for the purpoſe of enlarging the court-yard of the priory[6]; and in 1272, the prior of Charley obtained the king's confirmation of a grant of 30 acres of land in le Milne-leghs, which had been given by ſir William de Ferrars; and of a meſſuage in Shepeſhed, and the advowſon of the church of Markfield, given by Alan la Zouch[7], then the lord of Aſhby.

At Staunton under Bardon the priory of Charley had in 1279 four virgates of land, two of which were in the fee of the earl of Winton; the other two de tenurâ Normannorum[8]. Three of the prior's tenants held alſo five acres and a half there in free tenure; and ſix of his ſervants ſix acres more in villanage[9].

King Edward the Firſt, to recompence the ſervices of Alexander Comin earl of Bucquan in Scotland, who had greatly aſſiſted his deſigns againſt that kingdom during the time of the Baliols and Bruces, promoted a marriage between him and Helen one of the coheireſſes of Roger de Quincy; by which the earl of Bucquain obtained this lordſhip and a foreſt 20 miles in circumference; but, the family of Comin being entirely rooted out of Scotland by the Bruces for treachery to their native country, Alexander the ſon of the great Comin retired to his eſtate at Charley; and, having three daughters, married Alice the eldeſt of them to Henry lord Beaumont, who afterwards took the name and arms of Comin; and whoſe deſcendants continued in the affection and eſteem of the Sovereigns of England till the days of Henry VII.[10]

In 1306, Alan la Zouch confirmed to the prior of Charley a meſſuage at Shepeſhed, the Milneleghs juxta Charley, and 30 acres of land there[11].

William de Segrave was elected prior of Charley, 5 id. Aug. 1309; the permiſſion of ſir William de Ferrars being firſt obtained[12].

Another election occurs in 1319[13].

In 1346, the prior of Charley (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 5*s*. for half a quarter of one knight's fee in Charley, parcel of the honour of Winton[14].

In 1371, ſir William de Ferrars of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the priory of Charley[15].

In 1383, Richard Hatley was preſented to this priory by king Richard II.[16] as guardian of the lands and heir of ſir Henry de Beaumont, knt. deceaſed; and in the next year John lord Beaumont, the ſon and heir of this Henry, had livery of his lands[17].

In 1387, ſir Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knt. held at his death the advowſon of this priory[18].

In 1393, it appeared that Joan (late wife of ſir Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knt.) deceaſed, held, for term of life, in dower, the advowſon of the priory of Charley of the king by knight's ſervice[19].

In 1444, ſir William de Ferrars of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the priory of Charley[20].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knight, lord Ferrars of Groby, was ſeiſed of the ſame advowſon, then valued at five marks[21].

Sir John Bourgchier, knight, and the lady Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of the lord Ferrars of Groby, poſſeſſed the advowſon of Charley in 1465; and, by their conſent, this priory was in that year united with that of Ulveſcroft[22]: And whereas the tithes of ſheaves and hay in the fields of Charley, Oldfield, Dunthorne Hill, and the Old Birchwode, as being within the pariſh of Barrow, belonged to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis in Leiceſter, who had demiſed the ſame in 1307 to the prior and convent of Charley for a rent of 6*s*. 8*d*. an agreement was entered into, that the prior and convent of Ulveſcroft ſhould in future pay a compoſition for the tithes of Dunthorne Hill, and the Old Birchwode. This appears by the following entry in the Regiſter of Leiceſter abbey:

"Notandum, quòd Oldfelde & Longwong ſunt due clauſure in parochiâ de Baro, & ſunt de feodo de Baro; unde quondam habuimus decimas garbarum & feni in campis de Charley & de Oldefeild, de Donthornehill, & de veteri Birchewode, quas decimas tradidimus priori & conventui de Charley, ad perpetuam firmam, anno Dñi MCCCVII. reddendo nobis annuatim VIſ̃. VIIIđ. ut patet in compoſitione. Sed, cùm prioratus de Charley annexus fuiſſet prioratui de Ulveſcroft, tum d̃nus Thomas Erdington, cujus predeceſſores dederunt ſupradicta le Oldefeild, Donthornehill, & vetus Birchewod, priori & conventui de Ulveſcroft, dedit priori de Ulveſcroft Donthornehill & vetus Birchewod; unde habemus, per compoſitionem factam inter nos & priorem & conventum de Ulveſcroft, pro decimis dictorum locorum Donthornehill & veteris Birchewod, annuatim in perpetuum[23]."

On the 20th of May, 1466, ſir Thomas de Erdington, of Barrow, knt. demiſed to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter certain parcels of arable, paſture, and meadow land, in Charley, known by the names of Oldfield and Longwong, with the appurtenances, for a term of 40 years, on the annual rent of a red-roſe. This land was in the tenure of Wiliam Coleys, of Loughborough, butcher, together with the wood then growing on it, at an annual payment of 40*s*. for rent, and 5*s*. 4*d*. more for tithes. This rent was advanced to 5 marks, excluſive of the tithes; with a remark, that this was far below the value. Oldfield contained 30 acres, and extended from the old ditch of Charley-field to the highway leading to Loughborough. Longwong alſo contained about 30 acres.

"Mem', quòd đnus Thomas Erdyngton, miles, tradidit, conceſſit, & ad firmam nobis dimiſit, certas parcellas terre, paſture, & prati, in Charley, vocat' le Oldefele & Longwong, cum foſſis & ſepibus incluſis, uſque ad finem XL annorum, &c. redd' indè annuatim unam rubram roſam[1]. Dat' xx° die Maii, anno regni Edwardi Quarti vi°, &c. ut in cartâ ii libri de Chartwary.

---

[1] Burton, p. 268; ex Rot. 7 Edw. I.

[2] A ſeal of Roger de Quincy earl of Winton, as conſtable of Scotland, will be found under Glenfield.

[3] Pat. 30 Hen. III. Reg. Groſſeteſte, ann. 12. See Harl. MSS. 88. p 91.

[4] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxxiv.

[5] Eſch. 53 Hen. III. N° 36. Leic.

[6] See p. 92.

[7] Eſch. 55 Hen. III. n. 36.

[8] Rot. Pat. 1 Edw. II. p. 1. m. 14.

[9] See vol. I. p. cxiv.

[10] Sir T. Cave; ex MS Collectionibus Johannis Brydges, armigeri; & MS. Chetwynd.

[11] Eſch. 34 Edw. I. N° 187.

[12] Reg. Dalderby, ann. 9.

[13] Ibid. ann. 19.

[14] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[15] Eſch. 45 Edw. III. N° 22. Leic.

[16] "Rex præſentat Ricardum Hatley ad prioratum de Charley, Linc. diœc. ratione cuſtodis terrarum & hæredis Henrici de Beaumont chevalier, defuncti." Pat. 6 Ric. II. p. 1.

[17] See under Beaumanor, p. 97.

[18] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

[19] Eſch. 17 Ric. II. N° 24. Leic.

[20] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[21] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[22] Dr. Hutton, ex Libro Memorandorum temp. Johannis Chedworth, epiſcopi Lincoln. fol. 95. This union was ſuppoſed by biſhop Tanner to have taken place ſo early as the time of Edward II; a miſtake which ariſes from the earl of Winton's having been the patron of each.

[23] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxxiv. b.

Mem', quòd le Oldefeld continet in ſe xxx acras terre, unamquamque rodam xxx pedes in latitudine, & extendit ſe à veteri foſſo campi de Charley uſque ad altam viam verſùs Lowtboro. Et le Longwong continet in ſe, ſecundùm eſtimationem, totidem acras.

Habemus, ex remiſſione, relaxatione, & quietâ clamatione, Thome Erdyngton, militis, totum jus ſuum & clameum, que unquam habuit, habet, ſeu quovis modo habere poterit in futuro, de & in certis parcellis terre, paſture, & prati, in Charley, vocat' le Oldefeld & Longwong, cum foſſis & ſepibus incluſis, modò in tenurâ Wil̃li Coleys de Loughburgh, bochar, ut in cartâ dat' anno predicto.

Habemus, ex remiſſione, relaxatione, & quietâ clamatione Joh̃is Whatton, prioris de Ulveſcrofte, & ejuſdem loci conventûs, totum jus ſuum & clameum, que unquam habuerunt, habent, ſeu quovis modo in futuro habere poterint, de & in certis parcellis terre, paſture, & prati, in Charley, vocat' le Oldefeld & Longwong, cum foſſis & ſepibus, &c. Dat' xxvi° die Septembris, anno regni regis Edwardi Quarti vi°, &c. ut in cartâ vª libri de Chartwary.

Wil̃lus Coleys de Loughtburg, bochar[2], tenet le Oldefeld & Longwong, cum boſco creſcente, & reddit per annum xlvs̃. viiid̃. ſcil' xls̃. pro redditu, & vs̃ viiid̃. pro decimis; modò v marcas preter decimam; ſed hoc non ad valorem, quia multò plùs valet[3]."

A penſion of 6*s*. 8*d*. was payable to the biſhop of Lincoln from the priory of Charley, at the feaſt of St. John the Baptiſt.

Thomas Maſſey, clerk, of the priory of Ulveſcroft, was the laſt prieſt who celebrated maſs at Charley.

A leaſe was afterwards purchaſed from the crown, by ſir Andrew Judd[4], lord-mayor of London in 1550, by whom it was transferred to Henry Grey duke of Suffolk, who was beheaded for treaſon in 1553; after which, a capital manſion called Charley, with waters, royalties, &c. to the ſame belonging (which had formed part of the poſſeſſions of Ulveſcroft priory), were leaſed to William Standiſh and Richard Standiſh, gents. for a fine of £50. and an annual rent of £9. 19*s*. 4*d*. for the term of 80 years[5].

Henry Turvile, of Aſton Flamvile, eſq. purchaſed the inheritance of Charley from Mr. Bennet Wilſon; and ſold it, about the year 1605, to his kinſman ſir Richard Waldron, knt.[6] who married Jane, a daughter of Charles Buſbie, of ——, co. Lincoln; and died Feb. 16, 1617, ſeiſed of the lordſhip of Charley. He left three ſons, Thomas, Edward, and Charles; the eldeſt of whom, who was afterwards knighted, died ſeiſed of the lordſhip of Charley, Jan. 11, 1627-8, leaving by Elizabeth his wife (daughter of —— viſcount Beaumont) a ſon and heir, Thomas, aged three years and 167 days; and three other ſons, Edmund, Charles, and Richard; and one daughter, Mary[7], wife of Thomas Farnham, eſq. of the Nether Hall in Quorndon. He is ſtated in the inquiſition to have poſſeſſed a capital meſſuage in Charley, of the annual value of 40*s*.; and divers cloſes, called Little Meadow, otherwiſe Long Meadow, Orchard Cloſe, Barrow Wood, alias Barrow Wood paſture, Corne cloſe, Calves cloſe, Birch Leas, and Old Springes, with common of paſture, &c. in Charnwood Foreſt; held of the king in capite by the ſervice of a twentieth part of a knight's fee. Alſo a meſſuage and lands called Oldfield houſe and paſture; and a meſſuage, &c. called Watts houſe, with divers other meſſuages and lands[8].

Thomas Waldron, eſq. (afterwards knighted) was the owner in 1647[9]; and his daughter Frances[10] was married to Thomas Farnham, eſq. of the Nether Hall in Quorndon, who died in 1666[11].

In 1689, Edward Coſyn, eſq. of Hilleſley, in the pariſh of Hawkeſbury, co. Glouceſter, died lord of the manor of Charley, Feb. 20, 1689, æt. 88. He married Frances, eldeſt daughter of William Trye[12], eſq. of Hardwick, co. Glouceſter[13].

This lordſhip was afterwards the property of George Wrighte[14], eſq. of Gothurſt, co. Bucks; from whom the manor, with its rights and privileges, was purchaſed, about 1770, by Mr. John Vickars; from whom it devolved to Mr. George Boſworth, of Brampton, co. Northampton, near Harborough, by his marriage with Mary, the daughter of the ſaid Mr. Vickars.

The inhabitants of Charley are uſually chriſtened, married, and buried, at Shepeſhed church.

HALIWELL HAW,

or Holywell Haw (ſo called from a remarkable fine ſpring), was a ſmall hermitage on the edge of the Foreſt, near the Outwoods, between Beaumanor and Garendon; and belonged to the abbot of Garendon.

Ranulph earl of Cheſter confirmed to the monks of Garendon the donations which had been made them at Haliwell-haw by Robert de Jort, William de Jort, and Thomas le Deſpenſer, in the fee of Cheſter.

In the Segrave Chartulary, in a grant of certain lands at Segrave by Gilbert Fitzherbert to Stephen de Segrave, there is an exception of a toft and croft inter curiam Dicaconi & ductum; and of five ſelions juxta Haliwell[15].

In the Teſta de Nevill, the abbot of Garendon is ſtated to have held in 1240 "unam vicariam[16], cum quodam parvo boſco, & appellatur Haliwelle Hawe, de feodo Roberti filii David.; & valet per annum 2 virgatas terre[17]."

In 1326, the abbot of Rowceſter, in Dovedale, Derbyſhire, obtained leave to remove the chapel of Haliwell, from the place where it then ſtood, to a chantry founded in the abbey church of Rowceſter, for the ſoul of Robert Cotes; and it was then found that the ſaid abbot held a virgate of land in Halywell of Robert Fiton, for the uſe of the ſaid chantry[18].

In 1330, it appears by a precept from king Edward III. to the ſheriff of this county, that the abbot of Leiceſter had purchaſed in 1329, from Henry lord Beaumont, a certain parcel of wood in Haliwell-haw near Loughborough; for which the abbot had paid £28. to the ſaid Henry lord Beaumont, at his manor of Loughborough, before his having entered into rebellion; and the ſame having been afterwards ſeized by the king, on account of the lord Beaumont's rebellion, the ſheriff was directed to reſtore it to the abbot[19].

On the ſite of Haliwell Haw (where the excellent ſpring is yet preſerved) is now a farmhouſe, the property of Thomas March-Philipps, of Garendon, eſq.

---

[1] This tenure aroſe, probably, from the political principles of the granter. It is remarkable, that the grant continued preciſely till the moment of the reſtoration of the Houſe of Lancaſter, in the perſon of Henry VII.

[2] Butcher.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxxiv. b. and fol. cxiv.

[4] Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a feſs ragulée between three boars' heads couped, Argent; 2. and 3. Azure, three lions rampant guardant Argent; Plate XIX. fig. 2.

[5] Bailiffs Accompts of Leiceſterſhire, in the Augmentation Office, 15...

[6] This name has ſometimes been ſpelt Waldram; and the epitaphs at Barrow, p. 75, are perhaps from ſome deſcendants of the family.

[7] See before, p. 104.

[8] Inq. at Leiceſter, 1 Oct. 4 Car. I.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 656.) p. 114; and vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 241.

[9] MS note in Mr. Staveley's Burton.

[10] One of this lady's daughters by Mr. Farnham was married to Henry Waldron, eſq. of Farnham Caſtle, Cavan, Ireland.

[11] See p. 104.

[12] Great grandſon of John Trye, eſq. who married Elizabeth one of the coheireſſes of Sir Charles Brandon, K. G. duke of Suffolk.

[13] Rudder, p. 483; and Bigland's Monumental Inſcriptions, vol. II. p. 54. His arms, on a handſome marble tomb, are, Argent, a chevron Ermine, between three wolves heads eraſed Sable, Coſyn; impaling, Or, a bend Azure, Trye; Plate XIX. fig. 3.

[14] Of whom ſee hereafter, under Brokeſby.

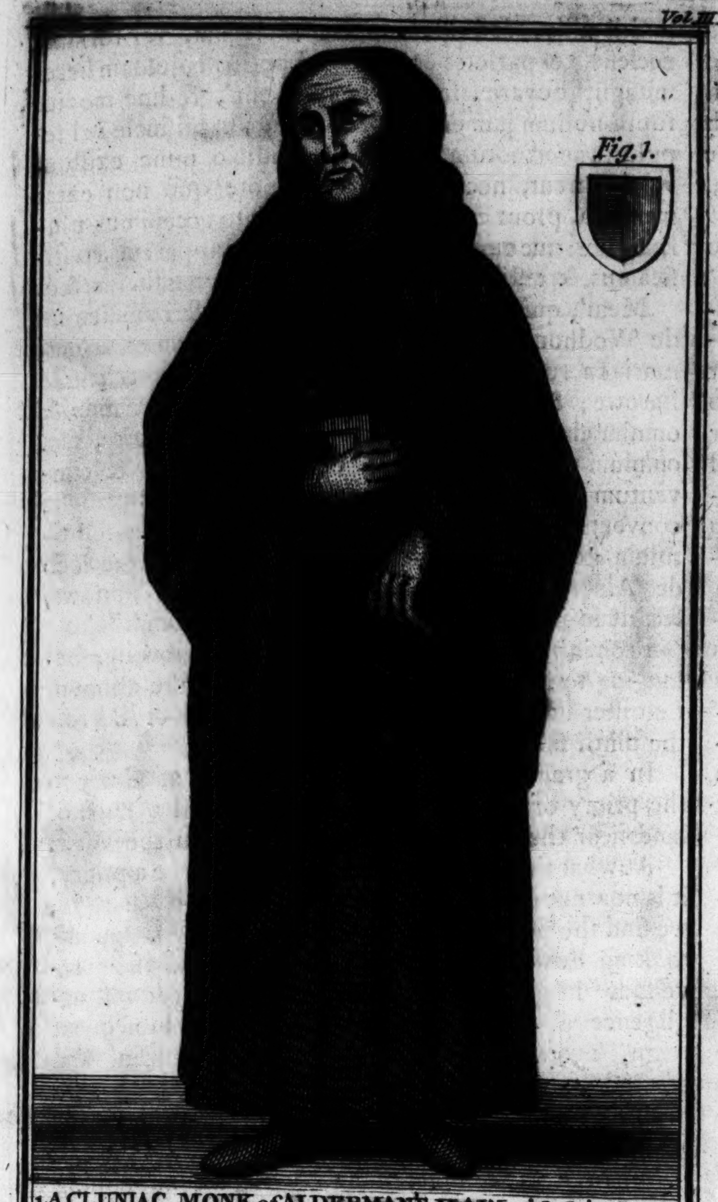
[15] See vol. I. p. 111. This, however, (and perhaps one or two others of the deeds here cited) may apply to another Haliwell, belonging to the monks of Garendon, near Burton on the Woulds.

[16] So the tranſcript. Q. *ber*cariam?

[17] See the Introductory Volume, p. xlix.

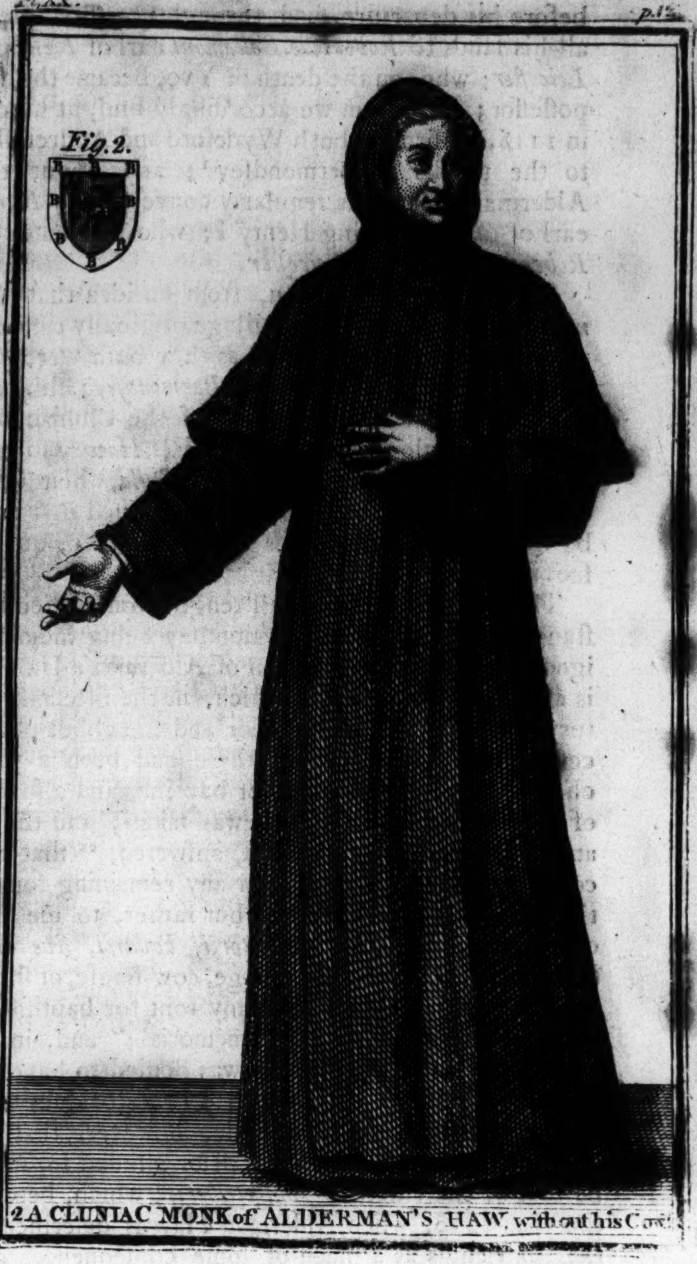
[18] Inq. ad quod dampnum 19 Edw. II. Leic. n. 134.

[19] Clauſ. 3 Edw. III. m. 18.



Vol. III.
Fig. 1.

1. A CLUNIAC MONK of ALDERMAN'S HAW, with his Cowl.



Pl. XX.
p.1
Fig. 2.

2. A CLUNIAC MONK of ALDERMAN'S HAW, with out his Cowl.

ALDERMAN'S HAW.

Within the hamlet of Woodhouſe, at the diſtance of nearly a mile to the South-Eaſt of the village of Charley, and two miles to the North-weſt of Woodhouſe chapel, on the Foreſt of Charnwood, is a place called by the name of Alderman's Haw, Haya, or Haga[1], probably from its being incloſed; Haia, in the Saxon tongue, ſignifying ſepes, ſepimentum, or parcus[2]. Haga, the Saxon Hæʒh or Haʒh, is alſo ſynonymous with domus or manſio[3].

It may not be very eaſy to account for the manner in which Alderman Haw became the property of the monks of Bermondſey[4]; but it ſhall be attempted.

In the year 1082, Aylwin Child, a rich citizen of London, began a new and fair church in Southwark, to the honour of our holy Saviour, with deſign to place therein a convent of monks of the Cluniac order, who were procured from the priory de Charitate[5] in France, by means of archbiſhop Lanfranc in 1089; about which time king William Rufus augmented the ſmall eſtate which Aylwin had procured for thoſe religious, with the grant of the manor of Bermondſey and other revenues[6]. By the ſolicitations of Aylwin Child, the new monaſtery was alſo enriched with ſeveral conſiderable benefactions both by laymen and divines; amongſt which was the villate of Andreteſbery, the gift of William de Belmeis[7].

The exact ſite of Andreteſberie[8] is now unknown; but it appears, from the Regiſter of the priory of Bermondſey, that it was exchanged by the monks of that houſe, with Yvo de Grenteſmainell, for the manor of Wydeford in Hertfordſhire. This muſt be by a confirmation-grant; for, we have ſtill better authority for ſtating, that the exchange had been made much earlier; it being ſtated in Domeſday-Book, that Hugo de Grenteſmainell, father of Yvo, at the time of the general ſurvey, poſſeſſed ſeven houſes in the borough of Leiceſter in right of the lordſhip of Andreteſberie, four of which were held under him by Hugo de Witvile with ſac and ſoc, and thoſe expreſsly ſaid to be "in exchange for Wadford[9]."

Hugo de Grenteſmainell died in 1094; and his ſon Yvo, engaging in 1107 in rebellion againſt king Henry I, was induced to take a pilgrimage to Jeruſalem, from which place he never returned[10]; but, before his departure, had, through neceſſity, pledged all his lands to Robert de Bellomont earl of Mellent and Leiceſter; who, on the death of Yvo, became the actual poſſeſſor; and whom we accordingly find, at his death in 1118, confirming both Wydeford and Andreteſberie to the monks of Bermondſey [1]; and, about 1120, Alderman's Haw was regularly conveyed, by Ranulph earl of Cheſter, to king Henry I; who re-granted it to Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter.

---

[1] "In Domeſday Haga and manſura are ſynonymous; and I conceive Hagæ or Hawes (i. e. houſes), and manſura, and the French maiſure, to be the ſame thing; viz. the tenements of burgeſſes and others reddentes conſuetudinem to their lord in chief." Ruſſell, MS.

[2] So Rot. Inquiſit. de ſtatu Foreſt. in Scaccar. 35 Edw. III. tit. Woolmer & Aſsholt, Hantiſc. "Dominus Rex habet unam capellam in haiâ ſuâ de Kingeſle." And Bracton, lib. ii. cap. 40. n. 3. "Vallatum fuit & inclauſatum foſſat[illegible] haiâ, & palatio."

[3] Decem Scriptores, p. 2225; Coke's Firſt Inſt. fol. 2.

[4] See p. 99.

[5] A priory ſituate upon the river Loire, in the province of Nivernois, and dioceſe of Nevers, founded by a powerful lord named Roland, firſt at Seys, about the year 700, for monks of St. Baſil; deſtroyed by the Vandals in 743; re-founded by king Pepin for Benedictines; and, after a ſecond deſtruction, in 755, by William II, earl of Nevers, for Cluniacs. Its preſent name was given it on account of the charities given by the Cluniac monks of this rich priory, the prior whereof is lord ſpiritual and temporal of the town. De la Force, vol. X. p. 386.

[6] Tanner, Not. Mon.

[7] Chronica de Bermondſey, olim in Bibl. Dewiſianâ, nunc in Harleyanâ, MS. 231.

[8] There was a village in this neighbourhood, called Andreſkirk, or Andreſchurch, with a chapel belonging to it, the tithes of which had been given, in the reign of king Edward I, by William de Ferrariis earl of Derby, to the monks of Bredon; ſee vol. II. p. 408.—The preſent townſhip of Oſgathorp, at that time a chapelry to the church of Whitwick, was alſo called Angodeſthorp.

[9] "Hugo de Grenteſmainell habet 7 domus pertin' ad Andreteſberie. . . . . Hugo de Wituile tenet de ipſo Hugone v domus cum ſacâ & ſoca. Hæ ſunt de mutuatione de Wadford." Domeſday, fol. 230. a. 1.

[10] See vol. I. p. 21; and Newcourt's Repertorium, vol. I. p. 909.

This long detail is given, from an idea that Alderman's Haw is a part of the village originally called Andreteſberie; and the rather, as they both were under the patronage of the prior of Bermondſey; ſubject to whoſe juriſdiction three monks of the Cluniac order poſſeſſed a little priory at Alderman's Haw [2], ſo called perhaps in compliment to Aylwin Child, their founder [3]; Alderman Hawe having been ſtated in 1220 to be "in diſpoſitione prioris de Bermondſey, qui conſuevit habere ibi tres monachos [4]."

This conjecture receives ſtrength from the circumſtance of the monks of Bermondſey being themſelves ignorant of the true ſituation of Alderman's Haw; as is evident from a diſpute which, in the fifteenth century, aroſe between their prior and the abbot of Leiceſter; the prior alledging there had been a pariſh church here, with a font for baptiſm, and alſo right of burial: on which a view was taken; and the examiners, after diligent ſearch, anſwered, "that they could perceive no church, nor any remaining foundations of walls of a church; but rather, to uſe their own words, cujuſdam heremetorii, bovarii, ſive ovilis (i. e. the walls of ſome hermitage, cow-houſe, or ſheep-cote); nor had there been any font for baptiſm, or place of burial, for time immemorial;" and, in the end, the prior of Bermondſey was denied to have any right to the ſaid place, or to any tithes or dues to be paid out of it. It is poſſible, however, that the church, or chapel, which the prior alluded to, might be that of the villate of Andreteſberie; which, between the year 1220, when Alderman Haw is deſcribed in the Matriculus as a place of ſome conſequence, and at the time when the view was taken (a period of at leaſt 250 years, much of it paſſed in ruinous civil wars), might have been completely deſtroyed. But let us hear the report of the inquiſition:

"Univerſis ad quos preſentes litere pervenerint, Thomas ate Reghos major ville [5], Willm̄s Byſpham, & alii, ſalutem in Domino. Nos, ex certis cauſis & querelis inter venerabiles viros abbatem eccleſie beate Marie de Pratis Leyc' & priorem de Bermundeſeye motis, precipuè ſuper quâdam eccleſiâ parochiali in quodam loco vocat' Aldermanhawe, ut ipſe prior aſſeruit, diu conſtitutâ, & ſuper parietibus ejuſdem eccleſie, necnon fonte baptiſmali & ſepulturâ mortuorum nunc ibidem exiſtentibus & palàm apparentibus, intuitu caritatis, ut ad illum locum accedere, & ſuper premiſſis deliberare curaremus, & veritatem ut de facto jam exiſtit explorare; nos, volentes veritati, ut predictum eſt, teſtimonium perhibere, acceſſimus ad locum predictum, cum multis aliis; & ibidem nullam eccleſiam, vel formam eccleſie, vel parietes eccleſie, ſed potiùs cujuſdam heremitagii, bovarie, ſeu ovilis apparent', & hoc modicè ſupra nudum jam erectum, & nullum baptiſmale vel ſepultura mortuorum ibidem ñro judicio nunc exiſtunt vel apparent, nec fuerunt à tempore quô non extat memoria, prout ex fide-dignorum relatu accepimus plurimorum; que omnia & ſingula de facto & apparenciâ teſtificamus, & teſtimonium perhibemus, per has literas, &c.

Mem', quòd locus de Aldermanehaw & hamelettum de Wodhouſe ſunt, & à tempore quô non extat memoria fuerunt, intra fines & limites parochialis eccleſie de Barowe; & quôd jus percipiendi & habendi omnes & omnimodas decimas, tam majores quàm minores, &c. omnium ibidem inhabitantium, ad abbatem & conventum Leyc' pertinuit & pertinet. Et quòd prior & conventus de Bermundeſey nullùm habent jùs ſeu titulum exigendi ſeu percipiendi aliquas decimas in loco de Aldermanſhaw, vel in hamelettâ de Wodhows, &c. ut in placito quod eſt in libro placitorum [6]."

From the tithes of the lands called Flitwong, belonging to the monks of Aldermaneſhaw, the abbot of Leiceſter had eight ſheaves, and the vicar of Barrow the ninth ſheaf [7].

In a grant from ſir William de Ferrars of Groby to the priory of Ulveſcroft are two acres and a half of land near the cloſe of Alderman's Haw on the Weſt.

At what time Alderman's Haw ceaſed to be a priory, it is now not poſſible to aſcertain; but ſo early as 1371, we find the prior and convent of Bermondſey lamenting to king Edward III. the great decreaſe of their revenues [8] in general by the undue government and negligence of Alien Priors; and in the ſubſequent reign, 1399, their priory was made denizen, and erected into an abbey [9]. Their ſeals [10], both as a priory and an abbey, are ſhewn in Plate XX; as are the dreſſes of a Cluniac Monk.

When it is conſidered alſo what an aſtoniſhing change muſt have been made in the appearance of this Foreſt ſince Alexander Comin made Charley Hall his principal reſidence, and Geoffrey Deſpenſer obtained leave to build a chapel at Little Haw; not to mention the building of Beaumanor; it will not appear ſurprizing if the very memory of a priory here ſhould be extinguiſhed. Yet it evidently continued a religious houſe, under the denomination of an hermitage or chantry, till the diſſolution; when, having been ſeized on by the Crown, it was granted, inter alia, by king Edward VI, to Thomas Farnham, eſq. at that time a Teller of the Exchequer [11]. All the tithes belong to William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, as being within the pariſh of Woodhouſe.

On the ſpot where this little priory formerly ſtood is ſtill an old houſe, which, till within theſe 60 years, was encompaſſed by very large oak trees, ſo that it could not be ſeen till you entered the wood. The lane to it is ſtill called The Chapel Lane.

At preſent it is quite naked; and is the property of Mr. Harris, a hoſier at Leiceſter.

---

[1] "Wydeford, quam commutavit cum monachis de Bermundeſeiâ, Ivo de Grantemeſnel, pro Andreteſberyâ, quam dederat eis Willielmus de Belmeis."—"Anno Domini 1118, Robertus comes Leyceſtrie dedit manerium de Wodeford monachis de Bermundeſeye; & Willielmus de Belmeis, Andreteſbury." Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. I. pp. 640, 641.

[2] The monks of this houſe, though they lived under the rule of St. Benedict, and wore a black habit; yet, becauſe they followed a very different diſcipline in ceremonies and their way of behaviour than had been obſerved by the Black monks before their coming, were not called Benedictines, but monks of the order of Clugni. Reynerus, p. 158.

[3] The two firſt lord-mayors of London were Henry Fitz Alwyn and Roger Fitz Alwyn.

[4] See the Matriculus of Bp. Welles in vol. I. p. lix. Amongſt the houſes of Cluniacs in England, Reynerus enumerates the priory of Aldermanſhawe, and that of St. James in Derby, as both ſubject to the priory of Bermondſey. He adds alſo as a Cluniac houſe the priory of Kirkby Beler (which was expreſsly founded for canons regular of the order of St. Auguſtin ſee vol. II. p. 230); a miſtake eaſily to be accounted for; as there actually was a ſmall priory of Cluniacs at Melton Mowbray (ib. p. 239), the chief reſidence of the Beler family.

[5] The major villæ is a remarkable expreſſion.—A villa was formed of ſeveral contiguous habitations; for example, in the reign of Edward I. the villa in which Alderman Haw was ſituated compriſed Barrow, Querndon, and Woodehows (ſee vol. I. p. xlviii).—The major villæ, therefore, in this caſe, anſwers to the præpoſitus villæ, who (according to Hoveden, p. 783), with "quatuor homines (ſive liberi ſive ruſtici) de eâdem," preſented crimes before the juſtices in Eyre, and aſſeſſed the hidage of their villa.

[6] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxlviii. b.

[7] See p. 72.

[8] They ſeem to have loſt ſome part of their property much earlier; for, in 1204, the prior of Bermondſey fined in five marks, to have an inqueſt, to find which were the prior's demeſnes in Bedingho, on the year and day whereon the prior demiſed the land of Bedingho to Ralf de Quenbey, who it ſeems aliened the ſaid demeſnes; and to have ſeiſin thereof, according as the inqueſt ſhould find. Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 303; ex Mag. Rot. 8 John, Rot. 3. b. Hereford, & Wallia.

[9] Tanner, Notitia Monaſtica.

[10] 1. Per pale, Azure and Gules, a border Argent; 2. Per pale, Gules and Azure, a lion paſſant guardant, holding a croſier run through a mitre, all Or, within a border Argent charged with eight Roman B's.

[11] See p. 97.

CHARLEY, or CHARNWOOD FOREST, is a large tract of land, about ten miles in length, and ſix in breadth; in form ſomewhat ſquare, and a hard and barren ſoil, full of hills, woods, rocks of ſtone, torres, and dells of a kind of ſlate.

This place was in the ſtate of a Foreſt long before the Conqueſt (as all the other Foreſts in England were, excepting two[1]); but is not noticed in the Conqueror's ſurvey, any farther than relates to the four ploughlands in Charley, which then lay waſte[2].

Such part of it, however, as was within the precincts of the lordſhip of Barrow contained a wood, one mile long, and four furlongs broad. Other parts are undoubtedly included under Loughborough, where the wood was ſeven furlongs long, and three broad;—under Shepeſhed[3], where the wood was a mile long, and four furlongs broad; and where it is expreſsly ſtated that Godvin, the king's tenant, held alſo 50 acres of meadow (probably now the ſite of Garendon-park[4]), and that he found the land lying waſte;—under Belton, where the wood was a mile long, and half a mile broad;—under Whitwick, where the wood was a furlong in length, and half a furlong broad; and where the earls of Leiceſter had a caſtle, a conſiderable park, and a manor to which many neighbouring villages are ſtill appendant;—under Ovretone (probably that part of Coleorton now called Thrinkſton), where a ploughland lay waſte;—under Stantone, where the wood was five furlongs long and two broad, and in another part (Bardon) were four acres of wood;—under Markfield, where the wood was ſix furlongs in length, and four broad;—under Grobi (including the ſite of Newtown and Bradgate), where the wood was two miles long, and half a mile broad;—under Turcheteleſton (Thurcaſton, perhaps including alſo Swithland, which is not ſeparately noticed in Domeſday), where the wood was two miles long, and half a mile broad;—and under Anſtey, where the wood was a mile long, and half a mile broad. The quantity of wood in each diſtrict is here the more particularly mentioned, as Leland ſtates that in his time this Foreſt had "plenty of wood;" and, though the uninclosed parts have for many years paſt been without a ſingle tree, it is confidently ſtated that, in the laſt century, great quantities of timber were growing; inſomuch that a man might travel on a clear day from Beaumanor Park to Bardon Hill, and the ſhade of the trees would prevent the ſun ſhining upon him; and that a ſquirrel might be hunted for ſix miles without touching the ground. This tradition may be exaggerated; but certainly was not without foundation[5].

Leland ſays, "From Brodegate to Groby a mile and an half, much by woddeland. From Brodegate to Loughborough about a v miles. Firſt I cam oute of Brodegate Parke into the Foreſte of Charley, commonly caullid The Waſt. This Foreſt is a xx miles or more in cumpace, having plenty of woode; and the moſt parte of it at this tyme longgith to the marquiſe of Dorſete; the reſidew to the king and erle of Huntingdune. In this Foreſt is no good toune, nor ſcant a village. Aſſcheby de la Zouche a market toune, Whitwik caſtel and village, Lughborow market, and Wolveſcroft priorie, joynith on the very borders of it. Dunnington Caſtelle is in the border of the Foreſt of Charley towards Darbyſhire; and hath thereby a park as I remember. The ruines of Whitewik caſtel long now by permutation of lands to the marquiſe of Dorſete. Riding almoſt in the entering of this Foreſt, I ſaw 2 or 3 quarres in hills of ſlate ſtone, longging to the marquiſe of Dorſete. And riding a little farther I left the parke of Bewmanor, cloſed with ſtone waulis, and a pratie logge yn it. Beamanor parke is the king's, longging a late to Bellemonts. Thens to Lughborow parke, a mile more from Lughborow toune. This parke cam to the marquiſe of Dorſete by exchaunge of landes with the kinge. Thens a little way of to Burley parke, now longging alſo to the marquiſe of Dorſete. Thens ſcant a mile to Loghborow, where I paſſed over a litle broke[6]."

Camden adds, "Saltus de Charnwood, ſive Charley, longè expanditur, in quo Beaumanor vivarium cernitur; quod domini de Bellomonte, ut accepi, lapideo mure circumſepſerunt[7]."

This Foreſt is admirably deſcribed by Drayton[8]:

"O Charnwood, be thou call'd the choiceſt of thy kind,
The like in any place what flood hath hapt to find?
No tract in all this Iſle, the proudeſt let her be,
Can ſhew a Sylvan Nymph for beauty like to thee;
The Satyrs and the Fawns, by Dian ſet to keep Rough hills and foreſt holts were ſadly ſeen to weep,
When thy high-palmed harts, the ſport of bows and hounds,
By gripple Borderers hands were baniſhed thy grounds.
The Driades that were wont about thy lawns to rove,
To trip from wood to wood, and ſcud from grove to grove,
On Sharpley[9] that were ſeen, and Cadman's[9] aged rocks,
Againſt the riſing ſun, to braid their ſilver locks;
And with the harmleſs elves, on heathy Bardon's[10] height
By Cynthia's colder beams to play them night by night;
Exil'd their ſweet abode, to poore bare common fled,
They with the oaks that liv'd, now with the oaks are dead.
Who will deſcribe to life a Foreſt, let him take Thy ſurface to himſelf, nor ſhall he need to make Another form at all, where oft in thee are found
Fine ſharp, but eaſy hills, which reverently are crown'd
With aged antique rocks, to which the goats and ſheep
(To him that ſtands remote) do ſoftly ſeem to creep,
To gnaw the little ſhrubs, on their ſteep ſides that grow;
Upon whoſe other part, on ſome deſcending brow,
Huge ſtones are hanging out, as though they down would drop,
Where under-growing oaks on their old ſhoulders prop
The others hoary heads, which ſtill ſeem to decline,
And in a dimble near (even as a place divine
For contemplation fit) an ivy-ceiled bower,
As Nature had therein ordain'd ſome ſilvan power;
As men may very oft at great aſſemblies ſee,
Where many of moſt choice and wond'red beauties be,
For ſtature one doth ſeem the beſt away to bear;
Another for her ſhape to ſtand beyond compare;
Another for the fine compoſure of a face;
Another ſhort of theſe, yet for a modeſt grace
Before them all prefer'd; amongſt the reſt yet one
Adjudg'd by all to be a perfect paragon,
That all thoſe parts in her together dwell,
For which the others do ſo ſeverally excell.
My Charnwood, like the laſt, hath in herſelf alone
What excellent can be in any Foreſt ſhewn."

---

[1] The New Foreſt in Hampſhire, made by king William the Conqueror; and the Foreſt of Hampton Court, in Surrey and Middleſex, made by king Henry VIII. in the 31ſt year of his reign, by act of parliament.—"A king of England could not formerly amuſe himſelf in his library, or by encouraging the more elegant arts; and, from the dignity of his ſtation, he could not fill up his time by intermixing with common ſociety. It was therefore neceſſary for him to move from one place to another, and at each of his palaces to have a vaſt foreſt ſurroundiug it for the purpoſe of hunting, whilſt at the ſame time a large tract of uncultivated deſart was ſuppoſed to contribute to magnificence. This extent of foreſt, always imagined by a hunter, even if not a king, to be too contracted—'Ut brevibus clauſus Gyaris, parvâque Seripho,' naturally produced oppreſſion on thoſe whoſe property unfortunately happened to border on ſuch a diſtrict; and ſir Robert Cotton mentions, that Robert de Parnſlow, in the reign of Henry III, had procured large ſums of money, under pretence of encroachments and aſſarts (or places where the wood had been grubbed up.)" Barrington on the Statutes, pp. 35, 36.

[2] See before, p. 120.

[3] It appears by the Records in the Tower, that a perambulation of the bounds of Shepeſhed was taken at Whitwick Caſtle, 29 Nov. 1289, 18 Edw. I. In a confirmation grant from Robert Blanchmains to the monks of Garendon, their liberty in Shepeſhed-wood is expreſſed to be one mile (leucatam) long, and a mile and half broad. The goat-houſe in the Foreſt belonging to this abbey is frequently mentioned in their Regiſter, as is alſo the boſcum de Katt.

[4] See p. 129.

[5] On this head ſee p. 135.

[6] Leland, Itin. vol. I. pp. 20, 22, 24.

[7] Britannia, ed. 1607, p. 389.

[8] Polyolbion, Song XXVI.

[9] Two mighty rocks in the Foreſt.

[10] An extremely high hill in the Foreſt; ſee p. 126.

“A great part of this large tract of land is almoſt as much in a ſtate of nature as any part of England. Some parts of it are elevated into conſiderable hills, bearing ſome reſemblance to the Peak of Derbyſhire; particularly thoſe known by the names of Beacon Hill, Bardon Hill, Ives Head, Cliff Hill, &c. From the two former of theſe the views in clear weather are very extenſive; reaching, not only over a large part of the neighbouring counties, but even to the mountains of Wales. In proceeding Northwards by a direct line from the Southern parts of the kingdom, theſe hills are, I believe, the firſt part of the chain or ridge, which at length conſtitutes the Peak of Derbyſhire, and which is continued thence to the moſt Northern part of the kingdom. The ſummits of many of theſe hills, particularly that of Beacon Hill, which is conſidered as the higheſt, conſiſt of vaſt naked craggy rocks, the crags almoſt univerſally facing the Weſt. They are compoſed of a very hard grey ſtone, very like the blue Elvan ſtone of Cornwall, but not ſo fiſſile. It is of an extremely cloſe grit, gives fire with ſteel, whence quartz ſeems to predominate in its compoſition, and ſome parts of it are almoſt irreſiſtible to the hammer. Others of theſe rocks are compoſed of an imperfect kind of granite, of which a much more complete ſort abounds in the neighbourhood of Mountſorell, where it is uſed in buildings, in the pavement of the ſtreets, and to mend the high roads[1].”

Mr. Marſhall's remarks on the Charnwood Hills, though they have already been noticed in a former volume, are neceſſarily here repeated. “Like the Malvern Hills,” he ſays, “their ſtyle is ſingular; but the ſtyle of one is very different from that of the other. The Malvern hills, ſeen from a diſtance, bear a moſt ſtriking reſemblance to the Atlantic Iſlands; towering up high and ragged; and, on a near view, appear as one large mountain fragment. The Charnwood hills, on the contrary, ſeen obſcurely, appear as an extenſive range of mountains, much larger, and of courſe much more diſtant, than they really are. When approached, the mountain ſtyle is ſtill preſerved; the prominences are diſtinct, ſharp, and moſt of them pointed with ragged rock. One of theſe prominences, Bardon Hill (ſee Plate XXI.) riſes above the reſt; and, though far from an elevated ſituation, comparatively with the more Northern mountains, commands, in much probability, a greater extent of ſurface than any other point of view in the iſland. It is entirely inſulated, ſtanding every way at a conſiderable diſtance from lands equally high. The horizon appears to riſe almoſt equally on every ſide: it is quite an ocean view, from a ſhip out of ſight of land; at leaſt more ſo than any other land-view I have ſeen. The Midland diſtrict is almoſt every acre of it ſeen lying at its feet. Lincoln Cathedral, at the diſtance of near ſixty miles, makes a prominent object from it. With a good glaſs, the Dunſtable hills, at little leſs than eighty miles, may, it is ſaid, be diſtinctly ſeen. The Malvern hills, May-hill, and the Sugar-Loaf in South Wales, are diſtinctly in view. Enville, the Wrekin, and other mountains in Shropſhire and North Wales, are equally diſtinguiſhable. And the Derbyſhire hills, to the higheſt peak, appear at hand. An outline deſcribed from the extremities of the views would include near one fourth of England and Wales. It may be deemed without riſque, I apprehend, one of the moſt extraordinary points of view in Nature[2].”—This hill is noticed by Mr. Burton[3], as “ſtanding at the Weſt end of a long tract of hills, which lie almoſt Eaſt and Weſt. This hill is in the bottom of a large circumference, riſing up (not very ſteeply) to a great height, being, as I take it, one of the higheſt of that rank, very rough, and full of wood; within which are great quarries of hard ſtone, which ſome take to be a kind of limeſtone[4]; the top whereof yieldeth a very pleaſing and delicate proſpect, eſpecially to the Weſt and Southweſt[5].”—“Bardon Hill ſtands gigantic in a range of bold and rugged eminences, over which the eye is carried to diſtant counties[6]. It may be ſtyled the Olympus of Leiceſterſhire, and perhaps of this country; for it is ſeen in more directions, if not farther, than any other eminence in England[7]. It ſits among mountain forms about it, with the moſt venerable aſpect, bearded with the bramble, wild thorn, and the oak; a cover for birds of the fineſt plumage and the moſt delicious taſte. The woodcock and the pheaſant inhabit where, we are told, was the abode of the antient Druids; of whom there are apparently ſome remains on the North ſide of the hill, now famous principally for woodcock-ſhooting. From the ſummer-houſe, which tops its tufted creſt, you ſee North-eaſt as far as Lincoln. It is upwards of 50 miles diſtant, and was at firſt diſcovered by a ſervant with his naked eye; not only the minſter, but part of the high town is viſible. South-weſt you ſee the Wrekin, the cathedrals of Coventry and Lichfield[8], the towns of Leiceſter, Nottingham, and Derby; Aſhby-ruin, Belvoir Caſtle, Wollaton Hall, Staunton-Harold, Bar Beacon near Birmingham, Tamworth Caſtle, Wolverhampton Church, Queen's Croſs near Northampton, Parrot's Folly near Birmingham, and Beaudeſert, the ſeat of the earl of Uxbridge. The following ſeats might be ſeen with the naked eye: Stanford-hall, Mr. Daſhwood's; Quenby-hall, the late Mr. Aſhby's; Scraptoft-hall, Mr. Hartopp Wigley's; Preſtwould-hall, Mr. Pack's; Hopewell-hall, Mr.

---

[1] Dr. Pulteney, in his Catalogue of rare Plants found in this neighbourhood; ſee vol. I. p. clxxvii.

[2] Marſhall, Rural Oeconomy of the Midland Counties, vol. I. p. 12.

[3] P. 28.

[4] “It is craggy ſtone, fit for nothing.” P. Le Neve.

[5] “This hill,” adds Mr. Burton, p. 28, “having been ſeen not far from Glouceſter, about 40 miles diſtance; which, though it contain not the height of Mount Athos in Greece, whoſe ſhadow at a Weſtern ſun is ſaid to be 700 furlongs long; nor of Atlas or Olympus, whoſe tops exceed the clouds; or of the Pike of Teneriffe, one of the Canary Iſlands, which Patricius affirmeth to be 52 miles high[*]; yet may it be here remembered by me, as well as the hill of Montſerrat in Italy, deſcribed by George Merula; the hill Steochorne, in the country of Berne, one of the Cantons of Switzerland, by Benedict Aretius and John Rhellican; on Mount Pilat in France, deſcribed by Conrade Geſner and Jean de Choul. Though the natural cauſe of hills have been delivered by many, but eſpecially by George Agricola in his books de Foſſilibus, I may here (under favour) ſpeak my opinion: That a vegetative ſubſtance or matter, being naturally united or drawn together, hath, by the force of the ſun and other planets, grown to that proportion, and (as ſome hold) do yet increaſe; or elſe that ſubſtance, contained in ſome hills, though by tract of time for many hundred years continually exhauſted, could not ſo continue: As that burning hill in Sicily, Ætna, now called Mountgibello, which for this 2000 years and more (as by hiſtory is reported) hath burned, and yet burneth, as Leandro Alberto, in his late deſcription of Italy (Deſcr. di Sicilia, p. 43.) affirmeth; but whoſoever is deſirous to read the wonders of hills and mounts, may read an excellent Treatiſe thereof, penned by that moſt learned philoſopher, phyſician, and phœnix of his time, Conrade Geſner, printed at Zurich, 1540.”

[6] Northamptonſhire, Rutlandſhire, Warwickſhire, Staffordſhire, Derbyſhire, Nottinghamſhire, Worceſterſhire, Lincolnſhire, Shropſhire, Buckinghamſhire, Bedfordſhire, Glouceſterſhire, Hertfordſhire; and perhaps Huntingdonſhire and Cambridgeſhire.

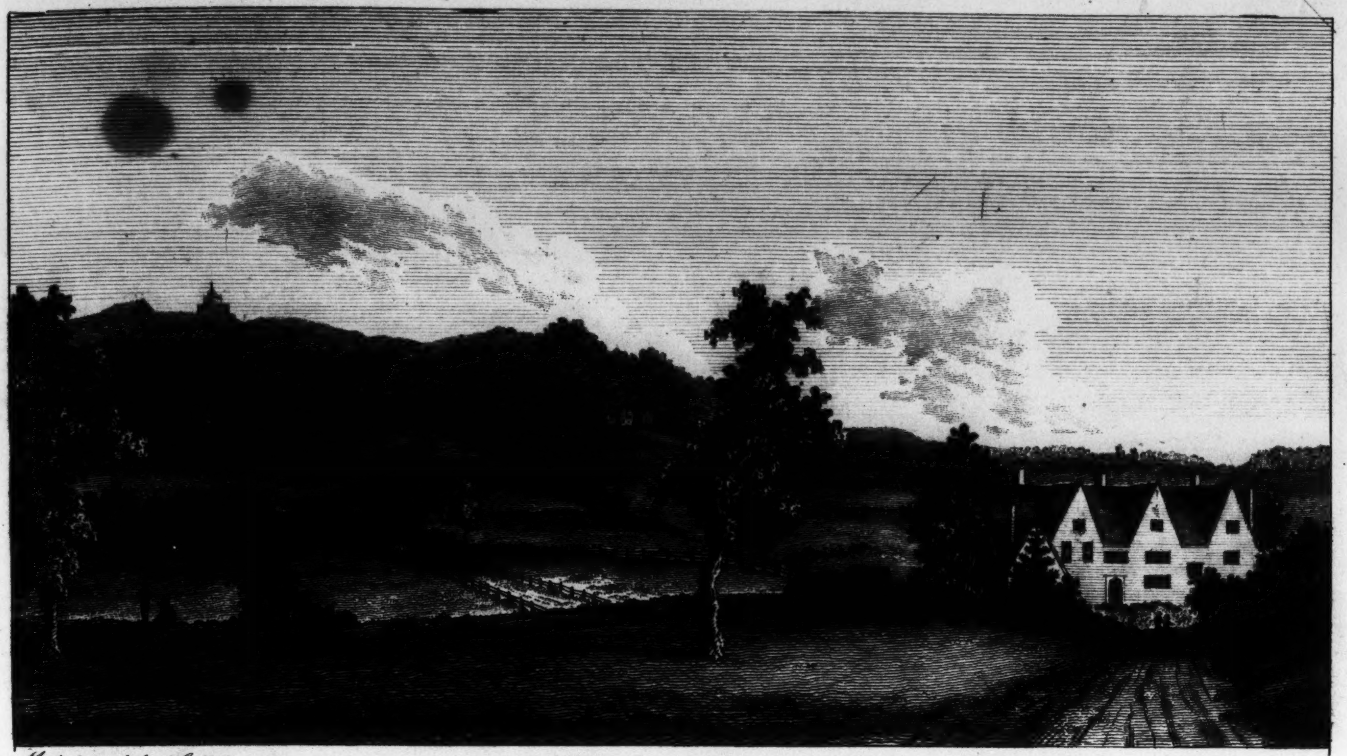
[7] “Here, we are told, the famous William Ludlam, formerly Mathematical Lecturer of St. John's College, Cambridge, uſed to repair with his inſtruments of obſervation.” Topographer, vol. II. p. 89.

[8] The ſpires of Lichfield cathedral I have plainly ſeen from the windows of Bardon Hall, which ſtands comparatively low. J.N.

[*] Sir Walter Raleigh is a good deal more moderate: he ſays (Hiſtory of the World, 1677, p. 62), that he that looketh higheſt doth not ſtretch it above thirty miles (ſee alſo p. 73). But we know now that the Andes, allowed to be the higheſt hills on the globe, do not exceed three miles; and Dr. Halley makes the Pike only two miles and a quarter (See Brookes's Gazetteer; and Univerſal Hiſtory, Index, ad verbum). How ſir Walter, an able Seaman, could ſet down ſuch a notorious falſity, is hard to ſay: its ſloping height is nothing to the purpoſe. G. A.—The author of a Spaniſh Hiſtory of the Canary Iſlands, tranſlated in 1763, ſays, “The Pike is manifeſtly a volcano, though it has not burned for ſome years. The ſugar-loaf conſiſts wholly of earth mixed with aſhes and calcined ſtones. The top of the Pike is about 140 yards long, and 110 broad; it is hollow, ſhaped like an inverted bell, and about 40 yards from the brim to the bottom: Smoak and ſulphureous ſteams iſſued from many chinks in the ſides, and the ground was ſo hot as to be felt through their ſhoes. This author reckons the perpendicular height of the reſting-place four miles, and the height from thence to the ſummit of the Sugar-loaf one mile more; ſo that the whole height, according to him, is five miles; and in this calculation, he ſays, he cannot be miſtaken above a mile either way; ſo that he is not ſure but it may be ſix miles or four miles.” See Gent. Mag. vol. XXXIV. p. 186.—Captain Glaſs, who was at Teneriffe in 1761, ſays, “The dimenſion of the Pike ſeems to be exactly as deſcribed by one Mr. Eden, whoſe journey to it we find related in ſome of the accounts of the Canary Iſlands. He ſays, the length is about 140 yards, the breadth 110.” The reſt of his account of the volcanic cauldron agrees with the Spaniſh author here cited. Glaſs's Hiſtory of the Canary Iſlands, vol. II p. 92; Dublin, 1769, 12mo—Lieut. Rye, who aſcended it in 1791, had no means of calculating its height; but his whole journey was performed within the interval of perhaps an hour before ſun-riſe in April, and half paſt eleven the ſame night. See his account, Gent. Mag. vol. LXIII. p. 254.—Mr. Johnſtone, from on board ſhip, determined the perpendicular height to be 2023 Engliſh fathoms, being nearly the ſame as Mr. de Borda had calculated from a baſe meaſured upon land. From the comparative obſervation of M. de Borda's barometer upon the Peak, and by the ſea-ſide, the mountain's height came within two fathoms of the geometrical meaſurement. Staunton's Account of the Embaſſy to China, pp. 177, 8vo.

South View of BARDON HILL and HALL.

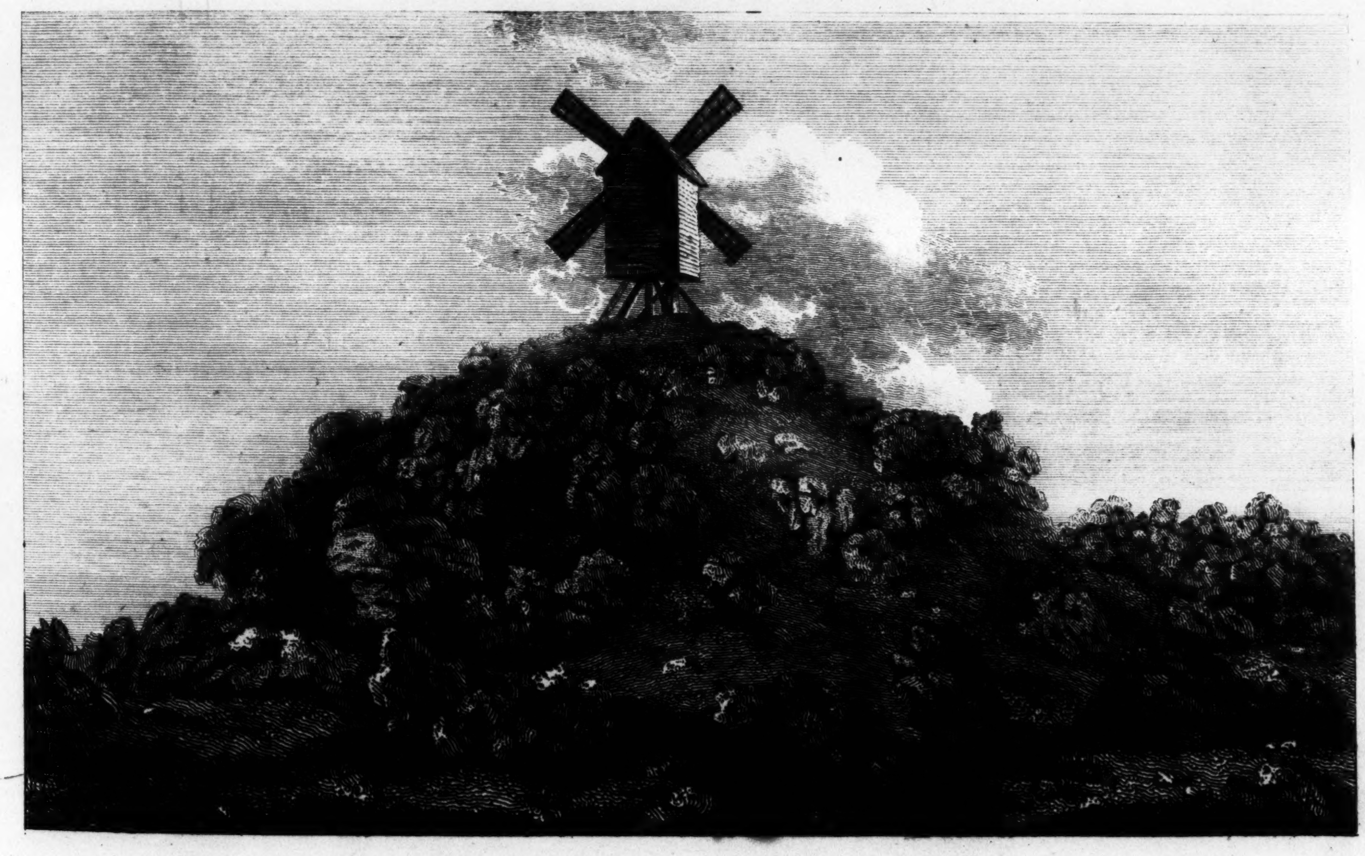
Vol. III. Pl. XXI. p. 126.



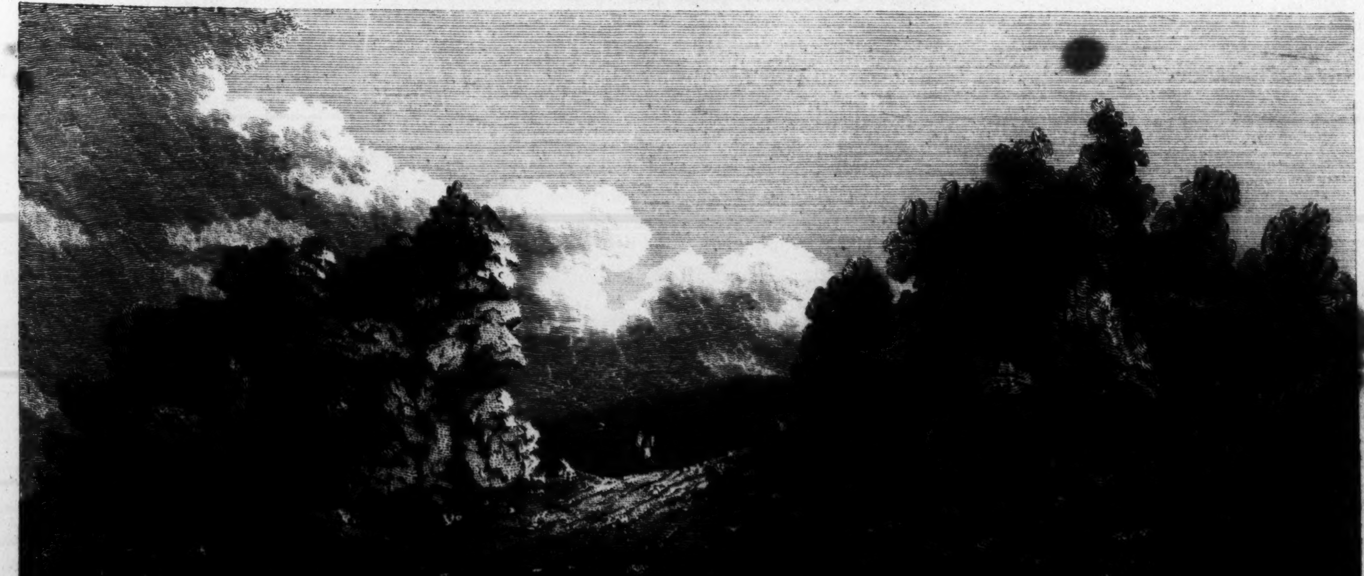
Malcolm del et sc. 1792.

This PLATE, is a small Tribute of Respect to the Memory of the late M^r. JOHN HOOD, for Civilities experienced by J. Nichols.

WINDMILL on MARKFIELD HILL, 1792.

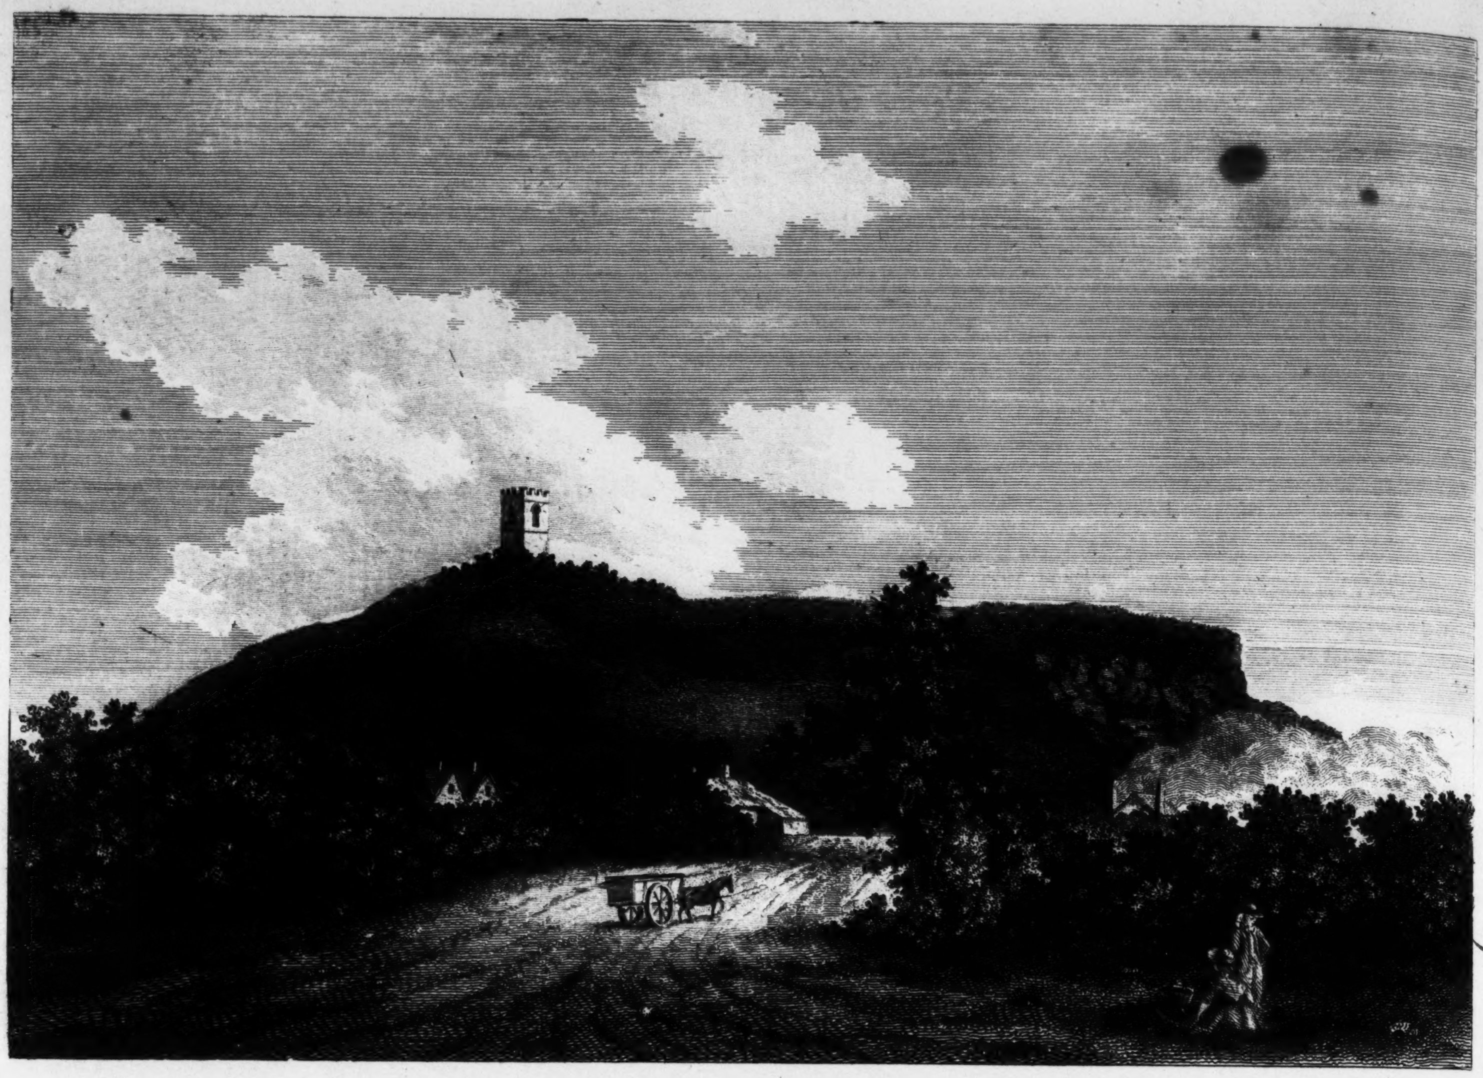


Detached ROCKS near MARKFIELD.

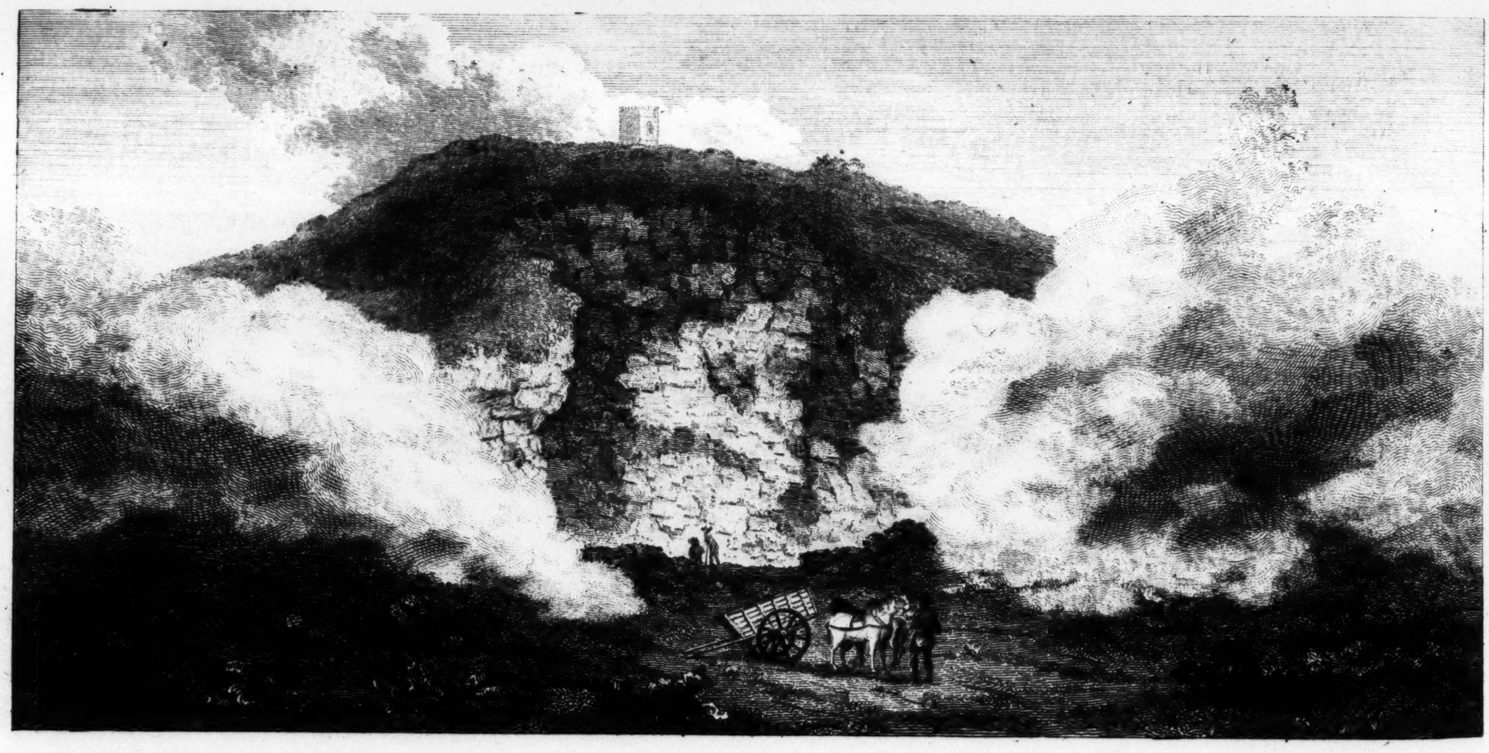


Malcolm 1796.

1. BREDON HILL, S.E.



2. BREDON LIME KILNS.



3. BREDON HILL, FROM THE FOREST.

Malcolm del. et sc. 1794.

To the Right Hon.ble GEORGE HARRY GREY, EARL of STAMFORD, & WARRINGTON, BARON of GROBY, &c. &c.

this Plate is respectfully inscribed by

J: NICHOLS.

Pares's; Gopſal-hall, the late honourable Mr. Curzon's; Appleby, Mr. Moore's; Stoughton Grange, Mr. Keck's; and Bileſdon Coplow, Mr. Palmer's. Leiceſter town alſo is eaſily diſtinguiſhable. The village churches every where abound.—On Bredon Hill is a remnant of a religious ruin, and a church ſeen far off in the circumjacent country. (See three views of it in Plate XXII.) Its form is not diſſimilar to many hills in the Foreſt; but the materials with which it is formed are of a more pliant texture. The wounds which man hath made on the ſides of this eminence for its excellent lime, may be ſeen at a great diſtance. A few years, probably, will viſibly reduce it more, and give it another ſhape. The navigation will convey its contents far and near, for building and for agriculture[1]." For height, ſteep and upright aſcent, being wholly a rock of lime-ſtone, Bredon hill is ſuppoſed far to exceed that at Bardon.

Mr. Burton was of opinion, that Charnwood Foreſt was diſafforeſted preſently after the Conqueſt (as many others were); and, being reſtored again by Henry II, that it was again diſafforeſted, in 1234-5, by Henry III; whoſe charter was thus exemplified by Henry VI.

"Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie & Francie, dominus Hibernie, omnibus ad quos he preſentes litere pervenerint, ſalutem. Inſpeximus cartam domini Henrici nuper regis Anglie, progenitoris noſtri, factam in hec verba: 'Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, dux Normannie & Aquitanie, comes Andegavie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis foreſtarum, vicecomitibus, prepoſitis, miniſtris, & omnibus ballivis & fidelibus ſuis, ſalutem. Noveritis, &c. &c. [as already printed under Bringhurſt[2]]. Nos autem cartam predictam & omnia & ſingula predicta in eadem contenta rata habentes & grata, ea pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis, acceptamus, approbamus, ratificamus, & confirmamus, prout carta predicta rationabiliter teſtatur. In cujus rei teſtimonium has literas noſtras fieri fecimus patentes. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtmonaſter', XVI° Novembris, anno regni noſtri viceſimo nono[3]."

"But ſome, perhaps," adds Mr. Burton, "will object, that this record may as well touch Leiceſter Foreſt as this; to which firſt I anſwer, that there was no other Foreſt ever in this county, but this only; for though that near Leiceſter be (in common ſpeech and abuſively) called a Foreſt[4], yet indeed it is no Foreſt, but only a Chace, and that for theſe differences mentioned by Mr. Manwood in his Treatiſe on the Foreſt Laws. A Chace hath no particular laws that are proper to a Chace only; for all offences in a Chace are to be puniſhed by common law, and not by Foreſt law, nor by any other law peculiar only to a Chace. A Chace hath no ſuch officers as a Foreſt hath; for it hath neither Verdurers, Foreſters, Regarders, nor Agiſters, but only Keepers and Woodwards. A Chace hath no Court of Attachments, Swanimote, or Juſtice-ſeat, as a Foreſt hath. All which this of Leiceſter hath not, and therefore is no Foreſt. Next, this Chace of Leiceſter hath continued (time out of mind) repleniſhed with deer and game: but this Foreſt of Charnwood (never ſince the deafforeſtation thereof) hath had any game or guard thereto; for, as Mr. Manwood there holdeth, that of neceſſity a foreſt muſt have always beaſts of venery and chace abiding in it, otherwiſe it is no Foreſt[5]."

On this ſubject, let us examine the reſpectable authority of ſir Henry Spelman.

"Chacea, dicitur ſaltus, & ipſa ſtatio, quâ, venationis gratiâ, aluntur feræ; nullo cincta ſepimento, ſed privilegio tuta, vel à principe conceſſo, vel præſcriptione aſſecuto. Alitèr fugacia. Differt à parco, quòd hic anguſtior eſt, & palis circumcluſus. Differt à foreſtâ, quòd hæc multò eſt extenſior, ampliſſimiſque legibus inſignita[6]."

"Foreſta exteris ſæpè occurrit pro ſaltu & ſilvâ, ſimplicitèr. Anglis verò ampla eſt ruris portio, deſerta plerúnque & nemoroſa, alendis feris regiis expoſita; nullo ſepimento, at certis terminis, certiſque legibus, magiſtratibus, judicibus, officialibus, & miniſtris valdè inſignis & communita. . . . In agrorum dimenſionibus Foreſtæ olim non veniebant. Perindè nec villas propriè accipere, nec parœcias; nec de corpore alicujus comitatûs vel epiſcopatûs habitæ ſunt: ſed extraneum quiddam, & feris datum, ferino jure, non civili, non municipali fruebantur; Regem in omnibus agnoſcentes dominum unicum, & ex arbitrio diſponentem. . . . . Foreſtam nemo apud Anglos conſtituat, niſi Rex ſolummodò. Conſtitutam etiam à principe Foreſtam, privato jure ſubditus non poſſideat; quod jam indè percunt leges & dignitates Foreſtæ, quæ ſolius regis prærogativâ ſuffulciuntur. Subditi enim non eſt legem dare, nec tantæ poteſtatis juſtitiarios & miniſtros ſibimet inſtituere. Cùm igitur ad ſubditos devolvantur Foreſtæ, humiliori nomine Chaceæ appellatæ ſunt; Foreſtæ verò minùs propriè, licèt & hoc quoque ſit in uſu. Creandæ Foreſtæ hic ritus eſt. Conſtituuntur regio diplomate viri aliquot graves & prudentes, qui locum Foreſtæ deſignatum intuentur, luſtrant, & terminis manifeſtis circumſcribunt. Perimpleto hoc, & in Cancellariæ monumentis (de more) inſcripto; Rex præconis voce ipſum locum ſeu regiunculam, per totum comitatum ubi ſita eſt, Foreſtam edicit, *Foreſtæ*que legibus communitam. Prohibet inſuper, ut nemo eâ turgeat audaciâ, quòd, ſine majeſtatis veniâ, aliquam illic exerceat venationem; diciturque jam locus iſte afforeſtari, & ut cæteræ Foreſtæ in omnibus valere. . . . . . . Curiarum foreſtæ duo ſunt genera. Majus (quod Iter[7] ſeu Eier[8] vocant) ab Henrico II. inſtitutum, coram ipſo primario juſticiario, vel ejus deputato, tertio quovis anno celebratum.

Minus

---

[1] Throſby.

[2] Vol. II. p. 516; and in Harl. MSS. 83. 538. Deafforeſtatio quarundum partium com' Leic', 19 Hen. III.

[3] Inter Recorda Turris London'; Pat. 8 Hen. IV. m. 25. p. 2. & 29 Hen. VI. p. 1. m. 21. "The record here cited," ſays Mr. Le Neve, "toucheth neither the Foreſt of Charnwood nor of Leiceſter, but that ſome time adjoining to Beaumont in Rutland; for, in the record of the perambulation of the Foreſt in com. Leic. 2 Hen. III. (vol. II. p. 516.) it bounded upon the river of Welland, where there is none at this day, nor does even a tradition of any remain, which in a term of 328 years (from the reign of king Henry III. to the year 1622, when Burton's book was written) may eaſily be worn out."

[4] It is, however, ſo ſtyled in the grant from king Henry II. to Robert Boſſu; ſee p. 120.

[5] "Divers laws have been made for the preſervation and defence of Foreſts, as Carta de Foreſtâ, made by king Canute the Dane, at a parliament holden at Wincheſter 1016; Carta de Foreſtâ, publiſhed 9 Hen. III; and many other laws ſince enacted; which who is deſirous to know, together with the antiquity, manner of creation, and other circumſtances belonging to a Foreſt, may read the learned treatiſe of the Foreſt Laws, penned by the ſaid Mr. Manwood, ſome time a fellow of Lincoln's Inn, firſt publiſhed by him 1598, and lately enlarged and printed." Burton, p. 67—71. The edition of Manwood's Treatiſe in 1598 conſiſts of but 20 chapters; thoſe of 1615 and 1655, of 25; to which latter alſo is prefixed the charter of Canute, and ſtatutes relating to the Foreſt: the materials of which theſe additions conſiſt were collected from the former work of this author's on the ſame ſubject, as alſo from what he had prepared for a farther publication, containing the principal caſes of the aſſizes of Woodſtock, and of Pickering, and Lancaſter, &c. It is obſervable, that this author quotes the treatiſes of ſeveral authors which do not appear to be now extant in print, viz. Mr. Serjeant Fleetwood's Brief Collections of Notes of the Foreſt Laws; Archer's Reading on the Laws of the Foreſt; as alſo, Heſketh's Reading on Carta de Foreſta; Treherne's Reading. A fourth edition was publiſhed in 1718 by Nelſon; the contents and arrangements of which are very different from the original work. See Brooke's Law Catalogue, p. 223.

[6] "Our learned Gloſſariſt has explained Chacea, but very ſuperficially. A Chace I conceive to be a ſpot more peculiarly reſerved for the King's own uſe (ſee Leges Canuti in Spelman's Gloſſary, under the word Foreſta, c. 21). The breach of a Chace, therefore, was inter magna crimina, but the breach of a Foreſt inter puſilla. Whoever had free-chace had free-warren." Ruſſel, MS.

[7] In 10 John, in an Iter of the king's in the counties of Warwick and Leiceſter, divers fines and amerciaments were ſet upon ſeveral perſons. William Falconer was amerced at half a mark for unlawful raiſing of a ditch; and Robert de Lincoln was amerced twenty marks for a diſſeiſin. Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 103.

[8] "They who may have a curioſity to ſee the method of proceeding before the juſtice in Eyre, may conſult Dr. Brady's Appendix to his Hiſtory; and likewiſe a record firſt printed in Mr. Blackſtone's Introduction to the Charters. There is alſo amongſt Mr. Petyt's manuſcripts, in the library of the Inner Temple, a very regular journal (probably by one of the counſel who attended) of the proceedings before lord Holland; which court was held at Glouceſter, for the Foreſt of Dean, on the 10th of July, 1634. Two indictments were preferred at this Eyre againſt the aſſignees of the earl of Pembroke and ſir John Winter.

The

Minus (Swanimotum appellatum) ter in anno à miniſtris agitur [1]."

Together with the lordſhip of Charley, the Foreſt of Charnwood (held by the tenure of an annual pair of gilt ſpurs [2]) deſcended from the earls of Leiceſter to Saher de Quincy earl of Winton, in right of his wife Margaret, ſiſter and coheireſs to Roger Fitz Parnell; and this lady, who, on the death of her huſband, retained theſe poſſeſſions in dower, granted to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, about the year 1220, the liberty of carrying 140 cart-loads of wood in a year from Charnwood Foreſt to Segrave manor; and alſo the privilege of feeding 100 hogs upon the Foreſt, without paying pannage [3]; by the homage and ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs annually on New-year's day, or an acknowledgement of 4*d.* in lieu of all ſervice [4]. She alſo gave to him three acres of land in the Foreſt, near Markfield, at Litleheth; with ſome adjoining land abutting on a toft belonging to the priory of Ulveſcroft, for the purpoſe of erecting proper ſheds for the reception of 20 cows and a bull, and their produce under three years of age; with commonage on the whole Foreſt, to as great an extent as was enjoyed by the homagers reſident in the Foreſt; and the liberty of taking from the Foreſt dry wood for fuel (ad focum ſuum), and of erecting a ſty (porchariam) for the reception of any leſs number of hogs than 100, to be fed in the Foreſt during the whole year, free from pannage; to be held by homage only, and an annual acknowledgement of a pound of cumin [5].

Ranulph de Blundeville earl of Cheſter and Lincoln, about 1230, conveyed to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs one acre in his wood of Aldermannes-hagh [6], ad edificia ibidem faciend', with paſture for 20 cows and one bull, ſo long as their produce ſhould be under three years of age, throughout all thoſe parts of his woods in which his tenants in Quorndon had paſture for their flocks; to be held of the ſaid earl and his heirs as an augmentation of the tenement held under him in Mountſorell [7].

Roger de Quincy earl of Winton, the ſon of the preceding earl, obtained a conſiderable addition to his property in the Foreſt and its borders by marrying Hawiſia, one of the ſiſters and coheireſſes of Ranulph de Blundeville earl of Cheſter; and, in 1240, obtained from king Henry III. a confirmation, in the moſt ample manner, of all the privileges which had been granted to the earls of Leiceſter; dated at Woodſtock, Aug. 6, anno regni ñri 26°.

Breve regis H. III. intratur in rotulo Placitorum Corone, anno 12 Ed. I.

Com' Leic', Hund' de Goſcote, Rot. 11°, dorſo, vallibus, continetur breve regis fact' Rogero de Quincy com' Winton', allocationis libertatum factarum in com' Leic', tam ampl' ſicut Johannes rex conceſſit comiti Leic', & quam Henricus III. confirmavit ei. Et idem breve irrotulatur inter Placita Corone 12 Ed. I. conſut' Rotulo Jur' & Aſſiſ' 12 Ed. I. Rot. 37.

Among the records in the court of Exchequer, of fines relating to this county, amongſt other things, is contained the following copy of a fine levied between Hugh de Albini earl of Arundel, and Roger de Quincy earl of Winton, about the bounds between their manors of Groby and Barrow.

"This is the finall agreement, made in the king's court at Leiceſter, in Hilary terme, in the four and twentieth year of the reigne of king Henry ſon of king John, before the king's juſtices itinerant then and there preſent, between Hugh de Albiniaco earl of Arundel, plaintiff, and Roger de Quincy earl of Winchester, upon a complaint of the ſaid earle of Arundell. That the ſaid earle of Winton denied him free ingreſs and regreſs into a wood called le Chaleng', to take his eſtover in; and that he interrupted his hunting in the ſaid wood; which privilege Ranulph formerly earle of Cheſter enjoyed as belonging to the manor of Barowe, and whereof a plea was ſummoned between them in the ſaid court; viz. that the ſaid earl of Winton granted, for himſelf and his heirs, to the ſaid earl of Arundel and his heirs, a moiety of the ſaid wood del' Chalenge towards Barowe, within the underwritten metes and bounds; viz. from the Heyway Endd to the Rock of Cerleg', and from the Rock of Cerleg' to Dunethornehull, and from Dunethornhull through the middle Burchewode-ley to the Holy Croſs [8]; ſo that the ſaid earle of Arundel and his heires may take, give away, fell, and uſe at his pleaſure, his eſtovers of the ſaid wood of Chaleng which belongs to him, and of all other his woods to the ſaid mannor of Barewe belonging, without the interruption of the ſaid earle of Winton or his heires, ſaving to the ſaid earle of Winton and his heirs liberty to hunt in that part of the wood of Chaleng belonging to the ſaid earle of Arundel and his heires; and likewiſe in all other the woods of the ſaid earle belonging to the mannor of Barewe, except the park of Querendon; and that the ſaid earle of Arundel and his heires ſhall have forreſters in the ſaid wood of Chaleng', and in all other his woods belonging to the mannor of Barew, to keep the ſame; and that it be lawfull for them to carry bows and arrows in all the ſaid woods, upon condition that ſuch forreſters ſhall come every year, within eight days after St. Michaell, to the Park-foord, at the ſummons of the ſaid earle of Winton and his heires, or their bayliffes of Grooby, and ſhall take an oath faithfully to preſerve the game, and whatever elſe belongs to the Forreſt; and that the ſaid earl of Arundel and his heirs ſhall have nine bows in the forreſt of the ſaid earle of Winton; viz. five of which Ranulph formerly earle of Cheſter had there, of the gift of Robert earle of Leiceſter, and four given by the ſaid earle of Winton, to kill wild beaſts; and ſix ſmall arrows, to take ſuch as are wounded without doggs, as often as the ſaid earle, or his heires, thinke fitt in his own perſon to goe there; and that it ſhall be lawfull for them to goe throughout with the ſaid bows and arrows to the way which comes from Whytwyke to Grooby; and if it ſhall happen that any beaſt be ſhott by them within the ſaid bounds, and ſhall paſs over the way towards Berdon, it ſhall be lawfull for them to follow with the arrows untill they be taken. And for this grant, fine, and agreement, the ſaid earle of Arundell hath remiſed and quitt claimed, from him and his heires, to the ſaid earle of Winton and his heires, all that part of the wood of Chaleng towards Charleg' and towards the wood of the monks of Gerendon for ever, according to the aforeſaid bounds; reſerving liberty to the ſaid earl of Arundel and his heirs to enter into that part of the ſaid Forreſt with the ſaid nine bows and ſix arrows as aforeſaid. And the ſaid earle of Arundel granteth, for himſelf and his heires, that he will not permitt any of his ſervants or tenants to comitt any treſpaſs in the ſaid forreſt, by deſtroying the game: and if any be convicted thereof, the ſaid earle Arundel granteth, for himſelf and his heires, that he will provide a reaſonable puniſhment for ſuch offence without delay, according to the utmoſt of his power."

The late Dr. Vernon had taken alſo the following memoranda concerning this fine from ſome other national records in the Talley Court of the Exchequer:

The charges in both theſe proſecutions were proved, and the Swainmote jury found in the firſt, that they had unjuſtifiably ſold 178,000 chords of woods, at 6*s.* 8*d.* per chord, to the value of £.59,400; and in the ſecond 60,700 chords, amounting to £20,050. The laſt inſtance of the juſtice in Eyre's having held a court in any of the Foreſts, is believed to have been during the reign of Charles II. This is mentioned by Mr. Roger North, in his Life of the Lord Keeper; and he himſelf attended as king's counſel: it hath ſince been dropped, though not perhaps without its uſe, from the great expence to the Crown." Barrington on the Statutes, p. 42.

[1] Spelman.

[2] See under Mountſorell, p. 90. An ingenious friend ſuggeſts an idea that the magnificent ſpur found at Mountſorell might have been one of thoſe which uſed to be paid yearly by the earl of Winton for the Foreſt of Charnwood.

[3] "Paſnage was conſidered as being of great profit to thoſe who lived in the neighbourhood of a foreſt, for the feeding of ſwine, though at preſent it is little attended to. The people of this country, in the winter, chiefly ſubſiſted upon ſalted meat, even in the caſtles of the great men and barons; and we therefore find in Domeſday, that it is generally ſtated for how many hogs the eſtate hath maſt or paſnage." Barrington, p. 37.

[4] Segrave Chartulary; ſee vol. I. p. 111.

[5] Ibid. p. 114.

[6] Of this place ſee before, p. 123.

[7] From the Segrave Chartulary; ſee the Appendix to vol. II. p. 117.

[8] The Holy Rood Grounds were incloſed, by common conſent, in 1668; ſee p. 111.

"Inter Hugonem de Albiniaco comitem Arundel, querent', & Rogerum de Quincy comitem Winton' def; quod comes Arundel queſtus quod comes Winton' impedivit eum habere liberum introitum & exitum in boſco Le Chaleng, ad capiend' eſtoveria, & currere cum canibus; quam libertatem Radulfus comes Ceſtrie habuit pertinentem manerio ſuo Barewe. Comes Winton' conceſſit comiti Arundel medietatem boſci del Chalenge verſus Barewe, cum boundariis; ſalvâ venatione totâ comiti Winton', &c. & omnibus aliis boſcis manerii Barewe, excepto parco Quarendon. Comes Arundel & heredes habeant foreſtarios, qui portarent arcus, ſagittas, genderes, picettas, & bozones ſive ſagittas; cum aliis conventionibus notatu perdignis. Chimina de Whitwick verſus Groby & verſus Berdon nominantur[1]."

Another cauſe occurs in the Exchequer, in 1242, "inter abbatem de Gerwedon querent', & Rogerum de Quincy comitem Winton' defend', de bruerâ & paſturâ de diviſâ de Whitmore heved uſque Naileſton, ꝑ diviſam bruere de Ibſtoke & de Naileſton, uſque campum abbatis de Stanton, Whytemere, Weſtermaneſwey, Naileſton mede, Bardon, diviſa Charnewode Foreſta comitis[2]."

And in 1252 another agreement was entered into, by the earl of Winton, with Roger de Somery, then poſſeſſor of the manor of Barrow, to this effect:

"Rogerus de Quincy comes Winton', R. Rob̃to de Tateſhal juniori, Joh̃i fil' Alani, Rad̃o fil' Rogeri de Sum̃y, Rogero de Montealto & Cecil' ux', quod teneat finem inter Hugonem de Albiniaco comitem Arundel, avunculum Roberti, J. & Rad̃i, & fratrem Cecilie, de libero introitu & exitu comitis Arundel in boſcum vocat' Challenge, eſtover, & curſum canum ibidem. Rogerus de Sum̃y, tenens manerii de Barewe poſt mortem Nicolai matris Rad̃i, debeat fugare in foreſtâ de Groby. Comes teneat parcum de Bradgate clauſum cum ſaltatoribus. Comes dat licentiam Rogero Sum̃y quod fugat in Foreſtâ ſuâ; capiat duos damas tempore pinguedinis, & duas damas tempore firmationis; & aliæ conventiones notatu perdignæ[3]."

Roger de Quincy earl of Winton gave permiſſion to the monks of Garendon to incloſe, in any manner they might think fit, "totum boſcum ſuum de Katt, & totum placeam ab haya in occidentali parte caprarie ſue uſque ad caput de le Thweyt verſus foreſtam, ubi abbatia eorum antiquitùs fuit fundata, & totum le Thweit[4]."

In 1278, Hugh le Deſpenſer (created earl of Wincheſter in 1322), held Charnwood Foreſt of the king, paying yearly a pair of gilt ſpurs[5].

Sir William de Ferrariis, ſecond ſon of William earl of Derby, had in 1279, as lord of the manor of Groby, partem boſci de Charnewode, in quo eſt libera chacea. And that he held the ſame in ſome part of the reign of king Henry III, appears from ſeveral original deeds; by two whereof he grants lands therein to Richard Nowel, with common of paſture, &c.; and by two others, lands and rents to the prior of Ulveſcroft[6]. In one of theſe grants are eight acres and a half between the prior's cloſe called Biſchopeſhull and the Foreſt of Charnwood; in the other, two acres and a half near the cloſe of Alderman's Haw; five acres near the priory-croft; five acres near the cloſe belonging to the priory-mill; and three acres between the Leyefield and the cloſe of Neutown (Novæ Villæ) near ſome of the priory-land called Ulſpychaln.

Another of his grants, to the prior and convent of Charley, ſhall here be given:

"Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis preſentes literas inſpecturis, Willielmus de Ferrariis, miles, ſalutem in Domino ſempiternam. Noverit univerſitas veſtra nos, pro animabus patris & matris, anteceſſorum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, & maximè pro ſalute anime noſtre & omnium fidelium defunctorum, dediſſe, conceſſiſſe, & hâc preſenti cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam, Deo & eccleſie Beate Marie de Charl, priori & canonicis ibidem in perpetuum divina celebrantibus, in excreſcione curie ſue, extra portam & extra murum juxta bercariam, quinque acras terre & dimidiam; videlicet, unamquamque rodam viginti-quinque pedum in latitudine, & in longitudine à bercariâ predictâ linealitèr deſcendendo uſque in le Blakebrok, & extra vetus foſſum versùs Kalengiam in longitudine quinquaginta perticarum, & in latitudine à vaſto d̃ne Elene de la Souche uſque vaſtum de Barowe; tenend' & habend' dictis priori de Charl & canonicis, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam, ſicut aliqua eleemoſina, liberiùs, quietiùs, & meliùs dari, teneri, vel poſſideri; ita, videlicet, quòd dicti prior & canonici de Charl, & eorum ſucceſſores, dictas quinque acras terre & dimidiam poſſint affoſſare, claudere, aſſartire, ſeminare, & approwyare, ſecundùm quod meliùs viderint expedire, ſine aliquâ contradictione noſtrî & heredum & ballivorum noſtrorum qui pro tempore fuerint; & etiam predictam terram versùs Kalengiam in longitudine & in latitudine, ſicut predictum eſt, concedimus & confirmamus. Et, ut hec noſtra donatio, conceſſio, & preſentis carte confirmatio, robur firmitatis optineat, hanc preſentem cartam impenſione ſigilli noſtri roboravimus. Hiis teſtibus; d̃nis Andreâ de Jarcumvyle, Symone de Jarcumvyle, Roberto de Waleys, Petro filio Rogeri, Johanne filio Petri, militibus; Johanne de Aneſty, Willielmo Coco de Bradegate, Gaulfrido Blaunchard de Stanton, Roberto de Bretland de eâdem, Ricardo Laur' de eâdem, clerico; & aliis[7]."

After his death, in 1288, it was found that he had held the wood [boſcum] of Charnwood; and that William de Ferrars, his ſon and heir, was then aged 17[8].

Alice de Beaumont counteſs of Boughan, conſtabulatrix of Scotland, and widow of ſir Henry de Beaumont, confirmed to the monks of Garendon, for the health of her ſoul, that of her huſband, and of John Comyn earl of Boughan her uncle, "totum boſcum et ſolum cujuſdam boſci, cum ſitu, chaceâ, et venatione, et omnes alias res et poſſeſſiones in villâ et campis de Shepeſheved et de Gerendon, et foreſtâ noſtrâ de Charnewode."

In 1306, John Comyn earl of Bouchan gave to the nuns of Gracedieu 100 acres of waſte land appertaining to Whitwick and Shepeſhed[9].

The abbot and convent of Garendon obtained, in 1341, a confirmation from the king of a grant which had been made to them by Roger de Quincy, earl of Winton and conſtable of Scotland, "de totâ ſalvaginâ, unà cum omnibus beſtiis ſylveſtribus, &c. in clauſo de Katt; & de toto boſco ipſorum abbatis & monachorum[10]."

In 1422, Maud the widow of ſir John Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of a third part of a certain chace called Charnwood, parcel of the manor of Shepeſhed[11]; and in 1454, ſir William Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of the ſame third part, and of divers knights fees, held of the king, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by fealty only[12].

Some portion of this Foreſt was in 1540 the property of John de Vere earl of Oxford; and the receiver of Gracedieu priory charges himſelf with the payment of 13*s*. 4*d*. to the ſaid earl, for common of paſture in Charnwood, for the tenants of Belton[13].

Divers lands, including a cloſe of paſture called Meadow Cloſe, within the foreſt of Charnwood, parcel of the manor of Whitwick, were let to Thomas Paſquen, by leaſe from the crown, in 1583.

Some lands alſo, in Charnwood, &c. were leaſed by queen Elizabeth, in 1584, at the yearly rent of 11*s*. 8*d*. to William Acton and others[14]; and certain woods in this Foreſt, parcel of the manor of Beaumanor, were held by ſir George Haſtings, under a leaſe from the Crown, dated 20 Dec. 1587, at the yearly rent of 30*s*.[15]

Some other lands and tenements in the Foreſt, parcel of the manor of Whitwick, were leaſed in 1590, for 21 years, to Ralph Baldawyn, at a rent of 66*s*. 8*d*.[16]

In 1609, Thomas Hood held in capite the lands called Shifferman Hills, in the foreſt of Charnwood.

---

[1] Fines Leic', 24 Hen. III. n. 232.

[2] Ibid. 26 Hen. III. n. 265.

[3] Placita diverſ' Comitat', apud Hunt', 32 Hen. III.

[4] Regiſter of Garendon Abbey.

[5] Burton, p. 71; ex Libro de Feodis.

[6] P. Le Neve, MS. 1722.

[7] Cart. Ant. in Muſ. Brit. 111, G. 4. See the hand-writing of this deed. and what remains on both ſides of the ſeal, Plate X. fig. 5, 6.

[8] Eſch. 16 Edw. I. N° 27. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 34 Edw. I. N° 180.

[10] Cart. 14 Edw. III.

[11] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 51. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 33 Hen. VI. N° 28. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 31 Hen. VIII.

[14] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[15] Ibid.

[16] Ibid.

It appears, from authentic evidences, to have been the cuſtom, for many years preceding 1656, to drive[1] the Foreſt every year; and this was continued within the remembrance of the oldeſt inhabitants a few years back. It was the cuſtom for each commoner to give the Foreſt-mark to every beaſt he put thereon, which is the year-mark, or fleſh-brand; and every treſpaſſer was fined at every ſuch drift, but not more than nine and thirty ſhillings and eleven pence.

Towards the latter end of the laſt century there was a great clearance of wood on the Foreſt. In 1673, William Herrick, eſq. the elder, and William Herrick, eſq. the younger, of Beaumanor, ſold to Humphrey Jennens[2], eſq. of Erdington Hall, in the county of Warwick, at the price of £1178, 6090 trees of oak and aſh, ſtanding and growing within that liberty on the Foreſt of Charnwood, from Loughborough Lane-end near the Mile Croſs to the North-eaſt corner of Charley Lane, and on by Oldfield houſe and Oldfield Wood corner. The elder-trees, crab-trees, and hollies, with the alder-trees growing along the Carr[3] brook, were to be left ſtanding, with liberty to build huts and make ſaw-pits; and 12 years allowed to grub up, clear the ground, and fill up the ſaw-pits again[4].

This Mr. Jennens was the great iron-maſter at Birmingham, and had ſome conſiderable forges employed at Whitwick in the manufacturing of iron. Several mounts ſtill remain raiſed above the ſpot, wholly occaſioned by the cinders from theſe immenſe forges. Either Humphrey or his father lived formerly at Cole Orton.

In the ſame year, a leaſe of the manor of coneys in Charnwood Foreſt, and of the Goathouſe, was demiſed by William Herrick, eſq. to William Guthridge, of Beaumanor, at an annual leaſe of £9.

In 1679, was publiſhed, in ſix pages of quarto, "A Brief Relation of a wonderful Accident, a Diſſolution of the Earth, in the Foreſt of Charnwood, about two miles from Loughborough in Leiceſterſhire; lately done and diſcovered, and reſorted to by many people, both old and young. Publiſhed by two Lovers of Art, J. C. and J. W."[5] This obſcene tract is ſcarcely worthy notice, unleſs it be to obſerve that it has actually found a place, as a ſerious production, in the Harleian Miſcellany: yet, though the pamphlet be a mere banter, there appears to have been actually about that period a remarkable fiſſure on one of the Charnwood hills; the particulars of which have been lately thus communicated by an intelligent friend: "The hill which ſlipt is near the brook that divides the liberties of Woodhouſe and Beaumanor, and nearly oppoſite to a warren now belonging to Mr. Herrick. In this warren-houſe William Whittle (who died in 1796) reſided nearly 80 years, and his anceſtors before him[6] on the ſame ſpot for two centuries. This man has heard his uncle, who lived within 200 yards of the ſpot, ſay, that there had been much rain for ſome time, that it was a very wet ſeaſon, and that there was a vein of ſand underneath that ſide of the hill, which cauſed it to ſlip ſeveral yards; that many people ſuppoſed it to be an earthquake, but that he never heard any noiſe or rumbling whatever; that he had little doubt but that the ſand and wet weather were the cauſe of it; and it is very true that numbers of people flocked daily from all parts of the country to ſee it."

Within this Foreſt were formerly kept Courts of Swanimote[7] (or Sweinmote[8], the Court of the Swains or Countrymen) by the owners of the lordſhips of Groby, Shepeſhed, and Whitwick. Theſe courts are explained by Spelman to be "Curiæ foreſtæ; quæ de rebus & delictis in Foreſtâ accidentibus tribus tantum vicibus annuatim cognoſcat[9];" and the following particulars relative to thoſe on this Foreſt were tranſcribed by Mr. Peck, in 1730, from an old MS. in the poſſeſſion of Ambroſe Philips, eſq. of Garendon.

"The whole royalty of the Foreſt or chace of Charnwood (as touching the Swanimote Courts) doth belong to theſe three manors; Shepeſhed, Groby, and Whitwick; and all the four rangers of this Foreſt do hold lands of theſe three manors, to perform their office of rangers, and by other ſervices; namely, Mr. Holt of Hathern, and Mr. Eyre of Belton (for his lands in Whatton), two of the rangers, do hold of the manors of Shepeſhed (viz. Mr. Holt of my lord of Rutland's manor, and Mr. Eyre of Mr. Davenport's manor); and Mr. Danvers of Swithland, one of the other rangers (holds his lands in Swithland) of the manor of Groby; . . . . Warner of Markfield, the fourth ranger, holds of the manor of Whitwick. Every one of theſe townſhips and manors ought to have a drift within the liberty of their own manor only, and not to uſurp any drift within the liberty of Shepeſhed; ſic è contra. Neither are the tenants of theſe three townſhips compellable to come to any Swanimote but ſuch as is kept for the townſhip or manor whereof they are tenants. And therefore Mr. Holt and Mr. Eyre do wrong to their lords, to appear and perform their offices of rangers at Whitwick Swanimote. And my lord of Rutland's freeholders and commoners, and Mr. Davenport's, do wrong to their lords, to appear at Whitwick Swanimote; whereas they ſhould appear only at Shepeſhed Swanimote, when any is kept. Alſo it is wrong that Shepeſhed tenants and commoners ſhould be amerced at Whitwick Swanimote, as there have been of late; and now, at the laſt Swanimote, divers of my lord of Rutland's tenants and Mr. Davenport's of Shepeſhed lordſhips are amerced, and like to be diſtrained for them, if my lord of Rutland do not crave of my lord of Huntingdon that he will forbear to diſtrain them for the cauſes aforeſaid, until a right courſe may be concluded between them by friendly agreement[10]."

---

[1] In ſeveral parts of this county the term drift is uſed in another ſenſe; as Melton-drift, Wymondham-drift, &c. green lanes where thoſe pariſhes have right of common.

[2] Soon afterwards the owner of Gopſal Hall; where his pedigree, and an account of his family, will be given.

[3] This illuſtrates the Aller Carr, pp. 95. 135.

[4] From original documents at Beaumanor.

[5] The original tract is uſhered in by the following pompous Advertiſement: "To the Reader. To your ingenuous acceptation we communicate theſe our obſervations, not for filthy lucre's ſake, but for public ſatisfaction and truth-ſake, being provoked thereby by ſome perſons of quality, conſidering the evil cuſtom of erroneous reports, and the fearful rumours of ignorant people. Read, and judge charitably, without critical or incredulous cenſure. Here is no wandering prolixity, nor ſuperfluous embelliſhment of eloquence; but a ſcrutiny into the proper antitheſis, apparelled with neceſſary language. Be candid, not cunning. Vale." Harleian Miſcellany, vol. II. p. 178.

[6] John Whittle holdeth, by leaſe dated April 10, 1652, of the grant of William Herrick, eſq. one cloſe, or piece of ground, in the Foreſt, lying on the South ſide of the Hill called Thick Hill, called by the name of Goathouſe, with two tenements ſtanding on the ſame, and one free-warren of coneys thereunto adjoining, for the term of 21 years, there being 4 years expired, and 17 yet to come; with common in the Foreſt; and payeth yearly rent, with ſuit of court, £9. and common fine to Beaumanor 1*d*. From the Court Rolls.

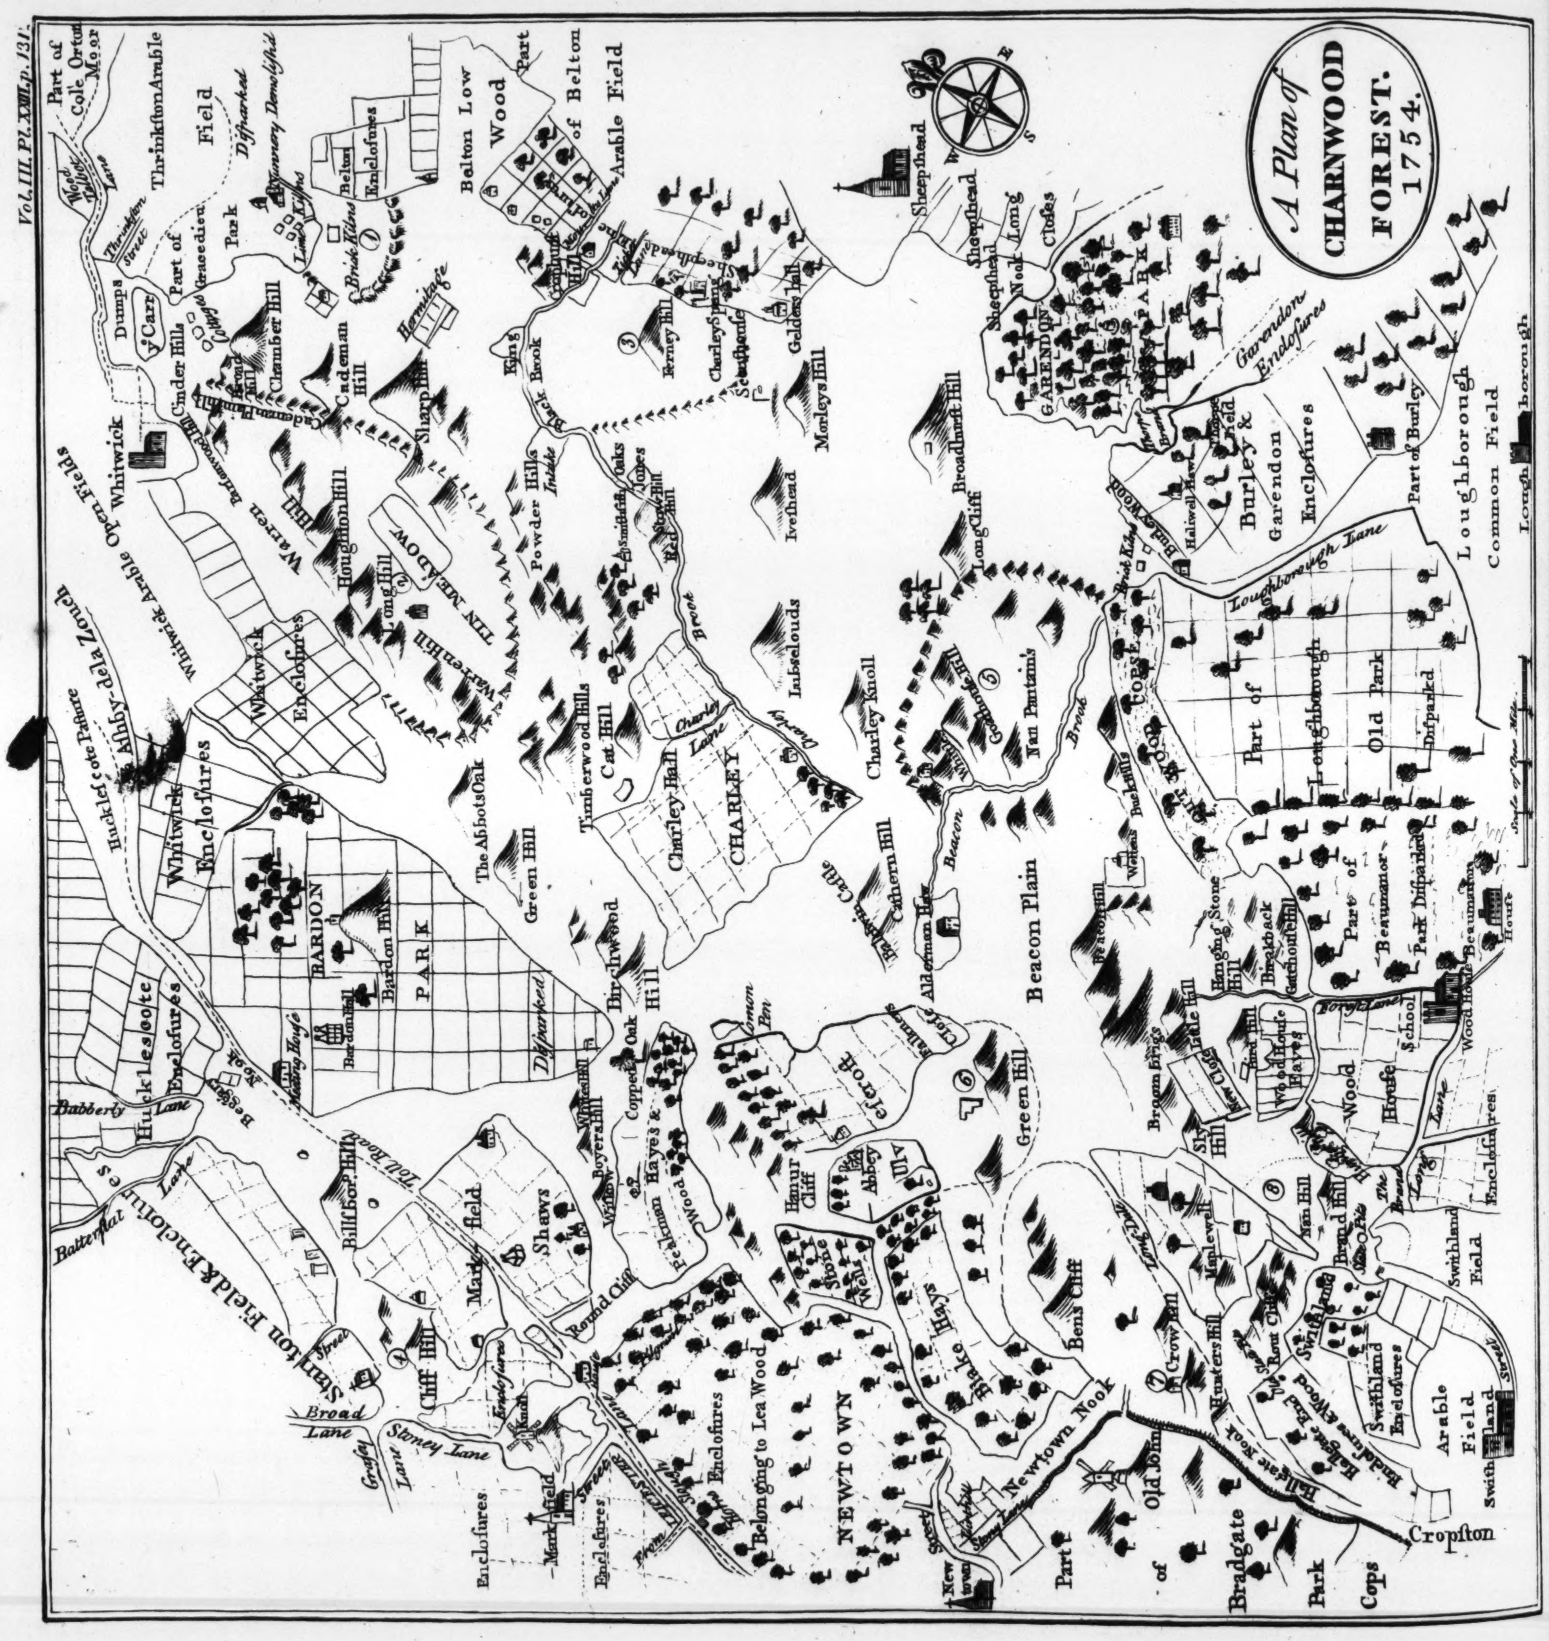
[7] Probably a miſ-reading of two letters, inſtead of Swa*in*mote, the letters i, m, n, u, being frequently indiſtinct in old writings.

[8] This Court is to be holden, before Verdurers, as Judges, by the Steward of the Sweinmote, thrice every year, the Swains and Freeholders within the Foreſt compoſing the jury. The principal juriſdiction of this Court is, firſt, to enquire into the oppreſſions and grievances committed by the Officers of the Foreſt; and, ſecondly, to receive and try preſentments, certified from the Court of Attachments, againſt offenders in vert and veniſon; Stat. 34 Edw. I. ſtat. 5. c. 1. And this Court may not only enquire, but convict alſo; which conviction ſhall be certified to the Court of Juſtice-ſeat, under the ſeals of the Jury; for this Court cannot proceed to judgement; 4 Inſt. 289. See Jacob's Law Dictionary, 4to, ed. 1797.—In the parliament 1 Ric. II. the Commons prayed, "that the Swanimotes might be kept but at one time of the year; and that no freeman, other than officers of the Foreſt, be diſtrained to come to the Swanimotes;" to which was anſwered, "The King would the ſtatute therefore provided to be kept."

[9] In the Charta de Foreſtâ of king John, as well as in that of Henry III. cap. 9, it is expreſsly declared, that "Nullum Swanimotum de cetero teneatur in regno noſtro, niſi ter in anno; viz. in principio quindecim dierum ante feſtum S. Michaelis, quando agiſtatores venerint ad agiſtandum dominicos boſcos; & circa feſtum S. Martini, quando agiſtatores debent accipere pannagium ſuum; & ad iſta duo Swanimota convenient foreſtarii, viridarii, & agiſtatores, & nullus alius per diſtinctionem. Et tertium Swanimotum teneatur initio quindecim dierum ante feſtum S. Johannis Baptiſte pro venatione beſtiarum noſtrarum; & ad iſtum Swanimotum convenient foreſtarii, viridarii, & non alii per diſtinctionem."

[10] Peck, MS.

After



A Plan of CHARNWOOD FOREST. 1754.

Ashby-de-la-Zouch
Whitwick
Whitwick Enclosures
Bardon Park
Bardon Hill
Charley
Charley Hall
Beacon Plain Beacon
Garendon Park
Garendon Enclosures
Burley & Garendon Enclosures
Loughborough Common Field
Loughborough Lane
Part of Loughborough Old Park
Part of Beaumanor Park Disparked
Beaumanor House
Woodhouse
Swithland
Swithland Enclosures
Cropston
Newtown
Newtown Nook
Part of Bradgate Park
Ulverscroft Abbey
Green Hill
Timberwood Hills
Cat Hill
Warren Hills
Tin Meadow
Grace Dieu Park
Belton
Belton Low Wood
Part of Belton Arable Field
Sheepshead
Thrinkston Arable Field
Huckleſcote Enclosures
Stanton Field Enclosures
Markfield
Shaws
Broad Lane
Stoney Lane
Toll Road

After the Foreſt had been completely cleared of moſt of its wood, it abounded for a conſiderable time with rabbits, there being then not leſs than five well-ſtocked warrens, lord Stamford's, lord Huntingdon's, Mr. Philipps's, Mr. Herrick's, Mr. Boſwell's; and three ſmaller ones, Mr. Barber's of Mapplewell, and two others. In January, 1748-9, however, the inhabitants of all the neighbouring villages met at a place called Charley Knowl, and, after a formal conſultation, began to pull down fences, where encroachments had been made upon the Foreſt, at Woodhouſe Eaves, Newtown Linford, and other places[1]. Afterwards the rabble of the country, principally colliers from Cole Orton, proceeded to dig up and deſtroy the rabbits; which occaſioned great diſturbance. Perſevering in their reſolution, the perſons who claimed the right of protecting what they called their property raiſed help, and went to ſuch lengths that it was found neceſſary to guard themſelves with fire-arms. William Whittle, a warrener, and about four or five of his aſſiſtants, were attacked by the rabble on the Warren Hill. They defending themſelves, a ſcuffle enſued, with pitch-forks, ſpades, pick-axes, &c. The warrener was the only perſon who had a gun. In this affray William Stevenſon, one of the rioters, received a wound in his forehead, of which he lingered a few hours, and died. It was the opinion of Mr. Hunt, the ſurgeon who dreſſed the wound[2], that the man was not ſhot (though ſuch a rumour gained ground amongſt the multitude), it was believed to be occaſioned by a fork-grain penetrating his head. A gun was fired off in the air, which occaſioned the report of his being ſhot; but it was never properly known who the perſon was that killed him. Whittle and five or ſix other perſons were indicted at the Lent aſſizes at Leiceſter 1749[3] for the murder; but, no poſitive evidence appearing to convict any of them, and Mr. Herrick's grant of free-warren being produced in court, they were of courſe acquitted. Yet the reſolution of deſtroying continued, although there came two troops of dragoons, who took great numbers of the rioters priſoners, ſo that the gaols at Leiceſter were filled with them; and, after much controverſy, the Foreſt was proved to be a free common for 26 neighbouring towns and villages; and thus the matter reſted. But there is now ſcarcely a rabbit to be ſeen, except in Bradgate Park[4].

When the tumults had entirely ſubſided, the following reſpectful memorial was drawn up by a conſiderable number of the inhabitants of the neighbouring townſhips, and ſigned reſpectively by the officiating clergyman of each place:

"To William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor.

"We, the freeholders, farmers, and commoners, of the ſeveral towns hereto annexed, having a right of common upon a large common, called Charnwood, alias Charley Foreſt, deſire, in behalf of ourſelves and great numbers of commoners, in the firſt place, to expreſs our concern and abhorrence of the manner of the late proceedings on the ſaid commons; and, in the ſecond place, we deſire to repreſent the great oppreſſions we and all the commoners have lain under, for ſeveral years paſt, by the enlarging and extending the ſuppoſed antient bounds of the warrens which have been kept upon the ſaid commons, by which the graſs and herbage of the ſaid commons has been ſpoiled, and rendered unfit for depaſturing of cattle and ſheep; and many poor tenants and commoners have and do ſuffer grievouſly by the ſaid ſuppoſed bounds being ſo enlarged, and by the warreners diſturbing and driving their ſheep and cattle off, or when near the ſaid warrens: It is therefore our requeſt, that you will take the ſaid condition of the commoners into conſideration: And, agreeable to your goodneſs in propoſing to reform all grievances, we deſire that a jury of the moſt antient perſons neareſt to thoſe commons may be convened, and by their verdict ſuch mere-dykes or ſtones may be fixed as may prevent any future diſputes; and hope you in conſequence can receive no damage, as your tenants, together with the reſt of the commoners, will likewiſe find their account and benefit by it, and be thereby enabled to pay their rents: And we farther deſire to recommend to your mercy thoſe commoners that have incurred your diſpleaſure by defacing the ſaid commons; it being their firſt offence of this nature, to which many were betrayed, either by rumours without foundation, or led by curioſity, or irritated by others murmurs, or excited by ſenſibly experiencing themſelves the decay of their own commons. All which is hereby ſubmitted."

This repreſentation was ſigned by the miniſters and inhabitants of the following townſhips:

Swithland.
Rothley.
Mountſorrel.
Thurcaſton.
Cropſton.
Anſtey.
Loughborough.
Barrow upon Soar.
Quorndon.
Woodhouſe.
Newtown Linford.
Ratby.
Markfield.
Staunton under Bardon.
Huckleſcote.
Whitwick.
Thringſton.
Belton.
Shepeſhed.
Hathern.
Woodthorpe.
Maplewell.

The circumference of the Foreſt, according to the following ſurvey taken in 1754, by Mr. Samuel Wild, ſome time maſter of the free-ſchool at Woodhouſe (ſee Plate XXIII.) appears to be 33 miles; but then he has taken the boundaries in an angular or any form they preſented: it perhaps might be encircled in a fence of about 25 miles.

The Perambulation round Charnwood Foreſt.
Beginning at the Foreſt-lane, next Beaumanor Park.]

	Miles.	Furlgs.	Poles.
Woodhouſe, Barrow, Quorndon, Woodthorpe, round Woodhouſe-Eaves and Hungerhill Wood, in Swithland field,	1	6	25
Swithland, Mountſorell, Rothley,
To N. E. corner of Swithland Woods,	1	1	39
Newtown, Thurcaſton, Cropſton, Anſty, Groby, Glenfield, Ratby,
To Cropſton-gate, — —	1	6	24
Round Bradgate Park, —	2	0	2
——- Blake-hayes and Stony-wells, N.W.	3	4	48
To the Toll-houſe, — —	1	5	37
	9	1	21
Markfield.
From Toll-houſe on road to Leiceſter	0	1	24
To the corner of Markfield Intakes, near the Toll-houſe, — —	0	1	25
Round Markfield Knoll, —	1	1	28
To bottom of Waſh-pit-lane,	0	3	5
To corner of ditto lane under Cliff-hill,	0	2	16
To top of Stony-lane, —	0	3	20
To Broad-lane, — —	0	1	20
	2	7	26
Staunton, Thornton, Bagworth,
To Staunton-ſtreet, — —	1	4	8
To Batterflat-lane, — —	1	2	14
	1	6	22
Huggleſcote, Ibſtock, Donington,
To Beggary-lane, — —	0	3	31
Bardon Park.
To the corner Copt Oak, —	1	7	20
To Judy's lane, — —	1	6	4
	3	5	24

---

[1] The incroachments in taking in the common had been to a great extent, and were then thrown open to the foreſt again by the inhabitant freeholders.

[2] I have now before me the bill and receipt of Mr. Thomas Hunt, a ſurgeon at Loughborough, for four guineas, for applications to William Stevenſon's head, attendance to Whittle's Jan. 1748-9, at the Coroner's Inqueſt, and at the Aſſizes.

[3] There was at the ſame time an aſſize-trial, the earl of Stamford againſt ſome of the commoners, concerning the common; in which it was contended that 26 towns and villages had a right of common.

[4] When there were rabbits in the Foreſt, a couple of the fineſt might have been purchaſed in the neighbourhood, for 6*d.* or 7*d*, at the moſt. The preſent price is 1*s.* 6*d.* and ſometimes 1*s,* 8*d.* a couple.

Whitwick, Cole Orton, Swannington, Aſhby de la Zouch, Raunſton,
To Judy's corner, — —	0	2	28
To Whitwick-ſtreet, —	2	0	0
To the Dumps, — —	0	4	25
	2	7	13
Thrinkſton.
To Thacker's lane, — —	0	2	25
Gracedieu, Oſgathorpe,
To N. W. corner of Gracedieu Park,	0	6	3
To lane leading to Oſgathorpe,	0	2	35
	1	0	38
Belton, Diſeworth, Long Whatton, Langley,
To N. W. corner of Belton Lowwoods,	0	4	27
To the Fiſh-pool, — —	1	2	18
	1	7	5
Shepeſhed, Hathern,
To Gelders Hall, — —	1	7	21
To Shepeſhed Nook, — —	1	5	0
	3	4	21
Garendon Park. Round the ſame,	1	4	27
Knight Thorpe, Burley,
To S. W. corner of Thorpe-Brand,	0	3	30
To Loughborough-lane, —	0	5	33
	1	1	23
Loughborough. To Beaumanor Park,	1	5	20
Beaumanor Park. Round the ſame, circuit. — — —	0	7	5

The particular lands where the rabbit-warrens were are thus marked on the plan:

(1) Gracedieu Park; (2) Tin Meadow; (3) Black Brook and Ferny Hill; (4) Cliffe-hill; (5) Goat-houſe-hill and Nan Pantain's; (6) Green-hill, &c. near Ulveſcroft; (7) Hunters' hill and Benſcliffe-hills; (8) Nan-hill, &c. near Maplewell.

In "Much ado about Nothing," Benedict ſays, he had found Claudio "as melancholy as a lodge in a warren;" which Mr. Steevens parallels with a paſſage in the firſt chapter of Iſaiah; where the Prophet, deſcribing the deſolation of Judah, ſays, "The Daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers," &c.—and inſtances in ſimilar lonely buildings near Aleppo, from which the Prophet takes his compariſon. The lodges of the warreners in Charnwood Foreſt with equal aptneſs exemplify the paſſage in Shakeſpeare.

Mr. Monk, in his Agricultural Report for this county, 1794, obſerves, that "Charnwood Foreſt contains about 15 or 16,000 acres; three-fourths of which might be made very uſeful good land, and, if incloſed, would make ſome excellent farms. The moſt improveable part is towards Loughborough, where there is a large tract of very excellent land, much of it worth a pound an acre. It is the opinion of thoſe who are well acquainted with every part of it, that there is not a ſingle acre but what is capable of improvement[1]. If the hills were planted, and the other parts incloſed, it would be a wonderful ornament to the county. Some people are of opinion, that planting the hills would not anſwer, as it would be impoſſible for the plantations to thrive, the hills being ſo very bare of ſoil, and full of rocks; but others, whoſe judgement ranks very high, are of a contrary opinion, and are certain they would thrive very well, and not only be a great ornament, but of very great uſe in a country ſo very thin of timber[2]. The woods near Beaumanor, on the edge of the Foreſt, thrive very well, which are upon a very thin ſoil, and rocky like the Charnwood hills. The chief proprietors wiſh much to have it incloſed. It has long been in agitation, and I ſhould hope they will ſoon ſet about this great and uſeful work, as it certainly muſt be of great advantage to them (in particular), and the publick in general. There is a canal cutting through part of it, which will be exceedingly convenient for the carriage of lime, &c. Mr. Bakewell is of opinion, that the Foreſt, in its preſent ſtate, is actually a loſs to thoſe who have the privilege of turning their ſtock upon it; for, if one man who has this right turns his cow upon the Foreſt in the ſpring, and another man at the ſame time gives a farmer eighteen-pence a week for the keep of his cow in an incloſure, and they are both driven to market (both of the ſame value when turned out) at Michaelmas, the difference of price will more than repay the expence of the keep; and that the difference in ſheep will be ſtill greater. A number of little encroachments have been made within theſe few years on the Foreſt by incloſing ſmall pieces; but, if the whole ſhould ever be incloſed, they will be properly enquired into. I was ſo fortunate as to meet with a map of the Foreſt in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Mr. Prior, who, with great kindneſs (being a well-wiſher to the cauſe), permitted me to take a copy of it[3]. It is the only one (I believe) ever taken, except a very old one in the poſſeſſion of William Herrick, eſq."

The Foreſt at preſent is turned to a very good uſe; for the people who live upon the borders have ſtocked it well with ſheep, which, producing large quantities of fine wool, is the ſource of conſiderable advantage. Some part of it is excellent land; and, if tilled, would grow corn of any kind. Here are alſo plenty of fine ſprings, which iſſue out of the rocks and hills, ſo that you cannot paſs far in any part without croſſing a ſmall ſtream. The principal proprietors are, the earl of Stamford and Warington, as owner of Bradgate, Groby, &c.; the earl of Moira, as lord of the manors of Whitwick, Loughborough, Barrow, &c.; William Herrick, eſq. as owner of Beaumanor and its dependencies; and Thomas March-Phillipps, eſq. of Garendon Park, &c. William Parkins-Boſville, eſq. of Ulveſcroft, and a few other gentlemen, alſo poſſeſs ſome ſmaller portions.

A turnpike-road over the Foreſt leads from Loughborough to Cole Orton and Aſhby de la Zouch; and another from Leiceſter to the aforeſaid places; but that from Loughborough is very little uſed ſince the navigation has been completed.

---

[1] "If it be true, as is generally aſſerted, that land which bears Fern, or Brakes, (Pteris Aquilina, Lin.) has always depth of ſoil enough to render it ſoon improvable, and highly fertile; the Foreſt, beyond the Outwoods, near Loughborough, and about Beacon Hill, comes fully under that deſcription; as all that neighbourhood produces great quantities of Fern, and of large growth. I know not whether it is to this day, as it was formerly, (for this deſcription of Charnwood Foreſt renews in my mind the pleaſures of my youth more than 50 years ago) collected by the neighbouring poor, and burned for the ſake of the aſhes, which were made up into balls, and ſold in large quantities all over the country, under the name of Aſh-balls, to make lye for the purpoſes of waſhing.—The Fern-harveſt, in the Autumn ſeaſon, after the grain was in, had ſomewhat of a jovial turn, and held for a conſiderable time. The fires were kept burning day and night frequently. Twenty or more might be ſeen blazing together, and formed a very pictureſque night-ſcene."—For theſe obſervations I am indebted to the kindneſs of Dr. Pulteney. And Mr. John Herrick, in a letter from Beaumanor, Oct. 17, 1798, enables me to add, that "the Fern-harveſt is ſtill much the ſame as the good Doctor deſcribes it; beginning uſually at Midſummer, and laſting about ſix weeks. Vaſt numbers of poor people from the villages round about make fern-fires in various parts of the Foreſt, particularly about the Outwoods and the hills adjoining Beaumanor and Woodhouſe; but they are not kept in all night. The poor people always take home at night the aſhes they burn in the day. The aſh-balls are ſold from 4*s.* 6*d.* to 6*s.* a hundred, about the ſize of a large gooſe-egg, but round like a cannon-ball. Great quantities of gorſe-kids are got occaſionally on the Foreſt, for the purpoſe of heating ovens. The Acorn-harveſt is alſo now commenced, which is very plentiful this year; great numbers of poor people from all the neighbouring towns gathering vaſt quantities, which they ſell for a ſhilling a ſtrike, to feed pigs. Pannage for hogs is often mentioned when the Foreſt was covered with wood; which is the caſe now in this park and grounds. There are alſo great numbers of crab-trees, from which much verjuice is made by the farmers every year. Buddon wood is famous for bilberries; which form another harveſt for the neighbouring poor, who go in vaſt numbers to gather them for ſale. The Outwoods alſo, on the edge of the Foreſt between Beaumanor and Haliwell Haw, abound with bilberries; and here alſo grows a ſmall wild ſort of raſpberry and ſtrawberry."

[2] Mr. Monk was in this particular very much miſinformed. The country all round the Foreſt abounds with timber. Witneſs, the uncommon profuſion of beautiful trees on the whole lordſhip of Beaumanor, the Outwoods, Buddon Wood, Swithland Wood, &c.; and more eſpecially the extenſive woods of the Earl of Stamford, on the very edge of the Foreſt, near Newtown and Steward's Hay.

[3] This map, which is given in the Agricultural Survey, is ſuperſeded by the one engraved from Mr. Herrick's, in Plate XXIII.

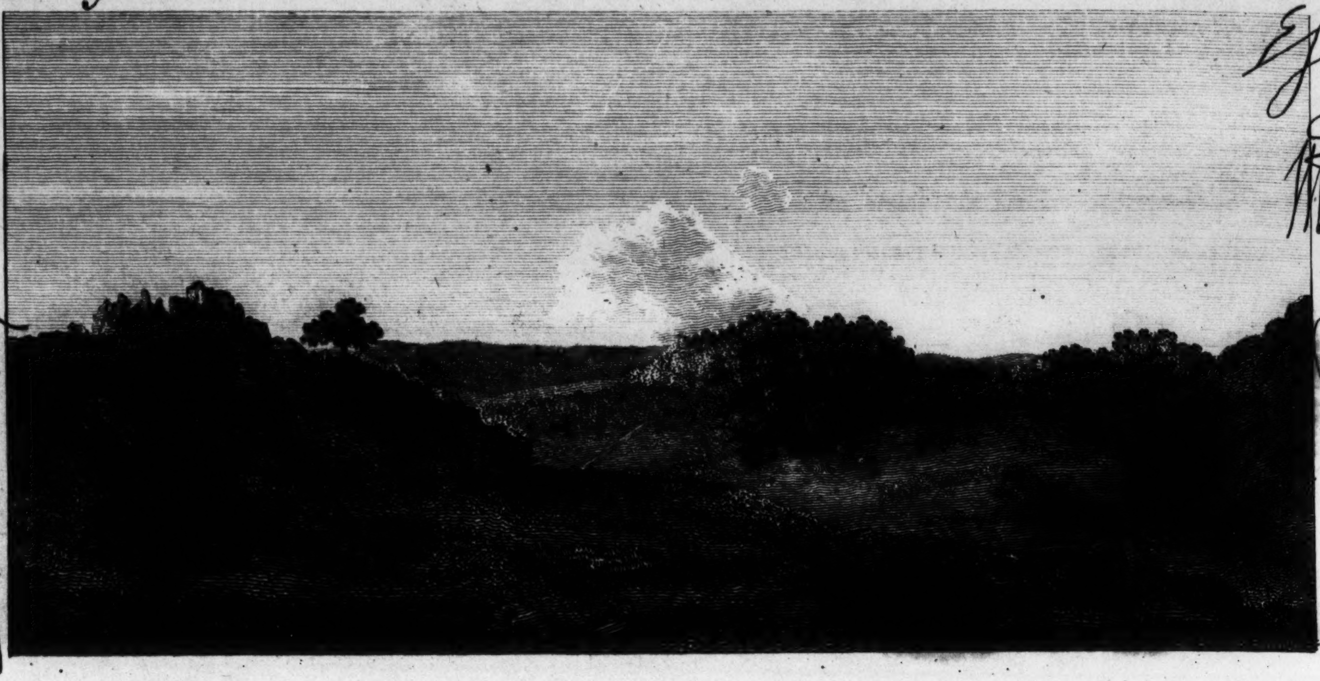
VIEWS ON CHARNWOOD FOREST.

3 T Dorset

4 Essex

16 Middlesex

15 Lionell Cranfeilde



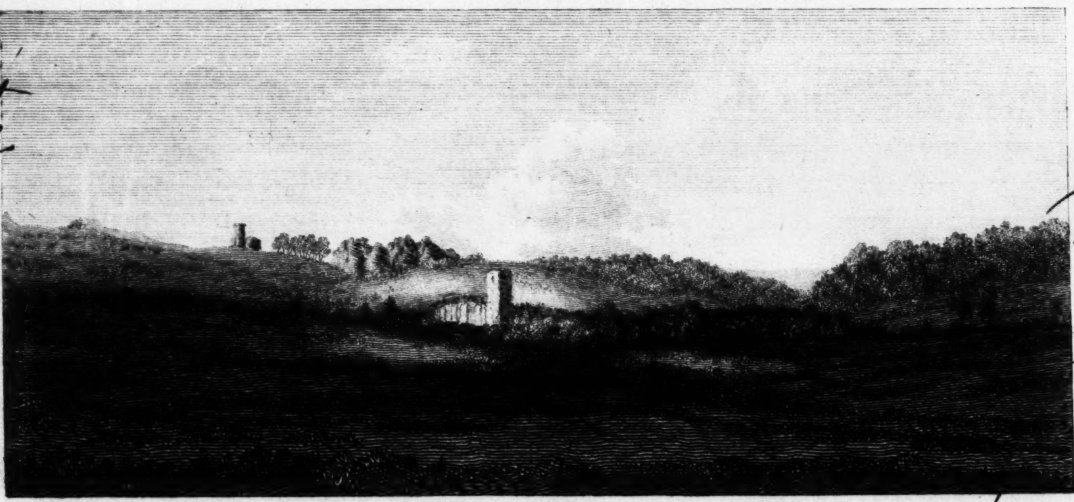
1. On entering the Forest from LOUGHBOROUGH.

1 Edw: Dorsett

2 T Suffolk

13 Julian Noel

14 D Murray



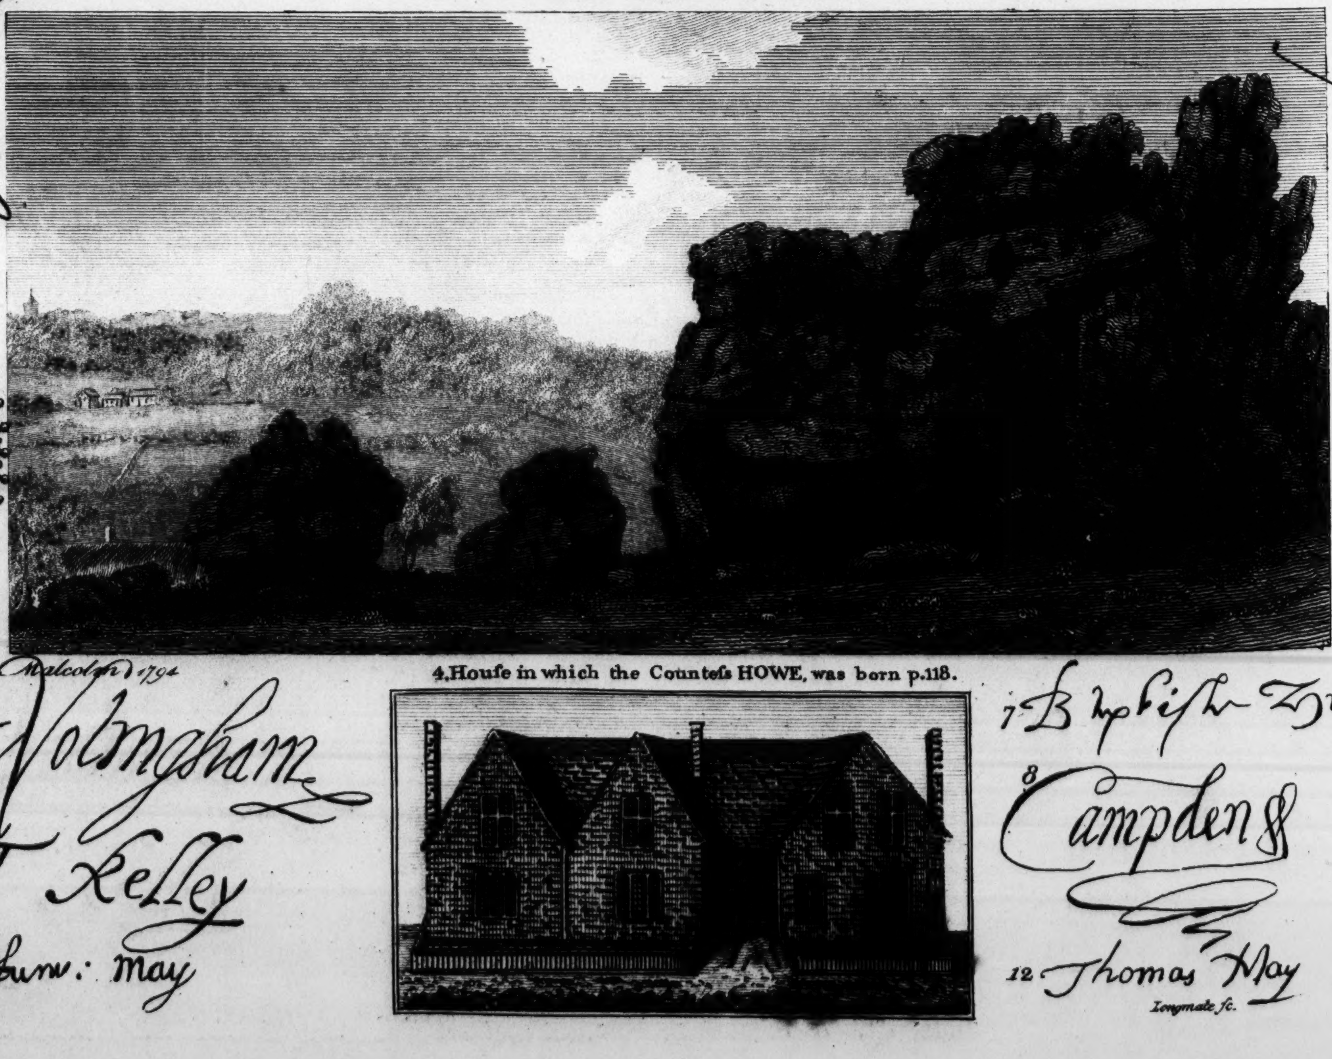
2. Distant View of ULVESCROFT ABBEY.

9 Lenox

10 T Edmondes

3. A View near BARDON HALL.

20 Montgomery



Malcolm f. 1794

4. House in which the Countess HOWE, was born p. 118.

Longmate sc.

5 Nottingham

6 T Kelley

8 Campden

11 Humf: May

12 Thomas May

The road from Aſhby to Leiceſter is very pleaſant, and abundant in proſpects. One, particularly beautiful, attracts the traveller's notice when he arrives at the top of the hill above the village of Ravenſtone. Bardon Hill is conſpicuous on the left hand. The beautiful village of Ravenſtone is before you; and the right ſide, the proſpect appears ſingularly diverſified with the woods, and plains abounding with verdure and fine Leiceſterſhire ſheep, of the Bakewell breed, &c. &c. all which, on a fine ſummer's day, form an airy, rural ſcene, eſpecially Bardon Hill. The way from Ravenſtone, through many villages, to Leiceſter, is in general rich and pleaſant. The craggy rocks of the Foreſt contraſted with verdure, and the ſeeming happineſs of the peaſants, form a happy ſcene, worthy the hiſtorian's or rather the poet's pen.

At Mountſorell commences a huge and barren hilly tract, preſenting pointed rocks on all ſides, dreary and melancholy to paſs towards the evening [1], as, on the road acroſs it for many miles, not more than five or ſix habitations preſent themſelves. This when you look towards the Foreſt; but on the oppoſite ſide, is a pleaſing contraſt: Shepeſhed, with a neat Gothic church ſtanding on a hill; houſes peeping through the trees; and a richly-cultivated country, indulating with hill over hill, removes every gloomy impreſſion. From Mountſorell to Aſhby de la Zouch, a diſtance of at leaſt 16 miles, hill and dale, rocks and ſmooth aſcents, alternately amuſe the traveller, and afford him catches of country 30 miles diſtant. The three views in Plate XXIV. will convey a tolerable idea of this amazing diverſity of ſcenery. Fig. 1. is taken on entering the Foreſt from Loughborough; fig. 2. is a diſtant view of the ſurvey of Ulveſcroft priory; and fig. 3. a remarkable rock near Bardon Hall.

Beacon Hill has of late years been regularly reſorted to in ſummer, on a particular day, by the inhabitants of Loughborough, who appoint two ſtewards for the year, to ſee that the innkeepers ſend up a ſufficient quantity of good proviſions and liquor; and the company, after regaling themſelves with a hearty dinner, amuſe themſelves with drinking, ſmoaking, and looking through teleſcopes at the various extenſive proſpects, &c. till the evening warns them to retire. The company were at firſt wholly from Loughborough; but the neighbouring inhabitants of ſeveral other places have ſince very readily joined them.

“This Foreſt,” ſays Mr. Throſby, “in which I have been frequently delighted on my Excurſions, has many attractions, even now it is devoid of thoſe embelliſhments it once poſſeſſed. When Leland made his obſervations, it was finely wooded; and not a century ago it was rich in foliage. But notwithſtanding that its woods, groves, and lawns, are no more, in which the ſquirrel ſported, and the blackbird and the thruſh charmed, where the hart and the deer ſheltered in times of danger from the ſportſman and the fleet hounds; yet what can rob it of thoſe long-venerated forms which have ſaid to man's leveling arm, ‘Hitherto ſhalt thou go, and no farther!’

“The ſummits of the Foreſt, which are of the moſt beautiful kind, preſent themſelves in a variety of pleaſing ſhapes to our conſideration, even to adorn a cottage. What outlines of beauty meet the paſſing clouds! In one place the moſt hardened form preſents you with a fine appearance of a ruined caſtle; in another you behold venerable pyramids of rock, ſpiring above each other in the happieſt forms. How exquiſitely do theſe hardy hills in ſome inſtances guide your eye to diſtant valley-views, diverſified with villages, ſeats, woods, and ſome of the principal objects in the county! The ſtones taken from the Foreſt-rock are of the hardieſt kind; the chiſel and the mallet have been employed in vain to form them for purpoſes of uſe and ornament. The rock, in many places, retains the moſt venerable tokens of old age; its cheeks, if I may be allowed the expreſſion, are furrowed with the ſtorms and tempeſts of paſſing ages. It is of a gritty nature [2], and in ſome places poſſeſſes veins of fine grey marble. Not a foſſil or marine form was ever found in it [3]; although in the neighbourhood, at Barrow-upon-Soar, is found the ſtrongeſt and moſt convincing teſtimony of the truths revealed reſpecting Noah's flood, when a few beings only of every kind were ſaved from its deſtruction; and when the rolling of the mighty waters doubtleſs jumbled together large maſſy piles of animate and inanimate things, which time has petrified or conſolidated into ſtone; retaining, in many inſtances, their natural ſhape. I will not ſay that the Foreſt-rock exiſted before the flood; or that it is primeval with the creation of the world; but we may pleaſe, or rather amuſe ourſelves by conjecture.

---

[1] The deſcription of an Eclipſe of the Sun, as obſerved by an intelligent friend in September 1793, in a ſituation admirably calculated for perceiving its effects, ſhall here be given: “Charnwood Foreſt is at no time chearful, thoſe parts at leaſt which are uncultivated; and it happened to be my lot this day to croſs it alone. The Sun roſe unclouded, and the reviving ſhowers that had fallen the preceding days made the whole face of Nature bright and refreſhing. I rode lingering from Loughborough to the Foreſt, admiring each varying view, enlivened by paſſengers loaded with proviſions of every kind along the inclining path before me. The fierce ſcarlet cloaks of the hardy maids, ſcattered at different diſtances, made more vivid contraſted with the green, enriched the view. Behind, the fine old tower of Loughborough church roſe from amongſt the deep ſhadows of intervening trees, its pinnacles and ſides brightened by the firſt ſalutations of the Sun, while a dazzling cloud peeped on the ſhaded ſide. He muſt be leſs than man that can behold the vaſt chain of Nature extended before him unmoved; who can view without emotion rocks piled on rocks ſeeming to totter at every rude blaſt that aſſails them; or who does not enjoy the ſweet ſcent of the morning, when each bud and flower, expanding to the foſtering warmth of the riſing Sun, ſends forth to the breeze a thouſand varying perfumes! Who would not have exulted with me, that from this elevated Foreſt miles beyond miles diſplayed themſelves before me, affording all the variety of country that the moſt luxuriant imagination could fancy! I ſtood, and felt the moſt perfect happineſs; were any thing wanting, it was a friend to whom I might have imparted my feelings. This enchanting ſcene was ſoon to loſe its faſcinating power; thoſe trees, thoſe rocks, ſpires, mountains, deprived of their gilded light; a cold, damp, dark, vapour, was ſoon to ſpread a veil over their beauties, and to chill my fervid contemplation. I had not recollected that the eclipſe was viſible that day; I obſerved, as is common in the neighbourhood of Charnwood Foreſt, towards noon the clouds began to gather; I thought too they ſeemed uncommonly denſe and black; but this I attributed to my elevated ſituation: they generally hang low there, with heavy torrents of rain. Still I thought there was ſomething more than uſual; the ſun was obſcured; and, as I was then in a deep valley, the rough-ſided hills riſing on all ſides from me, the darkneſs became tremendous. I haſtened to the ſummit before me; by the time I had reached it, the obſcuration was at the height, and an exceſſive heavy cloud was between me and the Sun. Now was the face of Nature changed! Maſſes of rocky clouds hung in every direction; the ſpots of clear ſky had aſſumed a blackiſh grey tinged with blue; the light edges of the clouds were no longer dazzling, they were the colour of poliſhed iron; the ſublime hills in Derbyſhire were half buried in darkneſs and vapour; the brilliant green was now black and white; and the tower at Loughborough a ponderous body, black and gloomy. Bredon hill and church, on one ſide, formed a middle diſtance; and the ſingular ſhape of both ſeemed at this period to increaſe the ſolemnity of the ſcene. I fancied to myſelf that ſuch a darkneſs would precede the final diſſolution of our globe; and felt a melancholy pleaſure in having ſeen, as it were by anticipation, that dreadful (to our conceptions) event. Some little time after, I ſaw the eclipſe in perfection, by a thin cloud intervening. J. P. M.”

[2] At Goathouſe Hill, now called Whitde's Warren, within the Royalty of Beaumanor, in this Foreſt, are found, about two feet deep, large quantities of moſt excellent ſtones for ſharpening razors and penknives. They are ſold, in vaſt quantities, at Birmingham, Sheffield, and Wolverhampton, at 2*d*. an ounce.

[3] “The rocks which conſtitute the ſummits of the hills in Charley Foreſt conſiſt either of a blue or dark-coloured ſtone, ſomewhat like the blue Elvan of Cornwall, and which is common, and conſtitutes whole mountains in many parts of the world; or, of Granite, more or leſs perfect. See above, p. 90. Granite certainly, and probably the blue rock, and other baſaltic ſtones, are never found to exhibit figured foſſils, by which are meant ſuch as take their form from animal or vegetable bodies: not becauſe ſuch ſtones are of an extraordinary degree of hardneſs, for ſuch remains are diſcovered in the hardeſt rocks of a ſiliceous baſis, and are often formed of the ſame quartzoſe ſubſtance; but, becauſe a Granite univerſally, and probably ſome of the blue ſtones, are conſidered, by mineralogical geologiſts, as among the primeval ſtones, which exiſted, in their preſent texture and form, prior to the creation of animals on the face of this globe; or, at leaſt, before the cruſt of it underwent that change, which we every where ſee it has ſuſtained.” R. P.

"In croſſing the Foreſt towards Whitwick, are a number of eminences, happily diverſified and ſleeping behind each other; ſome faintly cloathed with verdure, others patched with ſern, and moſt of them with jutting rocks. The nimble little ſheep ſkip like young rams before you, or as the fleeting deer at the approach of the human form. The inhabitants, who dwell in the ſcattered huts and cottages, are equally afraid. Theſe endure, but perhaps feel not, hardſhips; they live, as it were, in dens and caves of the earth. A woman who had loſt her huſband, and inhabited one of theſe huts, I am told from reſpectable authority, always reſted her numerous family, ſome feet to feet in the kneading trough, others in the little oven, and ſome, with herſelf, on the ruſhy mattraſs on the ground. I witneſſed myſelf, in the winter of 1790, a ſight that affected me much; three or four children on the ſide of a hill, when it was partly covered with ſnow, near their mother's cottage, without ſhoe or ſtocking, and with ſcarcely a rag of uſe to cover their fleſh: yet they looked chearful; health bloomed on their cheeks.

"Many of the rocks in the Foreſt have names known to the inhabitants who live on and near it. There is a pool near Whitwick, called Lady Aſlin's Pool, ſurrounded by ſome of the hardieſt features in the Foreſt; each has a name handed down by tradition, given probably from ſome incident long ſince forgotten. One is called Broad Hill, another Chamber Hill, another High Cadman, two others, Sharpley, great and ſmall. Baggerley, Kitchen, and Rocket, are names for three others. High Cadman is finely contraſted in its form with one near it called Swanimote Rock. The former has a broad baſe, is the higheſt in the link which nearly ſurrounds the pool, and is ſpiral. The other, which ſits below it, is in the form of a ſquat tower, unlike, in its formation, to any other in the Foreſt. On this formerly was held a court by the earls of Huntingdon, which is now transferred to Whitwick.

"Old John[1] is a fine member of the Foreſt. He is ſeen in almoſt every direction of the county. The leſſer hills, his companions, near him, are fine foregrounds to diſtant views; ſome of them are wooded at their baſe, and others on their ſides. Beneath him lies the park and ruined ſeat of Bradgate, which, with the extenſive woods adjoining and ſeveral manors, belong to the earl of Stamford; whoſe anceſtors reſided here. The venerable oaks which incloſe the valley; the hardy rock which here and there peeps through the moſſy hills, corroded and grey with revolving years; the decaying trunk in the fore-ground, which ſeems unwillingly to yield to the hand of Time; the little jumping quadrupeds, which now inhabit this lonely place, where once the firſt of females[2] dwelt; all tend to fill the mind with ſenſations hiſtoric and ſublime."

[Three ſcenes in Bradgate Park are given in Plate XXV; and views of the old manſion there, both in its perfect and ruined ſtate, with a more particular hiſtory of that place, will be given hereafter.]

"Markfield Mill Hill (ſee Plate XXI.) is another eminence ſeen from far: it reſembles, at a near approach, the deſtruction of the warring elements when thunder rolls, or that of ſome aweful convulſion of the earth. Fragments of ponderous rocks lie ſcattered round it, daſhed, as it ſhould ſeem, from its rugged cheeks, down the precipice in all directions. This alſo has its companions, uniformly grand, but more diminutive. In a valley near them the fine religious ruin of Ulveſcroſt priory peeps from among the ſolemn and ſpreading oaks that ſtill ſurround it.

"Mountſorell Hills, which are ſeen in an oppoſite direction, are known almoſt to every traveller. They appear ſketched by the ſame hand, penciled by the ſame touch, and finiſhed by the ſame inimitable Artiſt, who formed the rocks, and has given us faculties to admire the wonders of his creative power.

"Not far from this link of eminences are Swithland ſlate-pits, which are accidentally formed by the artificer's labour into ſtriking ſcenery, bordering on the terrific. They alſo preſent kindred marks of the Foreſt-rock, and are partly boſomed in the earth.

"Blue ſlates are raiſed near Swithland, on the Southern ſkirts of the Charnwood hills; where an immenſe excavation has, within the laſt 50 years, been made. Superficial quarries have been worked time immemorial; but their produce was of a coarſe quality compared with thoſe which are now raiſed, ſome of which are nearly equal to the Weſtmoreland ſlate. They are raiſed in blocks, blaſted from an almoſt ſeamleſs rock. The blocks are firſt cleft into ſlabs; and afterwards the ſlabs into ſlates; or, if too ſtrong and coarſe for this purpoſe, are thrown aſide, as coarſe flags, for various uſes. Out of the larger blocks, chimney-pieces and tombſtones are cut. The ſame kind of blue rock is found in different parts of the Foreſt hills; but none yet which affords ſlates equal in quality to the Swithland ſlates[3]."

The far-famed Hanging Stone (which has ſtood for ages the admiration and wonder of beholders) has a baſe about ſix feet high and as much ſquare, with another on the top quite ſeparate, ſo that you ſee between them; and the top hangs ſo much as to have the appearance of falling off. Such was the ſituation of this remarkable rock in March, 1791, "when," ſays Mr. Throſby, "in company with two gentlemen from Beaumanor-park hall, for the purpoſe of viewing the Foreſt, I faſtened my little horſe under this ſtone, and made a drawing of it; and on the 8th of April this ponderous maſs fell. I judge that I was the laſt perſon that was under it (for the Foreſt is a place not much frequented). Perhaps, the weight of a large pebble-ſtone, falling on the extremity of the hanging part of this rock, at the time I was there, might have brought it down upon me. In that caſe, I ſhould have paſſed from life to death, with as little ſuffering, as a fly that is cruſhed under the wheel of carrier's waggon." Two views, in its original and preſent ſituation, are given in Plate XVII. fig. A. B.

Between Charley and Whitwick[4] is another maſſy ſtone, piled on another, which ſeems to have acquired alſo the name of the Hanging Stone. It is balanced with the niceſt judgement, and appears to have no ſupport, or rather ſtay; a gentle puſh, you would ſuppoſe, would bring it to the ground; yet it has ſtood for ages, apparently miraculouſly preſerved.

In Plate XVII. fig. C. is a rock reſembling the ſtern of a man of war; which is likely long to ſtand the ſhocks and tempeſt of revolving years. And fig. D. is a view of the country between two bold rocks, which guide the eye to the beautiful wood of Buddon, in the liberty of Quorn; at the foot of which appears Woodhouſe church, and a little box in that village built lately by Mr. Herrick, backed by a fine diſtant country.

Other eminences in the county, which are moſtly to be ſeen from the hills in this Foreſt, are,

Croft Hill, which ſtands alone on a level part of the county, is formed of a ſandy rock, and is every where viſible in the South and Weſt diviſion of Leiceſterſhire.

Carleton Spinney Hill is an object ſeen at the diſtance of many miles; which ſhews its lifted head above all the ſwells of the earth which abound in the South-eaſt part of the county.

Billeſdon Coplow, or rather Mr. Palmer's houſe upon it, is a bright ſtar in the Eaſtern diviſion of the county.

Scraptoft Mound is a work of man's labour; the lanthorn, or ſummer-houſe, on its top, is no inconſiderable ſpeck alſo in the Eaſtern direction of the county.

Quenby Hall, alſo Eaſtwardly, appears at a diſtance like a noble caſtle on a lofty eminence.

Burrow Hill, and the woody ſcenery about it, lighted up by the ſun, when ſeen at a diſtance, has the appearance of a fine fragment of antiquity. It is viſible in the North and Eaſtern parts.

Ragdale, an elegant modern reſidence, built by the preſent earl Ferrers, ſtands on an eminence near the Foſs-road; and is to be ſeen from a great ſpace in the North-eaſt diviſion of Leiceſterſhire.

---

[1] On this eminence the preſent noble owner has placed the imitation of a ruined tower; which is ſhewn on the left, in the view of Ulveſcroft, Plate XXIV. fig. 2; and a nearer ſketch of it in Plate XXV. fig. 3.

[2] Lady Jane Grey; ſee p. 144.

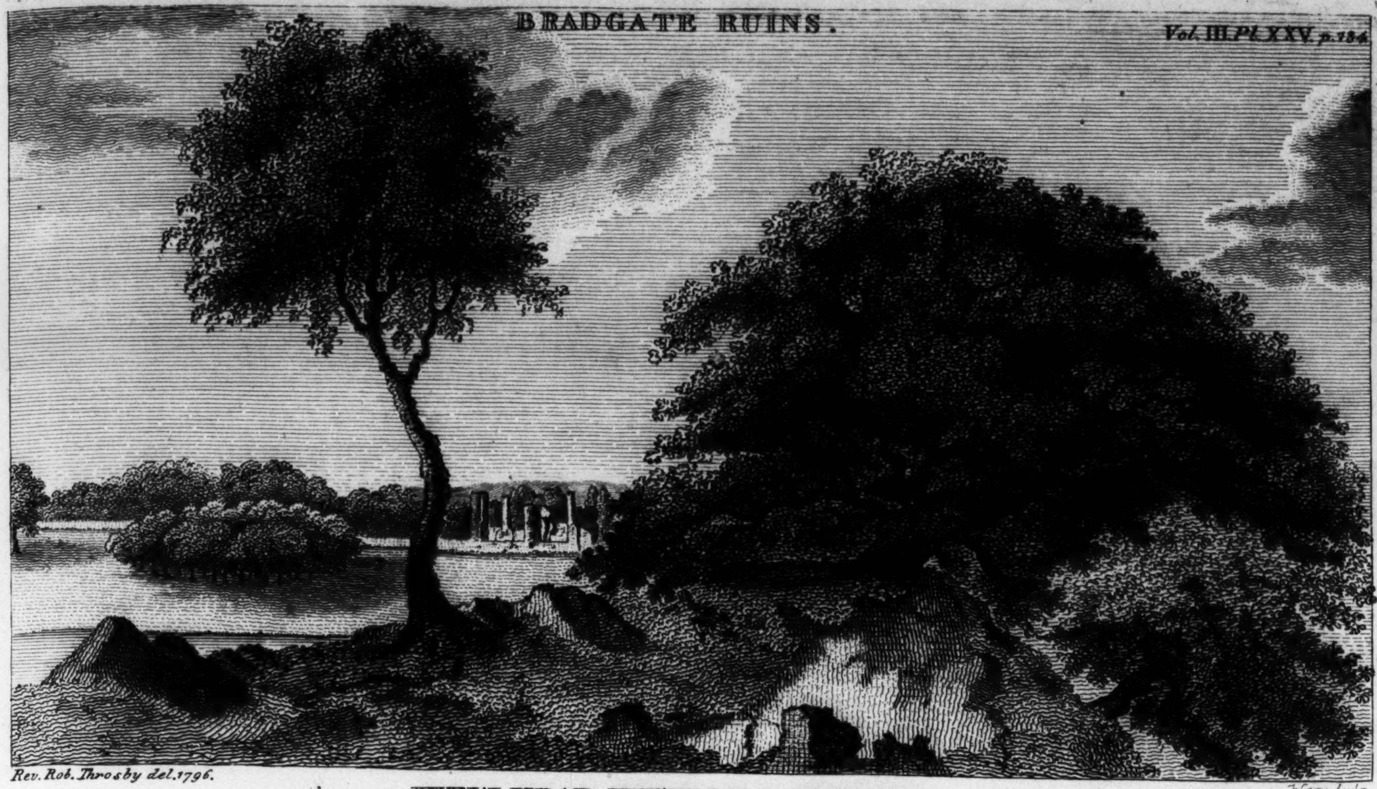
[3] Marſhall, vol. I. pp. 26, 27.

[4] A lane near Whitwick, which leads to Cole Orton, and a wood near it, are called Talbot Wood and Tallot Lane; and the following couplet is ſtill proverbial there:

"Nothing remains of Talbot's name,
But Talbot Wood and Talbot Lane."

BRADGATE RUINS.

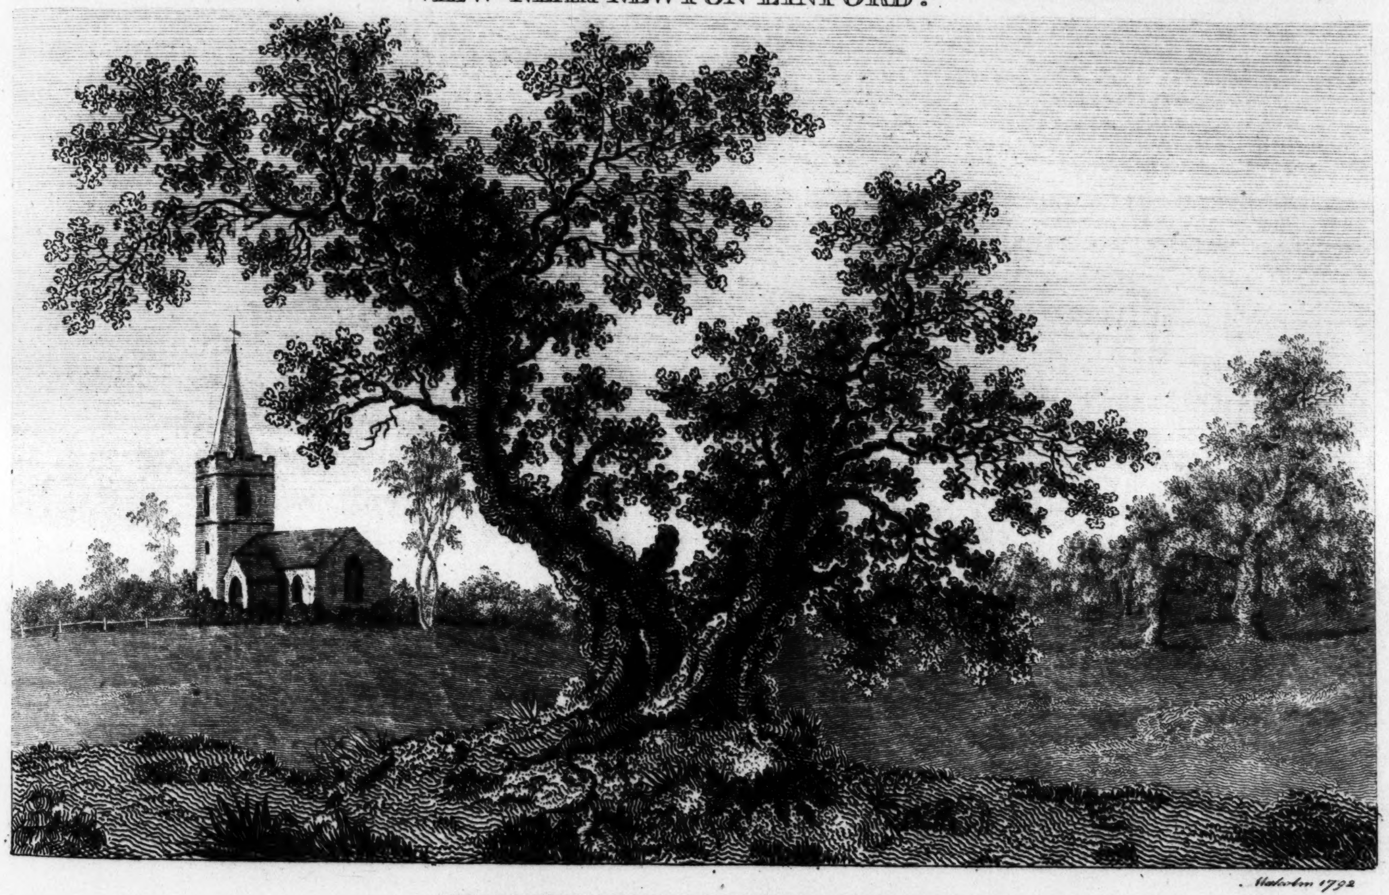
Vol. III. Pl. XXV. p. 184.



Rev. Rob. Throsby del. 1796.

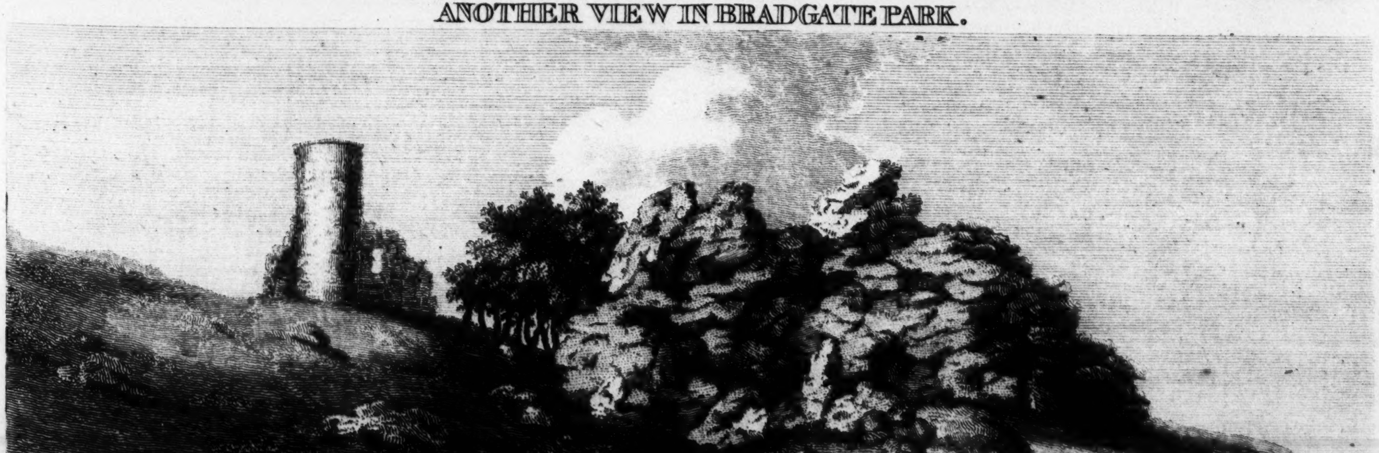
F. Cary sculp.

VIEW NEAR NEWTON LINFORD.



Malcolm 1792.

ANOTHER VIEW IN BRADGATE PARK.

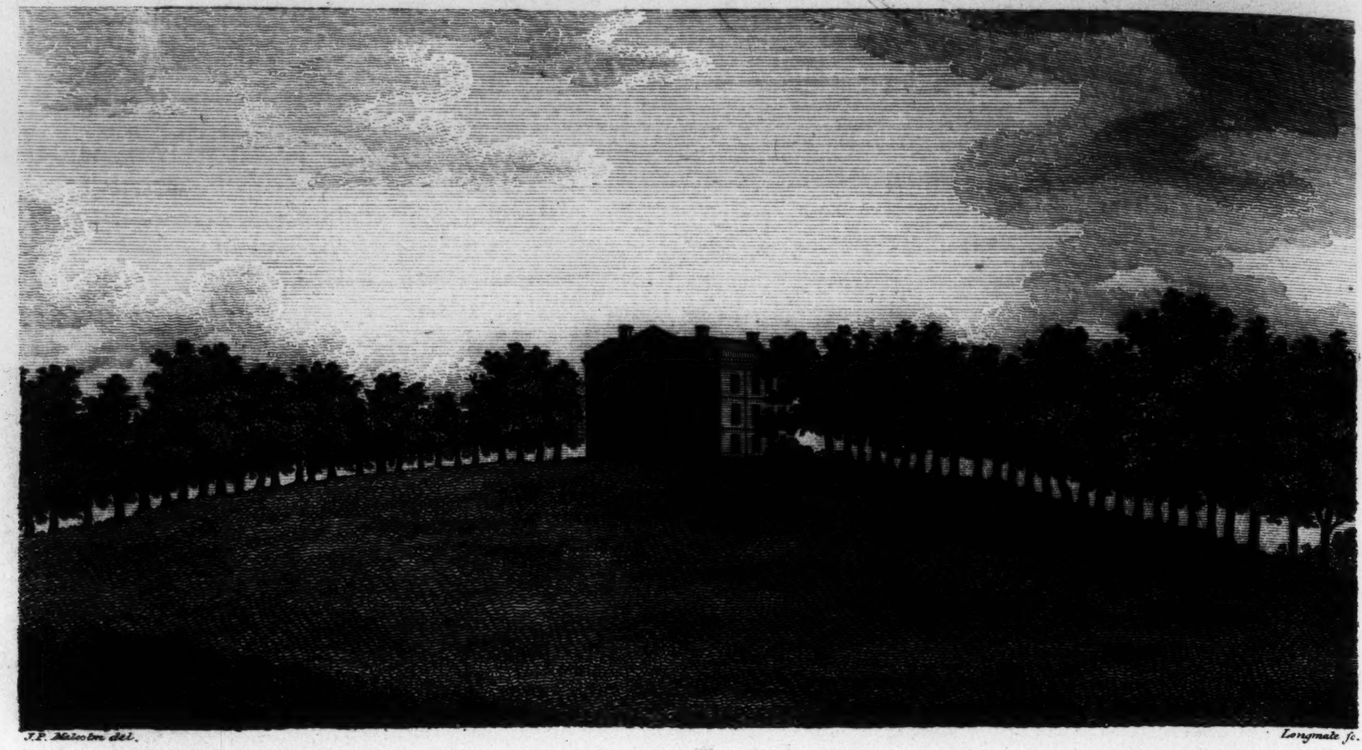


Malcolm 1792.

To the Right Hon.ble GEORGE HARRY GREY, EARL of STAMFORD & WARRINGTON, BARON of GROBY, &c. &c.
this Plate is respectfully inscribed by J. NICHOLS.

Vol. III. Pl. XXVI. p. 135.

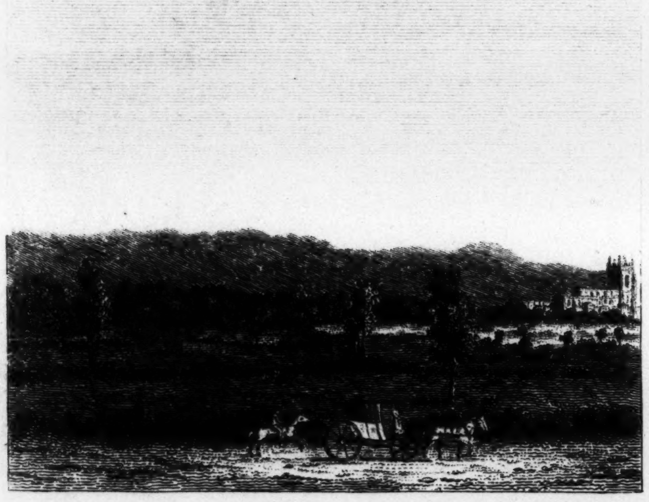
1. BURLEY HALL.



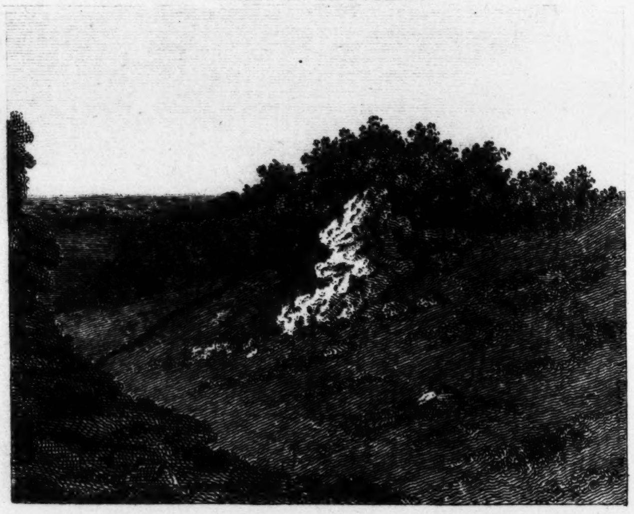
J. P. Malcolm del.

Longmate sc.

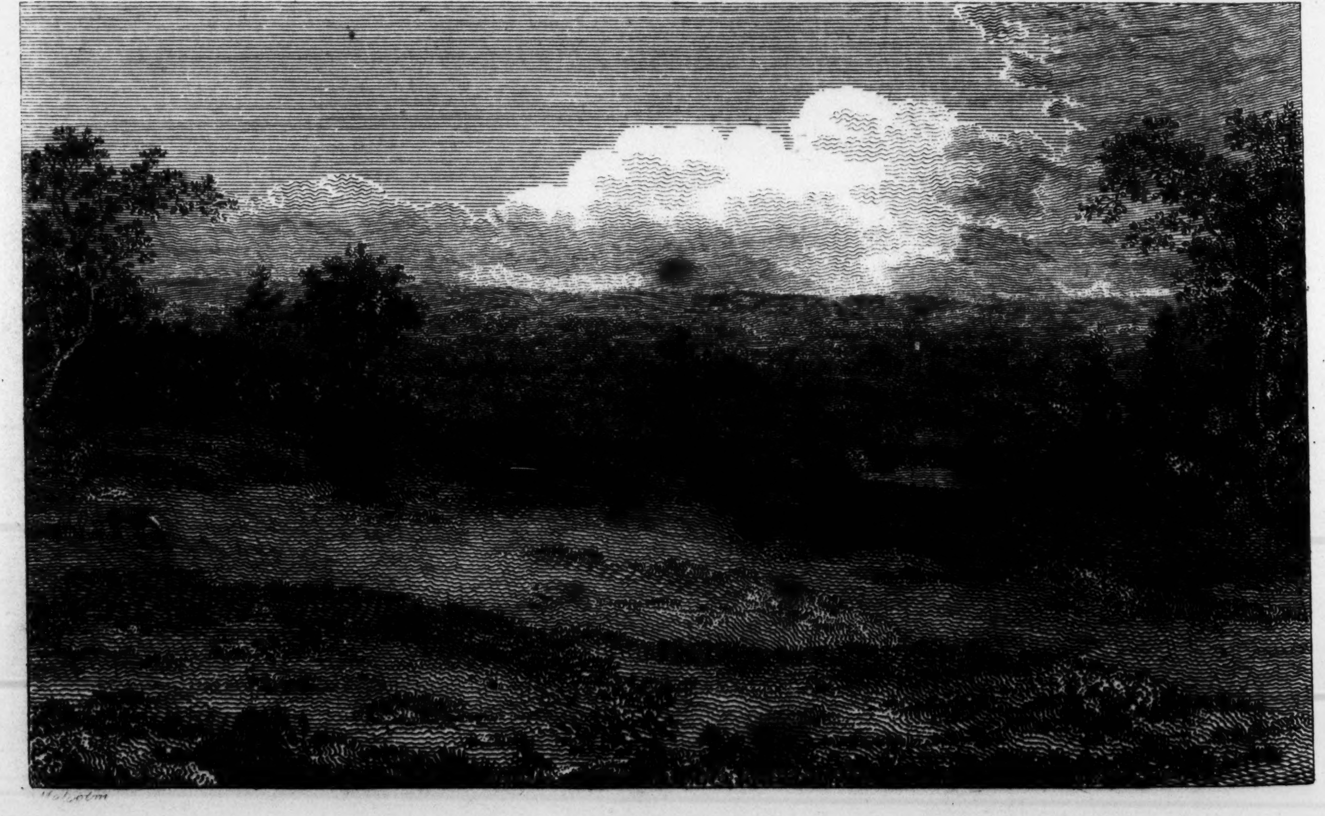
2. View from the NOTTINGHAM ROAD.



3. View on the FOREST.



4. View from the MOORS, near REMPSTON.



Malcolm

Belvoir Caſtle and Donington Cliffs are objects of magnitude and note; but they are ſeen more in the neighbouring counties than in Leiceſterſhire [1]."

In Plate XXVI. fig. 1. is a view of Burley Hall, the ſeat of the late Mrs. Tate [2], on the edge of the Foreſt; of which a deſcription will be given under Loughborough; where an account and view will alſo be given of Mr. Whatton's houſe at Loughborough Parks.

The ſmall view in the ſame Plate, fig. 2. was taken by Mr. Malcolm from the Nottingham road near the Thirteen Arches, an antient bridge ſo called. The Foreſt Hills appear to much advantage from moſt parts of this road, forming a dark back-ground to a variety of pleaſing objects; among which the fine old church at Loughborough is the moſt conſpicuous.

The accompanying ſketch, fig. 3, is one more proof of the inexhauſtible variety which every turn produces in the maze of hills on Charnwood Foreſt.

Fig. 4, in the ſame Plate, is a view taken from the Moors near Rempſton, a pleaſant village in this neighbourhood, on the Nottinghamſhire ſide of the Soar; in which Derby is ſeen near twenty miles in the diſtance.

Ben's Cliff, above the Weſt corner of Maplewell, was well covered with wood; as was alſo Jackdaw-hill, ſo called from large flocks of theſe birds which uſed to build their neſts in the hollow oak-trees. Some old men of 80 years of age, living at and near Mapplewell, remember, when they were boys, climbing the trees for young jack-daws.

A ſenſible, intelligent old man, about 80 years old, whoſe teſtimony may be relied on, affirms in 1798, that he was bred and born and has ſince lived at Maplewell. He remembers, about 50 years ſince, a great part of Lord Stamford's Warren Hill, near Bradgate Park, having many large oak-trees upon it, and Benſcliff covered with wood.

Crow Hill probably took its name from thoſe birds building there; the Old Slate-pits [3] near Hall-gates [4], all in the earl of Stamford's royalty, were covered with large oak trees; the tops of many of them, cut off, yet ſhot-out large branches; moſt of them hollow and decayed with age, and numbers whoſe circumferences were upwards of 20 feet. The late earl of Stamford ſold them to the proprietors of the furnaces at Melbourn in Derbyſhire. They were all cut down, and burnt upon the foreſt where they grew for charcoal, and ſent in bags on horſes to Melbourn. This correſponds with the accounts given of wood growing in the Foreſt formerly; and ſhews what fine timber the ſoil will produce. By intelligence collected from the oldeſt people now and ſome years back, it appears plainly that the greater part of the Foreſt was covered in the ſame manner with the fineſt timber of oak. Some few of the ſtumps may ſtill be traced juſt above the ſurface of the ground, ſo that the ſize may yet be diſcovered.

Buddon wood (a ſmall part of which is the property of Mr. Farnham, and the reſt of it belongs to the hon. Mr. Butler-Danvers,) has been long admired: being formed on a grand ſcale, either as a beauty for a back ground, a middle object, or taken in part on the fore ground of the picture. In any point of view it is a fine embelliſhment to this part of Leiceſterſhire.

The fine woods on the edge of the foreſt, called Loughborough Outwoods, extending from the Poget-gate near the corner of Beaumanor park-wall to near Loughborough-lane on the edge of the Foreſt, are the property of William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor; Mr. Nathanael-Palmer Johnſon of Loughborough; and the rev. William Pochin, the preſent rector of Morcote in Rutland.

Hungerhill Wood, at the South-eaſt corner of Woodhouſe Eaves, bordering along the edge of the Foreſt, belongs to Mr. Farnham.

Half a mile farther on, Swithland Woods, on the edge of the Foreſt, extend from the corner of the Slate-pits to the corner of the Foreſt near Hall-gates. That part of them which is within the pariſh of Swithland belongs to Mr. Butler-Danvers; the other part (which is in the pariſh of Newton Linford) is the property of the Earl of Stamford.

There are fine woods of oak adjoining to the priory of Ulveſcroft; and moſtly round the Foreſt.

Mr. Phillipps's woods at Gracedieu and White-horſe-wood are here deſerving of notice; as is the large reſervoir of water, about 35 acres, belonging to that gentleman, at Black Brook, and famous for fine trout and perch. There are alſo ſeveral ſmall rivulets in the Foreſt, in which are trout and craw-fiſh; and abundance of fine ſprings of water.

The Aller Carr was ſo denominated from the quantity of alder-trees there growing, many of which remained here within the memory of perſons now living. On this ſpot, on the brook in the lane leading from Woodhouſe to Loughborough, ſtood a mill, the foundations of which ſtill remain. In a very old roll without date this is called Beaumanor mill; and, in a rent-roll in 1599, is deſcribed as being in the lane adjoining to Mugling-wood lane and Beaumanor-park wall [5]. The meadows behind Beaumanor-houſe, which formerly were covered with the water that ſupplied the mill, having been lately drained by the famous Mr. Elkington, are now become good meadow-lands. The drains are about ten feet deep, and ſuch a current of water, at all times of the year, as would turn an overſhot mill from the mouth of the drain.

Pedigree of RAYSON, of BARROW UPON SOAR.

(Entered at Leiceſter, Sept. 8, 1682, by HENRY RAYSON.)

William Rayſton, vel Reſon, of Newbury, Berks. = . . . dau. of . . . Laſenby, of Whitewell, in the Whinnes, co. Ebor.

1. William Raſiſn, died ſ. p.
2. Richard Rayſon, colourman and grocer of London, died 1620. = Magdalen, dau. and ſole heir of John Van-Caſhe of Mecklin in Brabant and of his wife, dau. and coheir of . . . Coline. She was after married to . . . . . Hind, of Leiceſter.
Joan, married to . . . . Moore, of London.

Anthony, died an infant.
2. Anne, wife of Tho. Brown, an attorney-at-law.
George Rayſon, of Leiceſter, attorney-at-law, d. Aug. 18, 1676, æt. 82. = Elizabeth, dau. of Henry Ironmonger, of Burton on the Woulds.
1. Magdalen, wife of Richard Chapman, of Leiceſter.
2. Mary, wife of Philip Cowper, of Leiceſter.

1. Thomas, 5. John, died young.
3. Geo. Rayſon, of Leiceſter, d. about 1674, æt. about 42. = Dorothy Siſſon, of Ireland.
4. Will. Rayſon, of London, æt. 51, living 1682. = Suſanna, dau. of Will. Davenport, citizen of Lond.
Anne, dau. of Alex. Ing, of Leiceſter, 1ſt wife, died ſ. p. = Hen. Rayſon, of Barrow on Soare, æt. fere 54. = Mary, dau. of William Tipler, of Hungarton.

George, died unmarried.
1. Elizabeth.
2. Dorothy.

Elizabeth.

1. Henry, died an infant.
2. Henry, æt. 9.
3. George, æt. 6.
4. William, æt. ferè 3.

Elizabeth, æt. 8.
Mary, æt. ferè 5.

---

[1] Throſby.

[2] This lady died whilſt this ſheet was preparing for the preſs. See Gent. Mag. vol. LXVIII. p. 903.

[3] What was called The Old Slate-pits Hill in the Foreſt is now incloſed in Swithland Wood, and produces many fine oaks, though chiefly a hard rock.

[4] By the Hall-gates (vulgarly called Hoggates,) we are to underſtand the principal grand entrance from the Foreſt to Bradgate Hall.

[5] From a Survey-book of 1601, it appears that theſe meadows contained the mill-dam; and they are frequently called The Dams at this day; ſee p. 158. In a plan taken about the ſame time, there was a houſe ſtanding on or near the ſpot where the mill ſtood; but the meadows were not then covered with water. Probably, when the mill was deſtroyed, which it is believed was about the year 1580, the water was let off, and the ground became a paſture.

BEAUMANOR,

an extenſive manor (as will appear by the ſurveys hereafter noticed, though conſiſting only of the hall-houſe and a few detached farms and cottages), is beautifully ſituated in a fertile vale on the Eaſt ſide of the Foreſt of Charnwood; and, though it has for time immemorial been extraparochial, is locally within the pariſh of Barrow; as is evident from the following entry in the Regiſter of Leiceſter Abbey:

"Manerium de Beawmannor in parochiâ de Baroo eſt, pertinens ad capellam vel villam de Wodhowſe. Ideò habemus ibi decimam garbarum, & feni, & boſci, agnelli, & lanæ, &c. ac decimam omnium ferarum captarum infra parcum de Beawmannor, & decimam pullorum equorum equarii ibidem. Molendinum ibidem aquaticum pro decimâ reddit iiis̃.[1]

In the reign of William the Conqueror, and long after, as a member of the ſtill larger manor of Loughborough, Beaumanor was the property of Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter; from whoſe family this lordſhip ſoon paſſed to the Deſpenſers; and in 1239 was the inheritance of Hugh le Deſpenſer, under whom it was held by John le Deſpenſer, on the tenure of finding yearly a pair of gilt ſpurs, of 6d. or 7d. value, in lieu of all other ſervice[2]. Hugh le Deſpenſer, ſiding with Simon de Montfort earl of Leiceſter and the other rebellious barons, was ſlain at the battle of Eveſham in 1265, and his lands ſeized by the king, who aſſigned the manor of Loughborough (then valued at £60. a year) to Aliva his widow (out of the love he bore to her father Philip Baſſet of Wicombe) for part of her maintenance. This appears by an inquiſition taken not long after that battle, wherein the names of the moſt conſiderable perſons in this county who adhered to Simon de Montfort, with the value of their lands then ſeized by the king, are particularly expreſſed. In this liſt alſo we find that John le Deſpenſer, who was taken priſoner at Kenilworth, held a certain manor called Bewmanor, of the annual value of £10. of which Roger de Clifford took the ſeiſin, and his bailiffs received the rent. This John died in 1274; and Hugh le Deſpenſer, ſon of Hugh and Aliva beforementioned, was reſtored to his father's lands, and in 1321 was created earl of Wincheſter. He had iſſue Hugh the younger, who, having married Alianore, the eldeſt of the three daughters and coheirs of Gilbert de Clare earl of Glouceſter, was alſo advanced to that earldom[3].

In 1330, John de Liſle died ſeiſed of this manor[4]; which he held under Hugh le Deſpenſer the younger. Both theſe Hughs are memorable in our hiſtories, for their unhappy conduct under that eaſy monarch king Edward II, whoſe unbounded liberality to them occaſioned both their ruin and his own; for, having raiſed them in lands and honours above the antient nobility, and entruſted them with the government of the kingdom, they grew to ſuch a height of pride and inſolence, that they not only contemned and oppreſſed the nobles, but denied the queen even neceſſaries for her maintenance; whereupon ſhe raiſed forces (being then in France with her ſon) on pretext of recovering them; and, landing in England, proſcribed them by a proclamation, which offered £2000. for the head of Hugh Deſpenſer the younger; and, having ſome time after, by the aſſiſtance of the diſcontented nobility, taken both them and the king her huſband, ſhe cauſed Hugh the elder to be hanged at Briſtol in 1325[5], and Hugh the younger at Hereford in 1326[6]: upon which followed their attainder; whereby their lands falling to the Crown, the manor of Loughborough was immediately granted to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife, and their heirs[7]; and, Feb. 15, 1326-7, king Edward III. (after declaring that himſelf, whilſt he was yet only duke of Aquitain, and earl of Cheſter, Ponthieu, and Monſtroile, "antequam gubernacula regni noſtri ſuſcepimus," having granted the manor of Loughborough, co. Leiceſter, "cum hamelettis, membris, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis," to Henry de Beaumont and Alice his wife, then late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Deſpenſer earl of Winton, which

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xix.

[2] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 52.

[3] Thomas de la More, in vitâ Edwardi II, p. 599.

[4] Eſch. 4 Edw. III. N° 67.

[5] Marching from Glouceſter towards Briſtol (where the king then was) the queen was joyfully received into that city; where, in teſtimony of her welcome, Hugh the elder, being brought before the prince and the barons then attending him, (though at that time 90 years of age) received judgement of death; firſt to be drawn, afterwards to be beheaded, and then hanged on the gibbet: which was accordingly executed, in the ſight of the king, and of his ſon Hugh the younger, upon St. Dennis day in October. It is ſaid by ſome writers, that his body was hanged up with two ſtrong cords for full four days, and then cut in pieces, and given to the dogs to eat; and that his head was ſent to Wincheſter, becauſe he had the title of earl of that place. Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 393; from Froiſſart, lib. 1 & 2. f. 5. a.

[6] It is ſaid by ſome, that this Hugh, in his paſſage to Hereford, was bound on a horſe with a tabard over him, ſuch as traitors and thieves uſed to wear; and in that manner carried in ſcorn, after the queen's troops, through all the towns, with trumps and canairs, till they came thither, where the queen then kept the feaſt of All Saints with much royalty; great multitudes of people flocking to ſee him, and making ſuch a horrid noiſe, by ſhouting and opprobrious exclamations, that the like was never heard. Others ſay, that, the more to diſgrace him, they put on him his ſurcoat of arms reverſed, and a crown of nettles on his head; and that upon his veſtment ſix verſes of that Pſalm beginning thus, Quid gloriaris in malitiâ? were written; and that, being brought before William Truſſel, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons in parliament, he was charged upon his arraignment, that, in the parliament held at Weſtminſter in the fifteenth year of that king, his father and he, being adjudged traitors and enemies to the realm, were baniſhed; and, nevertheleſs, that he returned into the realm, and plundered two dromonds to the value of £40,000. Moreover, that he had ſtirred up the king to raiſe arms againſt the nobles of the realm; and, by the aid of Andrew Harkley and other traitors, had cauſed the good earl of Hereford to be murthered; as alſo Thomas earl of Lancaſter, kinſman to the king, to be condemned and murthered at Pontefract caſtle; and divers of the nobles and others to be put to ſhameful deaths, viz. ſir Warine de l'Iſle, ſir William Touchet, &c. It is farther ſaid of him, that to theſe and other charges he could give no anſwer; whereupon he had judgement given againſt him; firſt, to be drawn on a hurdle, with trumps and trumpets, throughout all the city of Hereford; and then to be brought into the market-place, where all the people were aſſembled, there to be tied on a high ladder, that every man might ſee him; and in the ſame place a great fire to be made, and there his privy-members to be cut from him, becauſe they reputed him as a heretick, and ſo to be burnt before his face; then his heart to be taken out of his body, and caſt into the fire, becauſe he was a falſe traitor of heart; and that, by his traiterous counſel and extortion, the king had diſhonoured his realm, and brought it to great miſchief; for he had cauſed to be beheaded the greateſt lords of his realm; and ſo induced the king that he would not ſee the queen his wife, nor Edward his eldeſt ſon; and cauſed them to quit the realm for fear of their lives: And then his head to be ſtricken off, and ſent to London. According to which ſentence, he was executed, on a gallows 50 feet high, on St. Andrew's eve, 1326; and being then quartered, his limbs were ſent to four ſeveral places, and his head to London Bridge, being drawn in a chariot with his arms thereon, and that expreſſion of the Pſalmiſt, before recited, written thereon, viz. Quid gloriaris in malitiâ? &c. unto that verſe, Ego ſum Oliva. This diſtich, was made on his execution; the rope, becauſe he was drawn with it; the wood, becauſe he was hanged thereon; the ſword, becauſe he was beheaded therewith; the fire, becauſe his bowels were burnt; the axe, becauſe he was quartered therewith; and the horſe, becauſe he drew him. It is ſaid, that one of the quarters was buried near the high-altar by the lavatory at Tewkeſbury; and that, long after, the reſt of his limbs were brought thither, and buried in that abbey. Dugdale, ubi ſupra, p. 394.

"Funis cum lignis, à te miſer enſis & ignis, Hugo ſecuris, equus, abſtulit omne decus."

[7] Thomas Walſingham, p. 125.

had alſo eſcheated to him, ſince he took upon him the crown, by the forfeiture of the ſaid earl) confirmed the ſame to the ſaid Henry and Alice in tail general[1]. Mr. Burton ſays, "This Henry was a Frenchman, and came into England with Margaret daughter of Philip III. king of France, ſecond wife to king Edward I[2]; but, as others write, with Iſabel daughter of Philip le Beau, king of France, wife to king Edward II, concerning whoſe original parents, from whom he ſhould be deſcended, it is not certainly agreed. Some make him the ſon of Lewis lord Beaumont in right of his wife, daughter and heir of the lord Beaumont in France, ſon of Charles king of Naples, Sicily, and Jeruſalem, and of Margaret his wife, daughter of Otho earl of Nevers, niece of Hugh the fourth duke of Burgundy; which Charles died in 1284, and was ſon of Lewis VIII, and brother to St. Lewis, ninth king of France[3]: for authority of which, I have ſeen an old roll in vellum, in colours, containing this deſcent, found in the monaſtery of Rufford, co. Nottingham, lately in the cuſtody of Richard Stapleton, eſq. of Carleton, co. Ebor. deſcended from one of the heirs general of this Henry lord Beaumont. Others (I know not how) make this Henry lord Beaumont to be ſon of Lewis de Acre and Agnes his wife (daughter and heir of Richard lord Beaumont); which Lewis, it is ſaid, died in 1285, and was ſon of John de Bregne, earl of Vienne, and laſt king of Jeruſalem, 1218, and of Berengaria his wife, daughter of Alfonſus ninth king of Caſtile; for authority of which, I never ſaw any proof or record. Only I find mention made by Henninges and Reuſner, in the Genealogy of the earl of Dreux, of Alfonſus, ſon of John de Bregne king of Jeruſalem, that married Mary, daughter of Ralph earl of Eſſnuan and Iole his wife, daughter of Robert earl of Dreux[4]. Henninges, in the pedigree of the kings of Jeruſalem, ſetteth down the iſſue of John de Bregne, king of Jeruſalem, by his firſt wife Iole, daughter of Conrade marquis of Montſerrat and Iſabel his wife, daughter of Almaric king of Jeruſalem, to be only Iole, wife of Frederick, the ſecond emperor; and his iſſue by his ſecond wife, Berengaria, to be only Martha, married to Baldwin II. emperor of Conſtantinople, not naming there any iſſue male at all[5]. To end this buſineſs I cannot, but muſt leave it as I find it; but, if my opinion may paſs current, I ſhould rather hold with the firſt. That the quartering of the arms of Beaumont (as are to be ſeen in Loughborough church in this county, and in Barton upon Humber, co. Lincoln) ſhould be any inducement for the proof of the deſcent from John de Bregne, I cannot ſee; ſince that the abovenamed Charles king of Naples and Jeruſalem quartered Jeruſalem with his own coat, which was, France, ſemé, with a label of five points Gules; though Leandro Alberto[6] will have it to be a caſtle Gules (as is to be ſeen in the cathedral church at Naples, where he was buried; and in the nunnery of St. Clare at Naples, where moſt of the progeny of king Charles, as the dukes of Durazzo, Taranto, and others, lie buried); ſo did the other kings of Naples and Sicily (deſcended from the late houſe of Anjou) quarter Jeruſalem with Naples, as is to be ſeen in the arms of queen Margaret[7], wife to king Henry VI, and daughter of Renate duke of Anjou, king of Naples and Sicily; and in the achievements of the dukes of Lorraine and Guiſe, deſcended from Renate. This Henry lord Beaumont, who bore, Azure, florettè, a lion rampant Or, ſir William Dugdale tells us[8], "attended queen Iſabel, the king's mother, to the earl of Haynault, upon her going out of England; and, after her return, when the king (Edward II.), being deſerted, attempted to go beyond ſea, but was driven back by contrary winds and brought to this Henry, he delivered him as priſoner to the queen, who ſoon after ſent him to Berkley Caſtle."

Henry lord Beaumont married Alice, daughter and heir of Alexander Comin, earl of Bucquan in Scotland, ſon of Alexander Comyn earl of Bucquan and Alice his wife (by ſome, more truly, called Elizabeth), daughter and coheir of Roger de Quincy earl of Wincheſter; by which marriage he had great lands and poſſeſſions in this county; which were largely augmented by favour of king Edward II. who had a particular regard for him, and honoured him with many important employments.

March 1, 1327-8, king Edward III. (in conſideration of the good and laudable ſervices of Edmund of Woodſtock earl of Kent, his uncle; as alſo in part of ſatisfaction of what was deficient in thoſe lands which his grandfather king Edward I. did appoint he ſhould have) gave to the ſaid Edmund his uncle all thoſe lands in the county of Leiceſter (the manor of Loughborough, with its appurtenances, excepted) which, by the forfeiture of Hugh le Deſpenſer earl of Winton, eſcheated to the Crown[9]; and from this grant aroſe, in 1328, the following petition to the king in parliament:

"A ñre ſeigneur le roi monſtre Eſmond counte de Kent, q̃ come meiſme ñre ſeigneur le roi lui ad nadgaires done par ſa chartre totes les terres & tenementz q̃ furent a Hugh le Deſpenſer le piere, en le counte de Leiceſtr', forſpris le manoir de Lughteburgh ov les appurtenances, lequel il avoit avant done a monſ̃r Henr' de Beaumond, la vient le dit monſ̃r Henr', & ad acroche a lui les manoirs de Beaumanoir, Erneſby, Holeſcote, Donyngton, Barew, Burton, Preſwold, Cotes, & Fritheby, q̃ furent au dit Hugh en meiſme le countee, & les tient come appurtenauntz au dit manoir de Lughteburgh, la ou ils ne aptenent, ne unkes aptindrent, au dit manoir. Dount le dit count prie, q̃ remedie ſoit ordine ꝑ le roi & ꝑ ſon conſeil, coment le doun q'il ad fait au dit counte des terres avant dites puſſe prendre effect, a ꝓfiſt de meiſme le counte."—To which was anſwered, "Soit brief fait a ſire Henr' de Beaumont, q'il ſoit a c̃tein jour en le chancellerie ov ſa chartre de Lughteburg, a monſtrer illoeqes, & a reſpondre au roi, pur quey il eſt entre les manoirs q̃ ne ſoit mie appurtenauntz a Lughteburgh, & a faire & receiv' illoeqs ce-q̃ la court agardera[10]."

Meantime the following mandate was iſſued by the king, for payment of a ſtipend which had been charged on the manor of Loughborough to a chantry prieſt[11]:

"Rex dilecto & fideli ſuo Johanni de Inſulâ, cuſtodi manerii de Lughteburghe, in manu noſtrâ exiſtentis, ſalutem. Quia accepimus, per inquiſitionem per vicecomitem Leiceſtr', de mandato noſtro ſub privato ſigillo factam, & in gardiolâ noſtrâ retornatam, quòd dilectus nobis Ricardus de Whiteſide, capellanus, habet unam cantariam infra manerium predictum, de dono Hugonis le Deſpenſer, nuper comitis Wynton', percipiendum per annum, pro cantariâ illâ, de exitibus manerii predicti, v marcas; &, pro vino & cerâ, xviii đ. & viii carectatas boſci in boſco ejuſdem manerii: Vobis mandamus, quòd eidem Ricardo id quod à retro eſt de predictis v marcis, &c. exnunc de exitibus manerii predicti ſolvatis; ac boſcum predictum, quamdiu manerium illud in cuſtodiâ veſtrâ remanere contigerit, in boſco predicto habere faciatis; recipientes à prefato Ricardo literas ſuas acquietancie de ſummis quas ei ſic ſolveritis; pro quibus vobis in compuro veſtro ad ſcaccarium noſtrum in firmâ manerii predicti debitam allocationem habere faciamus. Teſte rege, apud Glouceſtr', xxiiii die Septembris. Per breve de privato ſigillo[12]."

---

[1] Cart. 1 Edw. III. N° 91.

[2] As this Henry was in England in Henry the Firſt's time, he moſt probably came in with Margaret. I have ſeen grants of his, dated at Beaumanor, in the time of king Edward II; and, without queſtion, this manor was then of his lands. P. Le Neve.

[3] Mr. Burton probably never read John de Serres, the French hiſtorian, as it was not tranſlated into Engliſh when he publiſhed his hiſtory; for, from his account, it appears highly probable that Lewis VIII, brother to Lewis IX, was grandchild to Charles king of Naples, and ſon of Charles the Lame and Margaret daughter of Otho earl of Nevers. His grandfather had two wives; but Lewis's father was by Beatrice counteſs of Provence, the firſt wife: which varies from the account given by Mr. Burton. The pedigree, as drawn by Monſ. de Serres, who probably beſt knew the branches of the kings of France, may be ſeen in the ſaid Hiſtorian. Gaſcoigne, MS note on Burton, p. 35.

[4] Deſcrittione de tutta Italie, fol. 186.

[5] Hier. Henninges, 2. 3. regni, in 4 Monarch. fol. 65. Eliæ Ruſneri Baſilicon, fol. 314.

[6] Henninges, 3. 3. regni, in 4 Monarch. parte priore, fol. 87.

[7] In Woodhouſe chapel (ſee Plate XVII. fig. 4.); and in St. Stephen's church, Walbrook, London.

[8] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 394; vol. II. p. 51; and ſee Plate XXVII. fig. 7.

[9] Pat. 2 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 2.

[10] Rot. Parl. 2 Edw. III. vol. II. p. 26.

[11] Poſſibly at Little Haw; ſee before, p. 119.

[12] Peck, MSS, 4938. (Plut. IV. A.) p. 98; ex Clauſ. 3 Edw. III. (1329.) m. 7.

July 20, 1336, king Edward III. "pro bono & laudabili ſervicio quod dilectus conſanguineus & fidelis noſter Henricus de Bellomont, domino Edwardo quondam regi Anglie, patri noſtro, & nobis impendit," re-granted the manor of Loughborough, with divers lands at Beaumanor, Barrow, Quorndon, Woodhouſe, &c. (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Deſpenſer earl of Winton) to the ſaid Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife, and to their heirs, with remainder to the Crown. And, becauſe in his former grant of 15 Feb. 1326-7, from thoſe general words, "the manor of Loughborough, with its appurtenances, late the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Deſpenſer," it was afterwards queried whether the lands and poſſeſſions of the ſaid Hugh at Beaumanor, Burton, Huggleſcote, Walton, Erneſby, Barow, Coſſington, Raunſton, Quorndon, Mountſorell, Wodethorpe, and Knighteſthorpe, with the advowſons of the churches of Walton, Coſyngton, and Raunſton, all in the county of Leiceſter, were to be included and taken as part of the ſaid grant? the king now, in conſideration of the many dangers encountered by the ſaid Henry, as alſo of the great charges he had been at for the king's ſake; alſo the more fully to make known his former princely intention, and to take away all ambiguity as to the premiſſes for the future; and, laſtly, the better to provide for the ſecurity of the ſaid Henry and Alice and their heirs; declared that the lands and poſſeſſions of the ſaid Hugh le Deſpenſer at Beaumanor, and all other places above written, were parcel of his former grant to the aforeſaid Henry lord Beaumont and Alice and their heirs, and as ſuch to be ever after taken and adjudged [1].

This Henry lord Beaumont was ſummoned to parliament, by the title of "Henrico de Bellomonte," in the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, and 20th years of the reign of king Edward II.; and ſat in parliament as a peer, in the 12th year of the ſame reign, in conſequence of the writ of ſummons directed to him in that year. He was alſo ſummoned to parliament, by the ſame title, in the 1ſt, 2d, 5th, and 6th years of king Edward III.; and ſat in parliament in the 6th year of the ſame reign, in conſequence of the writ of ſummons directed to him in that year. He was alſo ſummoned to parliament in the 7th, 8th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th years of Edward III. by the title of "Henrico de Bellomonte Comiti de Boghan," or Buchan, (which title he enjoyed in right of his wife) [2]. By this diſtinguiſhed Nobleman was built a fair houſe at Beaumanor, and the park was incloſed with a ſtone wall [3]. He alſo built, in 1338, the chapel of Woodhouſe; and dying in 1340, it appeared, on an inquiſition, that he was ſeiſed (jointly with Alice his wife) of the manor of Whitwick, cum membris, viz. Shepeſheved, Markfield, Whittington, Roteby, Newton, and Bocharſton, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee; as alſo of the manor of Loughborough, cum membris, viz. Beaumanor, Burton, Huckleſcote, Walton, Erneſby, Barrow, Coſſington, Raveneſden, Querndon, Mountſorell, Wodethorpe, and Kinteſthorpe, all in this county; with the knights fees and advowſons of the abbeys, priories, churches, chapels, and religious houſes there; and that they were held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of one knight's fee for all ſervices. He held alſo, at his death, a quarter of one knight's fee in Loughborough aforeſaid, and the advowſon of the church there; the caſtle and manor of Folkingham, co. Lincoln; as alſo 63 knights fees and a third part in the ſame county, ſome time belonging to the barony of Gant; with ſeveral other manors, in the counties of Lincoln, Northumberland, and York. His ſeveral knights fees are thus enumerated: "Henricus de Bellomonte tenuit, die quo obiit, medietatem unius feodi militis in Thorp Serlons; quartam partem unius feodi militis in Hatherne; medietatem unius feodi militis in Houghton; quartam partem unius feodi militis in Loughteborough: Et tenuit advocationes ſubſcriptas; advocationem eccleſie de Loughteborough; advocationem eccleſie de Walton; advocationem eccleſie de Coſington, & val' x lī.; advocationem eccleſie de Ravenſton, & val' per annum octo libras. Item tenuit feoda ſubſcripta de domino rege in capite, & de jure Alicie uxoris ſue; (viz.) unum feodum in Hemiton; quartam partem unius feodi in Hawtherne; medietatem unius feodi in Houton & Swinford; unum feodum in Friſebye & Galbye; quadrageſimam partem unius feodi in Wheſton; quartam partem unius feodi in Packington; duo feoda in Napton & Weſtow; unum feodum in Leyton; unum feodum in Wykinſtow; duo feoda in Boſeworth, Carleton, Cotes, Ayleſton, & Parvâ Glenn; medietatem unius feodi militis in Wheſton & Mountſorell; duo feoda militis in Aſhby de la Zouche; ſeptem feoda in Wheſton, Bulkinton, Bramcote, Puton, Pebworth, Meſton, & Cleybrook, cum Clifton, Webetoft, & Grunneſwater. Item tenuit advocationem eccleſie de Whitwicke [4]." John, his ſon and heir, was then 22 years of age [5]; and Elizabeth, his daughter, was married to Nicholas de Audley, ſon and heir of James lord Audley [6] of Heley.

John baron Beaumont, who in 1338 had been employed in a public expedition into Flanders, had livery of his lands in 1340, the year in which his father died; but never uſed the title of earl of Boghan. Attending that year queen Philippa during her reſidence in Brabant, the lady Alianore de Lancaſter his wife (fifth daughter to Henry earl of Lancaſter) being there delivered of a ſon called Henry, he obtained the king's ſpecial letters patent, declaring that, notwithſtanding the ſaid Henry was begotten and born in foreign parts, nevertheleſs, in regard it was by reaſon of his and his lady's attendance on the queen, he ſhould be reputed a lawful heir, and inherit his lands in England, as if he had been born there [7]. In 1344, he was retained to ſerve the king in his fleet at ſea, with 61 men at arms, whereof one banneret, 24 knights, 40 men at arms, and 40 archers, for 40 days [8]; in which year alſo he was in the wars of Scotland [9]; and, having been ſummoned to parliament in 1345 [10] (and not before), by the title of "Johanni de Beliomonte," died the ſame year, leaving Henry his ſon and heir two years of age [11]. Whereupon, in order to his funeral, the king ſent his precept to William Shireburne, a burgeſs of York, to make payment of two hundred pounds of thoſe moneys which he did then owe for 130 ſacks and 20 clays of wool by him received out of the North and Eaſt Ridings of that county, unto ſir William de Burton, knight, to the uſe of Alianore the widow of the defunct, towards the charge of that great ſolemnity [12]; which Alianore, ſo ſurviving him, in 1346 procured the king's charter for free warren in all her demeſne lands at Tackley, co. Oxford, and Seukworth, co. Berks [13].

In 1346, Alice relict of the firſt lord Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 30*s*. for half a knight's fee in Loughborough, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [14]; and in 1349, ſhe died ſeiſed of the manor of Loughborough, with its members and appurtenances, held of the earl of Cheſter by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and (her eldeſt ſon John being dead) Thomas de Beaumont, her ſecond ſon, was next heir [15].

Henry baron Beaumont, the third of that name, who was born in Brabant in 1340, and by letters patent in the ſame year declared lawful heir, and whoſe legitimacy was ratified in parliament in 1351, obtained livery of his lands in 1360; and was ſummoned as a baron to parliament in the 36th, 37th, 38th, 39th, and 42d years of the reign of king Edward III. by the title of "Henrico de Bellomonte." He died in 1370, ſeiſed of the manor of Whitwick, &c. held of the king in capite, as parcel of the honour of Winton; leaving John his ſon and heir, then eight years of age, by Margaret his wife, daughter to John de Vere earl of Oxford[1]; and in 1397 it was found that Margaret widow of Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Loughborough, with its members and appurtenances, by the endowment of Henry de Beaumont aforeſaid, her huſband, which manor was parcel of the inheritance of Henry ſon and heir of the lord John de Beaumont; with reverſion thereof to the aforeſaid Henry ſon of John, by the gift of Edward late king of England, grandfather of the king who then was[2].

---

[1] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[2] Clauſ. de iiſdem annis; & Rot. Summon. ad Parliamentum temp. Edw. III.

[3] "Lapideo muro circumſepſerit," are the words of Wyrley in 1590. The wall remains at this day for about three parts round this park.

[4] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 397.

[5] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[6] Clauſ. 40 Edw. III. m. 15.

[7] Pat. 14 Edw. III. p. 3. m. 9.

[8] Pat. 15 Edw. III. m. 22.

[9] Rot. Scot. 15 Edw. III. m. 4.

[10] Clauſ. de iiſdem annis, in dorſo.

[11] Eſch. 16 Edw. III. n. 35.

[12] Clauſ. 16 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 15.

[13] Cart. 17 Edw. III. n. 36.

[14] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[15] Eſch. 23 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 157.

John baron Beaumont obtained livery of his lands in 1383; and in 1387, the king holding a council at Nottingham caſtle, the Marſhalſea was kept at Loughborough for ſix days. In this year the lord Beaumont accompanied John of Gaunt duke of Lancaſter (then called king of Caſtile and Leon) into Spain[3]; but before the end of the year, ſuch was the prevalency of the great lords who then met at Haringey-park, that they expelled him the court, as an evil counſellor to the king[4]; but, thoſe diſcontents ſomewhat abating, he obtained licence to paſs unto Calais, there to exerciſe himſelf in feats of arms with the French; four knights of that country having challenged as many Engliſh to juſt with them there[5]: at which time he tilted with the lord chamberlain to the king of France[6]. In 1389, he was made admiral of the king's fleet to the Northwards[7], as alſo one of the wardens of the Marches towards Scotland[8]: whereupon he entered that country 40 miles, ſpoiled the market at Fowyke, and brought many priſoners back[9]. In the ſame year he had the honour of entertaining king Richard II. and his queen, at his manſion of Beaumanor, on their journey to York; and again, in 1390, on their road from Leiceſter to Nottingham. This John lord Beaumont was a knight of the Garter; was ſummoned as a baron to the ſeveral parliaments holden from the 6th to the 17th years of the reign of Richard II. by the title of "Johanni de Bellomonte;" and died in 1397, leaving three ſons; Henry his ſucceſſor, then 16 years old; Thomas, from whom deſcended the Beaumonts of Cole Orton; and Richard[10].

Henry baron Beaumont received in 1399 the honour of knighthood, at the coronation of king Henry IV; and, after having been ſummoned as a baron to the parliaments holden in the 5th, 7th, 8th, 11th, 12th, and 14th years of the reign of that king, died in 1413, ſeiſed of the manor of Loughborough, with its members and appurtenances; namely, Beaumanor, Erneſby, Mountſorell, &c. held of the king by knight's ſervice. This inquiſition particularly notices the water-mill at Beaumanor[11], and the water-mill at Quorndon. He held alſo under the king, as parcel of the honour of Winton, the manor of Whitwick, with the appurtenances; four meſſuages in Whittington, two in le New Town, and two in Bocheſton, as parcel of the manor of Whitwick; and two parts of the manor of Shepeſhed, with its apppurtenances; but by what ſervice was unknown. He poſſeſſed alſo the advowſon of Loughborough, then worth 20 marks a year; of Coſſington, worth 10 marks; of Wotton ſuper Wolds, worth 100*s*.; and of Ravenſton, worth 100*s*.[12]; and left John his ſon and heir, then three years of age, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter to William lord Willoughby of Ereſby; who, in 1414, repreſenting to the king that her ſon was within age, but without any thing for his ſupport, obtained an aſſignation of £40. a year for him during his minority[13].

In 1427, it was found that Elizabeth, widow of Henry lord Beaumont, held in dower, at her death, the manor of Beaumanor, with its appurtenances; which were then deſcribed as extending into Woodhouſe, Woodthorp, Querndon, Barrow, Mountſorell, and Friſby; and were held of the king in capite by the ſervice of one knight's fee. She held alſo the manor of Whitwick, with its appurtenances; namely, Ravenſton (with the advowſon of that church), Swanington, Markfield, Bocheſtoun, and Donington; the manor of Huckleſcoat, with its appurtenances; all parcel of the honour of Winton, but by what ſervice was unknown; but it appeared that there was a court held at Leiceſter called Wincheſter court. John de Beaumont, her ſon, was next heir[14].

This John baron Beaumont, ſon and heir of the laſt-named Henry baron Beaumont and Elizabeth, was only 4 years old at the death of his father. He obtained livery of his lands in 1431; and was ſummoned as a baron to the ſeveral parliaments holden in the 10th, 11th, 13th, 15th, and 18th years of the reign of king Henry VI. by the title of "Johanni Beumond Chl'r.;" and ſat in the parliaments held in the ſaid 10th and 11th years of Henry VI. in conſequence of the writs of ſummons directed to him in thoſe years. The ſaid John baron Beaumont was created earl of Boloigne, by letters patent dated at Canterbury 27 July, 1436, being at that time on his journey for the relief of Calais, and retained, by indenture, to ſerve the king, with 20 men at arms and 88 archers[15]; in which ſervice he merited ſo well as, for that very reſpect, the king gave him licence to grant his manors of Barton upon Humber and Steneton, co. Lincoln, to ſir William Phelip, knt. and others, and their heirs for ever[16]; and in 1440, in conſideration of his farther merits, and the ſpecial ſervices of his anceſtors, advanced him to the dignity of a viſcount[17] (a title not till that time uſed in England) by the name of viſcount Beaumont[18]; with precedency above all barons of this realm, and 20 marks yearly fee out of the revenues of the county of Lincoln, by letters patent dated at Reading the 12th day of February, in the 18th year of the reign of king Henry VI. In 1441, conſidering the great loſs he had ſuſtained by the death of Elizabeth his wife, daughter to William Phelip lord Bardolph, and by reaſon of his continued ſervices, he obtained a grant of the cuſtody of all the caſtles, manors, and lands, which, by the death of her the ſaid Elizabeth, came to Henry his ſon and heir; and, in caſe of his death, to William his younger ſon; with remainder to Joan his daughter[19]. Moreover, in 1445, he had a farther grant, to himſelf and the heirs male of his body, of place and precedence above all viſcounts thenceforth to be created, as alſo above the heirs of all earls; and to take place next and immediately unto earls in all parliaments and public meetings[20]. Adhering to the fortune of king Henry VI, he was ſlain at the battle of Northampton, 1459; leaving Catharine his widow (who had before been the widow of John Mowbray duke of Norfolk, and was afterwards the wife of ſir John Widvile, knt.) poſſeſſed of Beaumanor, as part of her dowry, with the manors of Sileby, Mountſorell, and the hundred of Goſcote.

The ſaid John viſcount and baron Beaumont had iſſue two ſons; Henry and William; and only one daughter, named Joan, married to John lord Lovel of Tichmerſh.

Henry, the eldeſt ſon, died in 1442, unmarried, in the life-time of his father; and was buried at Dennington in Suffolk[21].

---

[1] Eſch. 42 Edw. III. pars 1. n. 12.

[2] Eſch. 21 Ric. II. N° 11. Leic.; & ex Libro de Lovel.

[3] Rot. Franc. 10 Ric. II. m. 10; Froiſſart, fol. 64. b.

[4] Henry Knighton, 2075. n. 30.

[5] Rot. Franc. 11 Ric. II. m. 8.

[6] Henry Knighton, 2706. n. 50.

[7] Rot. Franc. 12 Ric. II.

[8] Ibid. m. 7.

[9] Stowe, in ann. 1389.

[10] Eſch. 20 Ric. II. n 14.

[11] Beaumanor mill ſtood at the bottom of the meadow by Muglin-lane, leading from Woodhouſe to Woodthorpe; and was ſupplied by two rivulets, both coming from the Foreſt, and one of them from the corner of the Outwoods by Beaumanor Park, near which ſpot it is not improbable the Aller Carr mill was ſituated. See pp. 61. 93.

[12] Eſch. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.

[13] Pat. 2 Hen. V. p. 1. m. 20.

[14] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI. N° 49.

[15] Pat. 14 Hen. VI; and Dugdale, ex autograph. penès Cleric. Pell.

[16] Pat. 15 Hen. VI. m. 32.

[17] "In England the title of Viſcount is thought to be of modern date. The beginning or introduction of that title is uſually aſcribed to the reign of king Henry VI; in the caſe of John Viſcount Beaumont. Selden, Tit. Hon. 1672, p. 630. In the caſe of William Viſcount Say and Seal againſt Stephens (Croke, Rep. Temp. Car. I. p. 136.) it is ſaid, "In 18 Hen. VI. was the firſt Viſcount; and in the 21ſt of the ſaid king was the queſtion for their ſeats in parliament." Madox, Baron. Anglic. p. 143.

[18] Pat. 18 Hen. VI. p. 2. m. 21.

[19] Pat. 19 Hen. VI. p. 3. m. 4.

[20] Pat. 23 Hen. VI. p. 2. m. 20.

[21] See his epitaph in vol. II. p. 857.

William, the ſecond and only ſurviving ſon, on the death of his father, ſucceeded him as heir to the dignities of viſcount and baron Beaumont; and had alſo the barony of Bardolph, with a large inheritance, in right of Elizabeth his mother; making proof of his age in 1459, as couſin and heir to John lord Bardolf, ſon and heir of Elizabeth daughter of the ſaid John[1]; and thereupon had livery of his lands[2]. Being a ſtrict adherent to the houſe of Lancaſter, he was taken priſoner at the battle of Towton field, on Palm-Sunday, March 29, 1461; and was afterwards attainted[3] in parliament on the 4th of November in that year, and ſentenced to forfeit all his titles and dignity, with all ſuch caſtles, manors, lands, &c. as he poſſeſſed on the 4th of March preceding[4]; at which time he was ſeiſed of the manors of Loughborough, Hallaton, Shepeſhed, Aſhby de la Zouch, Whitwick, Donington, Markfield, Ratby, Beaumanor, &c.[5] And, Feb. 18, 1461-2, king Edward IV. granted the reverſion of the manor and demeſnes of Beaumanor, Whitwick, Bochaſton, Newton, Markfield, and Arnſby (which Catharine dutcheſs of Norfolk[6] held for term of her life, with remainder to William lord viſcount Beaumont) to ſir William Haſtings, knt. and his heirs[7].

By an inquiſition taken in 1463, it was found that the manor of Botteſford, with its appurtenances, and a rent charge of 8*s*. from the manor of Berkeley, had been forfeited to the king by the attainder of Thomas lord Ros; and that William viſcount Beaumont, who had lately been attainted in parliament, was ſeiſed of the following lands, tenements, &c.; the manor of Loughborough, with its appurtenances; the advowſons of Loughborough, Walton ſuper le Wold, and Coſſington; the manor of Shepeſhed, with its appurtenances; a moiety of Wincheſter fee, and of the manor of Whittington. He held alſo, for himſelf and his heirs, the manor of Aſhby de la Zouch; 200 acres of paſture in Woodcote; one meſſuage, two cottages, 52 acres of arable land, and 24 of meadow, at Quorndon; and 24 acres and 3 roods of meadow in Barrow. Alſo the manor of Whitwick, with its appurtenances; the manors of Bochaſton and Newtown, with their appurtenances; the manors of Huckleſcote and Donington, with their appurtenances; Markfield; and the manor of Ratby, with its appurtenances. It appeared alſo that Catharine ducheſs of Norfolk was poſſeſſed in dower for her life of Beaumanor with its appurtenances[8].

Sir William Haſtings at that period ſtood ſo high in the eſteem of the Nobility, that they ſeemed emulous who ſhould beſtow the greateſt favours on him. Amongſt others, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk gave him the ſtewardſhip of his manors of Melton Mowbray, Segrave, &c. with the fee of £10. per annum during his life; Anne dutcheſs of Buckingham, the ſtewardſhip of the manor of Okeham, co. Rutland, and conſtablewick of the caſtle there, for life; John lord Lovel, the ſtewardſhip of the manors of Bagworth and Thornton, with the yearly fee of £10. for life; ſir Henry Stafford, knight, ſon and heir to Humphrey duke of Buckingham, an annuity of £20. out of his manor of Billing, in Northamptonſhire, for life; Richard Widvile earl Rivers, and Jaquet of Luxemburgh dutcheſs of Bedford, an annuity of 26*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. to be paid out of the iſſues and cuſtoms due to the ſaid lady Jaquet out of the dutchy of Cornwall; to continue ſo long as this William ſhould be receiver of the revenues of that dutchy for the king. And, of the king's peculiar munificence, the ſame year, he had firſt a grant of the office of maſter of his mint, in the Tower of London and town of Calais, for twelve years; next, of the ſtewardſhip of the honour of Leiceſter; as alſo of the manor and caſtle of Donington, co. Leiceſter; of the manors of Higham Ferrers and Daventre, co. Northampton; and of all other manors, within the counties of Warwick, Leiceſter, Nottingham, Northampton, and Huntingdon, parcel of the dutchy of Lancaſter; likewiſe of the conſtableſhip of the caſtles at Leiceſter, Higham Ferrers, and Donington; and of the chief rangerſhip of Leiceſter foreſt, with the parks called Leiceſter Frith, Barrow Park, Tooley Park, and thoſe adjoining, for life[9]. Farthermore, being then made lord chamberlain of the houſhold to that king, as alſo chamberlain of North Wales[10], in conſideration of his ſignal adventures in divers battles againſt king Henry VI. and his party; as alſo againſt Jaſper earl of Pembroke, James earl of Wiltſhire, and others, who had been ſtout aſſerters of the Lancaſtrian intereſt; he was the ſame year advanced to the degree and dignity of a baron of this realm; and obtained a grant of the caſtle and lordſhip of Folkingham, co. Lincoln; likewiſe of the manors of Lavyngton, Sapirton, Awethorp, Aſlakby, Birhorp, Repinghale; the moiety of the manor of Bykere, and manor of Welbourne, in the ſame county; of the manors of Loughborough and Shepeſhed, co. Leiceſter; of the foreſterſhip of Rutland, and manor of Leyfeld in that county; of the houſe called Beaumond's Inn, ſituate in the pariſh of St. Benedict, in the ward of Baynard's Caſtle, within the city of London, late part of the poſſeſſions of ſir William Beaumont, knight, viſcount Beaumont, as alſo of all that purparty late belonging to the ſame William viſcount Beaumont; of the honour called Wincheſter fee, with the appurtenances, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter; and of all the lands and lordſhips which were the ſaid viſcount William Beaumont's in Folkingham, and elſewhere, in the county of Lincoln, and in Edmonton, co. Middleſex, which, by his attainder, in the parliament held at Weſtminſter, Nov. 4, 1426, had come to the Crown. At the ſame time he obtained a grant of the manor and demeſnes of Aſhby de la Zouch, with its appurtenances, lately belonging to James earl of Wiltſhire, then alſo attainted; as alſo of the manors and lordſhips of Beaumanor, Whitwick, Bochaſton, Newton, Huckleſcote, Donington, Markfield, and Erneſby, with their appurtenances; and the manor of Hekynton, co. Lincoln; which Catharine dutcheſs of Norfolk held for term of her life, with remainder to the ſaid William viſcount Beaumont. Farthermore, in regard of the near alliance in blood of Catharine his wife, daughter to Richard Nevill late earl of Saliſbury (widow of William lord Bonvile), he obtained a farther grant, to himſelf and her, of the manor of Bolton-Perci, co. York; as alſo of the manors and lordſhips of Plompton, Bercombe, and Birlyng, co. Suſſex, part of the poſſeſſions of the ſame William viſcount Beaumont; likewiſe of the honour, caſtle, and lordſhip of Belvoir, with the park, and all its members, viz. Wolleſthorpe, co. Lincoln, Barkeſton, Plungarthe, Redmyld, and Hardeby, co. Leiceſter, with the advowſon of the priory of Belvoir; and advowſons of the churches of Hardeby, Wolleſthorpe, and Redmyld; and of the rent called Caſtle-guard, wherefoever throughout England appertaining to that caſtle; alſo of the manor of Botteſford, with the hamlets of Normanton and Eaſthorpe, and advowſon of the church of Botteſford; and of the manor of Stoke Daubeney, with the hamlets of Wilvaſton, Sutton, and Aſheley, co. Northampton; all which were part of the poſſeſſions of

---

[1] Eſch. 38 Hen. VI.

[2] Pat. 39 Hen. VI. m. 18.

[3] "Attainted, not for diſloyalty, but that he fought to maintain the crown on the head of Henry VI; who had enjoyed the ſame near 40 years, and ſo had both his father and grandfather, without any interruption or impeachment. And this attainder ought not to have been left indefinite, becauſe it is, without expreſſion of the cauſe, to be taken for diſloyalty: none of which lineage were ever ſtained or tainted therewith; and it is a foul fault in the Author to impoſe ſuch a ſtain or blemiſh on him." Peter Le Neve.—In lord Beaumont's petition for the reverſal (Rot. Parl. vol. VI. p. 280.) he ſtates that he had been attainted "for the true and faithful allegiance and ſervice which he owed unto the moſt bleſſed and Chriſtian Prince King Henrie the VI, the uncle of king Henry VII."—An account of him, and of ſome of the early branches of this family, has been already given under Stoughton (vol. II. p. 857; where, in l. 35, for "1413," r. "1370."); and the hiſtory of the later branches will be given under Cole Orton and Gracedieu.

[4] Rot. Parl. vol. V. p. 477.

[5] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. n. 30. Leic.

[6] The court-rolls of Catharine dutcheſs of Norfolk, held in 1462, 2 Edw. IV, are ſtill preſerved at Beaumanor.

[7] Pat. 1 Edw. IV. pars 4: m. 25.

[8] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.

[9] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. I. 581; ex autographis penès Theophilum comitem de Huntingdon.

[10] Pat. 1 Edw. IV. p. 2. m. 2.

Thomas lord Ros, and, by reaſon of his attainder, came to the Crown; to hold to him the ſaid William and Catharine, and the heirs male of their two bodies lawfully begotten; and, for want of ſuch iſſue, to his right heirs [1]. The like grant he alſo obtained of the caſtle and rape of Haſtings, co. Suſſex [2]. The year following, being inſtalled knight of the moſt noble order of the Garter [3], he had a grant from Anne dutcheſs of Suffolk of £20. a year out of the manor of Langhar, in Eſſex [4]. Oct. 26, 1465, he obtained a new grant, inter alia, of the manor of Loughborough, &c. which had been forfeited by the lord Beaumont; of Aſhby de la Zouch, &c. which had been forfeited by James earl of Wiltſhire; and of Beaumanor, &c. (then held by the dutcheſs of Norfolk in dower, with reverſion to the lord Beaumont) [5]. In 1466 (being ſtill maſter of the mint), he undertook the coining of gold; viz. a piece of 8*s.* 4*d.* ſterling, called a Noble; of which there ſhould be but 50 ſuch pieces in the pound-weight of the Tower; another piece of 4*s.* 2*d.* ſterling; and a third, of the fourth part of the firſt, for 2*s.* 1*d.* ſterling [6]. Aug. 9, 1467, he obtained a farther confirmation-grant of the manors of Loughborough, Shepeſhed, &c. [7]; and in 1472 had the king's licence to make a caſtle at Aſhby de la Zouch, which he completed with the ſpoils of Belvoir and Stoke-Daubeney. He had liberty at the ſame time to make caſtles at Bagworth, Thornton, and Kirby-Muxloe, in this county, and Slingſby in Yorkſhire; "& quodlibet eorundem maneriorum cum petris & calce includere, murare, kernellare, battellare, turrellare, & machecollare; ac tria millia acrarum terre & boſci, cum pertinentiis, in Aſhby de la Zouch, de dominicis terris ſuis ibidem; ac duo millia acrarum terre & boſci, cum pertin', in Kerbie, de dominicis terris ſuis ibidem, ſeparatim includere, & parcos indè facere, ac ſaltatorium in eiſdem parcis ad libertatem ſuam ſimilitèr facere [8]."

In 1473, Joan Lovel, ſiſter to William viſcount and baron Beaumont, and relict of John lord Lovel [9], died ſeiſed, inter alia, of the manor of Shepeſhed; which is ſtated to have been held under ſir William Haſtings, knight, "ut de Joħe Bourchier, milite, ut de jure Elizabethe uxoris ſue, ut de honore Winton', ſed per que ſervicia ignoratur [10]." She left iſſue Francis lord Lovel, her only ſon; and two daughters, Joan and Frideſwide.

Joan, the eldeſt daughter, married ſir Brian Stapleton, knight; and died in the life-time of her uncle William viſcount and baron Beaumont, leaving ſir Brian Stapleton, her eldeſt ſon and heir at law, by the firſt-named ſir Brian Stapleton. And Frideſwide, the other daughter, who married ſir Edward Norres, knight, died alſo in the life-time of her uncle; leaving John Norres, afterwards ſir John Norres, knight, her eldeſt ſon and heir at law, and Henry Norres, her ſecond ſon; and no other child.

The power and poſſeſſions of the lord Haſtings were now immenſe; but his career of fortune ſoon ended; for, Richard duke of Glouceſter, being lord Protector during the minority of king Edward V, having aſſayed to work the lord Haſtings to his part, not therein prevailing, and fearing leſt hereby he ſhould be croſſed in his intendments, upon a ſudden, as one day they ſate together, with other of the nobility, at the council-table, picking a quarrel with him, inſtantly ſent him to the Tower, where, within two hours, he was brought out upon the green before the chapel, and his head cut off upon a log of timber [11]. This happened June 13, 1483. He was buried ſumptuouſly (agreeably to a will he had made in 1478) in the college of St. George at Windſor, near to the grave of king Edward IV. By the ſame will, he beſtowed on the collegiate church of the Newark in Leiceſter the Hoſpital of St. Leonard in that town, on condition of their keeping a ſpecial obit for him [12].—"Of him we may uſe the ſame eulogium which was written of him by ſir Thomas More, in his hiſtory of king Richard the Third; "that he was an honourable man, a good knight, and a gentle; of great authority with his prince; of living ſomewhat diſſolute; plain and open to his enemy, and ſecret to his friend; eaſy to be guiled, as he that (of good heart and courage) fore-ſtudied no peril; a loving man, and paſſing well beloved; very faithful and truſty, and truſting too much [13]." In an inquiſition after his death, the grant of 1467 is thus particularized:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd Edwardus nuper rex Anglie, per literas ſuas patentes, datas apud Weſtm' nono die Auguſti, anno regni ſui ſeptimo, conceſſit Wiłło đno Haſtinges manerium & dominium de Beaumanor, cum pertin', in com' Leic'; & maneria de Barwe & Quarndon; & manerium & dominium de Whitwyke, cum membris & pertin' ſuis; maneria & dominia de Rotby, Bochaſton, Newton, Huckleſcote, Donington, & Markefeld, cum pertin', in eodem comitatu; ac maneria de Whittington; &, per formam donationis, ſic indè ſeiſitus fuit Wiłłus đnus Haſtings; & de officio ſeneſcalli honoris Leiceſtrie, parcell' ducatûs ſui Lancaſtrie; ac officium conſtabularii ſive cuſtodis caſtri Leiceſtrie; & officium capitalis foreſtarum & chaſce Leic'; & officium cuſtodis parci de frith de Leiceſtriâ vocat' Leic' Frith; & fuit ſeiſitus de maneriis de Shepſhead, Bottesford, & Quarndon; ac de viginti meſſuagiis, decem toftis, treſcentis acris terre, quadraginta acris prati, ducentis acris paſture, viginti acris boſci, quadraginta ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertinentiis, in Shepeſhead, Bottesford, Normanton, Thorpe, Quarndon, Barkeſton, Plungarth, Redmyld, & Hardebye, in eodem comitatu; ac de advocationibus eccleſiarum de Bottesford, Redmyld, Coſyngton, & Walton ſuper le Wolde; necnon de proparte honoris vocat' Wincheſter-fee; ac eciam de manerio ſive dominio de Aſheby de la Zouch, cum pertin'; ac de viginti meſſuagiis, ſex virgatis terre, quadraginta acris paſture, centum acris boſci, & centum ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Aſhby de la Zouch; de manerio ſive dominio de Bagworth & Thornton, cum ſuis pertin'; ac de ſex meſſuagiis, quatuor virgatis terre, duodecim acris prati, quadraginta acris paſture, quadraginta acris boſci, & viginti ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Bagworth & Thorneton; de manerio ſive dominio de Kerbye, cum ſuis pertin'; ac de ſex meſſuagiis, ſeptem virgatis terre, viginti acris paſture, centum acris boſci, & decem ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Kerby predict'; de manerio ſive dominio de Barow, cum ſuis pertin', in eodem comitatu; ac de decem meſſuagiis, ſex virgatis terre, decem acris prati, viginti acris paſture, centum acris boſci, & quadraginta ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Barowe predict'; de tertiâ parte manerii de Lubbeſthorpe, cum ſuis pertin', ſex meſſuagiis, centum acris terre, viginti acris prati, ducentis acris paſture, & quadraginta acris boſci, cum ſuis pertin'; de manerio ſive dominio de Fleckney, cum ſuis pertin'; & tribus meſſuagiis, duabus virgatis terre, quatuor acris prati, ſex acris paſture, & tribus ſolidatis redditûs, in Fleckney; de manerio ſive dominio de Wiſtowe; & de quatuor meſſuagiis, quatuor virgatis terre, tribus acris prati, octo acris paſture, & quatuor ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Wiſtowe; de manerio ſive dominio de Newton Harcourte; de duobus meſſuagiis, duabus virgatis terre, duabus acris prati, quatuor acris paſture, & quatuor ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Newton predict'; de manerio ſive dominio de Brandeſton; de uno meſſuagio, duabus virgatis terre, ſex acris prati, quatuor acris paſture, cum ſuis pertin', in Brandeſton; de manerio ſive dominio de Aſheby Parvâ; de uno meſſuagio, tribus gardinis, & duobus ſolidatis redditûs, cum ſuis pertin', in Leiceſtriâ; ac dimidium virgate terre in Braunkinſthorpe; de uno molendino aquatico, cum ſuis pertin', in Raunſton; de duobus meſſuagiis, viginti acris terre, quatuor acris paſture, cum ſuis pertin', in Glenne Magnâ. Et quòd maneria de Beaumanor, Quarndon, Barowe, Whitwyke, Ratbye, Bocharſton, Newton, Huckleſcote, Donyngton, Merkefeld, & Wolverſton, tenentur de domino rege per homagium tantùm pro omnibus. Et quòd predicta officia de quo vel de quibus tenentur ignorant. Et quòd maneria de Shepeſhead, Bottesford cum hamelettis de Normanton & Thorpe, & predictum feodum vocatum Wincheſter-fee, ac omnia terre, tenementa, & cetera premiſſa, in Shepeſhed, Bottesford, Normanton, Eaſtthorpe, Barkeſton, Plungarth, Redmyld, ac Hardeby, cum ſuis pertin', necnon advocationes eccleſiarum, tenentur de d̃no; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et manerium de Aſhby, ac omnia alia terre & tenementa in Aſhby, tenentur de d̃no rege; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et maneria de Bagworth & Thorneton, ac omnia terre & tenementa in eiſdem, tenentur de d̃no rege, ut de ducatu ſuo Lancaſtrie; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et manerium de Kerby, ac omnia ac ſingula predicta in Kerby, tenentur de d̃no rege, ut de honore ſuo Peverell; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et maneria de Barowe & Quarndon, & terre in Barowe & Quarndon, de quo vel de quibus tenentur ignorant. Et quòd manerium de Lubbeſthorpe, ac omnia alia terre & tenementa in Lubbeſthorpe, tenetur de d̃no rege, ut de honore ſuo Peverell; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et quòd manerium de Fleckney, & dicta terre & tenementa in Fleckney, tenentur de d̃no rege; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et quòd manerium de Wiſtowe, & dicta terre & tenementa de Wiſtowe, tenentur de Reginald Grey; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et quòd manerium de Newton Harcourte, & terre & tenementa in eâdem, tenentur de d̃no rege; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et quòd manerium de Braundeſton, & terre & tenementa in Braundeſton, tenentur de d̃no de Boſworth; ſet per que ſervicia ignorant. Et quòd manerium de Aſhby Parvâ, & dicta molendina, meſſuagia, terre, & tenementa, in Braunkingſton, Raunſton, & Glenn Magnâ, & Leiceſtriâ, de quo tenentur ignorant. Et quòd Edwardus Haſtinges, miles, eſt filius & heres ejuſdem Willĩ Haſtinges propinquior [1]."

---

[1] Pat. 1 Edw. IV. p. 4. m. 25.

[2] Ibid. p. 5. m. 22.

[3] Aſhmole's Hiſtory of the Garter.

[4] Ex autograph. penès præf. Comitem Huntingdon.

[5] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. pars 2. m. 18.

[6] Stow's Annals.

[7] Pat. 7 Edw. IV. pars 1.

[8] Cart. 14 Edw. IV. N° 1.

[9] Arms: Barry of ſix, wavy, Or and Gules, Plate XXVIII. fig. 8. Some account of this family will be found under Shepeſhed.

[10] Eſch. 12 Edw. IV. N° 7.

[11] Dugd. Bar. vol. I. p. 584.

[12] See vol. I. p. 322.

[13] Burton, p. 17.

Notwithſtanding the beforementioned grants, it does not appear that he was ever in the actual poſſeſſion of Loughborough or Beaumanor; for, in 1483, king Richard III. gave to ſir Robert Harrington, knight, the office of bailiff, ſteward, and the keeping of Loughborough park, and £20. of annuity of the iſſues and profits of the ſame lordſhip for his life [2]; and in that year ſir Francis Lovel, knt. viſcount Lovel (ſon and heir of John lord Lovel and Joan his wife, ſole ſiſter to William lord viſcount Beaumont), lord chamberlain of the houſhold and chief favourite to king Richard III, held both theſe manors in reverſion; but, being attainted of treaſon [3], Oct. 11, 1485, 1 Hen. VII, they came again to the crown. Lebbeus Digby occurs as bailiff of the town of Loughborough, and keeper of the parks there, that year [4].

William lord Bardolph, viſcount and baron Beaumont, April 24, 1485, took for his ſecond wife Elizabeth daughter and heir of ſir Richard Scrope, and niece to Henry lord Scrope of Bolton; and, on the 11th of November that year, by a petition to the king, obtained a re-grant of theſe manors in fee; his attainder being then made void, as grounded upon no good foundation or cauſe warrantable; and, all his lands being reſtored to him, was in that year ſummoned to parliament by the title of "Wilhelmo Vicecomiti Beamond:" but on the 9th of November, 1487, we find the following authentic document amongſt the parliamentary records:

> "Billa, concernens cuſtodiam terrarum & tenementorum Willĩ Vic' Beaumont, Regi in Parliamento exhibita fuit, ſub ſerie verborum que ſequuntur:

"Where William Viſcont Beaumont, in the tyme of kyng Edward the Fourth, was by auctorite of Parliament, by an Acte of Atteyndre, atteynted of High Treaſon, and, by the ſame, forfeited to the ſame late King all his inheritaunce, of the whiche the King our Soveraigne Lord, by force of the ſame Acte, was ſeiſed frõ the begynnyng of the reigne of our Soveraigne Lord unto the tyme that our ſaid Soveraigne Lord, truſting that the ſame Viſcont wold have ben of good and ſadde diſpoſition and rule, and that he hadde been of diſcrecion to have ruled himſelf and his lyvelode to his honour and profitte, without alienation or any thing doing to the diſheritaunce of him or his heirs, cauſed the ſame Acte of Atteyndre to be reverſed, and the ſame Viſcont to be reſtored, as well to his name and eſtate, as to his ſaid inheritaunce. Sith the which reſtitution, our ſaid Sovereign Lord hath certeyn knowleche, that the ſaid Viſcont is not of ſadneſs ne diſcretion, neither to rule and kepe himſelf, nor his ſaid lyvelode; but, ſith that tyme, hath aliened, waſted, ſpoiled, and put away, great part thereof full undiſcretly, to the diſheritaunce of him and his heires; and by all likelihode, if he ſhuld have his liberty thereof, would herafter demeane the reſidue in like wiſe. In conſideration wherof, and foraſmuche as oure ſaid Soveraign Lord is bounde to ſee and provide that ſuch perſones as have enheritaunce, and be not of ſadneſs and diſcretion to rule and kepe the ſame, without alienation or diſheritaunce of their heires; it be, by the advyſe of the Lords Spirituall and Temporall, and Cōmyns, in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by auctoritie of the ſame, ordeyned, ſtabliſhed, and enacted, that the King our Soveraign Lord, or ſuche as his Grace ſhall depute, have the rule, diſpoſition, and guyding, of all the lyvelode and enheritaunce wherunto the ſaid Viſcont was reſtored by the Acte of Reſtitution made for him in the Parliament holden in the firſt yere of the reigne of our ſaid Soveraigne Lord, during the tyme of the life of the ſaid Viſcont, to the honour, ſuſtinaunce, and profitte of the ſaid Viſcont; and that the ſame Viſcont, by all that ſame tyme, have none auctorite ne power to giſe ne graunte any parte of the ſame to any perſone, without the aſſent or aggrement of our ſaid Soveraigne Lord, while the ſaid Viſcont is in the keping of oure ſaid Soveraigne Lord, or the aſſent and aggrement of ſuche as his Grace ſhall depute to have the rule of the ſaid lyvelode and enheritaunce. Savyng to every of the King's leige people, other then the ſaid Viſcont, ſuche right, title, and lawfull intereſſe, as they have in or to any of the premiſſes."—Reſponſio: "Le Roy le vuelt [5]."

This meaſure was confirmed in 1496; with an eſtabliſhment of all ſuch grants as had been made out of the eſtate by the king; and the exception of an annuity of £30. granted to John viſcount Wellys out of Burton upon Humber. The lord Beaumont died Dec. 20, 1508; and, leaving no iſſue, it was found that his nephew Francis lord Lovel, ſon to his ſiſter Joan, had he been living, and not attainted, would have been his proper heir [6].

Elizabeth

---

[1] Eſch. 1 Ric. III. N° 32.

[2] Harl MSS. 433. p. 25. b.

[3] Rot. Parl. vol. VI. p. 276.—Francis lord viſcount Lovel was attainted 23 years before the death of his uncle William viſcount and baron Beaumont; and was ſlain at the battle of Stoke in 1487, his attainder having never been reverſed. He married a daughter of the lord Fitz Hugh; but left no iſſue.

[4] Rot. Parl. vol. VI. pp. 372. 377.

[5] Ibid. vol. VI. p. 389.

[6] Inq. at Tilton, 17 Sept. 1 Hen. VIII; and MS. Chetwynd.—The two daughters of the lady Joan Lovel were alſo dead; but both of them left iſſue. Therefore, on the death of William viſcount and baron Beaumont without iſſue, the dignity and title of viſcount Beaumont became extinct (the ſame having by the letters patent of 18 Hen. VI. been limited to John the firſt viſcount Beaumont and the heirs male of his body): but the barony of Beaumont, being an antient barony in fee, by force of the ſaid ſeveral writs of ſummons to parliament, deſcended upon ſir Brian Stapleton, knt. and ſir John Norres, (who, by the inquiſition taken after the death of William viſcount and baron Beaumont, were found to be his next heirs; to wit, Brian Stapleton, ſon of Joan, the daughter of Joan, ſiſter of the viſcount; and John Norres, ſon of Frideſwide, the other daughter of the ſaid Joan, ſiſter of the viſcount) as coparceners in abeyance. Sir John Norres, knight, the eldeſt ſon of Frideſwide, died in 6 Eliz. without legitimate iſſue; and Henry Norres, the only younger ſon of Frideſwide, was attainted 28 Hen. VIII. and executed in the life-time of his elder brother. As repreſentative of the Stapleton branch of this family, Thomas Stapleton, eſq. of Carleton in Yorkſhire, preferred a petition to his majeſty in 1790, ſtating his claim to the barony of Beaumont: which being referred to the houſe of peers, a counter-claim was made by Willoughby Bertie, the preſent earl of Abingdon, and baron Norreys of Ricote (heir-general to Henry lord Norres of Ricote, the deſcendant of Henry Norres, who was reſtored in blood 18 Eliz.); and, on a motion in the houſe, May 18, 1790, the conſideration of Mr. Stapleton's petition was adjourned for three months. See Gent. Mag. vol. LX. p. 816.—The claim of Mr. Stapleton having been again brought before the Committee of Privileges, March 13, 1798, the Lord Chancellor at ſome length took a comprehenſive view of the ſubject before the Committee; and entered into a hiſtory of the peerage in queſtion, from its firſt creation, to the lateſt period in which the dignity was oſtenſibly held. In the courſe of his ſpeech, after noting the arguments of the Attorney-general, in behalf of the Crown, againſt the Claimant's pretenſions, his Lordſhip ſuggeſted the propriety

Elizabeth widow of William lord Beaumont, on whom Beaumanor had been ſettled in dowry, was re-married, in 1509, to John de Vere earl of Oxford; to whom, and to Elizabeth his wife (relict of William late viſcount Beaumont and baron Bardolph) were ſecured, inter alia, by the king's letters patent, Dec. 6, 1509, the manors of Loughborough, Shepeſhed, and Blaſton, with their members and appurtenances; and the advowſons of Loughborough and Coſſington[1]. This lady being again left a widow in 1511, her dowry was confirmed to her by authority of parliament in 1514[2]; and, in an act for the attainder of Edward duke of Buckingham, in 1523, proviſion is again made for ſecuring the counteſs of Oxford's dower; and that the act ſhould not affect the property of Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk and Mary queen dowager of France his wife; nor any grants made jointly or ſeverally to Thomas lord marquis of Dorſet, John Grey, Richard Grey, and Leonard Grey, knights[3].

Thomas Grey lord marquis of Dorſet had been attainted 1 Ric. III.[4]; but was reſtored 1 Hen. VII.[5]

In 1527, the manors of Loughborough, Beaumanor, and Shepeſhed, and the advowſons of the ſeveral churches thereto belonging, were granted in reverſion (after the death of Elizabeth counteſs of Oxford, who then held them in dower) to Thomas lord Grey of Groby, the ſecond marquis of Dorſet[6], in exchange for the manors of Grafton and Hartwell, co. Northampton[7]. About this period Beaumanor was viſited by Leland; who notices "the parke of Bewmaner, cloſid with ſtone waules and a pratie logge yn it, longging alate to Beaumont;" and adds, "The lorde marquiſe of Dorſete[8] hath Groby, Brodegate, Loughborough, and Burley, fair parkes ...... There is a fair quarry of alabaſter-ſtone[9] about a 4 or 5 miles from Leirceſter, and not far from Beamanor[10]."

Thomas marq. of Dorſet died Oct. 10, 1530[11]; leaving Henry his ſon and heir; but the lord Leonard Grey, in conſequence of a remainder in one of the leaſes from the crown, was the next poſſeſſor of Beaumanor, where his court-rolls are ſtill preſerved; in one of which, March 10, 1531, amongſt other defaulters for non-appearance, are Richard Pexal the then abbot of Leiceſter, William Farnham, gent. and Robert Chaveney[12].

Henry marquis of Dorſet (with his wife Catharine, daughter to William Fitz Alan earl of Arundel), obtained in 1534 a reverſionary leaſe from the crown, inter alia, of the manor of Beaumanor[13]; and in 1536 the lord Leonard Grey was appointed lord deputy of Ireland.

In 1537, Margaret widow of Thomas Grey the firſt marquis of Dorſet obtained, by the king's letters patent, the manors of Loughborough, Shepeſhed, &c.[14]; and from that period the manors of Beaumanor and Loughborough have been wholly diſconnected.

On the attainder of lord Leonard Grey in 1540, Beaumanor having again reverted to the crown, it was granted, June 16, 1542, by leaſe for 21 years, with its members, viz. Woodhouſe, Woodthorpe, Quorndon, Barrow, and Mountſorell, in exchange for the manor of Marſton in Suſſex, and the moiety of a manor in Bedfordſhire, to Henry Grey marquis of Dorſet, lord Ferrers of Groby, Harrington, Gonvyle, and Aſtley; who obtained a new grant of Beaumanor in 1544[15]; and on the 26th of July that year had a ſurvey made of the manor, which is ſtill preſerved.

This nobleman, having no iſſue by his firſt wife, married ſecondly Frances eldeſt daughter of Charles Brandon the gay duke of Suffolk by his third wife Mary the French queen[16]: and though the duke, at the time of this marriage, had two ſons living (by his fourth wife, Catharine[17] daughter of William lord Willoughby of Ereſby); yet, both theſe dying iſſueleſs, of the falling ſickneſs, July 14, 1551, at the biſhop of Lincoln's palace at Bugden; Henry marquis of Dorſet, as a compliment to his lady, though otherwiſe for his harmleſs ſimplicity neither miſliked nor much regarded, was created duke of Suffolk, Oct. 11, 1551. By this lady he had three daughters; 1. Jane, married to Guilford Dudley, fourth ſon to John duke of Northumberland; propriety of taking the opinion of the Judges on the queſtion of the deſcent of honours; and obſerved, that his opinion was generally contained in three propoſitions, which he ſhould have the honour of ſubmitting to the conſideration of the Committee; and, in concluding, moved three reſolutions, which were generally to the following effect: 1. "That the barony of Beaumont veſted in William Viſcount Beaumont." 2. "That the ſaid barony remained in abeyance between the coheirs of the ſaid Viſcount." And, 3. "That the petitioner (Mr. Stapleton) had proved himſelf to be one of thoſe coheirs." Theſe reſolutions, being ſeverally put by the Chairman, were agreed to by the Committee, nem. diſſ.—And here, we believe, the matter for the preſent reſts.

---

[1] Rolls of Parliament, prefixed to the firſt volume of the Lords' Journals, vol. I. p. lii.

[2] Ibid. pp. liii. cxxviii.

[3] Ibid. pp. cxv. cxviii. cxxiii. cxxviii.

[4] Rot. Parl. vol. VI. p. 250.

[5] Ibid. p. 315.

[6] His court-rolls are ſtill preſerved at Beaumanor.

[7] Pat. 19 Hen. VIII. p. 1.

[8] "Of the ſaid Thomas marquis Dorſet I cannot here omit one memorable paſſage: That whereas not many years ſince, the collegiate church of Aſtley, in the county of Warwick (founded in the time of king Edward III. by Thomas lord Aſtley, whoſe heir-general was married to the anceſtor of the marquis), a moſt rare and beautiful piece of work, fell down, and a chancel was newly to be erected by the parochians; the vault wherein the body of this marquis was laid was opened, and therein a great, large, and long coffin of wood found, which, at the curious deſire of ſome, and earneſt motion of others, was then burſt open, myſelf being there preſent, 1608; whoſe body having lain there by the ſpace of 78 years (for he died the 10th of October, 1530), was, at the cutting open of the cerecloth, viewed perfect, and found nothing corrupted, the fleſh of the body nothing periſhed or hardened; but, in colour, proportion, and ſoftneſs, alike to any ordinary corpſe newly to be interred; his body large of length, ſix feet wanting four inches, his hair yellow, his face broad; which might ſeem to be thus preſerved by the ſtrong embalming thereof." Burton, p. 51.

[9] There is certainly much alabaſter in the neighbourhood. Whilſt this ſheet was preparing for the preſs, having occaſion to repeat the pleaſant viſits I have frequently made at the hoſpitable manſion of Beaumanor, I obſerved that the lane which leads from Quorndon to Woodhouſe was newly repaired with ballaſt, in which ſtones of alabaſter were as numerous as thoſe of any other ſpecies; and I ſince find that there is a quarry of alabaſter at Syſton, five miles from Leiceſter, and not much farther from Beaumanor, as ſtated by Leland, which is particularly good for floors and ſome other uſes. On the Foreſt alſo, at the bottom of Ives Head Hill, going to Black brook, and near the reſervoir of water, an intelligent friend tells me he has within theſe few years ſeen very large pieces of alabaſter lie above ground, perhaps a hundred weight or more in one piece; and large quantities are doubtleſs under the ſurface of the earth.—It may alſo be noticed, that Red Hill, at Radcliff upon Soar (within this neighbourhood) produces excellent alabaſter, which is uſed for ornaments. "At Kedleſton-hall in Derbyſhire, Staunton Harold in Leiceſterſhire, and Stanford Hall in Nottinghamſhire, are ſome beautiful columns of this rock. Chimney-pieces alſo from it adorn the houſes of many of the neighbouring gentry." See Throſby's Nottinghamſhire, vol. I. p. 29.—Mr. Hind, owner of the Swithland ſlate pits, has many years ſince made chimney-pieces for gentlemen in the neighbourhood from a quarry of alabaſter at Thrumpton, in Nottinghamſhire; but it does not anſwer for that purpoſe, as it will neither ſtand cold nor heat, changes colour, and becomes yellow.

[10] Leland, vol. I. pp. 21—24.

[11] His widow Margaret, marchioneſs of Dorſet, obtained from the archbiſhop of Canterbury, Feb. 13, 1534, "euicunque preſbytero, ad miniſtrand' euchariſtiam, matrimonium ſolemnizand', & baptizand', Margaretæ marchionis Dorſet, relictæ prænobilis viri Thomæ marchionis Dorſet, & aliis de ſuâ familiâ, in quacunque capella ſive oratorio intra maneria ubi ſe reſidere contigerit, durante vitâ dictæ Margaretæ. Reg. Cranmer, f. 15. a.

[12] From the original Roll.

[13] 4 Pars Original. 25 Hen. VIII. Rot. 96.

[14] Mich. Recorda, 29 Hen. VIII. Rot. 2. & Rot. 31.

[15] 4 Pars Original, 35 Hen. VIII. Rot. 36.

[16] An old portrait of Mary queen of France, inſcribed, "Maria Regina Fra. & D^{c} Suffol. filia H. Sep^{i} Regis Angliæ;" and a half-length of Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk, inſcribed, "Carolus Dux Suffolciæ, ſere. Angliæ Regis R. C. Archipræfectus Curiæ, ætatis ſuæ 64, a° 1544;" are deſcribed by Mr. Bridges (II. 419.) at Southwick in Northamptonſhire. Very fine portraits alſo of both, in rich robes, and their hands united, in one picture (from an original, then the earl of Granville's, and afterwards the earl of Orford's), were engraved by Mr. Vertue in 1748; the duke of Suffolk having in his right hand a lance, appendant to which is a label, inſcribed,

"Cloth of gold, do not thou deſpiſe,
Though thou be match'd with cloth of frize:
Cloth of frize, be not thou too bold,
Though thou be match'd with cloth of gold."

[17] Biſhop Latimer's "Sermons on the Lord's Prayer" were preached before the right virtuous and honourable lady Katharine dutcheſs of Suffolk, fourth wife, and the widow, of Charles Brandon, 1552. He commenced his lecture, he ſays, "at the requeſt of my moſt gracious Lady, to expound to her, and to her houſehold ſervants, and others that be willing hearers."

berland; 2. Catharine, married to Henry lord Herbert, eldeſt ſon to William earl of Pembroke; and, being divorced from him, to Edward Seymour earl of Hertford; and, 3. Mary, married to Martin Keys, ſerjeant-porter to queen Elizabeth.

In 1552, we find the following letter from this Nobleman, at that time owner of Beaumanor:

"After my hertie commendacõns unto youe. Thees ſhal be to deſyer youe to extend your leafull favors unto me in the rating of certayne partyculers which my ſervaunte Bowyer this bearer ſhall preſentlie bring unto youe. And your frendſhip thearein to be ſhewed I ſhall not faile to have in thankfull remembraunce. And thus moſt hartilie fare youe well. From my houſe in Suff. place [1], this preſent Frydaie, 1552.

Your aſſuryd friend, H. SUFFOLK.

"To the reverend Father in God Thomas Buſhop of Norwich; and to his loving frendis ſir John Gates and ſir Robert Bowes, knights, and to the reſydue of the king's majeſtie's commiſſioners, geove thies."

In the ſame year we alſo find him ſucceſsfully exerting his intereſt to ſuperſede a grant which had been recently made to Thomas Farnham, eſq.

"To my veraye lovinge frendes the King's Majeſtie's commiſſioners appointed for the ſale of his Majeſtie's lands:

"After my right hertie commendacõns unto you. Whereas Chriſtopher Thomſon, a ſervaunte of myne, fermour of two milles, with thappurtenances, in Quarnedon, in the countie of Leiceſter, parcell of the poſſeſſions of the late monaſtery of Barmondſaye, underſtandinge that the Kinge's Majeſtie wolde make ſale of ſoche lands, is nowe reſorted hether, to purchaſe theym of the King's Majeſtie: But, ſins his repayer hether, he hath lerned that Thomas Fernaham hath prevented hym, and entered alredy into the purchaſe of the ſame before you: I moſt hertely deſyre you, that forſomoche as my ſaid ſervaunte is the fermour thereof, havinge many children, a great familie, and no other releif but only theſe milles; and that he (meanyng to goe thorough for the ſame) hathe troubled his frendes, and departed with other thinges, to his great loſſe, and utter undoyng, if he ſhowld not obtaine: That it may pleaſe you, in thees reſpects, and the rather for my ſake, to revoque your graunte made to Fernaham, and that this poore fermour may have the preferment of that purchaſe, advauncyng therfore to the King's Majeſtie ſo moche as Fernaham ſhowld have payed. Fare you moſt hertily well. From Suff. place, the 20th of December, 1552.

Your loving frend, H. SUFFOLK [2]."

The melancholy fate of lady Jane Grey, "the ſweet accompliſhed victim to the wickedneſs of her father-in-law and the folly of her father," who was proclaimed queen of England July 10, 1553, and beheaded, Feb. 12, 1553-4, with her huſband lord Guilford Dudley (as the duke of Northumberland their father had been ſome months before), is well known [3]. The duke of Suffolk was himſelf beheaded on the 23d of the ſame month; and his next brother, lord Thomas Grey [4], on the 17th of April, 1554; in which year a commiſſion was iſſued to Francis Cave and others, to enquire what lands and tenements, goods and chattels, were poſſeſſed by Henry late duke of Suffolk, attainted of high treaſon, die perpetrationis proditionis ſuæ [5]; the return to which is preſerved at Beaumanor.

By a ſubſequent deed, Beaumanor was re-granted to Frances dutcheſs of Suffolk for life, together with the manors of Groby and Leeſthorpe, and the park of Loughborough [6]; and, in a few weeks after, the manor of Loughborough was aſſigned, by a grant from queen Mary, to ſir Edward Haſtings [7], ſecond ſon of George the firſt earl of Huntingdon (of which noble family a full account will be given under Aſhby de la Zouch and Caſtle Donington).

The dutcheſs of Suffolk, after this, experienced many hardſhips; and, being perſecuted for her attachment to the Reformation (particularly by Gardiner biſhop of Wincheſter, whom ſhe had perſonally offended), is ſaid to have been reduced to the neceſſity of providing for her ſafety by flight, in which ſhe was ſo far humiliated as to be under the neceſſity of taking ſhelter for a whole night in a church-porch. March 1, 1554-5, ſhe was re-married to Adrian Stocks, eſq. who had been her maſter of the horſe; a match which was very differently ſpoken of. Some blamed the dutcheſs, for ſo far forgetting her dignity, as to marry her domeſtic; others commended her, for ſo far remembring her near relation to the crown, and the jealouſy which it might have excited, as to provide for her own ſecurity, by marrying a perſon who could not give the leaſt umbrage to the queen [8].

Thomas Duport, eſq. of Shepeſhed, and others, who were charged with a debt of 191*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.* by an inquiſition taken after the duke of Suffolk's attainder, were exonerated of the ſame in 1555 [9]; as were Nicholas Ellys [10] and William Stocks [11] from ſimilar charges.

The grant of the manor of Loughborough was confirmed to ſir Edward Haſtings in 1557 [12]; when an accompt was taken by the crown of the property of the duke of Suffolk at Beaumanor and at Aſtley.

Mr. Stocks was now, in right of his lady, in full poſſeſſion, not only of Beaumanor, but alſo of the very large property which the dutcheſs had as her dower in the county of Warwick; and their reſidence was occaſionally divided between Aſtley and Beaumanor till the acceſſion of queen Elizabeth, when the dutcheſs for a ſmall period became again a favourite at court. Very fine portraits of the Dutcheſs (taken in 1559 when ſhe was 36 years [13] old) and her huſband Mr. Stocks, both in one picture, in rich robes, were engraved in 1742, from the original then in the poſſeſſion of Horace Walpole junior, eſq. afterwards the celebrated earl of Orford.

In 1559, a regular preſentment upon oath was made againſt Adrian Stocks, eſq. by the inhabitants of Aſtley, "that he had cauſed the tall and coſtly ſpire of their church, made of timber, together with the battlements, all covered with lead, to be pulled down, being a land-mark ſo eminent in that part of the woodland, where the ways are not eaſy to hit, that it was called the Lanthorn of Arden; as alſo of the two fair ailes, and a goodly chapel called St. Anne's chapel adjoining, the roofs of which were alſo leaded; by reaſon of which ſacrilegious action, the ſteeple, ſtanding in the midſt, took wet, and decayed (and afterwards fell to the ground) [14]."

About this period Adrian Stocks, and the lady Frances dutcheſs of Suffolk his wife, brought a Quare Impedit? againſt the biſhop of Exeter and others, relative to ſome poſſeſſions they had in Devonſhire. The biſhop pleaded, and demanded judgement of the writ, becauſe, he ſaid, it appeareth, by the ſaid writ, quod prædicta Franciſca, uxor præfati Adriani, nominatur in dicto brevi Domina Franciſca Duciſſa Suffolk; ubi, per legem terræ, eadem Franciſca, by her marriage betwixt the aforeſaid Adrian and her the ſaid Frances, had loſt her name of dignity, and ought to be named Franciſca uxor præfati Adriani. Wherefore, and becauſe the ſaid Frances is named Lady Dutcheſs of Suffolk in the ſaid writ, therefore he demanded judgement of the writ. And afterwards the plaintiffs did diſcontinue their ſuit, and durſt not proceed [1].

---

[1] Charles Brandon duke of Suffolk built a large and ſumptuous houſe, in the reign of king Henry VIII, called Suffolk-houſe, or Duke's Place, nearly oppoſite to where St. George's church in the borough of Southwark now ſtands; which was exchanged with king Henry VIII, in 1537, for the biſhop of Norwich's palace in Cannon Row, in the pariſh of St. Martin in the Fields. Strype's Stow, 1720, Book IV. p, 16.

[2] From the Originals, preſerved in Harl. MSS. 284. p. 77. 118. See his hand-writing, as marquis and duke, in Pl. XXIV. 1, 2.

[3] Fuller tells us, that the tears burſt from his eyes, whilſt he was writing her hiſtory in the "Book of Martyrs;" and the page of that book which contains her foul and untimely cataſtrophe has been ſullied with the tears of many an honeſt labourer. Granger, vol. I. p. 172. A very beautiful portrait of the Lady Jane Grey, at the age of 16, from an original then in the poſſeſſion of Algernon Seymour duke of Somerſet, was alſo engraved by Mr. Vertue in 1752. See an account of her under Bradgate.

[4] Lord John Grey, his youngeſt brother, who ſettled at Pirgo in Eſſex, was father to ſir Henry Grey of Pirgo, created lord Grey of Groby July 21, 1603; who married Anne, daughter of William lord Windſor; and died July 26, 1614; and was buried in Bradgate chapel, where his monument ſtill remains; and from whom the preſent earl of Stamford and Warrington is a lineal deſcendant. The lady of Henry lord Grey was buried at Broughton Aſtley, June 28, 1605; as was John, his eldeſt ſon, Oct. 7, 1611.—A farther account of this noble family will be given under Bradgate.

[5] Hilarii Commiſſiones 1 Mariæ, Rot. 2.

[6] 2 Pars Original. 1 Mariæ, Rot. 31; & Trin. Recorda, 1 Mariæ, Rot. 37.

[7] 4 Pars Original. 1 Mariæ, Rot. 79.

[8] Granger, vol, I. p. 283.

[9] Hilarii Recorda, 1 & 2 Phil. & Mar. Rot. 15.

[10] Ibid. Rot. 18.

[11] Ibid. Rot. 19.

[12] 2 Pars Original. 4 & 5 Phil. & Mar. Rot. 32; & 5 Orig. ejuſdem anni, Rot. 34.

[13] So ſays the engraved portrait; but in that caſe ſhe muſt have been a mother very young.

[14] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 113.

At a view of frankpledge held at Beaumanor, Oct. 3, 1559, "cum magnâ curiâ Adriani Stocks, armigeri, & d̃ne Franciſce duciſſe Suffolcie, uxoris ejus," Francis Griffith and Alice his wife, with Iſabella their daughter, were admitted to a copyhold at Woodhouſe, parcel of the manor of Beaumanor, by a deed witneſſed by Adrian Stocks, F. Suffolk, and William Stocks [2].

The dutcheſs died, in London, Nov. 21, that year; and was buried in St. Edmund's chapel in Weſtminſter abbey, where an altar-tomb of alabaſter, with her effigies, and this inſcription, perpetuate her memory:

IN CLARISS. DOM. FRANCISCÆ SUFFOLCIÆ QUONDAM
DUCISSÆ, EPICEDION.
NIL DECUS, AUT SPLENDOR, NIL REGIA NOMINA PROSUNT; SPLENDIDA DIVITIIS NIL JUVAT AMPLA DOMUS.
OMNIA FLUXERUNT, VIRTUTIS SOLA REMANSIT
GLORIA, TARTAREIS NON ABOLENDA ROGIS.
NUPTA DUCI PRIVS EST, UXOR POST ARMIGERI STOKES, FUNERE NUNC VALEAS, CONSOCIATA DEO.
HERE LIETH THE LADIE FRANCES DUCHESS OF SOUTHFOLKE.
DAUGHTER OF CHARLES BRANDON DUKE OF SOUTHFOLKE AND MARIE THE FRENCH QUENE;
FIRST WIFE TO HENRIE DUKE OF SOUTHFOLKE, AND AFTER TO ADRIAN STOCK, ESQ.

On an inquiſition taken in March 1559-60, 2 Eliz. before Nicholas Beaumont, George Turpin, and Thomas Farnham, eſqrs. it appeared that the dutcheſs poſſeſſed the manor of Beaumanor.

"The chief manor-houſe of this manor is a very old houſe, and in ſome decay.

There is a goat-houſe pertaining to the ſaid manor within the Foreſt of Charnwood, where there is now one hundred goats, in the cuſtody of one Ralph Pigott, who hath been accuſtomably allowed xxvi s̃. viii d̃. yearly for keeping of the ſaid goats: and within a certain precinct the woods growing in the ſaid foreſt do pertain to this manor; which is but runt-trees for top wood, not to be valued but by tale, which time this ſurvey ſerved not to do. The drift [3] of a certain precinct of the foreſt doth appertain to this manor; and the tenants be free tenants in the Foreſt of Charnwood for all kinds of cattle ſans number.

The ſoil of this manor, for as much as lieth in Beaumanor and Woodhouſe, is hard and barren ground; the reſidue of the manor is very good ground.

Nineteen copyhold tenants in Woodhouſe, 15 in Quorn, 11 in Woodthorpe, 1 in Mountſorell. John Lee, who had the water-mill, &c.; Richard Cadwalater held the water-mill with water-courſe, &c. under a grant of Henry marquis of Dorſet xii s̃. iiii d̃. The ſame Richard had Vicary Partie, containing about 20 acres of paſture, at xxxiii s̃. iiii d̃. Thomas Farnham, eſq. held 20 acres of paſture, called New Cloſe, at xxvi s̃. viii d̃. He held alſo the herbage and pannage of the paſture called Maylinge, or Mogling, at xxvi s̃. viii d̃.

Ex' per me EDWARD HUNT, clericum offic' ALEX. KING, audit' [4]."

By another inquiſition, taken at Meriden, Nov. 7, 1560, it appeared that the dutcheſs poſſeſſed, under letters patent dated 7 Aug. 1537, the college of Aſtley, with the advowſons of Aſtley and Gilmorton; the manor alſo of Monks Kerby, and other very conſiderable property, in Warwickſhire. Her daughters, lady Catharine then aged 19, and lady Mary aged 14, were her coheireſſes. By Mr. Stocks ſhe had one daughter, Elizabeth; who died, an infant, 7 Feb. 1555-6 [5].

Adrian Stocks, eſq. by letters patent dated March 12, 1562-3, obtained from queen Elizabeth a new leaſe for 21 years of her highneſs's manor of Beaumanor, with all the rights, members, and appurtenances; which are deſcribed as extending to the towns, pariſhes, fields, or hamlets, of Barrow, Woodhouſe, Quorndon, Woodthorpe, and Mountſorell. In 1571, he was returned to parliament as one of the repreſentatives for the county of Leiceſter [6]; and about that period married, ſecondly [7], dame Anne Throgmorton, widow of ſir Nicholas Throgmorton [8], knight (who, by her former huſband had two ſons, Arthur and Robert).

Sept. 10, 1572, a reverſionary leaſe of Beaumanor, with its members and appurtenances, was granted to Henry Brooke [9], alias Cobham, eſq. at an annual rent of 37*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.* for a term of 21 years, to commence on the determination [10] by ſurrender or otherwiſe of the term granted to Adrian Stocks; and in 1574, the queen's letters patent were obtained for a leaſe made to this Henry Brooke, of the demeſne lands called Grovelands, &c. in Blewberrie, in the counties of Leiceſter and Berks; and of the manor of Bewmanor [11].

In February, 1580-81, Mr. Adrian Stocks was requeſted by ſir Walter Mildmay to be a mediator in a diſpute concerning ſome rights of common at Barrow [12]; and, by a ſettlement, dated Aug. 20, 1582, he aſſured his intereſt in Beaumanor to William Stocks his brother, and Robert Aprice, gent. in truſt, "that, after the death of the ſaid Adrian, they ſhall not only find Francis Gates and John Gates, two of the kinſmen of the ſaid Adrian, at the Univerſity, at learning, until they ſhall be able to live of themſelves, or to provide ſufficient or competent maintenance for themſelves, but alſo relieve Richard Hall, William Pyncheſter, and William Gates, now ſervants to the ſaid Adrian, with convenient and neceſſary meat, drink, and apparel, or ſufficient or competent allowance for the ſame, during the continuance of the reſidue of the ſaid terms which ſhall be to come after the death of the ſaid Adrian. For theſe and other conſiderations, Adrian Stocks aſſigns to Robert Aprice the manor of Beaumanor, and all and ſingular the premiſes, and all the eſtate, poſſeſſion, and intereſt, which Adrian Stocks hath, or may have, in the manor of Beaumanor, with the appurtenances, and the mills, meſſuages, edifices, lands, tenements, hereditaments, herbage, and pannage of the ſaid park and paſture, all the premiſes demiſed by the ſaid ſeveral letters patents, or in lands, tenements, meadows, paſtures, hereditaments, herbage, or pannage in Beaumanor, or in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, or in the towns, precincts, fields, or hamlets, of Barrow, Woodhouſe, Quorndon, Woodthorpe, and Mountſorell; to have and to hold the ſaid manor to the ſaid Robert Aprice, his executors and aſſigns, for all the reſidue of the terms comprized in the ſaid ſeveral letters patents. And the ſaid Adrian further gave and granted to William Stocks and Robert Aprice, to the proper uſe of the ſaid William for life, and, after his deceaſe, to the uſe of Robert Aprice, his executors and adminiſtrators, all and ſingular the kine, oxen, ſheep, lambs, and cattle, and all the ſtock and ſtore of neat kine, oxen, ſheep, lambs, and other cattle, of the ſaid Adrian Stokes, now being, going, or depaſturing, or which hereafter ſhall be going or depaſturing at or in Beaumanor aforeſaid, and at or in the ſaid pariſhes, towns, fields, or hamlets of Barrow, Woodhouſe, Quorndon,

---

[1] Leonard's Reports, Caſe 311.

[2] See the hand-writing of all the three, in Plate XVIII.

[3] In Mr. Wyld's map of the Foreſt there is a place near Ulveſcroft called Peen-nook, or Common Penn; which was the common Penn when they uſed to drive the Foreſt: all the cattle were driven there; and all the weyſs and ſtreys, and thoſe who had no right of common, were there impounded.

[4] The original inquiſition was burnt in the fire of London; but Mr. Herrick has an exact copy, atteſted by the Auditor's clerk.

[5] Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 355.

[6] As a George Stokes had been in 1558.

[7] Jan. 15, 1578-9, the Lady Throgmorton, wife to Mr. Stocks, of Beaumanor, was godmother, with the Lady Stanhope (Mr. Francis Haſtings being godfather), to Dorothy daughter of ſir George Haſtings, knight.

[8] "Sir Nicholas Throgmorton had a narrow eſcape in the time of queen Mary; being tried, and narrowly acquitted, for a ſuppoſed concern in Wiat's inſurrection. He was employed by Elizabeth in important embaſſies to France and Scotland. His abilities were great; his ſpirit was ſaid to have bordered on turbulence: his death, therefore, was eſteemed rather fortunate: it happened in 1570, at the table of Cecil; not without ſuſpicion of poiſon; an end in thoſe days more frequently attributed than it ought to be. At Wreſt in Bedfordſhire is a fine portrait of Sir Nicholas; his face thin, his beard black. At his girdle is a large ring to hold his handkerchief. He has a ſword and ſtilletto, and is graced with a gold chain and medal." Pennant, Journey from Cheſter to London, p. 392.

[9] From the documents in the Augmentation Office.

[10] Which determination muſt have taken place almoſt immediately, as the leaſe was renewed in 1591.

[11] Hil. Rec. 16 Eliz. Rot. 14.

[12] See p. 48.

Woodthorpe, and Mountſorell aforeſaid, and in Loughborough parke, and in the foreſt of Charnwood, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, or in any of the ſame: and theſe parcels of plate hereafter following; that is to ſay, a great tun with ſix cups, two ſalts, and eight ſpoons, weighing, by eſtimation, 106 ounces and a half, a tankard with the arms of the ſaid Adrian upon it, weighing 17 ounces, a baſon and ewer, commonly uſed in the chamber of the ſaid Adrian, weighing 41 ounces, and three jugs with a cover, weighing 26 ounces by eſtimation: and all other the goods and chattels of the ſaid Adrian Stocks, at or in Beaumanor aforeſaid, or in the ſaid pariſh of Barrow, except theſe parcels of the ſaid goods and chattels hereinafter following, that is to ſay, all the horſes and mares of the ſaid Adrian at or in Beaumanor aforeſaid, or in the pariſh of Barrow, or in Loughborrow park, or in the ſaid foreſt of Charnwood, and eight oxen and thirty-nine of the ſaid kine and neat, and all the plate of ſilver and gilt of the ſaid Adrian before in theſe preſents not expreſſed and ſet down, and theſe parcels of the ſaid goods hereafter following; that is to ſay, the hangings and furniture of the dutcheſs's[1] chamber as it ſtandeth, my lady Katharine her chamber as it ſtandeth, the lady Throckmorton's chamber, wife of the ſaid Adrian, with her cloſets as they ſtand, Mrs. Elizabeth Throckmorton's chamber as it ſtandeth, the chamber on the gate, the wardrobe of my lady Mary's chamber, as they do ſtand; and theſe parcels of napery or linen cloth, that is to ſay, 78 pair of coarſe ſheets, 10 pair of Holland ſheets, 30 pair of pillowbiers, two long table-cloths of diaper damaſk work, one ſhort table-cloth of diaper damaſk work, two ſquare table-cloths of diaper damaſk work, ſix towels of diaper damaſk work, 36 napkins of diaper, 20 plain table-cloths long and ſhort, 12 plain cupboard-cloths, 18 plain towels, 180 plain napkins, 10 hall-cloths long and ſhort, eight dreſſer-cloths, and ſix buttry-cloths; all which ſaid horſes and mares, oxen, kine, plate, ſtuff, and chattels laſt rehearſed, are to be excepted and reſerved to the uſe of the ſaid Adrian Stocks, his executors and adminiſtrators.

Adrian Stocks died Nov. 30, 1586, leaving William, his brother and heir, at that time 60 years old[2]; who poſſeſſed Beaumanor March 28, 1587, when Francis Ule was admitted to a meſſuage, &c. at Woodhouſe, parcel of the manor of Beaumanor, at the court of William Stocks, eſq. He died a very old man; and his executor was George Belgrave, eſq. of Belgrave (afterwards ſir George Belgrave), who married a Farnham[3].

Nov. 11, 1592, queen Elizabeth, at the humble petition of Robert earl of Eſſex, granted to Thomas Crompton, Robert Wright, and Gelly Merrick, eſqrs. a leaſe of the manor of Beaumanor, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Henry late duke of Suffolk attainted. This grant, which was in truſt for the earl of Eſſex, included no leſs than thirteen different parks in various counties; the whole of which then yielded £50. a year, and double that rent when the leaſes ſhould expire[4]. Ten of theſe parks, to the annual value of £30. 6*s.* 8*d.* were aſſigned in 1594, by the conſent of the earl of Eſſex, to Gelly Merrick and Henry Lindley[5]; by whom Beaumanor[6] was ſoon after transferred, at an annual rent of £70. to William Heyricke, eſq. of London; who in conſequence became a reſident here, and held a court in the year 1595.

Inventory of Glaſs at Beaumanor, 1599.

Inprimis, in the parlour a glaſs window,	£0	10	0
Item, the glaſſe in Mr. Adrian Stock's chamber, — — —	0	3	0
Item, in my lady Frogmorton's chamber the glaſſes, — — —	0	5	0
Item, the glaſſe in the nurſerye-chamber,	0	2	0
Item, the glaſſe in the other nurſerye,	0	3	0
Item, the glaſſe in the hallate, —	0	5	0
Item, the glaſſe in the pawcing-place,	0	1	6
Item, the glaſſe in the lynning-houſe,	0	1	9
Item, the glaſſe in the greate chamber,	0	1	8
Item, the glaſſe in the duke's chamber,	0	6	8
Item, the glaſſe in the duches's cloſett,	0	1	4
Item, the glaſſe in the gallerye,	0	5	0
Item, the glaſſe in William Stockes' chamber, — — —	0	1	6
Item, the glaſſe in my lady Mary's chamber,	0	3	0
Item, the glaſſe in the chamber over the gate, — — —	0	1	8
Summa totalis	£3	13	7

The privileges appendant to this manor will appear from the following "true copy of a roll geven by Mr. Goodamitre, the 30th of September, 1622.

"The mannor of Bewmannor, with all the hambletts and quillets therunto belonginge, together with the mannor of Loughborough, were all ſome time the lord Beaumont's lands, and the liberties of both all one; which lands came from king Henry the VIIth unto Thomas lord marqueſs Dorſett, in exchange for the honour of Grafton.

"In the ſecond or third yeere of kinge Edward VIth, ſir Edward Haſtings, who was after lord Haſtings of Loughborough, was high-ſheriffe of the counties, videlicet, Leiceſter and Warwicke. His under-ſheriffe was one William Cunniſbuy, gentleman, who, taking upon him to infringe the libertie of Bewmanor, by ſerving of proſſes in Woodhouſe upon one Henry Fowler, carpenter, at the ſuite of one Rupley, a ſawyer, dwellinge in Cropſon, was complained upon unto the duke of Suffolke, living then at Bradgate, by the bayly of the ſaid libertie, whoſe name was William Burdett, gentleman. Wherupon preſently the duke his grace ſent for the ſaid Cunniſbuy, and committed him to the porter's ward, where he lay for the ſpace of two days, until the ſaid high-ſheriffe came unto the duke to Bradgate, and ther intreated for his mann, promiſinge that neither he, neither any for him, ſhould once attempt the like during his ſherifwicke."

In 1608, Adrian Farnham, eſq. held freely certain lands and tenements in Woodhouſe, called Ruſha fields, and other lands there; paying yearly on Midſummer-day one red-roſe garland, and a broad arrow-head with two red-roſe buds, and ſuit of court to Beaumanor[7].

In 1621, 34*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* the fee-farm rent paid by ſir William Heyricke for Beaumanor, is mentioned to have been parcel of the Queen's Majeſty's jointure[8].

The following ſtatement is from a ſurvey in 1656:

"This antient manor-houſe of Beaumanor ſtandeth and is ſeated in the park called Beaumanor Park. The manor-houſe is moated round about with a very fair and clear moat; and a little diſtant from the ſaid moat are barns and ſtables, and all other uſeful offices ſtanding and ſeated; about which ſaid building is a ſecond moat; and round about this ſaid antient manor-houſe lieth the ſaid park. At Quorn the abbot of Leiceſter had formerly a meſſuage, with certain land, for which he paid by the year 6*d.* to the lord of Barrow, and 6*d.* to the lord of Beaumanor. The hoſpital at Barrow pays annually a pound of pepper[9] for a meſſuage and land formerly held by John Ray; and for another meſſuage a roſe-bud is paid. At Friſby on the Wreke, Mr. Richardſon pays, for a meadow called Twycroſs Thing, four ſhillings and two flights of arrows[10]."

Beaumanor park[11] was diſparked by ſir William

---

[1] This was the dutcheſs of Suffolk, Mr. Stock's firſt wife; and the Ladies Catharine and Mary were her daughters.

[2] Inq. at Torrington, co. Devon (in which county he held the manor of Langrane) 25 May, 28 Eliz. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 331.

[3] See before, p. 102.—I have now before me a receipt of Mr. Belgrave, in 1596, for £42. 10*s.* for articles of furniture ſold by him as executor, out of the manor-houſe at Beaumunor, amongſt which were, a picture of the Duke, four large pieces of hangings of tapeſtry, or arras work, for the great chamber, four other hangings for the Dutcheſs's chamber, two teſters of cloth of gold and velvet, a drawing table in the great chamber, two tables and four forms in the hall, a ciſtern of lead, three long ſpits, and a cart and wain for coals.

[4] Burghley State Papers, vol. II. p. 800.

[5] Ibid. p. 806; and 5 Pars Original. 37 Eliz. Rot. 1.

[6] A deſcription of Beaumanor in October 1594 ſtates it to be "an antient mannor-houſe of greate receipte, moted about with a large mote ſtored with fiſh, with a drawbridge, garden, orchard, hop-yard, &c. thereto belonging; all very convenient and anſwerable, being the freehold in the Park."

[7] This payment is ſtill continued by Mr. Farnham.

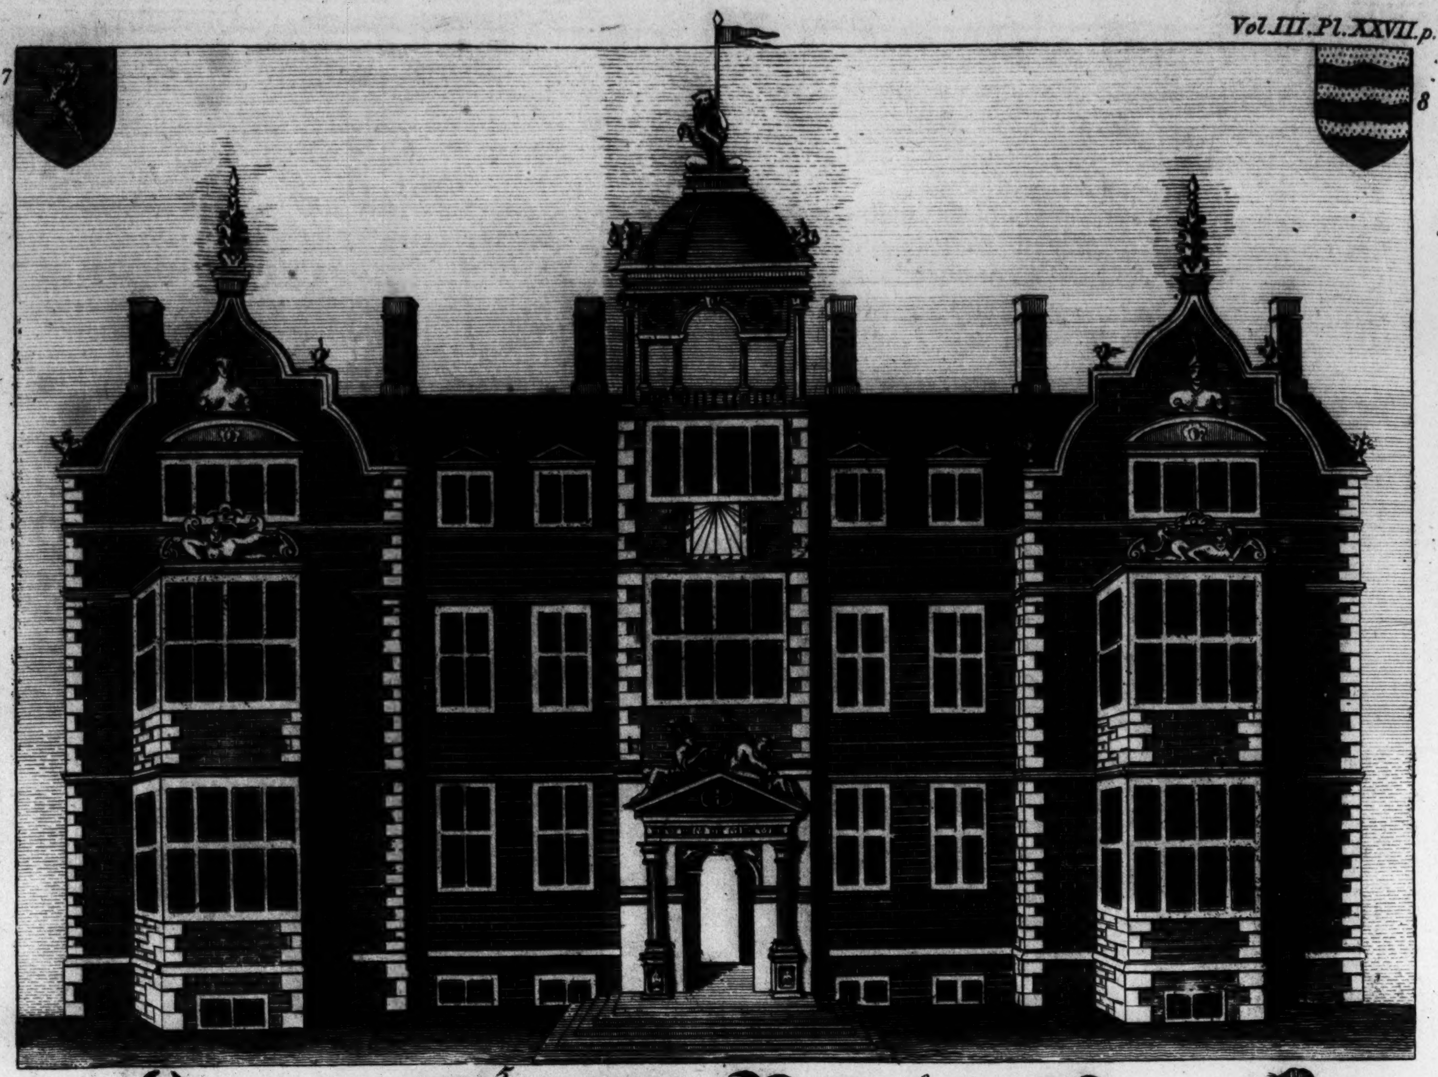
[8] This appears by ſeveral original receipts; which ſtyle Bewmaner "parcell' juncturæ dominæ Annæ Reginæ."

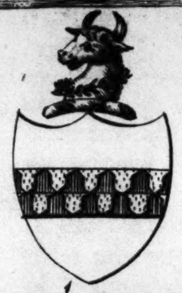
[9] The pound of pepper is ſtill paid by the Hoſpital: it was formerly paid by Theophilus Cave, eſq.

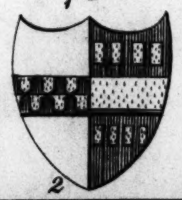
[10] This payment had been made in 1638 by Richard Steele and Richard Sharpe.

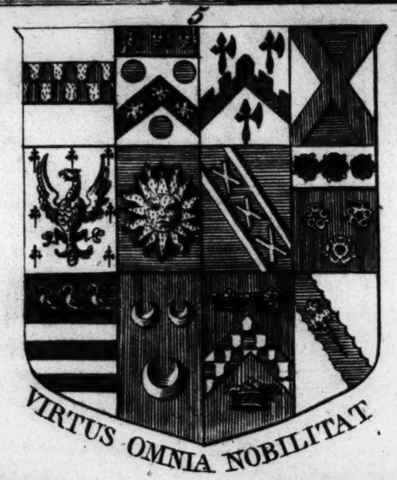
[11] There were formerly two parks at Beaumanor; one for red deer, the other for fallow deer. A large bankment and deep ditch ſtill remain, which divided the parks.

Vol. III. Pl. XXVII. p. 147.









5
VIRTUS OMNIA NOBILITAT

To WILLIAM HERRICK Esq. theſe Views of the ANTIENT and MODERN Manſion of BEAUMANOR, engraved at his Expence, are reſpectfully inſcribed by his much obliged Friend, J. Nichols.

Herrick, except a ſmall part which remained till about 1690; in which year a great clearance of timber was made throughout the Foreſt.

Beaumanor is taxed by itſelf, diſtinct from Woodhouſe or any other place; and, by an ageeement of the inhabitants, pays to every levy for the poor of Woodhouſe about 17s. ſo long as that agreement ſubſiſts; otherwiſe Beaumanor to ſupport their own poor. It is exempt from church-rates; and the conſtable and other pariſh-officers are annually ſworn in at the court-leet of the manor, as thoſe at Woodhouſe are only alternately.

Leiceſterſhire, Hundred of Weſt Goſcote, to wit. An account of what money has been collected and diſburſed for the uſe of the poor, within the liberty of Beaumanor, in the county and hundred aforeſaid; for four years laſt paſt, viz 1747, 1748, 1749, and 1750, ſigned by the reſpective officer for each year.

Extraordinary expences —	0	7	6
Collected and diſburſed in the year 1747, the ſum of — —	£4	17	6
Extraordinary expences —	1	0	0
(Signed) SAMUEL FOULDS.
Collected and diſburſed in the year 1748, the ſum of — —	£7	3	6
Extraordinary expences —	0	15	0
(Signed) SAMUEL FOULDS.
Collected and diſburſed in the year 1749, the ſum of — —	£7	10	6
(Signed) JOHN PATCHET.
Collected and diſburſed in the year 1750, the ſum of — —	£7	5	1
Extraordinary expences. —	2	2	6
(Signed) JOHN PATCHET.

This ſhews an aſtoniſhing difference in the poor-rates then and at the preſent time.

In the return made to parliament in 1786, it is ſtated, by John Patchett [1], that "there is no charitable donation within the liberty of Beaumanor."

The ſtriking features of Beaumanor are ſerenity and ſublimity. Of the former, thoſe who have enjoyed a morning or evening walk on the lawn in the front of the hall-houſe are beſt able to form a judgement. The latter, the ſlighteſt inſpection of the beautiful ſurrounding rocks will inſtantly confirm.

On this ſubject let us hear Mr. Throſby:

"In the walks round about Beaumanor, pleaſing variety preſents itſelf in venerable and chaſte forms. The Foreſt hills ſeem to ſleep in ſucceſſion behind each other, ſoftened into the diſtant clouds; and here a farm peeps through the trees, ſucceeded by a wood. It was in Autumn 1790, when I firſt viſited this place for obſervation; the leaves of the oak trees, which here abound, were then variegated with golden tints of pleaſing hue. A partial froſt had left their underbranches in their ſummer's ſable colouring; and ſome of the higher it had penciled with tints of fire, or, in ſofter words, it had warmed their foliage. The old Park ſhews what it once had been. The antient oaks contend with thoſe at Donington Park for years; they each deſerve our particular notice. The former remain the moſt perfect: the Foreſt hills have ſheltered them, as a kind companion, from the ſtorms and tempeſts of revolving ages; while the latter have bleakly ſtood the ſhocks of more than ſeven centuries. Some of their trunks are ſhivered, diſmembered, and almoſt branchleſs; but even in this expiring ſtate, when compared with ſome ſtriplings by their ſide, the growth of only a century, they juſtly command our veneration. The oaks of Beaumanor are ſtill perfect ſtudies for the artiſt, while thoſe at Donington are fine accompaniments for a ſplendid ruin. The rocky precipices near Beaumanor park are rich in a variety of forms. Thoſe who have neither leiſure nor inclination to ſee all the Foreſt, hither let them come to behold the moſt ſplendid ſcene in it [2]."

In the ſummer ſeaſon this lordſhip, with the adjoining one of Woodhouſe, has, at a ſmall diſtance, more the appearance of a wood than any place I have ſeen. The whole lordſhip of Beaumanor is remarkable for the growth of large timber trees, oak, aſh, elm, and willows; particularly oak in great abundance, many of which, 22 feet and upwards in circumference, were, about ſeven years ſince, cut down and ſold for the uſe of the Navy. There are alſo a vaſt number of crab-teees, from the fruit of which the farmers make great quantities of verjuice in autumn; which is much uſed for ſtrains and bruiſes, both for cattle and for the human ſpecies.

The old manſion-houſe at Beaumanor was taken down by the father of the preſent poſſeſſor; who began to build the new one in 1725; and the late Alderman Weſtley, of Leiceſter, was the architect. It is built upon the ſame ſpot of ground; but the old houſe appears to have been conſiderably larger than the preſent; the original foundations being ſtill eaſy to be traced, as are the moats which ſurrounded it. The kitchen-part, with ſome offices which were a part of the old building, remain as they were. The building has very lately received ſome improvements, by lowering the top of the houſe ſeveral feet; but at preſent is unfiniſhed.

In Plate XXVII. are views both of the antient and modern houſe; together with the following arms:

1. Argent, a feſs Vaire, Or and Gules. Creſt, a buffalo's head coupt, gorged with a chaplet proper. Herrick.

2. Gules, a feſs between eight billets Or. Creſt, a lion's head couped Gules; May of Suſſex.

3. Herrick; impaling May.

4. Gules, a feſs wavy between three fleurs de lis Or; ſir Baptiſt Hickes, the firſt viſcount Campden.

5. Quarterly; 1. Herrick; 2. Argent, on a chevron Sable, between three hurts, three eſtoiles Or; on a chief Gules three cinquefoils Or, Bond; 3. Argent, a chevron embattled between three battle-axes erect Sable, Bainbrigge; 4. Per ſaltire, Azure and Argent, a ſaltire Gules, Gage; 5. . . . . an eagle diſplayed, within an orle of croſs croſslets fitché; Sudgrove, of Sudgrove in the county of Glouceſter; 6. Azure, a ſun in ſplendour Or, St. Clere; 7. Azure, three ſaltires in bend between two bendlets Argent; ſir Nicholas de Loveyne, knt. of Hertfordſhire; 8. Gules, three roſes Argent; on a chief of the ſecond, three roſes of the firſt, Ceſar of Hertfordſhire; 9. Argent, two bars Sable; on a chief of the ſecond, three ſwans of the firſt; 10. Gules, three creſcents Argent, Perient of Hertfordſhire; 11. Gules, a chevron Vaire, Argent and Azure, between three ducal crowns Or, Mayo of Hackney; 12. Argent, on a bend engrailed Azure, a croſs croſslet fitché Or, Clarke of Hackney.

In the ſpacious hall of the preſent houſe is a large chair (fig. 6.) remarkable from being made out of one ſolid oak tree, which was cut down in the park in 1690, and meaſured in circumference 34 feet; the diameter being 11 feet 4 inches. On it hangs a garland of flowers; ſent annually from Mr. Farnham of Quorndon, with a ſpear and three roſe-buds, as a chief-rent; and the garland, ſpear, and roſe-buds are regularly placed on this chair, where they remain till the ſucceeding ones arrive.

Here is alſo another curious armed chair, which belonged to Dr. Richard Herrick, the warden of Mancheſter, with the arms of the family carved on the back.

Among the portraits which ornament this houſe are,

King James I. and his conſort Queen Anne of Denmark; both originals; preſented to ſir William Herrick by his royal maſter.

Mary Bond, wife of John Eyrick of Leiceſter, and mother to ſir William; of which a faithful engraving by Mr. Baſire has been given in vol. II. p. 622.

Sir William Herrick and his Lady; as deſcribed in p. 155, and engraved by Mr. Baſire in Plate XXVIII.

A beautiful lady in a Turkiſh habit, who accompanied ſir William Herrick from Conſtantinople. Here was formerly a picture alſo of ſir William in a Turkiſh dreſs; but this is not now in the family.

Mr. Herrick and his lady, who died 1671.

William Herrick, eſq. (who died in 1705); and his lady, who ſurvived till 1749.

The laſt William Herrick, eſq. and his lady.

The preſent William Herrick, eſq. his ſiſter, and two brothers, all painted by Mr. Abbott.

---

[1] Not Dalckett, as the tranſcript from the Houſe of Commons (vol. I. p. 60.) by miſtake.

[2] Views in Leiceſterſhire, p. 227.

Mrs. Sarah Wollaſton, now living at Stoke Newington in her 91ſt year; an excellent painting.

John Mayo, eſq. by Vandyke; Iſrael Mayo, eſq. of Bayford Place, Herts, and Elizabeth Clarke his wife.

George Clarke, eſq. of Hackney, citizen and grocer, ſheriff of London in 1641-2, in his livery-gown, and Mrs. Anne Clarke his wife. [This gentleman, by his laſt will, in 1668, left £6. payable by Alderman Thorold and his heirs, on November 17, for theſe uſes:

	£.	s.	d.
To the vicar, for a Sermon on that day, commemorating Q. Elizabeth's acceſſion	1	0	0
To the clerk and ſexton, — —	0	10	0
To ſix poor widows in Dr. Spurſtow's[1] almſhouſe by 5s. apiece — — —	1	10	0
To twelve poor houſekeepers, —	3	0	0
	6	0	0

In the old church at Hackney, juſt without the rails on the South ſide of the communion-table, on a flat ſtone, was formerly this epitaph:

"Here lyeth interred the body of George Clarke,
eſq. deceaſed, 14 Aug. an. Dom. 1668.
If any deſire to be me nigh,
Pray let my bones in quiet lie,
Till Chriſt came in the cloudy ſky,
Who will us all both judge and try."]

Old Jenkins of Yorkſhire (who died in December 1670, at the very uncommon age of 169); with a hat and long flowing beard, a light-coloured coat buttoned at top and bottom, his ſhirt ſeen through four open buttons at the breaſt. This picture much reſembles the portrait of him engraved by Worlidge.

At Beaumanor are ſeveral other portraits of perſons whoſe names are not now with certainty known; a good picture, by Boultbee of Loughborough, of Mr. Herrick's Eclipſe mare and foal by her ſide[2]; and a humourous one of two men, one with a ſtout pipe in his mouth, offering tobacco to the other, who has a pipe in his hand.

Pedigree of HERRICK, of BEAUMANOR.

Sir William Herrick[3], knt. fifth ſon of John and Mary Eyrick of Leiceſter; born 1557; married 1596; knighted 1605; M. P. for the borough of Leiceſter 1601; 1605; 1629; died March 2, 1652-3, in his 96th year. = Joan, dau. of Richard May[4], eſq. of London, and ſiſter to ſir Humphry May, chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter.

1. William Herrick, eſq. born 1597; married 1623; died 1671; æt. 74. = Elizabeth, dau. of Humphry Fox, eſq. died 1683, æt. 84.

2 Robert, born 1598; died ſ. p. 1639.
3. Richard, born 1600; died Warden of Mancheſter in 1667; (ſee p. 157.)
4. Thomas, born 1602.

5. Elizabeth, b. 1603.
6. Henry, 1604.
7. Roger, fellow of All Souls 1628-9.
8. John, 1612.
9. Mary, died ætat. 20.

10. Martha, married in 1634 to John Holmſtead, eſq. of Lynn, Norfolk.
11. Dorothy, married in 1628 the Rev. James Lancaſhire.
12. Elizabeth, married in 1633 Beaumont Pight, eſq. of Beaumanor.

Anne, dau. of William Bainbrigge, eſq. of Lockington, firſt wife; died 1655. = William Herrick, eſq. born 1624; married 1649; died 1693, æt. 69. = Frances, dau. of Will. Milward, eſq. of Chilcot, co. Derb. 2d wife; d. before 1681.

1. William Heyrick, born 1650; died 1705; æt. 55. = Dorothy, dau. of Ja. Wootton, of Weſton, co. Derby, eſq. died 1749, æt. 100.

2. John, of the Outwoods in the pariſh of Loughborough; died 1724. = Mary, dau. of Beaumont Pight, eſq. of Denton, co. Lincoln; died 1727.

4. Elizabeth, married to John Leveſley, eſq. of Belton.

3. Benjamin Herrick, M. D. æt. circa 26, 1681; died 1720. = . . .

William-Bainbrigge Herrick, d. 1733. A daughter.

1. Thomas, died 1682, aged 20.
2. Frances, died young, 1664.
3. Mary, born 1665; married William Lucas, eſq.
4. Chriſtiana, born 1666; married Clifton Tompſon, eſq.

1. Elizabeth[5], bo. 1684; married Robert Bunny, gent. died 1745.
2. William, born 1685; died 1686.
3. Anne, born 1687; died 1759 unmarried.

4. William Herrick, eſq. born 1689; married 1740; died 1773, æt. 84. = Lucy, dau. of John Gage, eſq. of Bentley Park, Suſſex, d. 1778, aged 64.

5. John Herrick, born 1691; married 1715; died 1760; æt. 68. = Elizabeth, dau. of Samuel Marſhall, of Burton on the Woulds, gent. died 1757, æt. 75.

Two ſons and two daughters, all dead.

6. Thomas Herrick, eſq. of Leiceſter (of whom ſee below).

1. Lucy, born 1741. = Richard Gildart, eſq. of Norton Hall, co. Stafford; high ſheriff of that county 1784.

Richard, born 1772; a gentleman commoner of Univerſity College, Oxford.

2. Dorothy, born 1743; d. 1745.
3. Dorothy, died 1747.

4. William Herrick, eſq. born 1745. = Sarah Stokes, of Woodhouſe.

5. John Herrick, eſq. born 1749.

6. Thomas-Bainbrigge Herrick, eſq. born 1754. = Mary, only dau. of James Perry, eſq. of Eardſley Park, co. Hereford.

1. William, born June 29, 1794.
2. Mary-Anne, born June 9, 1796.
3. Lucy, born March 21, 1798.

Pedigree of HERRICK, of KNIGHTON.

Martha, dau. of Thomas Noble, eſq. of Leiceſter, firſt wife. = Thomas Herrick[6], eſq. of Leiceſter[7], youngeſt ſon of William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, by Dorothy Wootton his wife; born 1693; died 1766, æt. 73. = Katharine, dau. of Robert Bakewell, of Swebſton, eſq. ſecond wife; married 1728; died 1730. = Elizabeth, dau. of James Winſtanley, eſq. of Braunſton; 3d wife; died Jan. 10, 1757, æt. 49.

William Herrick, eſq. of Knighton, married 1766. = Sarah, dau. of Philip Bamford, gent. of Bamford, co. Lancaſter.

Katharine, living a widow at Whittington near Lichfield, 1798. = Richard Dyott, eſq. of Freeford Hall, co. Stafford; died at Leiceſter Jan. 2, 1787, æt. 65.

1. Richard Dyott, of Freeford, eſq. the preſent high ſheriff of Staffordſhire 1798. = Mary, dau. and heir of Chriſtopher Aſtley, of Tamehorn, in the pariſh of Whittington, co. Stafford.

2. William Dyott, lieutenant-colonel in the army, 1798.
3. Philip Dyott, a ſolicitor at Lichfield, 1798.

1. Katharine, living 1798. = Robert Dale, eſq. of Aſhbourn, high ſheriff of Derbyſhire in 1786.

2. Mary, unmarried 1798.
3. Frances, wife of the Rev. Will. Lee, rector of Burton Overy, co. Leiceſter, died Aug. 26, 1792, aged 34.
4. Anna, unmarried 1798.
5. Lucy, wife of the Rev. Thomas Burnaby, jun. rector of Miſterton, and vicar of St. Margaret's in Leiceſter, 1798.

Two other daughters, both died young.

---

[1] Dr. Spurſtow, vicar of Hackney, founded almſhouſes for ſix poor widows, which he endowed with lands now worth £42. a year. See Lyſons, Environs of London, vol. II. pp. 513. 515.

[2] The foal was ſold by Mr. Herrick to the honourable Charles Windham at ſix months old for 200 guineas; and another, in 1798, at two years old, to a nobleman of the turf, for 300 guineas.

[3] Sir William ſpelt his name two ways, thus; Hericke and Heyricke.

[4] Of whom ſee p. 156.

[5] This lady left one daughter, who died unmarried.

[6] See his epitaph, with that of Elizabeth, his third wife, in St. Martin's church at Leiceſter.

[7] An eminent ſolicitor at Leiceſter. He was ſome time town-clerk of Leiceſter, which he reſigned in 1764; and was alſo bailiff of that borough, an office which he held till his death.

Pedigree of GAGE, of BENTLEY, SUSSEX.

Taken from the Probates of their Wills in the Prerogative Office, Pariſh Regiſters, and other authentic Documents.

Sir John Gage [1], of Firle, Knight of the Garter, chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter, conſtable of the Tower of London comptroller of the houſhold to king Henry VIII, one of the executors to the will of that king; afterwards lord chamberlain to queen Mary; and one of the honourable privy council to both thoſe Sovereigns. = Philippa, dau. of ſir Richard Guildford, Knight of the Garter.

1. Sir Edward Gage, knt. of Firle, co. Suſſex; anceſtor of the preſent lord Gage. = Elizabeth, dau. to John Parker, of Willington, co. Suſſex.
2. James Gage, of Bentley, co. Suſſex, had 3 wives. = Joan, dau. of . . . Delves, of Bentley, firſt wife.
3. Robert Gage, of Haling, in the pariſh of Croydon, Surrey, eſq. [See his grandſon's note below.] = ...
4. William Gage, died without iſſue.

Alice. = Sir Anthony Brown, K.G. anceſtor to viſcount Montagu.

. . . marr. to . . . . Baynham, of Clerewall, co. Glouc. eſq.

Anne, married to John Thatcher the elder, eſq.

. . . married to . . Jennings, eſq.

1. Edward Gage, of Bentley, eſq. the firſt of the name. This Edward died without heir-male; leaving ſix daughters and coheirs. = Margaret, dau. to William Shelley, of Michel-grove, eſq.
2. James Gage, died without iſſue.
3. John Gage, of Wormley, co. Hertford, eſq. = Eleanor, widow to ſir Thomas Baſkervile, knt. dau. to Richard Habingdon, eſq.

Edward Gage, the ſecond of the name of Bentley; before of Wormley, co. Hertford. = Clare, dau. of William Bendloſs, eſq. of the county of Eſſex.

Katharine . . . . = William Gage, eſq. of Bentley, co. Suſſex; buried at Firle May 24, 1653. By his will, proved in 1653, he gives all his manors and lands in Suſſex, Kent, Wilts, Northampton, Worceſter, Radnor, Suffolk, Hertford, and Salop, in truſt, to his ſon Thomas Gage, eſq. and gives to his two daughters, Clare and Katharine, £2000. each.

Clare Gage.

Thomas Gage, eſq. of Bentley, was buried at Firle the 30th of July, 1682. By his will, bearing date the 5th of October, 1681, he gives his manor of Stoney Stratford, with the rights, members, and appurtenances aforeſaid, or elſewhere, in the county of Wilts, and all that his meſſuage or tenement in Willian, in the county of Hertford, in truſt, to his ſon Henry Gage, and others, to ſell and diſpoſe of for portions to ſome of his younger children then living. = Juliana Cæſar, daughter and coheir of Robert Cæſar, eſq. of Willian, in the county of Hertford. She was ſiſter to Johanna lady Rampayne and Anne lady Poyntz, and immediate deſcendant of ſir Julius Cæſar, knight.

Clare.

Katharine.

Henry Gage, eſq. of Bentley, died unmarried Mar. 10, 1717, aged 62; bur. at Firle.

Frances, buried at Firle April 11, 1667.

William Gage, bapt. at Firle Jan. 7, 1667; died without iſſue.

Cæſar Gage, died without iſſue 1724.

Juliana, bapt. at Firle Dec. 2, 1670. Settled in the pariſh of Elſtree, co. Hertford; died unmarried, and buried in St. Katharine's Church, near the Tower of London, Aug. 25, 1728; her will proved in 1734.

Anne, married John Payne, eſq. of Suſſex.

Henrietta-Maria, married to . . . . Curzon, eſq.

John Gage, of Bentley, eſq. youngeſt ſon, died at Seville in Spain Oct. 22, 1731; and was buried there the day following. = Lucy, dau. and heir of John Mayo, eſq. by Mary his wife, dau. and coheir of Geo. Clarke, of Hackney, co. Middleſex, eſq. married to John Gage in 1701; died March 15, 1739, and was buried in St. Nicholas's Church, Nottingham.

Thomas Gage, eſq. born Oct. 18, 1704; and died unmarried; buried in the chancel of Firle church July 30, 1742, aged 38.

Charles-Cæſar Gage, born Aug. 12, 1707; married Frances, dau. of . . . . but had no iſſue; and died in London Jan. 8, 1764, aged 57.

John Gage, baptized at Firle July 16, 1708; died an infant.

John Gage, born Oct. 20, 1711; was entered of Corpus Chriſti College, Cambridge, and took the degree of M. A.; was appointed rector of Colwick, co. Nottingham, Dec. 1749; vicar of Rouſtone, co. Lincoln, 1760; and rector of Weſt Bridgeford, co. Nottingham, in 1764; and died unmarried Jan. 14, 1770, aged 59; and was buried in St. Nicholas's church, Nottingham.

Lucy, born Aug. 7, 1713; married 1740; and died March 25, 1778, aged 65; and was buried in Woodhouſe chapel. = William Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, co. Leiceſter. (See p. 148.)

---

[1] "Sir JOHN GAGE, of Furle, his preferment at Court.

"Sir John Gage, knight, my good father, whoſe ſoul God pardon, was, after my grandfather's death, warde to the duke of Buckingham; who, after my father was married to my mother, daughter to ſir Richard Guilfourd, knight, was preferred by him to king Henry the Eighth his ſervice; and after, he being at the wininge of Turwin and Turrein, was firſt made captain of the Caſtle of Callis; after he was made deputy of the Caſtle of Owns under my lorde Vawſe. Shortly after he was ſent for home, and preſently made knight, of the privy counſell, vize chamberlaine, and captain of the guard; within few yeares after, for ſervice he did in the borders of Scotland, at his returne home was made controwler and chancellour of the Dowchye in one day; within few dayes after he was made counſtable of the Tower of London; and the next St. George's feaſt after, knight of the moſt noble order of the Garter. At the goinge to the wininge of Bullen he was joyned in the commiſſion with Charles duke of Suffolke, lorde-leauetenant of the king's majeſty's campe, for ſundry ſervices there, with ſir Anthony Browne, knight, maſter of the horſe and generall captayne of the bands of horſemen. After the death of our ſoveraign lord king Edward the Sixth, at the cominge in of queen Mary, he was made her lord chamberlaine. Thus haveing ſerved in all theſe roomes and offices truely and paynefully from the firſt yeare of the reigne of our ſoveraigne lord king Henry the Eighth of famous memory, unto the fifth yeare of the reign of our ſoveraign lady queen Mary, untouched with any reproch or unfaithfull ſervice in this time, being 77 yeares old, he ended his life, in favour of his prince, in his owne houſe at Furle in Suſſex, committing his ſoul there to God's mercifull tuition.

This note was written by Robert Gage, of Halinge, in the county of Surry, eſq. third ſon of the aforeſaid ſir John Gage, knight, and Philippa Guillfourd his wife, as John Gage of Halinge, eldeſt ſonne of the ſaid Robert Gage, my good father, hath diverſe times told me. In witneſs whereof I under-written, ſon of John Gage aforeſaid of Haleinge, and grand-child of the ſaid ſir Robert Gage, have ſubſcribed my name, this 29th of January, 1630,

HENRY GAGE."

This was the perſon who was after governor of Oxon, a knight, and killed at Culham-bridge, 11 Jan. 1644. See Le Neve's Mon. Angl. inter 1600 & 1644, [vol. IV.] p. 217. P. Le Neve, MS. penes me.

WILLIAM HEYRICKE[1], Eyrike, Eyric, or Erick[2] (as the name was originally ſpelt) fifth ſon of John and Mary Eyrick, was born at Leiceſter about the year 1557; went to London about 1574, to reſide with his brother Nicholas[3]; and afterwards purchaſed a ſpacious houſe in Wood-ſtreet, which had been the Lady Allett's. He had alſo a houſe at Richmond, and another at Weſtminſter; and, as appears by one of his papers, for a conſiderable time "reſided conſtantly at court[4];" was a man of great abilities and addreſs; remarkably handſome in perſon, as appears by a ſmall picture ſtill preſerved of him in his younger days; and was high in the confidence of queen Elizabeth, as well as of king James, both before and after his coming to the crown; and, by honourable ſervices to both, acquired large property.

He was ſent by Queen Elizabeth on an embaſſy to the Ottoman Porte[5]; and, on his return, was rewarded with a lucrative appointment in the Exchequer; and enjoyed ſeveral other places of honour and truſt[6] during the remainder of the Queen's reign, and alſo under her Succeſſor King James.

In 1594-5, he purchaſed, from the agents of Robert earl of Eſſex, that nobleman's eſtate and intereſt at Beaumanor; and, ſoon after, ſelecting this delightful ſpot for his reſidence, bought-in all the different outſtanding leaſes (one of which was then in the hands of ſir George Haſtings); held a court-leet and court-baron in that year; and in 1595 purchaſed the great and ſmall tithes of Mountſorell[7] and Quorndon[8].

May 6, 1596, he married Joan, daughter of Richard May, eſq. citizen of London (of the antient family of May of Mayfield Place in Suſſex); ſiſter to ſir Humphrey May[9], knt. chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter; to Hew May[10], eſq. one of the grooms of the privy chamber to king James I; and to the lady of ſir Baptiſt Hickes[11], afterwards viſcount Campden[12].

In 1596-7, we find him called on to aſſiſt her majeſty's ſervice, by the following writ of privy ſeal:

"By the Queene.

"Truſtie and wel-belovid, we greete yow well. The contynuall greate charges wch wee have, for the neceſſarie defence of and preſervacōn of o^{r} dominions and ſubiectes, are ſo notorious as neede not to be otherwiſe declared then may iuſtlie be conceaved by all our loving ſubiectes, being but of cōmon underſtanding. And therefore, at this preſente, finding cauſe of increaſe and contynuaunce of ſuche charges exceeding all other ordinary meanes; and not mynding to preſſe o^{r} ſubiectes wth anie preſente free gift of monie, but only to be ſupplied wth ſome reaſonable pencōn by waie of loane for onne yeare's ſpace; wee have made ſpeciall choice of ſuche o^{r} loving ſubiectes as are knowne to be of abilitie; amongeſt w^{ch}, we accompte yow one; and therefore we require yow, by theſe preſentes, to lend us the ſome of fyftie poundes for the ſpace of one yeare, and the ſome to be payd unto Benedict Barnham or Thomas Looe, aldermen, by us appointed as collectors thereof, wch we promiſe to repaye to yow or yor aſſignes, at the end of one yeare, in the receipte of o^{r} exchequer, upon giving of this privie ſeale ſubſcribed by the ſaid collectors, teſtifieing the receipte hereof. Geven, under o^{r} privie ſeale, at o^{r} pallace of Weſtm^{r}, the xxvIth daie of January, in the xxxIxth year of o^{r} raigne. THO. KERY.

℞^{d} this 28 of June, in the year abovewritten, the ſome of fyftye pounds of my ſecretarie, p^{d} to the uſe of the queene's ma^{tie}, accordinge to the tenor of this privye ſealle. THOMAS LOWE."

Aug. 18, 1598, queen Elizabeth, by letters patent under the great ſeal, granted to "her well-beloved and truſty ſervant William Heyrick, eſq." in fee, the manor of Beaumanor, with free-warren in his manor or lordſhip of Beaumanor, Barrow, Woodhouſe, Quorndon, Woodthorpe, and Mountſorell[13], with the appurtenances, under a yearly fee-farm rent of £34. 19*s*. 8*d*.

In the ſame year, he obtained, from the College of Arms, the confirmation of a grant of a creſt which had before been aſſigned to himſelf and his brother Robert, in addition to their antient coat of arms[14].

In 1599, he purchaſed of the queen, in free ſocage, the great and ſmall tithes of Beaumanor and Woodhouſe[15]; the Garrat Hay and Wellows land in Woodhouſe[16].

In the ſame year alſo he paid a ſmall acknowledgement for the privilege of keeping ſwans in the Soar[17].

Between Michaelmas 1599 and Michaelmas 1600, he enrolled himſelf among the denizens of his native Borough; and "gave to the town in kindneſs twelve ſilver ſpoons[18]." He afterwards preſented to the Corporation a picture of ſir Thomas White, their great benefactor, which remains in the Town-hall[19]; and was returned to parliament for that borough Oct. 20, 1601; but relinquiſhed that honourable ſituation on the death of the Queen. His office in the Exchequer, however, demanded ſo much of his time and attention, that he continued to make the metropolis his principal reſidence.

The particular eſteem, indeed, in which he was held by his contemporaries is evident from the correſpondence with which he was honoured by many of the principal Nobility, ſeveral of whom were under pecuniary obligations to him[20].

---

[1] It was ſo ſpelt by the famous Foreſter, from whom the Eyricks of Houghton (ſee vol. II. p. 579.) are moſt probably derived, and conſequently from the antient kings of Sweden.

[2] The principal materials for this article have been kindly communicated by John Herrick, eſq. of Beaumanor, and are chiefly from original documents in the poſſeſſion of William Herrick, eſq. his brother, the preſent owner of that lordſhip.

[3] A conſiderable goldſmith and banker in Cheapſide, in the pariſh of St. Vedaſt, Foſter-lane. See vol. II. p. 631.

[4] His portrait, ſtill preſerved at Beaumanor, repreſents him in a Court dreſs. See p. 155.

[5] From authentic documents in the family, his own picture in a Turkiſh dreſs, and that of a Turkiſh lady whom he brought back with him, which uſed to hang in the dining-room at Beaumanor, with ſome other pictures that were given him when abroad.

[6] One of his offices was in the king's jewel-houſe; and by letters patent under the great ſeal, in 1605, was granted to ſir William Herrick, ſir John Spilman, and George Harriot, for their fee, to each of them £150. per annum during life, and to the longer liver of them.

[7] See p. 91.

[8] See p. 106.

[9] Of whom ſee hereafter, p. 165.

[10] Of whom ſee vol. II. p. 617.

[11] Sir Baptiſt Hickes, knt. elected alderman for Bread-ſtreet Ward, was diſcharged on paying a fine of £500. Nov. 18, 1611, "at the expreſs deſire of the king; and the rather, for that his majeſty had not ſpoken or moved the court for any in that kind before, nor ever intended ſo to do thereafter." Repertory Pemberton, amongſt the records of the City of London, at Guildhall, p. 224. He was created a baronet July 1, 1620; and advanced to the dignity of a baron and viſcount by the title of lord Hickes of Ilmington in the county of Warwick, and viſcount Campden of Campden in Glouceſterſhire, May 5, 1628. He died Oct. 20, 1629; and was buried at Campden. Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 462. See his ſignatures, Plate XXIV. 7, 8; and ſee alſo under Old Dalby.

[12] Elizabeth viſcounteſs Campden, by her laſt will, proved 1643, gives to Simon Aſh, of London, clerk, Duport Poulſon, of the county of Leiceſter, gentleman, and William Kendall, merchant of London, the ſum of £800. in truſt for her ſiſter the lady Joan Herrick, to diſpoſe of at her will and pleaſure.

[13] The original grant is in fine preſervation at Beaumanor.

[14] The original grant, with the ſeals of office, is preſerved at Beaumanor; ſee alſo vol. II. p. 617.

[15] See p. 110.

[16] Herick Will'o, & Jo. Hawes, conc' Leic. 7 Pars Original. 41 Eliz. Rot. 5.

[17] Sept. 14, 1599, he paid 6*s*. 8*d*. to Robert Frith, for licence to keep ſwans on the river Soar, and to mark them with the initials W. H.

[18] "26 of Nov. 45 Elizabeth, there was delivered to Mr. Mayor twelve ſilver ſpoons, with the ſinkefyle upon the knobs thereof; which Mr. William Hericke gave to the town, in kindneſs, and in lieu of 10*s*. for his freedom." Records of the Corporation of Leiceſter.

[19] See, in vol. I. p. 353, an account of the other portraits in the Town Hall.

[20] The ſums of money that ſir William advanced to the Nobility, in the latter end of Elizabeth's reign and the beginning of James, as appears by his own papers, is aſtoniſhing. Lord high admiral Nottingham (ſee his ſignature, Plate XXIV.) pledged his diamond George, &c. for a large ſum of money. Lord Southampton was his debtor; and king James's Queen alſo, the money unpaid at her death in 1618.

For his important ſervices to king James, he received the honour of knighthood from that Monarch at Greenwich [1] April 1, 1605; and was afterwards appointed a teller of the Exchequer.

He was nominated alderman of Farringdon Without, May 20, 1605, and ſworn into the office May 28; but was excuſed from it next day by the court of aldermen, on agreeing to pay a fine of £300; and, by an order of the court of common council on the 10th of June following, was alſo excuſed from ſerving the office of ſheriff [2]. All this appears from the following authentic documents:

"To the right honourable Sir Thomas Lowe, knight, Lord Mayor of London.

After our very hartie com̄endacõns to your Lordſhipp. Whereas we are given to underſtand that ſir William Herick, his Maties ſervaunte in ordinary, hath bin of late by your Cittie choſen an Alderman, and conſequently by cuſtom to be a Sheriff; whoes eſtate, by reaſon of the great debt which his Matie oweth him, and for that the ſame debt (by reaſon of the treaſure of his Matie is much exhauſted) cannot upon the ſodaine be diſcharged; we holde him the more unfit to diſcharge that place: And therefore doe pray your Lordſhip, with the reſt of the Aldermen, to reſpett him for three or four years; after which tyme, wee preſume, his eſtate will be better, and himſelfe more willinge to take yt upon him. Yf uppon theis our l̄res you ſhall be pleaſed to ſpare him, wee will take yt kindly, and be ready in whatſoever wee may to make requital. Or otherwiſe we ſhall be forced to move his Matie to uſe his authority in ſtaying your courſe in that kind, which wee are verie loath to doe. Even ſoe, wee bidd your Lordſhipp hartely farewell. From the Courte at Greenwich, this 13th daie of Maye, 1605. Your lordſhipp's verie loving freind, SUFFOLKE [3]."

May 18. At a ſpecial Court, it is ordered that a Court of Aldermen ſhall be here holden upon Thurſday morning next; and that ſir William Herrick, knight, lately elected Alderman of the Ward of Farringdon Without, ſhall be warned peremptorily to be here at the ſame time, to take his oath for the execution of the ſaid place [4].

May 28. Sir William Herrick, knight, lately elected Alderman of the Ward of Farringdon Without, was here ſworn, for the due execution of the ſaid place accordingly [5].

Curia ſpecialis, die Mercurii, 29° die Maii, 1605.

At this Court, upon the humble ſuit of ſir William Herrick, knight, Alderman of the Ward of Farringdon Without, made to this Court, to be diſcharged of his ſaid place of Alderman: It is ordered (the rather in reſpect that the ſaid ſir William is the King's Majeſties ſworn ſervant, and therefore cannot ſo neceſſarily attend the daily ſervice of this City as behoveth, and for other conſiderations this Court moving) that the ſaid ſir William ſhall be diſcharged of his ſaid place of Alderman of the ſaid Ward, and of all other Wards within the City, for ever; ſo as he do preſently pay to Mr. Chamberlain, to the City's uſe, the ſum of ccclī. And thereupon ordered, that the Lord Mayor ſhall proceed, within the ſaid Ward, to the nomination of another Alderman in his place [6].

Jovis, ſexto die Junii, 1605.

It is ordered that ſir William Herrick, knight, late Alderman of the Ward of Farringdon Without, ſhall pay the ſum of ccclī. which he is to pay by a former order of this Court of the xxixth of May laſt, in form following; viz. at Midſummer 1606, one hundred pounds parcel thereof; and ſo yearly at Midſummer one hundred pounds, until the whole ccclī. ſhall be paid. And the ſaid ſir William to become bound for payment thereof accordingly [7].

June 10. Mr. Chamberlain, preſent in this Court, acknowledged himſelf to have received one obligation, wherein ſir William Herrick, knight, late Alderman, of the Ward of Farringdon Without, ſtandeth bound to the Mayor and commonalty and citizens of this city, for the payment of ccclī. to the City's uſe, for a fine for his diſcharge of his place of Alderman, according to a former order of this Court; with which bond Mr. Chamberlain chargeth himſelf [8].

Commune concilium tentum in camerâ Guihald' civitatis London', decimo die Junii, 1605, coram Thomâ Lowe, milite, majore, &c.

And it is further enacted, granted, and agreed, by authority aforeſaid, that whereas the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, at the humble ſuit and requeſt of ſir William Herrick, knight, late Alderman of the Ward of Farringdon Without, in reſpect that he is his Majeſty's ſworn ſervant, and of his daily attendance upon his Majeſty's ſervice in Court, whereby he cannot ſo conveniently attend the ſervice of this City as by oath and duty he is bound; as alſo for the ſum of three hundred pounds to be by him paid to the City's uſe; and for divers other cauſes the ſame Court moving; he ſhould be preſently diſcharged from the place of an Alderman within this City: That the ſaid ſir William Herrick, for the conſiderations aforeſaid, ſhall be likewiſe diſcharged and freed from being choſen to the office of Sherivaltie within this city and county of Middleſex for ever. SEBRIGHT [9].

Sir William Heyrick was a ſecond time returned to parliament for the borough of Leiceſter in October that year [10]; and received on this occaſion the following complimentary verſes:

"To the moſt venerable and honourably-minded knight, ſir William Heyrick, all joyes be multiplied in this and the world to come.

Welcome, good Knight, unto your native towne,
If ever any man were welcome here:
Leiſter is bound to ſett forth your renowne,
Loe your good deedes thereto doe makt appeare.
I, even I, have heard more of your worth,
And more a great deale, than I can declare,
Might I by written volumes ſett it forth.

Hee lives not now that e'er did half that good;
Even aged beadſmen ſhew itt night and day:
Yet this is not enough; the poor, that want their food,
Runne after yow, and for your coming pray.
In every churche the bells doe ſweetly ringe
Canticles for your ſake; the people ſinge
Kyrie Eliſon:—This from their hartes doth ſpringe.

Your good worſhipes poore countryman, in all due obſervance moſt humble, JOHN HOWE."

From the lord chamberlain, Thomas Howard earl of Suffolk [11], he had the following letter in 1607:

"Sir Wm Herick; when I firſt mooved you to lend mee a thowſand pownds, I did know that you had money, and I did preſume that you wanted no will to doe mee ſuch a kyndnes; but ſince that it hath fallen out, contrary to my expectacõns, that you have miſliked of the gentlemen I offred, and required ſuch men as if I were determined to labour to gett I need not bee beholdinge to you or your brother Bennett, for vppon ſuch bonds their is plenty of money enough to bee had ev̄y where without labour—theis gentlemen I have offered I know to bee ſufficient, and will be approved ſoe when many townſmen will turn bankerowts—I am reſolved to give no other; therefore ſend me your reſolution what you will doe. All the harme that I have taken is, you have made mee forfeit my word and bond, vppon aſſurance to have had this money; which I will ſalve as well as I can, and importune you no more. From Whitehall, this 19 of November 1607. Your freind, T. SUFFOLKE.

To my freind ſir William Herrick, Knight."

---

[1] Knight's General Roll of all the Knights Batchelors 1603—1616, &c.

[2] "At a common-hall, in room of ſir Henry Beaumont, of Gracedieu, deceaſed, there was choſen for a burgeſs ſir William Heyrick, knight." Records of the Corporation of Leiceſter, 1605.

[3] From a copy preſerved at Beaumanor.

[4] Repertory Lowe, N° 26, p. 27.

[5] Ibid. p. 20.

[6] Ibid. p. 16. b.

[7] Ibid. p. 25. b.

[8] Ibid. p. 26. b.

[9] Journal Lowe, N° 26, p. 349.

[10] See in vol. I. p. 345, under Newark Hoſpital, a letter dated April 29, 1621.

[11] At that time lord chamberlain of his majeſty's houſhold, and afterwards lord treaſurer; of whom ſee vol. II. p. 636. See his ſignature and ſeal, Plate XVIII. fig. 12.

And relative to him is the following letter from the earl of Dorſet, then lord treaſurer:

"Sir Henry Fanſhawe[1]; For that I knowe of mine owne knowledge that ſir Will'm Heyricke, knight, hath given . . . . . . (for ſo himſelfe made me ſaye) unto his Maj^{ie} when he entered into his ſervice; and for that he is alreadie aceaſed at the Court, and hath payd accordinge to his fee, and is but little diſpenced; I require you, uppon the certificates, to allowe them; which, as I have told him, is the onlie certificate that I name or doe paſſe for anie. And this man the rather, becauſe he dothe alſo perform a ſpeciall ſervice for his Ma^{tie}, which I maye not write.

30th of December, 1607. T. DORSET[2]."

In this year, ſir William Herrick obtained, jointly with Arthur Ingram[3], eſq. a grant of ſome lands in the town of Berkeley in Glouceſterſhire, which had belonged to the chantry of St. Andrew in that town[4]; divers tenements in the pariſh of St. Giles without Cripplegate[5], a tenement and three cottages in Panyer Alley[6], two tenements in the pariſh of Mary Magdalen in Old Fiſh-ſtreet, London; the free chapel called Throckington chapel[7], in the pariſh of Harrow on the Hill, Middleſex[8]; together with a very ample grant of lands, &c. in the counties of Devon, Warwick, Lincoln, York, Durham, Northumberland, Norfolk, Wilts, Derby, Oxford, and Bucks, and alſo in the town of Nottingham[9]; and in the next year he obtained a ſeparate grant of lands in Northamptonſhire[10].

July 13, 1609, he purchaſed New Park[11] of his brother-in-law ſir Thomas Bennett[12]. He bought alſo in that year the advowſon of Barrow, with the great and ſmall tithes[13]; and alſo the parſonage of Ruſhden in Northamptonſhire, on a fee-farm rent of £12. a year, and a farther penſion of 2*s.* a year out of the rectory; and in 1612 the manor of Carleton Curſon, at Eaſt Carleton, Norfolk, which he reſold to the Hobarts.

On the 6th of October, 1611, it is recorded that a report was made by ſir William Herrick, knt. Alexander Preſcott, and John Williams, to ſir Julius Cæſar, knt. then chancellor and under-treaſurer of the exchequer, on the utility of a Project touching the Furtherance of Importation of Gold and Silver.

July 28, 1616, king James, by letters patent under the great ſeal, gave to ſir William Heyrick and his heirs a new grant of free-warren in his manor or lordſhip of Beaumanor, Woodhouſe, Woodthorpe, Quorndon, Barrow, and Loughborough, with their rights, members, and appurtenances[14]; and the gratitude of ſir William to his Sovereign was ſoon after ſhewn by the loan of ſome large ſums, as appears by the following ſtatements under his own hand:

	£.	s.	d.
"Imprimis, the 24th of December, 1616, I lent unto the king's mãtie the ſome of £2500. for the which his mãtie hath given me aſſurance under the greate ſeale of England, to pay it me againe out of the Alienacõn and Haniper offices, with conſideration after x per cent. which aſſurance hath been made to others, but never broken but to me — — —	2500	0	0
"The 18th of March, 1616, I was intreated by the late lo. treſorer, by warrant to me directed, to lay downe £1500. to the lord Awbigney for 6 days, and of the firſt money which ſhould come into the receipt I ſhould pay myſelfe, which at their requeſt I did — — — —	1500	0	0
"Theſe two ſummes I have forborne theſe 3 years, which comes to for intereſt which I have payd x per cent.	1200	0	0
"I have owing me my pencõn uppon	162	0	0
"I have layed out in wallinge my houſe, and worke done by the king's workmen, which other tellors have been allowed in the like kind when they have layd out — —	115	0	0
The whole ſumme is — —	5477	10	0

"A Note of certayne ꝑticulers, which I moſt humbly offer to my Lord Treaſurer's favorable conſideration.

"Since my being tellor, I have lent his majeſtie diverſe greate ſums of mony gratis, which none of my fellowes ever did, to my loſſe and diſadvantage of at leaſt £3000. In the laſt benevolence, my fellowes gave but £20. apeece, and I was raiſed to £50. In the receipte of benevolence, my chardge hath beene more by £40,000. then any of the reſte, without fees taken for the receipte or iſſuinge therof; but, the tallie officers beinge already remembered, the tellors are yet forgotten. I have layde out aboute the mendinge and fittinge of the houſe belonginge to my office £160. which ſir John Bingley would not alowe me, wheras the reſt of the tellors had allowance in ther certificate of much more diſburſed by them in like caſe at the ſame time. Ther is due to myſelfe out of the excheq^{r}, at our Lady-day laſt, for arrerag̃s of my annual fee, granted to me for my longe ſervice, which was ever duly payde before, aboute £300. Ther is alſo owinge to me for almoſt 3 yeares arere of my part of the lord of Kellye's añuytie of £2000. ꝑ annum, granted out of the Cole farme. Laſtly, wheras I helde the moſt part of a ſmall lordſhip in ſocage tenure, and bought the reſt in fee-farme; by a miſtakinge of a clarke in drawing up the booke, the tenure of that peece paſt was in knight's ſervice, which his majeſtie is graciouſly pleaſed ſhal be reformed; noe mannor in England being holden by the ſame tenure, parte in ſocage and parte in knight's ſervice, nor any lands ſolde in fee-farme with any other then a tenure in ſocage reſerved. And yet ſuch is my miſfortune, that this little and juſt favour is not yet allowed me."

The following petitions he preſented to his Sovereign.

1. "To the Kinges moſt excellent Majeſtie.

"The humble peticõn of ſir Wm. Hericke, knt. one of your Maties tellers of yor Maties receipte, "Humblie ſheweth, that whereas in March 1616 there was to be paide to the lord Aubigney, by virtue of your ma^{ties} privie ſeale, the ſumme of £5000. for payment whereof the late Lord Trea^{r} and Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer did direct theire warrant, under both theire handes, unto ye tellors; at which time there was not ſo much money in the receipte by £1500. ſo that the Lord Trea^{r} and ſir John Bingley did very earneſtlie entreate yor peticioner to furniſh y^{e} ſaid ſumme of £1500. to the ſaid lord Aubigney, for his ſpedier diſpatch to attend on your Matie into Scotland; promiſing that your peticioner ſhould paie himſelf out of ye firſt moneyes of y^{r} Maties that came into the receipte (and have great thanks for the ſame); which at their requeſt hee did, and provided the ſame uppon his credite. Yet notwithſtandinge though y^{r} peticioner hath in all dutie dailie attended ye late Lord Tre^{r} and ſince y^{r} Commiſſioners, and ſued unto them for the ſame, he can get no allowance of his monie, having forborne y^{e} ſame, without conſideracion, three yeares and more, to his greate loſs.

---

[1] Then auditor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter.

[2] Thomas earl of Dorſet died, as he ſat at the council-table, April 19, 1608.

[3] A wealthy citizen of London, who was afterwards knighted. He purchaſed the manor of Temple Newſome, &c. in Yorkſhire, and was high ſheriff of that county in 1619. From him deſcended Henry Ingram, who, for his loyalty to Charles I. and II. was created viſcount Irwine, and baron Ingram of Irwine in the county of Ayr in Scotland. He married Frances daughter of Samuel Shepheard, eſq. of Exing in Suffolk, a lady of conſiderable fortune; by whom he had five daughters; but, dying without male iſſue, the title became extinct. One of theſe daughters is the preſent Mrs. Meynell; ſee p. 102.

[4] Rudder, p. 279.

[5] Theſe tenements in Cripplegate are now the property of St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, the benefaction of a Mr. Rawlins; the ſame probably whom we have recorded as the founder of Woodhouſe ſchool, p. 113.

[6] The houſe in Pater Noſter Row; ſee p. 113.

[7] Noticed in Bacon's Liber Regis as a capella deſtructa.

[8] From the original deed, preſerved at Beaumanor.

[9] 3 Pars Orig. 5 Jac. I. Rot. 47.

[10] 6 Pars Original. 6 Jac. I. Rot. 45.

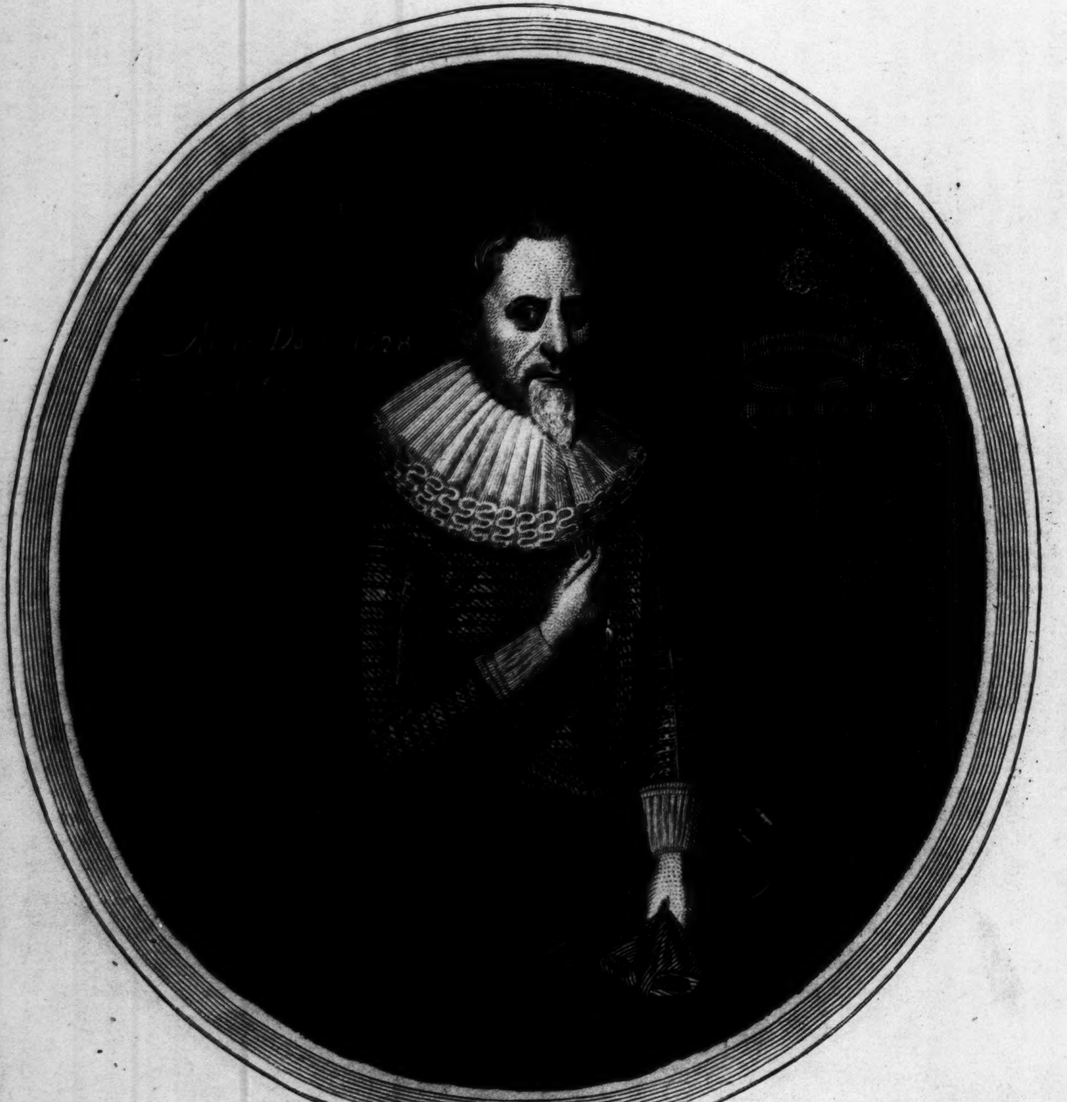
[11] See the Survey of New Park in vol. II. p. 635.

[12] Citizen and mercer of London, lord-mayor in 1603. Sir Thomas Bennett had bought it of ſir William Woodhouſe, one of the gentlemen of the king's privy chamber, who held it under a reverſionary leaſe granted in 1571 to Mr. Cobham. A ſurvey of New Park has been already printed in vol. II. p. *635.

[13] See p. 73.

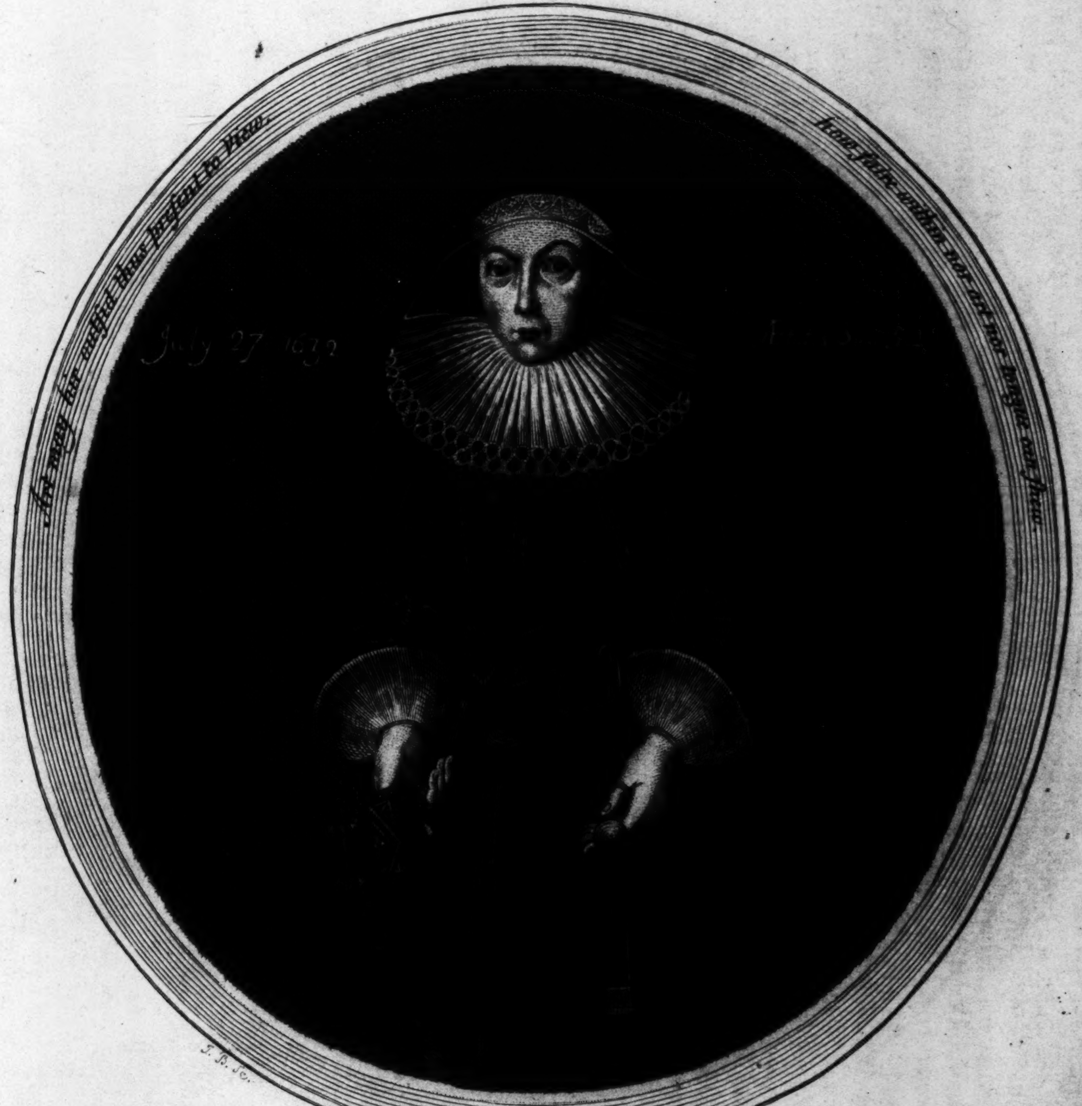
[14] 4 Pars Original. 14 Jac. I. This grant is alſo in fine preſervation at Beaumanor.

"And



Anno Do 1628

S^r. WILLIAM HERICKE.



Art may her outside thus present to View.
how faire within nor art nor tongue can shew.
July 27 1632
J. B. sc.

JOAN LADY HERICKE.

To JOHN HERRICK Esq. of BEAUMANOR, These PORTRAITS of his ANCESTORS are respectfully inscribed by J. NICHOLS; as a small Tribute of Gratitude, for his essential Services in the History of BARROW and its various HAMLETS.

"And foraſmuch as y^{r} peticioner did formerlie lend y^{r} Matie y^{e} ſume of £2500. of which hee hath hitherto had neither principall nor intereſt, & alſo provided this £1500. for which hee is now peticioner to y^{r} Matie, & merelie for the dutie & reſpect hee beareth to y^{r} Matie, & furtherance of your ſervice, havinge been an antient ſervant to y^{r} Matie, without ye hope of any benefit for ye loane, or forbearance of the ſame.

"It may therefore pleaſe y^{r} Matie to give direction, y^{t} your peti^{r} maie paie y^{e} ſaid ſomme of £1500. in his owne handes, and that allowance of y^{e} ſame maie bee given him, or to give ſuch other commands for the paiment thereof to your pet^{r} as y^{r} Matie ſhall thinck meete. And your pet^{r} &c."

2. "May it pleaſe yor moſt excellent Matie,

"About the 23^{d} of December, 1616, the Lord Treſ^{r}[1] ſent for me (ſir Wm. Heyricke, knt. y^{r} Maties ancient ſervant) and entreated me that as I had ev^{r} been found redy to doe yor Matie ſervice, ſoe I would then be a furtherance, by my owne example and my friends, to draw the citizens of London to lend the greater ſumes for the furniſhinge of y^{r} Matie into Scotland; and that, for preſident's ſake, I muſt by the next morninge provide 7 or £8000. for an urgent and preſſing ſervice, and proteſted to make bothe this and div^{rs} other my good ſervices knowne to yor Matie, whoe would give me thanks for the ſame: Whereupon I procured ſir Baptiſt Hicks and another friend[2] to joyne wth me, who, upon a night's warninge, tooke upp the ſome of £7500. upon our bonds, and paied the ſame the next day into the receipt; and, for ſecuryty of our mony, wee had the profits of the Hanaper and Alienacōn aſſigned under the greate ſeale of England, to be paied to us every terme, untill the ſaid ſome of £7500. with conſideracōn for forbearance of the ſame were fully ſatisfied; which ſecuritye att that tyme was of ſuche creditt that y^{r} Matie might att y^{r} pleaſure have borrowed £20,000. uppon them. But, ſince I took the ſame, which ys above three yeares agoe, I could never receive one penny either of the princypall or intereſt: neither hath Mr. Chauncellor of the Exchequer had any care of the creditt of yor Maties ſecuryty, which was then eſteemed to be the very beſt ſecuryty yor Grace could give; whereby yt ys to be feared that yf yor Matie ſhall ſtande in need to borrow any mony uppon the ſame or lyke ſecuritye, few or none will vent^{r} to lend any mony, ſeinge the greateſt p̱t of the beſt cittyzens have taken notize what ſmall accompt ys made of this ſecuritye.

"I humblye, therefore, beſeech yor Matie, ſeeinge that this ſervice, and others I have done ſince, were done for the love and reſpect I owe to yor Grace, and furtherance of your ſervice, that yor Matie will be pleaſed to give commandm^{t} to the Lords Commiſſ^{rs} to repay me my mony thus lent unto yor Matie, accordinge to the effect of my ſecuryty, that I may not ſinke under a greater burthen than I am hable to beare, being worſe dealt withall than any other man that ev^{r} took this ſecurity."

This is the language of an Engliſhman in the ſixteenth century to his Sovereign; the language of an honeſt repreſentative of the Borough of Leiceſter (who thought himſelf not juſtly treated) to his King. It accordingly produced the following anſwer:

"To our truſty and well-beloved ſervant, ſir William Heyricke, knight, and to all other our officers of our Receipt whom it may concerne.

"Whearas, &c. before our late journey into Scotland, by letters under our privie ſeale, bearing date the 13th of March, 1616, wee gave commandment unto our then Tea^{r} and Undertrea^{r}, forthwith to make payment unto our couſin and ſervant Eſmee Stewart lord Abigney of the ſome of £5000. out of ſuch moneys as ther did remain or ſhould after come into the Receipt of our Exchequer: whereof, by virtue of an order under the hands of our ſaid Trea^{r} and Undertrea^{r}, there was paid by our ſervant ſir Edward Carre, knight, one of the tellers of our receipt, the ſome of £1100. and by our ſervant ſir William Heyricke, knight, one of the tellers of our ſaid receipt, the ſome of £1000. and by Thomas Watſon, eſq. one other teller of our ſaid receipt, the ſome of £1400.; all which ſeveral ſomes were then allowed unto them uppon their ſeveral accompts. And whearas alſo the attendance of the ſaid lord Abigney uppon our perſon not permitting him to attend till more monie could come into our ſaid receipt, our ſaid trea^{r} did ſend unto y^{u} our ſaid ſervant ſir William Heyricke, to intreat you to diſburſe the remainder of the ſaid ſome of £5000. (being £1600.) unto the ſaid lord Abigney, promiſing that you ſhould have allowance of the ſaid ſome of £1500. out of the firſt monies which according to that value ſhould next come into y^{r} hands; and thereuppon did cauſe to be delivered unto you an order unto his our then Trea^{r} and our then Undertrea^{r} hands, grounded uppon our privie ſeale, for your imdemnitie; which notwithſtanding, noe allowance thereof hath yett been made unto y^{u}, by reaſon that, uppon the urgencie of our occaſions, our Commiſſiōns for our Treaſury have diſpoſed otherwiſe for our ſervice all ſuch monies as came into your hands, to y^{r} greate prejudice: foraſmuch as your ſervice in this behalf hath bin verie acceptable unto us, and we have commiſſeracion of y^{r} loſs and forbearance thereof this two years laſt paſt, having bin a continuall ſuitor without receiving any conſideracion for the ſame; we are therefore graciouſly pleaſed, and doe hereby authoriſe, will, and command, that y^{u} the ſaid ſir William Heyricke doe retaine and keepe to y^{r} owne uſe, out of ſuch of our treaſure as hereafter ſhall come into y^{r} office or cuſtodie, the ſome of £1500. in ſatisfaction of the ſaid ſome by y^{u} paid to the ſaid lord Abigney; and alſo that all o^{r} officers and miniſters of o^{r} receipt, whom it may concerne, doe give allowance and defalcacion unto you the ſaid ſir William Heyricke, uppon y^{r} accompt, of the ſaid ſume of £1500. by virtue of the ſaid order, ſyned as before ſaid by o^{r} ſaid late Trea^{t} and Undertrea^{r}, without expecting any nue order or other warrant from o^{r} now commiſſi^{rs}. And for ſoe doeing, this ſhall bee ſufficient warrant unto you and all o^{r} officers whom it may concerne."

"To the right hon^{ble} the Lord High Tr̃e^{r} of England[3].

"The humble petition of ſir William Heyricke, knt.

"Who humblie ſheweth, That whereas yor petitioner hath a fee or pention of £100. per annum during life, granted from his Matie, for ſervice done and to be done, wch was ever well paid, until your petitioner's being a ſuiter to the Lords Commiſſioners for a farr greater ſome lent by him to the King, who adviſed him to ſue for the greter, and let the pention reſt; whereby your petitioner is become ſome few years behinde; and foraſmuch as yor petitioner hath ben a greate looſer by the lone of much money lent unto his Matie without conſideration: It would therefore pleaſe yor Lõppe to give order for the arreare at ſuch time as it may moſt convenientlie be ſpared him, it being always paid out of his owne office according to his Maties grante. And yor petitioner, as in dutie bound, ſhall pray for yor Honor."

"The Earle of Kelley[4] to ſir Fulke Grevyll[5].

"Sir, Thoe I know that this is a very unpleaſing ſubject to intreate of you; yet I cannot but ſtill contenew my former requeſt in favour of ſir William Herike, a man that you know hes been alwayes reddye with his poore meanes to doe his Majeſtie the beſt ſervice he could; and at this very inſtant his Majeſtie has good ſomes of his in his hand. But that is not all: by his example ſome few did the lyke; but non of the Cittye was more foreward then he was. Lett me remember you, without offence, that his warrand, which hee has, paſt your own hand; and to contrary your own act is noe parte of your humore, if it be not the neceſſetye of the King's ſervice, which I will never intreate to the contrarie. Only thus muche lett me ſay to you, if at this tyme the King's ſervice cannot ſuffer the want of the monye, I thinke in reaſone and conſcience you ſhould take ſome ſuche courſe as the honeſt man ſhould not be altogether fruſtrat of his money; and the rather ſince it is an act of your own hand. If I have in this preſumed to ſaye more then in good manners I ſhould, I beſeeche you to pardone me, ſince it is out of my reſpect to you, and the pittye I have of the honeſt man, whoe perhaps may be in greatter diſtreſſe then you believe. Thus wiſhing you muche happines, I end; and remaines, yours affectionet to ſerve you, KELLEY.

---

[1] Thomas Howard earl of Suffolk; ſee p. 151.

[2] His other friend means ſir Paul Banninge.

[3] Sir Henry Montague, knt. lord chief juſtice of the king's bench 1616, was appointed lord high treaſurer Dec. 14, 1620, created baron Montague of Kimbolton and viſcount Mandeville, Dec. 19; earl of Mancheſter Feb. 5, 1625; lord privy-ſeal July 4, 1628; and died in November 1642. See his ſignature, Plate XXIV. 18.

[4] See his ſignature, Plate XXIV. 6.

[5] He had been treaſurer of the navy to queen Elizabeth and to king James; and was at that time chancellor of the Exchequer. See his ſignature, Plate XVIII. 25.

Newmarkett, the 11th February, 1619-20."

Feb. 16, 1619-20, ſir William Herrick obtained an order of council for the payment of £1500. to him, before any private perſon, to ſatisfy the like ſum which he had diſburſed out of his own money, at the earneſt inſtance of the then lord treaſurer of England, and by an order of ſir Fulk Grevile, chancellor of the Exchequer.

In 1620 ſir William Herrick was, for the third time, returned to parliament as a burgeſs for Leiceſter, together with ſir Richard Moryſon, then maſter of the ordnance in the Tower of London.

In a paper dated 1621, he thus re-ſtates his accompt:

The 23d of December, 1616, I lent unto his majeſtie, which I paid in to the receate, the ſome of — —	2500	0	0
Which I have forborne till the 25th of May, 1621, beinge 4 yers and 5 monthes, comes unto, after 10 per cent.	1104	5	0
Ther is likewiſe dewe unto me, for money payd the lord Awbigney, the ſome of — — — —	1000	0	0
Lent more unto his majeſty the 25th of May, 1621; the ſome of	3500	0	0
" Some totalis is — —	8104	5	0
I ame to be alowed intereſt for £7000. of this money till the 22d of September next, 1621, from the 25th of May, comes to, after 10 per cent.	226	0	0
Beinge 4 monnths, les 3 dayes.
Some totalis comes to —	8330	5	0
I forgot to baite 3 daiſe for intereſt of 7000 pounde.
But my lo. treſurer promiſed me ſome intereſt for the lo. Awbigney's money.
I ame to have ſecurite from ſir William Garraway for — —	8330	5	0
And ſir Baptiſt Hicks for —	10385	5	0
	18715	10	0
My ſome is juſt — —	8330	5	0
I have allredy aſſuerance to Mr. alderman Allen for £1000. for 4 monthes — — —	1033	6	8
Item, £600. to be paid at 4 months	630	0	0
I have bond for 500 at 3 months	512	10	0
So I have allredy bond for —	2175	16	8
I ame to have bond for more —	6164	8	4
Wherof I am to have bonds for ſo much — — — —	5926	3	4
And in the next to have —	234	5	0
	6164	8	4

A ſubſequent ſtatement of his debt runs thus:

Upon the Hanniper office, —	3604	3	4
Lord Awbigney, intereſt and principale — — — —	1600	0	0
Some is — — —	5204	3	4
Lent more in money the 25th of May, 1621, the ſome of —	3000	0	0
Some is — — —	8204	3	4
Which beeinge forborne till the laſt 26 September, 1621, is 4 monthes, comes to, after 10 per cent. —	273	6	8
Some total is — —	8477	10	0

The following may ſerve as a ſpecimen of a draft and receipt of that age:

"Sir William Garraway; I have occaſion to uſe foure or fyve hundered pounds in the morning. I pray you, yf you have it by you, ſend it me by this bearer, my clark; who ſhale geve his receat to you for the ſame till you pay the reſt. If you cannot furniſhe me with this ſome, then ſend me what you may; for I muſt maik up ſo much ellswhere this night. And ſo I leave you to the Lord. Your lovinge freind, Weſtminſter, 19 October, 1621. W. HEYRICKE.

I will ſend erly in the morninge to you for this money; and therfoure ſend me woord if it ſhal be reddy. W. H.

xx° die Octobris, 1621. Rec^{d} of ſir William Garway, knight, upon this note, the ſome of three hundred pounds, by me, William Herrike; and is for the uſe of ſir William Heyryke, being parte of a greater ſome due by bond. I ſay rec^{d} } iii^{c}lī.

W. HERICKE.

In the ſubſidy of 1622, he obtained this certificate:

"viii die Aprilis, 1622. Lodowicke, duke of Lenox, lord ſteward of his majeſties moſt honourable houſholde, of the noble order of the Garter knight, and Thomas Edmondes, knight, treſurer of the ſame, commiſſioners named and appointed, amongſt others, for the taxeinge and leavyinge of the ſecond payment of the ſecond ſubſidie graunted in the eighteenth yeare of his majeſtie's raigne, doe certifie the right honourable the lord high-treſurer of England, the barrons and officers of thexchequer, and all others to whome yt ſhall appertaine; that ſir William Herricke, knight, one of the officers of his majeſtie's jewel-houſe, beinge moſte reſiant and abidinge here at the Court in the time of taxation, and for the moſte parte of the yeare before, is vallued before us after the rate of twentie pounds in fee. In witnes wherof wee the ſaid commiſſioners have hereunto put our hands and ſeales, the daye and yeare abovewritten.

LENOX.

T. EDMONDES[1].

June 5, 1624, by a new patent from the crown, the lordſhip of Beaumanor, with free warren and all its appurtenances, was moſt amply confirmed to ſir William Herrick[2]; who now appears to have made this manſion his only home; living there, in elegant retirement, univerſally valued and eſteemed; and the following epiſtle ſhews that, as was the faſhion of the time, he occaſionally amuſed himſelf and his neighbours by dramatic interludes:

"The rare reporte of your worſhipes favoure, gentle acceptance, extrayordynary kyndnes, and moſt lyberall intertaynment, that yow have allwayſe ſhewed to your neyghbores, hath not onely wonne the hartes of your domeſticatted frends, but hath now drawne pore Amintas, even in the wayninge of his age, from the dounes, to come to preſente himſelf, and all the frewts of his forepaſſed youth, the lyvly ofspring of this aged ſheparde, a few ſylly boyes, to make ſuch ſporte this nyght in ſquare play, as ſhall in no ſorte be offencyve to yow, nor much hurtfull to them if fortune favoure them not; for they brynge not mountaynes of mony, but mould hilles gotten on mountaynes. I thought good, as my duty is, to acquynt your worſhipe with my intended purpoſe; and deſyre to know by this bearar how yow will accepte of me and my pore boyes, whoſe rudnes I hope yow will impute to my meane eſtate; for ſhepardes be no courtiers. Thus, with many good wiſhes, I attende your worſhipes pleaſure."

---

[1] See their ſignatures and ſeals in Plate XXIV. 9, 10.

[2] 4 Pars Original. 22 Jac. I.—The original of this grant is alſo preſerved at Beaumanor.

In 1626, in conſideration of his relinquiſhing the penſion which had been given to him from the crown, with all arrearages, he obtained for his ſon Richard the wardenſhip of Mancheſter College.

It appears to have been an old cuſtom for the principal tenants, to whom leaſes of lands were granted, to preſent New-year's gifts [1], as may be ſeen in the following paper, printed from ſir William Herrick's own hand-writing:

My tennaunts New-year's gifts, at Chriſtmas, 1633.

William Lowe, of Woodthorpe, 1 capone	0	0	1
Widowe Judgſon, 1 bottell muſkedyne, and 1 pound of corranns,	0	0	2
Nicholes Caudwell, 2 capons, 2 hams, 1 pullet, and a baſket of aples,
Dannyell Decon, 2 pullets,	0	0	2
Fukes, a capon and a hene,	0	0	2
Dalyon, 2 capons,	0	0	2
Gamble, 1 capon,	0	0	1
Melton, 1 capon,	0	0	1
Sculthorpe, 2 capons,	0	0	2
William Storrer, 2 capons,	0	0	2
Thomas Burbaidge, 2 capons,	0	0	2
William Boſs, of Quarne, a pigg,	0	0	1
Richard Raby, a quarter of veale,
Goodman Callis, 2 chickins,	0	0	2
Adrian Hall, a pullet,	0	0	1
Francis Burbidge, 2 capons,	0	0	2
William Fixts, a henne,	0	0	1
Wing Darker, 2 capons,	0	0	2
Antony Baull, aples and caiks,
John Smaley, 2 pullets,	0	0	2
Adrian Foules, 2 capons,	0	0	2
Francis Smaley, 1 pullet,	0	0	1
Edward Ratlyve, 1 capon,	0	0	1
John Alline of Mountſorrel, 1 turkey,	0	0	1
Kinge of Quorn, a henn,	0	0	1
Mary Browne, a baſket of 9 apples,
William Broadhurſt, a baſket of apples,
My daughter Heyrick, 3 collers of braune.
My ſonne Pight, a colar of braune, a chine of pork, puddings, and ſauſigis.
Mr. Cave, of Barrowe, 2 fat turkeys.
Francis Smalley, of Mountſorrel, 2 capons.
William Lylly, of Barrowe, a gooſe fat.
Robert Howey, a capon,	0	0	1
William Squier, a capon,	0	0	1
William Crumpe, a capon and a hen,	0	0	1
Mrs. Dickſon, a bottell of claret wine, and a caike from Loughborough,	0	0	2
Tallam, a hen,	0	0	1
John Broadhurſt, one bottell of claret wine	0	0	1
Richard Broadhurſt, 2 hens."

It appears by a decree in the Court of Exchequer [2], dated 11 May, 1650, that ſir William had been greatly plundered in the years 1644 and 1645, and that many of his papers and evidences had then been ſtolen. His fortune was alſo much impaired during that calamitous period, particularly by a purchaſe which he made during the time of the Commonwealth, which he was never able to get completed.

He died March 2, 1652-3 [3]; and was buried on the 8th in St. Martin's church at Leiceſter; where, againſt the North wall of the choir, his grave-ſtone ſtill remains, and this inſcription, though ſomewhat defaced:

"Hic ſepultum jacet corpus Gulielmi Herrick, de Beaumanor, in com. Leiceſtriæ, equitis aurati;
qui matrimonio junctus erat Joannæ May,
filiæ Ricardi May, de Mayfield, in com. Suſſexiæ, armigeri; ex quâ genuit 7 filios et 5 filias.
Tandem, anno Dñi 1652, Martii 2°, ætatis 96,
obdormuit in Domino."

At the top, Mors mihi lucrum.

Round about the ſtone, "Gulielmus, Robertus, Thomas, Henricus, Rogerus, Johannes, Elizabetha, Maria, Dorothea, Elizabetha. Domine, parce."

His picture [4] at Beaumanor exhibits him with a picked beard, a large ruff, and in a white ſatin doublet, which he uſed on Chriſtmas-day, attending queen Elizabeth on that feſtival. He wears a ſword; and over his dreſs hangs looſely a large black cloak. His plaited ruffles are cloſely turned back over his ſleeves. In one hand are his gloves; the other, elevated to his breaſt, holds the ſtrings and taſſels of his ruff. On one ſide, within a wreath, is the motto, "Sola ſupereminet Virtus;" on the other, "Anno Dom. 1628, ætatis ſuæ 66."

Lady Herrick is dreſſed in a cloſe black gown, richly ornamented with lace, and fine ruffles turned up cloſe over the ſleeves; a large twilled ruff; over her head a black hood, cloſely laced in front, thrown open, yet hiding her hair; a watch in one hand, in the other a prayer-book; and at her ſide hangs a feathered fan. This portrait is dated "July 27, 1632, ætatis ſuæ 54;

Art may hir outſid thus preſent to view,
How faire within no art or tongue can ſhew."

Of the time of this religious lady's death, or of the place of her interment, we find no memorial. Her youngeſt child was born in 1615; and in the year following, being then reſident in London as a town-houſe, and at Richmond as a ſummer retreat, ſhe wrote the following affectionate letter to her huſband, whom buſineſs had at that time called to Beaumanor:

"Sweet hart, I could not let ſo fet a meſſenjar pas me as hee did you. I houp you remember Mr. Votier's [5] Godli Uſe of Prayer everi morning and evining, with all your compani. As you love God, leave it not undone; it ſhall bring a bleſſing on you and yours. God knows hou ſhort our time ſhall be on earth, as wee ſee daly feareful exſamples to put us in mind of our laſt end. Mr. Wadup the goldſmith went to Breſtol well, and brought hom a ded corpſe; and one of our nebars at Richmond went out to milke her kine, as well as ever ſhe was in her life, and melke two kine, and ſodenly fell downe ded, and never ſpacke more. O God, grant we may ever be preparid, as living this houre, and dying the next! Sweet hart, a littel afore you went your journi, I tould you that I muſt nedſe take one into the hous to bring up the gerls, which you very wilenly conſented to that I ſhould have one at Michelmas; but ſo it is hapened, that ſhe that was with my ſiſter Hickes to bring up Bes Nowel [6] is com from my ſiſter, and will not ſtay, becaſe Bes Nowel is ſo headſtrong that ſhe cannot rule her. My ſiſter Hickes ſent me word of hur by ſir Gorge Write [7], how fet a woman ſhe was for me to breed up my gerls; and I knowing it of my own knoledge to be ſo, I houp you will not be angri with me for it: God, that knows my hart, knows I was never loufter to offend you in all my liefe than I have bine within this halfe yeare; and ſo I houpe ever I ſhall be. If you ſhould bord them forth, they would coſt you £14. a yeare at the leaſt, and ſave nothing at home; beſide, they will never be bred in Religion as at home, and weare out twiſe ſo many clothes as at home. All things conſidered, this is the beſt corſe. Mr. Voitier came to me, and tould me the pariſh [8] and hee would make you a fare pue afore my pue; but they hard you would goo away, and they would be louſt to make it for Mr. Willams. I wil'd them to goo forward with theare good intent. I houp in God you would never leave this hous while I did live; and I beſeche God I may never live to gooe out of it e'en from the bottom of my harte.

---

[1] That this was in general the antient practice, is evident from the exactneſs with which ſuch particulars are entered, as claims of right, in the Regiſter of the Abbey of Leiceſter.

[2] See before, p. 99.

[3] Letters of adminiſtration were granted that year to ſir Thomas Richardſon, baron of Cramond in the kingdom of Scotland.

[4] Both theſe are faithfully engraved by Mr. Baſire, Plate XXVIII. See his hand-writing, and Lady Herrick's, Plate XVIII. 1, 2.

[5] Daniel Votier, M. A. rector of St. Peter in Cheap. In 1623 was publiſhed, "A Catechiſm made by Mr. Daniel Votier, miniſter of God's Word."

[6] Daughter of Edward Noel viſcount Campden. The Peerage ſays ſhe married ſir Eraſmus de la Fontaine; but query, whether the name of ſir Eraſmus's lady was not Mary?

[7] Sir George Wright, of Richmond.

[8] This church was repaired in 1616.

Commend me to all our frends: I muſt not forgite my love to Will. Wee are all in helth. I leave you to his protection, who is abel to kepe you al.

Sweet hart, Mr. Teri[1] is in poſſeſſion in that offes at the Cuſtom-hous; but what my lord will have of him, he knoweth not yet. Your true and fathful wife tel death,

JOANE HERICKE.

From London, the 22 day of Auguſt [1616]."

All that we know of lady Herrick after this period is by a letter of her eldeſt ſon, April 26, 1619[2]; and another from her niece Julian Noel in 1621[2]; and that ſhe was 54 when her portrait was painted in 1632.

Of his family ſir William himſelf thus ſpeaks:

" Upon Thurſday the 6 day of May, 1596, I was married to my wife, in a church[3] at the lower end of Bow-lane; being the daughter of Richard May[4], of May in Surrey[5], eſquire, in the 38th year of Queen Elizabeth's reign; whom God grant long to reign over us. Much joy together! Amen. 1596.

1. " Upon Thurſday the 18th day of Auguſt, 1597, my wife was brought abead of a ſon at 1 o'clock afternoone in the day-time, whoſe name I purpoſe ſhall be William; Mr. William Skipworth[6] and my brother Baptiſt Hicks his godfathers, and Mrs. Dorrythy Wright the younger his godmother; whom I pray God to bleſs with lounge life, and make him a good man, and ſend us comfort of him, the 39th of this queen's reign. My nurſe muſt have of me 2*s*. 6*d*. a week. She dwells at Peterſham near Richmond.

2. " Wedneſday the 7th of February, 1598, and the 41ſt of the queen's reign, betwixt 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning, it pleaſed God to ſend me another ſon, who was chriſtened by the name of Robert[7]; my brother Robert Herick, my cozen Mr. Simyon Turner, and my ſiſter Hicks[8], godfathers and godmother; and chriſtened him the Wedneſday following, being St. Vallentin's day. God bleſs him! He is nurſed at Ham beyond Richmont. I muſt give 2*s*. 4*d*. a week for him.

3. " Sunday the 25th day of May, 1600, at 6 o'clock in the morninge, my wife was brought a-bead of a therd ſon[9], who was chriſtned the 8th of June in St. Foſter's pariſhe church in Foſter-lane; my brother Richard Aulſworth, and my brother Tho. Bennit, and Mrs. Waiſte, goſſips. He was nurſed at Highgayte, by Lylley, for 2*s*. 6*d*. a week."

4. " Monday the 3d of May, 1602, my wife was brought a-bed of a fourth ſon [Thomas], betwixt 12 and 1 o'clock in the morninge; Mr. Allderman Bennit, and Mr. Thomas Harriſon of Branford, and my mother Mrs. Mary Maye, his godfathers and godmother. He were nurſed at Peterſham at 2*s*. a week, lived not longe, but died there at nurſe, and buried in the church.

5. " Thurſday the 6th day of May, 1603, being the ſame day king James came firſt to London from Theobaulds to the Charter-houſe, about 8 o'clock in the evninge, my wife were brought abead of a daughter; Mrs. Elizabeth Blincket, and Mrs. Hudſon, and ſir David Foulis[10], goſſips, who named her Elizabeth; and were nurſed at Higaite at 2*s*. 6*d*. a week, but lived above a year, and dyed there, and were buried at St. Panker's church in the feeld by my cozen Toby.

6. " Thurſday 16th of Auguſt, 1604, my wife were brought a bead of a fifthe ſoune; ſir David Murray[11], Mr. John Spilman, and my lady Aſton[12], his goſſips. He is nurſed at Thiſſilworth, at 2*s*. 6*d*. a week. His name commanded by prince Henry to be Henry[13]; and ſir John Spillman wold need have him John. And that he was named Henry.

[7. Roger[14], the ſeventh child.]

8. " Upon Friday the 14th of January, 1612, betwixt 4 and 5 in the morning, my wife was brought abed of a ſon, whom I purpoſe to name John[15] Herick, after his grandfather. He is my ſeventh ſon. God bleſs him! He is nurſed at Hampton town by Hampton Court.

[9. Mary[14], who died in the 20th year of her age, was buried in St. Martin's church, Leiceſter.

10. Martha[14], married in 1634 to John Holmſtead, eſq. of Lynn Regis, in the county of Norfolk.

11. Dorothy[14], married to the Rev. James Lancaſhire, of Mancheſter, clerk, July 1, 1628.]

12. " Saturday the 15th day of April, 1615, my wife were brought abead of a gerle, about 4 o'clock in the morning; and were chriſtned the Tueſday fortnight after, being May-day; doctor Andrewſe[16], Mrs. Terry, and cozen John Hawſe's wife, goſſips. Her name Elizabeth, nurſed at Twicknam for 2*s*. 6*d*. a week with the clarke of the church." She was married to Beaumont Pight, eſq. of Beaumanor, June 25, 1633.

In his parliamentary capacity, ſir William Herrick was eminently uſeful to his conſtituents; who paid a proper reſpect to his talents and his intereſt, as will be ſeen by ſeveral letters from his elder brother Robert and ſeveral leading members of the Corporation, under the hiſtory of " Trinity Hoſpital[17]," to which he was alſo perſonally a benefactor.

William Heyrick, eſq. the eldeſt ſon of ſir William, was entered in 1613, under the tuition of Mr. Chriſtopher Wren[18], a gentleman commoner of St. John's College, Oxford; where his brother Richard was alſo entered in 1617. Two other of ſir William's ſons, Robert and Roger, were alſo entered at Chriſt Church in that univerſity. The attention of their parents to them all will be ſeen by ſeveral of the letters which accompany theſe memoirs, p. 161—166.

---

[1] Mr. John Terrie, who had an employment in the Cuſtom-houſe.

[2] See both theſe letters in p. 165. Lady Herrick is moſt reſpectfully mentioned in ſeveral of the early letters.

[3] St. Thomas the Apoſtle's; where Mr. Richard May, the lady's father, had reſided. He was a citizen and merchant taylor of London; and died Dec. 30, 1588, ſeiſed of the manors of Mid Lavant, Eaſt Lavant, and Weſt Lavant, in Suſſex; divers lands at Stifford's Clay, Grayes, and Thurrock, in Eſſex; a capital meſſuage in St. Thomas the Apoſtle, London; another in St. Mary Aldermary, and two houſes in the pariſh of St. John the Evangeliſt, Watling-ſtreet. Inq. at Eaſt Grinſted, 23 March, 30 Eliz. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. VI. (Harl. MSS. 410) p. 36.

[4] Nearly related to Thomas May, eſq. who in 1597 purchaſed Mayfield Place in Suſſex (formerly an archiepiſcopal palace, and afterwards the ſeat of the Greſhams) of Henry Nevil, of Billingbere, Berks. This gentleman was knighted at Greenwich July 3, 1603; and died in 1616. He was father to Thomas May, eſq. the celebrated poet and hiſtorian; by whom Mayfield was aliened from the family in 1617; his mother Joan May, and couſin Richard May, of Iſlington, gent. joining with him in the conveyance to John Baker, eſq. whoſe deſcendants have ever ſince enjoyed it. See the pedigree of the Mays under Sutton Cheynell.

[5] Mayfield in Suſſex (where the principal branch of the Mays was ſeated) is probably here intended.

[6] William Skipwith, afterwards ſir William Skipwith of Cotes near Preſtwould.

[7] He was entered at Chriſt Church, Oxford; where in 1615 he was reading " Flaminius Strada" and " Godwin's Antiquities." He was intended for the bar; and, in a deed, 20 Jac. is called " Robert Herrick, eſq. of Lincoln's Inn, co. Middleſex, and ſon of ſir William Herrick, knt." But, preferring the army to the dry ſtudies of the law, he was afterwards a lieutenant; and died at Weſel, April 12, 1639.

[8] Afterwards viſcounteſs Campden. See under Old Dalby.

[9] This ſon was Richard, afterwards the warden of Mancheſter; of whom ſome memoirs are given in p. 159.

[10] Cofferer to Henry and Charles, ſucceſſively princes of Wales.

[11] Of whom ſee hereafter, p. 165.

[12] Wife to ſir Roger Aſton, maſter of the great wardrobe to his majeſty. Sir William Herrick was his executor.

[13] Henry was a merchant abroad. In an affectionate letter from him, addreſſed " to my ever loveinge brother Mr. John Heyricke," dated June 28, 1653, and accompanied by a preſent of " a ſmall roll of tobac," he complains of the difficulties he was in on account of the wars; and requeſts to have a Sermon-book ſent him, as there was not a preacher in near 20 miles.

[14] Neither Roger, Mary, Martha, nor Dorothy, are mentioned in ſir William's paper. Roger was at Chriſt Church, Oxford, in 1624 and 1625, under the tutorage of Thomas Caſe, as appears by his quarterly bills, ſome of which I have ſeen. In 1630 he addreſſed a ſpirited remonſtrance to his father, in vindication of himſelf againſt the groundleſs calumny of ſome anonymous ſlanderer; ſee p. 165. What was his future ſituation in life we do not learn.

[15] John was alſo intended for the bar; but died in 1630.

[16] Richard Andrews, M. D.; of whom ſee p. 164.

[17] See vol. I. p. 341; vol. II. p. 625.

[18] Of whom ſee an account, and ſome of his letters, pp. 161, 162.

Mr. William Herrick, on quitting Oxford, preſented to his College a fine picture of the Holy Lamb (not now to be found there), with this inſcription:

"Ecce Agnus Dei.
Ex dono Gulielmi Herrick, filii Gulielmi Herrick, equitis, de Beaumanor, in comitatu Leiceſtriæ."

He was afterwards of the ſociety of Lincoln's-Inn; married, in 1623, Elizabeth, daughter of Humphrey Fox, of the city of London, eſq.; in 1633 was appointed by king Charles I. to repair the caſtle of Leiceſter, and place it in a proper ſtate of defence[1]. He ſucceeded to the patrimonial eſtate at Beaumanor; where, Feb. 9, 1661, he obtained a licence from archbiſhop Juxon, for himſelf, his wife, children, and four other invalids whom he might ſelect, (quatuor quibuſque aliis valetudinariis arbitrio elegendis ad menſam tuam invitandis) to eat meat during Lent. Volumus tamen quòd ſobriè id & frugaliter; cautè itidem & ad vitandum publicum ſcandalum (quoad fieri poſſit) tectè nec palam facias. There is a proviſo alſo that 6*s.* 8*d.* be paid to the poors' box of the pariſh[2]. He died Feb. 14, 1671, in his 74th year; his wife Oct. 27, 1683, aged 84; and they were both buried in Woodhouſe chapel. Their portraits are at Beaumanor. On his, "Anno Domini 1651, ætatis ſuæ 54;" on her's, "Ætatis ſuæ 50, anno Domini 1651."

They had iſſue one ſon, William; who married, in July 1649, Anne, eldeſt daughter of William Bainbrigge, of Lockington, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. (by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Gervas Pigott, of Thrumpton, in the county of Nottingham, eſq.) by whom he had iſſue three ſons and one daughter.

1. William; of whom hereafter.
2. John, of the Outwoods, in the pariſh of Loughborough, married Mary, daughter of Beaumont Pight, eſq. of Denton, in the county of Lincoln. He was buried in Woodhouſe chapel, June 17, 1724; where his wife was alſo buried Oct. 25, 1727, aged 60.
3. Benjamin Herrick, M. D. born June 1, 1655; died in 1720; leaving iſſue William-Bainbrigge Herrick (who died January 26, 1733) and one daughter.
4. Elizabeth, married to John Leveſley, eſq. of Belton, in the county of Leiceſter.

Mrs. Anne Herrick, their mother, died June 4, 1655, and was buried in Woodhouſe chapel; where, on a flat ſtone under the gallery, is this inſcription:

"Anne, the wife of William Herrick, of Beaumanor, eſq. and eldeſt daughter of William Bainbrigge, of Lockington, eſq. reſteth here."

And on a tablet over the communion-table is alſo the following memorial:

"Memoriæ Sacrum.
Reader, there lieth neare unto this ſtone
A faithfull, loyall, pious, tender one:
Faithfull to God, her huſband's loyal friende,
Who godly liv'd, and made a pious ende:
Tender unto her babes, ſhe did them love;
And though ſhee's dead, ſhe lives with Chriſt above.
Conjugæ amor caſtæ perennis eſt.
Immolitum eſt hoc ipſius amoris ergô
Junii ann. 1655."

By a ſecond marriage, March 30, 1657, with Frances daughter of William Milward[3], of Chilcote, in the county of Derby, eſq. (by his wife lady Chriſtian Tufton[4], youngeſt daughter of Nicholas firſt earl of Thanet) Mr. William Herrick had iſſue,

1. Thomas, who died June 5, 1682, aged 20; and was buried in Woodhouſe chapel.
2. Frances, died young.
3. Mary, baptized Sept. 14, 1665, married, in 1696, to William Lucas, of the county of Suſſex, eſq.
4. Chriſtian, baptized Feb. 8, 1666, married to Clifton Tomſon, a cornet of horſe.

Their father died Aug. 10, 1693, aged 69; and was buried in Quorn church.

That in his days the cuſtom of New-year's gifts from the copyhold tenants was not forgotten, appears by the following memorandum:

"New-year's Gifts, New-year's day, January 1688.

Mr. Wood, of Woodhouſe, a fat calf and a ſide of mutton, and half a pound of tobacco.
Katharine Squire, a cake.
Henry Marſhall, a cake.
John Branſon, a couple of hens.
Roger Wilſon, a couple of hens.
John Goodman, a cake.

Woodthorpe.
Richard Ireland, gent. a couple of hens.
Thomas Bennet, a couple of hens.
Richard Smith, a couple of hens.
John Franks, a cake.

Loughborough.
Mr. Richard Wildman, a pound of tobacco.
Frances Newberrey, a turkey.

Quorne.
John Wilſon, a hen.

Whitwick.
Sarah Chapman, a cake."

From William his eldeſt ſon, who married Dorothy, daughter of James Wootton, eſq. of Weſton, in Derbyſhire, we have in 1688 the following particulars:

"Sir William Heyricke, knight, of Beaumanor, in the county of Leiceſter, died at Beaumanor when he was 96 years of age. He lived to ſee,

William Herricke, of Beaumanor, eſq. his ſon; and his ſon's ſon,

William Heyricke, of Beaumanor, eſq.; and his ſon's ſon's ſon, William Herricke, of Beaumanor, eſq. yet living, aged 37 years.

"Theſe four William Herrickes did frequently meet together in the great chamber at Beaumanor. It was the youngeſt that did write this account; and I was, when ſir William Herricke dyed, three or four years old; and I have had three children born at my manor of Beaumanor.

The firſt was a daughter, named Elizabeth Herricke, born the one-and-thirtieth day of March, 1684; my father William Herricke, of Beaumanor, eſq. godfather, and my ſiſter Mary Herricke, my brother John Herricke's wife, and my ſiſter Mary Herricke, unmarried, godmothers.

"Then my ſon William Herricke, born the 29th of September, Michaelmas-day, 1685; my father, William Herricke, eſq. and my brother John Herricke of Gerendon, godfathers, and my ſiſter Chriſtian Herricke, unmarried, godmother. My ſon dyed the 29th of October, 1686, aged 13 months.

"My daughter Anne Herricke was born July 22, 1687; and was chriſtened Auguſt the 2d, in the great chamber; my father godfather, and my own ſiſter Leveſley, and my wife's own ſiſter Elizabeth Figuens, godmothers. WILLIAM HERRICKE, 1687."

This gentleman was an attentive obſerver of the works of Nature; and ſeveral philoſophical remarks occur, amongſt domeſtic entries, in his various memorandum books. For example,

"Tueſday, May 12, 1696. A great flood of water that day at Beaumanor, the like was never known in my time before. It began to rain betwixt eleven and twelve o'clock in the forenoon, and thundered and lightened very much; and the water came ſo extraordinary faſt off from the Foreſt-hills, that the brooks could not contain the waters within them; and it came down the milking yard, and through the great gates into the yard all the breadth of the gates, and ran into the great moat, and into the back-moat over the banks, as if it had been at a mill-ware, and overfloated all the yard, and upon the two bridges of the moat. Some men went out, when they waded up to their knees, and raiſed the planks upon the bridge, coming into the houſe, and ſome of them ſwam away with the water; and the water came through the great gates into the court-yard, and all over the hall, parlour, pantry, kitchen, larders, and cellars; that the hogſheads ſwam out of the cellar to the hall-door; and the people went into theſe rooms up to the knees. The water was ſo high in the moat, that the water ran out again quite over the bank in the yard, and quite through the great gates into the lane; and all the meadows called The Dams, below the houſe, were covered with water to the great bank in the lane. And this flood came twice over the houſe that day in four hours time."

---

[1] His proceedings in this employ will be found in the Firſt Volume, under the hiſtory of the Caſtle of Leiceſter.

[2] From the original licence, preſerved at Beaumanor.

[3] Son and heir of ſir Thomas Milward, the judge, of Eaton, co. Derby.

[4] It is not certain whether it was this lady, or ſome other of the ſame name, whoſe loyalty had given offence to the parliamentary uſurpers; but, in the Journals of the Houſe of Commons, June 13, 1649 (vol. VI. p. 231), is noticed "a pardon for Elizabeth Herrick."

Again, "Thurſday, July 23, 1696. About a quarter of an hour before nine o'clock at night, as I was walking in the lane, I ſaw full Weſt, juſt over Hanging-Stone Hill in the Foreſt, in the ſky, juſt like a ſcythe bended in the back, and the edge hollowed like a ſcythe, the ſky very clear, and no clouds, and about the length of a ſcythe; it was of the colour of flame; but the full length I could not ſee, the hills hindering me[1]."

He died Dec. 5, 1705, aged 55; and was buried in Woodhouſe chapel, with this epitaph:

"Here lieth interred the body of William Herrick, of Beaumanor, eſq.
great grandſon of ſir William Herrick, knt.
who departed this life the 5th day of December,
A. D. 1705."

Dorothy, his widow, ſurvived till 1749, when ſhe died July 7, at the age of 100. She was alſo buried, but without any epitaph, in Woodhouſe chapel.

Good pictures of both are at Beaumanor.

Of their three children mentioned above,

1. Elizabeth, was married to Robert Bunney, gent. She died Jan. 21, 1745; and was buried in Woodhouſe chapel. They had one daughter, who died unmarried.

2. William, died Oct. 29, 1686.

3. Anne, died unmarried Jan. 22, 1759; and was buried in Woodhouſe chapel.

They had alſo three other children:

4. William, born July 15, 1689; of whom hereafter.

5. John, born July 31, 1691, married Sept. 25, 1715, Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Samuel Marſhall, of Burton on the Woulds, in the county of Leiceſter, gent. and widow of ——— Thirnby, of Beaumont Leys. He died Nov. 1, 1760, aged 68; and Elizabeth his wife Jan. 27, 1757, aged 75; and were both buried in Barrow church[2]. They had two ſons and two daughters, all deceaſed.

6. Thomas, born Jan. 7, 1693: firſt married, in June 1720, to Martha, daughter of Thomas Noble, eſq. (who repreſented the borough of Leiceſter in parliament in 1719); ſecondly, 1724, to Katharine, daughter of Robert Bakewell[3], of Swebſton, eſq. and by the laſt lady (who died in 1730) had iſſue, 1. William Herrick, of Knighton, eſq. who married, April 1766, Sarah, daughter of Philip Bamford, gent. of Bamford, in Lancaſhire, and has no iſſue. 2. Katherine, married to Richard Dyott, of Freeford-hall, co. Stafford, eſq. by whom ſhe has had three ſons and ſeven daughters. Mr. Thomas Herrick married, thirdly, Elizabeth, daughter of James Winſtanley, of Braunſton, near Leiceſter, eſq. who repreſented that borough in ſeveral parliaments, by whom he had no iſſue. He died Dec. 10, 1766, aged 73; his wife, Jan. 10, 1757; and were both buried in St. Martin's church[4], Leiceſter.

William, the eldeſt ſurviving ſon, married, March 3, 1740, Lucy, daughter of John Gage[5], of Bentley-park, in the county of Suſſex, eſq. He ſerved the office of high-ſheriff for the county in 1753; and died Sept. 27, 1773, in the 85th year of his age. Lucy his wife died March 25, 1778, aged 64. Good pictures of both are at Beaumanor. They were buried in Woodhouſe chapel, where an elegant marble monument[6] is erected, with the following arms and inſcription:

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Herrick; 2. Argent, a chevron Sable between three harts charged with as many eſtoiles Or; on a chief Gules, three cinquefoils of the field Bond; 3. Argent, a chevron embattled between three battle-axes erect Sable, Bainbrigge. On an eſcutcheon of pretence, Quarterly, 1. Gage; 2. Argent, an eagle diſplayed Sable, Sudgrove; 3. Azure, a ſun in ſplendour Or, St. Clere; 4. Azure, three ſaltires humette, between two bendlets Argent, Loveyne; 5. Gules, three roſes Argent; on a chief of the ſecond three roſes of the laſt, ...; 6. Argent, two bars; and on a chief Sable three ſwans of the firſt, Cæſar of Hertfordſhire; 7. Gules, three creſcents Argent, Heames; 8. Gules, a chevron Vaire, between three ducal coronets Or, Mayo; 9. Argent, on a bend Azure, a croſs croſslet fitchée Or, Clarke.

At the four corners of the monuments:

1. Herrick; impaling, Gules, a feſs between eight billets Or, May.

2. Herrick; impaling, Or, a chevron Gules, between foxes' heads eraſed Gules; Fox.

3. Herrick; impaling, Ermine, on a feſs Gules three bezants; Milward.

4. Herrick; impaling, Gules, three birds Argent; Wooton.

"Near this place lie the Remains
of
William Herrick, Eſq. of Beaumanor-Park, whoſe Anceſtors were ſeated in this County in the Eleventh Century.
He was the Fourth Heir Male in ſucceſſion from Sir William Hericke, Knight,
(Ambaſſador from Queen Elizabeth to the Porte;
One of the Tellers of the Exchequer, &c.
in the Reign of King James the Firſt, and, in three[7] Seſſions of Parliament,
a Repreſentative for the Borough of Leiceſter.)
By a happy Marriage, in 1740, with Lucy the Daughter of John Gage, of Bentley-Park, in the County of Suſſex, Eſq.
(an immediate Deſcendant of Sir John Gage, of Firle, in the ſaid County, Knight of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter, &c.)
he had iſſue three Sons and three Daughters;
four of whom are now living:
Lucy, William, John, and Thomas-Bainbrigge.
He died September 27, 1773, aged 84.
Lucy his wife died March 25, 1778, aged 64.
Thoſe amiable qualities, which during a long courſe of years contributed to the completion of domeſtic felicity, rendered their union perfectly happy;
and their good and benevolent diſpoſitions made their loſs ſincerely regretted.
Their eldeſt ſon,
William Herrick, of Beaumanor, Eſq.
as a teſtimony of reſpect and filial affection,
erected this monument
in commemoration of their Worth and Virtues."

Their children were,

1. Lucy, born Feb. 20, 1741; married, in March 1768, to Richard Gildart, of Norton Hall, in the county of Stafford, eſq. by whom ſhe has had two daughters, who both died infants; and one ſon, Richard, born in Southampton-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, April 16, 1772; ſome time a gentleman commoner of Univerſity College, Oxford; and now in the army.

2. Dorothy, baptized Dec. 27, 1745, died an infant; buried in Woodhouſe chapel, Sept. 17, 1745.

3. Dorothy, died an infant, June 9, 1747.

4. William, born Dec. 14, 1745; baptized March 4, 1745-6; ſerved the office of high-ſheriff for the county in 1786; and married, in 1789, Sarah Stokes, of Woodhouſe.

5. John, born Nov. 9, baptized Nov. 12, 1749; and ſome time of the Middle Temple, London.

---

[1] This was probably an Aurora Borealis.

[2] See their epitaphs, under Barrow, p. 76; and alſo under Houghton, vol. II. p. 614, for their daughter Anne, wife of the Rev. George Coulton.

[3] From whom the late Recorder of Leiceſter of that name deſcended.

[4] Where ſee their epitaphs.

[5] The laſt male ſurvivor of that branch of the family; and an immediate deſcendant of ſir John Gage, knight of the Garter in the reign of king Henry VIII. anceſtor of the preſent lord Gage. See p. 149.

[6] See an engraving of this monument in Plate XVIII.

[7] In the years 1601, 1605, and 1620.

6. Thomas-Bainbrigge, born Nov. 23. baptized Dec. 8, 1754; of the Society of Gray's Inn; married Auguſt 15, 1793, Mary, only daughter of James Perry, of Eardſley Park, in the county of Hereford, eſq. by whom he has three children.

In Plate XVIII. the ſignatures, 1. 2. are thoſe of ſir William Herrick and his Lady; 3. 4. 5. 6. four of their ſons; William [1], Robert [2], Richard [3], and Henry [4]; 7. their grandſon William [5]; 8. Nicholas [6], ſon of Nicholas Herrick of London; 9. Thomas' Heyricke [7];

10. and 11. are from a bond given, in 1725, to John Weſtley, of the Biſhop's Fee, in the Borough of Leiceſter, for performance of certain articles of agreement relative to the rebuilding of Beaumanor.

12. Thomas earl of Suffolk [8];
13. Robert earl of Saliſbury [9];
14. Robert earl of Suſſex [10];
15, 16, 17, Henry Hobart [11], H. Winche [11], Guil. Bromley [11], three Judges;
18. Adrian Stocks [12];
19. Frances dutcheſs of Suffolk [12];
20. William Stocks [12];
21. G. Cant' (Archbiſhop Abbot);
22. Francis Verulam, Canc';
23. L. Elien' (Lancelot Andrews, Biſhop of Ely);
24. Robert Naunton [13];
25. Sir Fulke Grevile;
26. Sir Julius Cæſar [14];
27. Sir Edward Coke, lord chief juſtice [15];
28. Sir Walter Mildmay [16];
29. Guil. Laud, præſes (William Laud, preſident of St. John's [17]);
30. Chriſtopher Wren [18];
31. George Belgrave [19];
32. Jo. Berkeley [20].
33. William Herrick, who died in 1705.

Some other ſignatures (in Plate XXIV.) will be deſcribed in p. 166.

RICHARD HEYRICK [21], third ſon of ſir William, was entered a commoner of St. John's College, Oxford, in 1617; where he took the degree of B. A. Oct. 19, 1619; of M. A. June 26, 1622; and was admitted to a fellowſhip of All Souls, Jan. 14, 1624-5, on the following eſpecial recommendation of king James.

"To the warden and fellows of All Souls, Oxon.

"Truſty and well-beloved, wee greet you well. Whereas humble ſuit hath been made unto us by our ſervant ſir William Heyrick, knight, in the behalf of his ſonne Richard Heyrick, bachelor of arts, that wee would be pleaſed by our effectual letters to recommend him unto you for a fellowſhip in that your Colledge at your next election, in the roome and place of one Say, lately deceaſed: Foraſmuch as wee are well informed, from the Preſident and Fellows of St. John's Colledge, where he is a member, as well of his honeſt converſation and ſoundneſs in religion, as of his ſufficiency in learning, have thought fitt to condeſcend to that ſo reaſonable a requeſt of our ſaid ſervant, whoſe long and faithfull ſervice wee ſo well accept of, as that wee are graciouſly inclyned to have ſome fruit and effect thereof extend to his ſonne; and therefore, as wee are ready to gratify our ſo ancient ſervant for the good of his ſonne, ſo do wee expect accordingly as much readines in you to performe for our ſake what wee do now in his behalf requeſt of you, that, at your next election of Fellows, you will not faile without delay to chuſe and elect him the ſaid Richard Heyrick into the place of a Fellow of that your Houſe, in the roome of the ſaid Say, deceaſed, and to ſuffer him to enjoy all ſuch benefitt as is and ſhall be incident to his ſaid fellowſhipp; which your conformity to this our requeſt wee ſhall take in good part, and be ready to gratify you upon any your juſt occaſions to uſe our favour. Given under our ſignett, &c."

He afterwards had the rectory of North-Repps in the county of Norfolk; and in 1626 obtained the reverſion of the wardenſhip of Chriſt's college in Mancheſter (then worth £700. a year) on the recommendation of archbiſhop Laud, and in conſideration of his father's faithful ſervices, and relinquiſhing a penſion, as appears from the following authentic documents:

1. "To the King's moſt exelent Ma^{te}.

The humble petition of ſir William Heyrick, knight, your Ma^{tes} faytherʼs auntient ſarvaunte,

"Humbly ſheweth, That yor petitioner havinge manny yers ſerved yor Ma^{tes} Royall Father befoure his happi coming into England and ſince, and in that time, at the requeſt of the then Lo. Treſurer and others, did taik up graite ſoms of monny to do his ſaid Matie ſervice; wich, beinge not paid again of a lounge time after, becaime a graite los and hinderaunce unto yor petitioner allmoſt to his undoinge; and ther beinge yet deue unto yor petitioner a graite ſome of monny, and alſo a pention of £100. per ann. wich hath beene unpaid of a loung time by reſon of yor Ma^{ts} graite occations, he cannot get any ꝑte therof, ſo that he is not able to do for his children as otherwaiſe he could: He moſt humbly beſecyeth yor Ma^{ty}, in reſpeckt of the p̃miſis, to be grati^{s} pleſed to beſtoe the reverſion of the gardenſhip of a colledg in Mauncheſter upon his ſonne Richard Heyricke, a fellowe of All Souls in Oxenford, and M^{r} of Artes of ſome 6 yers ſtandinge, after the deſeace of ſir Richard Murrey [22], k^{t}. who hath it by pattent duringe lyfe, graunted the 6th yere of yor Ma^{tes} laite father's raigne: And yor petitioner, as in dutie he is bound, ſhall ever pray for yor Ma^{ts} lounge and happy raigne over us."

2. "At the Couert at Whithall, 14 Nov^{r}, 1626. His Ma^{te}, beinge informed that the petitioner is content to relinckquiſh both his pention and arearidge, is gratiouſely pleſed to graunt him his requeſt, if the Chaunceſelor of the Duchy, to whom the ſame is refered, ſhall ſo thinck fitt; who is to geve orders for a book to be draune for his Ma^{tes} royall ſignet accordingly. RALPH FREEMAN."

3. "According to his Ma^{tes} gratious pleſure ſignified in favor of the petitioner's ſeute, I have conſidered thereof, and think his requeſt very reſonable; therfore deſier Mr. Atorney Generaule to drawe a book for his Ma^{tes} ſigniture for the graunt of the place deſiered, and to take a ſurrender of the pention and the arearigis to his Ma^{tes} uſe; for wich this ſhal be his warraunte, 17 Novemb. 1626. HOUMPHREY MAYE [23]."

4. "May it pleaſe your moſt exelent Matie.

"This containth a graunte from yor Ma^{tes} unto Richard Heyrick, M^{r} of Arts, of the reverſion of the

---

[1] See p. 156; and ſeveral of his letters, pp. 161, 162.

[2] See p. 156: and one of his letters in p. 164.

[3] Afterwards Warden of Mancheſter.

[4] See p. 156.

[5] Of whom ſee p. 157.

[6] From a receipt for 264*l.* 8*s.* which (with £160. paid him before by ſir William Herrick) was in full of the patrimony left him by his father. See an account of him, vol. II. p. 632.

[7] Son of the Warden of Mancheſter.

[8] See p. 151.

[9] From an original letter.

[10] See one of his letters, vol. II. p. 636*, requeſting payment of money from the Exchequer; for which he promiſes lady Herrick a New-year's gift worth £20.

[11] From original receipts for money paid to them as Judges, from 1617 to 1620, for expences in the Midland Circuit.

[12] See pp. 144, 145.

[13] Sir Robert Naunton, knt. principal ſecretary of ſtate. See in Gent. Mag. vol. LVI. p. 341, his remarkable epitaph at Letheringham in Suffolk (a church now deſtroyed); of which I have the original braſs in perfect preſervation.

[14] Maſter of the Rolls; a perſon of great gravity and integrity, and of that prodigious bounty to all of worth, or in want, that he might have been taken for almoner-general to the nation. (Echard, p. 460.) He printed a Catalogue of the books, parchments, and papers, belonging to the court of requeſts, in 4to, of ſingular uſe to Antiquaries, but now almoſt as ſcarce as MSS. themſelves. Peck, Deſiderata Curioſa, Book XIV. p. 527.

[15] From 21, to 27, are from an order to ſir William Herrick to pay £25. (parcel of his yearly allowance) to Edward Sidenham, one of his Majeſty's pages, Sept. 30, 1618.

[16] See a letter of his, p. 65.

[17] Afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury; ſee a letter of his, p. 163; and an account of him under Ibſtock.

[18] See ſeveral of his letters, pp. 162, 163.

[19] Sir George Belgrave; ſee p. 146.

[20] John Berkeley, of London, gentleman, is from a deed dated 8 July, 40 Eliz.

[21] See his hand-writing to a ſchool-exerciſe, 1616, Plate XVIII. 5.

[22] Richard Murrey, D. D. rector of Stopford, and dean of St. Buriens in Cornwall.

[23] See pp. 150. 165.

Wardenſhip of Mauncheſter Colledge, after the death of ſir Richard Murry.

"This is graunted at the humble ſeute of ſir William Heyrick, k^{t}. in conſideration of ſervice, and of the ſurrender of a pention of £100. per annum and the areariges thereof, ſignifyed to be your Ma^{tes} pleſure by Mr. Chaunſeler of the Duchy."

On a vacancy in 1635 the following petition occurs:

5. "To the King's moſt excellent Majeſtie.

"The humble petition of Richard Heyrick, clerk,

"Moſt humbly ſheweth, that whereas your Majeſtie's petitioner's father, of famous memory, had a debte of £362. and other ſummes owinge unto him from his ſayd late Majeſtie, and did appointe the ſame unto your petitioner, beeinge a younger ſonne, for his portion; it hath pleaſed your Majeſtie, in your gracious remembrance of the ſervice of your petitioner's father unto your Majeſtie's royal father, and for a proviſion of mayntenance for your petitioner, inſtead of the ſaid intended portion, att the humble ſuite of ſir Humphrey Maye, bart. late Chancellor of your Majeſtie's dutchy, your petitioner's uncle, to graunt, under your Highnes greate ſeale of England, to your petitioner, the wardenſhipp of the perpetual Colledge of Chriſte in Mancheſter, when next it ſhould come into your Majeſtie's hands and diſpoſinge. Your petitioner humbly ſheweth the place is now void, by the deprivation of Doctor Murrey, late warden.

"Your humble petitioner and moſt loyall ſubjecte moſt humbly ſubmitteth himſelfe to your Majeſtie's moſt princely grace, moſt humbly prayinge that your petitioner may enjoye the benefitt of your Majeſtie's royall graunte, accordinge to the effect and purporte thereof, and accordinge to your Majeſtie's moſt gracious intencions, in ſuch manner as ſhall ſeme beſt in your princely wiſdome. And your petitioner ſhall, accordinge to his bounden duty, daily praye for your Majeſtie's life and happy raigne."

This application was of courſe attended with ſucceſs: but the firſt thing that the new Warden and his fellows had to do was to repair the ruinous part of the choir[1]; which they did by renewing all their leaſes, and giving the fines wholly to that uſe; whereby the middle part with both ſide ailes were new roofed, battled, and adorned with pinnacles, in 1638[2]. Yet they enjoyed it not long; the great rebellion ſoon after breaking out, wherein the College were diſſolved, the members turned out, the revenues ſequeſtered, the chapter-houſe and cheſt both broke open, and their writings ſeized and carried away by colonel Birch, of Birch-place, a near neighbour aud pariſhioner. However the Warden, complying with the prevailing party, was permitted to ſtay there as preacher to the town, with a ſalary of £100. a year[3]; and ſo continued till the return of King Charles. In 1659 he took an active part in the proceedings deſcribed in a pamphlet, called "The Cenſures of the Church revived, in the Defence of a ſhort paper publiſhed by the firſt Claſſis within the Province of Lancaſhire in the ſeveral Claſſes belonging to their own Aſſociation; but ſince printed without their privity or conſent." And in 1660 he was again reſtored to the wardenſhip (though againſt the grain of the Court, who ſtrongly urged the King to beſtow it on Dr. Woolley), and was kept in by the power and intereſt of the earl of Mancheſter, then lord chamberlain. He continued warden till his death, Aug. 6, 1667; and was buried near the altar, on the North ſide of the choir[4];" where, Wood tells us, "a comely monument was put over his grave at the charge of Anna-Maria his relict, with the following inſcription[5], by his antient and entire friend Thomas Caſe, a London miniſter, who had been intimately acquainted with him whilſt a ſtudent at Oxford:

Arms: 1. Herrick; with a creſcent for difference; 2 Herrick; impaling, Per pale and per feſs dancette . . . .

"SISTE, VIATOR; MORÆ PRETIUM EST.
Sub eodem cippo cum venerabili HUNTINGDONO, primo hujus Collegii Cuſtode, jacet
Decimusquartus ab eo ſucceſſor RICARDUS HEYRICK,
Gulielmi Heyrick, equitis aurati, filius,
Collegii Omnium Animarum apud Oxonienſes
Socius olim ſtudioſiſſimus;
Eccleſiæ de North-Reps, in agro Norfolcienſi, deinde Paſtor fidiſſimus;
hujuſce denique Collegii per triginta duos annos (Multa alia ultro oblata beneficia averſatus, hâc ſolâ dignitate contentus)
Cuſtos ſive Guardianus vigilantiſſimus.
Qui
judicium ſolidum, cum ingenio acutiſſimo, ſingularem zelum, cum prudentiâ eximiâ, gravitatem ſummam, cum egregiâ morum ſuavitate, generis nobilitatem, nominis celebritatem, & quæcumque minores animos inflare ſolent, cum humilitate mirâ fœliciſſimè temperavit.
Infœlices ſui ſeculi errores non effugit modò, ſed & ſtrenuè
fugavit; paci inter omnes pios ſuos, pariter ac vicinos, conciliandæ pro ſummâ ſapientiâ ſuâ, eo ſucceſſu inſudavit, ut inter non infrequentes diſſenſus, nulla vel minima eſſet diſſenſio.
Qui, poſtquam ætati ſuæ inſervivit, Dei conſilio, obdormivit,
Aug. 6to, anno Dñi 1667,
ætatis ſuæ 67.

ABI, VIATOR; ET ÆMULARE.
Hac, gratiâ ab Executrice
Annâ-Mariâ conjuge chariſſimâ prius impetratâ,
flens poſuit Thomas Caſe, Σύγχρονος in Academiâ,
ex Æde X'ti alumnus,
Artium Mag. Verbi Dei
apud Trinobantes Miniſter, quem in conjunctiſſimum convictûs & familiaritatis ultro admiſit; & cujus per quinquaginta propè annos tanto amore flagravit, ut eadem velet & nollet—crederes unam animam in duobus eſſe diviſam.

I DECUS, I NOSTRUM;—SEQUEMUR."

The Warden publiſhed "Three Sermons, preached in the Collegiate Church of Mancheſter, 1641," 8vo; "Queen's Eſther Reſolves, a Faſt Sermon before the Houſe of Commons[6], May 27, 1646, on Eſther iv. 16. And if I periſh, I periſh." "A Sermon from 1 Kings ii. 22[7], 1661, preached at the Collegiate Church of Mancheſter, on Tueſday the 23d of April, 1661, being the Coronation-day of his Royal Majeſtie King Charles II. By Richard Heyrick, Warden of the College, 1661," 4to; and another ſingle ſermon that year[8]. He married Helen, daughter of Thomas Corbet, of Sprauſton, in the county of Norfolk, eſquire; by whom he had iſſue, 1. Thomas, born Sept. 9, 1622; 2. Mary, married to Mr. John Johnſon, of Mancheſter; 3. Elizabeth, married, in 1661, to the Rev. Richard Holbrook[1], of Salford, near Mancheſter.

---

[1] "Richard Heyrick, warden of Chriſt Colledg in Mancheſter," is the firſt name ſubſcribed to "The Harmonious Conſent of the Miniſters of the Province within the County Palatine of Lancaſter, with their Reverend Brethren the Miniſters of the Province of London, in their late Teſtimonie to the Trueth of Jeſus Chriſt, and to our Solemn League and Covenant, March 30, 1648." Royal Pamphlets in Britiſh Muſeum, 358. 7.

[2] It appears by a letter to Lady Herrick, March 4, 1632, from the Rev. Thomas Lancaſhire, of Mancheſter, that the preceding warden had been for ſome time in diſpute with the neighbouring gentry and with many of the pariſhioners, in reſpect to defects in the college."

[3] "Siding with the Preſbyterians in the beginning of the Rebellion, he took the Covenant, and was made one of the Aſſembly of Divines, carried on the cauſe with great zeal, was in the plot for which Chriſtopher Love ſuffered, and afterwards became an aſſiſtant to the commiſſioners of Lancaſhire for the ejection of ſuch whom they then (1654) called ſcandalous and ignorant miniſters and ſchoolmaſters. Upon the approach of his Majeſty's Reſtoration, he ſeemed to be zealous for it, and turning about, as many of his party did, he kept his Wardenſhip to his dying day." Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 599.

[4] Account of the Wardens of Mancheſter College, 1773, p. 14. See more in Wood.

[5] The inſcription is on a braſs plate, fixed into a wooden frame, ſo as to form a kind of mural monument. A ſketch of it is engraved in Plate XVIII.

[6] Mr. Richard Heyrick was deſired to preach before the Commons, 30 April, 1645. Journals of the Houſe.

[7] Kennett's Regiſter, p. 487.

[8] Wood, vol. II. p. 399. Cooke's edition of Letſome, vol. II. p. 166.

The Warden married, ſecondly, Anna-Maria Hale, of the city of London, widow, daughter of Mr. Eraſmus Bretton, merchant at Hamburgh; by whom he had a ſon, John, who died young; and a daughter, Helena, married to Thomas Radcliff, eſq.

His widow died in 1675; and was buried at Loughborough, with this epitaph:

"The body of Anna-Maria Heyrick, daughter of Eraſmus Bretton, of Norfolk, eſq.
and wife to the right worſhipful Richard Heyrick, late warden of Chriſt's College in Mancheſter;
who lived virtuouſly, and died piouſly,
Oct. 22, anno æt. 57, A. D. 1675."

By deed of ſettlement, bearing date Nov. 20, 1646, the Warden ſettled on Anna-Maria his wife, by way of jointure, 51 acres of land, called Turvile Leys, in the pariſh of Woodhouſe; and the great and ſmall tithes of Mountſorell, which had been given to him by his father ſir William; and by his will, May 6, 1661, gave Turvile Leys to his eldeſt ſon Thomas[2], and £40. in money, after the death of his wife. To his ſon John, his dwelling-houſe in Deans-gate, Mancheſter, and his library of books, to be poſſeſſed by him when of age; to his daughter Helena, the tithes of Mountſorell, after the death of his wife; to his daughter Johnſon £5. for a ring, and 40*s.* apiece to her children; to his daughter Holbrook his ſpleenſtone; and all the reſt of his goods, chattels, and perſonal eſtates, he divided between his ſon John and his daughter Helena. His wife is made executrix.

No apology is neceſſary, for illuſtrating theſe memoirs with the following very curious original letters, "the records of friendſhip, and the hiſtory of the mind[3]."

1. "To the right worſhipfull and his moſt eſteemed ſiſter the lady Hericke, give theſe.

"Right worthy lady, and moſt eſteemed ſiſter! You very much wrong yourſelfe in thinking you owe aught to my love, either in reſpect of yourſelfe or your ſone. You by deſerte may challenge my beſt ſervice; and I will promiſe never to be defective, to the uttermoſt of my ability, to performe any kinde office either for you or yours. I pray God that your ſones proceedings here may bee anſwerable to my wiſhes. I profeſſe I have done what lyeth in mee for his good and contentment; and I doubte not but God will give a happy iſſue. Your huſbande rather needeth a checke to bridle his expenſes, than a ſpurre to pricke him forwarde: and I holde it his beſt courſe, rather to rewarde future deſerte, than to beginne with a liberall hande, and only buy hope at a deare price. Yf I doe not much miſtake, Mr. Wrenne and the Colledge will one day deſerve the love both of you and your ſonne; and then a good worde or deede for either will not bee ill beſtowed: but, till you finde the event (which I wiſh proſperous), I woulde wiſhe you not to bee over-liberall to either. It is not poſſible at this time to ſupply your deſiere concerning one to inſtruct your children; neither is ſuch a one to bee had at all houres. I coulde furniſh you with one ſufficient for learning; but his manners are corrupt, and ſuch a gueſt cannot bee welcome to your houſe. Some others are of commendable behaviour, and weake ſcollers; and ſuch are not for your turne fit to teach. Yf it were in my power to make one man of two, I coulde preſently pleaſure you; but, ſince that is beyonde my ſkill, I hope you will pardon mee. And ſo I reſt, at your ſervice, and leave you to the grace of God, this 18th of Aprill, 1613.

Your moſt affectionate brother, THOMAS MAY."

2. To the right wor^{ll} my verye goode freind Sr William Herricke.

"Right wor^{ll}; your ſonne delivered unto mee the ringe-diall wch you ſpake of before att Oxford; wherin, as in all other paſſages hetherto, I finde youre woor$^{p's}$ readye and propenſe affection to mee: in wch regarde, the willingneſſe of my minde to deſerve your love is the richeſt abilityes I cann yett pretende; not doubtinge but that, by the gracious aſſiſtance of the Divine Power, and the furtherance of due time, I ſhall accompliſhe, to your Woor$^{p's}$ ſatisfaction, that wch is as yett but in hope and expectation: but the love and reſpecte from yourſelfe and your woorthye Ladye (whome wth a thankefull remembrance I heere name), together wth the towardlye and generous diſpoſition of your ſonne, and the deere intereſt of my care and affection towards him, theſe are the ſtronge motives that ſhall æquall my performance wth my promiſe.

"There is a matter of conſequence, wch I underſtoode by your Woor$^{p's}$ letter concerninge Wm Taylor: the intimation of thoſe few words recalde my opinion wch I had before mentioned to Mr Maye: I can thus farre certifie you upon knowledge, that it is noe more but a peece of plate betweene 5 and 6 pounds, and 5 or 6 pounds over and above his ſett allowance yearlye, will maintaine him in Fellows Commons. But that wch I doe cheiflye aime att is, that your ſonne ſhall have companye att his owne table by that meanes, and they bothe ſitt and conv'ſe wholye together. Beſides the conference in their ſtudyes, wch is a great furtherance, and takes awaye the opinion of tædiouſneſſe: I muſt needs ſaye thus much for him, that hee will (as wee hope) and doeth deſerve itt, as well as his portion beare itt: in wch reſpecte, I doe heartilye wiſh itt were effected wth as much convenient expedition as youre Wor$^{p's}$ beſt leaſure will give leave. In the meane time, recommendinge my duetyfull love unto your Wor^{p}, and my very good frende the woorthye Ladye your wife, I committe you to God's wholye protection; and reſt your Wor$^{p's}$ to commaund, in all offices of love and duetye, CHRISTOPHER WREN[4].

St John's in Oxon, Aprill 26, 1613.

P. Scr. The makinge of London gownes agrees not wth Oxforde faſhion: wee are faine to alter it."

3. "Health and happines. Loving father, my houmble duty in moſt obſervant wiſe remembred. On Saturday the 24th of Aprill, I receved a letter from you; in which I underſtood that my truncke and linnin was come by the carrier, whiche I receved; and, according to your appointement, I gave Mr. Wren my tutor that ſilver ſun-diall, and my uncle Thomas £5; and then tooke I £1. My truncke came ſafe and well, God be thanked! and for my being here, which as yet you know has bene but a ſhort tyme, I thincke it be not poſſible to live more ſecure or quiet, free from care and citty trobells. Mr. Wren prayed me to give you thanckes for your token, and much more do I geve for them 2 bookes you ſent me. As for my Dictionarie, I thincke I ſhall have no greate neede of it yet, and therefore I may let it reſt there. We have here a very faire cloſe chamber to loke into the feildes;

---

[1] Their iſſue were, 1. William Holbrook; 2. Thomas, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, London; 3. Edward, of Mancheſter; and Elizabeth (who died Sept. 4, 1736). From one of theſe deſcended Dr. William Holbrook, who ſettled at Leiceſter, and practiſed in his profeſſion there with great ſucceſs till his death, which happened Oct. 28, 1758, at his lodgings in King-ſtreet, Guildhall, London, (where he had been on a viſit, and was found dead in his bed). He married —— Chaddock, by whom he had one daughter Elizabeth; who married —— Phillipps, eſq. of the Suffolk militia (ſince dead); and left a ſon at Ipſwich.

[2] After the death of Mr. Thomas Heyrick, Turvile Leys became the property of the above-mentioned Dr. Holbrook and his ſiſter Mrs. Kay, who died March 8, 1759; after which they were ſold by Mrs. Phillipps to the late ſir John Danvers, bart.

[3] Shenſtone.

[4] Younger brother to Dr. Matthew Wren, biſhop of Ely; proctor of the Univerſity of Oxford 1619; B. D. June 2, 1620; but was fellow of Peter Houſe, Cambridge, in 1629; the Biſhop having been their maſter. He was afterwards domeſtic chaplain to king Charles I; was inſtalled dean of Windſor, April 4, 1635, in the room of his elder brother, and conſtituted regiſtrar of the order of the Garter; made dean of Wolverhampton about the ſame time; and in November 1638, was preſented to the rich rectory of Haſeley in Oxfordſhire. He was ſome time alſo prebendary of Weſtminſter; Newcourt, vol. I. p. 924. He died at Blechingdon in that county (in the houſe of Mr. William Holden, rector there, who had married his daughter), May 29, 1658; and was buried in the chancel of that church; but has no epitaph. Wood's Faſti Oxon. vol. II. p. 216.

and, when wee be weary of ſitting in the chamber, we goe abroad, and walke. What can a man deſyre more? There are £40. beſtowed on this Colledge in bookes, the other day, by a gentleman: I thincke you know him, but I do not well remember his name. The perſpective glas [1] doth much ſervice here; but the glaſs in it is growne very dimme, and we know not the reaſon of it: if you know how to remedy it, wee will ſend it to you. I ſhewd Will. Taylor [2] of that you writ concerning him, and he holdes himſelfe very much indebted to you for your love, and is very deſirous, if you pleaſe to procure it him, to be of Maſters commons; for, as yet there is none but I; and I cannot endure to ſit alone by myſelfe at meate: wherefore I pray you be as erneſt as you can with his coſen; for as yet I have no acquaintance in the Colledge, and he will be a good companion. The chardges William Taylor has ſent home in his lettre. I pray you let my gilded letter-ſtandiſh be brought hither, for I have the key of it here. I ſhall [have] much uſe for it. Mr. Wren delites much in the perſpective glas. My uncle Maye ſays, that, if Mr. Wren and he can poſſiblye, they will get a maſter for my brother. Willet made my goune to broade in the backe. Thus, being loth to be tedious, hoping of youre healthe, and my brothers' and ſiſters' happines, I leve you and them, with moſt humble duty and praiers, to the further protection of the Almighty God; whom I beſeche to kepe now and for evermore, Amen.

Your moſt obedient ſone till death, WIL. HER.
Oxforde, this 26 of Aprill, 1613."

4. "Sir, my moſt houmble duty remembered, &c. I receaved your lettre on Saturday, and underſtood of your conference with Mr. Roſe; and I ſhewde Will. Taylor the parte of the lettre concerning him, for which he reſtes much bounde to you; and ſo he hath writt one lettre to you and another to his coſen Mr. Roſe aboute it. I marvale I receaved not your lettre till Saterday, when the carrier came away from London on Wenſday. We uſe to wrighte faſt hand here altogither, and ſtand not to have it ſo curious. I expect my coſen to come to the Croſs-inn from the Bath this Monday night; for, laſt week her man came out of the countrie to fetch her home; and, by that he came to Northampton, his hors, a very fine gelding, foundred under him; but he made ſhift to come hither to Oxford, and here was fane to ſtay 2 dayes before he colld get another horſe; and he has left his hors behind him. When ſhee cometh, I will commend you to her, and wiſh you had ſeen her here; for, her man told me ſhe purpoſed to be here tonight, if ſhe kept her determination. Although my mother's Engliſh was well enough, yet her good counſell was very much better. I ſpend my time here very well; but, when I have finiſht my buſines at noones and nights, I know not how to ſpend the idle tyme; wherefore I deſire you, if you pleaſe, the next tyme the carrier comes, to buy me a ſtone-bowe, and to ſend it me to ſhoote at ſparrowes; for, there are many here; and thoſe be without offence, and good to paſs away the tyme with. Thus, being loth to be trobleſome, I reſt your moſt obedient ſonne, Oxford, this 3 of May, 1613. W. HERRICKE.

My uncle Thomas went to Suſſex on Wenſday laſt."

5. "Sir, my humble duty remembred. Unfeathfullnes of all vices the Lacedemonians did moſt hate; wherefore I, not loving to be taxt for that vice, as duty bindes, do ſhew myſelfe meete, bound, and indebted to you for that never-dying love which I have alwayes receaved of you. I promiſed you, in the laſt letter I ſent to my mother, to ſend you a lettre, but there weare ſome extraordynary buſines did prevent me that I cold not; but now, not to run to far into the moſt oblivious forgetfulneſs, I can rectifye you of certain ſtrange newes concerning a gentleman whome you know and whome you do not knowe. If you remember, when you were at the tylting, you loſt your purſe; cloſe by you there ſtood a gentleman all in black; his name was Mr. Cockes: he was a merry gentleman; he talkt of going out of toune that day, but that tylting ſtayed him. And, that you may the better remember him, when it rayned, he offred Mrs. Aſton his band of his hat to kepe the raine away; and he uſed a cople of verſes, that armes belonged to ſoldiers, and the prieſt ought to goe pray. That gentleman is a very learned devine, and is of this colledge, St. Johnes; and that day he thought to have ridden hither, but that the tylting ſtayed him. He and I are very well acquainted; he is a very kind gentleman, and as true-harted as ever lived. He uſes me very kindly; and will be no where were he to paſs the tyme wyth. He has bene an endles while here in Oxford, and ſtudide ſo much, that once he was mad with it, but has recovered it agayne. He is very much reſpected in this Colledge. I wiſht you had bene acquainted with him: he is as good a companion as can be, and many deſire his company. He hard you talk of looſing your purſe, but he did neither know you nor mee: but, if he had knowne you, he ſaid, he thought he cold have helpt you to your purſe againe. I told him, it was ſo long ſince, that there was no getting of it againe; and therefore, if it ever be your chance to ſee him at London when he goes thither, I deſire you would welcome him; for I know he will ſee you for my ſake. Thus, with my houmble duty remembred, I leave you to the protection of God.

Your moſt obedient ſone till death, W. HER.
Oxford, this 17 of May, 1613."

6. "Right Worſhipfull! I am now by both your loves admitted into Fellows commons, for which I do account myſelfe indebted to you eternally. My neare kinſfolkes did refuſe to doe it for me; but I hope to live to repay theyr kind curteſye. Madam, as you have hitherto liked well of me, I entreate ſo to continew it towards me until you heare to the contrary, as that may deſerve your diſpleaſure. I am bounde to yourſelfe, for you weare a great meanes to farther me in going to Fellows commons; my harte renders you all loving thankes, which is as much as you will expecte from me, that have no more. My beſt wiſhes ſtill attend you; with my prayers to the Almighty for your healthe and proſperitie. I end, this 19th July,

Yours, for ever to command,
St. John's, Oxford. WILLIAM TAYLOR.
To the right worſhipfull the Lady Herricke, this."

7. "Sir, I would not willingly let any occaſion ſlip wherein I might manifeſt my love and duty to you; and therefore, having this opportunity offred, I have ſent you a letter, to ſhew that (God be thanked!) I am in health, which I doubt not but you have. I hope Bewmannor is in health; and the pleaſures there are many, which I know you enjoy. Here is no newes, but all our friends are in health. I had writ to you before, but that I could not meet with the carrier here. I underſtand that Dr. Warner's ſonn is with you: I know his father and brother very well; they were both of this Colledge. My lord of Lincoln's nagg is very luſty, I hear. I hope all our freindes in Leiceſter be in health. I deſire you, when you ſee my uncles or auntes there, remember my duty and love to them, with long life. I hope my uncle Thomas will marry ſhortly, that I may ſee him daunce: he would make you mirth there. You want honeſt Dick Hudſon. Thus, with my moſt houmble duties, I reſt

Oxford, Monday, Your moſt obedient ſone,
Auguſt 16, 1613. WILL. HERRICKE.
To the right worſhipful his very loving father, ſir William Herricke, at Beaumannor in Leiceſter."

8. "Right worthye and my moſt honord Ladye; I underſtand Mr. Marſhall hathe prevented mee in a ſuite I had unto your Ladiſhip, that your ſonne might ſee Cambridge now att this ſolemne entertainment of the Kinges Majeſtie there. But withall I heare your grant was conditionall, yf I went myſelfe; and therefore I preſume I have obtained before I aſke. I entend (God willinge) to bee theare, to heare my brother performe his acte which hee is putt uppon: and therefore, yf itt pleaſe ſir William and your Ladiſhip to committe him to my care in this jornye, hee ſhall

---

[1] The teleſcope was then of very recent invention. The earlieſt known with certainty was Prince Maurice's in 1590.

[2] Mr. Taylor was afterwards of Lincoln's Inn.

2 bee

bee as the beſt parte of myſelfe, and I know as welcome to my brother. Will. Herricke tells me, yf hee goe, hee had appointed his lodginge with his coſin[1]; but I had rather, yf it ſoe like your Ladiſhip, that I might have him with mee inſeparablye, both on the waye and there too. From Cambridge I have certaine buſineſſe will draw me to London as ſoone as the Courte removes from thence, which I ſuppoſe will bee upon the 9th of Marche[2]; and, yf you pleaſe, hee ſhall likewiſe come with mee to London from Cambridge. I thinke itt very convenient; partly for his diet the latter parte of Lent with your Ladiſhip; but chiefly for that, if itt were poſſible, I would not be from him. In the mean time of my abſence from Oxon, I have taken care that Rob. Herricke ſhall bee as well as yf I were preſent; and Mr. Preſident hath promiſed hee will ſee all things well ordered. I deſire your Ladiſhip would lett mee underſtand your minde on Saturday nexte. I have ſent up in a box a diall of my owne device, wherin I have drawne and coulorde ſir William's coate armes, and your Ladiſhip's, in two ſeverall formes, both the ſcucheons and the dialls, and yett both have the ſhadowe caſt from on ſtringe. At the top, as it were ariſinge from both the other, is a thirde diall, containinge ſoe manye houres as hath bin the nomber of your happye offſpringe: itt may bee ſett for London, or Beaumaner, or any place of England betweene that diſtance; and may bee made to ſerve truly over all the worlde. It is impoſſible to caſt both the ſcucheons of armes into any other kinde of dial but theſe; and I am glad they fell ſoe happilye, thoughe, when ſir William aſkte mee yf itt were poſſible, I could not reſolve the queſtion. I would it laye in my hands or pouer to honor the name and houſes of the Herrickes or the Mayes in a better faſhion; for, theſe are toyes wherwith I am ſtill bolde to preſent your Ladiſhip, and muſt acquire all the grace they have from your acceptance. If I had had a carver's and a clockmaker's hand, upon which I was faine to waite a longe time, itt had come longe ere this as a Newyeere's gifte. As for the reſt, I am beholdinge to none but my owne head and hand. I had rather you ſhould receave it (as it is) rudelye then in better faſhion of another man's doinge. Maye itt pleaſe your Ladiſhip to remember my ſervice to ſir William; and to ſignifie unto him, I have att length reſolved his queſtion in the beſt faſhion I could. You ſhall receave itt from Dr. Androes, and direction for the uſe. Thus, remembringe my duety to your Ladiſhip, I committe you to the grace of God; and reſt, Your Ladiſhip's, to command for ever, [1614-15.] CHRISTOPHER WREN.

To the right worſhipful my very woorthy freind the Lady Herricke bee theſe d'd."

9. "To the right woor^{ll} ſir William Herrick, knight.

"Right Woor^{ll}, Oct. 21, 1616.

"I thought itt good manners to certifie Mr. Preſident, and the fellowes of our Colledge, of your love unto them and the whole houſe, in the furtherance and enlargement of Mr. Henſhawe's promiſe; and that you had wonne him to embattlement the whole inſide of the quadrangle. The newes was very welcome, and taken as a greate earneſt of your future love, as well as a token of the precedent. Mr. Preſident, in this incloſed letter, will deliver our thankes, and the tenor of our further deſires that you would bee pleaſed to proſequute what you have begun.

"For my owne particular knowledge of your love, ſince your woorth and place admitts not any returne from mee, I labour to faſten my gratitude on your children; and ſoe by little and little, in parcells, like a bad debtor, bee ſtill repayinge ſomwhat.

"Your ſonnes laſt bill was hige, and I underſtand you thought it ſoe: but, I preſume, yf you examine the particulars, and not only view the ſumme, what is there could not by any prudence bee prevented; and I thinke there's noe particular unneceſſarye: but that which makes the ſumme great is the expences of 3 or 4, the middlemoſt, of wood, a hat, his jorneye, and ſuch like, which come not uſually into everye bill, and make up neere 50*s.* extraordinarye[3]: his abſence, though itt did ſomwhat leſſen battels and commons, yett itt appears not, bycauſe this quarter was almoſt 15 weekes, 3 above uſuall, and hee was not abſent above 4 in all. I leave the conſideration of theſe to your owne wiſdome. I will not (God willinge) bee wantinge, where care and foreſight can doe good: other things are beyond my power; and therefore I leave them to God, to whome I commend you in my prayers; and reſt,

"Your Woor^{pps} to commaund, C'STOPH. WREN."

10. "To the right woor^{ll} my very lovinge friend ſir William Herricke, knight.

"Sir, I underſtand bye Mr. Wrenn, that you have binne verye kind to the Colledge, in movinge Mr. Henſhaw to battlement all the inſyde of the houſe. I praye, lett me be ſoe much behouldinge to you to ſend me certaine worde howe it ſtands, and (if it maye be) this weeke. If I heare from you, you ſhall receave my anſwear, and a leter in it to Mr. Henſhawe, to whome I thinke not fitt to wright till I know the certaintye. The gentleman, at your beinge at Oxford, ſpake unto me to ſend hime word about Michelmas an eſtimate of the chardges, which I promiſed to doe ſoe ſoone as one ſyde was done; but that is not yett finiſhed, and myeſelfe have binne out of towne this three weekes; but I will ſend hime a noat ſoe ſoone as I canne. In the meane tyme, if you have prevailed with hime to undertake the whole ſquare within (as I am informed you have), we are bound to you bothe; and, for mye owne part, I ſhall reſt very thankful to you for it, and will be reddye to deſerve it in mye love to yours. I pray commend me to your good Ladye; and let me receave your anſwear. Soe I leave you to the grace of God; and ſhall ever reſt, your verye lovinge friend, St. John's, Oct. 21, 1616. WILLIAM LAUD[4]."

11. "To the right woor^{ll} ſir William Herricke, knight.

"Right Woor^{ll}; Being the other daye att table with Mr. Preſident and ſome of our auncient fellowes, that he fell into a diſcourſe concerninge Mr. Henſhawe's intendments, and withall the readines of your great love to proſequute them, and withall to have added ſomwhat of your owne purſe for grace and ornament, but that Mr. Henſhaw would bee alone in the buſineſs. Hee added further, that he had ſent unto him a particular eſtimate of ſtone, lead, timber under the lead in the paſſages, and of all neceſſarye accruements of the whole woorke, about a fortnight ſince, but as yet heard noe anſwere from him; and that he would bee glad to heare his determination onlye what hee would doe, not ſo much for haſteninge the worke (which the ſeaſon will not yett permitte), but that hee might order and diſpoſe all thinges belonginge thereunto before his goinge into Scotland (which is neere att hand), which cannot bee done without him.

"Now, amonge other your occaſions when you ſhall chance to meete him, yf you pleaſe to breake into this diſcourſe, that, either by himſelfe or your meanes, wee might know what he reſolves upon the ſight of the eſtimate which was ſent; this, amonge other kinde offices of love unto the Colledge, would be gratefullye accepted and eſteemed both by Mr. Preſident and the whole companye; for, upon that ſpeech of Mr. Preſident, everye one ſayd, itt were noe good manners for the Colledge themſelves to bee too haſtye upon till we had an anſwere from him; but, yf wee had a friend might breake into diſcourſe with him, wee might happilye heare ſooner. And heere by accident the diſcourſe was broke off.

---

[1] Robert Herrick, the Poet; of whom ſee vol. II. p. 632. He was then of St. John's College, Cambridge.

[2] The King's firſt viſit to Cambridge was in March 1614-15. He went a ſecond time in the May following.

[3] In an earlier letter, Oct. 20, 1613, Mr. Wren ſtates that he could not conveniently meet with the cenſor, to make up the reckonings with him for the commons and battels: which of late had been ſomewhat augmented.—For that quarter, were 4*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*; for the preceding quarter, 4*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.*

[4] Then preſident of St. John's College, Oxford; afterwards archbiſhop of Canterbury. See his ſignature, Plate XVIII. 29; and a particular account of him under Ibſtock, where he was rector. He was for ſome years reader (and, it is believed, the only one) of a Divinity Lecture in St. John's College, on an endowment of £5. a year by Mrs. Mary May (the mother of Lady Herrick); a lecture which has now ceaſed for many years. Gutch, p. 540.

"I thought good, therfore, of my owne accorde (as ever watchfull to doe you any ſervice that may redound unto you), to ſignifie thus much; bycauſe I doe collecte from that diſcourſe you may doe a kind, loving, and welcome action, yf you ſhall bee able to give Mr. Preſident notice (from your conference with Mr. Henſhaw) of his reſolution.

"The maner, times, and opportunities, fitteſt for that conference, I wholly leave to the managing of your owne wiſdome; commendinge you, with the wiſhes of all fortunate ſucceſſe in your affayres, to the protection of the Moſt Highe; and reſt,

"Your Worſhip's in all lovinge ſervice, Febr. 19, 1616-17. C'STOPHER WREN."

12. "My humble duty remembred; If that I ſhould be altogether unmindfull of my duty, moſt reſpected father, I ſhould ſeeme unnaturall, or elſe one that did not reſpect your love, or the duty which I owe. I am very ſorry that you loſt your labour; but preſently rejoyced to heare that good newes of the place that is fallen unto you; and with continuall prayers do intreate God that you may live long to injoy it. Mr. Bilclofs hath uſed me ſo kindely, that, if I could expreſs it in woord as I cann in thought, it were much. I receaved your token of Mr. Towſe, for the which I give youe moſt humble thankes; and thus, with my moſt humble duty, I ceaſe,

Your obedient ſonne till death, ROBART HERICKE.

To the right worſhipfull his verye lovinge father, ſir William Hericke, at his houſe in Greate Woodſtreete, give theſe [1616.]"

13. "To the right worſhipful ſir William Herricke, knt.

"Right worſhipful; you ſhould have receaved a letter above a weeke agoe, but by a caſualtye itt came not to your hands; for, my father beinge out of towne, my letters (to him) were ſtayed att London, and with them all incloſed. But I am now not ſorry itt ſoe happened; for all that I was to give you to underſtand was noe more but that, according to your deſire and direction, Mr. Preſident had written to Mr. Henſhaw, and encloſed another to yourſelfe in his, but he heard not as yett the receyte of either. Hee expreſt to Mr. Henſhaw your deſire of addinge ſome ornament to the Colledge, and that you had written to mee to that purpoſe, that I would provide and find you ſome draught or patterne. Mr. Preſident is now in London, and is come for the ſeale of his newe Deanerye; and ſoe I ſuppoſe hee will ſee you, that you may more fully confer of itt, as you ſhall thinke fitt. I will not fayle to ſend you the beſt draught I can before the buildinge goe forward. In the meane time, commendinge my ſervice, and committinge you to the Divine protection, I reſt, your Worſhip's to command, Decemb. 9th, 1616. CHRIST^r WREN."

14. "Right woorthye ladie, Unneceſſary apologies ſavour of vanitye in pen, or vainglorious ambition, and doe wrong the perſons to whome they are ſent, by undervalewing theire judgment, whome they preſume eaſie to be perſwaded, and held with compliment rather than realityes; and therefore, though I might perhaps take juſt occaſion to pleade excuſe for ſoe longe and (as it were) obſtinate ſilence, yet I rather leave itt to your wiſdome to conſider the cauſes, and your love give your verdict of favour.

"Yf your ſon performed my charge (which I doubt not), I am ſure you cannot bee to knowe my ill eſtate of bodye the moſt parte of the laſt quarter; and, in the midſt of theſe afflictions, a new burden was laid upon mee, which, notwithſtandinge, I cannot but eſteeme a creditte. I had noe ſooner layd downe my former office, but it pleaſed Mr. Preſident and the Fellows in generall to putt upon mee the ſenior Deanſhip, unſought for, unexpected. The newes of itt fownde mee ſecure in my retiredſt freedome, little thoughtful of ſuch a meſſage; nor could I well believe it; for to bee choſen to that office two yeares ſucceſſively hath not bin frequent in the Colledge ſince the foundation. There are but three men remembered to whome that honorable memorye is yett reſerved, wherof the chiefe yett named is the woorthye Dr. Androoes [1], to whoſe woorth in that office ſince I ſhall never attaine, itt contents me to have but the æquality of title. Nor doe I arrogantlye relate this ſtorye of myſelfe (for, though to any other itt might be juſt cauſe of glorye, yett to me it is withall a greate burthen). I am yoakte with a helpleſs aſſociate, and am content to beare the weight of both, I meane in all ſcholaſticke exerciſe; for, what might not they intreate of mee, and eaſilye prevaile, whoſe free love and joynt conſent had ſurrogated mee to the honor of the place immediately before? Beſides all theſe reaſons, my function keeps my conſcience awake for a true diſcharge of itt, and the other duety to my private charge. I knowe your wiſdome will weigh every particular, and conclude theſe occurrences of employment would not ſuffer a man of ſtronger bodye to ſitt idle; in which thoughts I doubt not but you will admitte of this one ſatiſfactorye letter inſtead of manye. That which moſt holdes mee in perpetual anxiety and ſolicitude is my promiſe to your Ladyſhip of ſome papers about this time. Itt vexes me (thoughe I cannot juſtly ſay I am faulty) that even the juſteſt buſines of my owne (though publicke) ſhoulde interrupt and diverte my ſervice, much more my promiſe, to my friends; and therefore I am forced to become your ſolicitor for pardoning yf I breake daye.

I determined this day to ſend a quarter-bill, but I had not vacancy to perfecte my accounts; I will ſend them by the nexte to ſir William. I beſeeche you, woorthy Ladye, lett this free and open proteſtation of my continual imployment bee in place of as large a letter to him whome my love cannot neglect; I meane, Mr. William Herricke. There was a flyinge newes made mee beleive I ſhould have ſeene him ere this; but for the intemperate ſeaſon I ſhould have expected him. You are, jointlye with the woorthy Knight and the numerous familye, in our dayly oraiſons, that Hee whoſe riches the univerſal creatures cannot all exhauſte, nor whoe can be wearrye of givinge, would daylye encreaſe the bleſſinge hee hath fixte in the midſt of your dwellinge! The God of grace returne your love, wherſoever itt goes, fourfold into your boſome! I reſt

Your Ladyſhip's to be commaunded,

Jan. 20, 1616-17. CHRISTOPHER WREN.

I have occaſion from Mr. Preſident to give your Ladyſhip thankes for the good woordes you pleaſed to give my paines, though they deſerved itt not.

To the right woorſhipful the Ladye Herricke, att her houſe in Wood-ſtreet, theſe."

15. "Proſperitye attend you!
The Almighty God defend you!

Moſt deare and affectionate mother, in the humbleſt obſervance I bow to your call, and with all reſpecte kiſs your hand. I receved on Satterday a letter from my coſen William Herricke, which I receved with much wellcoming. I did purpoſe, God permitting, to have writt you a letter this weeke, as well to remember my ſtrayed duty, as to certifie you of my healthe, which (God be thanked!) I have, and pray God long to continue it. For the good liking I have to this place, I thinke it as much as may be; for, firſt, we are free from city broyles, and live in country peace. I take care for nothing, but only to ſerve God and follow my ſtudy, which I pray God continue us all in the ſame mind. For, firſt, wee have a very fine chamber, wainſcoted, and houſe with gilded lether, and brave ſtudy to it; which chamber and ſtudy look both into pleſant gardens and feeldes; for, when wee be wery with ſitting in the houſe, wee walke ether in fieldes or the grove by the houſe. I have bene very erneſt with my uncle May, and my tutor, to provide a maſter for my brothers, that they may loſe no more tyme; and they tell me, if it be poſſible, they will get one; but they thinke it will be very hard to get one; for, if a man be no good ſcoller, he is not ſo fit to teach children, for he will rather ſpoile them; and, if he be a very good ſcoller, he will make ſhifte to live of himſelfe. But, if it be poſſible, they will get one: in the mean tyme, they may ſtudy by themſelves, helping one another. I receved my trouncke, and a note of all ſuch thinges as are come; and I will looke that nothing be miſſing, but deliver them out myſelfe to the waſher, and ſe them all brought againe. Here is a pore ſcoller that has bene with maſter Wren three yeres, a very honeſt and carefull fellow to doe any thing he is appointed; and ſo we uſe him, and he doth us much good ſervice, and is very diligent to do thoſe thinges which we appointe him. Thus, being loth to be prolix, I leve, my houmble duty being remembred, truſting of your health and all my brothers' and ſiſters' welfare, with kindeſt loves, ſalutations to them all, leving both you and them to the tuition of the Almighty. I pray, ſend me by the carrier St. Auſtin's Meditations. Your moſt obedient ſone till death. This 26 Aprill, 1619.

---

[1] Richard Andrews took the degree of M. D. June 1, 1608. "He had much improved himſelf in his faculty in his travels beyond the ſeas, which afterwards made him highly eſteemed among learned men and others." Wood, Faſti Oxon. I. 179.—His parts were celebrated by Richard Latewater, M. A. and rector of Finchley, in a poem called "Carmen ἀπομνημονεύτικον Coll. S. Johan. Bapt.; which was reſtored and augmented by Richard Andrews, M. D. and fellow of the ſaid College." Ath. Oxon. I. 339.—In p. 156, Dr. Andrewes is mentioned as godfather to Elizabeth Hericke.

For the Lady Hericke. W. HER."

17. "To my lovinge frendes the fower Tellours of his Maties Receipt at Weſtminſter, and to everie of them reſpectively. Theſe.

"I have ſoe preſſed Mr. Bingeley in the behalfe of the poore meſſingers, as I preſume he will ſeeke meanes to provide mony to putt them out of miſerie. Unto which of yow yt ſhall fortune to be appoynted to pay yt, I prey yow ſtick not at yt, becauſe yt is to ſoe charitable an end; and I will ſee yow ſafely diſcharged of yt. This I preſume yow will doe, for which I will thanke yow, as Audley End, this 29th of July, 1616. Yo^{r} lovinge frende, T. SUFFOLKE."

Indorſed "27 July, my Lord Treaſurer's lettre for £1900. for my lord Stanhope."

18. A family letter from the Earl of Saliſbury.

"To my lovinge ſonne the Lo. Cranborne [1].

"Will; the bearer hereof, the Baron De Breſſeaux, would needs be the bearer of this letter, becauſe he would be made knowne unto yow. He hath bene here very well uſed by the king; and is a gent. of very good faſhion, as I doubt not but yow find many there; whoſe example I hope yow will follow, and not retayne the rude faſhion w^{c}h the youth of England uſe. I pray yow therefore, when he comes unto yow, uſe him civilly, and give him curteſye for curteſye, w^{c}h I hope I need not teach yow now, becauſe yow know the cuſtomes of ſuch profeſſion. And I wiſh yow to ſay unto him, that yow find by my letter, that it hath pleaſed him to wiſhe to be made knowne unto yow, w^{c}h yow take very kindly, and ſhal be ready, for it, to do him any ſervice; with w^{c}h complements yow muſt pay your debts there, becauſe it is all yow can do. I pray, take hede of drinking any hote waters, and of playing too much at tennis. For hunting, when the king commands yow to waite on him, I eſteeme it an honnor; but, when I ſhould heare that yow did ſhew any affection to it in any other companie, I ſhould be very ſory. I commanded Willſon to write unto Mr. Lyſter, who did advertiſe me of the honnor the king did yow, and of your owne civill and mannerly carriadge, w^{c}h much pleaſethe me when I heare it; and, if I find that in yow, with learning and language, I ſhall care very little what yow ſpend, ſo yow forgett not God in all yor actions. That w^{c}h Willſon writes is by my direction, though I do not ſigne it, for lacke of leyſure; w^{c}h, it ſeemes, you have not, for your letters come very ſeldome. God bleſs you with his grace! Yo^{r} loving father, Whitehall, this 17 of March, R. SALISBURY [2]."

19. "To the right woorſhippfull and my woorthie freind Sir Willem Herick theſe, at his houſe in Weſtminſter.

"My noble and woorthie freind; lett me entreat you for to ſend me that £100. of whiche I ſpoke to yow yeſterday, whiche ſhal be thankfullie returned to yow agane at 6 monetheſe end; and lett theſe few lynes ſerve as a bonde betwix yow and me untill the £100. be payed agane; and let that thing whiche I gave yow be ſealed up, and ſafely kept, untill the tyme that yow doe receave your oune; and for this and all other kyndneſſes and favours, I ſhall reſt continewelye obliged, and ſhall (with all my beſt endevoures and good offices to yow) ſeek to deſerve the ſame at youre handes. Thus, wiſhing yow all helth and happines, and with my trew love to yourſelf and to my Lady, I reſt ever your faythfull freind to love and ſerve you,

21 Nov. 1620. D. MURRAY [3]."

20. From Henry Haſtings, fifth earl of Huntingdon.

"After my very harty com̄endacōns. Whereas I am informed of a difference that lately happened betwixt Mr. Danvars and y^{r}ſelfe, I have ſent theis lines to require you to come over to me to my howſe at Dunnington, upon Monday next, by tenne of the clocke in the morning, and bringe with you all ſuch perſons as can teſtifie any thinge concerning the ſame, to the end I may take order for compoſing thereof (for prevention of ſuch inconveniences as may enſue) according to his ma^{ties} pleaſure ſignified in his highnes declaration touching duells. And ſoe I bidde you very hartily farewell. From Dunnington, this 7th of September, 1622. Your very loving freind, HUNTINGDON [4]."

21. "To my verie loving friend, the keep of his Ma'ties forreſt of Pickeringe in the countie of Yorke, or his deputie there;" indorſed, "Sir Humfry May's warrant, refuſed to be ſerved."

"After my hartie comendacōnes, theis are to require you to deliver, or cauſe to be delivered, to the bearer hereof, in my name, my fee-buck of this ſeaſon, due unto me as Chauncell' of His Maīs dutchie of Lanc'; and to be taken within yōr charge. And this ſhal be yōr warrant. Yōr verie loving friend, Julie the 3d, 1625. HUM. MAY [5]."

22. From Thomas earl of Kelly [6].

"To my verye lovinge Sr Willome Herik give theis.

"Good Sr Willome; I proteſt to yoe, I have bene as carefull as poſſibillye I culde have bene to have gotten that monye for you whiche you deſyred, and whitche I muſt confes you doe more then well deſerve from me; yet I cannot doe it wth ſuche ſpeede or conveniencye as my deſyre is. I am two or three wayes in hand; and then, ſoone as poſſiblye I can, I will not fealle to haſten it to you; for, I proteſte to yoe, it greeves me at the hart that ever you ſhuld neede to ſend for it. I muſt onys more intreate y^{r} patience; and, as I wiſhe to be free, I ſhall not omitte anye occaſione that I can doe while you be contented. The perticulers I will tell you at meeting, if you have occaſione to come to Whythall this afternoone or the morrow in the afternoone. And ſo, onys more intreating y^{r} patience for ſome lytill time, I will end this but drie ſermonne. Y^{r} verye lovinge frend,

---

[1] William lord Cranborne, afterwards ſecond earl of Saliſbury. See his ſignature in Gent. Mag. April 1799, Plate I.

[2] See his ſignature and ſeal, Plate XXIV. 13.

[3] Maſter of the wardrobe and privy purſe to Henry prince of Wales. He was created baron of Scoon in Scotland, April 7, 1604; and viſcount Stormont, April 26, 1612; and the preſent earl of Mansfield is his lineal deſcendant. I have now before me ſir David Murray's Receipt for "10,022*l.* 14*s.* 3½*d.* being the remains owing as well by the late Prince Henry, deceaſed, for expence and charge of his wardrobe and robes, as for his privy purſe." See his ſignature and ſeal, Plate XXIV. 15.

[4] See his ſignature and ſeal, Plate XXIV. 23.

[5] Knighted at Royſton in January 1612-13; chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; privy counſellor and vice-chamberlain to James I; and member for the borough of Leiceſter in two parliaments, 1623 and 1625. See his ſignature, Plate XXIV. 11. He obtained, Aug. 4, 1629, a reverſionary patent of the maſterſhip of the Rolls; but died, June 9, 1630, before that office became vacant, ſeiſed of the manor of Coldrey, co. Hants; and of divers lands in that county, and alſo in Norfolk and Berks. Inq. at Baſingſtoke, 6 Car. I; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 9.

[6] Thomas Erſkine, nephew to John the fifth earl of Mar, having been educated with king James I. from his childhood, became a great favourite with that prince, who firſt made him a knight and gentleman of the bed-chamber; and afterwards, having, with ſir John Ramſay, in 1600, reſcued the king from the ſons of William Ruthwen, earl of Gowry, he was honoured with a coat of augmentation, and rewarded with the lordſhip of Dirleton 1603, made captain of the Engliſh guards, groom of the ſtole, created viſcount Fenton 1606, K. G. in 1615, and earl of Kellie in 1619. The preſent earl is a lineal deſcendant.

Boſwelle-court, this 10 of Maye, 1626. KELLIE."

23. "To the right wo^{ll} his very loving father, ſir William Heyricke, at his houſe at Beaumanor in Leiceſterſhire. Leave it at the ſigne of the Plough in Watling-ſtreet, with Mr. Henry Heyricke.

"Sir, my humble duty remembred; your letter came to me, as your old, my new noe freind, came to you, to accuſe myſelfe to myſelfe; but it found not ſoe credulous an entertainment. I read it indeed, againe I read it, and againe, and each reiteration produced whether more anger or greife I know not; I am ſure no conſcience of guilt. Sir, if you can ſoe ſoone put of the father, I hope you will give me leave to forgett the humble rhetoricke of a ſonne. I am not now, as an approbationer, to ſupplicate; but, as calumniated, to cleare myſelfe; nay, ſince my credite is at pawne, I will be as zealous of it as you can be of me were I your firſt-born. I will not be inquiſitive after your informer, for I will never regiſter him in the catalogue of my freindes that makes this his firſt curteſie; yet ſee how he would, by a new method, prove himſelfe my freind by doing me an injury. Admitt I had beene delinquent (which you will ſoone, I ſee, be perſwaded to); it is the property of a freind, not to believe every report, and after beleefe to ſmother the offence by a ſecrett perſwaſion of amends. He might have effected that by private admonition, which he could not by publike accuſation. But I will not blame prejudice in a freind ſoe unknowne to me, when I ſee my Father, the epitome of all my freinds, ſoe over-credulous; yet this, if it ſhall pleaſe you to expreſſe him. If he be a ſcholler, and would be my Mecenas, if he will be one, I will ſpeedily, in his language and mine, cleare myſelfe, ſoe that his eye, a better arbiter than his eare, ſhall acknowledge me noe retrograde; if he be no ſcholler, I will, as I now doe to you, perſwade a better, a more charitable conceite; if I cannot perſwade him, valeat. Now give me leave to parley with yourſelfe (I would a ſcholler as well as a father). When I came home the laſt Chriſtmas, I noe ſooner ſaw you, but you welcomed me with your bleſſing and your encomium. You then thought your charges well diſburſt on me, becauſe you heard by Mr. Oſbolſtone (a man who loves to heare of the progreſſe of them whom he educated) of my proceedings. I ſtayd too long at home indeed; I know not where was the fault: if I have loſt any thing by not getting ſomething in that time, my endeavours have almoſt recovered it. It is not ſoe long ſince I returned, that I could already get an habite of vice, of keeping ill company; nor have I yet loſt my credite that I had before I went home. I doe not at all undervalue my credite; you ſhould not command me to ſtay an hour longer in the Univerſitie then I could with the maintenance and increaſe of your love and my credite. Therefore, ſir, I humbly beſeech you, foſter not a conceite ſoe farr different from your former affection. I will never call you Father, when you ſhall thinke yourſelfe the worſe by having ſuch a Sonne. Wherin have you at any time found me tardy? nay, I know my will hath often outrunn my power. I never willingly offended you; and if I did unwillingly, it grieved me. If you think I have all this time at Oxenford flattered you, and ſhall at laſt deceive your expectation, why have you let me be reſident ſoe long heere? I am ſure, I could live any where to my better content; nor would I ſtay heere longer, were it not to fitt me for ſome other preferment. For my brother's fellowſhipp and preferment, ſoe often repeated by my mother and you, I doe not ſoe much prize it: if I have loſt any love where I live, it is by that. Our Deane doth alltogether diſreſpect me, becauſe I am to have it; and thinks much the worſe of you and me, becauſe we have made Chriſtchurch a nurſe and a ſeminary for Allſoules; and were it not that the ſtipend you allow me heere were by much to little, I would not change. If it be in your gift, if you thinke me unworthy of it, beſtow it where you pleaſe; and if you thinke me unworthy heere to be maintained by you, and to be your ſonne, I will with greiſe ſeeke meanes otherwiſe. The caſe is not the ſame betweene my brother Robert and myſelfe; his yeares priviledge him from being now a ſcholler; and his ſpirit will not lett him ſtoope to all preferment. For my part, I am not ſuperannuated for learning; or, if I cannot get maintenance that way, I have an humble ſpirit, that will accept of any degree of preferment; only I would not deſiſt from what I have begunne. Give me leave to tell you, this one letter of yours hath diſtracted me; and unleſſe this of mine will perſwade you to a better faith, I ſhall deſperately runne into the world, and take what God hath from the beginning allotted to me; to which God I commit you, and myſelfe to his and your bleſſing.

Your ever obedient ſonne,

Chriſtchurch, May 7, [1630]. R[OGER] HEYRICKE."

The following ſignatures are given in Plate XXIV.

1. Henry Grey, marquis of Dorſet; ſee p. 144.

2. The ſame, when duke of Suffolk; ſee p. 144.

3. Thomas Sackvile, earl of Dorſet; ſee p. 152.

4. Robert earl of Eſſex; from an inſtrument, 1588.

5. Charles earl of Nottingham; from a letter in 1605.

6. Thomas earl of Kellie, 1619-20; ſee p. 153.

7. Sir Baptiſt Hickes; ſee p. 150.

8. The ſame, when viſcount Campden; ſee p. 150.

9, 10. Lodowick duke of Lenox, and ſir Thomas Edmondes; ſee p. 154.

11. Sir Humphrey May, brother to Lady Herrick; ſee p. 165.

12. Thomas May, another brother; ſee p. 161.

13. Lady Juliana Noel; ſee under Old Dalby.

14. Sir David Murray; ſee p. 165.

15. Lionel Cranfield, lord high treaſurer; from a public order on the Exchequer, Aug. 21, 1622.

16. The ſame, when earl of Middleſex; from an order dated 2 Dec. 1622.

17. Sir Robert Carr, knt. is to a receipt for £1000. Jan. 1, 1620, "to be delivered to his Majeſty's ſon the Prince in gold, which his Majeſty was minded to beſtow upon him this New-year's tide."

18. Sir Henry Montague, viſcount Maundevylle, lord high treaſurer, from an order Dec. 29, 1620; ſee p. 153.

19. Francis viſcount St. Albans; from a receipt, April 13, 1621, for £100. part of £200. "to be by me employed, as his Majeſty hath thought fit, by ſpecial truſt and confidence in me, without any accompt to be given to his Majeſty for the ſame." His ſignature as Lord Verulam has already been given, Plate XVIII. 22, from an order dated July 23, 1620, for payment of 784*l.* 3*s.* 6½*d.* to the earl of Worceſter, lord privy ſeal, as his yearly allowance of 627*l.* 6*s.* 10½*d.* "in lieu of a diet of 16 diſhes of meat formerly allowed him in his Majeſty's houſhold."

20. Philip Herbert earl of Montgomery is to a receipt, Aug. 2, 1622, for £180. the balance of "£1800. which king James I. had been pleaſed to beſtow upon him, in full ſatisfaction for a large chain of fair orient pearls, delivered by way of ſale to his Majeſty."

21. Sir John Bingley, from a letter, 28 Feb. 1617; requeſting ſir William Herrick, "of all love, to deliver to Rafe Grene 50*l.* for my lord of Suſſex."

22. The earl of Kellie again, in 1626, with his ſeal as Knight of the Garter (ſee p. 165.)

23. Henry earl of Huntingdon, 1622; ſee p. 165.

The MSS. of Mr. Burton enable me to add the following particulars concerning Barrow and its hamlets:

"Barrow, by ſome derived from the Saxon word Beoꞃh or Byꞃıᵹe, in Low Dutch called Berghe, a hill (for that alſo in the Weſt country thoſe little hills of ſtones, heaped together for ſepulture, are there called barrows); which name, it ſeemeth, it had from its ſituation, being ſomewhat elevated upon a riſing aſcent. It hath the addition upon Soar (for difference from another ſtanding, not many miles diſtant, upon Trent), for that the ſaid river, taking its courſe by the one ſide of the town, thence winding with a large and almoſt circular compaſs, and then returning again to the town, running cloſe to the other ſide, maketh that fine and rich meadow called Barrow-holm; the rent whereof to the lord for the after-math there (as I have heard) heretofore was 30 quarters of wheat, or ſo much wheat as would cover a ſwan, hung up by the bill, her feet touching the ground. The town itſelf in ſite and ſight but one; but two in propriety of fields and commons, differenced by North and South. In the midſt of the town ſtandeth a fair and large church of great antiquity, built in form of a croſs, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, mother to three chapels, St. Bartholomew at Quorndon, St. Mary at Woodhouſe, and St. John Baptiſt in Mountſorell. The fields lie in an exact ſquare on three ſides of the town, anſwered on the South with meadows, of ſoil good for all ſorts of grain, but chiefly for barley; of ſingular uſe for lime there made of a kind of ſlateſtone lying in the earth in broad and even floors, between two and ſix yards thick; and about as many feet under one, lyeth another; and under that, another, not known how many; but, in ſinking for wells, they have paſſed through many ſuch. Of this, broken and burnt, is the lime made in great quantity, being in great requeſt, and much uſed by the inhabitants thereabout; the eſteem it has by the ſtrong binding; and therefore much uſed for water-works (for which it is much employed), if well tempered with hot water, or with great labour; and many times ſerveth inſtead of plaſter, for pargetting and ſhooting of floors."

In Mountſorell, Mr. Burton adds, "The two pariſhes of Barrow and Rothley are here parted by a lane called Barre-lane; and in each part there is a ſeveral conſtable and headborough.—It will not be impertinent to make remembrance of the charitable gift of Richard Nidde, late ſcrivener of London, who, by his will, dated the laſt day of July, 1617, gave 40*s.* a year for ever, to be paid out of his houſe in London, for two ſermons yearly to be preached in the chapel of Mountſorell (in which town he was born), the one on the firſt Sunday in Lent, becauſe that in that week he was born, the other the firſt Sunday in Auguſt, by two learned preachers, to be appointed by the churchwardens for the time being. Likewiſe he did give and bequeath, by his ſaid will, to the mayor and burgeſſes of Leiceſter, 300*l.* &c. (as printed in p. 89.)

"In Quorndon, at this preſent, 1641, is ſeiſed of certain lands Mr. Humfry Chaveney, deſcended of an antient family in this county; an officer in the Rolls in Chancery in London; a true lover of Antiquities, and a worthy preſerver of the ſame, who, out of true love and kindneſs, hath imparted many notes unto me, much enriching and confirming this work, as upon the view and reading may quickly be diſcovered."

A bond occurs, from Thomas Hebbe, of Quorndon, and Robert Griffith, of Barrow upon Sore, yeomen, to Thomas May, of the Middle Temple, gent. bearing date 5 Oct. 1606.

A memorandum, dated May 14, 1607, notices certain lands in Quorn[1] field (viz. 27 roods in The Morefield, and 11 roods in The Weſtfield) which George Cawdewell ſold in perpetuity to Raphe Allen for 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; amongſt which were lands in Fernyfurlong, Windmill-hill, Ironſtone, Overſtone croft, Saltgate, Porketſick, Netherſton croft, Stoncroft-way, Nether long lands, the Nether tenne of Barbriggs, Wronglands, Plomtrehill, Thorpeacres, and Fynnys Oake.

"Charnwood Foreſt lyeth upon the North-weſt part of the county, full of hills and woods, and rocks of ſtone, in an ungrateful and barren ſoil.

"Foreſts and chaces afford much pleaſure in hawking and hunting, exerciſes of themſelves pleaſant and requiſite, whereby both the ſtate of the body and mind are much increaſed; for, as Ariſtotle ſaith, in the firſt Book of Politicks, that whereas Nature her ſelf made all creatures for the uſe of man, ſhe ſeemed to propoſe hunting to be the chiefeſt delight to be had in them; by which both the ſtrength of the body and vigour of the mind are much enlarged. Hunting is a great preſervative of health, as Pliny the ſecond doth inſinuate that he by hunting did long maintain his crazy body in health[2]. Razes, an Arabian phyſician, writeth of a great plague, that whereas almoſt all ſorts of men thereby died, yet only hunters, by reaſon of their ſtrong and ſound bodies, occaſioned by their continual exerciſes, eſcaped[3]. Dionyſius king of Syracuſe, being invited to a feaſt in Lacedæmon, when all the dainties were ſet on the table, refuſed to eat, giving this reaſon, that the variety and plenty took away his appetite; to whom a merry cook ſtanding by replied, that it ſeemed that he did not uſe hunting or any ſuch exerciſe, and therefore he wanted hunger and thirſt, wherewith the Lacedæmonian banquets were chiefly ſeaſoned[4]. Hawking likewiſe is a good exerciſe, and hath been of antient time, as Ariſtotle[5] writeth, much uſed in a port of Thrace, called Cedropolis; wherein the faſhion then was, that in the mariſhes the fowl was put up by the falconers carrying long poles and beating the ſegges; which no ſooner were on wing, but were driven down by the hawks, and then were killed with theſe poles, much like to the taking of partridges and ſuch mountain-birds now-a-days in Spain on the downs near Valladolid and in Andaluzia, where the game being ſprung and marked is then purſued, and ſo in that kind tired and taken. This manner of hawking with long-winged hawks now in uſe with us was (as Julius Firmicus ſeemeth to conceive) not known in antient times, but firſt invented in the days of the emperor Conſtantine the Great. Both which kinds of exerciſes, moderately uſed, no doubt are both healthful, delightful, and commendable. But, when men ſhall ſpend whole months, quarters, and almoſt years, in theſe ſports, and toil themſelves quite out, like Mithridates king of Pontus, who (as Plutarch and Appian ſay) was ſo greatly and greedily affected with hawking, that for ſeven years together he hath continued therein, and in all that time never came under any roof either in city or country; it cannot but be both hurtful to the body, and to the particular eſtates of ſome who, with Actæon (as it is in the fable), are in the end worried with their own dogs[6]. But I will conclude with an excellent ſaying of Galen, in his book, De Luto Parvæ Vitæ, that, of all exerciſes, thoſe are moſt to be accompted of, which do not weary the body, but delight the mind; and therefore they are to be eſteemed moſt wiſe, who, in uſing theſe exerciſes, do ſo temper themſelves, that it cannot eaſily be diſtinguiſhed whether the motion or pleaſure of the body or the mind be the greater. Of hawking have written, Frederick the Second, emperor[7]; to which book his ſon Manfred king of Sicily (who ſlew his father) made ſome additaments; Beliſario de Acqua viva, a Neapolitan. Of hawking and hunting, John Lonicer and Sebaſtian Medices, a Florentine, who in the ſame book hath written of fiſhing alſo."

"Alderman hawe, or Alderman hey, a religious cell, or priory, in the foreſt of Charnwood, betwixt Cherley and Beaumanor (the ſite whereof ſtill remaineth), ſome time belonging to the priory of Bermondſey in Southwark, near London, as appeareth by the

---

[1] At this time, 1799, lands in Quorn are frequently ſold from 80*l.* to 100*l.* an acre; and are let from 2*l.* to 2*l.* 10*s.* an acre.

[2] Lib. v. Epiſt.

[3] Razes in 30 Contract. iii. e. 3.

[4] "Labor in venatu, ſudor, curſus ab Eurotâ, fames, ſitis; his enim rebus Lacedæmoniorum epulæ condiuntur." Cicero, Tuſcul. Diſp. lib. v. § 34.

[5] Lib. ix. Hiſt. Animal. cap. 36.

[6] Read the mythology thereof in Dalephatus de Fab. Narr. lib. i. cap. 3.

[7] Freder. II. Imp. Beliſario de Acqua Viva, fol. Neap. 1519. De aucupio et venatione, Jo. Lonicerus, 4to, Frankfort, 1582. Sebaſt. Medices de aucupio, venatione, et piſcatione, 8vo, Coloniæ, 1588.

Matriculus of Hugh Walleis biſhop of Lincoln, where, at the end of the deanry of Akeley, it is thus written: "Aldermanhawe in diſpoſitione prioris de Bermondeſey, qui conſuevit habere ibi tres monachos." But, as it appeareth by the ledger-book of the Abbey of Leiceſter, there was contention betwixt the ſaid abbot of Leiceſter and prior of Bermondſey about this place; the prior challenging it as his, alledging that there was, or had been, in that place, a pariſh church, with a font for baptiſm, and burial for the dead: whereupon the place was viewed by men ſpecially and purpoſely appointed; who, after diligent ſearch and enquiry had, returned this anſwer; that they could find no church there, nor any walls of a church; but rather (to uſe their own words) "cujuſdam heremitorii, bovarii, ſive ovilis," of ſome hermitage, cow-houſe, or ſheep-cote; nor had there been any font for baptiſm or place of burial time out of mind. In concluſion, the prior of Bermondſey was denied to have any right in the ſaid place, or in any tithes or other duties to be paid out of it. It was endowed with lands in Quorndon and Woodhouſe."

"The manor of Beaumanor was very great; whereof were members theſe villages; Barrow, Quorndon, Mountſorell, Friſby upon Wreke, Woodhouſe, and Woodthorpe. The now lord of this manor is ſir William Heyrick, knight, citizen of London, who married Joane, ſiſter of ſir Humfrey May, knight."

The following original inſtrument may ſerve as a ſpecimen of the leaſes of the ſixteenth century:

"This indenture, made the ſeconde daye of Aprill, in the nine and thirtieth yeare of the raigne of our ſoveraigne ladye Elizabeth, by the grace of God, of Englande, Fraunce, and Ireland, quene, defendor of the faithe, &c. betwene William Hericke, of London, eſquier, of the one parte, and Nicholas Williams, gentleman, and Clemente Foldes, yeoman, on thother parte; witneſſeth, that the ſaide William Hericke, for certen conſideracions him at this preſente moving, hath demiſed, ſealed, and to ferme lett, and by theſe preſence doeth demiſe, leaſe, and to ferme lett, unto the ſaid Nicholas Williams and Clemente Foldes, all that the herbage and pannage of his parke of Beawmanor, within the countie of Leiceſter, with the orcharde and garden within the ſame parke; excepting and reſerved alwayes unto the ſaide William Hericke, his heires and aſſignes, the mannor-houſe, the mott, and all buildinges ſtanding within the ſaid parke, and ſufficiente greſſe, paſture, and feeding, within the ſaide parke, for eight kyne, and foure horſes or mares; to have and to houlde all and ſinguler the ſaide premiſſes, with their appurtenances, excepte before excepted and reſerved, unto the ſaide Nicholas Williams and Clemente Foldes, their executors and aſſignes, for and during the tearme of two yeares, from the five and twentieth daye of Marche laſte paſte; yealding and paying therefore yearelye, duringe the ſaide tearme, the ſome of fowerſcore poundes of lawfull money of England, at two feaſts in the yeare; that is to ſaye, at the feaſt of St. Michaell tharchaungell, and the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin Marye, by equal and even porcions. In witneſſe whereof, the parties aforeſaide to theſe preſente indentures interchaungeablye have ſett to there handes and ſeales the daye and yeare firſte above written. Sealed and delivered, in the preſence of Clement Smithe,

By me CLEMENT FOULDES, and me NICHOLAS WILLIAMS."

The grant of lands noticed in p. 152 to have been obtained by ſir William Heyrick and Arthur Ingram, eſq. in 1607, will be more particularly ſpecified in the note below[1].

In what is already ſaid on the height of Bardon Hill, p. 126, note 5, lines 2 and 3, Mr. Burton's MS. reads, "700 furlongs long; or, as others write, the ſpace of 52 miles; nor of Atlas, whoſe top exceeds the clouds; or Olympus, which Zenagoras, by mathematical inſtruments, found to be 15 ſtadia or furlongs high; or the hill Caucaſus, whoſe top is ſaid to be lightened by the ſun, when the day-light is ſhut-in below, as Ariſtotle writeth, Meteorol. lib. i. cap. 13."

Inſtead of the brief note on Leland, which in p. 172. is copied from Mr. Burton's printed book, his MS. preſerves the following original article: "This John Leland (as I learned of one of the ſame family) was borne in London, as may appear by his owne wordes in the Life of John Phreas[2], in his booke De Viris Illuſtribus, fol. 337, being ſonne to John Leland, a Lancaſhire man, and a French merchant; who, after ſome years paſſed, was ſent by his father to the Univerſity of Paris; where, having ſpent certeine time, under the tuition of one Bois[3], a learned ſcholer, having attained to great knowledge in the Greeke, Latin, and the moderne tongues, and in other ſciences, returned into England, and not long after was made knowne to king Henry the Eight; who taking notice of his many good partes, but eſpecially of his affectionate love to Antiquities, gave him a fellowſhippe in Chriſtes Colledge, Cambridge[4] (which was of the foundation of Margaret counteſs of Richmond his grandmother), and there exhibited unto him, as Leland himſelf ſayes, in his booke De Viris Illuſtribus, in the Life of Sebert King of the Eaſt Angles[5].

---

[1] Buckingham. The fraternity of St. Trinity, in the town of Buckingham [founded for two prieſts; one of them to ſing maſs for the good eſtate of king Henry VI. and queen Margaret, and for their ſouls; the other helping to miniſter ſacraments and ſacramentals in the pariſh of St. Peter and Paul; yearly value, 21*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* Willis, Buckingham, p. 44.]

Derbyſhire. Parcel of the late chantry of Tyddeſwell; parcel of the late chantry of St. Michael's in Cheſterfield; parcel of the late chantry of Chaddeſdon.

Durham. Divers tenements in the city of Durham, parcel of the guild of St. Nicholas; divers lands in Pittingdon, parcel of the chantry of our Lady; a cottage, with the appurtenances, in Sedgefield, parcel of the chantry of St. Katharine there; a garden and four acres of land in Cleatlam, given for the maintenance of a prieſt in Staindrop; a garden in the city of Durham.

Glouceſterſhire. Parcel of the chantry of our Lady of Berkeley; parcel of the chantry of St. Andrew's in the pariſh of Berkeley; the chantry of our Lady in the pariſh of Durſley; the chantry of our Lady in Tetbury; the chantry of Wotton; the fraternity or guild of Cheping Sodbury; lands and tenements given for the finding of a prieſt in Little Dean. See Rudder, pp. 279. 402. 426. 675. 731. 850.

Lincoln. The chantry of St. Lawrence in Leake; lands in South Somercotes; lands in Belton and Haxey, parcel of the chantry of our Lady there.

London. Divers tenements in the pariſh of St. Giles without Cripplegate; a tenement and three cottages in Panyer Alley; two tenements in the pariſh of Mary Magdalen in Old Fiſh Street.

Middleſex. The ſite of the free chapel called Tokyngton chapel, with the lands thereunto belonging, in the pariſh of Harrow upon the Hill [which had been in the tenure of Richard Read under a leaſe from Queen Elizabeth; and which were in the ſame year, 1607, aliened by ſir William Heyrick and Mr. Ingram to John Page, eſq. anceſtor of Richard Page, eſq. the preſent owner. Lyſons, Environs, vol. II. p. 576; from Rot. Clauſ. 5 Jac. p. 22.]

Norfolk. The free chapel called the Chantry chapel of St. Edmund in Walpole [with 66 acres of land in the tenure of divers perſons; and all the lands, tenements, &c. whatſoever, belonging to the ſaid chantry, which came to king Edward VI. on its diſſolution, and were valued at 10*l.* a year; all which, in 1590, had been farmed by Mary Butler at 10*l.* 0*s.* 7*d.* a year. Blomefield, vol. V. p. 720.]

Northumberland. A cottage, with the appurtenances, in Ovingham, parcel of the ſtipend of a prieſt; a tenement in Prudhowe, parcel of the chantry of St. Thomas in Prudhowe.

Villa Nottingham. Divers parcels of chantries in the town of Nottingham; one other tenement in the town of Nottingham.

Oxfordſhire. The guild of our Lady in Burford.

Warwickſhire. Two tenements, with cloſes, in Stratford upon Avon; a tenement in Brailes; parcel of the guild of Knoll. Dugdale, vol. I. p. 155; vol. II. pp. 692. 960.

Wiltſhire. The free chapel of Alton.

Yorkſhire. A cloſe in Bewdley, parcel of Kelke's chantry there; parcel of the chantry of our Lady in Lylnewicke; a tenement and certain lands in Allerton, parcel of the chantry of Thyrntoft; lands in Bawtry, parcel of the guild called The Trinity Guild there.

[2] Phreas (Joannes) conterraneus meus, Londini natus. Tanner, Bibliotheca Britannica, p. 597.

[3] The famous Franciſcus Sylvius.

[4] So alſo Fuller, Deſcription of Cambridge, p. 90.

[5] Tanner, ubi ſupra, p. 672.

From thence (as I have heard) he ſhould come to All Souls Colledge in Oxon[1]; but for that I could never fynd any proof, nor in the ſame colledge, where by all probability his name would be recorded if ever a member of the ſame houſe. Afterward the ſaid king Henry the Eight, by a commiſſion granted to him, bearing date the 25 yeare of his raigne, 1533, gave him licence to travaile throughout the kingdome, to ſerch and peruſe all the libraries of monaſteries, religious houſes, and colledges, and to take awaye ſuch manuſcriptes as he liked (having an intendement that thoſe monaſteries ſhortly after ſhould be ſuppreſſed), as well for the better advancement of his ſtudye, as for preſervation of the ſaid manuſcripts and bookes from periſhing and ruine. By force of which commiſſion, he ſpent ſixe yeares in travaile, as himſelfe ſayth in an Epiſtle Gratulatory to the ſaid king (which is written in the third part of his Collectanea), ſparing nether labour nor coſt; paſſing through the middle of the land, and ſo along by the ſea coſtes, ſo that as he there ſayth (theſe being his owne wordes), that there was almoſt nether cape nor baye, haven, creeke, or peere, river, or confluence of rivers, breaches, waſhes, lakes, meres, fenny waters, mountaines or valleis, mores, hethes, foreſtes, chaſes, woodes, citties, burroughes, caſtles, principall manour-places, monaſteries, and colleges, but he had ſeene them; and in ſo doing, noted a wholl world of thinges very memorable. After which his travaile thus ended, and inſtructions gotten, he had intended (as in the ſayd epiſtle he ſayth) firſt to have made a chorographical mape of the wholl continent of Britannia, ſetting downe to every ſtation the antient Britiſh, Roman, Saxon, and moderne names. Next, to have made a deſcription of Brittaine in 50 bookes, according to the number of the ſhyres, whereof each one ſhould conteine the beginning, encreaſes, and memorable acts, of the chiefeſt townes and caſtles of the provinces, deſcribed with this title, "De Antiquitate Britannicâ, ſive de Civili Hiſtoriâ, Libri 50." Then to have deſcribed the iſles adjacent, as Wight, Man, Angleſey, and the reſt, with this title, "De Inſulis Britanniæ adjacentibus Libri Sex." Laſtly, the genealogy of the Nobilitye in three bookes.

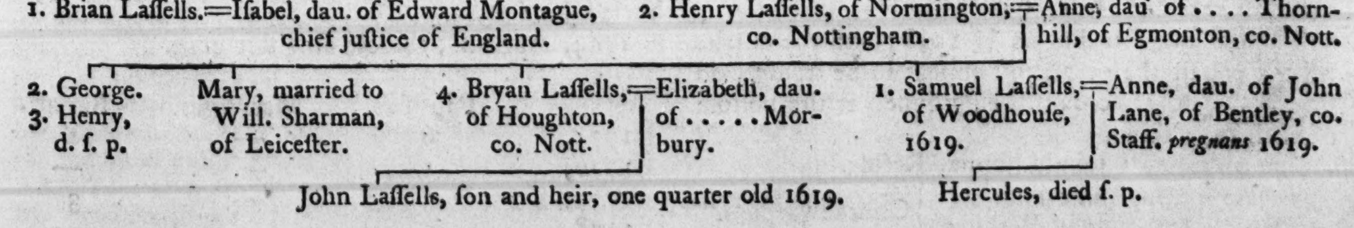
"But, when this buiſineſſe was to be performed, and that huge maſſe of notes and obſervations to be digeſted accordingly, whether through diffidence of his owne ability or performance, or through the feare of ſo immenſe a moles which he had to rune over, or through the intolerable paynes and ſtudye which he tooke in the managing thereof, he fell diſtract in his brane; died 18 April[2], 1552, 6 Edward VI; and was buried in the church of St. Michael's at Corne at the upper end of Cheapſide in London. After whoſe deceaſe, all his manuſcriptes and bookes, by the ſpecial command of the king, were ſeiſed on by ſir John Cheke, then ſchoolmaſter to the king, at his ſtudye in Pater Noſter Row. King Edward the next yeare after departed this life; then were the ſayd bookes diſperſed by ſir John Cheke into many mens handes; ſome to William lord Paget, ſome to ſir William Cecill, afterwards lord Burghley, his brother-in-lawe. John Bale had a great number of them (as it ſhould ſeeme by the loane of Leland himſelf), which, when he was made biſhop of Oſſery, he took with him into Ireland; who, after being forced to flye for Religion's ſake into Germany in the beginning of queen Maries tyme, left them all behind him, and there loſt them, as himſelf doth intimate to Conrade Geſner, in the latter end of his 13th Century[3], where he ſetteth downe a large catalogue of all his bookes ſo left and loſt. Ould John Stowe mett with ſome, which now I heare are in the handes of the lord William Howard, of Naworth Caſtle; ſome fell to others, and many whereof I have ſeene in ſeveral mens handes. Three partes of his Collectanea, and his booke De Viris Illuſtribus, in folio, written with Lelandes owne hande; which bookes are mentioned by Bale, 8 Cent. p. 672, were given to mee by a neere and deare kinſman, who had them of the guift of ſir John Cheke's ſonne; and ſynce the firſt edition of this booke, I have happened upon eight partes of his Itinerary in 4to, all written alſo with his owne hand. The commencement of the firſt part is from Cambridge to Elleſley village, &c. to which part I have prefixed Lelandes Epiſtle to King Henry VIII.; which ſayd eight parts, and more now imbeſiled and loſt, were ſometimes belonging to my ſayd kinſman; which Itinerary, without all queſtion, Mr. Camden had ſeen and peruſed, as whoſo readeth them comparatively together may ſafely perceive; which alſo, without doubt, was his greateſt encouragement to beginne his Deſcription of Magna Britannia. All which ſaid bookes of Leland I have beſtowed upon the Univerſity Library in Oxford; where they now remaine."

On the deſcription of the plate of the Barrow foſſils, Mr. Aſhby obſerves, "In p. 82, note 4, for "60" ſhould be read "600."—Others go much farther, and ſay, that the plain top of Mount Cenis has been covered with water, though it is higher than Mount Etna ſurmounted by Veſuvius. I believe I have often mentioned a ſuſpicion that the volcanic tract of our country began at Barrow, from its lime and ſlates of Swithland; but I ſee Mr. Abraham Mills, in Phil. Tranſ. 1790, Part I. fixes the commencement of this tract in Derbyſhire; but there may have been a detached outwork as far Southerly as this place: even the long ridge through Lancaſhire, and tending to Belfaſt in Ireland, is not without its interruptions and breaks; witneſs the Iriſh Channel. At Antigua, on accidentally ſtriking a ſtone in a quarry in a mountain 300 yards higher than the higheſt water-mark, the ſtone ſplit, and diſcovered the exact portraiture of a fiſh, which is called an Old Wife; Gent. Mag. vol. XXVII. p. 22. The firſt mention of our Barrow fiſh, I believe, was in Gent. Mag. vol. XLVIII. p. 332.

"To the note 7, pp. 83, 84, St. Martin's beads, add, Drayton, in his Polyolbion, Song II. obſerves, that Portland produces "the baſtard coral beads; of which the Naiads, &c. make tawdries for theirnecks[4];" which will go a great way in explaining this paſſage; only I reckon that at laſt ſo common a ſubſtance as red ſealing-wax was uſed."

Pedigree of LASSELLS, of WOODHOUSE. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: 1. and 4. Argent, three chaplets Gules; 2. Azure, three bars Argent, each charged with three mullets Gules; 3. Argent, a chevron between three lions' heads eraſed Gules. Creſt, out of a ducal coronet Or, a gryphon's head Vert[5].



1. Brian Laſſells.=Iſabel, dau. of Edward Montague, chief juſtice of England.

2. Henry Laſſells, of Normington, co. Nottingham.=Anne, dau. of .... Thornhill, of Egmonton, co. Nott.

2. George.

3. Henry, d. ſ. p.

Mary, married to Will. Sharman, of Leiceſter.

4. Bryan Laſſells, of Houghton, co. Nott.=Elizabeth, dau. of ..... Morbury.

1. Samuel Laſſells, of Woodhouſe, 1619.=Anne, dau. of John Lane, of Bentley, co. Staff. pregnans 1619.

John Laſſells, ſon and heir, one quarter old 1619.

Hercules, died ſ. p.

---

[1] Burton's authority is quoted by Tanner, Bibliotheca Britannica, p. 475.

[2] So write Sigiſmundus Gelenius; Bale, Cent. 8. fol. 672; and Pitz de illuſtribus Angliæ Scriptoribus, fol. 744.

[3] Bale, Cent. 13. fol. 159.

[4] See alſo Hutchins's Dorſetſhire; and an Engliſh tranſlation of Don Quixote, vol. IV. p. 182.

[5] See Plate XVIII. fig. 53.—The arms in that plate, fig. 21, are thoſe of Skinner Ryther, eſq. of Bingham, whoſe daughter and heir Mary was married to Mr. Heanes (p. 117); and ſhould be thus deſcribed: "Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, three creſcents Or, Ryther; 2. and 3. Azure, a feſs Or. Creſt, out of a mural coronet Or, a herald tiger's head Sable."—See ſome particulars of this family, and particularly of Mrs. Mary Heanes, the laſt ſurvivor of them, in Gent. Mag. vol. LXIV. p. 1158.

BEBY.

The following article from Mr. Burton's MS. and the extracts from the Regiſters of this pariſh, came to hand too late to be incorporated with the ſubſequent pages.

"This towne did ſometimes belong to the abbey of Crowland in Lincolnſhire (founded by Ethelbald king of Mercia, 716.) by the grant of Turketill, chancellor to Edred a Saxon king of England; the circumſtance whereof, as I fynd ſett downe by Ingulphus abbot of Crowland in his hiſtory (who lived in the tyme of king Edward the Confeſſor and William the Conqueror), will not be impertinent here to be remembered. When as in the yeare of Chriſt 947 the Northumbrians beganne to rebell againſt king Edred, ſole monarch of England, being countennanced therein by Wolſtan archbiſhop of Yorke; Turketill, chancellor and coſin germane to the king, was ſent againſt them, who in his journey paſſed by this abbey of Crowland, where he was entertained by three monks there only reſiding, who related to him the cauſe of the ruine and deſolation of their houſe, occaſioned by the violence and fury of the barbarous Danes, intreating his favour and aſſiſtance towardes the reſtitution and repaire of the ſame; who, upon this diſcourſe, was ſo greatly moved with pittye, that he then made promiſe of his helpe and endeavour with all ſpeed he could. Having well and with good ſucceſſe diſpatched his buiſineſſe, upon his returne he made knowne the iſſue thereof to the king, as alſo the great deſolation of this antient monaſterye, and his promiſe paſſed for the re-edifying of the ſame. The king, perceiving his chancellour's earneſt deſire and promiſe to effect the workes of charitye, one daye called him into his cloſet, and falling downe there at his feete, intreated him not to forſake him in theſe his troubles, but to grant him ſuch aſſiſtance as he could. The chancellour, commiſſerating the paſſions of the king, yet intreating licence that he might make performance of his promiſe to the monkes of Crowland already had; whereas he was at that preſent ſeiſed of 60 manors, he granted every tenth manor to this abbeye; viz. ſixe manors, and gave the other ſixe nines, viz. 54, to the ſaid king Edred; amongſt which number of ſixe thus granted to this abbey, this manour of Beby, with the advowſon of the church, was one; all which ſayd ſixe manors, as alſo divers other manors and landes, were granted and confirmed to the ſayd abbey by the ſayd king Edred in the yeare 948, and in the third yeare of his raigne; in which yeare alſo the ſaid Turketill the chancellour reſigning his place and all worldly dignities, having now built this monaſterye and reſtored it to the former worth, was made abbot of the ſaid houſe, and there dyed in the yeare 975, of his age 68, of his government 27. He in his lyfe-time did aſſigne this manor, with the advowſon of the church, to the office of the chamberlain of the abbey. After Egelric, abbot anno 978, did charge this manor with the fynding of certeine apparell and veſtimentes for the monkes. The particular of this mannor and other landes in this countye, belonging to the abbeye, is expreſſed by Ingulphus, fol. 517."

PARISH REGISTER [1].

The old Regiſter begins in 1538; and the entries till the end of the year 1599 appear to be tranſcribed from ſome other account, being ſigned at the bottom of each page thus:

"John Alſoppe, Rector.
John Smith,
John Webſter, } Churchwardens."

For the firſt 20 years the average of baptiſms are $6\frac{1}{2}$ of marriages $1\frac{1}{2}$
of funerals $3\frac{3}{20}$

1626, John Alſoppe ſigns the Regiſter as rector.

1636, Miſtreſs Dorothy Hanſon, the wife of Mr. Foulke Hanſon, was buried April 24, aged 41 years.

Rebecca, daughter of Mr. Alexander Bickerton and Sarah his wife, was buried Jan. 25.

Franciſcus Reddington, curate.

1654, John Draycot, miniſter of this pariſh, was buried the firſt day of December.

1655, John French, miniſter of this pariſh, was buried the 14th day of November.

Captain Varnell Dale and Mrs. Elizabeth Turville married the 23d day of June, 1655.

1669, Sept. 30, Alexander Bickerton, gent. was buried.

1670, Samuel Bickerton, ſon of the ſaid Alexander Bickerton, was buried, aged 22 years and a quarter.

1671, Anthony Barker, gent. and Mary Drury, were married in the pariſh church of Beby, Nov. 20.

1673, William, ſon of Henry Stafford, curate, and Dorothy his wife, was born Auguſt 19.

1676, Anne, daughter of Mr. John Jarrett and Elizabeth his wife, was baptized April 28.

1677, Thomas Bickerton, of Beby, gent. and Frances Tunſtall, of Caythorpe, ſecond daughter of Ralph Tunſtall, of Caythorpe in the county of Lincoln, were married, in the pariſh church of Caythorpe, by Alexander Bickerton.

1691, P. Balguy, rector.

1724, The Rev. Mr. Patritius Balguy was buried Oct. 29.

1724, Memorand', this day of anno Dñi , That Paul Balguy, late rector of Beby, in the county of Leiceſter, hath, by his laſt will and teſtament, given unto the poor of Beby aforeſaid, the ſum of ten ſhillings yearly for ever, to be paid out of the rents of a quartern or fourth part of one yard-land, lying and being in the fields, liberties, and precincts, of South Croſon, Bareſby, and Newbold, which the ſaid Paul Balguy purchaſed of Thomas Knight and Mary his wife anno Dñi 1714, and now in the tenure and occupation of Edward Goodby and his aſſigns, to the Reverend the Rector of Beby, and to his ſucceſſors, and to the churchwarden and overſeer of the poor of Beby and their ſucceſſors, upon Wedneſday in Eaſter week yearly for ever, at the pariſh church of Beby, and to be then and there by them paid to and diſtributed amongſt ten of the pooreſt perſons of Beby aforeſaid, reſpect being had to thoſe poor of Beby aforeſaid who do moſt frequent the Prayers, Holy Communion, and the Sermons of the pariſh church there; and for default and want of payment of the aforeſaid ten ſhillings, as is before appointed, that then it ſhall and may be lawful for ſuch perſon or perſons who, by virtue of the laſt will and teſtament of the aforeſaid Paul Balgay, are entitled to receive the ſame for the ten of the poor as aboveſaid to be diſtributed, upon the ſaid land before-mentioned to enter, and to diſtrain the profits of the ſame for the uſe of the poor of Beby aforeſaid, as may be ſeen in the laſt will and teſtament of the aforeſaid Paul Balguy in the Regiſter-office at Leiceſter.

1725, the Rev. John Brown, rector of Beby.

1742, William Storrs, rector.

1767, The Rev. William Storrs, late rector, was buried June 15.

1783, April 28, the old Regiſter ends.

	Baptiſms.	Marriages.	Burials.
1775,	6	—	1
1776,	1	—	—
1777,	2	—	3
1778,	3	—	—
1779,	2	—	6
1780,	1	—	3
1781,	2	—	1
1782,	2	—	1
1783,	1	—	2

---

[1] Communicated in 1799 by the Rev. Henry Woodcock, vicar of Barkby.

BEBY,

in antient writings called Bebi, Beeby, and Biby, is a large lordſhip of old incloſure, about five miles Eaſtward from Leiceſter; bounded by Humberſton, Barkby, Hamilton, Keame, South Croxton, and a ſmall part of Scraptoft; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

This lordſhip occurs very early in Engliſh Hiſtory, being noticed, together with Sutton juxta Boſworth in this county, as part of the poſſeſſions of the abbot and convent of Croyland, to whom theſe lordſhips had been given, though ſo long before the Conqueſt, by a Norman of no ſmall conſequence (donum Normanni quondam vicecomitis). This paſſage occurs in a confirmation-grant of Witlaff [1] king of the Mercians, about 830; and in a ſubſequent grant by king Beorred, who reigned in 852, the ſame lordſhips are repeated, with the addition of Stapleton, and are again ſtated as de dono Normanni quondam vice-domini [2].

In conſequence of the invaſion of the Danes, the abbey of Croyland, having been repeatedly plundered by the armies of both parties, was almoſt totally deſtroyed, their church burnt, the abbot, prior, ſub-prior, and many of the monks murdered. The few ſurvivors, though reduced to extreme diſtreſs, after clearing away the ruins, elected Godric for their abbot; and began to repair their damaged houſe; but, whilſt in this calamitous ſtate, the principal part of their poſſeſſions fell a prey to Beorred the Mercian king; who, ſoon after quitting his kingdom in deſpair, retired to Rome, where he died in 874; and by Ceolwlph, whom the Danes had placed on the vacant throne, was this ill-fated abbey once more plundered to ſuch a degree, that, on the death of abbot Godric in 941, there were only five old monks ſurviving, Clarenbauld, Swarting, Thurgar, Brun, and Aio; and of theſe the two laſt had retired in deſpair to Wincheſter and Malmeſbury. At this ſad period Thurketyl [3], couſin and chancellor to king Edred, going to York, of which church he was a prebendary, to quell a rebellion in Northumberland, and taking Croyland in his way, was received, with his numerous attendants, by the three monks, in a little oratory and cell which they had fitted up; and they ſo wrought on his compaſſion, that from that time, ſays their hiſtorian, his ſoul was ſo knit (conglutinatus) to theirs and to their houſe, that they were never abſent from his thoughts. He left them a ſupply of proviſions, and 100 ſhillings to buy more; was perpetually talking of their hoſpitality, humanity, and misfortune; and from him Croyland firſt got the name of Courteous. After executing his commiſſion in the North with ſucceſs, he took Croyland in his way back, and gave the old monks 20 pounds of ſilver. He did not ſtop here; but pleaded their cauſe with his royal maſter, and declared his fixed intention of becoming himſelf one of their fraternity. The king condeſcended to every method to diſſuade his faithful and valiant ſervant from ſuch a reſolution, but in vain. The chancellor prevailed on him to viſit Croyland with him in perſon, previous to which he arranged his worldly affairs; and, having diſcharged all his debts, made over ſixty manors to the king [4], reſerving every tenth manor for his favourites. Theſe ſix lay near Croyland; and were, Wendlingborough, Elmyngton, Worthorp, Cotenham, Hokyngton, and Beby. He flew to Croyland; and finding there the three old men in their retreat, communicated to them his intention of coming among them, and immediately ſet about reſtoring their boundary-ſtones [5]. He carried back with him their charters [6] and records; and redeemed from earl Lewin their lands in Spalding, Whaplode, and Sutterton, for forty mancs of gold; from earl Alpher, for ten mancs of gold, Drayton; from earl Athelwold, for a like ſum, Standen and Badby [7]; from earl Ailwin, Morburn; from duke Oſlac, for twelve mancs of gold, Bokenhale and Halyngton, in Lindſey. Langtoft and Baſton were reſtored by the king. Depyng had devolved to two daughters of Langfer, king Beorred's panetarius, who would not give it up while Turketyl lived. Duke Oſbricht was as tenacious of Kirkton, Kymerby, and Croxton; and the writings were loſt; nor were they mentioned in any royal charter. Turketyl recovered alſo Glapthorn, Thirning, Laythorp, Kirby, Peakirk, both Addingtons, Repingale, Sutton, and Stapleton.

No ſooner were the king and his miniſters arrived at Croyland, than Brun and Aio were ſent for from Wincheſter and Malmeſbury. They were eminent for learning, devotion, and other accompliſhments. In the preſence of the five monks, Turketyl put off the lay habit; and, after the king had preſented him with the paſtoral ſtaff, received the benediction from Ceolwlph, biſhop of Dorcheſter, his dioceſan. The next ſtep taken by the new abbot and his little convent was to reſign their houſe and poſſeſſions into the hands of the king; who engaged the ſeveral workmen, appointing as overſeer over them Egelric, a clerk of his own family, and relation to Turketyl, with leave to draw on the Exchequer, and an ample ſupply of wood and ſtone out of his royal manor of Gaſtor adjoining. In a ſhort time the church and cloyſter, with every building, were compleated. The king, the abbot, and the two ſecular monks, Turgar and Aio, returned to London; where, in a great council of the nation, A. D. 948, Edred granted them an ample charter [8]; in which, however, for wiſe and politic reaſons, he refuſed to confirm the privileges of ſanctuary to this abbey. Turketyl, on his return to Croyland, was attended by a number of learned men; of whom ten entered into the ſociety; the reſt continued ſeculars, ſome as prieſts, others as clerks. All theſe he placed in the cell of St. Pega (ſiſter to St. Guthlac), with a daily allowance to each as to the monks, and built them an oratory. They all wore the ſame habit; a long black gown, and under-garments, reaching to their heels; and as they had ſo handſome an allowance, and no other reſtriction but to obſerve continence and obedience, ſcarcely any of them, ſays Ingulphus, returned to the world again. They had a prior elected by themſelves, and confirmed by the abbot. Some of them cloſed their life in a moſt holy manner, and were buried there: others became monks and even abbots here, as the two Egelrics ſucceſſively. Towards the end of Turketyl's life Pegeland was almoſt deſerted by its preſbyters, who turned monks, and there was not one left to officiate there. Whoever applied for admiſſion into this abbey was firſt placed in Pegeland, and, according to the report of him from thence, admitted or rejected. Turketyl, in honour of St. Pega, appointed a prieſt to celebrate ſervice there, without eſtabliſhing a college of regulars or irregulars, which would have been prejudicial to his houſe. He was indefatigable in carrying on the buildings at Croyland; and, in the 8th year of Edgar, 966, obtained from that prince a charter, in which Beby, Sutton, and Stapleton, were again included; and which was farther guarded by an eccleſiaſtical cenſure, the form of which may be ſeen in Ingulphus [1]. He next applied himſelf to collect the muniments of his houſe, on which he was well aſſiſted by his monks [2]. At this time was drawn up a regular hiſtory, containing the principal events of the abbey, with thoſe of the kingdoms of Mercia and Weſſex interſperſed, from its firſt foundation by king Ethelbald to the 14th year of king Edgar. On reviſing the antient rules and ordinances of his houſe, Turketyl enacted many new ones [3]. He annexed to the office of ſacriſt that of archdeacon over the whole pariſh of Croyland; and gave to the ſacriſt a gold chalice and two ſilver-gilt (phialas) bowls wrought with two angels, and two beautiful large ſilver baſons moſt elegantly wrought with armed ſoldiers; all which were a preſent to him from the emperor of Germany, and had till then been uſed in his own chapel. He alſo ſettled on the chamber of the monks (officio cameræ monachorum) his manor of Beby, with the church of that village.

---

[1] Appendix to the Hiſtory of Croyland, 1783, Bibl. Top. Brit. N° XI. p. 7.

[2] Ibid. p. 15.

[3] Turketyl was eldeſt ſon of Ethelward, brother of king Edward the Elder, who gave him his paternal inheritance, and frequently propoſed to him an advantageous match among the great families of the kingdom. From his refuſal of theſe, the king inferred his turn was for religion, and offered him two biſhopricks; but he refuſed every offer not only of a temporal but of a ſpiritual kind; till at length the king advanced him to the high poſt of chancellor, which he filled with equal advantage to the king and kingdom, and honour to himſelf. In the reign of Athelſtan, at the famous battle of Brunburgh, Turketyl commanded the Londoners and Mercians, who engaged the Scots under Conſtantine, and, after a moſt bloody conflict, had nearly made himſelf maſter of the Scottiſh king's perſon, when he was ſurrounded, and on the point of being himſelf made priſoner, had not one of his officers ſlain the king, by whoſe death victory declared in favour of the Engliſh. He had the honour of conducting the four daughters of Athelſtan to their huſbands on the Continent; the Emperor's ſon, and one of his principal lords, the king of France, and the prince of Aquitaine. When Dunſtan was diſgraced, and baniſhed the court of king Edmund, he was the principal inſtrument in his recall to the favour of king Edmund, and made him a preſent of a rich chalice, preſerved at Glaſtonbury in Ingulph's time, and called Turketyl's chalice. He continued to hold his poſt of chancellor, in each ſucceeding reign, from his firſt advancement, and in that of Edred we have ſeen his exertions in behalf of Croyland Abbey. Ingulphus, p. 36—38. And ſee Pet. Bleſenſis, p. 118.

[4] "Turketillus, quidam clericus Londinenſis, poſſidens 60 maneria de patrimonio parentum, pro eorum animabus ſex villag', ſcil. Wendleburgh & Beby, Wivitorp & Almpitonam, Cotenham & Ouguſtonam, Crulandenſi eccleſiæ dedit; & in teſtamentum idem ſigillo ſtrenuiſſimo regis confirmavit." Ordericus Vitalis, p. 541.

[5] One of theſe ſtones, ſtill remaining, occaſioned an intereſting controverſy amongſt ſeveral learned Antiquaries; the reſult of which may be ſeen in the Preface to Bibl. Top. Brit. N° XI. See alſo an accurate delineation of the ſtone itſelf in Plate XXIX.

[6] The ſeal of this houſe, as given by Reyner, p. 215, and Fuller, p. 223, and engraved in Tanner's Notitia, XCIII. bore, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, three St. Bartholomew's knives; 2. and 3. Azure, three St. Guthlac's whips. But in an Aſhmolean MS. N° 763, there is another coat, Gules, a croſs flory Or, within a border Azure Enaluron of nine croſs croſslets Argent. See Plate XXX. fig. 1, 2. Enaluron is the term applied to a border charged with eagles or other birds (Edmondſon); but it is improperly applied to any other charge.

[7] In Northamptonſhire.

[8] In this charter, in which the king ſtyles himſelf "Ego Edredus, rex terrenus ſub imperiali potentiâ Regis ſeculorum æternique Principis, Magnæ Britanniæ temporale gerens imperium," the lands conferred in Leiceſterſhire are, in Beby decem carucatas terræ & dimidiam, cum eccleſiâ ejuſdem villæ; in Sutton duas carucatas terræ; in Stapelton duas carucatas terræ." The charter

The venerable Turketyl, now beginning to ſink under the weight of years, and the great fatigues he had gone through, and the many wounds he had received in early life, applied himſelf to the duties of charity and religion, viſiting the children of noblemen in their noviciate, and the clergy at Pegeland who inſtructed them; in which viſits he was always attended by a ſervant, who carried dried or ripe fruits, with almonds, and other little preſents, to encourage the young ſcholars, who were ſure of his prayers and rewards. When Clarenbauld, who had completed his 168th year, fell ſick of his laſt illneſs, Turketyl never left him; and, after his death, buried him in the middle of the choir. He ſhewed the ſame affectionate concern for Swarting, who died the next year, in his 142d year, and buried him by the former; as he did alſo Brun and Aio within the ſame year, which was the 14th of king Edgar; and in the next year Turgar, in his 115th year. Laſt of all, in the year following, which was the ſixteenth and laſt year of king Edgar, and of our Lord 975, Turketyl himſelf departed this life in his 68th year. He had celebrated, with great devotion, the feſtival of St. Peter and St. Paul; which falling in the dog-days, in that year uncommonly hot, he caught a fever, which was for three days very violent. On the fourth day he ſent for the whole convent, 47 monks and 4 lay-brethren, to his chamber; and, in their preſence, commanded Egelric, his ſteward, to ſhew them the ſtate of the houſe, for which he made him anſwerable by deed after his death. This treaſure amounted to £10,000. There were alſo many very precious reliques, preſents to Turketyl, when chancellor, from the different ſovereigns of Europe and other noble perſonages [4]. The diſorder increaſing, the day before his death he addreſſed a brief exhortation to the brethren to charity, obſervance of their rule, warning them againſt negligence both in temporal and ſpiritual concerns, and particularly to be careful of their fire [5]. His ſtrength gradually failing, he finiſhed his courſe on the tranſlation of St. Benedict his patron, in the 68th year of his age, and 27th of his profeſſion, and was buried on the right hand of the high altar, by his neighbours, Aedulph abbot of Peterborough, and Godman abbot of Thorney [6].

The next notice which occurs of the manor of Beby is in the Conqueror's ſurvey; where the Abbey of Croyland is enumerated amongſt the landholders in Leiceſterſhire, for property in Bebi, Sutton, and Stapleton; and, in right of ſome of theſe (moſt probably Beby), had three houſes within the city of Leiceſter, from which the king received his geld [7]. The abbot at that time held in Bebi ten ploughlands and a half, which in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor had been worth ſixty ſhillings, but then worth only forty. The land was equal to ſeven [8] ploughs; one of which was uſed in the demeſne, and two bondmen. Twenty-one villans, with five ſocmen and three bordars, had ſix other ploughs. There were thirty acres of meadow [9]. This lordſhip continued in the poſſeſſion of the abbot and convent till their diſſolution, when of courſe it fell to the crown.

In the Teſta de Nevill no notice is taken of Beby; but, in the Itinerary of 1280, Beby, Cayham, Hungarton, and Quenby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Richard de Beby was rector of Caſtor in Northamptonſhire; where he built the famous old door here exhibited in Plate XXIX.

The abbot and convent of Croyland preſented regularly to the church of Beby; and, on the vacancy of an abbot, king Edward II. preſented an incumbent [10].

Their temporalities in Leiceſterſhire and Rutland were thus valued in Pope Nicholas's taxation, 1288.

In decanatu de		Inde, in decimis,
Geyrtre	viiil. xiiiis̃. viiđ.	xvs̃. ivđ. ob̃. q̃.
Leyceſtr',	ivs̃. xđ.	vđ. ob̃. q̃.
Goſcote,	xixl. iis̃. ivđ.	xxxviiis̃. iiiđ. ob̃. q̃.
Framlond,	vis̃.	viiđ. q̃.
Sparkenhow,	xs̃.	xiiđ.
Roteland,	xxxis̃. iđ.	iiis̃. iđ. q̃.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Beby was rated at £3. 12*s*. 4*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 16*s*. 8*d*.

---

charter is ſolemnly atteſted by the two archbiſhops, four biſhops, two abbots, two dukes, three earls, a vice-dominus and a vice-comes, and ſeveral miniſters; and ends thus: ✠ Ego Turketulus (licet miniſter inutilis) finem cernens mei propoſiti, ob hujus rei gratiam æternum Deum laudo per omnia; & licet ſero veniens ſub habitu monachali, & animo contrito jugo regulari meipſum ſubmiſi, ut ſaltem ſic ſenectutis meæ fæces Creatori meo cogar immolare. Magnificat ergo anima mea Dominum; & vos, fratres, magnificate Dominum mecum, ut in ſanctitate & juſtitiâ coram ipſo ſervientes, ſemperque mundi principe triumphato, ſic curramus in præſentis vitæ ſtadio ut in futuro ad divinæ ſpeculationis βραβεῖον pertingere mereamur. Amen."

[1] P. 44.

[2] Aio was an able civilian; Thurgar, from his earlieſt youth, had known the monaſtery before its late demolition; and Swetman, a ſkilful notary, who digeſted them in their proper order and a correct ſtyle.

[3] See theſe in the Hiſtory of Croyland, p. 14.

[4] Among theſe was the thumb of St. Bartholomew, which Turketyl always carried about with him; ſome of the Virgin Mary's hair; a bone of St. Leodegaire; and many others; whereof ſome were loſt, and ſome remained till Ingulphus's time. P. 51.

[5] De ignis noſtri diligenti cuſtodia, frequently repeating ignem veſtrum optime cuſtodite, which Ingulphus refers prophetically to the dreadful conflagration which deſtroyed this abbey in his time.

[6] Ingulph. p. 31—52.—" The tenants of the ſite of the abbey lately dug up his ſtone-coffin among many others." Stukeley, Palæogr. Brit. vol. II. p. 35. 1746.

[7] " Abbatia de Cruiland habet 3 domos; de quibus habet rex geldum ſuum." Domeſday, fol. 230. a. 1.

[8] A miſtake of Ingulphus on this paſſage has been noticed in vol. I. p. vi.

[9] " Ipſa Abbatia tenet in Bebi 10 carucatas terræ & dimidiam. Terra eſt 7 carucarum. In dominico eſt una, & 2 ſervi; & 21 villani, cum ſocmannis, & 3 bordariis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi 30 acræ prati. Valuit 60 ſolidos; modò 40 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 231. a. 2.

[10] In May 1317. Reg. D'Alderby, ep. Lincoln.

The poſſeſſions of Croyland abbey in this county were thus valued in 1530:

"Valet in penſione annuatim dicto monaſterio ſolut', viz. extra monaſterium Croxton, vi s̃. viii d̃.

Valet in penſione annuatim ſolut' dicto monaſterio, extra eccleſiam de Beby, xx s̃.

Valet in redditibus aſſiſ', cum redditibus & ſerviciis, in Beby, Thorpe, Sutton, Leiceſter, & Barkby, per annum, prout modò demittitur Willielmo Villers, cum perquiſit' curiarum communibus annis, xxiii li. i s̃. viii d̃.[1]"

The lordſhip of Beby was afterwards the property of Henry Grey duke of Suffolk; on whoſe attainder in 1553, it was granted, by king Edward VI. to Robert Catelin, eſq. a native of this village (deſcended from an antient family in Northamptonſhire); who "was bred," ſays Fuller, "in the municipal law; profiting ſo well therein, that, after being king and queen's ſerjeant[2] in the reign of Philip and Mary, he was in the firſt of Elizabeth made lord chief juſtice of the king's bench. His name hath ſome alluſion to the Roman ſenator[3], who was the incendiary of that ſtate, though in Nature far different, as who by his wiſdom and gravity was a great ſupport to his nation. One point of law I have learned from him, at the trial of Thomas duke of Norfolk; who pleaded out of Bracton, 'that the teſtimonies of foreigners (the moſt pungent that were brought againſt him) were of no validity.' Here Sir Robert delivered it for law, 'that, in caſe of treaſon, they might be given in for evidence; and that it reſted in the breaſt of the peers[4] whether or no to afford credit unto them.' He had one (as what man hath not many) fancy, that he had a prejudice againſt all thoſe who write their names with an alias; and took exceptions at one in this reſpect, ſaying, 'that no honeſt man had a double name, or came in with an alias[5].' The party aſked him what exceptions his lordſhip could take at Jeſus Chriſt, alias Jeſus of Nazareth. He died in 1574, in the ſixteenth year of queen Elizabeth; and his coat of arms, viz. Party per chevron, Azure and Or, three lions paſſant guardant in pale counterchanged, a chief pearl[6], is quartered by the right honourable the lord Spencer, earl of Sunderland; this Judge's daughter and ſole heir being married to his anceſtor. Some forty years ſince a gentleman of his name and kindred had a cauſe in the upper-bench, to which the Chief Juſtice therein ſaid, 'Your kinſman was my predeceſſor in the Court, and a great lawyer.'—'My lord' (replied the gentleman) 'he was a very honeſt man, for he left a ſmall eſtate:' but indeed, though his eſtate was not conſiderable, compared to his ſucceſſor's then preſent, it was in itſelf of a good valuation."

Sir Robert Catelin and Anne[7] his wife (who in 1559 obtained a grant of the manor of Barne, and other lands, in Dorſetſhire[8]) were ſeiſed of the manor of Beby, with the appurtenances, and the advowſon of the church; of the late houſe of Friers in Leiceſter, called The Black Friers[9]; of a cloſe of paſture in Leiceſter, in tenure of George Cato; of the manor of Gilmorton, in this county; and of all the meſſuages, tenements, and hereditaments, in Gilmorton, that were the inheritance of ſir Richard Morriſon, knt.; and alſo of all the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Leiceſter, late parcel of the poſſeſſion of the College of the Bleſſed Virgin of the Newark in Leiceſter, and of the late gilds of Corpus Chriſti and St. Margaret's in Leiceſter, which he purchaſed of king Edward the Sixth. Theſe, with many other lands, were ſettled by ſir Robert and his lady, after their deceaſe, on their only daughter Mary, and the heirs male of her body by ſir John Spencer, of Althorp, in the county of Northampton, knight; whoſe ſon Robert, created baron Spencer of Wormlington, July 21, 1603, held Beby at that time under the king in capite; and at his death, Oct. 26, 1627, was found to poſſeſs the manors of Beby and Gilmorton, with a capital meſſuage at Beby, together with view of frankpledge, and the advowſon of the church; and alſo the ſite of the Black Friers at Leiceſter; ſir William Spencer, then Knight of the Bath, being his ſon and heir[10].

In this family it continued till 1668, when Robert ſecond earl of Sunderland (ſon of Henry lord Spencer the firſt earl) diſpoſed of it to Henry lord Arlington[11], as appears by the two following extracts of letters from ſir John Onebye, in that year, to Mr. Staveley:

"Feb. 27. I ſhall have a very good buſineſſe for you to acte for my lord Arlington, who hath bought Beby; which you ſhall hear of in a little time."—"March 8. My lord Arlington's buſineſs is this: He hath bought the lordſhip of Beby; and, in order to prevent the falling of his rents, he would prevent the incloſing of ſuch lordſhips in the open fields[12] that border upon Beby, which is Croſon, Keame, and Barkby. Now, if you could ſend me any particulars of any eſtate that would be found in thoſe tounes, it would doe my buſineſſe. Mr. Stringer, my lord's ſteward, will be with you in April; but, if you can ſend me any particulars before that time, you will do well[13]."—Lord Arlington continued not long the owner of Beby; for we find it ſoon after in the poſſeſſion of Anthony Aſhley Cowper, the firſt earl of Shafteſbury; and in that noble family the property ſtill continues.

Thomas Watts, eſq. (ſon of John Watts, eſq. of Beby,) was owner of the manor of Blakeſley in Northamptonſhire in 1567; and died in 1593, leaving William his ſon and heir, by —— Crouch, his firſt wife[14].

This village, which lies low, contains about 20 dwellings, and has evidently been conſiderably larger. A piece of ground here is ſtill called The Chapel Yard; and foundations of buildings are viſible in many places.

The ſmall building ſhewn near the road on the North ſide of the church, Plate XXX. is a covering over Stock Well, an excellent mineral ſpring.

In 1564, there were 19 families in Beby; and in 1630 Thomas Bickerton, eſq. was the only freeholder here.

In 1655, there was collected in Beby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 16*s*. 3*d*.

In 1722, five freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find only the rector, the Rev. Henry Baſeley, who then reſided at Kibworth.

The rev. Paul Balguy left by will 10*s*. a year in land, to be diſtributed by the rector, churchwardens, and overſeers, among ten of the pooreſt perſons in Beby.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of Beby within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	9	4	11
Expended in the county rates, &c.	4	10	6
——— on the poor, ——	4	14	5
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	1	14	0
Litigations, — — —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	31	16	0
————— 1784, —	29	17	0
————— 1785, —	28	9	9
Medium of theſe three years,	30	0	11
——— of county expences,	7	19	9
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	1	1	3
——— of nett annual expences,	20	19	11
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	12	8
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	3	5	1
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

---

[1] From the Valor in the Firſt Fruits Office, 31 Hen. VIII.

[2] In the Leiceſter Town Book he is ſtated to have been alſo Attorney-general; but this does not appear in Dugdale.

[3] Lucius Catiline.

[4] Camden, Eliz. anno 1572.

[5] Idem, in his Remains, p. 147.

[6] See Plate XXX. fig. 3.

[7] This lady, who ſurvived her huſband, was ſummoned in 1576 to ſhew by what title ſhe held the manor of Sandy in the county of Bedford. Mich. Recorda, 18 Eliz. Rot. 55.

[8] Michael. Rec. 5 & 6 Phil. & Mary, Rot. 66.

[9] The ſite of the Black Friers had been demiſed in 1539 to Thomas Catlyn, gent. See vol. I. p. 296.

[10] Inq. 4 Car. I. N° 8. p. 2.

[11] Sir Henry Bennet, created lord Arlington 14 March, 16 Car. II; and earl of Arlington 22 April, 24 Car. II.

[12] "They apprehended that increaſing graſs-grounds, in conſequence of new incloſures, woulld leſſen the value of the incloſures they had bought or made; and they thought almoſt a ſingle ſmall proprietor could ſtop an incloſure. I have heard my father ſay, that my grandfather, who was poſſeſſed of the incloſed lordſhip of Quenby, was glad to purchaſe a yard-land or ſo in the neighbouring open-fields on this principle. They were all glad enough to get or make graſs ground; and they would have nobody elſe do the ſame." G. A.

[13] See vol. II. p. 679.

[14] Bridges, vol. I. p. 232.

The Regiſter begins in 1540, and is well preſerved:

"1559. Item, 29th day of Auguſt, John and John Picke, the children of Chriſtopher and Anne, baptized.

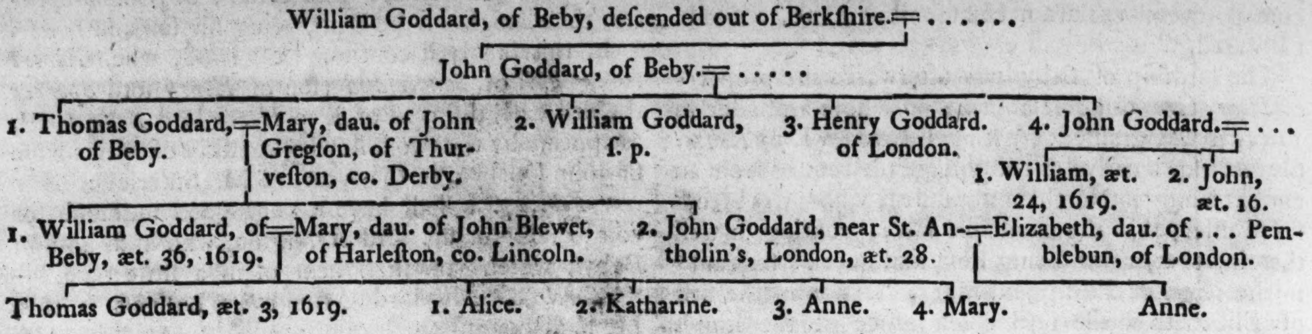
"Item, the 31ſt day of Auguſt, the ſame John and John were buried [1]."

Baptiſms, 1543—1548, 50; 1786—1790, 65.
Burials, ———— 115; ———— 77.

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 42.

Pedigree of GODDARD, of Beby. From the Viſitation of 1619; ſigned by William Goddarde.

Arms: Azure, a feſs lozengy Or and Vert, between three partridges' heads eraſed Or [2].



William Goddard, of Beby, deſcended out of Berkſhire. = ...

John Goddard, of Beby. = ...

1. Thomas Goddard, of Beby. = Mary, dau. of John Gregſon, of Thurveſton, co. Derby.
2. William Goddard, ſ. p.
3. Henry Goddard. of London.
4. John Goddard. = ...

1. William, æt. 24, 1619.
2. John, æt. 16.

1. William Goddard, of Beby, æt. 36, 1619. = Mary, dau. of John Blewet, of Harleſton, co. Lincoln.
2. John Goddard, near St. Antholin's, London, æt. 28. = Elizabeth, dau. of . . . Pemblebun, of London.

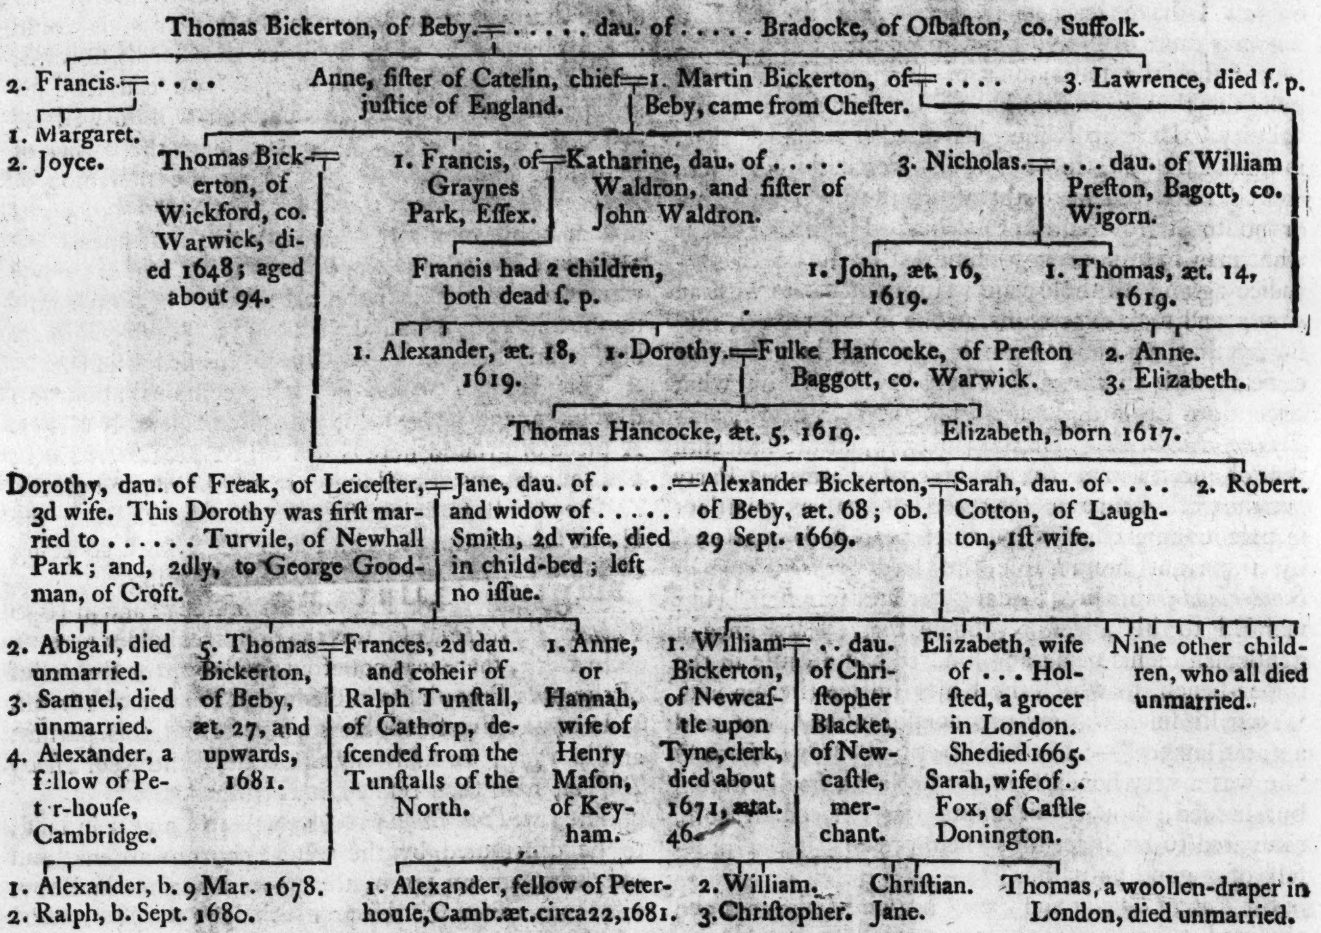
Thomas Goddard, æt. 3, 1619. 1. Alice. 2. Katharine. 3. Anne. 4. Mary.

Anne.

Pedigree of BICKERTON, of Beby.

From the Viſitation of 1619; and a Pedigree ſigned at Leiceſter by Thomas Bickerton, March 24, 1681-2.

Arms: Argent, on a chevron Sable, three pheons of the firſt [3].



Thomas Bickerton, of Beby. = ... dau. of . . . . . Bradocke, of Oſbaſton, co. Suffolk.

2. Francis. = ...
Anne, ſiſter of Catelin, chief juſtice of England. = 1. Martin Bickerton, of Beby, came from Cheſter. = ...
3. Lawrence, died ſ. p.

1. Margaret.
2. Joyce.

Thomas Bickerton, of Wickford, co. Warwick, died 1648; aged about 94. =
1. Francis, of Graynes Park, Eſſex. = Katharine, dau. of . . . . . Waldron, and ſiſter of John Waldron.
3. Nicholas. = . . . dau. of William Preſton, Bagott, co. Wigorn.

Francis had 2 children, both dead ſ. p.

1. John, æt. 16, 1619.
1. Thomas, æt. 14, 1619.

1. Alexander, æt. 18, 1619.
1. Dorothy. = Fulke Hancocke, of Preſton Baggott, co. Warwick.
2. Anne.
3. Elizabeth.

Thomas Hancocke, æt. 5, 1619. Elizabeth, born 1617.

Dorothy, dau. of Freak, of Leiceſter, 3d wife. This Dorothy was firſt married to . . . . . . Turvile, of Newhall Park; and, 2dly, to George Goodman, of Croft. = Jane, dau. of . . . . . and widow of . . . . . Smith, 2d wife, died in child-bed; left no iſſue. = Alexander Bickerton, of Beby, æt. 68; ob. 29 Sept. 1669. = Sarah, dau. of . . . . Cotton, of Laughton, 1ſt wife.
2. Robert.

2. Abigail, died unmarried.
3. Samuel, died unmarried.
4. Alexander, a fellow of Peter-houſe, Cambridge.
5. Thomas Bickerton, of Beby, æt. 27, and upwards, 1681. = Frances, 2d dau. and coheir of Ralph Tunſtall, of Cathorp, deſcended from the Tunſtalls of the North.
1. Anne, or Hannah, wife of Henry Maſon, of Keyham.
1. William Bickerton, of Newcaſtle upon Tyne, clerk, died about 1671, ætat. 46. = . . dau. of Chriſtopher Blacket, of Newcaſtle, merchant.
Elizabeth, wife of . . . Holſted, a grocer in London. She died 1665.
Sarah, wife of . . Fox, of Caſtle Donington.
Nine other children, who all died unmarried.

1. Alexander, b. 9 Mar. 1678.
2. Ralph, b. Sept. 1680.

1. Alexander, fellow of Peter-houſe, Camb. æt. circa 22, 1681.
2. William.
3. Chriſtopher.
Chriſtian.
Jane.
Thomas, a woollen-draper in London, died unmarried.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XXX.)

is dedicated to All Saints; and conſiſts of a ſtout tower (in which are three bells), ſurmounted by a clumſy half-finiſhed ſpire [4]; a nave, chancel, and two ailes, over which are three clereſtory windows.

The font has four ſides, and is leaded. It ſtands on a very old ſhaft; and has a wooden top with a croſs.

In this church Mr. Burton mentions theſe arms: (See the tomb of William Villiers, Pl. XXX.)

1. Party per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent. Beler.
2. Argent, on a croſs Gules, five eſcalops Or, Villiers.
3. Ermine, two chevrons Sable.
4. Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent. Villiers antient.

Here are ſtill a few fragments of painted glaſs.

The following dates and initials are raiſed on the leads of the tower at the baſe of the ſteeple:

"G. D. 1715." "R. P. 1746."

In the Matriculus of 1220, Beby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of Croyland; the then rector, Hugo de Samford, inſtituted by biſhop Hugh Welles, and paying one mark to the miniſter of Croyland ab antiquo. The abbot had alſo been immemorially accuſtomed to keep the tithe of the deməſne in his own hands [5].

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 24 marks, and paid 2*s*. for Peter-pence. The abbot of Croyland had alſo a penſion from it of one mark.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 10*s*. 1*d*.; the abbot of Croyland's penſion £1.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £60; and the incumbent not at all mentioned.

The preſent value in the king's books is £15. 2*s*. 6*d*.; reputed value of the rectory £150; the epiſcopal procurations are 4*s*. 4*d*.; the archidiaconal, 11*s*. 1*d*.

---

[1] Throſby, p. 124.

[2] Theſe arms were confirmed by Robert Cooke, Clarenceux. See Plate XXX. fig. 4.

[3] Ibid. fig. 5.

[4] There is a tradition, for the truth of which we cannot vouch, that two brothers, who had engaged to build the ſteeple, when they had reared it to the preſent height, quarrelled; and that one puſhed the other from the ſcaffold, who was killed on the ſpot; which was the occaſion of its not being finiſhed. On this ſubject the following coarſe verſe prevails:

"Beby Tub was to have been a ſpire:
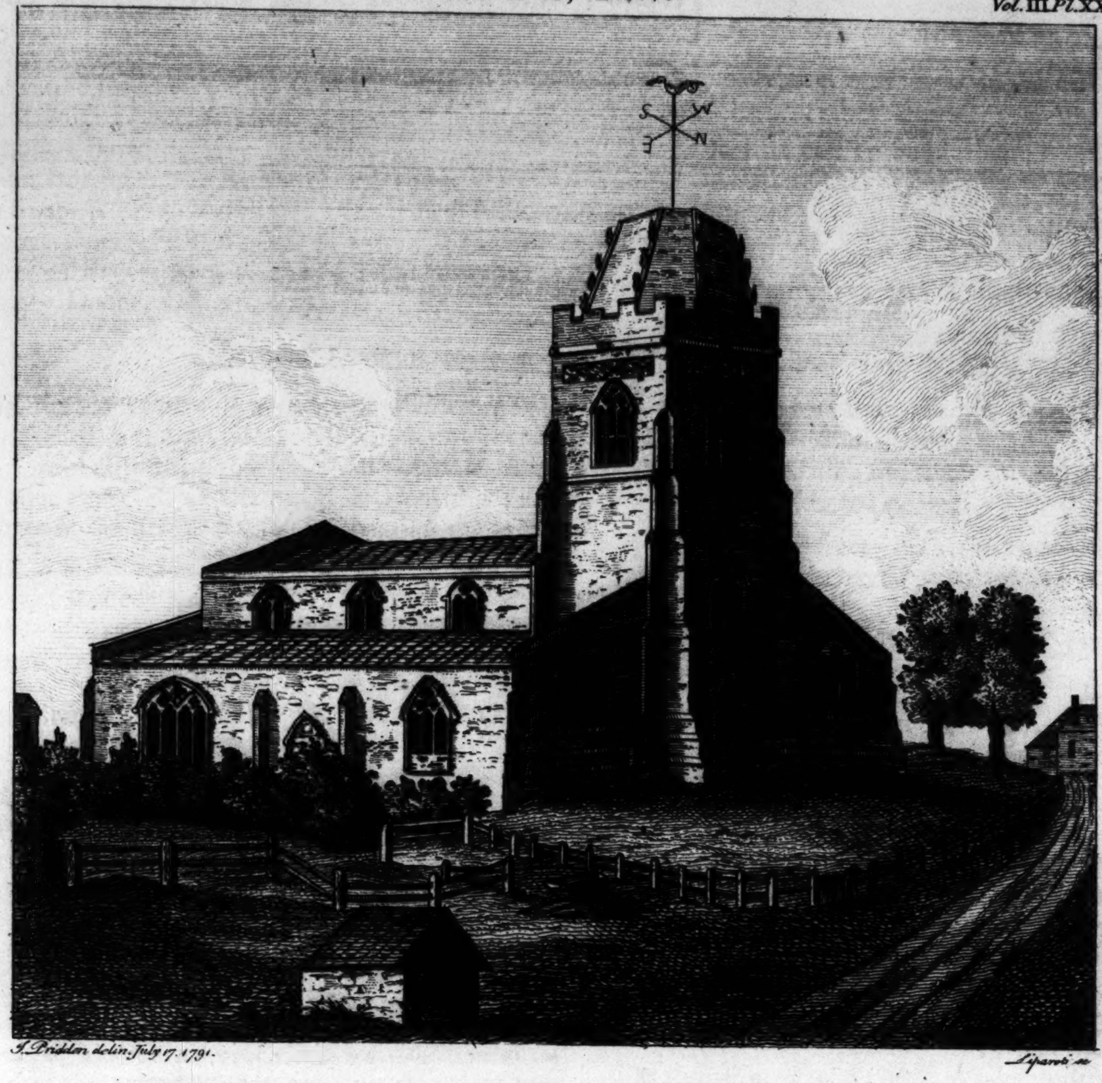
Two brothers fought, and broke their necks; and ſo 'twas built no higher."

Tradition farther ſays, that theſe brothers built the elegant ſpire of Queniborow in this neighbourhood.

[5] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

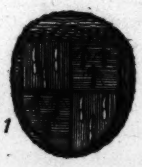
RECTORS.

BEBY, N.W.

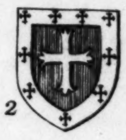


J. Pridden delin. July 17. 1791.

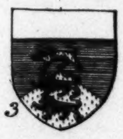
Liparoti sc.



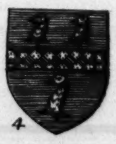
1



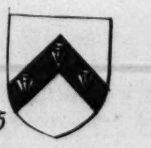
2



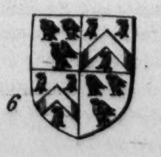
3



4



5



6

Hic iacet Willms Villers et Cecilia uxor eius; qui quidem Willms obiit anno dni
Millo cccc xxxx quorum animabus propicietur deus, Amen.

Longmate f.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Nicholas, clericus, 1219.	Abbot and convent of Croyland.
Hugo de Samford, 1220.
John Brewery[1], rector alſo of Broughton Aſtley, occurs in 1534 and 1562.
John Alſopp, 1600.
Edward Lawrence[2], died June 28, 1645.
Paul Balguy[3] occurs 1659.
Thomas Barford, May 15, 1663.	Robert earl of Sunderland.
John Browne[4], M. A. March 17, 1724.	Anthony earl of Shaftſbury.
William Storrs[5], March 31, 1742; died June 1767.	Anthony, fourth earl of Shaftſbury.
Henry Baſeley[6], B. A. Oct. 2, 1767; died Feb. 25, 1787.
Thomas Bryer, May 1, 1787; reſigned 1797.	Anthony, fifth earl of Shaftſbury.
Henry Donne, Oct. 26, 1797.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Burton notices "a tomb of William Villiers, eſq. who died in 1460;" no trace of which now remains; but is probably the ſame (though the date differs) with that engraved in Plate XXX. from the Villiers pedigree in the Britiſh Muſeum[7], bearing the ſurcoats above-deſcribed, and this inſcription:

"Hic jacet Will'm's Villers, et Cecilia uxor ejus; qui quidem Will'm's obiit . . . anno d'ni mill'mo d°xxx°, quor' aĩab's ꝓpicietur deus. Amen."

Round a flat ſtone in the nave remains,
"—— Dokett ʒ Aliciæ uxoris ejus . . . . ."

On a ſmall mural tablet of white marble at the South-eaſt corner of the chancel:

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. three eagles riſing; 2. and 3. a chevron between three eagles heads eraſed[8].

"M. S.
EDWARDI LAWRENCE, PRESBYTERI, IN ARTIBVS MAGISTRI,
HVJVS ECCLESIÆ DE BEBYE RECTORIS DIGNISSIMI; QVI
GREGEM SVVM FIDELITER PASCENDO, EGENOS ERGA
CHARITATIS OPERA EXERCENDO, HOSPITALITATEM
FOVENDO, RECTORIÆ HVIVS DOMOS RUINAM PLVS QVAM
MINITANTES A FVNDO ÆDIFICANDO; PASTORIS IMITANDI
MAXIME FVNCTVS EST OFFICIO; ET TEMPORIBVS NVPERIS
MALIS, LVCTVOSIS ADMODVM, QVI AVSVS EST ESSE
BONVS ECCLESIÆ ANGLICANÆ MATRIS SVÆ FILIVS;
FIDEM VERAM, ANTIQVAM, CATHOLICAM, ET APOSTOLICAM,
AB EA PROFESSAM, OFFICIVMQVE SVVM DEO & REGI DEBITVM, CONTRA IMPIOS ILLIVS TEMPESTATIS NOVATORES CONSTANTIA INCONCVSSA, DOCTRINA QVA POLLEBAT EXIMIE
ET PRAXI CONSIMILI VSQVE AD MORTEM ASSERENDO
PRÆSTANDO, A QVIBVS SACRILEGE VEXATVS, SPOLIATVS, LIBERTATE PRIVATVS, & DVRITER ADEO, PROH DOLOR! HABITVS, MORBVM CONTRAXIT, CELERITER LETHALEM; ANIMAM
SVAM XXVIII° DIE JVNII, ANNO AB INCARNATIONE DOMINICA
MDCXLV, BONORVM OMNIVM DESIDERIO MAXIMO, CREATORI
SVO ADDIDIT: CONFESSORIS ETIAM EMINENTER SI NON MARTYRIS, POTIVS HINC INDE MERVIT GLORIAM.
MARITI SVI MEMORIÆ CHARISSIMÆ CONIVX EIVS & RELICTA
MŒSTISSIMA ANNA MŒRENS
LVGENS POSVIT.
Juſtorum memoria benedicta. Prov. x. 7."

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. "Here lieth the body of Theodoſia[9] Balguy, xxxix years the virtuous wife of Paul Balguy, rector of Beeby, and daughter to George Savage, gent.
She departed this life Auguſt the 1ſt, A. D. 1703.
Job xix. v. 25, 26, 27."

2. "Here lieth alſo the body of the Reverend Mr. Paul Balguy[10], rector of Beeby, who departed this life the 26th day of October,
A. D. 1724, aged 87 years."

3. "Here lieth the body of the Reverend William Storrs, who was rector of this pariſh.
He departed this life the 11th of June, 1767,
aged 52 years."

In the church-yard.

Againſt the Eaſt end of the South aile:

"Here lie the earthly remains of Welby King, gentleman.
He departed this life Dec. 26, 1770, aged 58 years.
Here lie the earthly remains of Mary,
the wife of Welby King, gentleman.
She departed this life May 28, 1764, aged 41.
She was a virtuous wife,
an indulgent and tender mother;
lived a Chriſtian, and died much lamented.
On the right of the above Welby and Mary King, are alſo four of their children, viz.
Mary, James, Charles, and Mary, who all died in their infancy."

"Here lie the remains of Henry King, gent.
who departed this life Feb. 1, 1756,
aged 80 years.
Take time while time does ſerve; it's time to-day;
For ſecret dangers ſtill attend delay:
Make much of time; to-day hath eagle's wings;
And who can tell what change to-morrow brings?"

"Dormit, non mortua eſt.
Here lie the earthly remains of Anne,
the wife of Henry King, gent.
She departed this life May 9, 1773, aged 95 years.
I have fought the good fight; I have finiſhed my courſe."

On an upright ſtone:

"In memory of Suſannah, the wife of John Scott, who died July 31, 1788, aged 39 years.
No more fatigue, no more diſtreſs,
Nor ſin, nor hell, ſhall reach this place;
No groans, to mingle with the ſongs
Which warble from immortal tongues."

---

[1] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Brewery is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; mediocriter doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; degit ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; duo beneficia habet."

[2] See his epitaph above.

[3] Mr. Balguy had before been rector of South Croxton. He was one of the Puritan Divines who ſigned the Repreſentation to the Parliament in 1659; was ejected in 1662; lived to the age of 87; and was at laſt buried in his own church. See his epitaph in this page.

[4] Author of "Six Sermons on the Neceſſity of duly obſerving the holy Seaſon of Lent, 1731," 8vo; Eight Sermons of the Lady Moyer's Lecture of St. Paul's, London, intituled, "The Divine Authority of the Chriſtian Religion, and the natural Deity of Jeſus Chriſt, the Author of it, aſſerted; preached 1730 and 1731;" and three ſingle Sermons, 1725, 1729, 1735.

[5] See his epitaph above. [6] See before, under Kibworth, vol. II. p. 641. [7] Harl. MSS. 7178. [8] Plate XXX. fig. 6.

[9] See an epitaph on Theodoſia, one of her daughters, who died in 1742, under the hiſtory of Burbach.

[10] Some relation, probably, to four eminent men of this name, all of St. John's college, Cambridge; 1. Thomas Balguy, M.A. 1666; and maſter of a grammar-ſchool at Sheffield; who died in 1696.—2. John Balguy (ſon of Thomas), M. A. 1726; vicar of Northallerton in Yorkſhire, and a writer on the Bangorian controverſy; who died in 1748, and of whom a life is given in the Biographia Britannica, and in the Biographical Dictionary.—3. Charles Balguy, M. D. 1750; who went from Cheſterfield ſchool to St. John's college, Cambridge; M. B. there 1730; M. D. 1750; ſettled at Peterborough as a phyſician, and died in 1767. He publiſhed "The Decameron, or Ten Days' Entertainment of Boccace, 1741," 8vo. He had a brother named Henry.—4. Thomas Balguy (ſon of John), D. D. 1758; who, after having had the honour of declining a mitre, died archdeacon of Wincheſter in 1795; and of whom an excellent account is given in Gent. Mag. vol. LXV. pp. 169. 253. 368.

BELGRAVE,

formerly called Merdegrave, is a pleaſant village, "ſtanding upon the river of Soar, about a mile and a half diſtant from Leiceſter, on a pleaſant and fruitful ſoil, yielding great increaſe both of corn and graſs. This manor is great and large, wherein, whether for the pleaſure or profit, or both, many perſons, as well eccleſiaſtical as temporal, were ſeiſed of divers lands [1]." It is bounded by Thurmaſton, Humberſton, the town of Leiceſter, its chapelry of Burſtall, and the extraparochial liberties of Stocking; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The great London-road to Loughborough, Nottingham, and Derby, paſſing through this village, makes it a pleaſing retreat to the opulent tradeſmen of Leiceſter, ſeveral of whom reſide here; and in conſequence ſeveral modern and handſome brick-built houſes are occupied by reſpectable perſons.

Hugo de Grenteſmainell, at the time of the ſurvey, held ſeven ploughlands in Merdegrave, which in the reign of the Confeſſor had been worth 60 ſhillings. The land was equal to ſix ploughs. Three were in the demeſne, and three bondmen; and eight villans, with five bordars and ſeven ſocmen, had four ploughs. There were twenty-four acres of meadow; a wood five furlongs long, and three broad; and a mill of twelve ſhillings value [2]. Hugo de Grenteſmainell had alſo ten houſes in Leiceſter, belonging to Merdegrave [3]; and Adeliza, his wife, held of the king one ploughland in Merdegrave, which had been valued at five ſhillings, but was then worth only four ſhillings; the land, which was equal to half a plough, was in the tenure of three villans [4].

This Hugo granted the church and two yard-lands here to the abbey of St. Ebrulf at Utica in Normandy; which was confirmed to them by William the Conqueror [5], whoſe charter, dated in 1082, notices particularly "eccleſiam de Merthegrave, que nunc alio nomine, viz. Belle-grava [6], dicitur."

Robert Blanchmaines earl of Leiceſter afterwards inherited this lordſhip, by marrying Petronell, daughter and heir of Hugo Grenteſmainell.

July 28, 1203, king John granted 50*s.* lands in Bellegrave (which lands ſome time belonged to one Aaron a Jew [7],) to Robert earl of Leiceſter: "Rex, &c. G. filio Petri, ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd dedimus dilecto Roberto comiti Leiceſtrie quinquaginta ſolldatos terre in Bellegrave, que fuerunt Aaronis Judei; & unde idem comes reddit quinquaginta ſolidatos per annum ad ſcaccarium noſtrum, &c. Teſte meipſo, apud Montem-fortem, XXVIII die Julii [8]."

"This place hath given the denomination to the antient family of Belgrave, which hath ſpread itſelf into many branches, ſome yet in being, and in this country. Their coat armour is, Gules, a chevron Ermine between three maſcles Argent [9]. Of this family, the firſt that I find was William de Belgrave, to whom Robert Blanchmaines earl of Leiceſter, in the reign of king Henry II, gave lands in Belgrave. Of this houſe was Richard de Belgrave, remembered by John Leland in his book "De Illuſtribus Britannicis Scriptoribus [10]; and by John Bale, in his "Eleventh Century of the Writers of Great Britain;" who, having collected almoſt all his whole work out of Leland, ſuppreſſeth the author's name for the moſt part, very ſeldom or not at all naming him [11]. This Richard Belgrave was born at this place [12], and brought up in Cambridge, where he became an excellent divine and a good ſchoolman. He wrote one book of Theological Determinations [13], and another book of Ordinary Queſtions. He lived in the time of king Edward II, 1320 [14]."—This Richard Belgrave, who applied himſelf at the Univerſity with great diligence and ſucceſs to his ſtudies, took afterwards the degree of D. D. [15]; entered into the order of Carmelite Friers [16], and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his great ſkill in the Ariſtotelian philoſophy [17], and ſchool-divinity; but was more remarkable for the ſtrength and ſubtlety of his lectures, than the elegance of his ſtyle; the ſtudy of polite literature being generally neglected in that age. Pitts[1] gives him the character of a man of eminent integrity and piety.

---

[1] Burton, p. 39.

[2] "Idem [Hugo] tenet 7 carucatas terræ in Merdegrave. Terra eſt 6 carucarum. In dominico ſunt 3 carucæ & 3 ſervi; & 8 villani, cum 5 bordariis & 7 ſochmannis, habent 4 carucas. Ibi molinum de 12 ſolidis, & 24 acræ prati. Silva 5 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 3 quarentenarum latitudinis. Valuit 60 ſolidos; modò 100 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 232. a. 2.

[3] "Habet idem Hugo in Ledeceſter 10 domos pertinentes ad Merdegrave." Ibid. fol. 230. a.

[4] "Adeliza, uxor Hugonis, tenet de rege 1 carucatam terræ in Merdegrave. Terra eſt dimidiæ carucæ. Hanc habent ibi 3 villani. Valuit 5 ſolidos; modò 4 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 2.

[5] Ordericus Vitalis, p. 602.—Bigrave, Chauncey, p. 44. a.; probably denominated by the Saxons from the reeve of ſome county, hundred, or place, of which he might be owner; for, ſo the name imports in their language. See Skinner, voc. Grave; and Verſtegan, p. 290.

[6] We alſo find the name written Bellogreve; ſee Leland, Comment. de Scriptor. Britan. tom. II. cap. 353.

[7] Of Aaron the Jew of Lincoln ſee before, under the Hiſtory of Leiceſter, vol. I. pp. 97. 129; and the Appendix to that volume, p. 38.

[8] Inter Cart. & Liberat. Johannis regis, anno regni 5°.

[9] Plate XXXI. fig. 4.

[10] This work is now in the Public Library at Oxford, where it makes the fourth volume of Leland's "Collectanea" (being 354 pages in folio), and was given by William Burton to that Univerſity. See Nicolſon's Hiſtorical Library, p. 228.

[11] "This John Leland was ſome time fellow of Chriſt's College in Cambridge, as himſelf ſaith in the ſaid book, in the Life of king Sebert, fol. 70; and had a commiſſion granted him by king Henry VIII, in the 25th year of his reign, to view, peruſe, and take to his own uſe, any copy or manuſcript, in any abbey or religious houſe within the realm: out of which records he collected many things together into divers books; four volumes of which I have in my cuſtody, and muſt truly acknowledge them to have afforded me many worthy notes of antiquity." Burton, p. 39.

[12] "We have ventured in this (ſay the authors of the 'Biographia Britannica') to contradict the common account, of his being born in or near the city of Chicheſter, in Suſſex, though ſo mentioned by [Leland], Pitts, [Bale, and Tanner, p. 93.] and copied by Dugdale; the reaſon for which alteration we ſhall ſubmit to the reader's judgement. Burton, far from an inaccurate writer, expreſſly ſays he was born at Belgrave; and Fuller alſo remarks, that Pitts makes him to be born at Chicheſter in Suſſex; and Burton at Belgrave in Leiceſterſhire, "whom I rather believe," ſays he, "becauſe he wrote a particular deſcription of this county. Now, ſurely, the more is the exactneſs of the author, the leſs the extent of his ſubject, eſpecially making it his ſet-work (that was Pitts's by-work) to obſerve the natives of his ſhire." Beſides, it was particularly the cuſtom of thoſe times for clergymen of note to receive local names, that is, names derived from the town, village, or place of their birth or abode: which practice continued long in vogue, till the days of king Henry the Sixth; and then, ſays Fuller, ſuch a place begun to be left off; but it was not wholly laid aſide till a great while after."

[13] The ſubject of which was, "Utrum Eſſentia Divina poſſit videri, non viſâ perſonâ?"—"This ſingle queſtion," ſays Dr. Kippis, "is enough to ſhew the abſurdity of the enquiries and ſtudies which engaged the attention of men in that age." This work remains in MS. Bal. Sloan. 4to, 208. Tanner.

[14] Burton, p. 39.

[15] Bale, Illuſtr. Scriptor. Major. Brit. Cent. XI. cap. 5. p. 51.

[16] Dugdale's Monaſticon Anglicanum, by Stevens, vol. II. p. 162.

[17] This muſt be underſtood of his reading and ſtudying it privately by himſelf; for, the firſt that read Ariſtotle publicly in the ſchools at Cambridge was, we find, a brother of his order, and, not unlikely, a contemporary and companion: ſo that Belgrave's great knowledge in it might poſſibly induce John Bampton * (for that was the monk's name) to introduce it, and read it afterwards publicly in the ſchools.

* John Bampton died in 1361, being at that time rector of Stavenly, in the archdeaconry of Richmond, Yorkſhire.

In 1239, a releaſe and ſurrender in fee occurs from Lawrence Seiman of Leiceſter to Roger ſon of Simon de Belgrave, of all the lands which Roger held of him in this townſhip, with the appurtenances, as tofts, crofts, meadows, paſtures, &c. except two acres in culture (colendis) held by Geoffrey Blund. For this grant Roger was to pay 2s. marcas ſterlingorum; and a perpetual annual rent of an halfpenny on Whitſun-eve. "Teſtibus; Willō de Martival, Radulfo Camerario, Roberto de Folevil, Willō de Sc̄â Landâ, Joh̄e filio Galfridi, Willardeno prepoſito, Waltero Cimiterio, & aliis." The ſeal is of green wax, round, bears a fleur de lis, and is inſcribed, "✠ S. LAURENTII SEMAN[2]."

Roger ſon of Simon Belgrave confirmed to Laurence the clerk, ſon of Oſmund Seman of Leiceſter, a grant and releaſe which Theobald le Harpeur had made to him of a meſſuage with the appurtenances in Belgrave, which the ſaid Theobald had purchaſed from Simon Belgrave; to hold the ſame to Laurence and his heirs by the free ſervice of 6*d.* a year and one wotecoc. Witneſſes; William Fitz Leuric alderman of Leiceſter, Richard rector of Belgrave, &c.[3]

Robert de Haythyrne rector of Eaſtwell conveyed to Roger Lawrence of Belgrave a virgate of land in Whatton, held by John le Child. "Præterea dedi Joh̄em Child de Watton, nativum meum, cum totâ ſequelâ ſuâ, tam procreatâ quàm procreandâ, &c. Teſt'; Joh̄e le Fauconer, Rob̄to de Belgrave, &c.[4]"

Belgrave is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240; but in the latter end of the reign of king Henry III. William de Bois enfeoffed Milicent de Cantilupe in his rent at Belgrave; and in the ſame reign, Roger de Quincy earl of Winton, Walter de Belgrave, and Hugh de Herdburrowe, held lands within this manor[5].

Roger de Quincy gave five yard-lands here to the abbey of Garendon, and certain other lands to the prioreſs of Gracedieu, all held of the honour of Leiceſter[6]; and in 1270 died ſeiſed of ſixteen knights fees and an half in Thorpe, Claybroke, Aylmerſthorpe, Buſsheby, Petling, and Belgrave, [value 20 marks per annum each]; all in the tenure of Ernald de Boſco; from whoſe gift the prior of Stodley had a yard-land here[7].

In Harl. MSS. 5138. Belgrave is noticed as appertaining to the honour of Tutbury; and in the Itinerary of 1280, Belgrave, Humberſton, Thurmaſton, and Belgrave Gate, anſwered collectively as one vill.

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis had conſiderable property in this lordſhip; the gifts of Simon ſon of Ivo of Belgrave, Petronilla de Cleybroke, Roger ſon of Hugo de Belgrave, Walter ſon of the lord of Belgrave, Richard ſon of Simon de Belgrave, Lawrence de Belgrave, and others.

Richard de Belgrave gave them all the waſte land between the wood called Brokkytt and his own grounds near that wood, as a free paſſage for them and their ſervants whenever the hedges or ditches of their woods might need repair[8].

Hugh ſon of Robert de Burſtall indemnified them for non-appearance at the earl of Leiceſter's court at Leiceſter or elſewhere, except for non-performance of ſuch ſervices as might be due for lands held by them within the limits and liberties of Belgrave[9].

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Belgrave fills two pages; in which it appears that the abbot and convent of St. Mary had a virgate of land here, in the tenure of Hugo Schepey, called The Field above the town, part of which abutted on the different lands of the abbot of Garendon, the abbot of Sulby, the prior of Kirkby, the prioreſs of Gracedieu, the nuns of Studley, William Belgrave, John Stranley, the highway which led ad vineam domini, Glen fee, Newton fee, Thurmaſton Hill, &c.

The Obituary of Robert de Belgrave is noticed in the Regiſter of Beauchief Abbey, 4 kal. Octobris.

In 1295, maſter William de Bois enfeoffed dame Milicent de Montalt in his rent of Belgrave[10].

In 1296, Robert de Vere earl of Oxford died ſeiſed of divers lands in Belgrave; and Robert de Vere, his ſon and heir, was then of full age[11].

In 1299, it was found by a jury, that at Belgrave (as appurtenant to the manor of Thorpe Ernald) there were certain freeholders, who, by antient cuſtom, paid 7*s.* 6*d.* at the view of frankpledge yearly, on the feaſt of St. Martin; and that William la Zouch, ſon and heir of dame Milicent de Montalt, deceaſed, was then aged 22[12].

In 1325, it was found that Roger Beler, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held the rents of certain bond-tenants and cottagers in Belgrave, amounting to 4*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.*; alſo the rent of one hen, and of divers pieces of meadow there, worth 10*s.*; but of whom the jurors knew not[13].

Roger de Belgrave was in 1327 a collector of the ſubſidy of a twentieth in Leiceſterſhire.

In 1334, it was found that it would be of no damage to the king or any other, if the king granted leave to Thomas Gobyon junior and Elizabeth his wife to enfeoff Richard Penſax in the manor of Skeggeby, with the appurtenances, co. Nottingham; as alſo in 100*s.* rent in Belgrave; which premiſſes were held of the king in capite, at the fee-farm rent of 70*s.* 4*d.* per annum, to be paid into the king's exchequer[14].

In 1341, William Biſhop (who was outlawed for felony) held a meſſuage and lands in Belgrave of Laurence de Belgrave, by foreign ſervice, and the ſervice of 3*s.*[15]

Roger Brid (or Bird), vicar of Quenyborow, had liberty, in 1341, to give to a chantry-prieſt four meſſuages, three virgates of land, and four acres and one rood of meadow, with the appurtenances, in Quenyborow, Belgrave, and Rereſby. The meſſuages and two of the virgates of land were ſituated in Quenyborow, and held by the ſervice of 9*s.* 7*d.* a year under John de Mowbray, who was tenant in capite to the king. The meadow-land was held by the ſervice of 3*s.* 3*d.* under ſir Henry de Ferrariis, who was tenant to the king by knight's ſervice[16].

In 1343, Henry de Ferrars died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thorp Ernald, Aylmerſthorp, Thurneby, Petlinge, Buſſeby, Bellegrave, Croppeſton, Barneſby, Babbegrave, and Atterton, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held[17].

In 1345, John Belgrave rector of Belgrave, Peter Belgrave rector of Eaſt Haddon, and Roger Belgrave a brother of the ſaid John and Peter, gave, in pure alms, to the abbot of Sulby, all the lands which the ſaid John and Peter poſſeſſed in Belgrave and in the town of Leiceſter, and which the ſaid Roger poſſeſſed in Boreſworth; to pray for the ſouls of the ſaid John, Peter, and Roger; for the ſouls of Roger and Suſan, their father and mother; and for the ſoul of Lawrence Belgrave, rector of Eaſt Haddon, their brother, deceaſed. Dated at Sulby, "die Lunæ prox' poſt feſtum Sc̄i Joh̄is Baptiſte, 20 Edw. III.[18]"

In 1346, the prior of Ware, Edward de Belgrave, and William de Penſax, on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon, were aſſeſſed 6*s.* 8*d.* for a ſixth part of one knight's fee (whereof the ſaid prior held a thirtieth part of a fee); Laurence de Belgrave, 3*s.* 4*d.* for a twelfth part of one knight's fee; John de Blaby, 16*d.* for a thirtieth part of one knight's fee; John Taylor, and Joan ſiſter of Peter de Glen, 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee; the abbot of Garendon, 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee, held in pure alms; the wardens (cuſtodes) of the chapel of Kirkby, 2*s.* for a twentieth part of one knight's fee; Richard de Blaby, 16*d.* for a thirtieth part of one knight's fee; all ſituated in Belgrave, and parcel of the honour of Leiceſter. On the ſame occaſion, the prioreſs of Gracedieu was aſſeſſed 2*s.* for a fortieth part of one knight's fee in Belgrave, held in pure alms, and parcel of the honour of Winton[19].

In 1347, Lawrence Belgrave, ſon of Roger, teſtifies, that, whereas Thomas of Aſfordby, chaplain, and William in le Wroo of Belgrave, had aſſigned to Roger Belgrave and Margaret his wife all the lands and tenements which they poſſeſſed of the gift of the ſaid Roger, and all the lands which were given unto Roger his father by Alan Chriſtopher in Thurmaſton; the ſaid Lawrence confirmed the grant to Roger and Margaret for the term of their lives; and, after their deaths, to John their ſon, and to his heirs for ever. Dated at Belgrave, 22 Hen. III. "Teſtibus; Johẽ Hotoft de Humberſton, Rogero filio Nicholai Belgrave, Willõ in le Wroo, & multis aliis[1]."

---

[1] De Illuſtribus Angliæ Scriptoribus, N° 481, p. 415, an. 1320.

[2] Madox, Formulare Anglicanum, N° DCLXXX. p. 376. See Plate XXXV. fig. 2.

[4] See farther particulars under Long Whatton.

[5] Burton, p. 295.—See more under Thorpe Ernald.

[6] Cart. 14 Edw. III. per Inſpeximus.

[7] Eſch. 55 Hen. III. N° 30. Leic.

[8] See Appendix, p. 11.

[9] Ibid.

[10] See the deed, ſans date, in Thorpe Ernald.

[11] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 62. Leic. [not 26, as in Dugd. Bar. vol. I. p. 192.]

[12] Eſch. 27 Edw. I. N° 50. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 98. Leic.

[14] Inq. ad quod dampnum, N° 36. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 15 Edw. III. N° 20. Leic.

[16] Peck, MSS. 6438, p. 102; ex Inq. ad quod dampn. 15 Edw. III. N° 147. Leic.—See Appendix, p. 10.

[17] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.

[18] From the Viſitation of 1619.

[19] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

"In the times that the abbey of St. Mary in the Meadows flouriſhed, much contention grew between the abbots and lords of Belgrave[2]."

A diſpute in 1351, between John Lawrence and Stephen Lawrence his brother, and divers others inhabitants of Belgrave, and the abbot of Leiceſter, concerning the limits of the fields and place called The Stocking, has been already noticed[3]. In the courſe of this diſpute, the abbot's ſtakes and fences having been deſtroyed, and the Foſs-way over the Soar ſtopped up, twenty-five of the inhabitants of Belgrave, with John Lawrence their ringleader, were indicted; and, being all found guilty, were fined, and compelled to find ſecurity for their future good behaviour.

July 6, 1361, it was found that Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of a quarter of one knight's fee in Belgrave, which Laurence de Belgrave held; alſo of a moiety of one knight's fee there, which Henry de Ferrers held[4].

In 1381, William la Zouch of Haringworth, knight, died ſeiſed of a certain court-leet at Belgrave[5].

In 1387, ſir Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Belgrave, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held[6].

In 1398, John Belgrave died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, one mill, two carucates of land, and £24. rent, with the appurtenances, in Belgrave; alſo of four pieces of land, called Congatewonge, Blakewonge, Kirkhall, and Herings, in the ſame pariſh. The aforeſaid meſſuages, mill, rent, and lands, with the appurtenances, were held both of the duke of Lancaſter, as of the honour of Leiceſter, and of the earl of Oxford by knight's ſervice; and Joan and Elizabeth, daughters of the ſaid John, were his next heirs[7].

In 1415, ſir William la Zouch, knt. died ſeiſed of the view of the frankpledge of Belgrave, as appurtenant to the manor of Thorpe Ernald[8].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Belgrave was rated at 2*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* "ex Rogero de Belgrave, nuper taxatore;" and, in another article, 10*s.* is charged "De eodem Rogero de Belgrave, nuper taxatore;" and 11½*d.* abated.

In 1419, ſir William Zouch, knt. died ſeiſed of the view of frankpledge in Belgrave, held of the lord Ferrers of Groby[9].

Margaret Belgrave, by her laſt will, dated 13 Sept. 1434, directs her body to be buried "in cemiterio Sc̃i Michaëlis ſuper Cornhill. Item, lego fabrice corporis eccleſie parochialis de Querndon, in com' Leic', ubi fui Chriſtiana, xiiis̃. ivd̃. Item, lego Joanne Belgrave, matri mee, meam togam," &c. Proved Sept. 24; by Thomas Lytſter, hoſier, and Robert Welles, of London, cook, her executors[10].

In 1443, William Belgrave, eſquire, conveyed to Richard and Nicholas Willoughby all the lands and tenements belonging to his farm at Sytheſton; to hold to the ſaid Richard and Nicholas, and their heirs for ever. "Dat' 27° Nov', 24 Hen. VI. Teſtibus; Johẽ Sc̃e Marie de Pratis, Ric̃o Hotoft armigero, Waltero Kebell de Rereſby, Rogero Pollard, &c."[11]

In the marriage-ſettlement of king Henry VI, 1444, he gives to his intended conſort the bayliwick of Belgrave and Sileby[12].

In 1444, ſir William de Ferrers of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of the manor of Belgrave, which William lord Zouch of Haringworth held of the ſame William[13].

In the ſubſidy of 1445, Belgrave is charged as in 1416; but an abatement was then made of 7*s.*

In 1457, ſir Edward de Grey, knt. lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of the manor of Belgrave, which ſir William de la Zouch of Haringworth held[14].

In 1468, ſir William la Zouch, knt. lord Zouch and Seymour, died ſeiſed of a view of frankpledge, and 6*d.* rent, called Spor-rent, in Belgrave; which view and rent were held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice; and John la Zouch was his ſon and heir[15].

In 1473, John Belgrave appointed William Cotton of Thurmaſton and Thomas Yvo of Belgrave, his lawful attorneys, to deliver poſſeſſion of all his lands and tenements at Sytheſton to Robert Bertram vicar of that church, and Roger Pollard, agreeably to a grant he had before made to them. Dated at Sytheſton, 2 March, 12 Edw. IV.[16].

In 1493, Richard Belgrave conveyed to Walter Liſle of Leiceſter and William Cotton of Thurmaſton all his lands and tenements in Sytheſton. Dated at Sytheſton, 28 June, 8 Hen. VII. "Teſtibus; Ric̃o Reignold de Braunſton, Willõ Pechett de Sytheſton, & Johẽ Rothley[17]."

In 1502, ... Keble died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Belgrave, held of the king, as of his dutchy of Lancaſter, by what ſervice not known[18].

John Belgrave, of Belgrave, died 3 May, 1512, ſeiſed of the manor of Belgrave, held of the king, as parcel of the dutchy of Lancaſter, by military ſervice: the manor of Little Glen, held under the manor of Ayleſton; a moiety of the manor of Counteſthorpe and Blaby; and lands in Houghton, Long Whatton, Thurmaſton, and Burſtall. He left two ſiſters, Anne and Katharine; and John, his ſon and heir, was two years old[19]. In the ſame year, ... Malory died ſeiſed of the manor of Belgrave, held as above; and of certain lands and tenements here, held under the abbot of St. Ebrulph, but by what tenure was unknown[20].

Roger Wigſton, eſq. of Belgrave, was appointed by the king's writ, Jan. 30, 1534-5, to take the eccleſiaſtical ſurvey of the county of Leiceſter.

In 1559, George Belgrave died ſeiſed of two meſſuages and four virgates of land in Belgrave, held of the queen, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee[21].

In 1564, there were 42 families in Belgrave, 26 in Burſtall, and 25 in Thurmaſton.

In 1571, Ambroſe Belgrave (who bore, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, a chevron Ermine between three maſcles Argent, Belgrave; 2. and 3. Ermine, three maſcles in feſs Sable, Glenne;) died ſeiſed of a manor here; leaving George, his ſon and heir, then 7 years old, who was afterwards knighted, and had iſſue Edward, living in 1622.

The Viſitation of 1619 gives ſix quarterings[22]: 1. Belgrave; 2. Argent, three pairs of bellows Sable, Shipton; 3. Sable, three eſcalops Argent, Shelton; 4. Glenne; 5. Or, on a feſs Gules, three fleurs de lis of the firſt; in chief three fleurs de lis of the ſecond; 6. Gules, a pelican on her neſt, with young ones, and vulnerating her breaſt, Argent. Creſt, a ram's head Sable, Motto, NIL DESPERANDUM, CHRISTO DUCE.

Roger Wigſton, who died in 1608, gave all his lands in Belgrave to Elizabeth his daughter and coheir, who married William Davenport, of Davenport, co. Cheſter[23].

John Dalby, in 1609, held a meſſuage and lands at Belgrave; and William Davenport at the ſame time held lands there, being both tenants in capite[24].

Sir John Pultney died March 3, 1616-17, ſeiſed, inter alia, of the manor of Belgrave, held of the king, as of the fee of Winton, by the payment or 10*d.* or 12*d.* and by fealty. He held alſo the manors of Miſterton, Poultney, and Cotes Devile, in this county; and John, his ſon and heir, was then ſeven years old[25].

---

[1] From the Viſitation of 1619.
[2] Wyrley, MS Notes in 1590.
[3] See vol. I. p. 256; and the Appendix to this volume, p. 11.
[4] 16 July, Fin. 25 Edw. III. m. 23.—See more in Aſhby Magna.
[5] Eſch. 5 Ric. II. N° 61. Leic.
[6] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.
[7] Eſch. 22 Ric. II. N° 3. Leic.
[8] Eſch. 3 Hen. V. N° 46. Leic.
[9] Eſch. 7 Hen. V. N° 9. Leic.
[10] Reg. More, f. 300.
[11] From the Viſitation of 1619.
[12] Rot. Parl. vol. V. p. 118.
[13] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.
[14] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.
[15] Eſch. 8 Edw. IV. N° 53. Leic.
[16] From the Viſitation of 1619.
[17] Ibid.
[18] Eſch. 18 Hen. VII.
[19] Inq. at Lutterworth, 18 April, 4 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) p. 339; and ſee before, vol. II. p. 612.
[20] Eſch. 4 Hen. VIII.
[21] Eſch. 1 Eliz.
[22] See Plate XXXV. fig. 3.
[23] Ex fragment. Chetwynd.
[24] See vol. I. p. cxxxi.
[25] Inq. at Hertford, N° 162, 5 June, 15 James I; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 224.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, ſir George Belgrave, knt. John Thomſon, and John Barfoote.

An act of parliament was paſſed, in 1641, to ſettle the manor of Belgrave, and other lands in Leiceſterſhire, on William Byerley, eſq. towards payment of the debts of William Davenport, eſq. [1]

In 1655, there was collected in Belgrave, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 14*s*. 3*d*.

In a ſettlement made Dec. 27, 1655, previous to the marriage-ſettlement of William Inge[2], of Thorpe Conſtantine, in the county of Stafford, eſq. with his third wife, dame Martha Hungate, widow, late wife of ſir Henry Hungate, of Eaſt Braddenham in Norfolk, ſeveral eſtates at Belgrave and other places are veſted in Henry Hungate, eſq. of Belgrave and Walter Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes, as joint truſtees [3].

After the death of Mr. Inge, Henry Hungate and Walter Ruding, eſqrs. were again truſtees, in the marriage ſettlement of Edward Brett, of Dimſdale in Staffordſhire, with Jane, one of the daughters of the ſaid William Inge, to whom dame Martha Hungate, aliàs Inge, gave a marriage-portion of £500.[4]

By articles for the incloſure of Belgrave, made March 14, 1654, it was agreed that there ſhould be land laid out by the ſurveyor to and for the ſeven freehold cottages in Belgrave, whereof Richard Fowke, Richard Ward, William Moore, Henry Berridge, Edward Croſſe, Thomas Stevenſon, and Francis Keene, were then ſeverally owners; i. e. to each of the ſaid cottages five acres of land, in lieu of their commons in the fields of Belgrave; alſo that out of every yard-land there ſhould be deducted one acre of ground, which ſhould be laid together in one plot, to make a paſture for ſuch cottagers as lived in ſuch cottages whereunto there was no common of right belonging (excepting only out of the two yard-lands of John Thiſtlethwaite); and ſhould be ſettled on Daniel Taylor, Henry Coleborne, Charles Byerley, Thomas Johnſon, Thomas Thompſon, and William Breworne, and their heirs, in truſt, for the purpoſe aforeſaid; and thoſe only that did make or give ſuch allowance out of their yard-lands as aforeſaid, and their heirs, from time to time for ever, ſhould have the diſpoſal of the ſaid paſture, and no other, to ſuch perſon or perſons as they, or their heirs or aſſigns, ſhould think moſt fit; and that there ſhould alſo be taken out of the common, or other ground, 11 acres, which ſhould be laid to the three cottages called The Town Houſes, in lieu of all ſuch commons as belonged to the ſaid cottages in the open fields. The glebe land was two-yard land. It was alſo agreed, that there ſhould be laid out one or more town-plot or plots, in lieu of the land there called The Town Land; and that the ſame, together with the 11 acres aforeſaid, ſhould be conveyed to the ſaid Samuel Taylor, &c.; the ſaid plot in lieu of the Town-land to be employed for ſuch intents and purpoſes as the antient Town-land there had been, or ought to have been, employed; and the ſaid 11 acres, as the ſaid truſtees and their heirs ſhould think fit. In purſuance of theſe articles, the incloſure was made in 1655; and the decree for confirmation was paſſed Feb. 10, 1662-3, by Edward earl of Clarendon.

By a bill for confirmation of the incloſure, preferred in Chancery, in Michaelmas Term 1662, it appears that Charles Byerley and Daniel Taylor, of London, eſq. and Henry Coleborne, late of London, ſcrivener, both deceaſed, were ſeiſed of two manors in Belgrave. In this bill we find the following ſtatement:

"The parſonage-houſe, tithes, and glebe land of and in Belgrave aforeſaid, before the ſaid incloſure, were not above the clear yearly value of £100. per annum. And the complainants, and the reſt of the ſaid parties who then had or enjoyed their reſpective eſtates, had agreed that £100. per annum, in lieu and ſatisfaction of all tithes, great and ſmall, in Belgrave aforeſaid, ſhould be for ever paid unto the complainant the biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, and his ſucceſſors, or their farmers and tenants, for ever, the biſhop being ſeiſed of the rectory of Belgrave to him and his ſucceſſors, in right of the ſaid biſhoprick; and, beſides the ſaid £100. per annum, which was the moſt that could be made of the glebe and tithes before the incloſure, there were alſo plotted and ſett out for the farmers of the ſaid biſhop during his term, and for the biſhop and his ſucceſſors after the expiration of the term, two plotts of good meadow and paſture-ground, in lieu of the glebe and common belonging to the rectory; the ſaid plott of meadow-ground containing, by eſtimation, four acres, lying in a place called The Hall Meadow, and the plott of paſture-ground containing about forty acres, lying in a place called Churchbadlandfield, as the ſame were ſeverally laid out, fenced, and ſet forth; which two plotts, with the parſonage-houſe, were better worth than £40. by the year to be lett: into which ſaid cloſes the complainant Thurſby, being the biſhop's farmer for the term of 21 years, had entered, and enjoyed the ſame, and took the rents and profits thereof. The complainants and the reſt of the parties to the articles had alſo agreed, that the £100. per annum in lieu of all manner of tithes, ſhould be raiſed and paid in manner following; the complainant Byerly, and the ſaid William Taylor and James Coleborne, their heirs and aſſigns, and the tenants and occupiers, which from time to time for ever thereafter ſhould be, of the plott of ground called The Poors' Plott, ſhould allow for every plot, being of the worſer ſort of ground, after the rate of 16*d*. the acre per annum, towards the raiſing of the ſaid £100. to the then preſent farmer during his leaſe, and after to the biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield and his ſucceſſors; and that all the reſt of the complainants, and all the reſt that were parties to the ſaid articles, or had any lands or plotts allotted or ſet out for them, or claimed any eſtates or intereſt therein, and their heirs and aſſigns, ſhould pay after the rate of 20*d*. per acre per annum; and that the ſame ſhould be paid yearly and every year for ever afterwards, by the complainants and the reſt of the parties to the ſaid articles, their heirs and aſſigns, and ſuch as claimed any intereſt therein, to the ſaid farmer for and during his leaſe, and afterwards to the biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield, and his ſucceſſors for ever, upon the 15th day of September, in one whole and entire payment. But it was agreed, that the piece allotted to the farmer of the lord biſhop for his term, and afterwards to the lord biſhop and his ſucceſſors, ſhould not be any way charged towards the raiſing of the £100. per annum, but ſhould for ever be freed thereof. And that the complainants and the reſt of the parties to the articles, and their heirs and aſſigns, had peaceably and quietly, ever ſince the incloſure, enjoyed their plotts, &c."

In 1705, the manors of Belgrave and Sileby paid to Catharine then Queen Dowager 28*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*. for fee-farm rents, beſides 2*s*. 6*d*. which had been diſcharged in 1676. This ſum was then paid by ſir John Dalſton, James Holland, and others [5].

In 1722, twelve freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find 21 names.

The lordſhip of Belgrave, which contains ſomething above 1400 acres, ſtill conſiſts of two manors; one half belonging to John Beaumont, eſq. of Barrow upon Trent, who is alſo the principal landholder; to whom it deſcended from his relations the Byerleys; the other half to the rev. Mr. Archdeacon Burnaby, and Mrs. Allanſon of London. The Poor's Plott conſiſts of 53 acres of paſture, and is veſted in 21 truſtees.

---

[1] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. II. p. 164.

[2] Son of Richard Inge of Leiceſter, who had married Jane daughter of William Ive, alderman and vintner of Leiceſter, (who purchaſed Thorpe Conſtantine in 1631). William Inge was one of the judges appointed for Leiceſterſhire in 1654; and was thrice married; 1. to Elizabeth, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby; by whom he had one ſon, William, who died young; 2. to Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Tunſted, of Tunſtall, co. Derby, who died March 28, 1655; by whom he had three ſons and four daughters; 3. Martha, daughter to Walter Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes, and relict of ſir Henry Hungate, knt. who ſurvived him. William, the eldeſt ſon by his ſecond wife, died in 1690; leaving by Frances, daughter of Thomas Greſley, eſq. of Drakelow, beſides other children, William his ſon and heir, who was a conſiderable ſcholar and an induſtrious Antiquary, as appears by his ſeveral volumes of MSS. relating to the topography and biography of the four neighbouring counties of Leiceſter, Stafford, Warwick, and Ely; one of which is now before me by the favour of Mr. Aſtle, and two others have been uſed by Mr. Shaw. See his Hiſtory of Staffordſhire, p. 406; and a pedigree of Inge in p. 408.—The abovementioned marriage of Jane Inge with Edward Brett, however, is not noticed by Mr. Shaw; nor the marriage of his ſiſter Milicent with Tyringham Stephens, of Leiceſter, gent.

[3] The ſettlement fills ſix pages in Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 33—36.

[4] Ibid. p. 125—136.

[5] Vol. I. p. cxlvi.

An antient manſion-houſe here deſerves particular notice. It adjoins the turnpike-road; and, on entering the village from Leiceſter, is the firſt good houſe on the right hand. The end adjoining the turnpike is older than the body of the houſe; and, from the fragments of arches, ſemi-arches, and heads on ſtone, like thoſe projecting from the inſide of church-walls, has the appearance of being the remains of a chapel or chantry.

This houſe was formerly owned and occupied by the family of Haſtings.

Henry Haſtings, eſq. of Belgrave and Humberſton, who in a pedigree[1] entered at Leiceſter, 24 March, 1681-2, ſtyles himſelf "the next male heir to the earls of Huntingdon after the deſcendants of Henry Haſtings, eſq. of Woodlands," ſold Belgrave to the Lord Keeper Wrighte, reſerving an annuity of £200.; and, under the lord keeper, this houſe was tenanted by the Byerleys, a Roman Catholic family, whoſe chapel and altar ſtill remain. It was next inhabited by Richard Denſhire[2], gent. (ſon of a late alderman of Leiceſter); and is at preſent in the occupation of Mr. Nixon, a reſpectable grazier.

The Catholic chapel is in a large garret; the altar ſeparated at the Eaſt end by oak baluſtrades. The mats on which the worſhipers uſed to kneel yet remain.

Over the altar is a painting of the Crucifixion, with a painting on each ſide (not plainly to be diſcerned, being old, and the windows nearly ſtopped up, but probably repreſenting the donors or the owners of the houſe).

At the back of the table, which is fixed, is a cupboard, blue and gold, and marbled red and white; probably where the elements were depoſited.

Over this table and cupboard is a canopy of crimſon ſtuff, in the center of which are the letters "I ✠ H ✠ S," ſurrounded by a Glory, yellow; the curtains correſpondent to the canopy.

In the great hall are five or ſix old family-portraits; and in the South window, in painted glaſs, a fine Scripture-piece; the interview of king Ahaſuerus with queen Eſther, when he ſets the royal diadem upon her head[3]; the king ſtanding by the ſide of Eſther, ſeated, and juſt crowned, amidſt a group of attendant women. This is well executed; the colours fine, and features expreſſive. It was originally in one large ſquare; but, having been broken, a little confuſion occurs in the bottom part, by the glazier having ſubſtituted two or three ſmall bits of different painted glaſs inſtead of the original ones.

In two of the South windows of the ſame room are ſeveral arms, with mottos; but, being walled up with brick in the inſide, they cannot now be blazoned. They may be ſeen in the court, but not ſo plainly as to deſcribe them with accuracy.

In the South window of the great parlour is a coat of 30 quarterings[4], within a garter, with its motto.

1. Argent, a maunch Sable. Haſtings.
2. Gules, a feſs Or, between three ſhovelers Argent, Herle.
3. Sable, two bars Argent, in chief three plates, Hungerford.
4. Per pale indented, Gules and Vert, a chevron Or, Heytiſbury.
5. Azure, three garbs Argent, and a chief Or, Peverell.
6. Argent, three toads erect Sable. Botreaux.
7. Argent, two bars Gules, in chief three torteauxes, Moels.
8. Ermine, a lion rampant Gules, crowned Or; a border engrailed Sable bezanty, Cornwall.
9. Gules, on a chevron Argent, three roſes of the field, Cobham.
10. Or, three torteauxes, in chief a label of three points Azure bezanty, Courtney.
11. Barry of ſix, Ermine and Gules, Huſſey.
12. Argent, a griffin ſegreant Gules, Botreaux.
13. Paly of ſix, Or and Gules, Molins.
14. Sable, on a chief Argent, three lozenges Or, Molins.
15. Argent, a bend Sable, in chief a label of three points Gules, St. Loe.
16. Or, a lion rampant Azure, crowned Gules, Clyſdon.
17. Maſculy, Argent and Gules, Poges.
18. Paly indented of ſix, Or and Gules, Mauduit.
19. Quarterly, France and England, a label of three points Argent, on each point a canton Gules, Clarence.
20. Per pale, Or and Sable, a ſaltire engrailed counterchanged, Pole.
21. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, a label of three points gobony, Argent and Azure, Nevile earl of Saliſbury and Warwick.
22. Gules, a feſs between ſix croſs croſſlets fitchy Or, Beauchamp.
23. Checqué, Or and Azure, a chevron Ermine, Guy earl of Warwick.
24. Argent, three lozenges conjoined in feſs Gules, Montagu.
25. England, in a bordure Argent, Plantagenet earl of Kent.
26. Or, an eagle diſplayed Vert, armed Gules, Monthermer.
27. Or, two bars Gules, in chief three torteauxes, Wake.
28. Or, three chevronels Gules, Clare.
29. Quarterly, Argent and Gules, in the ſecond and third a frett Or, over all a bend Sable, Spencer.
30. Argent, a bend Sable, on a chief Gules a Harrington's knot Or, Harrington.

On the North hall door is a ſtone ſhield, on which is emboſſed the coat of Byerley, a ſingle croſs croſſlet.

Round the roof of the cieling of the ſummer-houſe in the garden (which is of curious plaſter-work) is a variety of well-carved foliage in wood, of oak branches with acorns, vine branches with grapes, &c. &c.

The garden, which lies before the houſe, is on an elevated ſpot; and, as you approached it from Leiceſter, it was formerly an ornament to the village: it was decorated with yew and holly trees in the antient ſtyle of laying-out pleaſure-grounds; the walks in neat order, and the flowers there, were a diſplay of ſucceſſive ſplendour; but now are ſubſtituted, what many perſons may judge more uſeful, turnips, &c.

Belgrave mill, a view of which is given in Plate XXXI, from a ſketch by Mr. Throſby, is beautifully ſituated[5]; and, amongſt other good houſes here, may be noticed one built by William Vann, eſq. high-ſheriff of the county 1784-5. This houſe and the pleaſure-grounds adjoining have a correſponding neatneſs; but the gardens retain the old formally-trimmed yew-trees. The brothers of this gentleman, Mr. Richard and Mr. John Vann, reſide in a neat little box; in the gardens of which are about ſixteen capital ſtatues large as life, brought from Italy by Colonel Hewett, who formerly reſided at Stretton Hall; where they were ſold, for an inconſiderable ſum, on ſir George Robinſon's changing his abode for Northamptonſhire. Here are alſo two ſpirited caſts in lead of Fame and Mercury; and within the houſe an excellent portrait of the late Mr. Charles Vann, a brother of the owners[6].

---

[1] See this pedigree under Humberſton. [2] See his epitaph, p 183. [3] Eſther ii. 17.

[4] Some of theſe quarterings are broken; but are here ſupplied from a monument of the ſecond Earl of Huntingdon at Aſhby de la Zouch, by whoſe ſon ſir Edward Haſtings the arms were probably placed here. See Plate XXXV. fig. 6.

[5] "On the foot-road leading to this place from Leiceſter Abbey are ſome wild ſcenes, ſuitable to the eye and the pencil of Loutherburg, who has drawn beauties even from the humble dwellings of the peaſant. In early life, ſuch ſcenery taught me to admire the ſurrounding beauties; and I remember with pleaſure this village-walk. On a ſummer's day, caſt your eyes towards the bridge, which is backed by Burſtall-hill, you ſee the river ſerpentining by an eminence on the right, ſhaded by hanging elms and willows, planted ſeemingly by the hand of Chance, yet rich in irregularity; the mills, the glittering ſtream, the lofty houſes and trees, bounded by ſome humble cottages, the ruin which juts into the river (formerly a manor-houſe), the ſloping pleaſure-grounds of the Vanns, all on the ſame ſide; and on the other you behold a valley, rich with flowers of golden and variegated tints, creative of pleaſures to the admirers of the fanciful diſplays of Nature!" Throſby, Excurſions, p. 12.

[6] Throſby.

Extracts from the REGISTER, commencing in 1653.

William Page, of Thurmaſton in the pariſh of Barkbie, and Eliſebeth Fookes of Belgrave were married by Mr. Beyment of Stooton, according to the act, the 11th of November, 1655, being lawfully publiſhed at Leſeſter by Howe Dawes.

Robert More of Belgrave and Jane Sanderſon of Leſſeſter were lawfully marryed on May-day, 1656, before two juſtiſis, Mr. Danvers and Mr. Pachin, at the Angell.

Mary the wife of Thomas Staveley, eſq. was buried the twelft day of October, 1659.

John Thiſtlethwaite, eſq. was buried the eight and twentyth day of February, 1660.

Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Byerley, eſq. and Mary his wife, was buried March 4, 1661.

Elizabeth Byerley, widdowe of William Byerley, eſq. was buried the eight and twentyth day of March, 1661.

William ſon of Thomas Staveley, eſquire, and Mary his wife, baptized May 7, 1662.

George, ſon of Thomas Staueley, eſq. and Mary his wife, baptized Aug. 8, 1665.

The following memorandum occurs in the year 1673: "This eyre happened a very grate flood, one the 13 day of July, ſoe grate as hath not beene knowne in the memory of man; whereby much hay was carried away and loſt. The water was in John Harris his houſe a foote deepe."

William Barwell, clarke of the Aſſize, departed this life, by reaſon of a fall at the Planks, coming to Belgrave.

Anne, the wife of Henry Loxam, gent. departed this life April 9, and was buried the 11th, 1676.

William Bennet and Bridget Clarke were married Oct. 15, 1676, by Mr. Joanes, clarke of Belgrave.

Richard Beeby and Elizabeth Hubbert, both in this pariſh, were married by Mr. Joanes, the clarke of Bellgrave, Nov. 12, 1676.

Edward Grewcock of Burſtal and Anne Percyfall of Mountſorril was married by Mr. Stafford[1], Nov. 30, 1680; bains three times publiſhed.

Mr. Stafford was curate of Belgrave in the years 1680 and 1681.

Mr. Herrick, the perſon of Friſby, departed this life the 23d of Auguſt, and was buried the 25th at St. Martin's in Leiceſter, 1681.

Mary the wife of Charles Byerley, eſq. departed this life the 23d of Auguſt, and was buried the 24th of the ſame.

Joſeph Cradock, gent. and Katrien Norris were married Oct. 28, boath in the pariſh of St. Martin's, 1690.

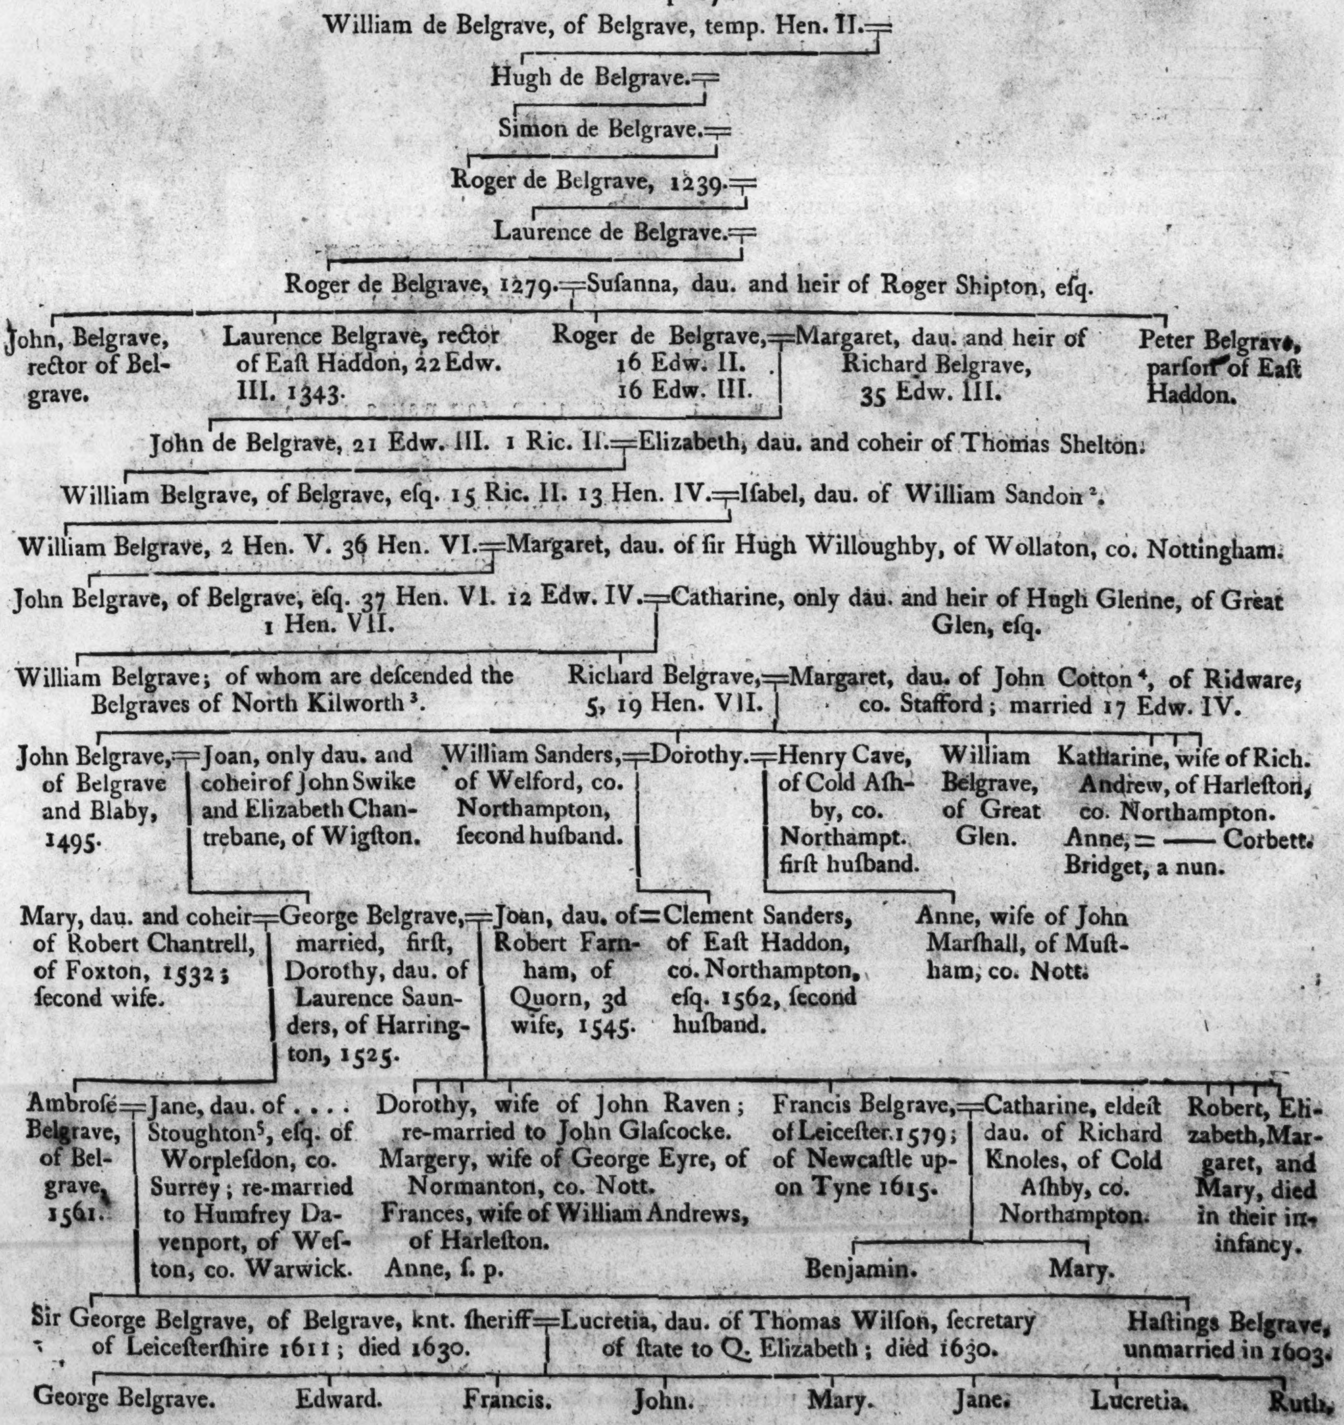
William Cradock and Dorothy Maſon married by licence, Oct. 30, 1707.

Haſtings Cradock, ſon of Mr. Edmund Cradock and Anne his wife, having been born March 19, the ſaid Haſtings Cradock died March 30, and was buried April 1, 1709.

This regiſter ends in 1716, and is never ſigned by a miniſter.

PEDIGREE of BELGRAVE, with Additions by Mr. S. ROPER, of Lincoln's Inn; all which were copied by Sir THOMAS CAVE, in 1758, out of a Copy of Burton belonging to the Earl of STAMFORD.

Arms: See p. 172.



William de Belgrave, of Belgrave, temp. Hen. II.=

Hugh de Belgrave.=

Simon de Belgrave.=

Roger de Belgrave, 1239.=

Laurence de Belgrave.=

Roger de Belgrave, 1279.=Suſanna, dau. and heir of Roger Shipton, eſq.

John, Belgrave, rector of Belgrave. | Laurence Belgrave, rector of Eaſt Haddon, 22 Edw. III. 1343. | Roger de Belgrave, 16 Edw. II. 16 Edw. III.=Margaret, dau. and heir of Richard Belgrave, 35 Edw. III. | Peter Belgrave, parſon of Eaſt Haddon.

John de Belgrave, 21 Edw. III. 1 Ric. II.=Elizabeth, dau. and coheir of Thomas Shelton.

William Belgrave, of Belgrave, eſq. 15 Ric. II. 13 Hen. IV.=Iſabel, dau. of William Sandon[2].

William Belgrave, 2 Hen. V. 36 Hen. VI.=Margaret, dau. of ſir Hugh Willoughby, of Wollaton, co. Nottingham.

John Belgrave, of Belgrave, eſq. 37 Hen. VI. 12 Edw. IV. 1 Hen. VII.=Catharine, only dau. and heir of Hugh Glenne, of Great Glen, eſq.

William Belgrave; of whom are deſcended the Belgraves of North Kilworth[3]. | Richard Belgrave, 5, 19 Hen. VII.=Margaret, dau. of John Cotton[4], of Ridware, co. Stafford; married 17 Edw. IV.

John Belgrave, of Belgrave and Blaby, 1495.=Joan, only dau. and coheir of John Swike and Elizabeth Chantrebane, of Wigſton. | William Sanders, of Welford, co. Northampton, ſecond huſband.=Dorothy.=Henry Cave, of Cold Aſhby, co. Northampt. firſt huſband. | William Belgrave, of Great Glen. | Katharine, wife of Rich. Andrew, of Harleſton, co. Northampton. | Anne,= —— Corbett. | Bridget, a nun.

Mary, dau. and coheir of Robert Chantrell, of Foxton, 1532; ſecond wife.=George Belgrave, married, firſt, Dorothy, dau. of Laurence Saunders, of Harrington, 1525.=Joan, dau. of Robert Farnham, of Quorn, 3d wife, 1545. | Clement Sanders, of Eaſt Haddon, co. Northampton, eſq. 1562, ſecond huſband. | Anne, wife of John Marſhall, of Muſtham, co. Nott.

Ambroſe Belgrave, of Belgrave, 1561.=Jane, dau. of . . . . Stoughton[5], eſq. of Worpleſdon, co. Surrey; re-married to Humfrey Davenport, of Weſton, co. Warwick. | Dorothy, wife of John Raven; re-married to John Glaſcocke. | Margery, wife of George Eyre, of Normanton, co. Nott. | Frances, wife of William Andrews, of Harleſton. | Anne, ſ. p. | Francis Belgrave, of Leiceſter 1579; of Newcaſtle upon Tyne 1615.=Catharine, eldeſt dau. of Richard Knoles, of Cold Aſhby, co. Northampton. | Robert, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Mary, died in their infancy.

Benjamin. | Mary.

Sir George Belgrave, of Belgrave, knt. ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1611; died 1630.=Lucretia, dau. of Thomas Wilſon, ſecretary of ſtate to Q. Elizabeth; died 1630. | Haſtings Belgrave, unmarried in 1603.

George Belgrave. | Edward. | Francis. | John. | Mary. | Jane. | Lucretia. | Ruth.

---

[1] Probably this was Mr. Henry Stafford of Barkby Thorpe. See his epitaph in Barkby church, p. 90.

[2] Arms: Gules, a chevron undé, between three bulls' heads couped Argent. Plate XXXI. fig. 18.

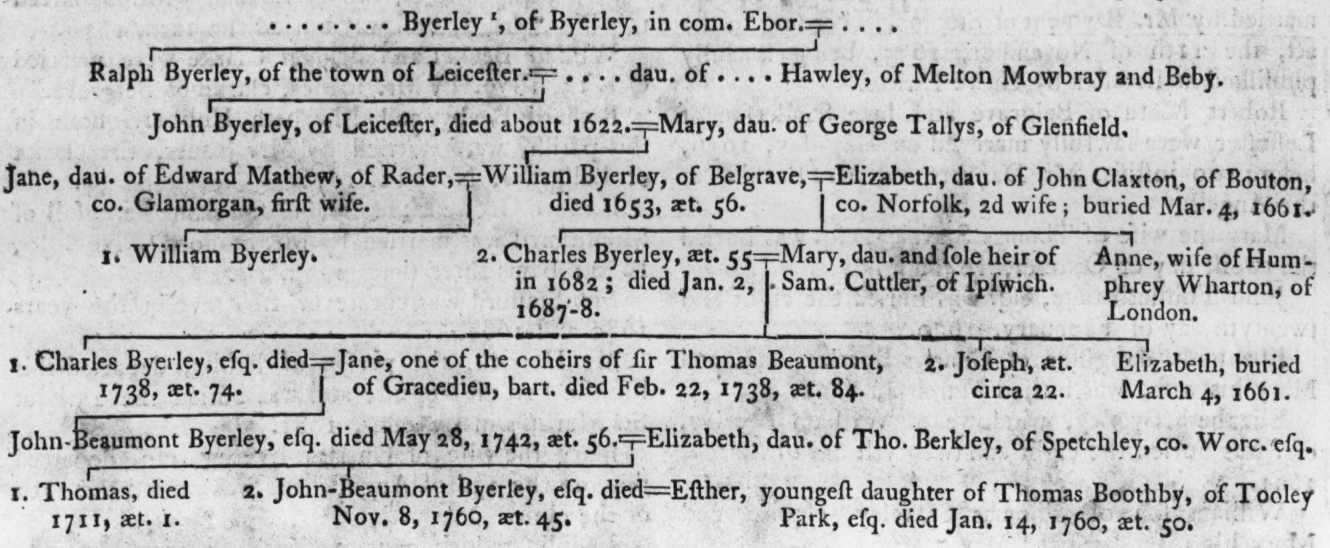
[3] See under that pariſh in Guthlaxton Hundred.

[4] Arms: Azure, an eagle diſplayed Argent; fig. 19.

[5] Arms: Azure, a croſs engrailed Ermine; fig. 20.

Pedigree of BYERLEY, of BELGRAVE. (See the Arms, p. 182.)

(Entered at Leiceſter, by Charles Byerley, 8 Sept. 1682; and continued from Regiſters and Epitaphs.)



. . . . Byerley [1], of Byerley, in com. Ebor.=. . . .
Ralph Byerley, of the town of Leiceſter.=. . . . dau. of . . . . Hawley, of Melton Mowbray and Beby.
John Byerley, of Leiceſter, died about 1622.=Mary, dau. of George Tallys, of Glenfield.
Jane, dau. of Edward Mathew, of Rader, co. Glamorgan, firſt wife.=William Byerley, of Belgrave, died 1653, æt. 56.=Elizabeth, dau. of John Claxton, of Bouton, co. Norfolk, 2d wife; buried Mar. 4, 1661.
1. William Byerley.
2. Charles Byerley, æt. 55 in 1682; died Jan. 2, 1687-8.=Mary, dau. and ſole heir of Sam. Cuttler, of Ipſwich.
Anne, wife of Humphrey Wharton, of London.
1. Charles Byerley, eſq. died 1738, æt. 74.=Jane, one of the coheirs of ſir Thomas Beaumont, of Gracedieu, bart. died Feb. 22, 1738, æt. 84.
2. Joſeph, æt. circa 22.
Elizabeth, buried March 4, 1661.
John-Beaumont Byerley, eſq. died May 28, 1742, æt. 56.=Elizabeth, dau. of Tho. Berkley, of Spetchley, co. Worc. eſq.
1. Thomas, died 1711, æt. 1.
2. John-Beaumont Byerley, eſq. died Nov. 8, 1760, æt. 45.=Eſther, youngeſt daughter of Thomas Boothby, of Tooley Park, eſq. died Jan. 14, 1760, æt. 50.

Money raiſed for the poor of Belgrave,	£.	s.	d.	Burſtall.			Thurmaſton, South End.
within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	105	7	10	£. 64	13	7	£. 82	1	8
Expended in county rates, &c.	4	11	10	2	13	8	6	10	2
——— on the poor, —	92	6	0	61	15	7	75	11	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitation,	9	14	6	2	17	0	5	1	6
Expended in litigations, —	1	12	6	5	6	11	1	18	6
Money raiſed for 1783, —	142	0	0	137	15	9	148	2	11
——— 1784, —	125	8	0	103	16	5	105	6	4
——— 1785, —	197	5	11	158	3	8	143	19	2
Medium of theſe three years, —	154	17	11	133	5	3	132	9	5
——— of county expences, —	4	17	4	4	2	1	4	7	1
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	0	0	0	1	17	2	5	13	1
——— of nett annual expences,	150	0	7	127	6	0	122	9	3
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	5	6	2	19	2	1	3	4
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	17	6	0	13	2	1	4	0
——— of law expences, —	1	15	5	0	12	11	7	5	6
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	0	7	4	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 43.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate XXXI.)

dedicated to St. Peter, conſiſts of a low, but ſtout, brick embattled tower (in which are five bells), with a ſmall ſpire of wood; a wooden North porch; a South porch, and a South door into the chancel; a plain wooden Weſt door; large embattled chancel, having three rich pointed windows; a lofty nave; and two ailes ſeparated by four arches on four cluſters of pillars, with ring capitals, one ſurmounted by a cluſter of flowers, over which are four志 cleréſtory windows. At the Eaſt end of the roof are two turrets.

In the nave (ſeparated from the chancel by an open pointed arch, over which are the royal arms) is a chandelier of twelve branches, ſurmounted by a dove holding an olive-branch in its bill, all of burniſhed braſs, ſuſpended from the roof by iron chains.

The chancel is lofty, being of three heights, riſing perpendicularly; about the middle, 6 inches; about 5 feet farther, riſing 6 inches; about 5½ feet farther is the altar, which riſes ſix inches, and is ſurrounded by handſome light Chineſe work of wood painted white.

The chancel-windows are elegantly conſtructed. In the Eaſt window remains part of the arms of England; in the North window, fragments of inſcriptions in painted glaſs, as 𝔐𝔘𝔅 and 𝔄.𝔖.

The nave was formerly ſeparated from the tower by an open pointed arch; but now, below, by an open oak ſkreen; above, by the back of the deal gallery for the choir, which has in front, "Thomas Smith and Henry Swain, churchwardens, 1761."

In the South wall, under the South window of the chancel, are three handſome ſtalls under flowered arches very hollow from the wall; and a piſcina[2] with a ſquare locker, Eaſt of them. A ſimilar locker oppoſite in the North wall.

In the South wall of the South aile, three plain ſtalls of unequal height, all with round arches; and, Eaſt of them, a piſcina united to a locker, with its door on.

In the North aile, at the Eaſt end, under the North window, a locker and piſcina with a pointed arch; and in the Eaſt wall a piſcina; and apparently from this has been an opening to view the altar.

The font is circular, on a circular ſhaft in the centre, and four others. See Plate XXXI. fig. B.

Over the gallery are the Ten Commandments.

In this church Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms [3]:

1. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, England.
2. The ſame coat, with a file with three labels charged with nine fleurs de lis, Lancaſter.
3. Or, three chevrons Gules, Clare.
4. Belgrave.
5. Argent, a maunch Azure, Flamvile.
6. Gules, a croſs moline Argent, Beby.
7. Or fretty Sable, Champaine.
8. Or, upon two bars Gules, three water-bougets Argent, Willoughby.
9. Argent, an hoſe Azure.

In the Matriculus of 1220 [4], Belgrave is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of St. Ebrulph; the rector R. inſtituted by biſhop Hugh Welles, and paying to the abbot a penſion of ten marks. To this church belonged a chapel ſituated in that part of Thurmodeſton which was in the fee of Winton, and another at Bruſtall; both of which were to be ſupplied by the mother-church with a reſident chaplain. The church of Sileby had alſo two ſheaves of corn here, from the demeſne of John de Harcourt.

In 1344, the procurations for Belgrave, Burſtall, and Thurmaſton, were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 70 marks; and paid 6*s.* for Peter-pence. The abbot of St. Ebrulph had alſo a penſion from it of 10 marks.

In 1534-5, the value of the rectory was 31*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and a penſion of £5. was paid to the then prior

---

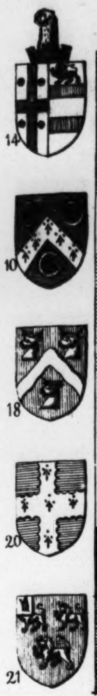
[1] In the Books of Yorkſhire I find a deſcent of Byerley of Pickhull, with this note, "Non probavit arma. Gr. King, R. D."

[2] Plate XXXI. fig. A.

[3] See Plate XXXI. fig. 1—9.

[4] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

BELGRAVE, S.



14
10
18 20 21

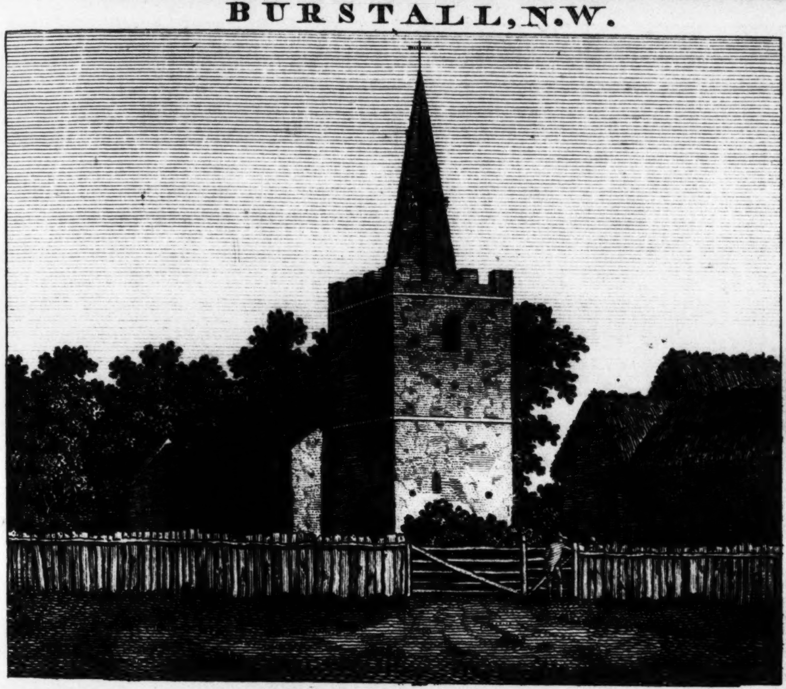
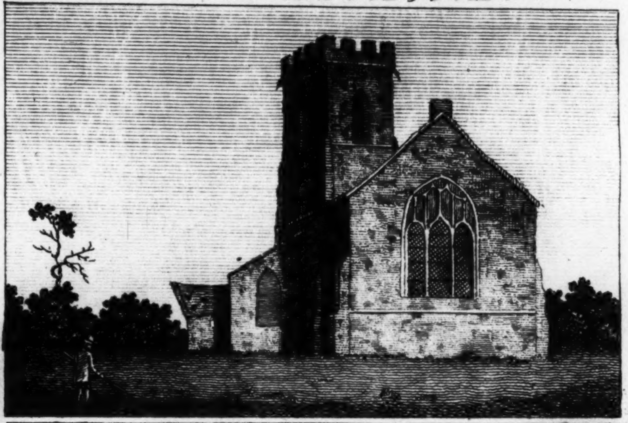
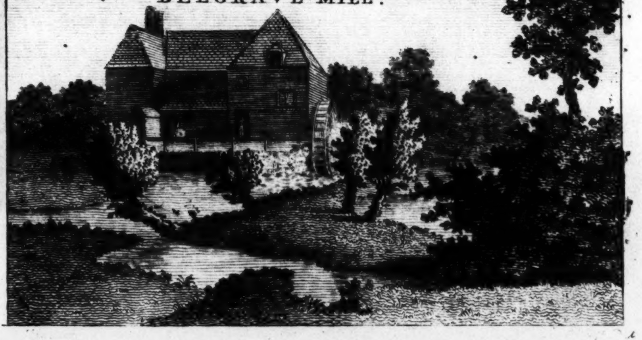
BURSTALL, N.W.

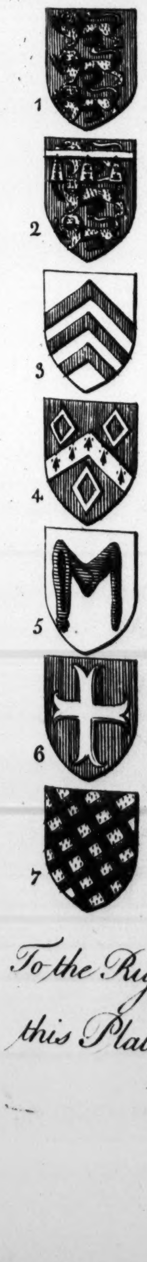


SOUTH-THURMASTON, S.E.

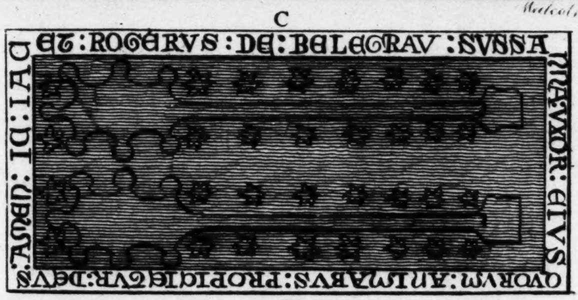


BELGRAVE MILL.



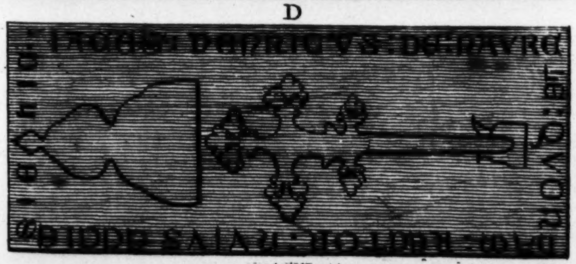


C

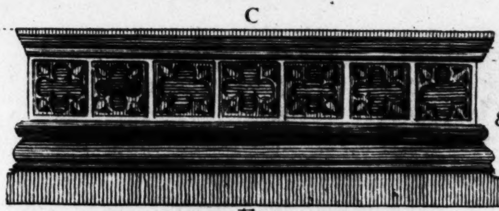


ET: ROGERVS: DE: BELEGRAV: SVSSA
MATOR: EIVS
QVORVM: ANIMABVS: PROPICIETVR: DEVS
AMEN

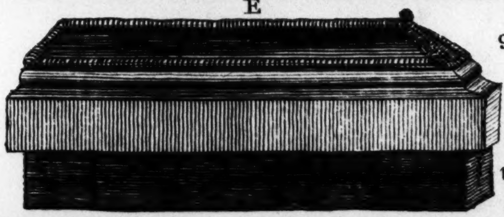
D

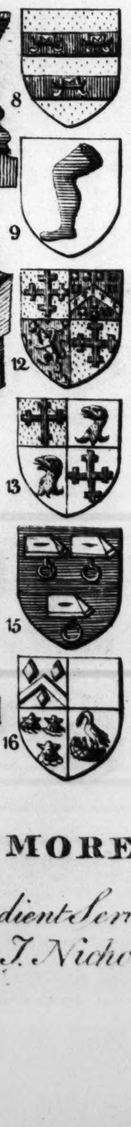


C



E





8
9 12
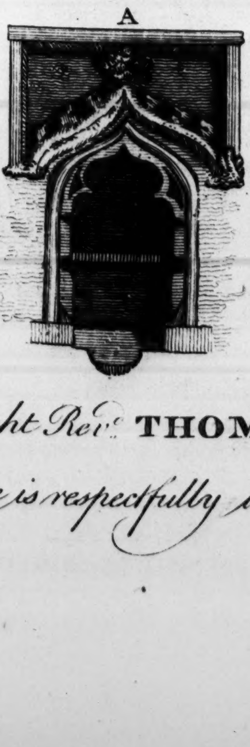
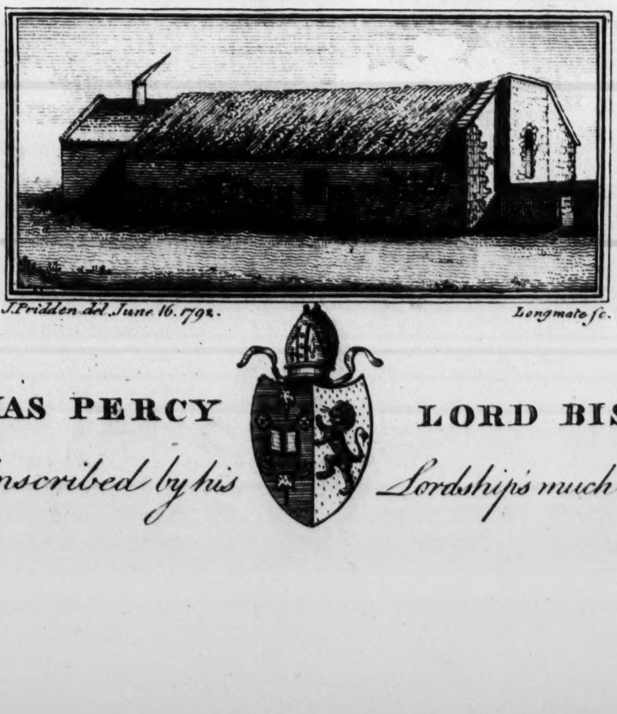
13
15
16

NORTH-THURMASTON CHAPEL, N.W.

A





J. Pridden del. June 16. 1792. Longmate sc.

B

To the Right Rev. THOMAS PERCY LORD BISHOP OF DROMORE, this Plate is respectfully inscribed by his Lordships much obliged & very obedient Serv.t
J. Nichols.

of Shene; and 6*s*. 8*d*. to the abbot of Exham; and 18 acres of land were ſet apart for the repairs of the church.

Aug. 20, 1547, the rectory of Belgrave, with thoſe of Wolſtanton, co. Stafford, Towceſter, Pighteſley, and Buckby, co. Northampton, Towen, co. Merioneth, and the deanry of Gnoſale, with the four prebends, co. Stafford, being in the whole of the yearly value of 183*l*. 8*s*. 10*d*. were granted by the letters patent of king Edward VI. to Richard Sampſon[1] biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry, in exchange for the manors of Longdon, Beaudeſert, Rugeley, Heywood, Berſwick, and Cannock, co. Stafford, and the epiſcopal palace in London. "By this grant," ſays Dr. Browne Willis, "Wolſtanton, Belgrave, Towceſter, Pighteſley, and Buckby, being appropriated to the biſhoprick, ſeem, from good rectories, to be reduced to mean vicarages, viz. ſtipendiary curacies, as they now remain[2]."

On this ſubject, the following letter was addreſſed, by Mr. Samuel Carte, the ſolicitor, to ſir Thomas Cave:

"Sir THOMAS, I take the liberty to lay before you an abſtract of a patent by Edward VI. relating to Belgrave; which, I apprehend, will afford you ſome material information in reſpect to your intended hiſtory, and may ſerve as ſome introduction to what I intend to communicate hereafter in relation to the peculiar juriſdictions in Leiceſterſhire heretofore; for, they are derived from the ſame foundations, the Supremacy. The ſubject, indeed, of the grant is different from priories, churches, or chapels; viz. an incorporate matter—a mere right of exerciſing a juriſdiction. I admit that the mere eccleſiaſtical power is not properly derived from the magiſtrate; and I think it an error, to aſſert that the power which the Pope uſurped heretofore is veſted in the Crown; yet certain it is, that the grant of which this is a copy was made in purſuance or under colour of ſuch a power. The copy whence this is inſcribed was not perfect.

Jan. 12, 1754. Symonds Inn. SAMUEL CARTE.

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd, tàm in complementum & performantiam teſtamenti patris noſtri Henrici Octavi, & quarundam conventionum & conceſſionum contentarum in quâdam tripartitâ indenturâ factâ inter nos ex parte primâ; & avunculum noſtrum Edwardum ducem Somerſet, & executorem teſtamenti & ultime voluntatis predicti patris noſtri, ex ſecundâ parte; & reverendum in Chriſto patrem, Ricardum, epiſcopum Covent' & Lichf', ex parte tertiâ; gerent' dat' ix die Julii, anno regni noſtri primo; quàm in conſiderationem maneriorum de Longdon, Beaudeſert, Rugeley, Heywood, Barkeſwyk, & Cannock; & parcorum de Beaudeſert, & Heywood, in com' Staff', cum ſuis juribus & pertinentiis univerſis; & ceterarum aliarum terrarum in Cannock & Leycroft; & boſci vocat' Canke-wood, aliàs Out-Cannocks-bury, in eodem comitatu; dicto patri noſtro, per dictum epiſcopum, per ſeparatas cartas ſuas, gerentes datum xxix Sept. anno regni patris noſtri xxxviii, dat' & conceſſ', de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, &c. dedimus & conceſſimus prefato ep̄o Covent' & Lichf' totam advocationem, donationem, & jus patronatûs rectorie & eccleſie parochialis de Woolſtanton in com' Staff'; & totam advocationem & donationem rectorie & eccleſie de Belgrave in com' Leic'; & omnes illas advocationes, rectorias, & eccleſias, de Pighteſley, Bukby, & Touceſter, in com' Northton'; ac omnes illas advocationes de Townmerion, & capellarum de Llannhagell, Tahun, & Tennalip, infra epiſcopatum de Bangor; necnon advocationem perpetuam collegii de Gnoſale in com' Staff'; & omnes illas advocationes, & prebendas de Nordall, Stilwohull, Beverly-hall, Chilton-hall, in com' Staff', & earum cujuſlibet, dicto collegio de Gnoſale ſpectantes, & prebende dicti collegii exiſtentes; que quidem rectorie, capelle, prebende, glebe, decime, oblationes, obventiones, & cetera proficua eiſdem ſpectantia, modò extenduntur ad clarum annuum valorem clxxxiii lī. viii s̄. & unius denarii & ½ & ¼, decimâ parte indè deductâ; habend' & tenend', &c. predictas advocationes, donationes, & jura patronatûs, prefato epiſcopo & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in perpetuum, tenend' de nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, in purâ & perpetuâ eleemoſynâ, reddendo annuatim nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, de & pro predictâ rectoriâ de Woolſtanton, poſt mortem, reſignationem, ſeu deprivationem moderni incumbentis ejuſdem rectorie, iiii lī. x s̄ x đ. ½; ac de & pro predictâ rectoriâ de Belgrave, poſt mortem &c. moderni incumbentis ejuſdem rectorie, iv lī. vii s̄. vi đ. ½ ¼; &, pro rectoriâ de Pighteſton, poſt mortem, &c. iiii lī. o s̄. i đ. ½; &, pro rectoriâ de Bukby, iii lī. i s̄. ii đ.; &, pro rectoriâ de Toceſter, iv lī. viii s̄. viii đ.; &, pro rectoriâ de Towne Merion & capellis de Llanvehagel, Tabilun, & Penral, poſt mortem, &c. vi lī. i s̄. x đ.; &, pro prebendâ de Mordal, poſt, &c. xxii s̄.; &, pro prebendâ de Beverly-hall, xxii s̄.; &, pro prebendâ de Chetwon-hall, xxviii s̄. viii đ.; legalis monete, ad Curiam Augmentationis, ad feſtum Natalis Dn̄i, annuatim ſolvend'; & reddend' inſuper annuatim nobis & heredibus, &c. de & pro rectoriâ de Belgrave, v lī. vi s̄. viii đ.; pro rectoriâ de Pighteſley, vi s̄ viii đ.; pro rectoriâ de Towerton, xxxv s̄.; legalis monete, ad Cur' Augment', ad feſtum Sc̄i Mic̄his ſolvend', pro omnibus aliis redditibus, ſervitiis, &c. proindè, nobis à quoquo modo reddendis, ac in perpetuam ſatisfactionem cujuſlibet pecunie ſumme annualis redditûs, ſive decime partis, aut pro primis fructibus premiſſorum, per nos conceſſ', & nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris per predictum ep̄um ſolvend' & reddend', virtute cujuſdam . . . . placiti, anno predicti patris noſtri xxxviii editi: Et ulteriùs, de gratiâ noſtrâ, &c. pardonamus & exoneramus predictum ep̄um de decimis ſive primis fructibus de premiſſis ſolvendis ante datum patentium: Mandamus etiam & firmitèr injungimus cancellario & concilio dicte curie, eò quòd ipſi, ſuper ſolam demonſtrationem literarum patentium, facient ſeu cauſabunt prefato ep̄o & ſucceſſoribus plenam vel manifeſtam exonerationem de omnimodis aliis decimis & predictis rectoriis & premiſſis: Et ulteriùs, pro conſideratione predictâ, & de adviſamento dictorum preteritorum & cœptorum, volumus, & auctoritate noſtrâ regiâ ſupremâ, & eccleſiâ quâ fungimur, predictas rectorias & eccleſias de Woolſtanton, Belgrave, Pighteſle, Bukly, Towceſter, Towen Meryon, ac capellas de Llanvihagell, Tallcdon, ac Pearall; ac predict' collegium de Gnoſale, ac prebendas de Mordell, Sommerhall, Beverley Hall, ac Chilbon Hall, & eorum quamlibet, cum pertinentiis; ac omnia & ſingula maneria, meſſuagia, terras, tenementa, glebas, decimas, oblationes, & emolumenta quecunque, cum pertinentiis, tam ſpiritualibus quàm temporalibus, predictis rectoriis, collegio, & prebendis ſpectant', predicto ep̄o & ſucceſſoribus, poſt mortem incumbentium, &c. appropriavimus, conſolidavimus, univimus, & incorporavimus, ac appropriamus per preſentes: habend', tenend', gaudend', & convertend', predict' rectoriam, eccleſias, capellas, collegium, & prebendam, & omnia & ſingula premiſſa, &c. prefato ep̄o & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, in proprios uſus, abſque aliquâ preſentatione, nominatione, inductione, ſive admiſſione, alicujus incumbentis aut incumbentium ad predictas rectorias, eccleſias, capellas, collegium, & prebendas, vel aliquod in poſterum faciend': Ac etiam volumus & ordinamus, quòd, cumprimùm predicte rectorie de Woolſtanton, Belgrave, Pighteſton, Bukby, Towceſter, & Town Merion, vacare contigerint, ſeu alique eorum, aut quamprimùm poſſeſſionem earundem rectorie, &c. dictus ep̄us aut ſucceſſores ſui adepti fuerint, idem ep̄us & ſucceſſores ſui cuilibet earundem eccleſiarum ſic vacare contigenti, aut ad poſſeſſionem ſuam devenerint, diverſos clericos habiles & idoneos ordinario loco, ad eaſdem ſeparales eccleſias ſeparatim nominabit & preſentabit in perpetuum; qui quidem, ſic nominati & preſentati, & per predictum ordinarium canonicum inſtituti & inducti, ſingulatìm & diversìm, extunc vicarii perpetui eccleſiarum ad quas ſic ſeparatìm preſentantur, &c. & inducuntur; & eoſdem ſeparales vicarios, &c. ſeparatìm & diversìm incorporamus; & eoſdem vicarios ſeparales, & ſucceſſores, corporatum ſeparatìm & divisìm declaramus re & nomine; qui quidem vicarii loco rectorum dictarum eccleſiarum erunt, & curam animarum infra dictas parochias ſeparalitèr gerent, & cetera officia facient & exequentur

---

[1] "In his life-time (ſays Strype, Memoirs, vol. III. p. 199.) two of the beſt manors were exchanged for two benefices, eſteemed as much in value, but the royalty was loſt; one of them, Beaudeſert, was conferred upon ſir William Paget, who in 1549, being made a baron, had his title from thence."

[2] Cathedrals, vol. I. p. 380.

que ad officium rectorum infra eaſdem eccleſias anteà pertinuerunt ſeu pertinebant; & onera ordinaria & extraordinaria, ad eaſdem eccleſias ſeparalitèr pertinentia, ſeparatìm ſuſtinebunt, preterquàm in reparationibus cancellorum; quas quidem reparationes per dictos ep̃um & ſucceſſores, perpetuis ſumptibus de tempore in tempus, ſuſtinendas & ſolvendas volumus & ordinamus: Volumus etiam, quòd ep̃us & ſucceſſores predicti unum manſum ſive domum idoneam & competentem aſſignent cuilibet vicario eccleſiarum predictarum; que quidem domus ſive manſus ad eundem vicarium & ſucceſſores in perpetuum pertinebit ad inhabitandum: Ordinamus prettereà, quòd dictus ep̃us & ſucceſſores in perpetuum diſtribuant, ſeu diſtribui faciant, inter pauperes parochianos cujuſlibet eccleſie, ſic vacare contingentis, quandam rationabilem pecunie ſummam, de fructibus ejuſdem eccleſie provenientem, uſque ad ſummam v librarum in toto extendentem, per epiſcopum & loci dioceſanum limitand' & aſſignand': Volumus etiam & concedimus, quòd predicti vicarii & ſucceſſores ſui, per ſeparalia nomina vicariorum dictarum eccleſiarum, perſequi clameum, implacitare & implacitari, defendere & defendi poſſint, in quibuſcunque curiis & locis regni noſtri, in & ſuper omnibus & ſingulis cauſis, &c.; & quòd ſint, & eorum quilibet ſit, habiles & habilis, & in lege capaces & capax, per eorum ſeparalia nomina, ad dandum, concedendum, & perquirendum, terras, tenementa, &c. ſibi & ſucceſſoribus in perpetuum, & omnia agenda que rectores earum eccleſiarum licitè agerent vel facerent: Ac etiam volumus, quòd dictus ep̃us aut ſucceſſores ſui ſuper appropriationem predictarum eccleſiarum, & earum cujuſlibet, quamlibet earum eccleſiarum dotatam cum congruâ, convenienti, & rationabili portione & penſione, curent pro victu & ſuſtentatione ejuſdem vicarii & ſucceſſorum, pro omnibus aliis oneribus & ſumptibus eidem vicarie incumbenti ſupportando; videlicet, predictam vicariam de Woolſtanton, cum annuâ penſione ſue portionis, extendente ad ſummam x librarum per annum; ac dictam vicariam de Belgrave, cum annuâ portione ſue penſionis, ad ſummam xiii lĩ. vi s̃. viii đ. per annum; ac predictam vicariam de Pighteſle, cum annuali penſione, extendente ad ſummam x lĩ. per annum; ac predictam vicariam de Touceſter, cum annuali penſione, extendente ad ſummam xiii lĩ. vi s̃. viii đ. per annum; ac predictam vicariam de Bukby, cum annuali penſione, extendente ad ſummam x lĩ. per annum; ac vicariam de Town Meryon, cum annuali penſione, extendente ad ſummam xx lĩ. per annum; ſtatuto ad mortuam manum, &c. non obſtante: Ac etiam ordinamus per preſentes, quòd vicarii dictarum eccleſiarum ſeparatarum de tempore in tempus onerentur & onerabiles erunt, tam cum annuali redditu, ſive decimâ parte vicariarum ſuarum, quàm cum primitiis ſeu primis fructibus earundem eccleſiarum, cùm acciderint, eodem modo quo alii vicarii ſeu rectores aliarum eccleſiarum, in regno noſtro Anglie, onerati exiſtunt, &c.: Volumus etiam pro conſideratione predictorum, ac per preſentes concedimus prefato ep̃o, quòd habeat & habebit has literas noſtras patentes, ſub magno ſigillo Anglie ſigillatas, abſque aliquo fine ſeu feodo, magno vel parvo, nobis in Hanaperio noſtro, aut alibi, ad uſum noſtrum ſolvendo; eò quòd expreſſa mentio, &c. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', xx die Auguſti, anno regni, &c. primo. Per breve de privato ſigillo [1]."

Martii, 12°, 1648. Whereas this Committee have, the 19th of March, 1646, granted the yearly rent of thirty pounds, reſerved to the biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, out of the impropriate rectory of Belgrave, in the county of Leiceſter, over and above the preſent ſtipend of twelve pounds, for the increaſe of the maintenance of Mr. George Purefoy, miniſter of the pariſh-church of Belgrave aforeſaid, who hath ſince then relinquiſhed the ſame: It is ordered, that the ſame be paid and continued from time to time unto Mr. William Kinnes, the preſent miniſter of Belgrave aforeſaid, together with all arrears of the ſaid thirty pounds a year, which became due and payable during ſuch time as the ſaid Mr. Kinnes officiated the cure of the ſaid church; and the truſtees for ſale of Biſhops' lands are deſired to iſſue out their warrants to the treaſurers for ſale of Biſhops' lands, to pay the ſame accordingly from time to time; and, when it ſhall appear what the ſaid arrears are, this Committee will likewiſe aſcertain the ſame [2].

In 1650, the rectory was returned "as an impropriation, worth £120. a year; the church, with the two chapels of Burſtall and Thurmaſton, being ſerved by two curates, the one ſufficient, the other altogether inſufficient; who had not above £22. ſtipend between them."

A ſurvey of the rectory or parſonage of Belgrave, with the rights, members, and appurtenances thereof, ſet, lying, and being, in the county of Leiceſter, late parcel of the poſſeſſions, or late belonging to, the late biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry; made and taken by us whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, in the month of June 1651, by virtue of a commiſſion to us granted from the honourable truſtees for ſale of Biſhops' lands.

All that manſion-houſe called the Parſonage-houſe, ſituate in Belgrave aforeſaid, with the ſite thereof, conſiſting of a hall, a parlour, a kitchen, a dairy, a cellar, a pantry, and five lodging-chambers over them, and ſeveral garrets, or granaries, over the ſaid chambers; the firſt ſtory whereof is built with ſtone, the reſt with timber, and covered with ſlate. A brewhouſe, two barns, and other outhouſes, covered with thatch. An orchard, a garden, and two fold-yards, in all containing, by eſtimation, one acre and two roods, with the appurtenances. All which we eſtimate per annum at — — — £5.

All that cloſe of meadow or paſture ground, called or known by the name of The Connery, abutting upon the road from Derby to Leiceſter on the Weſt, containing, by eſtimation, one acre; and all that cloſe of arable called The Brackland-cloſe, abutting upon the river called the Soare on the South, and London-road on the Weſt, containing, by eſtimation, one acre, with the appurtenances, worth per annum 2*l.* 10*s.*

All thoſe two-yard lands, containing, by eſtimation, 29 acres of meadow, arable, and paſture-ground, lying diſperſed in the ſeveral fields and meadows of Belgrave aforeſaid; viz. the Townſide-field 3 roods; in Cleyland-field 6 acres, 2 roods; in Moor-furlong 3 acres; in Abote-meadow and Longland 6 acres, 2 roods; in Breachfield 1 acre; in Hadland-field 2 acres, 2 roods; in Mill-hill-field 1 acre and 3 roods; in Connery-leas 4 acres; in Hall-meadow 2 acres; in Little Meadow 1 acre; together with all commons, common of paſture, feedings, profits, commodities, advantages, and emoluments whatſoever, to the premiſſes, or any part or parcel thereof, in any-wiſe appertaining or belonging; we eſtimate at 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

All that herbage, feeding, or impaſturing, in the churchyard of Belgrave aforeſaid, with the appurtenances, we eſtimate per annum at — 5*s.*

Mem. There are belonging to the aforeſaid two-yard lands commons for paſturing and feeding of ten beaſts and 80 ſheep yearly in the common fields and leaſowes of Belgrave aforeſaid, and 18 rydde of furze or gorſſe yearly to be taken out of theſe commons, and an open lane to the ſaid yard-lands; all which are comprehended in the value of the ſaid yard-lands.

All thoſe tenths and tithes of all and all manner of corn, grain, hay, flax, wool, and lamb, yearly coming, accruing, or renewing, in all titheable places within the pariſh of Belgrave aforeſaid, to the rectory thereof belonging, with the rights, members, and appurtenances thereof, we eſtimate, communibus annis, at £200.

Mem. The premiſſes, with the appurtenances, are claimed for certain years yet to come, by leaſe not yet produced to us.

Lucius lord viſcount of Faulkland and John Coxe of Aldenham in the county of Hertford, gent. by a leaſe bearing date 14 June, 14 Car. made by Dr. Robert Wright, then biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield, held all that the church, rectory, and juriſdiction of Belgrave, cum membris, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, with all chapels, houſes, dovehouſes, buildings, backſides, orchards, gardens, glebe lands, meadows, paſtures, rents, reverſions, ſervices, and all manner of tithe-wool, lamb, hay, corn, and grain, penſions and portions, with all eaſements, privileges, liberties, or advantages, to them or any of them belonging, or in

---

[1] Pat. 1 Edw. VI.

[2] From the original Account-books in the Bodleian Library.

any wiſe appertaining, as well in Belgrave aforeſaid, as in Burſtall and Thurmaſton; to have and to hold the ſaid church, rectory, and paſturage, with the appurtenances, unto them the ſaid Lucius lord viſcount Faulkland and John Coxe, from the making of the ſaid leaſes, to the full end and term of 21 years; yielding and paying therefore yearly unto the ſaid Biſhop and his ſucceſſors, at Michaelmas and Lady-day, £30. with a (nomine pœnæ) if the ſaid rent be behind and unpaid ſix weeks after any of the ſaid feaſts; with a covenant, that, if the ſaid Lord Viſcount and Mr. Coxe live during the ſaid leaſe, they are to preſent a vicar to the ſaid church of Belgrave, and to pay him £30. If they die, the Biſhop is to preſent a vicar. The ſaid rectory is worth per annum — — £240.

Preſent rent per annum £30.
Vicar — 30
Apportioned-land 6 } 60
Tithes 54 }

Wm. Webb.
Wm. Eles,
Jo. Rutendgen, } ſurveyors, June 27, 1651[1].
Wm. Rutendgen,

In May 1709, the Biſhop having propoſed ſeveral queries, the following anſwers were made by Mr. Carte in reſpect of the town of Belgrave:

1. The number of families is about 60; of theſe about 18 are Papiſts, ſeven are profeſſed Anabaptiſts, and ſome others at ſome times go to their aſſemblies.

2. There are no public meetings here which I have heard of; but there is one Zachary Stanton, who is ſaid to preach among the Anabaptiſts frequently in St. Martin's pariſh in Leiceſter, and ſometimes in other places.

3. There is no public ſchool.

4. There is no charity-ſchool.

5. There is no almſhouſe, or hoſpital; but, at the incloſure, a certain plot of ground was ſet out for the uſe of the poor; but, the perſon who has the copy of the decree then made being unwilling to ſhew it, reports are various as to the manner of ſettlement of it.

6. There are two houſes, and about 18 acres of land, in the occupation of Mary Dawſon, widow, and Robert Yates, weaver, given towards the repair of the church and two ſtone bridges, within the liberty of Belgrave, received by the churchwardens.

7. As to abuſes and frauds committed in relation to theſe eſtabliſhments, I know of none.

8. No adults have been baptized here, ſince the laſt viſitation, by me or Mr. Peake.

9. I do not know that any who come to church are unbaptized; but there are about 25, who, being baptized, and above 16 years of age, have not been confirmed.

The ſtate of the vicarage of Belgrave; with an account of the rights and perquiſites belonging to the vicar and clerk or ſexton of Belgrave, 1709.

"The rectory of Belgrave, comprehending Belgrave, and the two chapelries of Burſtall and Thurmaſton, with all their rights, being granted by Edward the Sixth to the biſhoprick of Coventry and Litchfield, was charged with a penſion of thirteen pounds, ſix ſhillings, and eight pence, for the maintenance of a vicar, which the biſhops of that ſee have, of their bounty, augmented to ſeventy pounds per annum, payable by their tenant, without deduction of taxes.

There being no houſe belonging to the vicar; Dr. Hough, the preſent biſhop, at a late renewal of the leaſe, hath obliged the tenant, that, after the expiration of the term of the precedent leaſe, he ſhould quit the parſonage-houſe, and alſo the church-yard of Belgrave, to the uſe of the vicar.

The aforeſaid parſonage-houſe is built; the firſt ſtory with lime and ſtone; and on that is ſet a frame of timber ſtudded and lathed, and teared with clay, and then rough-caſt with lime-mortar.

It conſiſts of five bays of building.

The firſt ſtory contains,

1. a kitchen, floored with broad ſtone; 2. a hall of the ſame; 3. a leſſer, 4. a greater parlour, both floored with boards; 5. another parlour, with a plaſter floor, under which is a cellar paved with pebbles.

In the ſecond ſtory are ſeven chambers, all which have plaſter floors, except the largeſt, which is over the great parlour, and is boarded. Over all is a garret with a plaiſter floor.

There are two outhouſes thatched, except that part uſed for a brewhouſe, which is ſlated. Each conſiſts of three bays; the larger is a barn; the leſſer conſiſts of a ſtable, a hay-barn, and a brewhouſe.

The homeſtall contains about an acre of ground, and is fenced with mud walls.

About 30 years ſince, three bays of barning were removed by Mr. Byerley to Thurmaſton, where they now ſtand, and are held by the tithing-man there.

Since that time, four other bays, being ſomewhat ruinous, which were formerly malting-rooms, were demoliſhed, and quite taken away by the leſſee, who, it is ſaid, was then Mr. Byerley, father of the preſent Mr. Byerley. He died 20 years ſince, or more.

The ſurplice-fees are, for publiſhing the banns one ſhilling, for marriages by banns two ſhillings and ſix pence, by licence five ſhillings; for churchings five pence; but for burials there is nothing paid, nor for chriſtenings, nor any thing for mortuaries.

The tenths paid to the crown yearly are twenty-ſix ſhillings and eight pence. The vicar alſo pays to the archdeacon, for ſynodals, 3*s*. 6*d*. yearly; but the procurations are charged upon the impropriator, being 7*s*. 6¾*d*.

There are belonging to the ſteeple, church, and chancel, four bells and a clock, a ſurplice, a cuſhion, a large Bible, a Common-prayer book, a book of homilies, a baſon, a plate, and a flaggon of pewter, a cup of ſilver, a carpet, a table-cloth, and a napkin.

There are within the liberty of Belgrave two houſes, and about 11 acres of land, in the occupation of Mary Dawſon, widow, and Robert Vales, weaver; and alſo about eighteen acres of land, in the occupation of the ſaid perſons, given towards the church and the ſtone bridges within the liberty of Belgrave.

The chapelwardens of Burſtal and Thurmaſton annually pay for each town a groat to the churchwardens of Belgrave, under the name of Peter-pence.

The church-yard is fenced on the North ſide, ſo far as the ſtreet-way extends, by the inhabitants of Belgrave; on the South, by the inhabitants of Burſtal and Thurmaſton; and on all the other ſides, by the occupiers of the lands adjacent.

The clerk is appointed by the vicar. His wages are twenty-eight ſhillings per annum [and, as ſexton, twenty-three ſhillings per annum], paid to him by order of the inhabitants of Belgrave. Beſides which, he hath, for making a grave in church or chancel, 2*s*. 6*d*.; and, for ringing the bell for each perſon there buried, one ſhilling; for ringing the bell and making a grave in the churchyard for one buried in a coffin 16*d*. without a coffin 10*d*.; for attendance at each wedding, one ſhilling.

N. B. Nov. 29, 1721, Mr. Robert Barber, ſurgeon, told me, that he rents of Mr. Aiſlabie the rights of the parſonage of Belgrave at Thurmaſton at £70. per annum; that there are 28 yard-lands in the field; that he has 8*d*. per yard-land for hay-ſilver, which he takes to be for the graſs growing on the hades of the lands, he having tithe hay in kind in all other parts except one certain meadow of about 80 acres; that, according to the Eaſter-book, he has tithe eggs, and alſo tithe chickens; but the hens which have chickens pay no tithe eggs; the ſame for ducks, geeſe, &c.; that, as Eaſter-offerings, he has of every even the meaneſt houſe 2*d*.; but of ſome he has 4*d*. and of others 6*d*. per houſe; in all they amount to above 14*s*. or 15*s*.; that the taxes are moderate taxes, for now, when the tax is charged at 3*s*. per annum, he pays about 2*s*. per pound, i. e. about £7. per annum. The glebe there conſiſts of the churchyard and 2 or 3 leas [on which is ſituated the Tithe-barn], ſcarce amounting to an acre. He ſays there are about 18 acres of arable in every yard-land[2]."

A houſe and 21 acres of land, with a ſmall cottage, were long ſince left, not now known by whom, for the uſe of the town of Belgrave; the annual produce whereof, being £21. has been, and ſtill is, applied ſolely to the repairs and other expences of the church.

The preſent value in the king's books is 13*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.; the epiſcopal procurations, 7*s*. 6*d*.; the archidiaconal, 11*s*. 0½*d*.

---

[1] From the original ſurvey at Lambeth, copied, by permiſſion of his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in 1798.

[2] From the MSS. of the Rev. Samuel Carte, who officiated here ſeveral years as curate to Mr. Peake.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
R. 1220.	The prior of Ware, as procurator-general of the abbot of St. Ebrulph.
Stephen de Lucy[1], 1226.
Robert de Dunholme, ſubdeacon, 1231.
Simon Conſtabularius[2], 1238.
John Conſtabularius, 1239.
Walter[3] de Aneford, 1240.
Richard de Burſtall, 1261.
Thomas de Stamford, 1273.
Henry de Haurele, 13...
John Belgrave, 1345.
John Dorman, died 1485.	Prior and convent of Jeſus of Bethlehem at Shene.
Thomas Ingilby[4], biſhop of Rathlur'.
Peter Swillington, 1534.
George Purefoy, 1646.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
William Kinnes, 1648.
Daniel Keene[5], May 16, 1660.	King Charles II.
John Joanes[6], 1676.
Thomas Peake, July 18, 1703.	Queen Anne, by lapſe.
William Floyer[7], B. A. 1720.	Biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry.
Thomas Dutton, Sept. 22, 1749.
John Clayton, Feb. 17, 1779; died Feb. 1796.
George-Baſs Oliver[8], March 22, 1796.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Wyrley ſays, "There are in the church many old graveſtones, but eſpecially one of black marble after the faſhion of the monuments of the two Saxon kings in St. Paul's church in London." See p. 184.

He notices alſo theſe epitaphs; of which the two firſt are ſtill here, though the four laſt are not now to be found; but in the chancel is a large altar-tomb of ſtone, with an alabaſter cover, without inſcription, except disjunctive letters marked thereon by illiterate perſons. This probably belonged to one of thoſe mentioned by Wyrley, and the inſcription may be eraſed.

"Henricus de Haurele, rector hujus ecclesie."

"Rogerus de Belgrave et Susanna uxor ejus."

"Johannes de Belgrave 1330."

"Tho. Wigston, mercator Stapuli villæ Calesiæ, et Elizabetha uxor ejus, qui ob. 8 Aug. 1502."

"Elizabetha Wigston, uxor Christopheri Browne."

"Joh̄es Greenewood, de Belgrave, fuit clericus pacis, anno 1558, co. Leic'; ob. 15..."

Within the pews are two conſiderable altar-tombs, both which have been ſtript of their braſſes, and both bear evident marks of having been at ſome time broken open.

On the firſt of theſe (fig. C. C.), which is for an early lord of the manor, and may be dated in or about 1278, are traces of two large croſſes, and a great number of ſtars; and round the edge is inſcribed:

AMEN: IC : IAC
ET : ROGERUS : DE : BELGRAUE : SUSA
NNA : UXOR : EIUS
QUORUM : ANIMABUS
PROPICIETUR : DEUS

The other altar-tomb (fig. D.) belongs to a former rector, whoſe buſt was placed over a ſhort flowered croſs; and whoſe memory is ſtill preſerved by the following inſcription:

SIE HIC
IACET : HENRICUS : DE : HAURE
LE : QUON
DAM : RECTOR : HUIUS : ECCLE

In the chancel.

At the back of the middle ſtall:

Arms at the top: Sable, a chevron Ermine between three catharine wheels; fig. 10. Motto, Noſce teipſum.

"Next this wall
doth lye the body of John Haſlock,
of Beaumont Leyes;
who departed this life
March the 9th,
A. D. 1707, æt. 66.
The firſt of his family here buried,
by his only ſon John."

On flat ſtones:

1. "Here lieth the body of
Mr. John Haſlock, of the borough of Leiceſter, only ſon of Mr. John Haſlock, late of Beaumont Leyes; who departed this life January 13, 1737,
in the 60th year of his age."

---

[1] "Magiſter Stephanus de Lucy ad eccleſiam de Bellgrave, ad preſentationem prioris de Ware." Inquiſitio facta per W. archidiaconum Leyceſtrienſem. Reg. Hugonis Welles, Part 18.

[2] "Magiſter J. Conſtab', ad eccleſiam de Belegrave, ad præſentationem prioris de Ware. Teſtibus; Johane de Sancto Egidio, magiſtro Rog' de Raveningham, Rogero Blundo, Johanne de Crachal, canonicis Lincoln'; dominis Joh' de Dyham, Ricardo de Pokelinton, capellanis; magiſtro Ricardo Norm', Benedicto de Burgo, Joh' de Eſton, Rogero de Fretewell, clericis. Dat' 2 idus Aug', Pontificatûs 5." Dorſo.

[3] Walter, rector of Belgrave, and dean of Leiceſter, occurs in 1258. See under Somerby, vol. II. p. 321, an award of his, in a diſpute between the nuns of Langley and the vicar of Somerby.

[4] "Thomas Ingilby, epiſcopus Rathlur', præſentatus per priorem & conventum domûs Jeſû de Bethlehem de Shene, ad eccleſiam de Belgrave, per mortem magiſtri Johannis Dorman, 31 Oct', 1485."

[5] In an original will, dated July 4, 1664, ſigned Matthew Hale, under the title "Exonerationes Decimarum," I find this entry: "Rector of Belgrave, 4*l.* 7*s.* 7¾*d.*"

[6] John Joanes, of Ayleſton, clerk, miniſter of Belgrave, added two to the ſix widows in the hoſpital of St. John's within the borough of Leiceſter, allowing them 6*d.* a week and gowns during his life. See vol. I. p. 326.

[7] Of Chriſt's college, Cambridge. He publiſhed a Viſitation Sermon.

[8] Son of Peter Oliver, eſq. of Leiceſter.

2. Near the South wall:
"Heſter Turnedg died Feb. 6, 1736" [no age].

3. Near the altar-rails:
"Here lieth the body of Anna Hungate, daughter of Henry Hungate, eſq. and Lucy his wife;
who was borne the 5th day of January, 1652;
and dyed the 4th of May, 1657."

4. On the ſame ſtone:
"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF SUSANNA HUNGATE,
HER SISTER, WHO WAS BORNE THE LAST DAY
OF OCTOBER, 1655;
AND DYED THE 22D OF APRILL, 1656."

In the nave.

On the North ſide, over the firſt pillar, on a mural monument of white marble, bordered with purple-veined marble. Arms at the bottom: Argent, on a bend Gules, a ſtar of ſix points wavy Or; fig. 11.

"To the memory of William Vann, eſq.
He departed this life on the 20th day of April, 1794,
in the 66th year of his age."

On a ſmall ſquare blue ſtone (which marks the place of his interment) is "W. Vann, eſq. 1794."

On another mural monument (of the ſame marble as the laſt) in the North-eaſt angle between the church and chancel:

"To the memory of William Southwell, eſq.
He departed this life on the 15th day of April, 1772, and in the 70th year of his age."

A large blue ſtone below marks his interment, as the only ſon of the late Richard Southwell, vicar of Evington in this county.

On other flat ſtones:

1. On a large old ſlab:
"...... Margareta, quondam ......"

2. "Near this place are depoſited
the remains of Charles Kinnes, the ſon of Thomas Kinnes, gent.
He departed this life the 11th day of November, 1723,
aged 31 years.
Alſo of Jane the wife of Charles Kinnes.
She died the 5th day of March, 1762,
aged 70 years."

3. "To the memory of Robert Kinnes,
who departed this life the 5th day of March, 1795,
aged 71 years."

4. "Here lieth the body of Katharine Kinnes, wife of Thomas Kinnes ſenior;
who departed this life the 10th day of May, 1680,
being aged 28 years;
and leaving iſhew, Thomas, William, and John."

5. "Sacred to the memory of Jenney wife of Thomas Nixon.
She departed this life the 17th day of January, 1789,
aged 43 years."

On mural monuments in the South aile:

1. Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4, Byerley; 2. Gules, a chevron Ermine between ten croſſes formé Argent; 3. Gules, ſemé of fleurs de lis, a lion rampant Or, Beaumont; fig. 12.

✠ "Charles Byerley, eſq. died 1738, aged 74."

2. "Near this place lie interred
the remains of John-Beaumont Byerley, eſq.
who married Elizabeth, daughter to Thomas Berkley, of Spetchley, in the county of Worceſter, eſq.
He was ſon of Charles Byerley, eſq.
and Jane his wife, who was one of the coheirs of ſir Thomas Beaumont, of Gracedieu.
He died May 28, 1742, aged 56."

3. Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4, Byerley; 2. and 3, a lion's gamb eraſed Or. Creſt; two lions' gambs couped Argent, holding a croſs croſſlet Gules; fig. 13.

"Near this monument lies interred the body of John-Beaumont Byerley, eſq. late of this place, who died the 8th day of November, 1760.
Alſo Eſther his wife,
youngeſt daughter of Thomas Boothby, eſq.
late of Tooley in this county;
who died the 14th of January, 1760,
aged 50 years."

4. On a monument of white marble againſt the Weſt end:

"In memory of the rev. John Clayton [1], A. M.
vicar of this pariſh,
and rector of Norton by Twycroſs in this county.
He died February 21, 1796,
in the 81ſt year of his age.
Alſo in memory of Elizabeth his wife,
eldeſt daughter of the late rev. ANDREW BURNABY, LL.B.
rector of Aſfordby in this county, and vicar and prebendary of St. Margaret's, Leiceſter.
She died April 9, 1795,
in the 64th year of her age.
And of George-Burnaby and Sophia,
two of their children,
who died in their infancy."

Arms at bottom: Argent, a croſs Sable between four pellets; Clayton; impaling, Argent, two bars Gules, in chief a lion paſſant reguardant of the laſt; Burnaby. Creſt (above the inſcription), a lion's paw Argent, iſſuing out of a mural crown Gules, holding a pellet; fig. 14.

On an atchievement againſt a pillar in the nave: Argent, three padlocks, key pendant in the key-hole Or. Creſt; a boar's head and neck couped Sable, collared Or; with a padlock in its mouth Or. Motto, Memento mori, dated 1677; Overin; fig. 15.

5. On a monument blacked over [2]:

Arms: Quarterly, 1. Sable, a chevron Ermine between three maſcles Argent; 2. Gone; 3. three eſcalop-ſhells; 4. a pelican vulnerating, and feeding her young. Creſt, a talbot's head affrontée; fig. 16.

On flat ſtones at the Eaſt end:

1. On an old large ſlab, on which is the figure of a prieſt, with a label over his head, and another under his feet, the braſs torn off, is this modern inſcription:

"Hic jacet Carolus Byerley, armiger.
Obiit die ii Januarii, 168$\frac{1}{2}$.
✠ Requieſcat in pace!"

2. On the next ſtone, with the arms of Byerley at the top in a ſhield.

"Here lyes Thomas, the ſon of John-Beaumont Byerley by his wife Elizabeth; who died in the firſt year of his age,
in the year of our Lord 1711."
Suffer little children to come unto me," &c.

3. "Jane Byerley, relict of Charles Byerley, eſq. daughter and one of the coheireſſes of ſir Thomas Beaumont, of Gracedieu, bart.
died Feb. 22, 1738, aged LXXXIV."

4. "To the memory of Richard Denſhire, late of this place, gent.
who died the 6th of June, 1794,
aged 67 years."

---

[1] At Breadſal church in Derbyſhire, on a ſmall tablet, is this inſcription; probably to ſome near relation of this gentleman:
"Sacred to the memory of a good man,
John Clayton, M. A.
rector of this pariſh.
He died 15 July, 1774,
in the 67th year of his age."

[2] The inſcription on this monument, if there ever was any, is obliterated by a modern colouring of black and white.

On an old ſtone near the font:
"HERE LYETH THE BODY OF AGNES LOXAM,
THE WIFE OF HENRY LOXAM, GENT.;
WHO DECEASED THE 4TH DAY OF MAY, 1670,
ÆTATIS SUÆ 6.."

On the ſame ſtone, which is much decayed (the inſcription lengthways of the ſtone):

"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF HENRY LOXAM, GENT.
WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE
THE 14TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1677.
IN THIS DEEPE GRAVE, ASSURE THYSELF, DOTH LYE
ONE THAT WAS FULL OF FAITH AND CHARITY;
A MAN THAT DID SOE TRULY LOVE THE POORE,
HE GAVE RELIEF ABROAD, AND AT HIS DOORE.
THE PUBLIQUE PRAYERS AT CHURCH HE DID FREQUENT:
IN READINGE OF GOOD BOOKS MUCH TIME HE SPENT.
HE DEAD AND GONE, HIS AGE WAS SEVENTY-FIVE;
A PATTERNE GOOD TO ALL THAT HIM SURVIVE."

On the ſame ſtone (alſo lengthways):
"HERE LIETH THE BODY OF HENRY OVERIN, GENT.
WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE
THE 16TH DAY OF AUGUST, 1697; HIS AGE 31."

On ſmall ſtones in the floor:

1. "The rev. John Clayton, 1796;
Sophia Clayton, 1766;
Elizabeth Clayton, 1795."

2. "Samuel, ſon of Samuel and Hannah Archer, died Oct. 2, 1787, aged 15 months."

3. "In memory of George-Burnaby Clayton, ſon of John Clayton, vicar of this pariſh,
by Elizabeth his wife.
He departed this life September 10th, 1768,
aged 6 years.

Reader, reflect; you learn by me,
No age from Death can ſet you free.
To me he unexpected came:
Why may not your fate be the ſame?
Prepare thyſelf, to God attend:
Then peace and joy will be your end."

Fragment of an inſcription on a pilled blue ſtone, under the wall, near the North-entrance door:

. . . . CORPUS
. . . . . W, A. M. ECCLES.
... LLIÆ, IN AGRO EBOR, QUON ...
PASTORIS FIDELISSIMI ....

On flat ſtones in the North aile, beginning at the Weſt end:

1. "William Marſton died June 22, 1774,
aged 64 years."

2. "Mary his wife died June 6, 1759,
in the 49th year of her age."

3. "Thomas Tompſon, of Belgrave, gent.
died Aug. 23, 1742, aged 69 years."

4. "Here lieth the body of John Eburne, eſq.
late of the pariſh of Pancras, co. Middleſex.
He died 19 Dec. 1782, aged 65 years."

5. "Here lie interred the remains of Anne the wife of Thomas Smith, and daughter of Thomas Thompſon, gent.;
died April 30, 1784,
in the 72d year of her age."

6. "Thomas Tompſon junior,
ſon of Thomas and Mary his wife, died April 29, 1737, aged 23 years."

7. "William Tompſon, late of the borough of Leiceſter, ſecond ſon of Thomas and Mary Tompſon of Belgrave, died May 12, 1741, aged 24 years."

8. "Mary-Catharine, daughter of William and Hannah-Sophia Tompſon, died, in her infancy, April 1766."

9. "William, ſon of the above, died March 18, 1769, aged 1 year."

10. "Francis Vaughan died 1763."

11. "Mary Vaughan died 1763."

12. "John-Francis, ſon of Harley and Ruth Vaughan, of the borough of Leiceſter, died Auguſt 21, 1770,
in the 7th year of his age."

In the middle of the North aile, towards the Eaſt end, ſtands the very antient ridged tomb of marble noticed by Mr. Wyrley, which perhaps might have been once blacker; but it now appears bright and of a dark green, interſperſed with whitiſh veins and ſpots (ſee plate XXXI. fig. E.): it is without inſcription[1].

In the church-yard:

"John Tetly died Aug. 13, 1764, aged 64.

Lawrence Tetly ſlumbers here,
Who lived on earth near twenty year;
October eight and twentieth day
His ſoul forſook its houſe of clay,
Through the pure æther took its way;
We hope he reſts with Chriſt in Heaven!"

"In memory of Thomas Harris, who departed this life January 4th, 1792, in the 23d year of his age.

How vain the hopes we entertain in youth,
When Falſhood holds the glaſs inſtead of Truth.
The Youth, whoſe aſhes make this turf to heave,
Within eight moons left a young Wife to grieve;
A Wife almoſt a Mother.—Death, thy dart,
Unmov'd by pity, pierces ev'ry heart.
Two tender Parents mourn his early fall;
For, in his death they loſt their offspring all."

"Sacred to the memory of John Woodward (late officer of Exciſe), whoſe piety and uprightneſs endeared him to his acquaintance.
He died April 20, 1792, aged 66 years."

Edward Ruſhen died Feb. 13, 1744, aged 74.
Anne Ruſhen Sept. 28, 1744, aged 75.
Thomas Waterman died May 26, 1763, aged 69.
Elizabeth Waterman died Jan. 13, 1775, aged 83.
Thomas Palmer died April 12, 1782, aged 48.
Elizabeth Palmer died May 29, 1784, aged 51.
William Swain died Oct. 16, 1767, aged 35.
Catharine Swain, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Waterman, died April 16, 1778, aged 67.

---

[1] "Some few years ſince, as the workmen were repairing the roof of the North aile, they diſplaced, or threw-off, the ridged cover of this tomb; and amongſt the duſt within it was found an Iriſh ſhilling of Philip and Mary, in very indifferent preſervation, apparently of baſe metal, a mixture of copper and ſilver; nearly the ſize of the ſhilling of 1554 and 1555 in Folkes, Plate XI. fig. 9 and 14, but very thin, and clipped. The legend is PHILIP. ET MARIA D. G. REX ET REGINA ANGL.; and under the buſts of the king and queen is the date '1555.' On the reverſe a harp ſurmounted by a crown; on one ſide of the harp P, on the other M, each ſurmounted by a crown (ſee Plate XXXV. fig. 4.) The legend, ⚜ POSVIMVS DEVM ADIVTORIVM NOSTRVM. The fleur de lis is noticed on the half-ſhilling of Philip and Mary by Mr. Snelling, who "never could procure the ſhilling with this privy mark upon it." As the tomb is certainly much older than the coin found in it, it is not very eaſy to account for its being found in ſo ſingular a place as the body of a very cloſe tomb, and that within the walls of the church." J. TAILBY.

[2] Who gave Argent, three bellows Sable, 2. 1.

[3] Arms: Sable, three eſcalops Argent.

BURSTALL[1],

a ſmall village on the Soar, three miles diſtant from Leiceſter, and about a quarter of a mile from the turnpike-road leading from Leiceſter to Loughborough, is bounded by Belgrave, Thurmaſton, Wanlip, Thurcaſton, Beaumont Leys, and the extra-parochial liberties of Stocking. It is in the hundred of Weſt Goſcote; and, as a hamlet of the pariſh of Belgrave, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

The lordſhip of Burſtelle, containing ſix ploughlands, was valued at forty ſhillings in the reign of the Confeſſor; but at the ſurvey is ſaid to be worth four ounces of gold. Alwin Pbocheſtan[2] held it; but Hugo de Grenteſmainell informed the jurors that the king had given it to him. The land was equal to five ploughs. One was in the demeſne, with one bondman; and three villans, with nine ſocmen and eleven bordars, had three ploughs. There were thirty-ſix acres of meadow; a wood three furlongs long, and two broad; and a mill worth ten ſhillings[3]. Hugo de Grenteſmainell had ten houſes in Leiceſter belonging to Burſtelle[4]; and under him Widiard held two ploughlands here; which, in the reign of the Confeſſor, were valued at ten ſhillings; and at the ſurvey were worth three ounces of gold. The land was equal to one plough. One was employed in the demeſne; and two bondmen, and eight villans, with four bordars, had one plough. There were ſixteen acres of meadow; and a mill of twelve-pence value[5].

This manor antiently belonged to the family of Burſtall. In the reign of Henry III. Robert ſon of William de Burſtall was ſeiſed of it. He gave for his ſeal a man armed on horſeback, holding a ſhield Ermine, charged with two bendlets ſiniſter, and circumſcribed, SIGILL' ROBERTI DE BVRSTALL[6].

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, it is ſtated that Syleby and Burſtall were de terrâ Normannorum, and given to Simon de Monteforti; precium 10 libr'[7].

From the proceedings in the Exchequer in 1247, Mr. Roper tranſcribed the following articles:

"Aſſiſa, &c. ſi Simon de Monteforti com' Leic', Thomas de Meſnill, Joħes de Monteforti, Silveſtrum de Graung, &c. diſſeiſaverint Joħem de Furnivall de xv^m^ librat' terre in Burſtall: et Nicħus Ma—ha[8], ballivus dicti comitis, dicit quod predictus comes feoffavit Gerardum de Furnivall, patrem predicti Johannis, de predictâ terrâ, ſibi & heredibus ſuis; & quod poſt mortem predicti Gerardi idem comes ſeiſivit manerium ſuum, eo quod heres dicti Gerardi fuit infra etatem: cuſtodia ejuſdem terre commitatur cuidam Fulconi de Martivauſt. Dies dat' eſt eis ad audiend' judicium ſuum coram rege, ꝑ preceptum dñi regis[9]."

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had ſome conſiderable property in this lordſhip.

John de Tours gave them his capital meſſuage at Burſtall, cum ſtagnis, vivariis, &c. and all other its appurtenances, and all the lands within the Hall-demeſne, cum gardinis, arboribus, & pomariis; and, by another grant, confirmed his former donation, with the addition of the Peyſeland, containing 40 acres; a piece of land, on the North ſide, called The Halleſtank, containing one acre and an half; two parcels of land in Leiceſter field, called Hardbers and Cranford-medowe, containing four acres; two tofts, with 48 acres of arable and meadow land, in Staunton juxta Berdon; 3*s.* annual rent, and a pair of gloves, ariſing from 17 acres held by Richard de Stapulton; with the reverſion of the ſaid lands, if Richard ſhould die without heirs; an event which afterwards happened. The lands were held of the honour of Leiceſter; and the abbot was to appear twice at the court there, and find a chaplain to celebrate divine ſervice in the chapel at Burſtall.

Robert ſon of Robert de Burſtall gave them all the meadow between the mill-pool of Burſtall and Belgrave meadow in length, and the Berne paſture in width, &c.; with his whole right of fiſhery on the Soar, and a warranty againſt all rents or demands for the meadow between the Soar and Burſtall mill, and againſt all attendances at the earl of Leiceſter's courts; all which were confirmed in 1332 by Henry ſon of the aforeſaid Robert.

By a charter of 17 Edward III. they had liberty to amortize one meſſuage, 2 tofts, 4 virgates, and 8 acres of arable land, and five acres and a half of meadow, in Burſtall and Staunton juxta Berdon, of the gift of John de Tours, to find a chaplain, to celebrate maſs daily in their abbey, for his own ſoul and the ſouls of all the faithful. They had a like charter, 21 Edw. III. for 7 meſſuages, 60 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow, and 3*s.* rent, &c. in Burſtall, Belgrave, Queniboro, and Reriſby; another, 29 Edw. III, for 24 acres in Burſtall, the gift of Robert de Burſtall; and one of 16 Ric. II. for 6 meſſuages, 15 cottages, 3 virgates, one bovate, one acre, and a rood of arable, 8 acres of meadow, and 23*s.* 4*d.* rent, with an acknowledgement of a pound of cumin, in Burſtall, Humberſton, Leiceſter, Barkby, and Lockington.

They had aſſigned to them the grant of Robert de Burſtall to Robert Byrd of Coſſington of a meſſuage and a virgate of land held in villanage by W. Pante, together with the ſaid William, with all his goods and chattles, & totâ ſequelâ ſuâ; a meſſuage and half a virgate of land held by John Bywater; a meſſuage and 3 roods of land held by Robert Scot; and 3*s.* a year rent, ariſing from half a virgate and 6 roods of land held in fee by Ralph Brown.

From the ſame Robert Byrd they had a grant to W. de Aſton and Robert ſon of Richard de Elmeley of a meſſuage and 10*s.* of yearly rent, from a meſſuage and one bovate of land which Emma the wife of Geoffrey Gerard held of them in Queniboro; and of 8*s.* yearly rent, from one bovate and the moiety of an acre of meadow, which Maud the widow of Robert de Rateliff held in that vill; and alſo a grant of 18*d.* of yearly rent, from a moiety of a meſſuage and virgate of land held by Martha Brown; and 18*d.* more, from a meſſuage and bovate of land held by Simon Stapulton.

Their tenants at will were John Boſſe, Thomas Lenton, and John Hanſon.

They had a toft, cum cuſtumâ, and a rent of 12*d.* obtained for them by brother Thomas Broughton; and a meadow called Burſtal-more, producing annually about 80 cart-loads of hay, worth about £4. and containing 24 acres; which, about 1470, paid an acknowledgement of 3*d.* to the abbot of Leiceſter, and 9*d.* to the lord De la Ware.

Thomas Heythe held a cottage and a garden, which originally paid 3*s.*; and in 1470 paid 9*d.* to the lord De la Ware.

Margaret Farme held a meſſuage and garden; for which, with a croft, &c. ſhe paid 3*s.* 6*d.*

---

[1] Borſtal, co. Bucks, the ſame as the Saxon Buꞃȝ-ꞅꞇal, ſignifying a ſeat on the ſide of a hill. Chronicle of Robert of Glouceſter, by T. Hearne, 1724. See alſo Somner's Saxon Dictionary, ſub voce.

[2] So the original; probably for Pbocheſtan.

[3] "Idem [Hugo] tenet 6 carucatas terræ in Burſtelle. Terra eſt 5 carucarum. In dominico eſt una, cum 1 ſervo; & 3 villani, & 2 ſochmanni, cum 11 bordariis, habent 3 carucas. Ibi molinum de 10 ſolidis, & 36 acræ prati. Silva quarentenarum longitudinis, & 2 quarentenarum latitudinis. Valuit 40 ſolidos; modò 5 uncias auri. Aluuinus Pbocheſtan tenebat; ſed Hugo dic' quod Rex ſibi dedit.." Domeſday, fol. 236. a. 2.

[4] "10 domus pertinentes ad Burſtelle." Ibid. fol. 230. a. 1.

[5] "Widardus tenet de H[ugone] 2 carucatas terræ in Burſtelle. Terra eſt 1 carucæ. In dominico eſt una; & 2 ſervi, & 8 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Ibi molinum de 12 denariis, & 16 acræ prati. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 3 uncias auri." Ibid. fol. 232. b. 1.

[6] MS. Chetwynd. See the ſeal in Plate XXXV. fig. 5.

[7] See vol. I. p. xlix.

[8] Marham, fortè.

[9] Placita 31 Hen. VIII. in Recept. Scaccarii.

The free tenants of the abbey here were John Gardyner, John Stanton, and Margery Stanton.

Roger Pyncbebek, the cellerar of the abbey, in 1398 conveyed ſome lands here to Agnes daughter of John Hopkynſon; which in 1424 were re-claimed from John Thorne and Agnes his wife.

They had the whole fiſhery of the Soar, adjoining to their meadow called Burſtall-more, from old cuſtom and the grant of Robert de Burſtall; and the fiſhery is a pool called Coll-poll, near their meadow, on each ſide of Thurmaſton and Burſtall.

They had a court-baron here, at which all their tenants were bound to attend; and at divers courts here it was preſented that Richard Walſcb of Onlep owed ſuit for divers lands which he held in Burſtall of the abbot of Leiceſter.

For the liberty of fiſhing on the Soar, they received from Hugh Schepey of Belgrave 6*d.*; from Robert Bayly of Burſtall 2*d.*; from W. Jeke of Anſty 12*d.*; and from Walter Bochar of Thurmaſton 12*d.*[1]

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Burſtall fills nine pages.

In 1273, John de Melling was lord of this manor; and, in the Itinerary of 1280, Burſtall, Abbey-gate, Thurmaſton, and Wanlip, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1299, Hawiſia de Grelly died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Burſtall held of the honour of Leiceſter, by homage and ſuit of court, from three weeks to three weeks, at the earl's court[2].

In the time of Edward I. Robert ſon of Robert de Birſtall granted to the abbey and convent of Leiceſter 24 acres of meadow land here; and in 1323, John de Tours gave them one meſſuage, two tofts, and 88 acres of land here, and in Staunton under Bardon, and five acres and a half of meadow at Burſtall[3], held of the honour of Leiceſter, for which they were to find a chaplain to officiate in Burſtall chapel for ever[4].

Joan, daughter of Robert, and ſiſter and heir of Thomas lord Grelle, brought this manor in marriage to John lord de la Ware; who in 1347 died ſeiſed of two parts of the town of Burſtall (as of the inheritance of Joan his wife), held of Henry earl of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of a third part of one knight's fee, and ſuit of court at Leiceſter; and Roger la Ware, his couſin and next heir, was then 18 years old[5].

July 16, 1361, it was found that Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of a third part of one knight's fee in Burſtall, which Thomas de Rygelegh held[6].

In 1370, ſir Roger la Warre, knt. deceaſed, held two parts of the manor of Burſtall, of the duke of Lancaſter, by knight's ſervice; and ſir John la Warre, knt. was his ſon and heir[7]. From him it deſcended to the Weſts, who married the heir-general of De la Ware.

In 1392, John Twywell vicar of Lockington, John Anſtey, Richard Gameſton, Robert of the Halle, and Richard Browne, had liberty to give ſix meſſuages, 15 cottages, and divers lands and rents, in the town and ſuburbs of Leiceſter, and at Humberſton, Burſtall, Barkby, and Lockington, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter[8].

In 1412, Thomas Weſt, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Burſtall, with the appurtenances, held of the duke of Lancaſter, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by knight's ſervice; and Thomas Weſt, knt. his ſon and heir, was aged 21 years and upwards[9]. This Thomas died in 1416, ſeiſed of the manor of Burſtall, with the appurtenances, held of the duke of Lancaſter, as of his honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and ſir Reginald Weſt, knt. was his brother and next heir[10].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Burſtall was rated at £1. 14*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 2*s.*

In 1440, Reginald Weſt died ſeiſed of the manor of Burſtall, with the appurtenances; and, being ſo ſeiſed thereof, gave the ſame to John archbiſhop of Canterbury and his heirs. It was held of the king in capite, as of his honour of Leiceſter[11].

In 1450, Reginald Weſt, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Burſtall, held of the duchy of Lancaſter, as of the honour of Leiceſter; and Richard Weſt, eſq. his ſon and heir, was aged 19 years and upwards[12].

In 1463, Thomas Welſhe, of Onlep, eſq. died ſeiſed of three meſſuages, 40 acres of land, and 24 acres of meadow, in Burſtall[13].

In 1472, Thomas Hotofte, brother and heir of Richard Hotofte, eſq. releaſed the right in all his lands and tenements in Burſtall to John Staunton, eſq.[14]

In 1538, Chriſtopher Villiers, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Burſtall, which he entailed on his nephew ſir John Villiers[15]; who, April 16, 1545, was ſaid to have died ſeiſed of this manor, held of the honour of Leiceſter, in ſocage; and that Dorothy, then wife of Francis Browne, his daughter and next heir, was aged 28 years and upwards[16].

In 1564, there were 26 families in Burſtall.

Aug. 31, 1589, it was found that ſir Walter Aſton, knt. died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Burſtall and Syſton, held of the queen, as of the honour of Tutbury, in ſocage, by the rent of 6*s.* 8*d.* and one pound of pepper[17].

The only freeholder here in 1630 was Gregory Brokeſby, gent. who in 1642 was lord of this town; and for his coat-armour bore, Argent, three bars, nebulé Sable, a canton Gules[18]. By Anne his daughter and heir this lordſhip was brought in marriage to Thomas Gifford.

In 1655, there was collected in Burſtall, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 4*s.* 1*d.*

In the poll-book of 1719, it appears that four perſons polled from this place, George Dawes, John Fairfield, Joſeph King, and William . . . . .

The ſame four perſons occur in 1722; and in 1775, we find 18 names; amongſt them, John George, gent. of Gough-ſquare, London.

In a violent ſtorm, which happened in 1724, the crops of wheat, barley, and beans, at this place, were entirely deſtroyed by the hail, which broke off the heads, and bruiſed the ſtanding corn. The wind blew ſo violently at South during this ſtorm, that what eſcaped the hail was laid flat for whole fields together. The lands about Leiceſter were in the ſame condition; and the gardeners ſuffered much in their fruit, all their glaſſes being broken, and their early products deſtroyed. In the borough almoſt all the windows were broken by the ſaid hail, and conſiderable damage was ſuſtained at the Cranes Inn. The windows in the 24 poor pariſh-houſes in the Humberſtone-gate were almoſt all broken. The roads for two entire miles round the town were filled with the leaves and branches of trees and hedges.

In an act paſſed in 1759, for dividing the open fields within the manor of Burſtall, in the pariſh of Belgrave, called by the ſeveral names of Stonehill Field, Middle Field, and Stocking Field, The Upper Paſture, and Nether Paſture, conſiſting of 34 yardlands or thereabouts, and containing in the whole about 1000 acres; John Baſs, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Burſtall, and ſeiſed of 23 yardlands and upwards within the ſaid manor and lordſhip; and Frederick lord biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry, in right of his ſee, rector of Belgrave, and of Burſtall and Thurmaſton as chapelries within that pariſh, and as ſuch entitled to all the rectorial and vicarial tithes, which were held by William Aiſlabie, eſq. under a leaſe for 21 years from the Biſhop; John Clayton, clerk, vicar of Belgrave, in right of his vicarage, was entitled to an annual ſtipend of £70. or thereabouts, payable to him by the Biſhop, or by Mr. Aiſlabie his leſſee, in lieu of all vicarial tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh and chapelries, except ſurplice-fees: Lord William Manners was ſeiſed of 37 acres and upwards called Burſtall Moor; and Nicholas Simons, clerk, of about 2 acres, being the reſidue of the land within the ſaid Moor; which Moor, after the crop of hay is carried off, was commonable ground; and William Biddles, Thomas Mortimer, Mary Mortimer, John Turlington the Elder, John Turlington the Younger, Edward Dawkins, Thomas Roadley, John Stubbs, the ſaid Nicholas Simons, and others, were proprietors and owners of lands and commons in the ſaid common fields and waſte grounds: The allotment to Mr. Aiſlabie, was a ſeventh part of the land and ground, as a full equivalent for all the rectorial and vicarial tithes in the chapelry of Burſtall within the fields intended to be incloſed; to have and to hold, to himſelf, his executors, adminiſtrators and aſſigns, during the continuance of his intereſt in the tithes under the leaſe to him granted; the inheritance in fee-ſimple reverting to the biſhop of Lichfield and Coventry for the time being, and his ſucceſſors for ever; and the ground allotted to Mr. Aiſlabie in poſſeſſion, and to the Biſhop in reverſion, to be in full ſatisfaction for all the rectorial and vicarial tithes due to, or claimed by, Mr. Aiſlabie in virtue of his leaſe, or the Biſhop in virtue of his impropriation, or by Mr. Clayton, or his ſucceſſors, vicars of Belgrave, out of any of the lands in Burſtall intended to be incloſed, or in reſpect of any the yards, gardens, orchards, and homeſteads in Burſtall (except ſurplice-fees); and alſo except with reſpect for the tithes ariſing from certain antient incloſures in the lordſhip of Burſtall, belonging to Robert Fiſher and Anthony Ward, and for the tithes of Burſtall Moor.

---

[1] See Appendix, p. 12.
[2] Eſch. 27 Edw. I. N° 43. Leic.
[3] Appendix to the Hiſtory of the Abbey, vol. I. p. 61.
[4] Cart. 29 Edw. I. n. 92.
[5] Eſch. 21 Edw. III. N° 56. Leic.
[6] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23.
[7] Eſch. 44 Edw. III. N° 68. Leic.
[8] Pat. 16 Ric. II. pars 2. m. 6.
[9] Eſch. 14 Hen. IV. N° 8. Leic.
[10] Eſch. 4 Hen. V. N° 28. Leic.
[11] Eſch. 19 Hen. VI. ex Libro de Lovel.
[12] Eſch. 29 Hen. VI. n. 21.
[13] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 13. Leic.
[14] Clauſ. 12 Edw. IV. n. 24.
[15] Eſch. 30 Hen. VIII. n. 53.
[16] Eſch. 36 Hen. VIII.
[17] Eſch. 31 Eliz.
[18] MS. Chetwynd.

The oldeſt Regiſter commences in 1574; the leaves at the beginning looſe.

Signed in 1592 "Robertus Watts, Miniſter;" in 1616 "Jo. Lea, miniſter;" in 1634 "William Kinnes, curate;" and after this time the Regiſter is badly kept.

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this hamlet, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 43.

The manor of Burſtall, with court-baron, chief rents, and fiſhery on the Soar, a capital modern manſion called Burſtall-houſe, garden, offices, &c. with 3 acres, 3 roods, 12 perches of plantation and pleaſure-grounds ſurrounding the manſion, many years the reſidence of the hon. Charles Wyndham, and now occupied by John Mansfield, eſq. were advertiſed for ſale in November 1798; with 32 acres, 2 roods, 17 perches of excellent rich land adjoining the manſion, within a ring-fence, and divided into eight cloſes.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XXXI.)

dedicated to St. James, is ſmall, conſiſting of an embattled tower, in which are three bells; a lofty ſpire; a South porch; a nave and chancel of one pace, both ſlated; a deal gallery, handſomely painted, at the Weſt end of the nave; ſome modern deal pews; but old ruinous open ſeats under the gallery.

The pulpit is of oak, painted white, and curiouſly carved with arch-work, vine-branches, &c. It is antient, and was removed to this church from Norton by Galby when that church was erected.

The font is low, antient, and circular.

In the chancel is a locker.

The clear value of the chapels of Burſtall and Thurmaſton is ſtated in Bacon's Liber Regis to be £22. each.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

1. On a flat blue ſtone:

"Beneath lies interred the body of Suſannah,
the daughter of John While by Mary his wife;
who departed this life the 19th day of July,
anno Domini 1766,
in the 12th year of her age."

On collateral ſtones below the laſt:

2. "Beneath lies the body of John,
the ſon of John While by Mary his wife.
He departed this life the 14th day of July,
anno Domini 1766,
in the 14th year of his age."

3. "Here lies interred the body of Anne,
the daughter of John While by Mary his wife.
She departed this life the 24th of November, 1765,
in the 4th year of her age."

4. "Here lies interred the body of William,
the ſon of John While by Mary his wife;
who departed this life the 13th day of July,
in the year of our Lord God 1762,
in the 6th year of his age."

5. "Here alſo lieth interred the body of William,
the ſon of John While by Mary his wife;
who dyed the 12th of January, 1764, in his infancy."

There is alſo another, for another of their children; but great part of it is covered by a new-erected pew.

Pedigree of PEPPER, of THURMASTON. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Quarterly, 1. and 4. Gules, on a chevron Argent, between three demi-lions rampant Or, three cycles Sable, Pepper. 2. Or, on a feſs Sable, three water-bougets Argent, Bugge. 3. Argent, a chevron between three garbs Gules, a martlet for difference, Sheffield; Plate VI. fig. 27.

John Pepper.=.......

Thomas Pepper, of Thurmaſton, co. Leiceſter.=Iſabel, dau. and coheir of .... Geoffrey, of Leake, co. Nott.

Thomas Pepper, of Thurmaſton.=Mary, dau. and heir of Richard Sheffield, of Thurmaſton and Leake.

1. William, died ſ. p.
Jane, married to ... Worthington, of Keyham, c. Leic.
Robert Pepper, of Thurmaſton, gent. æt. 52, 1619; died Sept. 23, 1630.=Katharine, dau. of Rich. Mansfield, of Leake Parva.
2. John, æt. 32.
Emma.=Will. Pagett, of Syſton.

1. Robert, æt. 13.
2. Thomas, æt. 11.
3. Richard, æt. 8.

Pedigree of GIFFORD, of BURSTALL. (From P. Le Neve's MS Baronettage.)

Arms: Gules, three lions paſſant Argent [1]; Plate XXXI. fig. 21.

Edward Gifford, of Rodenhurſt, in Wilts, gent. = Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Oſborne, of Button in Wilts, gent.

Edith, dau. of . . . . Dwynho, ... in Somerſet, gent. by whom Thomas, who died ſine prole; firſt wife. = Morris Gifford, of Rodenhurſt, Wiltſhire. = Margaret, dau. of William Bewſhin, of Cottells, co. Wilts, eſq. third wife. = Jane, dau. of John Poole, of Sapperton, in Glouc. eſq. by whom 3 daughters; 2d wife.

1. Henry Gifford, a prieſt.
2. Thomas Gifford, ſon and heir, of Burton, co. Wilts. = ... dau. of . . . . . .

1. John Gifford, of Boreham in Eſſex, ſon and heir, = Mary, dau. of William Hanham, of Purſton Dell, co. Dorſet.
2. George Gifford, of Mount Deverell in Wilts. = ... dau. of . . . . . widow of . . . . Topp, of . . . .

1. John Gifford.
2. George Gifford.

1. William Gifford, of . . . . ſon and heir. = ... dau. of . . . . . . widow of . . . Johnſon, of . . . co. Somerſet.
2. John Gifford, of London, and of . . . . doctor of phyſick [2]. = Catharine, dau. of John Legat, of Hornchurch in Eſſex, and Margaret his wife, dau. of Tho. Reding, of Pinnor, co. Midd.
3. Thomas, ſine prole.
4. Chriſtopher, in Ireland.
5. Botevile.

1. John, ſon and heir, 29 years old 1634, died without iſſue.
2. Thomas Gifford, heir to his father; of Burſtall, co. Leic. in right of his wife. = Anne, dau. and heir of Gregory Brookſby, of Burſtall, co. Leiceſter.
1. Margaret.
2. Mary.

1. . . . . .
2. Sir Henry Gifford, of Burſtall, heir to his father, created a baronet Nov. 21, 1660. = Mary, dau. of Baynham Vaughan, of Ruerden, co. Glouceſter.
3. Thomas.
4. Gregory.
5. Morris.
6. William.
1. Katharine, married to Robert Guldeford, of Hempſted Place, co. Glouceſter.
2. Mary, married to George Nevill lord Abergavenny.

Sir John Gifford, of Burſtall, bart. a Roman Catholic, lived in England in the reign of king James II; and in 1695 was reſident in France. = ...
1. Anne.
2. Mary.
3. Elizabeth.

Pedigree of BILLERS, of BURSTALL [3]. (From the Viſitation of 1683.)

Arms: A lion rampant, party per pale, Gules and Sable. Creſt, a demi-eagle, wings diſplayed; Plate XXXI. fig. 17.

George Billers, of Burſtall, gent. = ... dau. of . . . . Preſgrave, of Leiceſterſhire.

1. Henry Billers.
2. Edward, died unmarried.
3. Julius Billers, of Leiceſter.
4. William [4] Billers, of the town of Leiceſter, gent. born at Burſtall 1582; died 1658, æt. 76; buried at St Mary's, Leiceſter. = Alice, dau. of Will. Ward, of the town of Leiceſter; died 1662, æt. 71.

1. Edward Billers, of Leiceſter, ob. 1659, æt. 50, vel ſupra. = Anne, dau. of Rev. . . . Dann, of Mansfield Woodhouſe, ſiſter to Richard Dann, eſq. died 13 Jan. 1680.
2. John Billers, of the city of Bath, M.D. ob. cœlebs 1647.
3. William Billers, of Leiceſter, living 1682, æt. 64. = Margery, eldeſt dau. of Euſtace Burnaby, eldeſt ſon of ſir Ralph Burnaby, of Watford, co. Northamp. kt.
4. Benjamin Billers, of the Biſhops Fee, near Leiceſter, æt. 62, ann. ferè. = Jane, dau. of George Allen, of Dingley, co. Northampton.
5. Joſeph Billers, citizen of London, ob. 28 Mar. 1676. = Mary, dau. of John Perrey, of London.

Children of Edward and Anne:
1. George.
2. Edward.
3. John.
4. Francis.
1. Iſabel.
2. Anne.
3. Suſanna.
4. Alice.

Children of William and Margery:
1. William, æt. 22.
2. John, æt. 20.
3. Joſeph, æt. 18.
4. Mary, æt. 15.

Children of Benjamin and Jane:
1. Mary, æt. 25; marr. Sept. 5, 1682, to Robert Alefounder, rector of Thurcaſton.
2. Jane, æt. 23.
3. George, æt. 21, & ampl.
4. Elizabeth, æt. 15.

Mary. = Tho. Clark, of London, merchant.

The Pedigree of BILLERS may readily be continued from the following circumſtantial epitaph, from a flat ſtone which in 1762 was placed under the pulpit-ſtairs of St. Margaret's church at Leiceſter.

"Here lies interred the body of Benjamin Billers, of the Biſhop's Fee, near the borough of Leiceſter, gent. elder brother of Joſeph Billers, of London, linen-draper, and one of the ſons of William Billers, of the ſaid borough of Leiceſter, gent. by Alice his wife, the daughter of William Ward, of the ſaid borough, gent. and grandſon of George Billers, of Burſtall, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. He died Dec. 23, 1692, in the 73d year of his age. The ſaid Joſeph Billers married the daughter of John Perry, of London, linen-draper; whoſe only daughter Mary married Mr. Thomas Clarke, of Mincing-Lane, London, merchant; and his daughter Elizabeth married John Olmius, of London, eſq. by whom he had iſſue one ſon, John Olmius, of Newhall, near Chelmsford in Eſſex, eſq. M. P. who in the year 1741 married Anne, the eldeſt daughter of ſir William Billers, knt. lord-mayor of the city of London, who was the ſon of John Billers, of the city of Coventry, gent. the ſecond ſon of Julius Billers, gent. who was the third ſon of the ſaid George Billers, of Burſtall, eſq.; by whom the ſaid John Olmius, eſq. hath iſſue now living, in the year 1762, viz. one daughter, born in the year 1742; and a ſon, John-Billers Olmius, born in the year 1745.

"Here alſo lies interred the body of Jane, the late wife of the ſaid Benjamin Billers, gent. daughter of George Allen, of Dingley, in the county of Northampton, gent. She died June 14, 1705, in the 73d year of her age.

"The ſaid Benjamin Billers and Jane his wife left iſſue Mary, who married the Rev. Mr. Robert Alfounder, rector of Thurcaſton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter; Jane, who married James Thomſon, of Evington, in the county of Leiceſter, gent.; George, who married Jane the daughter of Mr. Barry, of Thurcaſton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, gent.; and Elizabeth, who married George Coulton, of Evington, in the county of Leiceſter aforeſaid, gent.; and William and Benjamin Billers, who died in their infancy.

"Here alſo lies interred the bodies of Joſiah Billers, gent. ſon of George Billers, of the Biſhop's Fee aforeſaid, gent. and Jane his wife, and grandſon of the ſaid Benjamin Billers. He died without, iſſue the 9th of July, 1732, aged 40.

"Near this place lies interred the body of Jane, the late wife of the ſaid Joſiah Billers, gent. daughter of William Weltden, of Thornby, Northamptonſhire, gent. She departed this life April 4, 1762, in the 78th year of her age."

---

[1] See, for the arms, different from theſe arms, and I believe the right arms belonging to this family, my copy of Hervey's Clarenceux Viſitation of Wilts, in large folio; and for the pedigree higher, p. 85. The arms, Azure, three ſtirrops Or, in a bordure engrailed Argent, charged with roundels Sable. Creſt, a tiger's head, full face coupt, divided per pale Or and Sable, charged with roundels, counterchanged; fire proper iſſuing out of the mouth and ears (Plate XXXI. fig. 22.) P. Le Neve.

[2] See Vincent's Baronage, Nevil's Pedigree, p. 16.

[3] Signed at Leiceſter, Sept. 8, 1682, by William and Benjamin Billers.

[4] He gave £12. a year to the hoſpital of the Holy Trinity in the Newark at Leiceſter. See his epitaph, vol. I. p. 314.

BROOKSBY,

BROOKSBY,

in antient writings called Brocheſbi and Brokeſby (i. e. a town ſtanding by a brook), once a ſmall village, whence the family of Brokeſby took their denomination, but now conſiſting only of a gentleman's ſeat[1] and one farm-houſe, is ſituated on the river Wreke, near the turnpike-road, nine miles from Leiceſter, and ſix from Melton Mowbray; and is bounded by Thruſſington, Rereſby, and Rotherby. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, it is within the deanry of Goſcote.

At the time of the general ſurvey, Hugo Lupus earl of Cheſter had two ploughlands at Brocheſbi, with ſeven acres of meadow, and a mill of five ſhillings value, as an appendage to the extenſive manor of Barrow, which was held immediately under the king[2]. Wlſi at the ſame time held ſix oxgangs at Brocheſbi of the counteſs Judith, which under the Confeſſor had been worth four ſhillings, and employed one plough; and continued of the ſame value; one plough being employed in the demeſne, with two bordars. He had alſo four acres of meadow[3].

About the year 1210, Gilbert de Seis occurs as a tenant to the priory of Charley[4]; "and this," ſays Mr. Roper, "was the Seis, whoſe heir was married to Villiers; by which match he had Brokeſby, as appears by ſeveral deeds in my cuſtody."

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter had, by the gift of Hugo de Saxo (or Sagio[5]) a rent of 2*s.* a year, from the mill at Brokeſby[6], payable on the day of the Nativity of the bleſſed Virgin.

Mr. Burton ſays, "This manor hath long been the inheritance of that antient family of Villiers, deſcended from a noble Norman line in France; of which was Aylmer de Villiers, ſewer to Philip I. king of France, who, in alluſion to his office, bore for his arms, Or, a chief Azure, charged with a right hand Argent, bearing a towel Ermine[7]; and that renowned Pierre de Villiers, lord Villiers, grand maſter of France under Charles VI. the French king, 1390; and Jaques de Villiers, ſeigneur de Liſle Adam, firſt provoſt of Paris, after mareſchal of France, under the ſaid king Charles VI, 1418.

This family, whoſe name was variouſly written, Villers, Villiers, Villeres, Vylers, &c. undoubtedly came into England about the time of the Conqueſt[8]; and bore for their arms Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent; in alluſion to the cinquefoil, the antient arms of Beaumont earl of Leiceſter; from whoſe grant (as it ſhould ſeem) they had their lands in this country[9].

Payne de Villers was lord of Croſby, co. Lancaſter, ſoon after the Conqueſt; and was alſo poſſeſſed of Newbold, co. Nottingham, which his poſterity held till the reign of king Edward III.[10]; but Croſby went away to the Molineuxes, by Beatrix, a daughter and heir to the elder line, married about the time of king John to Robert Molineux, lord of Aſton[11]. This Payne was a witneſs to the foundation-charter of Roger of Poictou to the monaſtery of Lancaſter, and flouriſhed in the reign of William II. and Henry I. Gilbert de Villiers, probably another younger ſon of Payne[12], and William Villiers, were witneſſes, with Roger biſhop of Cheſter, to a charter of Robert ſon of Nicholas de Stafford[13]. After him we meet another Gilbert Villiers; to whom, in 1200, king John granted for homage and ſervice all the mediety which he poſſeſſed in the vicarage and mill of Meſnacel. Contemporary with him was Roger, or rather Robert, living 1208, who had iſſue Robert, father of William in 1279; who, together with Robert Pierpont, Roger de Lewknor, Roger de Covert, and many more, were, by a Quo warranto[14], to deliver to the abbey of Bec Herlowin the manor of Preſton. Of this family alſo was Benedict de Villiers, who died ſeiſed of the manors of Borſhall and Brehed, of the honour of Wallingford, leaving John his ſon and heir then three years old[15], as appears by inquiſition in com. Bucks, taken in 1293.

The firſt of them that was written of Brokeſby was Alexander de Villiers, of Kinalton, co. Notts; who in 1235 paid one mark for half a knight's fee, which he held under the counteſs of Cheſter in Brokeſby, towards the marriage of the king's ſiſter to the emperor of the Romans. This appears by the Teſta de Nevill, in which Brokeſby cum ſocâ is deſcribed as containing ſeven plough-lands[16]. This Alexander, who was buried at Kinalton in 1245, bore for his arms Argent, ſix lions rampant Gules, armed Azure, as appears by his tomb, engraved in vol. II. p. 255.

In 1285, William de Villiers was a witneſs to an undated deed, whereby Maſter William de Montfort grants to John de Montfort the manors of Preſton and Uppingham in Rutland. This William was ſon of Alexander; for, in 1286, he impleaded Andrew de Nevill for the manor of Riggeſby, &c. whereof his father Alexander died ſeiſed; whereunto anſwer was made, that the ſaid Alexander had an elder ſon named Richard[17]. This Richard, who was of Brokeſby in 1254, was a noble warrior, and follower of that warlike and memorable king Edward I. in his wars in the Holy Land and elſewhere. He left the cinquefoils, and all his martial atchievements; and bare the croſs of St. George, charged with five eſcalops Or.

He had five ſons; 1. Hugh de Villiers, who died ſ. p.; 2. ſir John de Villiers, who continued the line at Brokeſby; 3. Nicholas[18] de Villiers, of Treford in Suſſex, for whom a monument in Down Ampney church in Glouceſterſhire, placed there by the Knights Templars to whom he had given the impropriate tithes of that pariſh, is thus inſcribed:

"HIC JACET DOMINUS NICHOLAS DE VILLIERS, QUI OBIIT 10 DIE MENSIS JUNII ANNO DOMINI MCCLXXXIIII. CUJUS ANIME PROPICIETUR DEUS. AMEN."

His figure is of a hard blue ſtone; that of Maud his wife by him, much mutilated, of free-ſtone. The date is ſupplied by conjecture, as he had the manor by grant of Edmund Crouchback earl of Lancaſter in 1220; changed his family-arms from the cinquefoils to the eſcalops in 1266; and his ſon Nicholas proved his right to view of frankpledge within this manor in 1287[19].

In 1268, a ſuit was tried, between ſir John de Villiers and Clerebald de Brokeſby and Roſe his wife, concerning ſome meſſuages, &c. at Brokeſby; and in 1276 John de Vilers claimed a right of free-warren at Brokeſby, "tam in terris quam in aquâ de Wrethek, de omnibus præpoſituris[1].

---

[1] Many other villages have been thus depopulated by incloſures, making parks, &c. So Miſterton in this county, Ickworth in Suffolk, &c. G. A.

[2] "In Brocheſbi 2 carucatæ terræ, & 7 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 237. a. 1.

[3] "Wlſi tenet de Comitiſſâ in Brocheſbi 6 bovatas terre. Ibi 1 caruca fuit. Nunc in dominico 1 caruca cum 2 bordariis; & 4 acræ prati. Valuit, & valet, 4 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b. 1.

[4] Roper, MS.—And ſee before, under Charley, p. 120.

[5] Who bore Gules, billetté Argent. Plate XXXII. fig. 4.

[6] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xxx.

[7] See vol. II. Plate XLVIII. fig. 4, 5.

[8] "Galferius de Villiers, Hugo de Ceſtra, Hugo de Grentemaiſnil, & nepotes Rodbertus de Rodelento, Robertus filius Mendacif, with Eudo Dapifer and others, witneſs a grant of the Conqueror to St. Ebrulf's Abbey, dated in urbe Guentâ, 1081." Harl. MS. 7178.

[9] Burton, p. 55.

[10] Thoroton's Antiquities of Nottinghamſhire.

[11] Ex Stemmate Familiæ de Molineux.

[12] Ex Libro Prioratûs de Kenilworth.

[13] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 731.

[14] Quo Warr. com. Suſſex, 7 Edw. I.

[15] Eſch. de iiſdem annis N° 14 & 20.

[16] See vol. I. pp. xlvii. xlix.

[17] De Banco Trin. 14 Edw. I. Rot. 57. de com. Linc.

[18] Who bore for his coat-armour five cinquefoils. See an engraving of this monument in vol. II. p. 255.

[19] Gough's Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. p. cvi; Bigland's Glouceſterſhire, vol. I. p. 489.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Brocheſby, Rotherby, and Friſby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1296, it was found that Hugh le Diſpenſer held the town of Brokeſby, and the manor of Donington in this county, of the earl of Cheſter, and the earl of the king, by the ſervice of one knight's fee[2].

In the ſame year the following legal proceſs occurs:

"Inter Gilbertum de Houby querentem, & Ricardum de Ses deforcientem, de redditu unius paris calcarum deauratorum, cum pertin', in Brokeſby ſuper Wrek, &c. Scilicet, predictus Ricardus cognovit predictum redditum, cum pertin', ſimul cum homagio & toto ſervitio Johannis filii Johannis de Villers, & heredum ſuorum, de toto tenemento quod de predicto Ricardo prius tenuit in predictâ villâ, eſſe jus ipſius Gilberti, &c.; & pro hâc recognitione, &c. predictus Gilbertus dedit eidem Ricardo quatuor marcas argenti. Et hec concordia facta fuit, preſenti predicto Johanne, & eadem concedente; & fecit eidem Gilberto fidelitatem in eadem curiâ[3]."

Sir John de Villiers had two ſons, ſir John and Alexander; and, in 1297, on the 4th day of Hilary Term, the ſaid Alexander, by his attorney, ſued Gilbert de Glen, chaplain, who then was rector of Brokeſby, for a debt of eight marks, being two years arrears of an annual rent of five marks; when the ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire was directed to ſend his writ to the biſhop of Lincoln, enjoining him to appear in the court of king's bench, and to produce his clerk there[4].

In 1311, ſir John de Villiers gave to his brother Alexander an acre of land, with its appurtenances, at Brokeſby; and afterwards conveyed to him as follows;

"Ego Johannes de Vylers de Brokeſby conceſſi Alexandro de Vilers, fratri meo, in totâ vitâ ſuâ, unum toftum, quod Clerebaldus quondam tenuit, & unam virgatam terre de dominicis terris meis, que Freſtentia mater mea habuit nomine dotis, in villâ & territorio de Brokeſby, &c. reddendo inde annuatim meo & heredibus meis tres ſolidos, &c. & faciendo inde ſectam curie mee de Brokeſby, &c."

In 1325, we find the following grant of lands here:

"Ego Willielmus Warde de Brokeſby dedi, &c. Willielmo filio Willielmi Wyld de Brokiſby, unum meſſuagium, & unum toftum, &c. in Brokeſby, &c. Hiis teſtibus, Johanne de Vilers de Brokeſby, Hugone Sweyn de eadem, Alexander de Vilers de eadem, &c. Dat' apud Brokiſby, die Jovis, in feſto Sc̄i Gudlaci, anno regni regis Edwardi filii regis Edwardi 18°."[5]

Hugh Sweyn of Brokeſby, in 1333, gave all his lands and tenements in the town and field of Brokeſby to William Terry, of Asfordby, chaplain; and Lucia de Colne of Brokeſby gave to John de Colne, her ſon, a third part of her meſſuage at Brokeſby.

In 1338, "Marjoria quæ fuit uxor Willielmi Sweyn de Brokeſby tenet in dotem unum meſſuagium, & unam virgatam terre, cum pertinent', in Brokeſby, &c. ex donatione Willielmi Sweyn, quondam viri ſui; &, poſt mortem predicte Marjorie, dicto Hugoni & heredibus ſuis reverti deberent; remanent' Thome de Vylers, perſone eccleſie de Brokeſby, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Galfrido de Vylers de Brokeſby, Ricardo de Latuni, Johanne de Colne, &c. Dat' apud Brokeſby, anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii a Conqueſtu 12°."

The laſt-mentioned ſir John Villiers had two ſons; ſir Francis, and Geoffrey hereafter mentioned.

Sir Francis de Villiers ſerved kings Edward II. and III. in their wars, and died without iſſue, leaving Agnes his wife ſurviving; whom king Edward III. in conſideration of the ſervices of her huſband (ſtyling him Franciſcus caræ memoriæ) recommended to the abbeſs of Barking for her proviſion[6].

Geoffrey Villiers, the youngeſt ſon of ſir John, ſucceeded to the eſtate at Brokeſby, 20 Edward III; and in the 26th year of that king's reign was one of the knights of the ſhire for this county[7] in the parliament held at Weſtminſter.

In 1346 (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) Ralph de Villiers[8] was aſſeſſed four ſhillings for a tenth part of one knight's fee in Brokeſby, parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon[9]. In the ſame year, Geoffrey de Villiers of Brokeſby appointed William de Stotheley, rector of Willoughby, his attorney, to deliver ſeiſin of lands in Stokeford to John de Willoughby, lord of Rereſby[10]; and in 1349, the ſame Geoffrey, with Alice his wife, enfeoffed Richard Davey, Thomas de Villiers, and Richard de Badyſon, in all his lands and tenements in Brokeſby and Rereſby. Dated at Brokeſby, on the Sunday after the feaſt of St. Edward the king and martyr, 23 Edward III.[11]

"Robertus filius Roberti de Keggeworth dedi, &c. Johanni de Vylers, & Thome fratri ejus, & heredibus ipſius Johannis, unum meſſuagium, & omnia terras & tenementa predicta, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, que habui ex dono Johannis Sweyn de Brokeſby, &c. Dat. apud Brokeſby, anno 31° Edwardi Tertii."

Geoffrey had two ſons; ſir John, who ſucceeded to the eſtates; and Thomas, who was rector of Brokeſby.

In 1369, Thomas de Preſton and ſeveral others demiſed to John de Villiers the manor of Brokeſby, with its appurtenances, together with the advowſon and the water-mill, and alſo certain lands and tenements at Rotherby, for the term of 20 years, on a rent of ten pounds of ſilver. Teſtibus; Rad̄o Haſtyngs, milite; Rogero Beler, milite; Adâ de Derby de Gaddeſby, Joh̄e de Gaddeſby, Rad̄o Brete, & multis aliis[12]."

John de Villiers had two wives; 1. Joan, one of the three ſiſters and coheirs to Simon Pakeman of Kirkby, co. Leiceſter, by whom he had iſſue a daughter Beatrix, married to ſir John Bagot, knt. and three ſons, Richard, John, and Alexander; 2. Margaret, living 15 Richard II; in which year Richard, eldeſt ſon of the ſaid John, died on the Sunday next before the feaſt of the Nativity of St. John the Baptiſt, and was then ſeiſed of the manor of Brokeſby, and half a pound of pepper, rent of aſſize, ariſing out of one virgate of land in Brokeſby, which William Seneton held in fee of the ſaid Richard. This half pound of pepper was parcel of the manor of Brokeſby; which manor, as alſo the advowſon of the church, and the ſaid half pound of pepper, with the appurtenances, were held of the king, as of the honour of Cheſter, by the ſervice of the half of one part of one knight's fee. He left iſſue John, his ſon and heir, aged eleven years and a half[13]."

The two following deeds relate to the laſt-mentioned Richard and his widow:

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego Thomas Blundell de Rivell conceſſi, &c. quod ſi Willielmus Brito de Hucknell, vel aliquis alius de parte ſuâ, qui de jure poſſint me, vel heredes meos vel aſſignatos meos, implacuere per breve dn̄i regis . . . . vel nomine, ſeu de terrâ meâ de Brokeſby, quam habeo de feodi d̄ni Ricardi de Villiers in eadem villâ, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto de Folevile, Gilberto de Howby, Johanne de Villiers, Ad̄ de Weliſburg, Hugone de Nevile, Petro de Asfordeby, Hugone fil' Willielmi de Brokeſby, Stephano de Brok, & aliis."

"Nos Johannes Purley, & Johannes Holt, perſona eccleſie de Brokeſby, conceſſimus & confirmavimus Elizabethe, quæ fuit uxor Richardi de Vylers, meſſuagium & duas virgatas terre, cum pertin', in Brokeſby, que habuimus ex dono & feofamento predicti Ricardi, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Ricardo Friday, Galfrido Powtrell, &c. Dat' apud Brokeſby, die Dominicâ poſt feſtum Sc̄i Luce Evangeliſte, anno regni regis 6 Hen. IV. Habend' & tenend' predicta duo meſſuagia, &c. prefate Elizabethe, ad terminum vite ſue, & poſt mortem

---

[1] Rot. Inquiſitionum dominum regem tangentium 4 Edw. I. Hund' de Goſcote.

[2] Inq. 24 Edw. I. in Scaccario.

[3] Fines anno 24 Edw. I.

[4] De Banco Hill. 25 Edw. I. Rot. 96.

[5] Harl. MS. 7187; ex Originali in cuſtodiâ Thomæ Shirley, militis.

[6] Clauſ. 5 Edw. III. p. 2.

[7] Prynne's Brief Regiſter, p. 218.

[8] This Ralph died in 1365. Inq. 11 Ric. II.

[9] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[10] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 132; and the ſeal, in the ſame volume, Plate XLV. fig. 11.

[11] Ibid. and three ſeals, Plate XLV. fig. 12.

[12] Ibid. and the ſeal, fig. 13.

[13] Eſch. 15 Ric. II. pars I. n. 64.

predicte

prediƈte Elizabethê, nobis & heredibus noſtris, &c."

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Brokeſby was rated at £1. 1*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 7*s.* 6*d.*

A diſpute between ſir John de Villiers and Anketil de Houby, ſuper ſtatum molendini & attachiamentis ſtagni, was amicably adjuſted, by the intervention of ſir Robert Luttrell, and ſir Geffrey Skeffington, knights, Ralph Chamberleyn of Rereſby, and others [1].

John Villiers married Joan, daughter to William Mering; and died on the feaſt of St. Catharine, 1417, ſeiſed of a meſſuage called Pakeman's Place, in Kereby, held of the king in capite; alſo of two parts in three of twelve meſſuages, one toft, and twelve virgates of land, in Kereby, Wiggeſton, Barton, and Oddeſton, held of Reginald lord Grey of Ruthin; and of eight meſſuages, one toft, and twelve virgates in Huckleſton, Whitwick, Dunnington, and Staunton under Bardon; of a moiety of a meſſuage and one virgate in Ravenſton, of the honour of Tutbury, held of the king in capite; the manor of Brokeſby, with the advowſon, held of Anthony lord Houby by knight's ſervice and a pair of gilt ſpurs; leaving John his ſon and heir, twelve years old and above at the time of the inquiſition [2]; and Elizabeth, relict of Richard Villiers, had received the rents and profits from the time of the death of her ſon.

This laſt John died in ward to the king; and William, his brother and heir, ſucceeded.

In 1433, Bartholomew Brokeſby, eſquire, Thomas Aſheby, junior, Alexander Villiers, and John Smith, clerk, conveyed to William de Brokeſby a meſſuage and a virgate of land in Brokeſby, with a rent of 6*s.* 6*d.* from the lands lately William Swayne's; and a rent of ten ſhillings from lands in which they had been enfeoffed by Ralph Humberſton of Leiceſter. Teſtibus; Johē Beler, Thomâ Palmer, Gerardo Digby, armigeris, Thomâ Derby, Anton' Beler, Johē Brett de Rotherby, & aliis [3].

In the ſame year, William de Brokeſby conveyed to ſir William Mering, knt. Bartholomew Brokeſby, John Bellers, John Markham, Everard Digby, Thomas Palmer, Henry Fyllingley, Anthony Bellers, eſqrs. John Allewell, and William Stedman, clerks, all the lands and tenements, rents and ſervices, with their appurtenances, which lately had been William Swayne's, in Brokeſby, Wykinſton, Burton, and Staunton ſuper Bardon, with the advowſon of the church of Brokeſby, and alſo lands, &c. at Corley, co Warwick. Teſtibus; Thomâ Aſheby junior. de Loſeby, Henrico Brokeſby de Sewalby, &c. [4]

In 1438, Hugo de Wyggenton of Mountſorell releaſed to William Villiers, of Brokeſby, eſq. all right to a grant made to him by Alexander de Villiers, late of Brokeſby. Teſtibus; Johē Bellers, Everardo Digby de Tilton, Johē Danet de Gaddeſby, armigeris [5].

About this period William Villiers, LL. B. was rector of Brokeſby, and maſter of a chantry at Manton in Rutland; in which latter church, on a braſs plate againſt the wall of the North aile, is this memorial of him and of his brother Thomas, citizen and clothworker of London:

> "Orate pro ai'ab' m'ror' Will'mi Villers, in legibus > baccall'rii, quōd' m'ri hujus cantarie, Thome Villers > fratris ejuſdem, civis et pannarii civitatis London, > ac Roberti Neuton in decretis baccallarii, quōdam > apprehenticii dicti Thome, poſteaq' m'ri huj' > cantarie, qui multa bona ei⁹' cantarie contulit, ac > edificia reparavit, parentum ⁊ benefactorum > ſuor', quor' a'i'ab's ꝓpicietur Deus. Amen."

And on the floor near the pulpit:

> "Hic jacet Will's Wade, fundator huius > cantarie, cujus anime ꝓpicietur Deus [6]."

William Villiers, eſq. married Joan, the ſecond daughter of John Beler [7], eſq. and Elizabeth [8] his wife, and died in 1481, having iſſue by her, among others, John and Bartholomew Villiers, who married Margaret, only daughter and heir of Frances Clarke, of Whiſſendine in Rutland, and lieth buried in the pariſh church of Whiſſendine, where there ſtill remains an alabaſter tomb in the croſs aile, now the ſchool-houſe, near the chancel; but the inſcription round the ledge much worn, which the Villiers pedigree gives thus:

> "Hic jacet Bartholomeus Villers, > ſecundus filius Will'mi Villars, de Brokeſby; ⁊ Margaretta > uxor ejus, unica filia ⁊ heres Franciſce Clarke, de > Whittſonden, qui obiit xx die Martii, mill'o cccc xx, quor' > a'iab's ꝓpitietur deus. Amen [9]."

On this tomb are four ſhields of arms:

1. Argent, a chevron between three delves Gules, each charged with a croſs. Clarke.
2. Villiers antient; on the feſs a creſcent.
3. Beler.
4. Ermine, a cinquefoil . . . . .

In 1480, we find the following conveyance:

"Ego Bartholomeus Villars, de Wyſſynden, in com. Rutl. arm. dedi, conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi Willielmo Villers, patri meo, de Brokeſby, armigero, & Agneti uxori ſue, totam illam quartam partem unius meſſuagii, & decem & octo acrarum, cum pratis, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Johanne Brett de Rotherby, Johanne Alen de Howby, &c. Dat' apud Brokeſby prediƈtam, 2° die menſis Junii, anno regni regis Edwardi Quarti poſt Conqueſtum Angliæ."

John, the eldeſt ſon, died in his father's life-time, having married Elizabeth, daughter to John Southill, of Everingham, co. York; and had iſſue two daughters and ſix ſons, 1. ſir John Villiers of Brokeſby; of whom hereafter; 2. Thomas, who made his will 1491, and died without iſſue; 3. Chriſtopher, of whom hereafter; 4. William, who ſettled at Beby (where ſee his monument); 5. James; 6. Bartholomew.

John Villiers, eſq. (ſon and heir of the aforeſaid John) ſucceeded his grandfather in the lordſhip of Brokeſby in 1481; and in 6, 10, and 15 of Henry VII. was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire and Warwickſhire; was afterwards made knight [10] at the marriage of prince Arthur the king's ſon [11]; "Johēs Villers, arm', retinet, ut ſupra, unam lanceam, 11 dimid' lanc' 24 archers, pro CLV milit' [12]." This John Villers had in Culverton one knight's fee; and there lyeth buried one of this houſe, whoſe arms upon his ſhield are a ſleeve and ſcarf, juſt according to the arms of the Villiers, great maſter in France; and in Yorkſhire, on glaſs very antient, are the ſame colours and charges [13].

John Villiers died 2 Dec. 1506; leaving iſſue, by Agnes his wife, daughter to John Digby, of Coleſhill, co. Warwick, a daughter Winifred, to whom her father gave lands for life 36 Henry VIII; and ſeven ſons; 1. John; 2. George; 3. Thomas Villiers; 4. William, of whom hereafter; 5. Edward, who died poſſeſſed of lands at Flower and Howthorp, co. Northampton, 26 June, 5 Henry VIII, and was the progenitor to the Villiers of Howthorp, and to thoſe of Dowſby and Graby; Leonard and Bartholomew, 5th and 6th ſons, died without iſſue; and Anthony Villiers, ſeventh ſon, was of Cotneſs, co. York, and died poſſeſſed of that manor 1 Edward VI[1].

---

[1] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 132; and the ſeal in the ſame volume, Plate XLV. fig. 10.

[2] Inq. at Boſworth, 3 Hen. V; and Inq. 4 Hen. V. n. 22. Leic.

[3] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 132; and ſix ſeals, fig. 14.

[4] Ibid.

[5] Ibid.

[6] Wright's Rutland, p. 87.

[7] See in vol. II. p. 278, the pedigree of Beler; and in p. 277, a partition of the lands of John Beler, between Marina Green, John Villiers, and Jaſper Roſkin; to which may be added the following articles: "Mem. that it is agreed, that the annuity granted to Bartholomew Villers ſhall be borne at the coſts of all the parties; viz. each of them the third part during the time that they are granted. It is agreed that, during the life of Katharine Diggeby, late wife of John Bellers, eſq. John Villiers ſhall pay to dame Marina Greene, in recompence for Ketilby and Siſtonby, £8. 12*s* 9*d.* Item, Jaſper Roſkin ſhall likewiſe pay to dame Marina, in like recompence, 68*s.* 4*d.* And if Katharine Digby die, leaving the ſaid John Digby, then the ſaid John Villars ſhall pay yearly to the ſaid dame Marina, during the life of the ſaid John Digby, 26*s.* 8*d.*; and the ſaid Jaſper other 26*s.* 8*d.*

[8] Daughter of Anthony Sutton, alias Howby, huntſman to Henry V. ſon of Thomas Sutton and of Alice his wife, ſiſter to John Howby, ſon and daughter of ſir Anthony Howby, knt. ſon of ſir Walter de Howby, knt. ſon of ſir Gilbert de Howby, knt. that married Maud, eldeſt ſiſter and coheir to ſir William Kirkby, knt. and to John Kirkby biſhop of Ely. See vol. II. p. 224.

[9] See this monument engraved in vol. II. Plate XLVIII. fig. 8.

[10] Nom. Equit. in Bibl. Cotton. Claudius C. III.

[11] "At the marriage of Margaret, eldeſt daughter of king Henry VII. to James the Fourth king of Scots, at dinner the queene was ſerved before the king with all honour that might be done, the officers of armes before the meſſe, and the ſergeants of armes alſo. That day ſir John Villiers was ſerver; ſir Davy Owen, carver; ſir Edward Stanley, cup-bearer; and with the queene dined, the archbiſhop of Glaſco, &c." A note in an old book of Arms and Aremouries in the College of Arms.

[12] Pell, 12 Hen. VII.

[13] Harl. MS. 7178; ex collationibus magiſtri Geo. Laſcelles, in Libro de Nott.

Their father's laſt will runs thus:

" In Dei nomine, Amen. The firſt day of September, anno 1506, 22 Henry VII. I, ſir John Villiers, of Brokeſby, knight, being in whole minde, and full of remembrance, ordayne and make my teſtament as followeth: Firſt, I bequeath my ſoule to Almighty God, and to our Lady St. Mary, and all the holy company of Heaven; my body to be buried in the church of St. Michaell's of Brokeſby, afore the high alter. Alſo I bequeath my beſt beaſt for my mortuary; alſo to my heir all that which came to me by my father's will, that is to notifie, a baſyn and ewer of ſilver, two ſalt-ſellers of ſillver parcel gilt, a ſtanding cup gilt, 12 ſilver ſpoons, &c. Alſo I will that my children be ordered after the diſcretion of myne eldeſt ſone; he to aſſigne them as he thinkes beſt. Alſo to myn moder-church of Lyncolne iii*s.* iiii*d.* Alſo to Brokeſby church iiii torches and xx*s.*; alſo I will iii trentalls be done for my ſoule, &c. The reſidue of my goods not bequeathed I give to John Villiers my ſone and heir, John Fulnetby my brother, Chriſtopher Villers my brother, Jarvys Villers my . . . .[2] and ſir William Hyde, vicar of Whytſondyne; whome I make and ordeyne, &c. my lawfull executors to order, diſpoſe, for the wele of my ſoule, my moder's ſoule Elizabeth Vyllers, my wive's ſoule dame Agnes Vyllers, all my friends, and all Chriſtyn ſoules, &c. I make my ſuperviſor of this my will my faithful friend ſir Robert Dymock, knight. Alſo I will that my ſuperviſor and each of my executors have iii marks for their labour. Theſe witneſſes: ſir John Swepſton, parſon of Howby, ſir Thomas Byngham parſon of Brokeſby, ſir William, &c."

May 12 1520, Chriſtopher Villiers, at the requeſt of John Villiers, of Brokeſby, eſq. demiſed to Thomas Entwyſell and ſeveral others the manor of Hoby, in which, with ſeveral others, he had been enfeoffed by the grant of the ſaid John Villiers[3]. This Chriſtopher was ſheriff of the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick 22 Henry VIII. and died without iſſue, 5 Aug. 1537, ſeiſed of the manors of Kilby and Bowden Magna, and lands in Harborough; having ſettled in truſtees, 5 Aug. 28 Henry VIII. the ſaid manors, after his own life, upon his younger nephews, George and Thomas, and their heirs male for ever[4]; as alſo the manor of Houby, upon them and their brother William, by a like entail[5].

John, the eldeſt ſon and heir of John, enjoyed the inheritance of Brokeſby; and, having been knighted, was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire and Warwickſhire in 23 and 29 Henry VIII. He was appointed by the king's writ, Jan. 30, 1534-5, as was alſo his uncle Chriſtopher Villiers, one of the commiſſioners to take the eccleſiaſtical ſurvey of the county of Leiceſter. In 1538 he was found couſin and next heir to his uncle Chriſtopher Villiers in the manor of Burſtall[6], being then aged 50 years and above; the ſaid Chriſtopher having entailed the ſame by deed, upon Thomas[7] his brother, for the uſe of the ſaid John during his life, afterwards to John Villiers, otherwiſe called Twyford. This ſir John, who was one of the eſquires of the body to king Henry VII, died 8 Dec. 1544, ſeiſed of the manors of Brokeſby and Howby, and the advowſons of thoſe churches; having, by a fine levied 32 Henry VIII. between Alexander Villiers and Richard Holmes, querents, the ſaid ſir John, and Dorothy his daughter and heir apparent (by Elizabeth his wife, daughter to John Winger), deforcients, ſettled the ſaid manors and rent in Brokeſby, Howby, and Siwoldby, on himſelf in tail-male[8]; and, in default, to his brothers George, Thomas, William, and Leonard. He died ſeiſed alſo of lands and tenements in Rotherby, Turlington, Dalby, Wiggeſton, Staunton, and Swannington; Dorothy, his ſaid daughter, the wife of Francis Brown, gent. being found heir to them, and aged 28 years old and upwards[9].

George, his brother, by virtue of the fine, as next heir male, ſucceeded to the manors of Brokeſby and Howby, and the advowſons; whereof he died poſſeſſed, as alſo of the manors of Burſtall and Siwoldby, in fee-tail, and of divers lands in Burſtall in reverſion after the death of John Villiers, alias Twyford, 29 Aug. 1546. By the inquiſition taken after his death, it appeared that on the 20th of April, 1546, he had demiſed to his brother William Villiers, of Overton Quatermarſh, gent. for the term of 21 years, the manor-place of Houby, with the appurtenances; that he had granted to Robert Catlin, gent. an annuity out of the manor of Burſtall; and that, in purſuance of a ſettlement made by Chriſtopher Villiers, he poſſeſſed the manors of Kilby and Great Bowden, with lands, &c. in both thoſe townſhips and in Harborough. He left iſſue, by Joan his wife, daughter to John Harrington of Bagworth, Richard his ſon and heir, aged three years[10]; and a daughter Elizabeth, heir to her brother, wife to ſir Edward Waterhouſe, of Leeds in Kent, who alſo died without iſſue; ſo that Thomas[11], ſon of ſir John, and brother to the ſaid George, mentioned in the entail, became poſſeſſed of Brokeſby; but, leaving only one daughter Dorothy, married to William Smith, of the county of Leiceſter, eſq. the entailed eſtate devolved on William Villiers, eſq. his brother, fourth ſon of ſir John; who likewiſe became poſſeſſed of Brokeſby as the next heir male; and, having married Colletta, daughter and heir to Richard Clarke, of the county of Huntingdon, eſq. widow to Richard Beaumont, of Cole Overton, co. Leiceſter, eſq. died Nov. 1, 1558, ſeiſed of Brokeſby and Howby, and of 40 meſſuages, 20 cottages, 20 tofts, 2 water-mills, 1000 acres of land, 500 of meadow, 2000 of paſture, and other lands and poſſeſſions in Brokeſby, Howby, and Siwoldby, in this county, and in the advowſons of the churches of Brokeſby and Howby[12]; reciting the ſaid entail made 32 Henry VIII, and alſo a ſettlement made by Chriſtopher Villiers, eſq. on himſelf for life; remainder to his nephews, George, Thomas, and this William, of the manors of Kilby, Great Bowden, and of lands in Harborough; all which deſcended to the ſaid William, who was likewiſe poſſeſſed of the manor of Howby, with other lands there.

His laſt will is thus expreſſed:

" In Dei nomine, Amen. The year of our Lord God 1558, the 26th day of October, in the 5th and 6th years of the reign of Philip and Mary, by the grace of God, king and queen of England, I William Villiers, of Howby in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. knowing I ſhall change this ſhort and tranſitory life; conſidering that there is nothing more uncertain than the time now being, and now being of perfect good mind and remembrance; make this my laſt will and teſtament, in manner and form following. Firſt, I bequeath my ſoul to the mercy of Almighty God, truſting, by the merits of his paſſion, to be ſaved. And my will is, my body to be buried in the chancel of the pariſh church of Brokeſby, on the North ſide of William Villiers my grandfather. And I will my mortuaries to be paid according to the law. Item, I will and bequeath to Elizabeth Villiers and Dorothy Villiers, my daughters, all my corn, &c. Item, I will that all my lands, poſſeſſions, and hereditaments, in Staunton under Berdon in the county of Leiceſter, be ſold to the performance of my debts. Item, I will alſo that all my lands and poſſeſſions, and hereditaments, in Coilby, in the parts of Keyſten, in Bitham, in Couby, &c. and Ferriby, in the county of Lincoln, be likewiſe ſold to the uſe and uſes afoſeſaid. Item, I will that all my manors, lands, poſſeſſions, and hereditaments, in Chrepam, in the county of York, be likewiſe ſold as is aforeſaid, immediately after my death, with all ſpeed; and the money to be reſtored to the performance of my debts. Item, I will and bequeath to my well-beloved wife Colett Villiers my beſt gown of damaſk furred with conys. And, if both my daughters Elizabeth and Dorothy Villiers depart this world before their lawful age to have their full part and legacy, &c. then I will and bequeath the moiety of her ſo deceaſed to the uſe of Dorothy Beaumont, my wife's daughter, and the other moiety to my daughter Villiers then ſurviving. Item, I will and bequeath to my ſon George Villiers two ſilk doublets. Item, I bequeath to George Villiers my kinſman two jerkins, the one of velvet, &c. Item, I will that my brother Leonard ſhall have yearly paid unto him ten pounds for term of his natural life, by even and equal portions, at two feaſts of the year. Item, I will and bequeath to maſter Robert Brokeſby, of Shoilby, eſquire, my little ambling grey mare. And I make and ordain my full and lawful executors of this my preſent will my loving friends Richard Brokeſby, of Grimſton in the county of Leiceſter, gent. and William Gregory, of Asfordby in the aforeſaid county of Leiceſter. In witneſs whereof, that this is my true and lawful will, I have put my hand and ſeal to this my laſt will and teſtament; theſe being witneſſes; William Lane, Leonard Villiers, ——— Skyllyngton, Thomas King, Thomas Petty."

---

[1] Inq. 2 Edw. VI. com. Ebor.

[2] See in Harl. MS. 7178.

[3] Appendix to vol. II. p. 132.

[4] Inq. 30 Hen. VIII.

[5] See his will under Kilby, vol. II. p. 878.

[6] Inq. prædict. 30 Hen. VIII.

[7] Thomas Villers, in his laſt will and teſtament, Dec. 4, 1491, gave ſundry legacies; to his brother Brokeſby, and to his brethren John and Thomas Fulnetby, ſums of money, and money to buy cups of ſilver withal. More he gave, to the children of John his brother, to Mr. William Villiers his brother, to his ſiſter Elizabeth, and to Chriſtopher his brother. He gave alſo legacies to Twylius Villers, George Villers, and Thomas Villers. His overſeers were, William Fitzwilliam his couſin, and Mr. William Villers his brother. Harl. MS. 7178.

[8] Inq. 36 Hen. VIII. Leic.

[9] Ibid.

[10] Inq. at Leiceſter, 20 Jan. 38 Hen. VIII.

[11] To whom his father had given for life ſome lands in Corby, co. Warwick. His only daughter, Dorothy, had, by Mr. Smith, one daughter, Agnes, married to James Park, of London; who had two ſons, James and Thomas, both living in 1628; and Mary, married to John Shanow, of London.

[12] Inq. at Leiceſter, 23 Nov. 1 Eliz.

By an inquiſition in 1563, after the death of Richard Villiers, eſq. it was found that ſir John Villiers long before his death was ſeiſed in demeſne of the manor of Burſtall; and being ſo ſeiſed, veſted divers meſſuages and lands in that village, 6 Oct. 34 Henry VIII, in his brother Thomas Villiers of Wilteby, and Richard Holmes of Houby, to the uſe of himſelf for life; in default, to the uſe of John Twyford, alias Villiers, ſon of Elizabeth Twyford; remainder to his own right heirs; and that, after the death of ſir John Villiers, the ſaid John Twyford became poſſeſſed of the ſaid meſſuages, &c. in demeſne, and ſtill continued in poſſeſſion as free tenant for life; that Richard Villiers was couſin and next heir to the ſaid ſir John; namely, ſon of George Villiers, eſq. brother and heir to John; which Richard died at Staunton under Berdon, 12 Oct. 1553; that Elizabeth Villiers (then wife of Edward Waterhouſe of Leeds in Kent, gent.) was the only ſiſter and heir of the ſaid Richard; and that the ſaid Elizabeth, on the day of her brother's death, was aged 16 years and 6 months[1].

George Villiers, ſon and heir of William, aged 14 years or more at his father's death, was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in 33 Elizabeth, and received the honour of knighthood. He bought the lordſhip of Whitmore Inferior in Warwickſhire in 1589, but ſold it again in 1598[2]. He was twice married; firſt, to Audrey, daughter and heir to William Sanders, of Harrington, co. Northampton, eſq. which lady died May 7, 1587, and had by him four daughters; 1. Audrey, married to John Chernocke, eſq. of Hulcote, co. Bedford (who was created a baronet May 21, 1661, and died in 1680, leaving a ſon ſir Villiers Chernocke, who died in 1694); 2. Elizabeth, married to John lord Butler of Bramfield; 3. Anne, to ſir William Waſhington; and 4. Frances; alſo two ſons; ſir William, hereafter mentioned; and ſir Edward Villiers, knt. who was preſident of Munſter in Ireland; and marrying Barbara, daughter to ſir John St. John, knt. (niece to Oliver St. John lord viſcount Grandiſon in that kingdom), from them deſcended the viſcounts Grandiſon of the ſurname of Villiers; as alſo by a younger ſon the earls of Jerſey; and from Barbara, a daughter and heir of William lord Grandiſon[3], created dutcheſs of Cleveland, &c. by king Charles II. deſcended the dukes of Cleveland, Northumberland, and Grafton.

The ſecond wife to ſir George was Mary, daughter to Anthony Beaumont, of Glenfield, eſq.; who, ſurviving him, became, ſecondly, wife to ſir William Rayner, knight; and, laſtly, to ſir Thomas Compton, K. B. and was created counteſs of Buckingham by letters patent, dated July 1, 1618.

Sir George had iſſue by her a daughter Suſan, married to William Fielding earl of Denbigh, and three ſons; 1. ſir John Villiers, knt. who, by letters patent, dated at Weſtminſter June 19, 1619, was created baron of Stoke, co. Bucks; and viſcount Purbeck of Purbeck, co. Dorſet; 2. the illuſtrious and right honourable George Villiers, marquis of Buckingham, a favourite of two kings ſucceſſively, king James I. and king Charles I.; and the greateſt ornament and glory of his family; "whoſe ſweet diſpoſition and excellent gifts of Nature," ſays Mr. Burton in 1622, "make manifeſt to the world that his Majeſty had been guided by his accuſtomed ſharp underſtanding and ſolid judgement in chooſing ſuch a ſubject, moſt fit to receive his favours; and in employing ſuch a ſervant, moſt ready to communicate his Majeſty's goodneſs to all worthy perſons[4]." 3. Chriſtopher, the youngeſt ſon, was created baron of Daventry and earl of Angleſey in Wales, by letters patent bearing date April 18, 1623, his brother then being in Spain with prince Charles[5].

Sir George Villiers died 4 Jan. 1605-6, ſeiſed in demeſne as of fee of the manors of Brokeſby, Howby, Godeby Marwood, and the Grange of Godeby; which were veſted, with the capital meſſuage called the farm of Howby, March 24, 19 Eliz. in Thomas Cotton and Anthony Tate, gentlemen, in truſt, for his firſt wife and her iſſue male by him, &c.; and, being likewiſe ſeiſed in all the tithes of herbage, grain, and hay, and all other tithes ariſing in Caldwell and Wikeham, co. Leiceſter, he ſettled the ſame on himſelf for life; remainder to John, George, and Chriſtopher (ſons by his ſecond wife), and their heirs male; remainder to his own right heirs. At the time of this inquiſition, William Villiers, eſq. the eldeſt ſon, was 17 years old[6].

In the middle of St. Edmund's chapel in Weſtminſter Abbey, on a raiſed tomb of the fineſt black and white marble, curiouſly poliſhed, is the effigies of a knight armed with a helmet, and by him a lady in her robes; with this inſcription:

---

[1] Inq. at Hinckley 3 June, 5 Eliz.

[2] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 1043; ex autograph. penès Rob. King, eq. aur.

[3] "William Villiers lord viſcount Grandiſon, killed at the ſiege of Briſtol in 1643, was a young man of ſo virtuous a habit of mind, that no temptation or provocation could corrupt him; ſo great a lover of juſtice and integrity, that no example, neceſſity, or even the barbarity of this war, could make him ſwerve from the moſt preciſe rules of it; and of that rare piety and devotion, that the court or camp could not ſhew a more faultleſs perſon, or to whoſe example young men might more reaſonably conform themſelves. His perſonal valour, and courage of all kinds (for he had ſometimes indulged ſo much to the corrupt opinion of honour, as to venture himſelf in duels), was very eminent, inſomuch as he was accuſed of being too prodigal of his perſon: his affection, and zeal, and obedience to the king, were ſuch as became a branch of that family; and he was wont to ſay, 'that if he had not underſtanding enough to know the uprightneſs of the cauſe, nor loyalty enough to inform him of the duty of a ſubject, yet the very obligations of gratitude to the king, on the behalf of his houſe, were ſuch, as his life was but a due ſacrifice:' and therefore he no ſooner ſaw the war unavoidable, than he engaged all his brethren *, as well as himſelf, in the ſervice; and there were then three more of them in the army when he was ſo unfortunately cut off." Clarendon, vol. II. p. 299.

[4] Burton, p. 55.

[5] Harl. MSS. 6111. p. 115. b.

[6] Inq. at Leiceſter, 3 Auguſt, 4 Jac. I.

* "Amongſt whom was Mr. Edward Villiers (anceſtor of the preſent earls of Jerſey and Clarendon) whoſe diligence and dexterity his majeſty found fit for any truſt." Clarendon, vol. I. p. 666.

“ BONAE MEMORIAE.
GEORGIO VILLERIO EQVITI
AVRATO, MARITO B. M. IVXTA
SE P. CARISSIMA CONIVX MARIA
COMITISSA BVCKINGHAMIAE
S. P. F. F.”

His lady has the following epitaph:

“ D. O. M.
OSSA
MARIÆ DE BELLOMONTE COMITISSÆ
BVCKINGHAMIÆ, E QVINQVE POTENTISSI-
MORVM TOTIVS EVROPIÆ REGNORVM
REGIBVS, IDQVE PER TOTIDEM IMMEDIATOS
DESCENSVS, ORIVNDÆ.
VIXIT ANN. LXII. M. XI. D. XIX.
HOC MON. V. I. C.”

“The right hon. Mary Beaumont, counteſs of Buckingham, ſometime wife to ſir George Villiers, knight, of Brokeſby, co. Leiceſter, by whom ſhe was the mother of three moſt noble and honourable ſons and one daughter; viz. John Villiers, her eldeſt ſon, viſcount Purbeck, and baron of Stoke; George Villiers, ſecond ſon, duke, marquis, and earl of Buckingham, earl of Coventry, viſcount Villiers, and baron of Whaddon, lord high admiral of England, and father of George Villiers, now (1632) duke of Buckingham, and of the lord Francis Villiers, and the lady Mary Villiers his only daughter; Chriſtopher, third ſon of the ſaid counteſs, was earl of Angleſea, and baron Daventry, gentleman of the bedchamber to our late ſovereign lord king James and his royal majeſty that now is, whoſe ſon and heir is Charles, now earl of Angleſea, and the lady Anne Villiers his only daughter; Suſan Villiers, daughter of the aforeſaid counteſs of Buckingham, is wife to William Fielding earl of Denbigh, viſcount Fielding, and baron of Nurenham Paddox; and by him is the mother of Baſil lord Fielding, and of George Fielding earl of Deſmond in Ireland, and viſcount Cullen; and was likewiſe mother of four daughters; viz. lady Mary Fielding, marchioneſs Hamilton; lady Anne Fielding, ſecond daughter; lady Elizabeth, third daughter; and the lady Henrietta-Maria, fourth daughter; which laſt three ladies are yet unmarried. This noble lady departed this life on Thurſday the 10th of April, 1632, at her lodgings in the Gate-houſe in Whitehall, entering into King-ſtreet; whoſe corpſe was honourably accompanied to the Abbey-church on Saturday next following, where ſhe lieth interred in a vault in a little chapel in the South aile of the choir[1].”

William, eldeſt ſon of ſir George Villiers, ſucceeded to the eſtate of Brokeſby; was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 6 Jac. I. and, having been honoured with knighthood by that king, was advanced to the degree of a baronet 19 July, 1619. He married three wives; 1. Anne, daughter to ſir Edward Griffin, of Dingley, by whom he had two daughters; 2. another Anne, daughter to Richard Fienes lord Say, widow to Henry Cave, of Ingarſby, co. Leiceſter; and, burying her, he afterwards married, 3. Rebecca, daughter to Robert Roper, of Heanor, co. Derby, eſq. by whom he had George, his only ſon and ſucceſſor, born in February, 1619-20; and four daughters, Anne, Rebecca, Mary, and Catharine. He died June 12, 1629, ſeiſed of the manor of Goadby Maureward, with the advowſon of the church, worth £13. 6*s*. a year, held of the lord Berkeley by the tenth part of a knight's fee; alſo Goadby Grange, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice, worth 20*s*. a year; and the manors of Brokeſby and Hoby, with the advowſon of both churches, held under the lord Berkeley by fealty[2].

Sir George, his only ſon, ſucceeded him in title and eſtate; and died towards the cloſe of the reign of king Charles II. This was the ingeniouſly pleaſant gentleman, who, thinking he could be more agreeably entertained in London than in writing to his wife, wrote all the letters neceſſary to be ſent to her before he left the country; but, by ſome unlucky miſtake in the numbering, the trick was diſcovered. Having married Penelope, daughter and coheir to ſir John Denham, of Blechington, co. Oxon, he left iſſue a daughter Penelope, married to ſir William Jeſſon; and William, who ſucceeded him.

In Poſlingford church, Suffolk:

“ Ad pedes hujus reverendi altaris jacent reliquiæ Illuſtriſſ' dominæ Penelope, conjugis chariſſimæ honorandi viri
Georgii Villers de Goadby, in agro Leiceſtr', baronetti.
Obiit xiii die Nov. an. Dom. 1699.”

In the body of Covent church, London, were memorials for Margaret and Rebecca Villiers, daughter of ſir George Villiers, of Brokeſby, bart. of the county of Leiceſter, 1684; and Mary Villiers, June 3, 1683[3].

Sir William Villiers, of Brokeſby, bart. was elected to parliament for the borough of Leiceſter in 1698, and again in 1700. He married the daughter and heir of Charles Potts, eſq.; but, dying without iſſue, 27 Feb. 1711, aged 67 years, the title became extinct; and his ſiſter's daughters, Penelope, married to George Hewett, of Stretton, co. Leiceſter, eſq. and Anne, to ſir James Robinſon, bart. became his heirs.

On ſir William's death, the manor of Brokeſby, &c. was bought by ſir Nathan Wrighte, lord keeper of the great ſeal of England in the reign of queen Anne; whoſe grandſon, George Wrighte, eſq. is the preſent owner.

In the return of the number of families made in 1564, there were none noticed at Brokeſby; nor is any one noticed in the liſt of freeholders of 1630.

In 1722, no freeholder polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find only the name of the rector, Thomas Orton. At preſent the village contains only the hall-houſe, which is rented by Colonel Graham, and one farm-houſe.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	1	16	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	1	16	0
——— on the poor, —	0	0	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	No poor.
——— 1784, —
——— 1785, —
Medium of theſe three years,
——— of county expences,
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.
——— of nett annual expences,
——— of attending on magiſtrates,
——— of entertainments at meetings,
——— of law expences, —
——— of ſetting the poor to work,

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 43.

---

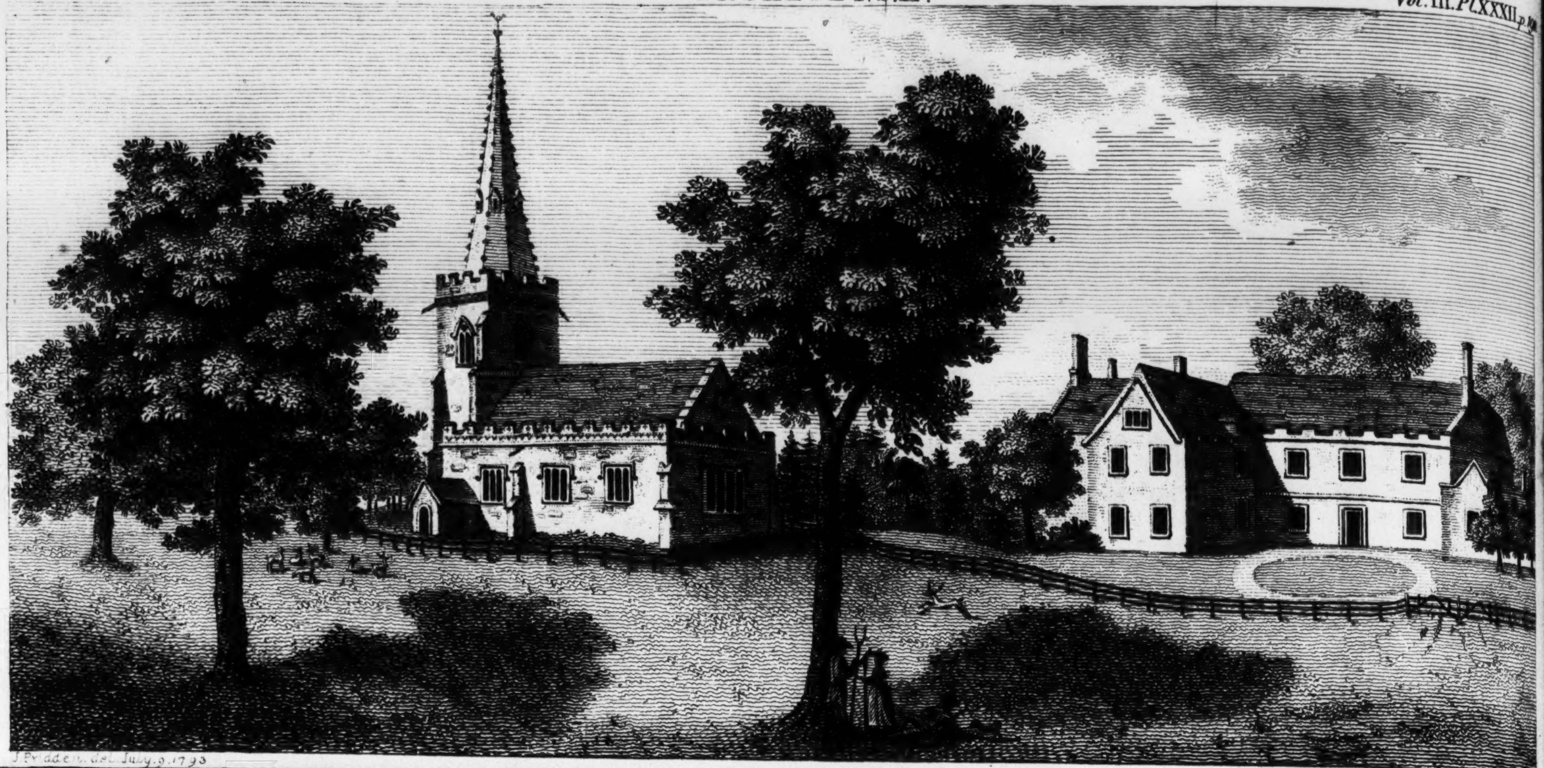
[1] This Certificate was taken by ſir Henry St. George, knight, Richmond Herald; and is teſtified by the ſubſcription of Richard Mynſhall, Arthur Longworth. Harl. MSS. 7178.

[2] Inq. at Billeſdon, 21 Sept. 5 Car. I. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) pp. 218. 300.

[3] Strype's Stow, 1720, Book VI. p. 90.

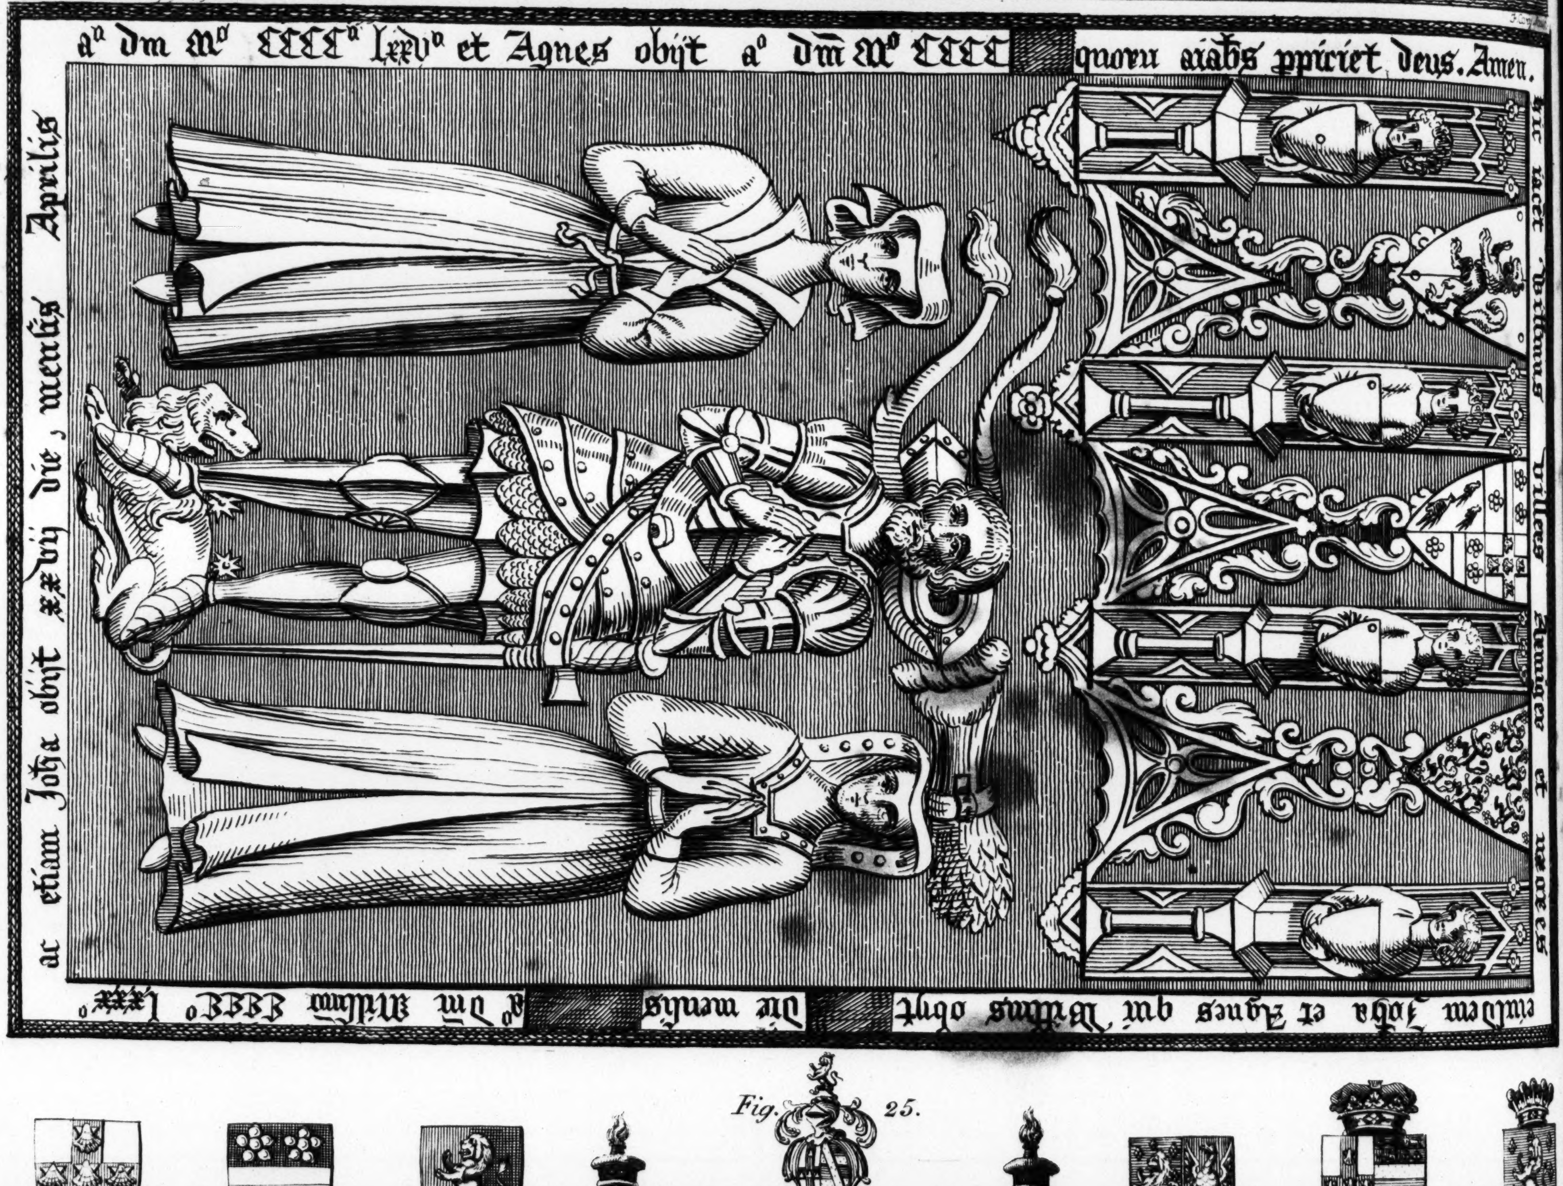
The

BROKESBY, S.E.



J. Pridden del. July 9 1793

J. Cary



Hic iacet Willmus Villers Armiger et uxores eiusdem Joha et Agnes qui Willms obijt Die mensis
aº dni millmo CCCCº lxxxº
ac etiam Joha obijt xxvij die, mensis Aprilis
aº dm Mº CCCCº lxxvº et Agnes obijt aº dm Mº CCCC quorum aiabs ppiciet deus. Amen.

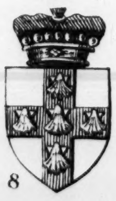
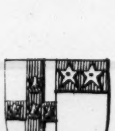
2



1



3

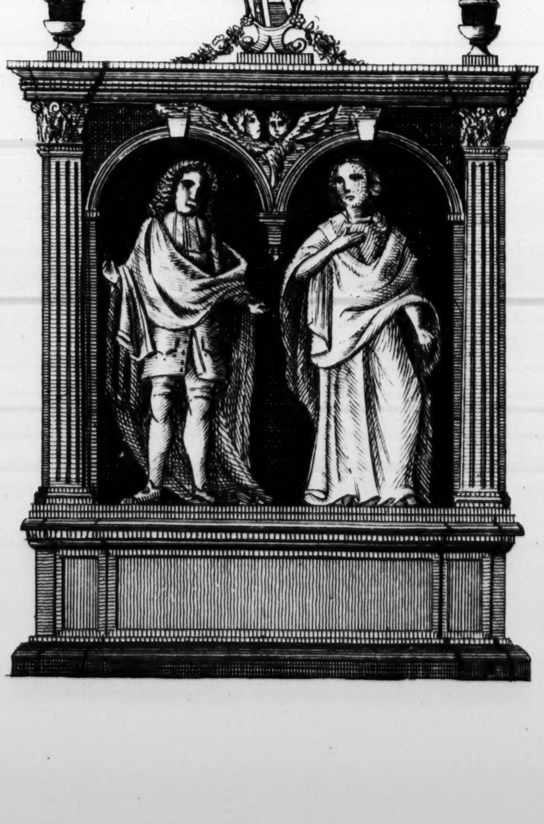


Fig. 25.

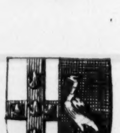
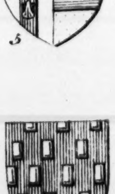
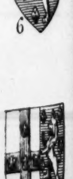


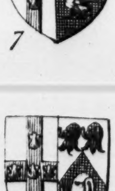
4



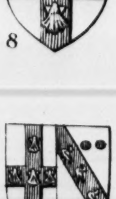
5



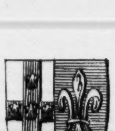
6



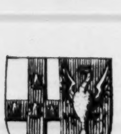
7



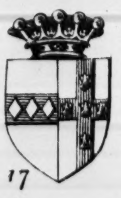
8



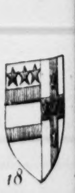
9



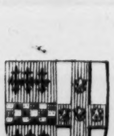
10



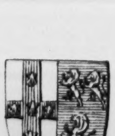
11



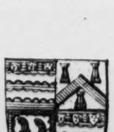
12



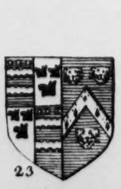
13



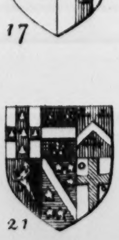
14



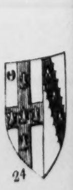
15



16



17



18

19 20

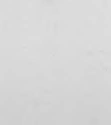
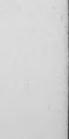
22



23

21



24

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XXXII.), dedicated to St. Michael, has, on a broad tower, handſome, but low (in which are . . . . . bells), a ſmall ſpire, well crocketed; the battlements of the church very beautiful; open worked, and embelliſhed with a range of ſhields all around.

At the Eaſt end of the church on the outſide, above the battlements, is carved in ſtone, a lion rampant between a ſemée of fleur de lis; Beaumont; impaling, Gules, an eagle diſplayed Argent, a creſcent for difference; Southill of Everingham; fig. 11.

A very fine Gothic door-way, arched, at the Weſt end to the belfry, and in it a neat window.

The inſide conſiſts only of a ſmall nave, with plain open ſeats on each ſide; the windows long, unornamented; but arms perfect in them, and chiefly of the Villiers family. The pavement is white ſtone, very antient.

The font is octagon, with an old wooden cover ſurmounted with a croſs.

Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe coats here:

1. Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent; Villiers antient.

2. Argent, on a croſs Gules, five eſcalops Or; Villiers modern.

3. Per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent; Beler.

Arms ſtill remaining in the Eaſt window, placed here, without doubt, in compliment to the duke of Buckingham:

5. Villiers; impaling, Or, two bars Azure; a chief quarterly of the ſecond and Gules; the firſt charged with two fleurs de lis of the firſt; the laſt a lion paſſant guardant Or (this chief was antiently Gules, and the charge thereon is an honorary augmentation, ſhewing his deſcent from the blood royal of king Edward the Fourth); Manners. Over the arms is a duke's coronet. This is the coat of George Villiers duke of Buckingham; and his dutcheſs.

6. Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis, and a lion rampant Or; Beaumont. Over the arms an earl's coronet. The counteſs of Buckingham, the duke's mother.

7. Villiers, impaling, Sable, a feſs Argent, between three ſheldrakes proper, Sheldon. Over the arms an earl's coronet. The earl of Angleſey, the duke's brother.

8. Villiers ſingly. Over it a viſcount's coronet. Lord viſcount Purbeck, another brother.

9. Villiers; impaling, Argent, on a chief Gules, two mullets pierced Or; St. John.

10. Villiers; impaling, Sable, an eagle cloſe Or.

In the South windows:

12. Villiers; impaling Beaumont.

13. Villiers; impaling, Per chevron Argent and Sable, three elephants heads eraſed counterchanged; Saunders.

14. Villiers; impaling, Argent, on a bend Gules, between three pellets, three ſwans Argent; Clarke.

15. Villiers; impaling, Azure, a fleur de lis Argent; Digby.

16. Villiers; impaling Southill.

North window:

17. Argent, on a feſs Azure, three lozenges Or; William Fielding earl of Denbigh; impaling the arms of lady Suſan Villiers. Over the arms an earl's coronet.

18. Argent two bars, and in chief three mullets Gules; Moyne, impaling Villiers.

19. Gules, a feſs chequé Or and Sable, between ſix croſs croſslets Argent; Butler; impaling, Villiers of Hatfield Woodhall, co. Hertford.

20. Villiers; impaling Gules, three lions rampant Argent; Fynes.

On two atchievements againſt the Eaſt wall:

21. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, two bars engrailed Argent, and in chief 3 leopards faces Or; Wrighte; 2. Or, a chevron Vert between three caſtles Gules; Onebye; 3. Argent, three bears' gambs eraſed, within a bordure engrailed Sable, ...

22. Quarterly, 1. Villiers modern; 2. Villiers antient; 3. Gules, a chevron between three croſs croſslets fitché Argent, Hungerford; 4. Beler; 5. Azure, a bend between ſix mullets Argent, Hoby; 6. Argent, a croſs between two annulets, one in dexter chief, and one in ſiniſter baſe, Vert. Kirby.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], the church of Brokeſby is deſcribed to be in the patronage of William de Sagio; and Walter de Sagio was then the rector. The monks of St. Severin received the third part of the great tithes from the demeſne ab antiquo.

In 1344, the procurations were, 5*s*.; the rectory was taxed at 6 marks and a half, and paid 1*s*. for Peter-pence. The then patron was Geoffrey Villiers.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 9*s*. 6*d*.; and the value of the rectory £5. 6*s*. 8*d*

In 1650, Brokeſby was returned as "a decayed town; church remaining; and a ſtipend of £10; the incumbent as ſufficient, but a pluralitan."

The preſent value in the king's books is £5. 12*s*. 6*d*.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 1*s*. 1*d*.; the archidiaconal, 7*s*. 6*d*.

The duty is performed but once a month; and the rectory does not require inſtitution, but only a licence, &c.[2] The ſuppoſed value is £60. a year.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Walter de Sagio, 1220.	William de Sagio.
Ralph Barry, ſubdeacon, 1251; died 1290.	Sir Alexander Vylers, knt.
Gilbert de Glen, chaplain, 7 id. Sept. 1290.	Sir John de Villiers.
. . . . 5 kal. July, 1301.
. . . . 13 kal. May, 1319.
Thomas Villiers, 1370.
John Holt occurs in 1405.
John Smith reſigned this rectory in 1433.
William Villiers was rector about 1440.
Thomas Bingham occurs in 1506 and 1535.
Sir Adam Winterbotham[3], died Nov. 24, 1573.
William Noble[4], died Oct. 6, 1644.
John Richardſon, 11 Jan. 1676.	Sir William Villiers, bart.
Timothy Chamberlaine, 11 Dec. 1680.
Henry Storer, 12 May, 1698.	Sir George Villiers, bart.
Edward Holbech, M. A. 8 Dec. 1727[5]; died 1755.	George Wrighte, eſq.
Thomas Orton, 21 May, 1755.

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[2] MS note in Mr. Peck's copy of Burton.

[3] Sir Adam Winterbotham, parſon of Brokeſby, was buried at Loughborough, Nov. 26, 1573.

[4] He was buried in the church of Purley in Berkſhire. See his epitaph, p. 196.

[5] Rector alſo of Caldecot in Warwickſhire, on the preſentation of Mr. Wrighte. See his epitaph, p. 196.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On a large ſlab of alabaſter, under a rich canopy, are tricked the figures of a gentleman in full armour, with large ſpurs, at his feet a dog looking up at him; and of his two wives, in cloſe gowns and belts, with large veil head-dreſſes thrown open; the hands of all uplifted. The inſcription is much obliterated; but enough remains to ſhew that it is the ſame as is engraved in Plate XXXII. from a copy painted on the Villiers pedigree.

Arms: In the centre, 1. and 4. Villiers antient; 2. Villiers modern; 3. . . . . . . three martlets.

"Hic jacet Will'mus Villers, armiger, et uxores ejuſdem Joh̃a ʒ Agnes; qui Willm̃s obiit . . . . . die menſis
. . . . aº dñi millĩmo CCCC lxxxº;
ac etiam Joh̃a obiit xxvii die menſis Aprilis
aº dñi MºCCCClxxvº; et Agnes obiit a dñi MºCCCC . .
quorũ aĩabꝫ ꝑpiciet' deus. amen."

This monument was noticed by Mr. Wyrley in 1590; as is one other, inſcribed,

"Hic jacet Will'us Villers, huius eccleſiæ rector."

On the North ſide of the chancel, on a fine mural monument of white marble, with grey pillars, are the upright figures of the laſt ſir William Villiers and his lady; he in a full-dreſſed coat, and over it a looſe gown, ſquare-toed ſhoes, ſmall buckles, and rolled-up ſtockings; ſhe in an elegant looſe robe.

Arms (ſee Plate XXXII. fig. 25.), Villiers; impaling Or, two bars Azure; over all a bend Or, a creſcent Argent for difference, Potts. The inſcription is as follows:

"Sacred to the memory of ſir William Villiers, bart. deſcended from a race of worthy anceſtors, upward of 500 years happily enjoying great revenue in this county, in a right noble and hoſpital uſe thereof; by whoſe much-lamented death is determined the male line of the eldeſt houſe of that honourable name in Great Britain; to none of whom he was inferior in all accompliſhments requiſite to adorn his quality.
He departed this life in the 67th year of his age, on the 27th day of February, 1711-12."

"Near alſo reſts dame Anne Villiers, wife of ſir William, daughter and heir of Charles Potts, of the county of Norfolk, eſq. a lady of ſingular virtue, piety, and charity. She died the 31ſt day of July, 1711."

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

Quarterly, 1. and 4, Wrighte; 2. and 3, Argent, three boars' heads coupt, Sable, armed Or, Cradock; impaling, Azure, a chevron Ermine, between three leopards' faces Or, Aſhby; fig. 23.

1. "Here lieth the body of Elizabeth, wife of Nathan Wrighte, eſq.
ſecond daughter of George Wrighte, eſq.
and grand-daughter of ſir Nathan Wrighte, knight.
She died the 20th day of May, 1780;
endowed with ſingular virtue, piety, and charity,
aged 75."

2. "Here
lieth the body of Nathan Wrighte, eſq.
the huſband of Elizabeth, ſecond daughter of George Wrighte, eſq.
grand-daughter of ſir Nathan Wrighte, knight.
He died the 7th day of December, 1793,
aged 86."

Anne viſcounteſs Beaumont was buried in Brokeſby church, Sept. 6, 1678[1]; but has no monument.

There are no grave ſtones in the church-yard. Three are ſet againſt the South wall; and one againſt the chancel-end wall.

On a braſs plate at Purley, co. Berks:

"Here lyeth William Noble, ſon of Thomas Noble, of Rearſby, in the county of Leiceſter, preacher of the Word of God, late parſon of Brokeſby, and vicar of Queniborough, in the ſaid county, who died the 6th of October, anno 1644[2]."

Within the communion-rails in the North-eaſt corner of Caldecot church, in Warwickſhire:

"Here lieth the body of the Rev.
Mr. EDWARD HOLBECH, A. M.
rector of this place, and of Brookſby in Leiceſterſhire. He died March 25, 1755, aged 66.
He was the laſt of the male line of the antient family of the Holbechs, of the White Houſe of Fillongley in this county.
His conſtant reſidence on this rectory for 39 years and upwards, his punctual and diligent diſcharge of his duty as a miniſter, his liberality to the poor and diſtreſſed, and juſtice to mankind, has rendered his loſs to his pariſhioners and neighbours irreparable."

In the chancel of the church of Hanbury is a marble monument thus inſcribed:

"THOMAS VILLIERS, DESCENDED FROM THE ANTIENT FAMILY OF THE VILLIERS'S, OF BROKESBY, IN THE COUNTY OF LEICESTER,
BARTS. DEPARTED THIS LIFE APRIL 30,
ANNO DOM. 1614.
EDWARD, SON OF THE ABOVE-NAMED THOMAS
VILLIERS, WAS BURIED JANUARY THE 14TH,
A. D. 1666.
THOMAS, SON OF EDWARD VILLIERS, WAS BURIED
THE 21ST OF AUGUST, A. D. 1686.
THOMAS, ELDEST SON OF THOMAS VILLIERS, WAS BURIED THE 13TH DAY OF JULY, A. D. 1666.
ISAAC, THIRD SON OF THOMAS VILLIERS, WAS BURIED THE 20TH OF SEPT. 1719, AGED 70 YEARS.
DOROTHY VILLIERS, ONLY DAUGHTER OF THOMAS
VILLIERS, WAS BURIED SEPT. 1, A. D. 1720,
AGED 82.
JOHN, SECOND SON OF THOMAS VILLIERS, WAS BURIED JAN. 10, A. D. 1726, AGED 80 YEARS."

Arms: Villiers, with a creſcent for difference; impaling, Argent, on a bend engrailed Sable, three fleurs de lis of the firſt, fig. 24. Round the coat, Terram terra tegit, ſpiritus alta petit.

Above this is the buſt of a woman ſculptured in a niche, and painted black and white, with an inſcription underneath, for Dorothy, daughter of Richard Sale, gent. and wife unto Edward Villiers, with whom ſhe lived 52 years, and died 1658, aged 75 years.

On flat ſtones within the communion-rails:

"Edward Villiers, gent. eldeſt ſon of Edward Villiers, of Hanbury, who married Jane, eldeſt daughter of Chriſtopher Horton, of Catron, in co. Derby, eſq. and had two ſons, Edward and Chriſtopher, and one daughter, Parnel.
He died July 14, 1647, aged 38.
She died November the 15th, 1710.
George Villiers, gent. third ſon of Edward Villiers, of Hanbury, gent. died May 19th, 1649, aged 26 years 7 months.
Sarah Villiers, fourth daughter of Edward Villiers, of Hanbury, gent. died the 25th of Feb. 1650, aged 34.
Likewiſe George Villiers, ſecond ſon of John Villiers, of Ballineboly, in the county of Kilkenny, in Ireland, eſq. who died the 10th July, 1755, aged 44."

From a board in the chancel:

"John Villiers, late of this towne, gent. by a deed of ſettlement, dated 1719, gave unto the poor of Hanbury ſide, and Draycot, within this pariſh, the ſum of £5. annually, with the conſent of his couſin Geo. Villiers, of Waterford, in Ireland, gent.; and alſo 20*s.* in like manner to the poor widows of the ſame diviſions (being formerly the gift of E. Villiers, grandfather to the ſaid John[3].)"

---

[1] Pariſh Regiſter of Rotherby.

[2] Aſhmole's Berkſhire, p. 3.

[3] Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 74.

The Genealogie and Pedigree of the moſt antient and noble familie of VILLIERS; of whom was AYMER DE VILLIERS, by birth a Frenchman, ſewer to Philip the Firſt of that name, king of France; which Aymer was ſlaine in Normandy about the ſixt yeare of William the Conqueror, anno 1076. Not many yeares aſter lived in England PAYNE DE VILLIERS, who enjoyed faire poſſeſſions in the counties of Yorke, Lancaſter, Derby, Nottingham, and elſewhere, anceſtor to the high and mighty Prince GEORGE Viſcount VILLIERS, Duke of BUCKINGHAM, the Right Honourable CHARLES VILLIERS Earle of ANGLESEY, Lady SUZAN VILLIERS Counteſſe of DENBIGH, JOHN VILLIERS Viſcount PURBECK, WILLIAM VILLIERS Viſcount GRANDEZON, and Sir GEORGE VILLIERS, of Brookeſby, Baronett; togeather with ſuch worthie families, which, by the right of woemen heires, by order of blood, have bin annexed unto them. Aall which are truely and faithfullie collected out of the King's Publique Records, the private Evidences of this Familie, Monuments in Churches, Hiſtories, Regiſters of Monaſteries, and compared with diverſe old Rolles, agreeing with ſeveral Viſitations remaining in the Office of Arms and other venerable Antiquities, anno D'ni MDCLXX. (Harl. MSS. 7178. Plut. XVII.)

Arms: Or, on a chief Azure, a hand and arm feſs-ways proper habited, with long cuff Ermine; Aymer de Villiers.

Aymer de Villiers, by birth a Frenchman, ſewer to Philip the Firſt of that name king of France, was ſlain, by four of the ſoldiers of William the Conqueror of England, in Normandy, anno 1076, about the ſixth year of the ſaid Conqueror's reign.

Gulſe de Villiers, anno Domini 1081, became faithful to William the Conqueror upon the death of his father, and to his heirs for about 50 years.

Arnold de Villiers, was one of the witneſſes to a deed made by the lady Gundred, wife to Nigell de Albeneio, to the hoſpital of St. Peter's of York; which Nigell and Gundred were father and mother to Roger, ſurnamed Mowbray by the favour of king Henry I.

Haymer de Villiers, was living anno 1112, 14 Hen. I.

Adam de Villiers, 1177, living 1182. = Idonia.

Aymer de Villiers, 1182.

Gilbert de Villiers, 2, 3, 4, and 6 king John.

Guy de Villiers, 1196, 8 R. I. = Elizabeth.

Payne de Villiers, ſenior, lord of Crophill, gave to the church of St. Peter, and to Roger archbiſhop of York, the tithes and church of Kinalton, to the uſe of the houſhold of the archbiſhop; whoſe conſecration was 1 Henry II.

Sir Adam de Villiers, knt. 1228.

. . . . was married to ſir John de Hanſard, of Lincolnſhire, knt.

James de Villiers, eſq. died ſ. p.

John de Villiers, de Boll.

Adam de Villiers.

1. Sir Matthew de Villiers, of Warington, knt. living in the reign of Henry II.

2. William de Villiers, of Newbold, co. Nott. gave to Alexander his couſin ploughed lands in Newbold.

3. Alan de Villiers, lord of Croſby, lived in the reigns of Henry II. and Ric. I.

4. Payne de Villiers, jun. father of William de Villiers, of Newbold, co. Nott. died before his father temp. Hen. II.

5. Thomas de Villiers, of Outhorpe, co. Nott.

6. Richard de Villiers.

7. Emme, married to Dinan Garnet.

Beatrix, dau. and coheir of ſir Matthew de Villiers, married to Robert Fitz Holland.

Albred, another dau. and coheir of ſir Matthew de Villiers, married to Robert Staunton.

Sir Robert de Villiers, of Croſby, knt. lived in the reigns of Richard I. and John. = Maria, dau. of Rafe, ſon of Simon.

William de Villiers, ſon of Payne the younger, had lands in Newbold, co. Nott. temp. king John. = Petronell, a widow 4 H. II.

Sir William de Boteler, of Warington, ſon of Beatrix de Villiers. He was baron of Warington.

Walter de Staunton.

Robert de Villiers, died without iſſue.

Iſabel, dau. and heir in fine of ſir Robert, married to Robert Molineux, lord of Seſton.

Alice, mother to William, ſon of Rob. de Brankeſton. = Alexander de Villiers, of Rigby, co. Lincoln, and of Brokeſby, co. Leic. 19 Hen. III. died 1245. = Ceciley, relict 27 Edw. III. dau. of Will. Seis, of Donington ſuper le Heath.

Almarick le Boteler, of Warington, ſon of William baron of Warington.

Robert de Villiers, died without iſſue temp. Hen. III. He was of Treford, co. Suſſex.

Sir Richard de Villiers, of Rigeby, and of Brokeſby, knt. 38 Henry III. ſon and heir of Alexander after the death of his eldeſt brother Robert. =

Rafe de Villiers, 19 H. III.

William de Villiers, of Kinalton, co. Nott. = Anyce.

Maud, married to Reginald de Anneſly, co. Nott.

Hugh de Villiers, eldeſt ſon, died without iſſue.

Sir John de Villiers, of Brokeſby, knt. heir after the death of his brother Hugh, 56 Henry III. = Freſtentia.

Nicholas de Villiers, of Treford, co. Suſſ. bur. at Downe-Ampney. = Maud.

William de Villiers.

Richard de Villiers. =

Matthew de Villiers, of Kinalton, 9 and 26 Edw. I. =

John de Villiers. = Clemencia.

Margery.

Nicholas de Villiers, of Treford.

Kenburgh de Villiers.

Sir Payne de Villiers, of Kinalton, knt. =

Robert de Villiers, of Newbold.

Sir John de Villiers, of Brokeſby, knt. è cartis 24 Edw. I. and 4, 10, 11, 17, 18, 19 Edw. II. & 6 Edw. III. =

Alexander de Villiers, of Brokeſby, a younger ſon, 17, 18, 19 Edw. II. & 3 Edw. III.

Margaret Villiers, dau. and heir, was married to Geoffrey Foljamb. =

Alice Foljamb, dau. and heir, married to Robert Plumpton, of Plumpton, co. York.

Robert Pakeman, of Kirkby, co. Linc. =

Geoffrey Villiers, of Brokeſby, è cartis 6, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 Edw. III. = Alice, 11 and 12 Edw. III.

Simon Pakeman, of Kirkby. Inq. 7 Edw. III. = Agnes. Inq. 2 Ric. II.

2. Tho. de Villiers, parſon of the church of Brokeſby, è cartis 31 & 36 Edw. III.

1. Sir John de Villiers, of Brokeſby, knt. è cartis 31, 35, 36, 42 & 47 Edw. III. Inq. 15 Ric. II. = Joan, ſiſter and coheir of Simon Pakeman the younger.

Simon Pakeman, of Kirkby and Wigſton, 36 Edw. III. Inq. 15 Ric. II. He died, without iſſue, within age.

Katharine, ſiſter and coheir to Simon Pakeman, was married to Robert Digby.

Richard de Villiers, of Brokeſby, co. Leic. eſq. 36 Edw. III; 6 & 7 Ric. II; Inq. 15 Ric. II. = Elizabeth, è cartis de annis 7 & 15 Ric. II.; 6 H. IV. & 3 Hen. V.

John de Villiers.

Beatrix, was married to ſir John Bagot, knt.

Alexander de Villiers, third ſon, è cartis de annis 3 Hen. V. & 12 Hen. VI. = Alice, dau. of William Swayne, 16 H. VI.

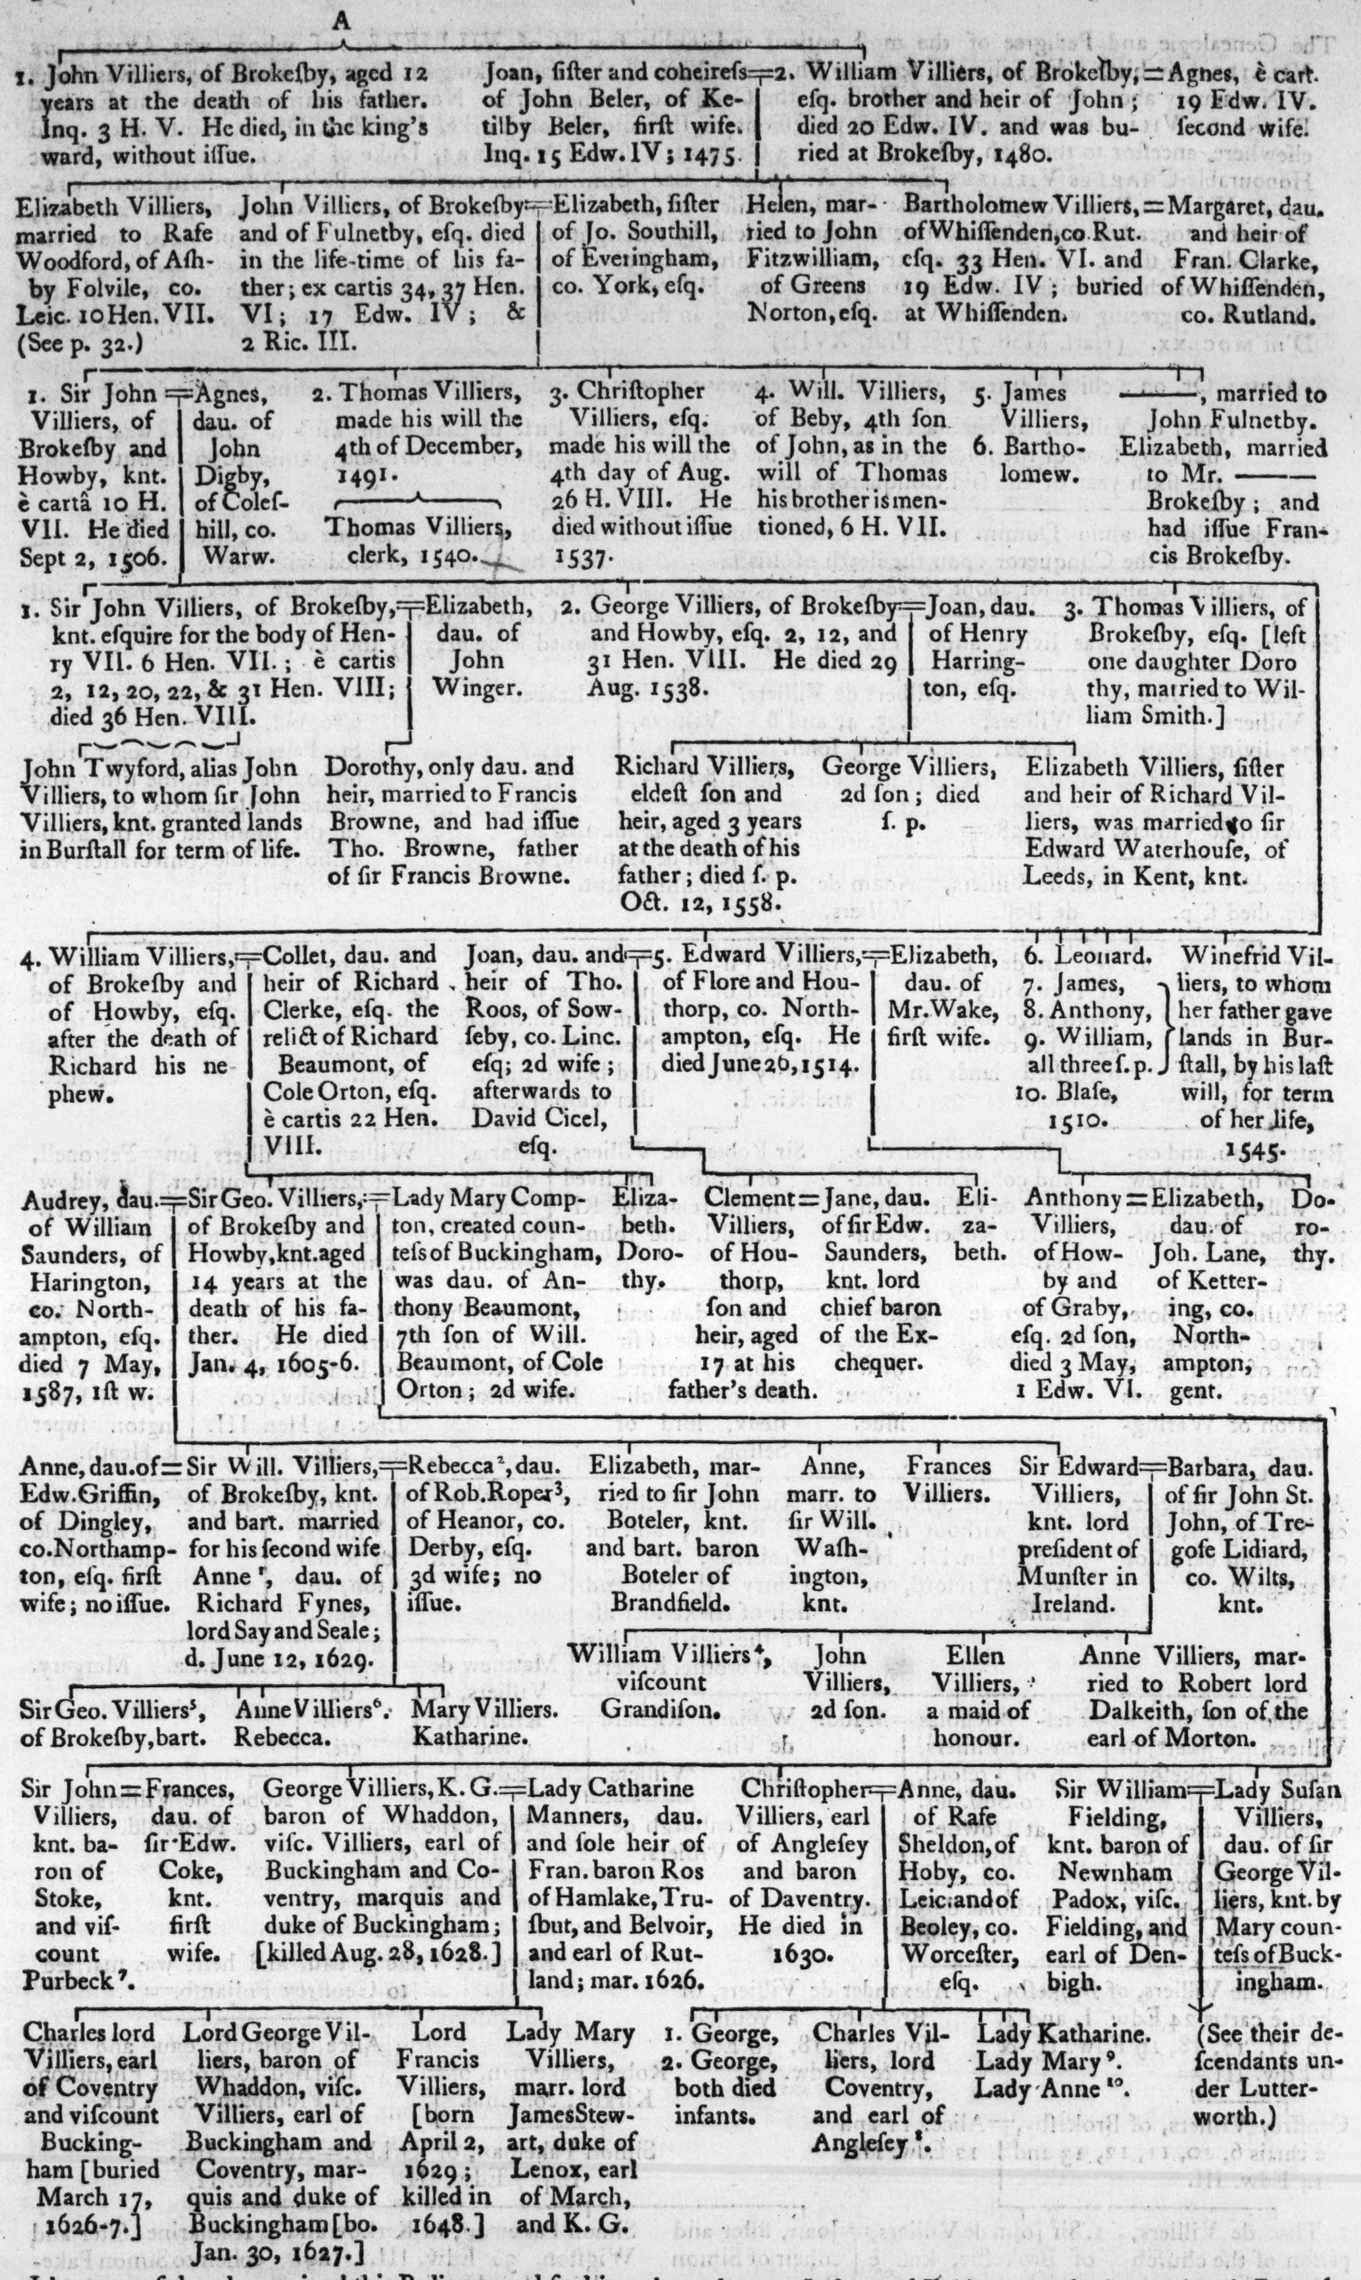
Iſabel Villiers.

Robert Villiers.

Elizabeth Villiers.

John Villiers, of Brokeſby, eſq. Inq. 6 Hen. IV. died 4 Hen. V. = Joan, dau. of ſir William Mering, knt. of Mering, co. Notts.

A



A

1. John Villiers, of Brokeſby, aged 12 years at the death of his father. Inq. 3 H. V. He died, in the king's ward, without iſſue.

Joan, ſiſter and coheireſs of John Beler, of Ketilby Beler, firſt wife. Inq. 15 Edw. IV; 1475. = 2. William Villiers, of Brokeſby, eſq. brother and heir of John; died 20 Edw. IV. and was buried at Brokeſby, 1480. = Agnes, è cart. 19 Edw. IV. ſecond wife.

Elizabeth Villiers, married to Rafe Woodford, of Aſhby Folvile, co. Leic. 10 Hen. VII. (See p. 32.)

John Villiers, of Brokeſby and of Fulnetby, eſq. died in the life-time of his father; ex cartis 34, 37 Hen. VI; 17 Edw. IV; & 2 Ric. III. = Elizabeth, ſiſter of Jo. Southill, of Everingham, co. York, eſq.

Helen, married to John Fitzwilliam, of Greens Norton, eſq.

Bartholomew Villiers, of Whiſſenden, co. Rut. eſq. 33 Hen. VI. and 19 Edw. IV; buried at Whiſſenden. = Margaret, dau. and heir of Fran. Clarke, of Whiſſenden, co. Rutland.

1. Sir John Villiers, of Brokeſby and Howby, knt. è cartâ 10 H. VII. He died Sept 2, 1506. = Agnes, dau. of John Digby, of Coleſhill, co. Warw.

2. Thomas Villiers, made his will the 4th of December, 1491.

Thomas Villiers, clerk, 1540.

3. Chriſtopher Villiers, eſq. made his will the 4th day of Aug. 26 H. VIII. He died without iſſue 1537.

4. Will. Villiers, of Beby, 4th ſon of John, as in the will of Thomas his brother is mentioned, 6 H. VII.

5. James Villiers,
6. Bartholomew.

———, married to John Fulnetby.
Elizabeth, married to Mr. ——— Brokeſby; and had iſſue Francis Brokeſby.

1. Sir John Villiers, of Brokeſby, knt. eſquire for the body of Henry VII. 6 Hen. VII.; è cartis 2, 12, 20, 22, & 31 Hen. VIII; died 36 Hen. VIII. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Winger.

2. George Villiers, of Brokeſby and Howby, eſq. 2, 12, and 31 Hen. VIII. He died 29 Aug. 1538. = Joan, dau. of Henry Harrington, eſq.

3. Thomas Villiers, of Brokeſby, eſq. [left one daughter Dorothy, married to William Smith.]

John Twyford, alias John Villiers, to whom ſir John Villiers, knt. granted lands in Burſtall for term of life.

Dorothy, only dau. and heir, married to Francis Browne, and had iſſue Tho. Browne, father of ſir Francis Browne.

Richard Villiers, eldeſt ſon and heir, aged 3 years at the death of his father; died ſ. p. Oct. 12, 1558.

George Villiers, 2d ſon; died ſ. p.

Elizabeth Villiers, ſiſter and heir of Richard Villiers, was married to ſir Edward Waterhouſe, of Leeds, in Kent, knt.

4. William Villiers, of Brokeſby and of Howby, eſq. after the death of Richard his nephew. = Collet, dau. and heir of Richard Clerke, eſq. the relict of Richard Beaumont, of Cole Orton, eſq. è cartis 22 Hen. VIII.

Joan, dau. and heir of Tho. Roos, of Sowſeby, co. Linc. eſq; 2d wife; afterwards to David Cicel, eſq. = 5. Edward Villiers, of Flore and Houthorp, co. Northampton, eſq. He died June 26, 1514. = Elizabeth, dau. of Mr. Wake, firſt wife.

6. Leonard.
7. James,
8. Anthony,
9. William,
all three ſ. p.
10. Blaſe, 1510.

Winefrid Villiers, to whom her father gave lands in Burſtall, by his laſt will, for term of her life, 1545.

Audrey, dau. of William Saunders, of Harington, co. Northampton, eſq. died 7 May, 1587, 1ſt w. = Sir Geo. Villiers, of Brokeſby and Howby, knt. aged 14 years at the death of his father. He died Jan. 4, 1605-6. = Lady Mary Compton, created counteſs of Buckingham, was dau. of Anthony Beaumont, 7th ſon of Will. Beaumont, of Cole Orton; 2d wife.

Elizabeth. Dorothy.

Clement Villiers, of Houthorp, ſon and heir, aged 17 at his father's death. = Jane, dau. of ſir Edw. Saunders, knt. lord chief baron of the Exchequer.

Elizabeth.

Anthony Villiers, of Howby and of Graby, eſq. 2d ſon, died 3 May, 1 Edw. VI. = Elizabeth, dau. of Joh. Lane, of Kettering, co. Northampton, gent.

Dorothy.

Anne, dau. of Edw. Griffin, of Dingley, co. Northampton, eſq. firſt wife; no iſſue. = Sir Will. Villiers, of Brokeſby, knt. and bart. married for his ſecond wife Anne [1], dau. of Richard Fynes, lord Say and Seale; d. June 12, 1629. = Rebecca [2], dau. of Rob. Roper [3], of Heanor, co. Derby, eſq. 3d wife; no iſſue.

Elizabeth, married to ſir John Boteler, knt. and bart. baron Boteler of Brandfield.

Anne, marr. to ſir Will. Waſhington, knt.

Frances Villiers.

Sir Edward Villiers, knt. lord preſident of Munſter in Ireland. = Barbara, dau. of ſir John St. John, of Tregoſe Lidiard, co. Wilts, knt.

Sir Geo. Villiers [5], of Brokeſby, bart.

Anne Villiers [6].
Rebecca.

Mary Villiers.
Katharine.

William Villiers [4], viſcount Grandiſon.

John Villiers, 2d ſon.

Ellen Villiers, a maid of honour.

Anne Villiers, married to Robert lord Dalkeith, ſon of the earl of Morton.

Sir John Villiers, knt. baron of Stoke, and viſcount Purbeck [7]. = Frances, dau. of ſir Edw. Coke, knt. firſt wife.

George Villiers, K. G. baron of Whaddon, viſc. Villiers, earl of Buckingham and Coventry, marquis and duke of Buckingham; [killed Aug. 28, 1628.] = Lady Catharine Manners, dau. and ſole heir of Fran. baron Ros of Hamlake, Truſbut, and Belvoir, and earl of Rutland; mar. 1626.

Chriſtopher Villiers, earl of Angleſey and baron of Daventry. He died in 1630. = Anne, dau. of Rafe Sheldon, of Hoby, co. Leic. and of Beoley, co. Worceſter, eſq.

Sir William Fielding, knt. baron of Newnham Padox, viſc. Fielding, and earl of Denbigh. = Lady Suſan Villiers, dau. of ſir George Villiers, knt. by Mary counteſs of Buckingham.

Charles lord Villiers, earl of Coventry and viſcount Buckingham [buried March 17, 1626-7.]

Lord George Villiers, baron of Whaddon, viſc. Villiers, earl of Buckingham and Coventry, marquis and duke of Buckingham [bo. Jan. 30, 1627.]

Lord Francis Villiers, [born April 2, 1629; killed in 1648.]

Lady Mary Villiers, marr. lord James Stewart, duke of Lenox, earl of March, and K. G.

1. George,
2. George,
both died infants.

Charles Villiers, lord Coventry, and earl of Angleſey [8].

Lady Katharine.
Lady Mary [9].
Lady Anne [10].

(See their deſcendants under Lutterworth.)

I have peruſed and examined this Pedigree, and find it to be truly extracted out of Evidences and other authentic Records.

HENRY ST. GEORGE, Norroy King of Arms.
HENRY LILLY, Rouge Dragon.

---

[1] The Baronettage calls her the widow of Henry Cave, of Ingarſby.

[2] Re-married to Captain Francis Cave, of Ingarſby.

[3] Mr. Roper's wife was a daughter of William Nott, of Embercourt in Surrey.

[4] Father of Barbara dutcheſs of Cleveland.

[5] He married Penelope (or Margaret) daughter of ſir John Denham, knt. of Burſtall, Berks, and of Blechyndon, co. Oxon, by whom he had one ſon (ſee p. 194); and five daughters, Penelope, Rebecca, Margaret, Anne, and Mary.

[6] Married to . . . . Conqueſt.

[7] This nobleman married, ſecondly, Elizabeth, daughter of ſir William Slingſby, of Kippax, co. Ebor. knight; but died Feb. 17, 1657, without iſſue; and was buried at Charlton near Windſor.

[8] He married Mary, daughter of Paul viſcount Banning, and widow of William viſcount Grandiſon; but died in 1659, ſ. p.

[9] Married firſt to Charles lord Herbert; afterwards to James duke of Richmond, by whom ſhe was mother to Eſme duke of Richmond, who died ſ. p. 1660; and to the lady Mary, wife of Richard earl of Arran.

[7] Married to Thomas viſcount Savile, afterwards earl of Suſſex.

GEORGE VILLIERS, duke of Buckingham, and memorable in Engliſh ſtory for having been the favourite of two kings, was born, Aug. 28, 1592, at Brookſby. He was a younger ſon of ſir George Villiers by a ſecond wife, Mary, daughter of Anthony Beaumont, eſq. of Cole Orton; or, to uſe the words of Fuller, "he was the fourth ſon to his father ſir George Villiers, and ſecond ſon to his mother Mary Beaumont." From the age of ten years he was educated under Mr. Anthony Cade at Billeſdon-ſchool in this county (where he alſo learnt the grounds of muſick) till the death of his father, which happened January 5, 1605-6. On this event, being then 13 years old, he was taken home to the houſe of his mother[1], then reſident at Goadby Maureward[2] near Melton Mowbray, who enjoyed a good jointure in the account of that age, and by whoſe ſingular affection and care he was well brought up. For the better improvement of his education, and giving an ornament to his hopeful perſon, he was ſent by her into France, where he ſpent two or three years in attaining the language, and in learning the exerciſes of riding, fencing, and dancing; in the laſt of which he excelled moſt men, and returned into England by the time he was 21 years old[3]. After having continued with his mother about a twelvemonth, repairing to London, and inclining to be a ſuitor to ſir Roger Aſton's daughter (a gentleman of the bed-chamber to king James, and maſter of the robes) he fell into acquaintance with ſir John Graham, one of the gentlemen of the privy-chamber, who diſſuaded him from marriage, and encouraged him "to woo fortune in the Court." Whereunto hearkening, it happened ſhortly after, that the king, caſting his eye upon him at Apethorpe in Northamptonſhire (being then in his progreſs), took ſo great a liking to his perſon, as that, knowing ſir John Graham to be his familiar friend, he gave him private directions how, and by what degrees, to bring him into favour[4]. This anecdote is given on ſo truly reſpectable an authority[5], that it would be hereſy in an Antiquary to doubt its authenticity; yet it may be allowable to ſuggeſt, that the only royal viſit remaining on record at Apethorpe was on April 27, 1603, when the king was ſumptuouſly entertained at dinner by ſir Anthony Mildmay, and preſented at his departure with a gallant Barbary horſe and very rich ſaddle[6]. If it was at this early viſit that the king ſaw young Villiers, it muſt have been before he was ſent to Billeſdon ſchool. It is poſſible, however, that the king (though we do not find it ſo ſtated) might re-viſit Apethorpe in his progreſs of 1614. Be this as it may, there ſeems to be good authority for ſaying that in March 1614-15, the king, according to his "uſual methods, went to take his hunting pleaſures at Newmarket; and the ſcholars, as they called them, of Cambridge, who knew the king's humour, invited him to a play called Ignoramus, to ridicule at leaſt the practice of the common law. Never did any thing ſo hit the king's humour as this play did, ſo that he would have it acted again; which was increaſed with ſeveral additions, which yet more pleaſed the king. At this play it was ſo contrived, that George Villiers ſhould appear with all the advantages his mother could ſet him forth; and the king, ſo ſoon as he had ſeen him, fell into admiration of Villiers and the pleaſure of the play; which the king did not conceal, but gave both vent upon ſeveral occaſions[7]." Both theſe accounts may be in ſome meaſure true. The king might have firſt ſeen young Villiers at Apethorpe, and again at Cambridge ſet off with the circumſtances of dreſs; "for," ſays lord Clarendon, "though he was a prince of more learning and knowledge than any other of that age, and really delighted more in books, and in the converſation of learned men; yet, of all wiſe men living, he was the moſt delighted and taken with handſome perſons and fine cloaths[8]." Thus he conceived ſuch a liking to the young ſtranger, that he "reſolved to make him a maſter-piece, and to mould him, as it were, Platonically to his own idea[9]." "The duke was indeed a very extraordinary perſon; and never any man, in any age, nor I believe in any country or nation, roſe in ſo ſhort a time to ſuch greatneſs of honour, fame, and fortune, upon no other advantage or recommendation than of the beauty and gracefulneſs of his perſon. I have not the leaſt purpoſe of under-valuing his good parts and qualities, when I ſay that his firſt introduction into favour was purely from the handſomeneſs of his perſon[10]."

About this time Robert earl of Somerſet (a perſon in no ſmall power with that king) for very great reaſons beginning to grow leſs in his majeſty's royal eſteem, this hopeful gentleman (being of ſtature tall and comely, his comportment graceful, and of a moſt ſweet diſpoſition) became daily more and more noted: inſomuch that his majeſty, diſcerning him to be a perſon properly qualified, firſt entertained him as a cup-bearer at large; but, the next ſummer following, admitted him in ordinary. He ſoon mounted higher; and in a very few weeks was made a gentleman of the bed-chamber; "favours now coming thick upon him, liker main ſhowers than ſprinkling drops or dews[11]." During his employment in the king's ſervice, obſervation being made of his modeſt and courteous behaviour, it was thought fit, by ſome eminent perſons (whereof the then archbiſhop of Canterbury, Dr. Abbot, was not the leaſt), to drive out one nail with another; Somerſet's inſolencies being ſuch, as that the king began to grow weary of him. And, becauſe his majeſty had a quality to admit none to nearneſs about him but whom the queen recommended, ſhe was moved therein, and, after much ſolicitation, prevailed with (though at firſt ſhe refuſed, giving her reaſons); which being done, he was knighted in her bed-chamber with the prince's rapier[1]. It is alſo obſerved, that when the king gave order to ſwear him of the bed-chamber, Somerſet moved that he might be only ſworn as a groom: but thoſe of his friends (whoſe aim was to leſſen Somerſet) ſticking to him, he was ſworn as a gentleman, April 23, 1615, with an annual penſion of £1000. payable out of the court of wards[2]. In which place he ſo won upon the king's affections, that, upon the 4th of January the ſame year, he was made maſter of the horſe (the earl of Worceſter then ſurrendering that great office[3]). After which, farther honours and advantages were in a ſhort time heaped upon him: for, on the 24th of April next enſuing, he was elected into the Society of Knights Companions of the moſt noble order of the Garter, and inſtalled upon the 7th of July following: as alſo, upon the 25th of that month, made general warden and chief juſtice of all the foreſts North of Trent[4]; and, on the 27th of Auguſt, advanced[5] to the degree of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Whaddon; that great lordſhip of Whaddon, co. Bucks (then in the crown[6] by the attainder of the lord Grey of Wilton), being beſtowed on him; and the ceremony of his creation performed at Woodſtock, the lords Compton and Norris introducing him, and the lord Carew carrying his robe. And, after a little ſpace, the dignity of viſcount, by the title of viſcount Villiers[7]; the earl of Suffolk and viſcount L'Iſle introducing him; the lord Norris carrying his robe, and the lord Compton his coronet; where the queen and prince were both preſent. On the 5th of January next enſuing, 1616, he was created earl of Buckingham in the preſence-chamber at Whitehall[8], the queen and prince being then alſo preſent. Nor did that great king's favours here make a ſtop; for, on the 1ſt of January, 1617, he advanced him to the title of marquis of Buckingham[9] (but without any ſolemnity other than the delivery of the patent[10]); the lord keeper of the great ſeal, the lord treaſurer, the duke of Lenox, the marquis of Hamilton, the lord chamberlain, the earls of Arundel and Montgomery, with the viſcounts L'Iſle, Walingford, and Fenton, being witneſſes thereto. And, on the 30th of January, the next year following, made him lord high admiral of England, Ireland, and Principality of Wales[11]; after which, on the 4th of February, he was ſworn of the privy council. "In a ſhort time, very ſhort," ſays lord Clarendon, "for ſuch a prodigious aſcent," he was made lord warden of the Cinque Ports, chief juſtice in Eyre of all the parks and foreſts South of Trent, maſter of the King's-bench office, high-ſteward of Weſtminſter, and conſtable of Windſor Caſtle[12]; and "entirely diſpoſed of all the graces of the king, in conferring all the honours, and all the offices of three kingdoms, without a rival; in diſpenſing whereof he was guided more by the rules of appetite, than of judgement; and ſo exalted almoſt all of his own numerous family and dependents; whoſe greateſt merit was their alliance to him; which equally offended the antient nobility, and the people of all conditions, who ſaw the flowers of the Crown every day fading and withered, whilſt the revenues thereof were ſacrificed to the enriching of a private family (how well ſo ever originally extracted) ſcarce ever heard of before to the nation; and the expences of the Court ſo vaſt and unlimited, that they had a ſad proſpect of that poverty and neceſſity which afterwards befell the Crown, almoſt to the ruin of it[13]."

---

[1] In 1609, the lady Mary Villiers held the manor of Goadby Maureward in capite; and at the ſame time John Villiers held Goldſmiths Grange alſo in capite. See vol. I. p. cxxxiii.

[2] An anonymous MS. written in 1617, formerly in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Oldys, and afterwards of Mr. Weſt, intituled, "A Motion for erecting an Academy Royal, or College of King James," mentions the Society of Antiquaries as then abſolutely vaniſhed; and deſires the Marquis of Buckingham (to whom it is addreſſed) to preſent to the king the petition thereto annexed, and to promote the deſign with his recommendation and powerful intereſt. The writer, whoever he might be, begins his addreſs thus: "High and moſt honourable Marquis; it was the happineſs of my growing years to behold in your Lordſhip's perſon (then very young) at Goadby that ſeed, which is ſince ſhot up, as the whole world ſees, into the moſt eminent, brave, and ſpacious tree." See the Introduction to "Archæologia," vol. I. p. xxii.

[3] Clarendon, Hiſtory of the Rebellion, vol. I. 8vo. p. 9.

[4] The Life and Death of George Villiers, duke of Buckingham, by ſir Henry Wotton (Reliquiæ Wottonianæ), 1685, p. 208.

[5] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 126.

[6] Collection of King James's Progreſſes, 1799, p. 17.

[7] Detection of the Court and State of England by Roger Coke, eſq. 1697, vol. I. p. 74.

[8] Hume ſays, "George Villiers was remarked for the advantages of a handſome perſon, genteel air, and faſhionable apparel. At a comedy, he was purpoſely placed full in James's eye, and immediately engaged the attention, and, in the ſame inſtant, the affections of that monarch. Aſhamed of his ſudden attachment, the king endeavoured, but in vain, to conceal the partiality which he felt for the handſome ſtranger; and employed all his profound politics to fix him in his ſervice, without ſeeming to deſire it. He declared his reſolution not to confer any office on him, unleſs entreated by the queen; and he pretended, that it ſhould only be in compliance to her choice, he would agree to admit him near his perſon. The queen was immediately applied to; but ſhe, well knowing the extreme to which the king carried theſe attachments, refuſed, at firſt, to lend her countenance to this new paſſion. It was not till entreated by Abbot archbiſhop of Canterbury, a decent prelate, and one much prejudiced againſt Somerſet, that ſhe would condeſcend to oblige her huſband, by aſking this favour of him. And the king, thinking now that all appearances were fully ſaved, no longer conſtrained his affection, but immediately beſtowed the office of cup-bearer on young Villiers. Had James's paſſion been governed by common rules of prudence, this office would have attached Villiers to his perſon, and might well have contented one of his age and family; nor would any one, who was not cynically auſtere, have much cenſured the ſingularity of the king's taſte in amuſement. But ſuch advancement was far inferior to the fortune which he intended for his favourite. And thus the fond prince, while he meant to play the tutor to his favourite, and to train him up in the rules of prudence and politics, took an infallible method, by loading him with premature and exorbitant honours, to render him, for ever, raſh, precipitant, and inſolent." Vol. VI. pp. 14. 18.

[9] Sir Henry Wotton.

[10] Clarendon, p. 9.

[11] Sir Henry Wotton.

In 1620, the marquis of Buckingham married Catharine only daughter of Francis Manners earl of Rutland[14], the richeſt heireſs in the kingdom; and ſoon after that event, is thus characterized by an intelligent contemporary: "1620-21, Monday, Jan. 8, in the afternoon, I went to the Tilt-yard, over againſt Whitehall, whence fowre couples rann to ſhew the beforementioned French embaſſadour Cadnet, and divers French lordes that came with him, that martial paſtime. Prince Charles himſelf rann firſt, with Richard lorde Buckhurſt earl of Dorſet, and brake their ſtaves verie ſucceſſefully. The next couple that rann were the beloved marqueſſe of Buckingham, and Philip lorde Herbert earle of Montgomerie, younger brother to William Herbert earle of Pembroke; but had verie badd ſucceſſe in all the courſes they made. Marqueſſe Hamiltone, a Scottiſhman, and the king's near kinſman, with ſir Robert Rich earle of Warwicke, performed their courſe almoſt as gallantlie as the prince and earle of Dorſet; but the laſt couple did worſt of all, not breaking a ſtaffe. After this moſt of the tilters, excepting the prince, went upp to the French lordes in a large upper roome of the howſe ſtanding at the lower end of the Tilt Yard; and I crowding in after them, and ſeeing the marqueſſe of Buckingham diſcourſing with two or three French monſieurs, I joined to them, and moſt earneſtlie viewed him for about halfe an houres ſpace at the leaſt; which I had the opportunitie the more eaſilie to accompliſh, becauſe hee ſtood all that time he talked bare-headed. I ſaw everie thing in him full of delicacie and handſome features; yea his hands and face ſeemed to mee eſpecialie effeminate and curious. It is poſſible hee ſeemed the moore accompliſht, becauſe the French monſieurs that had inveſted him weere verie ſwarthie hard-favoured men. That he was afterwards an inſtrument of much miſchiefe, both at home and abroad, is ſoe evident upon recorde, as noe man can denie; yet this I doe ſuppoſe proceeded rather from ſome jeſuited incendiaries about him than from his owne nature, which his verie countenance promiſed to be affable and gentle[15]."

In 1623, he perſuaded Charles prince of Wales to make a journey into Spain, to fetch home his miſtreſs the Infanta; by repreſenting to him how gallant and brave a thing it would be, and how ſoon it would put an end to thoſe formalities, which, though all ſubſtantial matters were already agreed upon, might yet retard her voyage into England many months. The king was vehemently againſt this affair, and the event ſhewed that he had ſufficient reaſon; but the ſolicitations of the prince and the impetuoſity of the marquis prevailed. "The Prince and Buckingham, with their two attendants, and ſir Richard Graham, maſter of the horſe to Buckingham, paſſed diſguiſed and undiſcovered through France; and they even ventured into a court-ball at Paris, where Charles ſaw the princeſs Henrietta, whom he afterwards eſpouſed, and who was at that time in the bloom of youth and beauty. In eleven days after their departure from London, they arrived at Madrid; and ſurprized every body by a ſtep ſo little uſual among great princes. The Spaniſh monarch immediately paid Charles a viſit, expreſſed the utmoſt gratitude for the confidence repoſed in him, and made warm proteſtations of a correſpondent confidence and friendſhip. By the moſt ſtudied civilities, he ſhowed the reſpect which he bore his royal gueſt[16]." It is almoſt ſuperfluous to add, that the match was ſoon broken off. The marquis, however, was made duke of Buckingham and earl of Coventry in his abſence (May 18, 1623); "yet it is certain," ſays lord Clarendon, "that the king was never well pleaſed with the duke after this journey into Spain; which was infinitely againſt his will, and contrived wholly by the duke out of envy, that the earl of Briſtol ſhould have the ſole management of ſo great an affair; and many were of opinion that king James, before his death, grew weary of this favourite; and that, if he had lived, he would have deprived him at leaſt of his large and unlimited power; but there appeared no evidence that the king's affection towards him was really leſſened[1]." "Ever ſince the fall of Somerſet," ſays Hume, "Buckingham had governed, with an uncontrouled ſway, both the court and nation; and, could James's eyes have been opened, he had now full opportunity of obſerving how unfit his favourite was for the high ſtation to which he was raiſed. Some accompliſhments of a courtier he poſſeſſed: of every talent of a miniſter he was utterly devoid. Headlong in his paſſions, and incapable equally of prudence and of diſſimulation: ſincere from violence rather than candour; expenſive from profuſion more than generoſity: a warm friend, a furious enemy; but without any choice or diſcernment in either: with theſe qualities he had early and quickly mounted to the higheſt rank; and partook at once of the inſolence which attends a fortune newly acquired, and the impetuoſity which belongs to perſons born in high ſtations, and unacquainted with oppoſition. Among thoſe who had experienced the arrogance of this overgrown favourite, the prince of Wales himſelf had not been entirely ſpared; and a great coldneſs, if not an enmity, had, for that reaſon, taken place between them[2]." The prince ſucceeding to the throne March 27, 1625; the duke of Buckingham was appointed lord high-ſteward for the king's coronation; and continued in the ſame degree of favour at the leaſt with the ſon, which he had enjoyed ſo many years under the father. This was matter of great diſappointment to many, who, knowing the great jealouſy and indignation which the prince had heretofore conceived againſt the duke for having been once very near ſtriking him, expected that he would now remember that inſolence, of which he then ſo often complained. But the very contrary to this fell out: the new king, from the death of the old, even to the death of the duke himſelf, diſcovered the moſt entire confidence in, and even friendſhip to him, that ever king had ſhewed to any ſubject. All preferments in church and ſtate were given by him; all his kindred and friends promoted to the degree in honour, or riches, or offices, that he thought fit; and all his enemies and enviers diſcountenanced, as he appointed. He became, however, every day more odious, by the ſymptoms which appeared both of his want of temper and prudence, and of the uncontrouled aſcendant which he had acquired over his maſter. Two violent attacks he was obliged this ſeſſion to ſuſtain; one from the earl of Briſtol, another from the Houſe of Commons. The earl of Briſtol, having been accuſed of high-treaſon, recriminated by accuſing Buckingham; and, from the original document which remains, the great imprudence of the duke evidently appears, and the ſway of his ungovernable paſſions; but it would be difficult to collect thence any action which in the eye of the law could be deemed a crime; much leſs could ſubject him to the penalty of high treaſon. The impeachment of the Commons was ſtill leſs dangerous to the duke. They accuſed him of having united many offices in his perſon; of having bought two of them; of neglecting to guard the ſeas, inſomuch that many merchant-ſhips had fallen into the hands of the enemy; of delivering ſhips to the French king, in order to ſerve againſt the Hugonots; of being employed in the ſale of honours and offices; of accepting extenſive grants from the crown; of procuring many titles of honour for his kindred; of adminiſtering phyſic to the late king without acquainting his phyſicians. All theſe articles appear, from comparing the accuſation and reply, to be either frivolous or falſe, or both. The only charge, which could be regarded as important, was, that he had extorted a ſum of £10,000. from the Eaſt India company, and that he had confiſcated ſome goods belonging to French merchants on pretence of their being the property of Spaniſh. The impeachment never came to a full determination; ſo that it is difficult for us to give a deciſive opinion with regard to theſe articles: but it muſt be confeſſed, that the duke's anſwer in theſe particulars, as in all the reſt, is ſo clear and ſatisfactory, that it is impoſſible to refuſe our aſſent to it. His faults and blemiſhes were in many reſpects very great; but rapacity and avarice were vices with which he was entirely unacquainted[3].

---

[1] Ruſhworth, Collections, p. 461. [2] Sir Henry Wotton. [3] Camden's Annals of king James.
[4] Pat. 14 Jac. I. n. 14. [5] Ibid. n. 23. [6] Camden's Annals. [7] Ibid.
[8] Pat. 14 Jac. I. n. 2. Camden's Annals. [9] Pat. 15 Jac. I. n. 11. [10] Camden's Annals.
[11] Pat. 16 Jac. I. n. 17. [12] Life, &c. by ſir H. Wotton. [13] Clarendon, p. 10.
[14] Some remarkable particulars concerning this marriage have been already ſtated in vol. II. p. 418.
[15] Bibl. Top. Brit. N° XV. p. 17; from the MS Journal of Sir Simonds D'Ewes. [16] Hume, p. 76.

"The earl of Suffolk, chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, dying about this time, Buckingham, though under impeachment, was yet, by means of court-intereſt, choſen in his place, on his royal maſter's expreſs recommendation, as appears by the two following letters from the king and the chancellor[4].

1. "Truſtie and welbeloved, wee greete yow well, &c. Wheras, upon our pleaſure intimated unto yow by the biſhope of Durham for the choyce of your chancellor, yow have, with ſuch duty as wee expected, highly ſatisfied us in your election; wee cannot, of our owne princely nature (who are much poſſeſt with this teſtimony of your redy and loyall affection), forbere to lett yow know how much yow are therein made partakers of our royall approbation: and wee ſhall ever conceave that an honour done to a perſon wee favour is out of royall reſpect had unto our ſelfe. And as wee ſhall ever repute Buckingham worthie of this your election, ſoe ſhall yow finde the frute of it; for, wee, that have founde him a faithfull ſervante to our deere Father of bleſſed memory and ourſelves, can beſt undertake that he will prove ſuch a one unto yow, and ſhall aſſiſt him with a gratious willingnes in any thinge that may concerne the good of your Univerſitye in general, or the particular merrits of any ſtudent therin."

2. "Mr. Vice-chancellor, and Gentlemen, the Senate of the Univerſity of Cambridge!—There is noe one thinge that concernes me in this life I hould more deere than the opinion of learned and honeſt men, amonge which number as yow have ever held the firſt ranke in the eſtimation of the Commonwealth and fame of the Chriſtian worlde, ſoe, in conferinge this honour of your Chancellorſhippe upon mee, I muſt confeſſe yow have ſatisfied an ambition of myne owne (which I hope will never forſake mee); which is, to bee well thought of by men that deſerve well, and men of your profeſſion: yett I cannot attribute this honour to any deſertes of myne, but to a reſpect yow beare to the ſacred memory of my dead Maſter, the Kinge of Schollers, who lov'd yow, and honour'd yow often with his preſence; and to my gratious Maſter now livinge, who inheritts, with his bleſſed father's virtues, the affection hee bore your Univerſitie. I beſeech yow, as yow have now made choyce; with ſoe many ſound and noble circumſtances (for the manner is as much to mee as the matter), ſoe aſſure your feloes yow have caſt your voyces upon your ſervant who is apprehenſive of the time yow have ſhewne your affection in, as of the honour yow have given him. And I earneſtly requeſt yow all, that yow would be pleaſed not to judge mee comparatively with the ſuckceſſe yow have had in your former choyce of Chancellors, who as they knew better (perchance by advantage of education in your Univerſitie) how to valew the deſerts of men of your qualities and degrees, ſoe could they not be more willinge to cherriſh them than myſelfe, who will make amends for want of ſchollerſhippe in my love to the profeſſors of it, and to the ſorce from whence it comes; havinge now firſt cauſe to employ my uttmoſt endeavours, with what favour I may from a royal Maſter, to the maynteyninge of the charters, privileges, and immunities of your Univerſitie in generall, or the advancinge of the particular merrittes of any ſtudent therin. And ſince I am ſoe farr ingaged to yow, I muſt preſume upon an other curteſye, which is, that yow would bee pleaſed to ſupporte mee with your advice, and ſuggeſt a way unto mee (as I myſelfe likewiſe ſhall not fayle to thinke upon ſome meanes) how yow may make poſte-

---

[1] Clarendon, vol. I. p. 10, 11.

[2] Hume, p. 71.

[3] Clarendon, p. 25.

[4] Communicated by the earl of Harborough, from a Common-place-book of Colonel Walter Slingſby (of whom ſee ſome curious particulars in Gent. Mag. vol. LXIV. pp. 119. 196.) now in his lordſhip's poſſeſſion.

ritye remember yow had a thankfull Chancellor[1], and one that both really loves yow and your Univerſitye, with a reſolution, written in an honeſt harte, by him that wants much to expreſſe his affection, who will ever live your faithfull frende and humble ſervant, GEORGE BUCKINGHAM.

Whitehall, June the 7th, 1626."

A letter addreſſed by the duke of Buckingham to the Vice-chancellor, dated "York-houſe[2], 7 Aug. 1626," very ſtrongly evincing "his reſpect for the Univerſity and their privileges," is elſewhere printed[3].

In 1627, the duke experienced a new proof of royal favour; for, his ſon James having died an infant, and having at that time no other child but the lady Mary Villiers[4], he obtained, on the 31ſt of Auguſt, by letters patent dated at Cambury, a creation for this infant, then ſtyled his "ſole daughter and heir," of the title of dutcheſs of Buckingham, immediately after the death of her father, in caſe he ſhould die without iſſue male[5]; and the dukedom was entailed upon her heirs for ever, with all privileges belonging unto a duke, and the fee of £40. a year.

But, whatever intereſt and affection the duke might have in the ſovereign, he had now none with the parliament and people. The parliament which had ſo raſhly advanced the war with Spain upon the breaking of the match with the Infanta[6], and ſo paſſionately adhered to his perſon, was now no more; and the affection and confidence, which the major part had in and for the duke, were all changed now into prejudice and animoſity againſt him. All the actions of his life were ſurveyed, and malicious gloſſes were made upon all he had ſaid, and all he had done; votes and remonſtrances paſſed againſt him, as an enemy of the publick; and his ill-management was made the ground of a refuſal to give the king a ſupply. This kind of treatment was ſo ill ſuited to the duke's great ſpirit, that, inſtead of breaking it, it wrought contrary effects; and he ſhewed the utmoſt indignation upon finding that they, who flattered him moſt before, mentioned him now with the greateſt bitterneſs and acrimony; and that the ſame men, who had called him "our ſaviour" for bringing the prince ſafe out of Spain, called him now "corrupter of the king, and betrayer of the liberties of the people," without imputing to him the leaſt crime committed ſince the time of that exalted adulation. This indignation ſo tranſported the duke, that he ventured to manifeſt a greater contempt of them than he ſhould have done; for, he cauſed this and the next parliament to be quickly diſſolved; and, upon every diſſolution, had ſuch as had given any offence impriſoned or diſgraced. He cauſed new projects to be every day ſet on foot for raiſing money; and, in ſhort, ſaid and did every thing with paſſion and violence. In this fatal conjuncture, and while the war with Spain was yet kept up, a new war was precipitately declared againſt France; for which no reaſonable cauſe could ever be aſſigned. It has been ſaid that the king was hurried into this war purely from a private motive of reſentment in the duke of Buckingham, who, at the time when Charles married by proxy the princeſs Henrietta, had been diſpatched into France, in order to grace the nuptials, and conduct the new queen into England. The eyes of the whole French court were directed by curioſity towards that man who had enjoyed the unlimited favour of two ſucceſſive monarchs, and who, from a private ſtation, had mounted, in the earlieſt youth, to the abſolute government of three kingdoms. The extreme beauty of his perſon, the gracefulneſs of his air, the ſplendour of his equipage, his fine taſte in dreſs, feſtivals, and carouſals, correſponded to the prepoſſeſſions entertained in his favour: the affability of his behaviour, the gaiety of his manner, the magnificence of his expence, increaſed ſtill farther the general admiration which was paid him. All buſineſs being already concerted, the time was entirely ſpent in mirth and entertainments; and, during thoſe ſplendid ſcenes, among that gay people, the duke found himſelf in a ſituation where he was perfectly qualified to excel[7]. But his great ſucceſs at Paris proved as fatal as his former failure at Madrid[8]. Encouraged by the ſmiles of the court, he dared to carry his ambitious addreſſes to the queen herſelf; and he failed not to make impreſſion on a heart not undiſpoſed to the tender paſſions. That attachment, at leaſt, of the mind, which appears ſo delicious, and is ſo dangerous, ſeems to have been encouraged by the princeſs; and the duke preſumed ſo far on her good graces, that, after his departure, he ſecretly returned upon ſome pretence, and, paying a viſit to the queen, was diſmiſſed with a reproof, which favoured more of kindneſs than of anger[9]. Information of this correſpondence was ſoon carried to Richelieu. The vigilance of that miniſter was here farther rouzed by jealouſy. He too, either from vanity or politics, had ventured to pay his addreſſes to the queen. But a prieſt, paſt middle age, of a ſevere character, and occupied in the moſt extenſive plans of ambition or vengeance, was but an unequal match in that conteſt, for a young courtier, entirely diſpoſed to gaiety and gallantry. The cardinal's diſappointment ſtrongly inclined him to counter-work the amorous projects of his rival. When the duke was making preparations for a new embaſſy to Paris, a meſſage was ſent him from Louis, that he muſt not think of ſuch a journey. In a romantic paſſion he ſwore, 'that he would ſee the queen, in ſpite of all the power of France;' and, from that moment, he was determined to engage England in a war with that kingdom[10]. He firſt took advantage of ſome quarrels, excited by the queen of England's attendants; and he perſuaded Charles to diſmiſs, at once, all her French ſervants, contrary to the marriage-treaty[11]. He encouraged the Engliſh ſhips of war and privateers to ſeize veſſels belonging to French merchants; and theſe he forthwith condemned as prizes by a ſentence of the court of admiralty. But, finding that all theſe injuries produced only remonſtrances and embaſſies, or at moſt repriſals, on the part of France; he reſolved to ſecond the intrigues of the duke of Soubize, and to undertake at once a military expedition againſt that nation.

---

[1] The bedle-ſtaves, or maces, ſtill in uſe, were a preſent from the duke; who had forgotten, or forgiven, an offence he had taken a few years before at a play which had been acted by the ſcholars of Ben'et College. (Maſters, p. 137.) It may not be improper here to mention, that Villiers, when ſent with the earl of Holland to the States, to negotiate the reſtoration of the Palatinate, purchaſed a curious collection of Arabic MSS. collected by Erpenius, a famous linguiſt, which he deſigned for the Univerſity; and which the dutcheſs, after his death, preſented accordingly. For theſe the duke had deſigned to erect a repoſitory, after the Oxford model, to be finiſhed at his own expence; and to have enriched the ſame with other choice collations from all parts, if he had not ſo ſuddenly been cut off. Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, p. 223.

[2] York-houſe in the Strand came into the duke of Buckingham's poſſeſſion; who added mnch to the old edifice, and would have had it called Buckingham-houſe; which name is engraven on the water-gate in great letters. Howell's London, p. 349.

[3] Maſters's Hiſtory of Ben'et College, Appendix, p. 67.

[4] This lady was twice married, firſt to Charles lord Herbert, who died at Florence in 1635, ſ. p.; and afterwards to James duke of Richmond and Lenox, who died March 30, 1655; and by whom ſhe had one ſon, Eſme, who ſucceeded to his father's titles, but died in France at ten years of age; and one daughter Mary, married to Richard earl of Arran.

[5] Pat. 3 Car. I. p. 6.

[6] There is ſtill a tradition in Spain, that the duke of Buckingham, who had ever a violent propenſity to intrigue, was very particular in his addreſſes to the counteſs of Olivares, who made an ample diſcovery of his gallantry to her huſband. Upon which it was concerted betwixt them, that the counteſs ſhould make the duke an aſſignation, and ſubſtitute a girl who had been long infected with an infamous diſtemper, in her place. The aſſignation was accordingly made, and the effect fully anſwered their expectation. This ſtory, ſuppoſing it a fact, which lord Clarendon will not allow, accounts for the duke's avowing the moſt determined enmity againſt Olivares at parting from him; and is ſimilar to his conduct in France, where he had the temerity to be as particular in his addreſſes to Anne of Auſtria, queen of Lewis XIII. Arthur Wilſon plainly hints at this piece of ſecret hiſtory, which paſſed current in his time. See Wilſon's Life of James I. in Kennet's "Complete Hiſtory," vol. II. p. 773. Granger, vol. I. p. 326.

[7] Clarendon, vol. I. p. 38.

[8] Mr. Le Neve ſhewed the Society of Antiquaries, in 1721, a copy of the releaſe from the Prince to ſir Francis Cottingham for £50,027, the expences of his journey into Spain. Minutes.

[9] Memoires de Mad. de Motteville.

[10] Hume, p. 171; Clarendon, p. 38.

[11] Ruſhworth, vol. I. p. 423, 424.

A MS. in the Britiſh Muſeum, written in 1634, and ſuperſcribed "I have heard this from a knowing man," thus illuſtrates this aſſertion:

"At the time of his being in France about the king's marriage, and to bring over the preſent queen, he fell into a great affection, or pretence of it, towards the queen regent, and was (as it was conceived) accepted in his pretences; but the queen was ſo narrowly looked to, that he could get no opportunity or convenience of acceſs; whereupon he grew more paſſionate and loud in his chace, which (as was then imagined) was diſcovered and diſdained by the French king. After he had taken his leave, and the whole train was attending the princeſs (now queen of England) to the ſhips, he pretended ſome buſineſs; and, having by his ſcouts, Mr. Montagu and Mr. Jarmin, held private correſpondence with the queen and her miniſters, poſted a day's journey to meet her, but without ſucceſs; and this ſubtle and violent proſecution made the deſign notorious, and ſo his perſon unacceptable to the king of France and that nation. Upon receiving the princeſs (now queen) into his ſhip, he kiſſed her lips, and "bade her welcome into his juriſdiction, for he was Admiral;" yet his enemies thought this boldly done, and, no queſtion, would have objected it againſt him, if he had ever fallen in grace. His affection and purpoſe upon the French queen continued ſtill; and it was conceived the intercourſe was with good liking prepared on both ſides; and, that he might now again ſtand capable of ſuch advantages, he prevailed with the king of England to be ſent ambaſſador to that king. The king of France abſolutely diſliked it, and, as much as in him lay, oppoſed his coming thither; but, when he ſaw no remedy, was contented. But the duke, by his ſecret intelligence, found another entertainment provided for him than he expected; for, no doubt, if he had gone on with that deſign of the embaſſy, he had been then murdered; and ſo reſolved to give over that expedition, that, ſince he might not enjoy her peaceably, he would ſee her with an army. And this occaſion was conceived by many the only motive to the French war at Rhee; and yet, happily, his malice was ſoon after allayed[1]." Whatever was the cauſe, the fleet, which had been deſigned to have ſurprized Calais, was no ſooner returned without ſucceſs, and with much damage, than it was repaired, and the army reinforced for the invaſion of France[2]. Here the duke was general himſelf, and made that unfortunate deſcent upon the Iſle of Rhee, in which, after having gained ſome advantages, he was under the neceſſity of ſending for reinforcements. For theſe he waited with the utmoſt ſolicitude and anxiety, though he concealed the true ſtate of his mind under chearful looks and encouraging language, from all but Dr. Maſon, his ſecretary, who lay in a pallet-bed near him in the ſame room. To this gentleman, at the dead of night, when he was withdrawn from every other eye and ear, he threw off the diſguiſe which he wore at other times with ſo much conſtraint, and broke out into the moſt bitter and paſſionate exclamations, declaring "that his mind never before ſuffered equal perturbations, and that the thoughts of ill offices done him to the king in his abſence drove him almoſt to diſtraction." Such, at this juncture, was the condition of a man univerſally the object of envy, to whoſe ſtate, thoſe who were greateſt aſpired with ambition, and the reſt looked up with timid malignity and involuntary admiration. The king indeed was preparing to ſend the ſuccours required under the command of the earl of Holland; but, as he directed the men for this ſervice to be raiſed by a preſs, and to rendezvous at Plymouth, they were neceſſarily retarded till they could be of no uſe. It is beyond our purpoſe to detail further the particulars of this unfortunate expedition; from which, Nov. 8, 1627, after ſeveral unproſperous attempts, the duke was compelled to make "a miſerable retreat, in which the flower of the army was loſt[3]; and in which his troops were thrown into confuſion by the enemy, who urged on and deſtroyed thoſe in the rear without reſiſtance, thoſe before being driven in crowds on each other; ſome miſerably trampled to death under foot, others forced into the ſalt-pits and drowned, and great numbers periſhed in the river, being puſhed from the bridge by the multitude that ruſhed from the defile with an impetuoſity not to be reſiſted. The dejected few that ſurvived this dreadful ſlaughter got on board the fleet November 9; and Buckingham, promiſing the Rochellers to come to their relief, ſet ſail for England, and met the earl of Holland juſt as he was coming out of Plymouth with a fleet of ſupply. In this fatal expedition, ſays Clarendon, "there was ſcarce a noble family in the kingdom that did not loſe a ſon, a brother, or near kinſman, without ſuch circumſtances as are the uſual conſolations and recompences of ſuch loſſes. The retreat was a rout, in which the French had their revenge by the diſorder and confuſion of the Engliſh themſelves, in which great numbers of noble and ignoble were crowded to death or drowned almoſt without the help of an enemy. On his return to Plymouth, when the total loſs he had ſuſtained was known, and the ſhameful neglect of ſecuring a retreat, which coſt the lives of ſeveral thouſands who might otherwiſe have returned with him, the publick was exaſperated beyond all patience; and juſt after he had ſet out on horſe-back from Plymouth, he met a ſpecial meſſenger, who had been diſpatched with a letter by lord Goring, adviſing him "not to come the uſual road to London; for that he had credible intelligence of a plot againſt his life, which was to be put in execution by aſſaſſinating him in his way to London." The duke read the letter without any apparent emotion; and, putting it coolly into his pocket, rode on with his company, who were not above eight in number, nor otherwiſe provided for defence than by ſuch ſwords as they uſually wore. When he had proceeded about three miles farther, ſtill keeping the high road, an old woman was brought to his horſe ſide, who, having earneſtly enquired whether the duke was of the company, and being told that he was, was very importunate to be brought to the ſpeech of him, alledging that ſhe had ſomething to communicate of great moment. This being told to the duke by thoſe who brought the woman to him, he ordered them to withdraw, and leave her alone with him. She then told him, "that, in the very next town through which he was to paſs, and which was now within ſight, ſhe had heard a band of deſperate men ſolemnly vow his death;" and would have directed him to go about by a ſurer way. This caſual intelligence, following ſo ſoon upon lord Goring's letter, induced him to communicate both that and the account given him by the woman to his company; who were unanimouſly of opinion that he ſhould take her counſel, and quit the main road for the way that ſhe ſhould direct. The duke, however, diſſented from their opinion: he ſaid, "that, if he ſhould but once encourage his enemies by ſhewing that he was afraid, he would never after be free from danger, as their attempts would increaſe with their hopes." It is alſo probable that he might have ſome ſuſpicion of the woman's ſincerity, and imagine that poſſibly ſhe might be employed by thoſe who were to aſſaſſinate him, to induce him to take a bye-road, where they might execute their purpoſe with greater convenience and ſecurity. But, however this be, he determined to proceed without changing his route; upon which the young lord Fielding, his nephew, who was one of the ſmall party that was about him, earneſtly requeſted that he would at leaſt honour him with his coat and blue ribbon for the reſt of the journey, pleading "that his uncle's life, in which the hope of his whole family centered, was of all things under heaven the moſt precious to him;" and urging, "that he could ſo muffle himſelf in his cloak and hood, as the duke's manner was when he rode in cold weather, that no man ſhould be able to diſcover the deceit." An inſtance of the moſt heroic and generous friendſhip, of the kindeſt concern for others, and the moſt noble ſacrifice of life to ſocial virtue, ſcarcely to be paralleled, but in the fabulous tales of antiquity, or the more ſplendid fictions of romance. The duke, who, with all his faults, had the ſtrong ſenſibility of a glowing mind, and a ſoldier's high notions of generoſity and honour, caught the youth in his arms in a tranſport of tenderneſs and admiration, and, kiſſing him with tears of gratitude and joy in his eyes, declared "that he would ſooner periſh, than riſque a life ſo precious as that which was offered in his defence." Having therefore liberally rewarded the poor woman, and given directions to his company how they ſhould behave if an encounter ſhould happen, he proceeded on his journey with great ſeeming compoſure of mind. But he had no ſooner entered the town, than a ſoldier ſeized his horſe by the bridle in ſuch a manner that the duke was in doubt whether he was drunk, or whether his deſign was only rudely to beg. However, a gentleman of his train, who was at ſome diſtance behind him, ſeeing a man rudely ſeize the duke's bridle, immediately rode up, and ruſhed between them. The duke, being thus diſengaged, rode forward with his company, and haſtily paſſed the town; nor was any ſtep taken to ſecure the man either for puniſhment or examination, the duke ſtill thinking it prudent to diſſemble his apprehenſions of danger, if any ſuch he had. When he came to court, he was ſilently accuſed, by every eye that ſaw him, of the death of ſome relation or friend, who had fallen a ſacrifice to his ill conduct. By the publick he was cenſured with the bittereſt invective and loudeſt clamour. In his own defence he alledged, that what he did at Rhee was generally by a council of war, and, if orders were given and not obſerved, it was not his fault; that the miſcarriage ſhould rather be imputed to the earl of Holland than to him; for, if the ſupplies he was to have brought had come as ſoon as they ſhould have done, he had ſo blocked up the harbour and citadel by ſea and land, that it muſt have been reduced by famine. The earl of Holland alledged, "that the delay imputed to him was the fault of others; for that, when he was ready to have gone on board the fleet at Plymouth, the ſhips with proviſion were not come out of Chatham; that, when the proviſions were ſhipped, he could not get the ſhips to a rendezvous; and that when they did come to a rendezvous, the winds proved contrary." The murmurs of the people, however, were not ſtilled by theſe endeavours to ſhift the cauſe of their ſufferings from one perſon to another. In the fleet and armies there were mutinies, of which the pretence was want of pay, but the real cauſe a deteſtation of the ſervice, and the authority of the duke. In the counties throughout the whole kingdom the people were ſo incenſed, that they refuſed to ſuffer ſoldiers to be billeted upon them. The preſſing new men for the army was oppoſed by force, which produced a reſort to martial law, by which many were executed; and this again increaſed the aſperity of the people to ſuch a degree, that every man's countenance, whether rich or poor, expreſſed confuſion, trouble, and reſentment. In this general commotion it was thought neceſſary to call a parliament; and almoſt the firſt ſtep taken in that aſſembly was, to declare the duke the cauſe of all the public miſeries, and move for a declaration againſt him; of which the king being informed, immediately adjourned the houſe. The houſe, however, reſumed the ſubject when it was next aſſembled; and it was reſolved, upon the queſtion, that the exceſſive power of the duke was the cauſe of all the evils and dangers to the king and kingdom. A remonſtrance was then drawn up and preſented againſt him; upon which the king ſent a meſſage to put an end to the ſeſſion at a ſhort day, and in the mean time cauſed an order to be made in the ſtar-chamber, with reſpect to the complaints before exhibited againſt him, "that, his majeſty knowing them to be falſe, they ſhould, together with the duke's anſwers, be taken off the file, that no memory might remain upon record againſt him which might tend to his diſgrace."

---

[1] Harl. MS. 7056. N° 4.

[2] Rapin's Hiſtory of England, ad ann. 1627.

[3] Clarendon, p. 27.

In the mean time the Rochellers ſent deputies to his majeſty, repreſenting their diſtreſſed condition; the French troops being gathering round them, totally to block them up, and intending to make a barricade croſs the channel, leaving only a narrow paſſage for the flux and reflux of the ſea, which muſt inevitably be their ruin, if they did not ſpeedily receive the ſuccour which had been promiſed. In conſequence of this repreſentation and requeſt, a fleet was ſent to Rochelle under the command of the earl of Denbigh; which, however, returned without either engaging the French fleet that lay before the town, or relieving the beſieged. It is ſuggeſted in the MS. already cited, "that the duke of Buckingham never had any purpoſe of relieving Rochelle; for, when he ſent the earl of Denbigh (his brother-in-law) with a brave fleet to that ſervice, there was little difficulty of the attempt: but there were private inſtructions that prevailed; for, the fleet never offered to come near the Palliſadoe; and Captain Parker was diſcountenanced and diſgraced, for venturing too often with his ſhip, and profeſſing that the matter was very feaſible [1]." The diſtreſs of the beſieged during this delay increaſed every week, and became deplorable almoſt beyond imagination to conceive. They were ſuſtained under their ſufferings both by hope and fear; they feared that the ſeverities they ſhould undergo from the French, if they ſhould ſurrender, would be greater than they endured from the ſiege; and they hoped that England would fulfil the promiſe on which they relied, and at length ſend them effectual relief. They had long lived upon the fleſh of horſes, dogs, and cats, and even upon raw hides and leather. The king, having been acquainted with their condition, and the inefficacy of Denbigh's fleet, towards the end of Auguſt fitted out another; which being rendezvouſed at Portſmouth, and ready to receive a conſiderable number of land-forces on-board, the duke, who was appointed to command the expedition, went down thither, in order to embark when every thing ſhould be ready for the voyage. "When the fleet lay ready at Portſmouth, however, and 'twas every day expected it ſhould hoiſt ſail, 'tis thought the duke never had any purpoſe to go on with that expedition; and ſome few hours before his death (the ſame morning) he ſent his brother the earl of Angleſey to the king (being at Southwick, ſome five or ſix miles off), to tell him that Rochelle was certainly relieved, and that himſelf would be preſently with him, and ſhew him letters of intelligence; for, ſuch letters he had contrived. Whether this was out of deſign to have the town left, or out of deſpair of the attempt, is not known; but, without doubt, he never intended any thing leſs than the relief of the poor town [2]."

"Buckingham had been engaged in converſation with Soubize and other French gentlemen; and a difference of ſentiments having ariſen, the diſpute, though conducted with temper and decency, had produced ſome of thoſe vehement geſticulations and lively exertions of voice, in which that nation, more than the Engliſh, are apt to indulge themſelves. The converſation being finiſhed, the duke drew towards the door; and in that paſſage, turning himſelf to ſpeak to ſir Thomas Fryar, a colonel in the army, he was, on the ſudden, over ſir Thomas's ſhoulder, ſtruck upon the breaſt with a knife. Without uttering other words than "The villain has killed me;" in the ſame moment, pulling out the knife, he breathed his laſt. No man had ſeen the blow, nor the perſon who gave it; but in the confuſion, every one made his own conjecture; and all agreed, that the murder had been committed by the French gentlemen, whoſe angry tone of voice had been heard, while their words had not been underſtood, by the by-ſtanders. In the hurry of revenge, they had inſtantly been put to death, had they not been ſaved by ſome of more temper and judgement, who, though they had the ſame opinion of their guilt, thought proper to reſerve them for a judicial trial and examination [3]."

Of this aſtoniſhing event the following circumſtantial and curious account is given by ſir Simonds D'Ewes in a manuſcript life of himſelf[1].

---

[1] Harl. MS. 7056.

[2] Ibid.

[3] Hume, vol. VI. p. 200.

“ The reſt of Julie [1628] was ſpent in viſits, diſcourſes, letter-writing, and ſuch like, as was the beginning of Auguſt whollie; and divers dayes after during the ſame moneth: yet I devoted manye dayes and houres of retirement to my ſearches for my formerlie intended worke touching Great Brittaines ſtrength and weakneſs: gathering notes and obſervation eſpeciallie for it, out of Meteranus' Latine Hiſtorie, touching the Netherlandes or the Seventeene Provinces. I was now again the rather encouraged to proceede with it, becauſe I hoped that the Divine Providence would firmlie unite the hearts of prince and people in England now at laſt, after the death of the duke of Buckingham, who was generallie conceived to bee the maine cauſe of the ſale of that multitude of Engliſh, Scottiſh, and Iriſh hereditarie honours, of the averſion of the hearts betweene the king and his ſubjects, and of all other miſcheifes in church and commonwealth: the ſtrange ſtorie of whoſe fatal end I ſhall now relate a little particularlie, in which I ſhall ſett downe the truth as neare as I canne, and heartilie wiſh I were able to ſay anye good of him; whoſe wife, named Katherine, ſole daughter and heire of Francis Manners earle of Rutland, was and ſtill is my wive's kinſwoman, by Frances daughter and one of the coheires of ſir Henry Knyvet, of Charlton, in the countie of Wiltſhire, knight. Of the ſaid duke's riſing, and of manye of his actions during the raigne of king James and king Charles, I have before ſpoken. He was moſt of this month of Auguſt at and neare Portſmouth, preparing a fleete for the releife and victualling of Rochel, which the French had beſeiged both by ſea and land, and had ſoe ſtronglie blocked upp the water-channel before it, as it was verie probable hee could never have relieved it, had hee lived to have gone with the navie himſelfe. Whether he meant ſincerelie in deferring thus long his journeie I know not; but moſt certaine it is, had ſufficient ſtoore of corne onlie been ſent in but ſix or ſeven months before, which tenn ſaile of marchant ſhips might have carried into the towne, that ineſtimable peice had been ſaved from ruine. The duke himſelfe ſeemed confident hee ſhould doe the worke, and therefore made all the haſt hee could to get all things in a readineſs for his departure. Some of his friends had adviſed him how generally hee was hated in England, and how needfull it would bee for his greater ſafetie to weare ſome coate of maile, or ſome other ſecret defenſive armour; which the duke ſlighting, ſaied, “ It needes not; ther are noe Roman ſpirits left.”

“ Auguſt 23, being Saturday[2], the duke having eaten his breakfaſt betweene eight and nine of the clocke in the morning, in one Mr. Maſon's houſe in Portſmouth, hee was then haſting away to the king, who lay at Reſwicke[3], ſome five miles diſtant, to have ſome ſpeedie conference with him. Being come to the further part of the entrie leading out of the parlour into the hall of the howſe, hee had there ſome conference with ſir Thomas Frier, knight, a colonell; and ſtooping downe in taking his leave of him, John Felton, gentleman, having watched his opportunitie, thruſt a long knife with a white halft he had ſecretlie about him, with great ſtrength and violence, into his breaſt under his left papp, cutting the diaphragma and lungs, and piercing the verie heart itſelf. The duke, having received the ſtroake, inſtantlie clapping his right hande on his ſworde hilt, cried out, “ God's wounds, the villaine has killed me!” Some report his laſt wordes otherwiſe, little differing for ſubſtance from theſe: and it might have been wiſhed that his end had not been ſo ſudden, nor his laſt wordes mixed with ſo impious an expreſſion. Hee was attended by manie noblemen and leaders, yet none could ſee or prevent the ſtroake. His dutcheſſe and the counteſſe of Angleſey, the wife of ſir Chriſtopher Villars earle of Angleſey, his younger brother, being in an upper roome, and hearing the noiſe in the hall into which they had carried the duke, ran preſentlie to a gallerie that looked downe into it, and ther beholding the duke's bloud guſh out abundantlie from his breaſt, noſe, and mouth (with which his ſpeech, after thoſe his firſt wordes, had been immediately ſtopped), they brake into pitiful outcries, and raiſed great lamentations. Hee pulled out the knife himſelfe; and, being carried by his ſervants unto the table that ſtood in the ſame hall, having ſtruggled with death neare upon a quarter of a howre, at length hee gave upp the ghoſt aboute ten of the clocke the ſame forenoon, and lay a long time after he was dead upon the hall-table ther. Mr. Felton, that gave him the deadlie wound, was a gentleman of very ancient familie of gentrie in Suffolke; verie valourous, and of a ſtout ſpirit. Hee had been a lieutenante under a captaine in the late unfortunate voiage to the Iſland of Ree, and was before alſoe emploied in the expedition to Cadiz, under ſir Edward Cecil viſcount Wimbledon, in the year 1625. Ther had been an ancient quarrell betweene him and ſir Henrie Hungate, knight, whoſe ſecret luſt hee had diſcovered, and received from him a moſt baſe revenge, being wounded by him in his bedd verie dangerouſlie; ſoe as ſir Henry having afterwardes by ſome meanes pacified him, yet when hee ſaw him recovered, ever feared him, and therefore was, I beleeve, the cheif inſtrument with the duke (in whoſe favour he had a great ſhare) to deprive Mr. Felton once, if not twice, of the captaine's place of that companie over which he commanded as lieutenant[4]; which was due to him by the rules and lawes of the warres, upon the death or remove of the captaine. And this cauſed him to work his revenge on the duke's perſon, ſaied ſome of the duke's friends and followers. But Mr. Felton, even to his death, avowed the contrary; and that the love onlie of the publike good induced him to that act. For, having read the remonſtrance the Houſe of Commons preferred to the king in the late ſeſſion of parliament, by which the duke was branded to bee a capital enemie to church and ſtate, and that ther was noe publicke juſtice to be had againſt him, he had ſtrong inward workings and reſolutions to ſacrifice himſelfe for the ſafeguard of the church and ſtate; yet, knowing the danger he ſhould run into, and fearing it might be a temptation of the devil's, he had conflicted with it for neare upon two months ſpace, and ſought of God deliverance from it by faſting and praier; and when his reſolutions were ſtill the ſame to accompliſh it, hee then tooke the incitation to proceed from God himſelfe, redoubled his courage, and heartilie praied for divine aſſiſtance to finiſh it. That hee had no abettor, counſellor, or aſſiſtant in it, but onlie proceeded in it upon private diſcuſſion and deliberation with himſelfe alone (ſoe as his mother and ſiſters, who were at firſt impriſoned upon ſuſpicion, were afterwards, upon his teſtimonie, and ther own confeſſion, ſett free). And that hee undertooke ſoe dangerous and difficult an enterprize with a ſincere aime of publike good, is moſt probable: becauſe, when hee ſheathed the knife in the duke's breaſt, juſt at the inſtant, "God," ſaied hee, "have mercy on thy ſoule!" which plainlie ſhewed hee had no private aimes of perſonall revenge againſt him, but had a greater care of Buckingham's ſoule than Buckingham himſelf had. Beſides, had his conſcience accuſed him at the preſent, after the fact hee would not have neglected to have eſcaped, which his bittereſt enemies confeſs hee might have done, amidſt the confuſion that followed the blow, when everie man being buſie about the duke, hee paſſed quietlie unmarked and unpurſued out of the ſaied hall wheere he ſlew Buckingham, into the kitchen of the ſaied houſe; and after returning againe into the hall, hee averred firſt himſelf to have been the author of the duke's death, before anie other appeached him for it; and had been ther ſlaine outright by ſome of the duke's followers, had not ſir Dudlie Carlton, baron of Imbercourt, and ſome others, hindred it. Mr. Felton himſelfe alſoe ſuſpecting, as it ſeems, ſome ſuch ſudden ende, had written the cauſe and ground of that his hazardous undertaking in a piece of paper, and faſtened it to his hatband, that, in caſe he had been inſtantlie ſlaine upon the place, it might have teſtified for him that he onlie aimed at the publike good in that action. The writing was as followeth, conſiſting of two ſeveral and divided pieces, with his name ſubſcribed to either of them:

---

[1] The original of which is in the Britiſh Muſeum. Mr. Hearne has printed ſeveral extracts from it in the Appendix to his Hiſtory of King Richard II, vol. II. p. 372; and a ſtill more copious ſelection from it forms the Fifteenth Number of the “ Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica.”

[2] St. Bartholomew's day fell this year on Sunday the 24th of Auguſt.

[3] Southwick (ſays lord Clarendon), the houſe of ſir Daniel Norton. See p. 207.

[4] “ Felton was a man of that ſtout ſpirit, that upon receiving an injury from a gentleman, he cut off a piece of his little finger, and ſent it home with a challenge, to let him know he valued not his whole body, ſo he might obtain his revenge.” Echard, p. 440. b.—He was of a ſilent, gloomy, melancholy diſpoſition, and ſo much reſented the refuſal of what he deemed his right by the cuſtom of war, that he threw up his lieutenancy, quitted the army, and lived ſome time in London in great privacy, to which probably the ſtraightneſs of his circumſtances contributed as much as his natural temper. The knife wherewith he ſtabbed the duke, he acknowledged that he had bought at an obſcure cutler's ſhop on Tower Hill, for 10*d.*; that he fixed the ſheath to the lining of his pocket, to the end he might draw it out with one hand (his other being maimed); and that he haſted to Portſmouth, partly on horſeback, and partly on foot, being indigent of money. He arrived at Portſmouth on Friday, Auguſt 22; and went not out of his room that evening, which he ſpent in preparation for the horrid buſineſs he had undertaken.

"Let no man commend mee for doing it, but rather diſcommend themſelves; for, if God had not taken away their harts for their ſins, hee had not gone ſo long unpuniſhed. JOHN FELTON."

"That man, in my opinion, is cowardlie and baſe, and deſerveth neither the name of a gentleman nor ſouldier, that is unwilling to ſacrifice his life for the honour of God, and the good of his king and country. JOHN FELTON."

And ſo ſtronglie was this perſwaſion fixed in his minde, that hee had removed the enemie of God, the king, and the common-wealth, out of the way, as after his removal from Portſmouth (wheere he was impriſoned immediately upon his taking) to the Tower of London, and that divers divines had dealt with him about the fact, and had in ſome meaſure convinced him that he had ſinned in it, becauſe of the apoſtle Paul's rule, that wee muſt not doe evill that good may come of it; "I confeſs," ſaied hee, "I did ſinne in killing the duke, and I am ſorrie that I killed a moſt wicked impenitent man ſoe ſuddenlie; but I doubt not but that great good ſhall reſult to church and commonwealth by it; and I aſſure myſelfe that God hath pardoned this and all my other ſinnes, in and through the merits and bloud of Jeſus Chriſt my Saviour." The news being carried to the king the ſame morning, I have heard it certainlie reported, that, ſtriking his breaſt with his hand, "Who (ſaid he) can prevent a ſtroake from heaven?" in which ſpeech, whether he alluded to God's decree, or to his ſecret and juſt judgments, I cannot tell [1]. Certainlie the duke of Buckingham had highly provoked God, by his extreme luſt, ambition, pride, gluttonie, and other ſinns; not contenting himſelfe with anie meaſure of honour, till he had out-ſtripped all the antient nobilitie of the kingdom and peeres of England by a dukedome, although his condition had been verie poor and meane but a few yeares before. He was the likeſt to Henry Lorainer, duke of Guize, in the moſt of the later paſſages of his life and death, that poſſiblie could be; onlie in this they differed, that Guize was a prince borne, but Buckingham was but a younger ſonne of an ordinary familie of gentrie, of which the coat-armour was ſoe meane, as either in this age or of late years, without any ground, right, or authoritie that I could ever ſee, they deſerted their own coat-armour, and bare the arms of Weylond, a Suffolke family, being, Argent, on a croſſe Gules, five eſcalops Or [2]. Some Wit, to infamouze the rare confidence of Mr. Felton in that he fledd not after the work was finiſhed, framed the truth of it out of his verie name, in this following anagram:

John Felton,
No'h! flie not.

"I will in this place a little anticipate the time, and end his ſtorie. Being removed from Portſmouth, in September, to the Tower of London, and well lodged and uſed, having the diet accuſtomed to priſoners in that place allowed him; he was at one time there threatened by ſir Edward Sackville, earle of Dorſet, that he ſhould be forced upon the racke to confeſs who were privie with him and conſenting to the duke's death. "I have," ſaied he, "alreadie tolde the truth in that point upon my ſalvation; and if I be further queſtioned by torture, I will accuſe you, and you onlie, my lord of Dorſet, to be of conſpiracie with mee." At laſt he was brought to his triall at the King's-bench barre in Weſtminſter-hall on Thurſday the 27th day of November in the morning; and the knife, all defiled and beſmeared with blood, as it came out of the duke's breaſt, was laied before him in open court. He inſtantly acknowledged himſelfe to be the author, and ſoe received the ſentence of condemnation. The next day he received the ſacrament of the Lordes Supper in the forenoon with great deſire and devotion; and the day following, Nov. 29, Saturday, he was hanged at Tyburne in the morning, where he made a verie pious and Chriſtian end; ſtill affirming to the laſt that he had never ſlaine the duke, but that he aſſured himſelfe therebie to ſave church and ſtate from imminent and unavoidable ruine. His familie was doubtleſs more noble and ancient than the duke of Buckingham's, and his end much bleſſeder than the duke's, whoe was afterwardes interred as obſcurlie at Weſtminſter as Felton ſuffered ignominiouſly; having this miſerie even after death, to be more prodigiouſlie flattered in his epitaph in Weſtminſter church, then he had been by all his ſycophants in his life-time. I have heard ſir Robert Cotton affirme, that perſons of that kinde, of which moſt were younge indiſcreete gentlemen, had ſoe prevailing a power with him, as, contrarie often to thoſe ſafe counſils he had received from wiſe men of great experience, and ſolemn reſolves to put them in practice, he was preſentlie tranſverſed and over-ruled by his flatterers to fall upon new and dangerous reſolves, which at laſt imbarked him into the general hatred of moſt men. What his religion was, I am not able to averre; yet it was obſerved in parliament, that he procured himſelfe to be elected chancellour of the univerſitie of Cambridge by the Arminian partie, or the enemies of God's grace and providence, which till of late yeares have called themſelves Anabaptiſts, being the followers of Michael Servetus, Lælius Socinus, and Sebaſtian Caſtellio, and have been ſo named and written againſt by the orthodox Proteſtant partie for neare foure-ſcore yeares laſt paſt; and were firſt called Arminians after the death of James Arminius, profeſſor of divinitie in Leyden in Holland, about thirtie yeares paſt, who ſtole much of that he wrote out of his great maſter Sebaſtian Caſtellio, or out of the worke of Robert Bellarmine, and other Jeſuits. For his private practice, the duke's devotion was very ſmall; ſo as at the ſacrament of baptiſme, when he was a witneſs with ſome comelie and beautiful women, he hath been obſerved to winke and ſmile on them, when the miniſter came to that paſſage to demand if they forſoke the carnal deſires of the fleſh, ſoe as they would not follow or be led by them. It was reported the duke had ſome prediction [3] or fore-warning given him to beware of this month of Auguſt as fatal to him; of the truth of which I ſay nothing: but this is moſt certaine, that there was made a chronagram out of his name ſome months or weekes at leaſt before his death, which contained this preſent yeare, 1628, verie exactly, and two diſtichs made upon it, imprecating the ſame yeare might be his laſt, which are not unworthie to be inſerted, being as followeth:

---

[1] On this head, ſee lord Clarendon's account, hereafter, in p. 207.

[2] This cenſure from ſir Simonds D'Ewes is undeſervedly beſtowed. See before, p. 189.

[3] Sir Simonds here alludes to the famous ſtory of the apparition, mentioned by lord Clarendon and others. See p. 208.

1 5 500. 5. 10 5.100 1 1000.1
GeorgIVs DVX BVCkInghaMIæ MDCXVVVIII.

Læto jam ſæclo tandem ſol pertulit annum;
Noni non videat quæſumus, Alme, diem.

Thy numerous name with this yeare doth agree,
But twentie-nine heavens grant thou ne'er may'ſt ſee:

The ſenſe of both the diſtichs are the ſame, but the author was a better Engliſh poet then a Latine. One William Harreiſe, of Lincoln's Inne, eſq. ſonne and heire apparent of ſir William Harreiſe, an Eſſex knight, was ſaied to be the author of them, and of this hexaſtich following, of a like imprecatorie nature as the former; which, being read backwards, ſeemes to be a praier for the duke's proſperity, and was doubtleſs made in imitation of thoſe verſes which that learned poetical Scot, Mr. George Buchanan, made touching a pope of his time, which, being vulgarlie known, I omit to mention;

Surripiant vada te lethes, nec vivida virtus
Inſita victuris ſit tua carminibus.
Eripiant precor o curis, te tempora tollant
Turbida, nec fugiat hoc caput exitium.
Convaleas, bone dux, tribuit cui nomina regis
Gratia non virtus, ſors vaga non bona mens.

Mr. Harreiſe hath ſlipped in his poetrie here more than in the former Latine diſtich, were he the author of both. It ſeemes he was ſo intent upon the ſenſe, as he did not exactlie obſerve his quantities; and I chooſe rather to tranſcribe them as I received them, then to add mine owne amendments."—Thus far ſir Simonds D'Ewes. Lord Clarendon ſtates it thus:

"About nine in the morning Felton preſſed, without ſuſpicion, among many ſuitors and dependants who crowded the duke's levee, into a parlour in which the duke was to breakfaſt. This parlour was divided from the hall by a kind of lobby, or entry, at the end of which, next the hall, was a curtain that was raiſed up when any perſon went out or in. The duke was at that time in his chamber, dreſſing himſelf, ſurrounded by perſons of quality, and officers of the fleet and army, among whom were M. de Soubize brother to the duke of Rohan, and other gentlemen of France; and had juſt received letters, in which he was advertiſed that Rochelle had relieved itſelf; and was in haſte to go and acquaint the king with the good news, the court being then at Southwick, the houſe of ſir Daniel Norton, five miles diſtant from Portſmouth. Felton, when he perceived that the duke was about to quit his chamber, withdrew into the lobby; and the duke ſoon after entered the parlour with ſir Thomas Fryer, a colonel in the army, to whom he was ſpeaking. Felton ſuffered them to paſs him; and the duke, juſt as he came to the curtain, ſtooping to take leave of ſir Thomas Fryer, Felton immediately ſeized the opportunity, drew his knife, and, reaching over the duke's ſhoulder, as if to raiſe the curtain, thruſt the blade into his breaſt under the left pap, with ſuch force that it reached his heart. As ſoon as he had given the wound, he quitted the knife, which he left in the duke's belly, and threw his hat on the ground. The duke, at the inſtant of his feeling the blow, clapped his hand on the hilt of his ſword, and cried out, as ſome ſay with an oath, "The villain has killed me[1]." He then drew the knife from the wound himſelf, and, ſtaggering ſome paces forward, ſunk down under the hall-table. Surrounded as he was by ſuitors and ſervants, no man ſaw the blow, but all were inſtantly alarmed by the incidents that followed it. He was placed, yet alive, on the hall-table, where, after ſtruggling with death about ten minutes, he expired without ſpeaking one word after his firſt exclamation[2]. Such was the general conſternation and horror conceived at the fact, that, within a very few minutes after the body was placed on the table in the hall, there was not a living creature about it, nor in any of the adjacent rooms, any more (ſays ſir Henry Wotton) than if it had lain in the lands of Ethiopia. A crowd, however, ſoon gathered about the door; and, as no man had ſeen the blow, or him that gave it, every man made his own conjecture, and declared it as a thing known. The general opinion was, that the fact had been committed by the French; for, the French gentlemen who had been about the duke, being in great trouble and perplexity leſt the news he had received ſhould prevent or delay his voyage, had inſiſted, with all the vehement eagerneſs peculiar to the language of that people, that the news could not poſſibly be true. Thoſe therefore who did not underſtand French ſuppoſed they had been angry, and had uſed the duke rudely; on which, they ſeized M. Soubize and ſome others, who were in great danger of being ſlain on the ſpot, but that Felton, who had gone through the hall into the kitchen, and thence to the area before the door, where he was walking with great compoſure, hearing the ſcuffle, ran in among the crowd, and cried out, "I am he that hath done the deed: let no man ſuffer that is innocent." The moment he had made this declaration, thoſe who were moſt furious ran at him with their ſwords drawn, to kill him; but others, who were at leaſt equally concerned in the loſs, and equally touched with a ſenſe of it, defended him, that he might be reſerved for more judicial examination, and ſuffer with greater ſolemnity of juſtice. Felton, however, opened his breaſt to the ſwords of the moſt outrageous, not only with calmneſs but cheerfulneſs, being willing rather to fall a ſacrifice to their ſudden anger, than be reſerved to that puniſhment which he knew would be inflicted upon him. It was ſoon known who he was; and, being taken into a private room by ſome perſons of the beſt condition, they thought fit ſo far to diſſemble as to mention the duke's wound as dangerous only, and not mortal. Upon which, Felton ſmiled, and ſaid, "he knew well enough that he had given a blow which had determined all their hopes." Being then aſked by whoſe inſtigation he had committed ſo horrid a murder? he anſwered, with great dignity, "they might at once give up that enquiry, for that no man living had credit or power enough to have engaged him in ſuch an action; that it proceeded only from himſelf; that his purpoſe had been formed by the impulſe of his own conſcience, and was known only to God and himſelf. His motives," he ſaid, "would appear, if his hat were found, in which he had fixed them in writing, believing it probable that he might periſh in the attempt." The hat was indeed by this time produced, having been taken up near the lobby, where Felton had dropped it. He bore the reproaches of thoſe who ſpoke to him with the temper of a man who thought he had done well; but, after he had been ſome time in priſon, where he was treated without rigour, he had ſtrong convictions that he had done amiſs, and behaved (ſays lord Clarendon) with great modeſty and wonderful repentance, deſiring to be forgiven by the king, the dutcheſs, and all the duke's ſervants, whom he acknowledged to have injured; and earneſtly beſought the judges that he might have the hand ſtruck off with which he had given the blow, before he ſhould be put to death. Felton, after he was executed, was hanged in chains; and the king would fain have had his hand ſtruck off before the execution, but the judges ſaid it could not lawfully be done. The king was too near Portſmouth to be long ignorant of his favourite's death; but his behaviour, when he firſt heard it, ſhewed great preſence of mind and reverence for the Divine Majeſty. He was attending the morning ſervice; when ſir John Hippeſley came into the room with a troubled countenance, and, without any pauſe in reſpect to the exerciſe they were performing, went directly to the king, and whiſpered in his ear what had fallen out. His majeſty continued unmoved, and without the leaſt change in his countenance[1], till prayers were ended; when he ſuddenly departed to his chamber, and threw himſelf upon his bed, lamenting the loſs he had of an excellent ſervant, and the horrid manner in which he had been deprived of him; and he continued in this melancholic diſcompoſure of mind many days[2]."

---

[1] Clarendon, p. 28.

[2] Echard ſays, "the duke pulled out the knife himſelf, and at the ſame moment expired, with a ſtream of blood on the floor." Hiſtory of England, p. 523.

Lord Clarendon's opening his grand hiſtory with the following ſtory, excuſes king James and all other believers in ſuch appearances; and is at the ſame time a ſufficient apology for inſerting it in this place.

"There were many ſtories ſcattered abroad at that time of ſeveral prophecies and predictions of the duke's untimely and violent death. Among the reſt there was one which was upon a better foundation of credit than uſually ſuch diſcourſes are founded upon: There was an officer in the king's wardrobe in Windſor caſtle, of a good reputation for honeſty and diſcretion, and then about the age of fifty years, or more. This man had in his youth been bred in a ſchool in the pariſh[3] where ſir George Villiers, the father of the duke, lived; and had been much cheriſhed and obliged, in that ſeaſon of his age, by the ſaid ſir George, whom afterwards he never ſaw. About ſix months before the miſerable end of the duke of Buckingham, about midnight, this man being in his bed, at Windſor where his office was, and in very good health, there appeared to him on the ſide of his bed a man of a very venerable aſpect, who drew the curtains of his bed, and, fixing his eyes upon him, aſked him if he knew him? The poor man, half-dead with fear and apprehenſion, being aſked the ſecond time whether he remembered him; and having in that time called to his memory the preſence of ſir George Villiers, and the very cloaths he uſed to wear, in which he then ſeemed to be habited; he anſwered, "that he thought him to be that perſon." He replied, "that he was in the right; that he was the ſame, and that he expected a ſervice from him, which was, that he ſhould go from him to his ſon the duke of Buckingham, and tell him, if he did not do ſomewhat to ingratiate himſelf to the people, or at leaſt to abate the extreme malice they had againſt him, he would be ſuffered to live but a ſhort time." After this diſcourſe, he diſappeared; and the poor man, if he had been at all waking, ſlept very well till morning, when he believed all this to be a dream, and conſidered it no otherwiſe. The next night, or ſhortly after, the ſame perſon appeared to him again in the ſame place, and about the ſame time of the night, with an aſpect a little more ſevere than before; and aſked him whether he had done as he had required him? and, perceiving he had not, gave him very ſevere reprehenſions; told him, "he expected more compliance from him; and that, if he did not perform his commands, he ſhould enjoy no peace of mind, but ſhould be always purſued by him." Upon which, he promiſed to obey him. But, the next morning, waking out of a good ſleep, though he was exceedingly perplexed with the lively repreſentation of all things to his memory, he was willing ſtill to perſuade himſelf that he had only dreamed; and conſidered that he was a perſon at ſuch a diſtance from the duke, that he knew not how to find admiſſion to his preſence, much leſs had any hope to be believed in what he ſhould ſay: ſo, with great trouble and unquietneſs, he ſpent ſome time in thinking what he ſhould do; and the end reſolved to do nothing in the matter. The ſame perſon appeared to him the third time, with a terrible countenance, and bitterly reproaching him for not performing what he had promiſed to do. The poor man had by this time recovered the courage to tell him, "that in truth he had deferred the execution of his commands, upon conſidering how difficult a thing it would be for him to get any acceſs to the duke, having acquaintance with no perſon about him; and, if he could obtain admiſſion to him, he ſhould never be able to perſuade him that he was ſent in ſuch a manner; but he ſhould, at beſt, be thought to be mad, or to be ſet-on and employed by his own or the malice of other men, to abuſe the duke; and ſo he ſhould be ſure to be undone." The perſon replied, as he had done before, "that he ſhould never find reſt till he ſhould perform what he required, and therefore he were better to diſpatch it; that the acceſs to his ſon was known to be very eaſy, and that few men waited long for him; and, for the gaining him credit, he would tell him two or three particulars, which he charged him never to mention to any perſon living but to the duke himſelf; and he ſhould no ſooner hear them, but he would believe all the reſt he ſhould ſay;" and ſo, repeating his threats, he left him. The poor man, more confirmed by the laſt appearance, made his journey to London, where the court then was. He was very well known to ſir Ralph Freeman, one of the maſters of requeſts, who had married a lady that was nearly allied to the duke, and was himſelf well received by him. To him this man went; and, though he did not acquaint him with all particulars, ſaid enough to let him ſee there was ſomething extraordinary in it; and the knowledge he had of the ſobriety and diſcretion of the man made the more impreſſion on him. He deſired that by his means he might be brought to the duke, to ſuch a place, and in ſuch a manner, as ſhould be thought fit; affirming, "that he had much to ſay to him, and of ſuch a nature as would require great privacy, and ſome time and patience in the hearing." Sir Ralph promiſed he would ſpeak firſt with the duke of him, and then he ſhould underſtand his pleaſure; and accordingly, the firſt opportunity, he did inform him of the reputation and honeſty of the man, and then what he deſired, and of all he knew of the matter. The duke, according to his uſual openneſs and condeſcenſion, told him, "that he was the next day early to hunt with the king; that his horſes ſhould attend him on Lambeth bridge, where he would land by five of the clock in the morning; and, if the man attended him there, he would walk and ſpeak with him as long as ſhould be neceſſary." Sir Ralph carried the man with him the next morning, and preſented him to the duke at his landing, who received him courteouſly, and walked aſide in conference near an hour, none but his own ſervants being at that hour in that place, and they and ſir Ralph at ſuch a diſtance that they could not hear a word, though the duke ſometimes ſpoke with great commotion; which ſir Ralph the more eaſily obſerved and perceived, becauſe he kept his eyes always fixed upon the duke, having procured this interview upon ſomewhat he knew there was of extraordinary. And the man told him, in his return over the water, "that, when he mentioned thoſe particulars which were to gain him credit, the ſubſtance whereof he ſaid he durſt not impart to him, the duke's colour changed, and he ſwore he could come to that knowledge only by the devil; for that thoſe particulars were known only to himſelf and to one perſon more, who, he was ſure, would never ſpeak of it." The duke purſued his purpoſe of hunting; but was obſerved to ride all the morning with great penſiveneſs, and in deep thoughts, without any delight in the exerciſe he was upon; and, before the morning was ſpent, left the field, and alighted at his mother's lodgings at Whitehall; with whom he was ſhut up for the ſpace of more than two or three hours; the noiſe of their diſcourſe frequently reaching the ears of thoſe who attended in the next rooms; and, when the duke left her, his countenance appeared full of trouble, with a mixture of anger; a countenance that was never before obſerved in him in converſation with her, towards whom he had a profound reverence; and the counteſs herſelf (for, though ſhe was married to a private gentleman, ſir Thomas Compton, ſhe had been created counteſs of Buckingham ſhortly after the title of earl of Buckingham had been conferred on her ſon) was, at the duke's leaving her, found overwhelmed in tears, and in the higheſt agony imaginable. Whatever there was of all this, it is a notorious truth, that, when the news of the duke's murder (which happened within a few months after) was brought to his mother, ſhe ſeemed not in the leaſt degree ſurprized, but received it as if ſhe had foreſeen it; nor did afterwards expreſs ſuch a degree of ſorrow as was expected from ſuch a mother for the loſs of ſuch a ſon [1]."

---

[1] "The king received the news in public with an unmoved and undiſturbed countenance; and the courtiers, who ſtudied his looks, concluded, that ſecretly he was not diſpleaſed to be rid of a miniſter ſo generally odious to the nation. But Charles's command of himſelf proceeded entirely from the gravity and compoſure of his temper. He was ſtill, as much as ever, attached to his favourite; and during his whole life, he retained an affection for Buckingham's friends, and a prejudice againſt his enemies. He urged too, that Felton ſhould be put to the queſtion, in order to extort from him a diſcovery of his accomplices: but the judges declared, that, though that practice had been formerly very uſual, it was altogether illegal. So much more exact reaſoners, with regard to law, had they become, from the jealous ſcruples of the houſe of commons." Hume, p. 202; from ſir Philip Warwick.

[2] Clarendon, p. 30.—This incident gave riſe to a ſerious little Poem by Mr. Waller, intituled, "Of his Majeſty's receiving the News of the Duke of Buckingham's Death."

[3] This ſchool is in one account (ſee p. 209) ſtated to have been at Billeſdon; in another, (p. 210) at Stamford; neither of which places is very far from Brookſby or Godeby.

[4] "I will not pretend to apologize," ſays Mr. Hearne, "for any of the duke's vices, who had withall many excellent virtues, as may appear from what lord Clarendon and others have written." Appendix to the Life of King Richard II, p. 404; where a letter is printed from Prince Charles to the duke of Buckingham, under the name of Steenie, the diminutive of Stephen, by which the king and the prince familiarly called him, from his fine face; paying, by this appellation, a very ſingular compliment to the ſplendour of his beauty, alluding to Acts, vi. 15. where it is ſaid of St. Stephen, "All that ſat in the council looking ſtedfaſtly on him, ſaw his face as it had been the face of an angel." Some of the duke's compliments and expreſſions of ſervility to the king were no leſs ſingular in their kind; one of his letters concludes with, "Your faithful Dog STENNY."

The MS. in the Muſeum, already more than once referred to, relates the particulars thus:

"There goes a pretty and ſtrange ſtory amongſt wiſe men, of an apparition that portended his fall, thus. About the ſummer before his concluſion, one Towſe, an officer belonging to the wardrobe at Windſor, and a man of a ſober and wiſe temper, not apt to be deluded with odd phantaſms, nor given to the vanity of dreaming; this man coming up to London about his occaſions, and lodging (as I remember) in Drury Lane, being one night in his bed, but waking, his curtains were ſuddenly drawn, and there appeared to him a goodly old man, gazing full upon him. He, apprehending it to be ſome thief, was much afraid, and told him, "he had not much money, about £5.; deſired him to be content with that, and do him no farther harm." The ſpirit (for, ſo I ſhall call it, becauſe ſo he afterwards apprehended it) anſwered "he ſhould have no harm, neither came he to rob him; but aſked him, "Whether he knew him, or no?" The poor man replied, "No;" and the ſpirit, "Did you never know one ſir George Villiers?" "Yes," anſwered the man, "and have been very much beholden to him in my youth, when I was at ſchool at Stamford [2]." "I am," quoth the ſpirit, "the ſame man." "No, ſure!" replied the man, "he hath been many years dead; otherwiſe, I ſhould believe you were the ſame, for you much reſemble him." "Well," ſays the ſpirit, "I am he; and well remember thy promiſes when a boy, when thou madeſt oath that, if ever it lay in thy power, thou wouldſt moſt readily ſerve me, or any of mine. Therefore I come now to put thee in mind of thy vow." The poor man deſired to know what he muſt do. The ſpirit told him, "he ſhould find out his ſon Buckingham, and diſcover to him this apparition; and told him then many particulars, how he ſhould carry himſelf to re-gain the people's love, and win the parliament; and, if he ſhould follow theſe particulars, he ſhould live long, and proſper; if otherwiſe, he ſhould die before Bartholomew's day." The poor man ſaid, "he would do it;" and ſo the ſpirit departed. The man ſlept; and the next morning would remember it only as a dream, ſo uninclined was he to the revelation. The night following, it appeared again, and waked him, and ſaid "it was not well done, to deceive his truſt, and break his word." The man replied, "the thing was ſo ſtrange, he could not believe himſelf, and thereſore could not expect it from others; but now, ſince it appeared the ſecond time, he would perform it." The next day paſſed, and he could not recover the courage to accompliſh it; as he was an abſolute ſtranger to the duke, and a man of ſo mean and obſcure a condition, that he believed it was no eaſy matter to obtain acceſs. The third night he was again viſited with the ſame apparition [3]; and it looked more terrible and offended than before, and ſaid, "that, if he performed not his oath and his promiſe, and very ſpeedily, he ſhould have good cauſe to repent it." The poor man anſwered, "In truth, he could not find in his heart to do it; for, it would appear ſo impoſſible a relation, that he ſhould not only be ridiculous, and deſpiſed for it, but haply puniſhed and undone by it." The ſpirit bad him "fear nothing, but perform his work chearfully; and, for his better credit, he would enable him to tell him two or three ſecrets, which none knew but himſelf;" and then told him over his whole meſſage, and thoſe ſecrets; and, telling him withall, "that, if he performed it not, he ſhould wiſh he had," he departed, and left him. The next morning he reſolved not to run the hazard of another reproof; but went to the duke's houſe; and deſired acceſs by Mr. Aſhburnham, that he might have ſome conference with the duke about a matter that concerned him; but, being a plain man, though ſenſible and well-ſpoken, he could get no admittance that way. The duke was to croſs the water; ſo the good man went over, and waited at Lambeth-ſtairs: but there again the duke was on his paſſage, and could not hold any long diſcourſe; ſo that that day was ſpent, and nothing yet done: yet it ſeemed the ſpirit accepted his good-will, for he found no more diſturbance this night. The morrow he found ſome opportunity to acquaint ſir Ralph Freeman with ſome parts of the ſtory, ſo that he procured him acceſs, and the duke admitted him to private conference; and, on the diſcovery of theſe ſecrets, the duke was extremely ſtartled, for they were things only known to himſelf. The duke had ſhortly after a private diſcourſe with his mother, whereat ſhe wept, and took on extremely. The duke himſelf was killed before the day; and the counteſs ſeemed to be ſo foreknowing of the miſhap, that ſhe was nothing troubled or amazed at the act that all Chriſtendom wondered at [4]."

A ſtill more circumſtantial account is given of this myſterious buſineſs in the following extract from the curious miſcellaneous volume of Mr. Slingſby, already referred to in p. 201.

---

[1] Clarendon, pp. 42—44. On the whole of this ſtory, there is ſtrong reaſon to ſuſpect, that Towſe was employed by the duke's mother, finding her own remonſtrances of no effect, and her ſon's danger increaſe with the popular diſcontent, to pretend a meſſage to him from his father's ſpirit, as the laſt effort to influence his conduct, and preſerve his life. The man was by no means a low or obſcure perſon: he was once ſolicited to fill a ſeat in parliament, and once to accept the honour of knighthood, both which he declined; he was alſo known to the dutcheſs, and ſhe might the rather truſt him with her purpoſe, as he had received obligations from the family, which he was always ready to acknowledge. This conjecture ſeems to receive ſome degree of probability from the conference between the duke and his mother at his haſty return from hunting to Whitehall. The duke doubtleſs ſaw through the contrivance; for, if he had believed that the man had really ſeen an apparition, and from that learned the ſecret particulars that were to obtain him credit, what ſhould induce him to repair in ſuch haſte to his mother, to expoſtulate with her, whom he had always treated with profound reverence, ſo loudly as to be heard to the next apartment; to leave her not only with a troubled but an angry countenance, overwhelmed with tears, and in the higheſt agony? Particulars which will be eaſily accounted for, if it be ſuppoſed, that he ſuſpected her to have employed this monitor, and, to gain him credit, truſted him with ſecrets which ſhould not have been related. This will alſo account for the turbulence with Towſe. A meſſage from the dead would rather have been received with aſtoniſhment, reverence, and awe; and the particulars, which he declared known only to himſelf and one more, could have produced no expoſtulation with the relator, except they gave him reaſon to ſuſpect a colluſion.

[2] In the account copied in p. 210, the ſchool is ſaid to be at Billeſdon; the place at which the duke of Buckingham was himſelf undoubtedly educated.

[3] The coming thrice is agreeable to etiquette; and perhaps was taken from God's calling Saul three times. G. A.

[4] Harl. MS. 7356.

Letter from Edmond Wyndham, eſq. to Gervaſe Hollis, eſq. a faithful collector of Antiquities, and of things rare; of which ſort this being one, I thought fitt to place it in this booke, that it may be preſerved for the view of poſteritie[1].

"Sir, According to your deſire, and my promiſe, I have written downe what I remember (divers things being ſlipt out of my memorye) of the relation made mee by Mr. Nicholas Towſe concerning the apparition which viſited him about the yeare 1627. I and my wife (upon occaſion) being in London, lay at my brother Pyne's houſe without Biſhopſgate, which was the next houſe to Mr. Nicholas Towſe, who was his kinſman and familiar acquaintance; in conſideration of whoſe ſocietye and friendſhip hee tooke a houſe in that place, the ſaid Mr. Towſe being a very fine muſician and very good company, and, for aught I ever ſaw or heard, a virtuous, religious, well-diſpoſed gentleman. About that time, the ſaid Mr. Towſe told mee, that one night, being in bed and perfectly waking, and a candle burning by him (as he uſually had), there came into his chamber, and ſtood by his bed-ſide, an old gentleman, in ſuch a habitt as was in uſe in queene Elizabeth's time; at whoſe firſt appearance Mr. Towſe was very muche troubled; but, after a little time recollecting himſelfe, he demanded of him, "in the name of God, what he was? whether hee were a man?" and the apparition replied, "Noe." Then he aſked him, "if he were a devill?" and the anſwer was "Noe." Then ſaid Mr. Towſe, "in the name of God, what art thou then?" and, as I remember, Mr. Towſe told mee, that the apparition anſwered him, "that he was the ghoſt of ſir George Villiers, father to the then duke of Buckingham, whom hee might very well remember, [ſince hee went to ſchoole in ſuch a place in Leiceſterſhire, called Bileſdon, a few miles from Brookeſby, where the ſchoolmaſter's name was Cade[2]."] And Mr. Towſe told mee, "that the apparition had perfectly the reſemblance of the ſaid ſir George Villiers in all reſpects, and in the ſame habitt that he had often ſeene him weare in his life-time." The ſaid apparition then told Mr. Towſe, "that he could not but remember the muche kindneſſe that hee the ſaid ſir George Villiers had expreſſed to him whilſt he was a ſcholar in Leiceſterſhire as aforeſaid; and that, out of that conſideration, hee believed that hee loved him; and that therefore hee had made choice of him the ſaid Mr. Towſe, to deliver a meſſage to his ſonne the duke of Buckingham, thereby to prevent ſuch miſchiefe as would otherwiſe befall the ſaid duke, whereby he would be inevitably ruined." And then (as I remember) Mr. Towſe told mee, that the apparition inſtructed him, what meſſage hee ſhould deliver to the duke; unto which Mr. Towſe replyed, "that hee ſhould be very unwilling to goe to the duke of Buckingham upon ſuch an errand, whereby hee ſhould gaine nothing but reproache and contempt, and be eſteemed a madman; and therefore deſired to bee excuſed from the employment." But the apparition preſſed him with muche earneſtneſſe to undertake it; telling him, "that the circumſtances and ſecret diſcoveries which hee ſhould bee able to make to the duke (of ſuch paſſages in the courſe of his life which were knowne to none but himſelfe) would make it appeare that his meſſage was not the fancye of a diſtempered braine, but a realitye." And ſoe the apparition tooke his leave of him for that night; telling him, "that hee would give him leave to conſider untill the next night; and then he would come to receive his anſwere, whether hee would undertake to deliver his meſſage to the duke of Buckingham, or noe." Mr. Towſe paſſed the next day with muche perplexitye and trouble, debating and reaſoning with himſelfe whether hee ſhould deliver this meſſage to the duke or not; but in concluſion hee reſolved to doe it. And the next night, when the apparition came, hee gave his anſwere accordinglye, and then received his full inſtructions. After which, Mr. Towſe went and found out ſir Thomas Bludder and ſir Ralphe Freeman; by whom hee was brought to the duke of Buckingham, and had ſeverall private and long audiences of him. I myſelfe, by the favour of a friend, was once admitted to ſee him in private conference with the duke, where (although I heard not their diſcourſe) I obſerved muche earneſtneſſe in their actions and geſtures. After which conference, Mr. Towſe told mee, that the duke would not follow the counſel that was given him, which was (as I remember) that he intimated the caſting off and rejecting ſome men who had greate intereſt in him; and, as I take it, hee named biſhop Laud; and that he (the duke) was to doe ſome popular acts in the enſuing parlyament, of which parlyament the duke would have had Mr. Towſe to have been a burggeſs; but hee refuſed it, alledging, that, unleſſe the duke followed his directions, he muſt doe him hurt if hee were of the parlyament. Mr. Towſe alſo then told me, that the duke confeſſed "that hee had told him thoſe things there no creature knew but himſelfe, and that none but God or the devill could reveale to him." The duke offered Mr. Towſe to have the king knight him, and to have given him preferment (as hee told mee); but that he refuſed it, ſaying, that, "unleſſe hee would follow his advice, hee would receive nothing from him." Mr. Towſe, when hee made mee this relation, told mee, that the duke would inevitably bee deſtroyed before ſuch a time (which he then named); and accordingly the duke's death happened before that time. He likewiſe told mee, that he had written downe all the ſeverall diſcourſes that he had with the apparition; and that, at his laſt comming to him, it was ſoe familiar, that hee was as little troubled with it as if it had been a friend or acquaintance that had come to viſit him. Mr. Towſe told mee farther, that the archbiſhop of Canterburye (then biſhop of London) Dr. Laud ſhould, by his counſels, be the author of very great troubles to the kingdome, by which it ſhould be reduced to that extremity of diſorder and confuſion, that it ſhould ſeeme to bee paſt all hope of recoverye without a miracle; but yet, when all people were in deſpaire of ſeeing happy daies againe, the kingdome ſhould ſuddenly bee reduced and reſettled againe in a moſt happy condition. At this time my father Pyne was in trouble, and committed to the Gatehouſe by the lords of the counſell, about a quarrell between him and the lord Paulett. Upon which, one night I ſaid to my couſin Towſe, by way of jeaſt, "I pray aſke your apparition what ſhall become of my father Pyne's buſineſſe." Which he promiſed to doe; and the next day told mee, that my father Pyne's enemies were aſhamed of their malicious proſecution, and that hee would be att libertie within a weeke or ſome few daies; which happened accordingly. Mr. Towſe's wife (ſince his death) told mee, that her huſband and ſhe living in Windſore Caſtle, where hee had an office, that ſummer the duke of Buckingham was killed, told her, the very day that the duke of Buckingham was ſett upon by the mutinous mariners att Portſmouth, ſaying then, that the next attempt againſt him would bee his death, which accordingly happened[3]. And att the inſtant that the duke was killed (as ſhe underſtood by the relation afterwards) Mr. Towſe was ſitting in his chaire, out of which he ſuddainely ſtarted up, and ſaid, "Wife, the duke of Buckingham is ſlaine." Mr. Towſe lived not long after that himſelfe; but told his wife the time of his death before it happened. I never ſaw him after I had ſeene ſome effects of his diſcourſe, which before I valued not, and therefore was not curious to enquire after more than he voluntarilye told me, which I then entertained not with thoſe ſerious thoughts which I have ſince reflected on his diſcourſe. This is as much as I can remember of this buſineſſe; which, according to your deſire, is written by, ſir, yours, &c. EDMOND WYNDHAM.

---

[1] I am aware that this letter is already printed in the Appendix to Hearne's Life of King Richard II. p. 406; but with a few lacunæ, which are here ſupplied. The following account of the letter is given by Mr. Hearne; from a paper in Dr. Robert Plott's own hand, which was given to him June 15, 1712, by the doctor's ſon-in-law, the Rev. John Burman, M. A. at that time fellow of Univerſity College, and afterwards vicar of Newington and Bobbing in Kent, who died April 13, 1726, æt. 45; which Mr. Burman was the publiſher of the ſecond edition of Dr. Plott's "Natural Hiſtory of Oxfordſhire." "Since William Lilly, the Rebels Juggler and Mountebank, hath, in his malicious and blaſphemous diſcourſe concerning our martyred Sovereign of bleſſed memory, imprinted (amongſt other his lyes and falſhoods) a relation concerning an apparition, which foretold ſeveral events, which ſhould happen to the late duke of Buckingham, wherein he falſifies both the perſon to whom it appeared, and the circumſtances; I thought it not amiſs to enter here (that it may be preſerved) the true account of that apparition, as I received it from, and under the hand of Mr. Edmond Windham, of Kettesford in the county of Somerſet. I ſhall ſet it down (ipſiſſimis verbis) as he delivered it to me at my requeſt, written with his own hand."

[2] This whole ſentence is omitted by Hearne.

[3] Here is a ſmall chaſm in Hearne's copy; and the concluſion is there much more abrupt than the one here printed.

Boulogne, 5 Auguſt, 1652."

Lord Clarendon ſays, "This great perſon was of a noble nature, and generous diſpoſition, and of ſuch other endowments, as made him very capable of being a great favourite to a great king. He underſtood the arts of a Court, and all the learning that is profeſſed there, exactly well. By long practice in buſineſs, under a maſter that diſcourſed excellently, and ſurely knew all things wonderfully, and took much delight in indoctrinating his young unexperienced favourite, who (he knew) would always be looked upon as the workmanſhip of his own hands, he had obtained a quick conception and apprehenſion of buſineſs, and had the habit of ſpeaking very gracefully and pertinently. He was of a moſt flowing courteſy and affability to all men who made any addreſs to him; and ſo deſirous to oblige them, that he did not enough conſider the value of the obligation, or the merit of the perſon he choſe to oblige; from which much of his misfortune reſulted. He was of a courage not to be daunted; which was manifeſted in all his actions, and in his conteſts with particular perſons of the greateſt reputation; and eſpecially in his whole demeanour at the Iſle of Rhee, both at the landing, and upon the retreat; in both which no man was more fearleſs, or more ready to expoſe himſelf to the higheſt dangers. His kindneſs and affection to his friends was ſo vehement, that they were as ſo many marriages for better or worſe, and ſo many leagues offenſive and defenſive; as if he thought himſelf obliged to love all his friends, and to make war upon all they were angry with, let the cauſe be what it would. And it cannot be denied, that he was an enemy in the ſame exceſs; and proſecuted thoſe he looked upon as enemies with the utmoſt rigour and animoſity, and was not eaſily induced to a reconciliation. His ſingle misfortune was (which was indeed productive of many greater) that he had never made a noble and a worthy friendſhip with a man ſo near his equal, that he would frankly adviſe him for his honour and true intereſt againſt the current or rather the torrent of his impetuous paſſions: And it may reaſonably be believed that, if he had been bleſſed with one faithful friend, who had been qualified with wiſdom and integrity, he would have committed as few faults, and done as tranſcendent worthy actions, as any man who ſhined in ſuch a ſphere in that age in Europe: for he was of an excellent diſpoſition, and of a mind very capable of advice and counſel. He was in his nature juſt and candid, liberal, generous, and bountiful; nor was it ever known that the temptation of money ſwayed him to do an unjuſt or unkind thing. If he had an immoderate ambition, with which he was charged, it doth not appear that it was in his nature, or that he brought it with him to the court, but rather found it there. He needed no ambition, who was ſo ſeated in the hearts of two ſuch maſters[1]."

Fuller ſays, "Being debarred (by his late nativity) from his father's lands, he was happy in his mother's love, maintaining him in France, till he returned one of the compleateſt courtiers in Chriſtendom. Sir Thomas Lake may be ſaid to have uſhered him to the Engliſh court, whilſt the lady Lucy counteſs of Bedford led him by the one hand, and William earl of Pembroke by the other, ſupplying him with a ſupport far above his patrimonial income. The truth is, Somerſet's growing daily more weariſome, made Villiers hourly more welcome to king James. Soon after he was knighted, created ſucceſſively baron, viſcount Villiers, earl, marquis, duke of Buckingham; and, to bind all his honours the better together, the noble Garter was beſtowed upon him. And now offices at court (not being already void) were voided for him. The earl of Worceſter was perſwaded to part with his place of maſter of the horſe, as the earl of Nottingham with his office of admiral, and both conferred on the duke. He had a numerous and beautiful female kindred, ſo that there was hardly a noble ſtock in England into which one of theſe his clients was not grafted. Moſt of his nieces were matched with little more portion than their uncle's ſmiles, the forerunner of ſome good office or honour to follow on their huſbands. Thus with the ſame act did he both gratify his kindred, and fortify himſelf with noble alliance. It is ſeldom ſeen that two kings (father and ſon) tread ſucceſſively in the ſame tract as to a Favourite; but here king Charles had as high a kindneſs for the duke as king James. Thenceforward he became the plenipotentiary in the Engliſh Court, ſome of the Scottiſh nobility making room for him by their ſeaſonable departure out of this life. The earl of Briſtol was joſtled out, the biſhop of Lincoln caſt flat on the floor, the earls of Pembroke and Carliſle content to ſhine beneath him, Holland behind him, none even with, much leſs before him. But it is generally given to him, who is the little god at the court, to be the great devil in the country. The commonalty hated him with a perfect hatred; and all miſcarriages in church and ſtate, at home, abroad, at ſea and land, were charged on his want of wiſdom, valour, or loyalty. John Felton, a melancholy malecontented gentleman, and a ſullen ſoldier, apprehending himſelf injured, could find no other way to revenge his conceived wrongs, than by writing them with a point of a knife in the heart of the duke, whom he ſtabbed at Portſmouth. It is hard to ſay how many of this nation were guilty of this murder, either by public praiſing or private approving thereof. His perſon from head to foot could not be charged with any blemiſh, ſave that ſome hypercriticks conceived his brows ſomewhat over pendulous; a cloud which in the judgement of others was by the beams of his eyes ſufficiently diſpelled. The reader is remitted for the reſt of his character to the exquiſite epitaph on his magnificent monument[2]."

This monument, in a ſmall chapel on the North ſide of Henry the Seventh's[3], is of an antique form, compoſed of black marble, touch, and other curious marbles, having ſeveral figures of braſs large as the life gilt with gold, ſitting round the tomb, on which are the ſtatues of the duke of Buckingham, and of the dutcheſs, who erected the monument, and lies buried with him. It bears theſe ſeveral inſcriptions:

"Perenni memoriæ

celſiſſimi potentiſſimique principis GEORGII VILLIERS, ducis, marchionis, comitis BUCKINGHAMIÆ, comitis Coventriæ, vicecomitis Villiers, baronis Whaddon; Angliæ, Hiberniæ, Walliæ, Thalaſſiarchæ; omnium arcium propugnaculorumque maritimorum ac claſſis regiæ moderatoris, equorum regiorum magiſtri, quinque portuum & appendicum domini tutelarii, caſtri Doverenſis præfecti, omnium regiorum ſaltuum, theriotrophiorum, ac nemorum Outrentanorum juſticiarii, caſtri regii Vindeſorii præſidis, monarchæ Britannico ab intimis cubiculis, ſenatuum ſanctiorum Angliæ, Scotiæ, & Hiberniæ, conſiliarii, equitis nobiliſſimi ordinis periſcelidis, conſilii polemici domini præſidis, academiæ Cantabrigienſis cancellarii digniſſimi.

Tantus tamen heros, omnibus corporis & animi dotibus memorabilis; duobus potentiſſimis invicem regibus intimus, chariſſimus omnibus, togæ juxta agique artibus florentiſſimus; literarum & literatorum fautor ampliſſimus, in omnes bene meritus; liberalitatis inexhauſtæ; denique ſingulari humanitate, & omni morum ſuavitate incomparabilis; immani teterrimi parricidæ facinore trucidatus, communi invidiæ, quæ ſemper virtutis & honoris comes individua, innocentiſſimo ſanguine ſuo immeritiſſimo litavit.

---

[1] Clarendon, pp. 33—35.

[2] Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 130.

[3] The duke was buried with great funeral pomp. In the Churchwardens' Accompts of St. Margaret's is an item of 4*s*. 5*d*. "paid for cleaning the ſtreets at the duke of Buckingham's funeral."

"Catharina verò heroina ſplendidiſſima, comitis Rutlandiæ filia & hæres unica, prolis ſummæ ſpei utriſque ſexus, D. D. D. D. Mariæ, Caroli (qui in cunis obiit), Georgii, Franciſci noviſſimi poſtumique, feliciſſima ab ipſo mater facta, ſuaviſſimam chariſſimi conjugis ſui memoriam, quâ pietate, quo honore, potuit proſecuta, hos titulos non vanitati litatura, ſed optimorum principum munificentiam teſtatura; præfigendos curavit; triſteſque exuvias, & quicquid ipſius adhuc cœlo non debetur, honorario hoc monumento mœſtiſſima incluſit anno epochæ Chriſtianæ 1634."

On a ſeparate tablet is alſo this inſcription:

"P. M. S.
Vanæ multitudinis Improperium hic jacet; cujus tamen
Hiſpania Prudentiam,
Gallia Fortitudinem,
Belgia Induſtriam,
tota Europa mirata eſt Magnanimitatem.
Quem
Daniæ & Sweciæ Reges integerrimum,
Germaniæ, Tranſilvaniæ, & Naſſauviæ, Principes ingenuum,
Veneta Reſpublica Philo-baſilea,
Sabaudiæ & Lotharingiæ Duces Politicum,
Palatinus Comes Fidelem,
Imperator Pacificum,
Turca Chriſtianum,
Papa Proteſtantem,
experti ſunt.
Quem
Anglia Archithalaſſum
Cantabrigia Cancellarium
Buckinghamia Ducem habuit.
Verum ſiſte, Viator;
& quid ipſa Invidia ſugillare nequit, audi.
Hic eſt Ille
calamitoſæ virtutis BUCKINGAMIUS;
maritus redamatus, pater amans,
filius obſequens,
frater amiciſſimus, affinis beneficus,
amicus perpetuus,
dominus benignus,
&
optimus omnium ſervus.
Quem
Reges adamarunt, Optimates honorarunt,
Eccleſia deflevit,
Vulgus oderunt.
Quem
Jacobus & Carolus,
Regum perſpicaciſſimi, intimum habuerunt;
à quibus
honoribus auctus & negotiis onuſtus,
Fato ſuccubuit,
antequam par animo periculum invenit.
Quid jam, Peregrine?
Ænigma Mundi moritur;
Omnia fuit, nec quidquam habuit,
Patriæ, Parens & Hoſtis audiit.
Deliciæ idem & Querela Parlamenti.
Qui dum Papiſtis bellum infert, inſimulatur Papiſta;
dum Proteſtantium partibus conſulit,
occiditur à Proteſtante.
Teſſaram ſpecta rerum humanarum.
At non eſt quod ſeriò triumphet Malitia.
Interimere potuit, lædere non potuit.
Scilicet has preces fundens expiravit.
Tuo ego ſanguine potiar (mi Jeſu) dum mali paſcuntur meo."

"The duke of Buckingham, by the elegance of his perſon [1], and the courtlineſs of his addreſs, preſently gained as great an aſcendant over James, as the favourite of any other prince is known to have done, by a long courſe of aſſiduity and inſinuation. It is no wonder that an accumulation of honour, wealth, and power, upon a vain man, ſuddenly raiſed from a private ſtation, ſhould be ſo invidious; and eſpecially as the duke was as void of prudence and moderation in the uſe of theſe, as the fond king was in beſtowing them. But it muſt be acknowledged, that this great man was not without his virtues. He had all the courage and ſincerity of a ſoldier; and was one of thoſe few courtiers who were as honeſt and open in their enmity, as military men are in their friendſhip. He was the laſt reigning favourite that ever tyrannized in this kingdom. It is no wonder that ſuch a pageant, decorated with almoſt every title and honour that two kings could beſtow upon him, ſhould be the butt of envy. There is an excellent whole-length painting of him by Vandyke, at the duke of Queenſberry's at Ameſbury [1]."—Mr. Pennant alſo notices, at Gorhambury, a portrait of "the beautiful George Villiers, duke of Buckingham, in white, with a hat and feather on a table; a minion of fortune, who owed his riſe to a handſome face and elegant perſon; merits irreſiſtible with James I. The king, by the inſolence and ingratitude of his favourite, received ſufficient puniſhment for his folly. Buckingham was poſſeſſed of abilities, clouded by the violence of his paſſions, and almoſt rendered uſeleſs. In his embaſſy to France in 1627, he had the preſumption to make his addreſſes to the princeſs Anne of Auſtria. On receiving the treatment which his vanity merited, he not only, in revenge, involved his country in war, but endeavoured to alienate the affections of his maſter Charles from his ſpouſe, his lovely ſiſter-in-law, Henrietta-Maria [2].—Sir Walter Aſton of Tixal was ambaſſador to Spain in the time of the negotiations about the Spaniſh match; and favoured the deſigns of the young prince and his favourite Buckingham. He was reſolute and prudent, and had great knowledge of the importance of the Engliſh trade with Spain. He might ſerve his maſter; but he hurt his own fortune; diſſipating great part of £10,000. a year in ſupporting the dignity of his character, and the honour of his country. His reward was a Scotch peerage; being created by Charles I, in the third year of his reign, lord Forfar [3]."

On the Villiers pedigree are finely blazoned the following quarterings of the duke's arms [4]:

1. Villiers modern; 2. Argent, ſix lions rampant Gules, armed Azure; Villiers of Warrington; 3. Villiers antient; 4. Gules, a chevron between three croſs croſslets fitché Argent; Bateman; 5. Beler; 6. Gules, a feſs Argent, between three martlets Or; 7. Azure, a bend between ſix rowels Argent; Howby; 8. Argent, a croſs, and in the firſt and fourth quarters an annulet Vert; Kirkby; 9. Gules, a chevron between three books cloſe Argent; Clerke.

In another ſhield:

1. Villiers modern; 2. Villiers antient; 3. Bateman; 4. Beler; 5. Howby; 6. Kirkby. Creſts. In the centre a plume of oſtrich-feathers iſſuing out of the top of a round tower Argent; on the right ſide another creſt, a lion rampant Argent ducally crowned Or; on the left ſide a third creſt, a ſtag's head eraſed Sable, billetty and armed Or. Supporters; on the dexter, a horſe Argent; on the ſiniſter, a ſtag Argent, armed and hoofed Or. Motto, FIDEI COTICULA CRUX.

In a third ſhield:

1. Fielding; 2. Argent, on a feſs Azure, three eſcalops Or; Napton; 3. Argent, a chevron and chief Sable, between the chief and chevron a leopard's face of the ſecond; Prudeholme; 4. Gules, a bend between ſix martlets Or; Seaton, alias St. Liz; 5. Or, a dolphin embowed, and a chief Azure; 6. Gules, a ſaltire Vaire; Willington; impaling the nine firſt-mentioned coats.

---

[1] Granger, vol. I. pp. 326. 330; vol. II. p. 114; where ſeveral engraved portraits of the duke are enumerated; one of them, on horſe-back, with ſhips, &c. alluding to his office of high-admiral; and another as maſter of the horſe. Of all theſe Mr. Granger prefers a fine large head engraved by Jaques, as more like the original than any he had ſeen, except the eyes, which have much leſs life.

[2] Journey from Cheſter to London, p. 241.

[3] Ibid. p. 83.

[4] See theſe engraved in Plate XXXIII; and in the ſame plate are given the hand-writings of the duke and of his father.

From an advertiſement prefixed by the late lord Orford to "A Catalogue of the curious Collection of Pictures of George Villiers duke of Buckingham," we learn that the collection contained "ſuch parts only of the muſeum of that magnificent favourite as were preſerved by an old ſervant of the family, Mr. Traylman, and by him ſent to Antwerp to the young duke, to be ſold for his ſubſiſtence; great part having been embezzled when the eſtate was ſequeſtered by the parliament [1]. Some of the pictures, on the aſſaſſination of the firſt duke, had been purchaſed by the king, the earl of Northumberland, and abbot Montague. The collection was kept at York-houſe in the Strand, and had been bought by the duke at great prices. He gave £10,000. for what had been collected by ſir Paul Rubens; and ſir Henry Wootton, when embaſſador at Venice, purchaſed many other capital ones for his grace (particularly a Madona and child by Titian; and Abiſhag brought to David, by old Palma). One may judge a little how valuable the entire collection muſt have been, by the liſt of what remained; where we find no fewer than 19 by Titian; 17 by Tintoret; 21 by Baſſan; two by Julio Romano; two by Giorgione; 13 by Paul Veroneſe; 8 by Palma; three by Guido; 13 by Rubens; 3 by Leonardo de Vinci; 2 by Corregio; and 3 by Raphael; beſides other eſteemed and ſcarce maſters. Mr. Duart of Antwerp bought ſome of them; but the greater part were purchaſed by the archduke Leopold, and added to his noble collection in the caſtle of Prague. He bought the chief picture, the Ecce Homo of Titian, in which were introduced the portrait of the Pope, the Emperor Charles V. and Solyman the Magnificent. It appears, by a note of Mr. Vertue in the original MS. that Thomas earl of Arundel offered the firſt duke the value of £7000. in money or land, for that ſingle piece. There is a copy of it at Northumberland-houſe [2]."

This hiſtory of the Villiers family will be incomplete, unleſs cloſed with ſome particulars of George the ſecond duke, a very diſtinguiſhed perſonage in the reign of Charles the Second; who was born at Wallingford-houſe, in the pariſh of St. Martin in the Fields, Jan. 30, 1627-8; which being but a few months before his father's aſſaſſination, the young duke was left a perfect infant. The early parts of his education he received from various domeſtic tutors; after which he was ſent to the univerſity of Cambridge, where having compleated a courſe of ſtudies, he, with his poſthumous brother lord Francis Villiers, went abroad, under the care of Dr. Aglionby; and, on his return, which was not till after the breaking out of the civil wars, the king being at Oxford, his grace repaired thither, was preſented to his majeſty, and entered of Chriſt Church. The young duke of Buckingham and his brother lord Francis roſe in arms for the king, near Kingſton upon Thames, at the ſame time with the earl of Holland. The earl's plan ſeems to have been very ill-concerted; as this little body of men were inſtantly diſperſed, and cut to pieces. Lord Francis was offered quarter, which he diſdained to accept [3]. His parts were no leſs promiſing than his brother's, and his perſonal beauty was ſtill more extraordinary. This, as we are informed by Lloyd, occaſioned "the enemies beaſtly uſage of him, not fit to be mentioned [4]." It was ordered by parliament, that Fairfax ſhould have four hundred pounds per annum, out of the eſtates of the duke of Buckingham and the lord Francis his brother [5]. During the remainder of this unhappy war, the duke ſhared the fate of the other Royaliſts; and his princely eſtates were plundered. His father had purchaſed, in 1617, the lordſhip of Burley on the Hill in Rutland; which "he made one of the fineſt ſeats in thoſe parts of England; improving the houſe to that advantage, that it became a ſecond Belvoir, and in ſome reſpects ſuperior to that famous ſeat of the dukes of Rutland; ſituate on a hill, a princely park and woods adjoining, overlooking the little, but rich, Vale of Catmoſe, and ſeveral fair lordſhips belonging to the ſame owner. Here it was that, in Auguſt 1621, the duke entertained king James and all his court, in a manner worthy the gratitude of ſo beloved a favourite. The monarch was received at his entrance into the houſe with a ſpeech written by Ben Jonſon, and ſpoken by a gentleman repreſenting the porter. And among the famous biſhop Andrews's printed Sermons, we find ſeveral preached before the king at Burley by Okeham. Here it was that the king, prince Charles, and court, were firſt preſented with Ben Jonſon's maſk of "The Gipſies," acted all by nobility; an entertainment ſo pleaſing to that king, that it was acted again in the ſame progreſs at Belvoir, and after that at Windſor. But, during the rebellion in 1645, the parliament-army prevailing in thoſe parts, they placed a ſmall garriſon in this houſe, juſt enough to guard their committee and to harraſs the country; but, being too weak to defend themſelves from any attempt that might be made by the Royaliſts, they ſet fire to the houſe and furniture, and left it. Yet the ſtables eſcaped the effect of their malice; which remain to this day the nobleſt (or at leaſt equal to any) building of this kind in England [6]." After many ſufferings in the royal cauſe [7], the duke of Buckingham ſolicited one of the daughters of Cromwell in marriage; but was mortified with a denial. He afterwards attended prince Charles into Scotland, and was with him at the battle of Worceſter in 1651; after which, making his eſcape beyond ſea, he again joined him, and was ſoon after, as a reward for this attachment, made knight of the Garter. In 1652 the duke was in Holland, as appears by a letter from Nicholas Oudart, eſq. to Mr. Harding, concerning his demeanour there [8]. Deſirous of retrieving his affairs, he came privately to England; and was ſoon after committed to the Tower by the Protector. In 1657 he married Mary the daughter and ſole heireſs of Thomas lord Fairfax of Cameron; through whoſe intereſt he recovered the greateſt part of the eſtate he had loſt, and the aſſurance of ſucceeding to an accumulation of wealth in the right of his wife. On the Reſtoration, at which time he is ſaid to have poſſeſſed an eſtate of £20,000. a year, he was at firſt ſlighted by the king; but, the charms of his wit and converſation ſoon prevailing, he was appointed a lord of the bed-chamber, called to the privy council, and appointed lord lieutenant of Yorkſhire. All theſe high offices, however, he loſt again in 1666: for, having been refuſed the poſt of preſident of the North, he became diſaffected; and it was diſcovered that he had carried on a ſecret correſpondence, by letters and other tranſactions, with Dr. Heydon (a man of no kind of conſequence), tending to raiſe mutinies among his majeſty's forces, particularly in the navy, to ſtir up ſedition among the people, and even to engage perſons in a conſpiracy for ſeizing the Tower of London. An inſurrection, at the head of which the duke was openly to have appeared, was on the very eve of breaking out, when it was diſcovered by means of ſome agents whom Heydon had employed to carry letters to the duke. This detection ſo exaſperated the king, that he immediately ordered Buckingham to be ſeized; but the duke finding means, having defended his houſe for ſome time by force, to make his eſcape, his majeſty ſtruck him out of all his commiſſions, and iſſued a proclamation, requiring his ſurrender by a certain day. This ſtorm, however, did not long hang over his head; for, on an humble ſubmiſſion, king Charles, who was far from being implacable, took him again into favour, and the very next year reſtored him both to the privy council and bedchamber. In May 1668 the duke purchaſed the office of maſter of the horſe; but his diſpoſition for intrigue and machination could not long lie idle. Having conceived a reſentment againſt the duke of Ormond for having acted with ſome ſeverity againſt him in regard to the laſt-mentioned affair, he was ſuppoſed to be concerned in an attempt made on that nobleman's life in 1670 by the ſame Blood who afterwards endeavoured to ſteal the crown. Their deſign was, to have conveyed the duke to Tyburn, and there have hanged him; and ſo far did they proceed towards the putting it in execution, that Blood and his ſon had actually forced the duke out of his coach in St. James's-ſtreet, and carried him away beyond Devonſhire-houſe, Piccadilly, before he was reſcued from them. But it does not appear that this tranſaction hurt the duke's intereſt at court. He was inſtalled chancellor of the univerſity of Cambridge, June 7, 1671; and ſent embaſſador to France, where he was nobly entertained by Lewis XIV; preſented by that monarch at his departure with a ſword and belt ſet with jewels, to the value of 40,000 piſtoles; and the next year was employed in a ſecond embaſſy to that king at Utrecht. In June 1674, he was deprived of the chancellorſhip of Cambridge; and about the ſame time became a zealous partizan and favourer of the Nonconformiſts. Feb. 16, 1676, his grace, with the earls of Saliſbury and Shafteſbury and lord Wharton, were committed to the Tower, by order of the houſe of lords, for contempt, in refuſing to retract the purport of a ſpeech which the duke had made concerning a diſſolution of the parliament; but, on a petition to the king, he was diſcharged in May following. In 1680, having ſold Wallingford-houſe in the Strand, he purchaſed a houſe at Dowgate; and reſided there, joining with the earl of Shafteſbury in all the violences of oppoſition.

---

[1] By an order of the Houſe of Commons, Jan. 16, 1643-4, the ſum of 4000*l.* was to be raiſed, out of the pictures, and other things of the duke of Buckingham, remaining at York Houſe; and on the 10th of February, all the goods belonging to the duke, not aſſigned to the earl of Northumberland, were ordered to be ſequeſtered. July 23, 1645, ſeveral orders were made, for burning ſuperſtitious pictures at the dutcheſs of Buckingham's houſe in York Buildings; and as much of her woods and lands to be ſold as the ſaid pictures were worth; and, on the 19th of June, 1645-6, the dutcheſs applied, from Oxford, for a paſs to go into France. Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. III. pp. 369. 395; vol. IV. pp. 216. 410.

[2] Lord Orford's Works, 1798, vol. I. p. 240.

[3] "The lord Francis, being a perſon of very high courage, and bearing moſt loyal affections to his late majeſty king Charles the Firſt (of bleſſed memory), put himſelf in arms, together with the earl of Holland and others, for his reſcue out of the hands of thoſe barbarous uſurpers, who then kept him cloſe priſoner in the Iſle of Wight, in order to his woeful murder, which ſhortly after happened. But, before he could raiſe ſuch a conſiderable ſtrength as might probably have accompliſhed this right noble attempt, he was, upon the 7th of July, 1648, met by a much greater power of the enemy, at Kingſton upon Thames; and there, in a ſharp ſkirmiſh, moſt unhappily ſlain." Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 432.

[4] Memoirs, &c. fol. p. 678, 679.

[5] Walker's Hiſtory of Independency, part ii. p. 196; and ſee Granger, vol. II. p. 122.

[6] Wright's Rutland, pp. 30. 32.

[7] A petition from the duke of Buckingham (a minor) was preſented to the Houſe of Lords, Oct. 31, 1646; ſtating, "that, in 1643, he, being then but 15 years old, was carried by Dr. Aglionby, his tutor, to ſeveral places then the king's quarters, being, as he affirmed, ſo commanded by the king, whoſe ward he was; but, he dying, the petitioner went beyond ſeas, where he remained till about Sept. 1, 1646, when, by leave of the Houſe of Peers, he returned into England; and had never, by word or action, contributed any thing to the aſſiſtance of the war againſt the Parliament: yet, upon his return, found his eſtate under ſequeſtration, by order of the Houſe of Commons" (Lords Journals, vol. VIII. p. 552). This petition was referred to the Commons, Nov. 9; and to the Committee of Lords and Commons Sequeſtrations, Nov. 17; by whom the ſequeſtration on the duke's real and perſonal eſtate was wholly removed, Oct. 4, 1647; but, July 8, 1648, on a letter from the duke to the lord-mayor of London being read, he was declared a rebel and a traitor, and his eſtates again ſequeſtered; which the Houſe of Lords in vain endeavoured to avert. Commons Journals, vol. IV. p. 906; vol. V. pp. 325. 626. 641.

[8] See this letter in Peck's Deſiderata Curioſa, Book XII. N° IV.

"Who fitter than Villerius for this part?
And him to gain requir'd but little art,
For miſchief was the darling of his heart.
A compound of ſuch parts, as never yet
In any one of all God's creatures met;
Not ſick men's dreams ſo various and ſo wild,
Or of ſuch diſagreeing ſhapes compil'd:
Yet, through all changes of his ſhifting ſcene,
Still conſtant to buffoon and harlequin.
Not chang'd in humour by hir change of place,
He ſtill found company to ſuit his grace[1]." . . . . .

"So rov'd wild Buckingham, the public jeſt,
Now ſome innholder's, now a monarch's gueſt[2]."

About the time of king Charles's death, falling into an ill ſtate of health, he went into the country, to his manor of Helmſley[3] in Yorkſhire, where he generally paſſed his time in hunting and entertaining his friends[4]. This he continued till a fortnight before his death; which happened at a tenant's houſe, at Kirkby-moor-ſide, April 16, 1688, after three days illneſs, of an ague and fever, ariſing from a cold which he caught by ſitting on the ground after fox-hunting. The day before his death, he ſent to his old ſervant, Mr. Brian Fairfax[5], to provide him a bed at his houſe at Biſhop-hill; but the next morning the ſame man returned with the news that his life was deſpaired of. Of the laſt moments of this eccentric Peer, the following affecting account is given, in a letter from his great-nephew Richard earl of Arran to bp. Spratt, firſt publiſhed by the late Mr. Maty, from ſome authentic memoirs of the Villiers family.

"My Lord, Kerby-moor-ſyde, April 17, 1687.

"Mere chance having thrown me into theſe parts by accident, as I was at York, in my journey towards Scotland, I heard of the duke of Buckingham's illneſs here; which made me take a reſolution of waiting upon his grace, to ſee what condition he was in. I arrived here on Friday in the afternoon, where I found him in a very low condition: he had been long ill of an ague, which had made him weak; but his underſtanding was as good as ever, and his noble parts were ſo entire, that though I ſaw death in his looks, at firſt ſight, he would by no means think of it. He told me he was on horſe-back but two days before; and that he found himſelf ſo well at heart, that he was ſure he could be in no danger of his life. He told me he had a mighty deſcent fallen upon his privities, with an inflammation and great ſwelling; but he thought by applying warm medicines the ſwelling would fall, and then he would be at eaſe; but it proved otherwiſe, for a mortification came on thoſe parts, which run up upon his belly, and ſo mounted, which was the occaſion of his death. So ſoon as I arrived, I ſent to York for one Dr. Waler, for I found him here in a moſt miſerable condition. He deſired me to ſtay with him, which I very willingly obeyed. I confeſs it made my heart bleed to ſee the duke of Buckingham in ſo pitiful a place, and in ſo bad a condition; and, what made it worſe, he was not at all ſenſible of it, for he thought in a day or two he ſhould be well; and when we minded him of his condition, he ſaid it was not ſo as we apprehended. The doctors told me his caſe was deſperate; and though he enjoyed, the free exerciſe of his ſenſes, that in a day or two at moſt it would kill him; but they durſt not tell him of it; ſo they put a hard part on me to pronounce death to him, which I ſaw approaching ſo faſt, that I thought it was high time for him to think of another world, for it was impoſſible for him to continue long in this. So I ſent for a very worthy gentleman, Mr. Gibſon, a neighbour of his grace's, who lives but a mile from this place, to be an aſſiſtant to me in this work; ſo we jointly together repreſented his condition to him, which I ſaw was at firſt very uneaſy; but I think we ſhould not have diſcharged the duty of honeſt men, or I of a faithful kinſman, if we ſhould have ſuffered him to go out of this world without deſiring him to prepare for death, and to look into his conſcience. After having plainly told him his condition, I aſked him whom I ſhould ſend for to be aſſiſtant to him during the ſmall time he had to live: he would make me no anſwer; which made me conjecture, and having formerly heard that he had been inclining to be a Roman Catholic, I aſked him if I ſhould ſend for a prieſt; for I thought any act that could be like a Chriſtian was what his condition now wanted moſt; but he poſitively told me that he was not of that perſuaſion, and ſo would not hear any more of that ſubject, for he was of the Church of England; but hitherto he would not hear of a parſon, though he had declared his averſion for my offering him to ſend for a prieſt. But, after ſome time, beginning to feel his diſtemper mount, he deſired me to ſend for the parſon of this pariſh, who ſaid prayers for him, which he joined in very freely, but ſtill did not think he ſhould die; though this was yeſterday, at ſeven in the morning, and he died about eleven at night. Mr. Gibſon aſked him if he had made a will, or if he would declare who was to be his heir. But to the firſt he anſwered that he had made none[1]; and, to the laſt, whoever was named, he always anſwered, No. Firſt, my lady ducheſs was named; and then I think almoſt every body that had any relation to him; but his anſwer was always, No. And to ſee if he would change any way the anſwer or manner of it, they aſked him if my lord Purbeck was? but to that he ſaid, by no means. I did fully repreſent my lady ducheſs's condition to him, and told him it was abſolutely fit, during the time he had the exerciſe of his reaſon, to do ſomething to ſettle his affairs; but nothing that could be ſaid to him could make him come to any point. I then ſaid, that ſince he would do nothing in his worldly affairs, I deſired he might die like a Chriſtian; and ſince he called himſelf of the Church of England, the parſon was ready here to adminiſter the ſacrament to him, which he ſaid he would take. So accordingly I gave orders for it; and two other honeſt gentlemen received with him, Mr. Gibſon and colonel Liſton, an old ſervant of his Grace's. At firſt he called out three or four times; for he thought the ceremony looked as if death was near, which for the ſtrength of his noble parts (they not being yet affected) he could not eaſily believe: for all this time he was not willing to take death to him. But, in a few moments after, he became calm and received the ſacrament with all the decency imaginable, and in an hour after he loſt his ſpeech, and continued ſo till eleven at night, when he died. The confuſion he has left his affairs in will make his heir, whoever he be, very uneaſy. To tell you truly, I believe there is no other will in being but what they ſay is in the truſtees hands; for all the ſervants ſay, they knew there was a parchment ſealed, which my lord ſaid he would alter, which they looked upon to be his will: whether he has cancelled it, I cannot find. Some ſay Mr. Burrell has it; but nobody here can give any diſtinct account of it. But my lord himſelf ſaid poſitively, in the preſence of ſeveral, that he had no will in being; ſo what to make of this, I cannot tell you. We ſuppoſed that it might be ſir William Villars that he intended for his heir; but he ſaid ſeveral times before us all, No; ſo that I cannot imagine, if he has any will, to whom he has given it, I myſelf being as nearly related to him as any by the full blood[2]. Mr. Brian Fairfax and Mr. Gibſon have been witneſſes of my proceedings ſince my being here. I hope they will give an account of it. I thought in honour I could not leave him in this condition, being ſo nearly related to him; eſpecially his Grace being in ſuch a retired corner, where there was nobody but myſelf, till I ſent for this Mr. Gibſon. My lord Fairfax of Cullin[3] came yeſterday in the afternoon, but he was ſpeechleſs when he came. I have ordered the corpſe to be embalmed and carried to Helmeſley caſtle, and there to remain till my lady ducheſs her pleaſure ſhall be known. There muſt be ſpeedy care taken; for there is nothing here but confuſion, not to be expreſſed. Though his ſtewards have received vaſt ſums, there is not ſo much as one farthing, as they tell me, for defraying the leaſt expence. But I have ordered his inteſtines to be buried at Helmeſley, where his body is to remain till farther orders. Being the neareſt kinſman upon the place, I have taken the liberty to give his majeſty an account of his death, and ſent his George and blue ribbon to be diſpoſed as his majeſty ſhall think fit. I have addreſſed it under cover to my lord preſident, to whom I beg you would carry the bearer the minute he arrives. I have given orders that nothing ſhould be embezzled, and for that reaſon, as ſoon as my lord died, I called to ſee his ſtrong box, but before Mr. Bryan Fairfax and Mr. Gibſon: I found nothing of moment in it but ſome looſe letters of no concern; but ſuch as they are, I have ordered them to be locked up and delivered to my lady ducheſs; as alſo the ſmall plate and linen he had, I have committed to the care of lord Fairfax. So now that I have given your lordſhip this particular account of every thing, I have nothing more to do but to aſſure your lordſhip that I am, my lord, your lordſhip's moſt aſſured friend and humble ſervant, ARRAN."

---

[1] The Review, a Poem, by R. Duke. Johnſon's Poems, vol. XXV. p. 141.

[2] Chriſtopher Pitt's Dialogue between a Poet and his Servant; Ibid. vol. LII. p. 103.

[3] The duke's large eſtates, at this and ſome neighbouring manors, were then under ſequeſtration, and he was drawing what he could from his tenants; which occaſioned his being at this place. Helmſley was afterwards purchaſed by Mr. Duncombe.

[4] There is a tradition at Empingham in Rutland, within a few miles of Burley, that much of the latter part of the duke's life was paſſed at the White Horſe, a public-houſe in that village; where ſome anecdotes of him are yet recollected. Of theſe one is, that when riding one day in his park with his ſteward, he aſked whoſe ſheep (a large flock feeding before them) thoſe were? On the ſteward's anſwering "your Grace's;" with ſome quickneſs he replied, "I wiſh to God they were all foxes." Another, that, when the duke on a time was calling with repeated vehemence for a pot of ale, the landlord at the White Horſe was heard to mutter in reply from a back-room, "Your Grace is in a plaguy hurry; I'll come as ſoon as I have ſerved my hogs." This circumſtance the Poet, had he heard of it, would have expreſſed in a forcible manner, very different from the following:

"Some ale! ſome ale! th' impetuous Villiers cries:
To whom the ſurly landlord thus replies:
Plague on your Grace! you treat me like a dog!
I'll ſerve your Lordſhip—when I've ſerv'd my hog." V.

[5] Incorporated M. A. at Oxford, Sept. 28, 1663. He died in 1711; and his ſon Brian Fairfax, eſq. LL. D. and F. S. A. was appointed a commiſſioner of the cuſtoms in 1723; and died Jan. 9, 1746. See the "Anecdotes of Mr. Bowyer," p. 374.

In the Pariſh Regiſter of Kirkby-moor-ſide is the following entry; which, however, can only relate to the removal of the duke's remains, as he was buried in Weſtminſter abbey: "George uiluas, Lord dooke of bookingam, buried Ap. 17th, 1687[4]."

"George Villiers, duke of Buckingham, a man of great wit and humour, and of the moſt whimſical caprice, was the admiration and the jeſt of the reign of Charles the Second. He was the alchemiſt and the philoſopher; the fiddler and the poet; the mimic[5] and the ſtateſman. How ſhall I ſketch the portrait of one who had ſuch a variety of faces, or draw him in miniature who was of ſo great, and at the ſame time of ſo little a character? He has left us a ſpecimen of his admirable wit in his "Rehearſal," which is a creation of his own, and had a conſiderable effect in reforming the ſtage[6]."

"When this extraordinary man, with the figure and genius of Alcibiades, could equally charm the preſbyterian Fairfax and the diſſolute Charles; when he alike ridiculed that witty king and his ſolemn chancellor; when he plotted the ruin of his country with a cabal of bad miniſters; or, equally unprincipled, ſupported its cauſe with bad patriots; one laments that ſuch parts ſhould have been devoid of every virtue. But, when Alcibiades turns chemiſt, when he is a real bubble, and a viſionary miſer; when ambition is but a frolic; when the worſt deſigns are for the fooliſheſt ends; contempt extinguiſhes all reflections on his character. The portrait of the duke has been drawn by ſome maſterly hands: Burnet has hewn it out with his rough chiſel; count Hamilton[7] touched it with that ſlight delicacy, that finiſhes what it ſeems but to ſketch! Dryden[8] catched the living likeneſs; Pope[9] completed the hiſtorical reſemblance. Yet the abilities of this lord appear in no inſtance more amazing, than that, being expoſed by two great poets, he has expoſed one of them ten times more ſeverely. Zimri is an admirable portrait; but Bayes an original creation. Dryden ſatirized Buckingham; but Villiers made Dryden ſatirize himſelf[10]."

As to the duke's perſonal character, it is impoſſible to ſay any thing in its vindication; for, though his ſevereſt enemies acknowledge him to have poſſeſſed great vivacity, and a quickneſs of parts peculiarly adapted to the purpoſes of ridicule, yet his warmeſt advocates have never attributed to him a ſingle virtue. His generoſity was profuſeneſs, his wit malevolence, the gratification of his paſſions his ſole aim through life, his very talents caprice, and even his gallantry the meer love of pleaſure. To ſum up his character at once, if he appears inferior to his father as a ſtateſman, he was certainly ſuperior to him as a wit; and wanted only application and ſteadineſs to have made as conſpicuous a figure in the ſenate and the cabinet as he did in the drawing-room. But his love of pleaſure was ſo immoderate, and his eagerneſs in the purſuit of it ſo ungovernable, that they were perpetual bars againſt the execution of even any plan he might have formed ſolid or praiſe-worthy. In conſequence of which, with the poſſeſſion of a fortune that might have enabled him to render himſelf an object of almoſt adoration, we do not find him on record for any one deſervedly generous action. As he had lived a profligate, he died a beggar; and as he had raiſed no friend in his life, he found none to lament him at his death. As a writer, however, he ſtands in a quite different point of view[1]. There we ſee the wit, and forget the libertine. His poems, though not very numerous, are capital in their kind; but what will immortalize his memory while our language ſhall be underſtood, or true wit reliſhed, is "The Rehearſal," ſo perfect a maſter-piece in its way, and ſo truly an original, that, notwithſtanding its prodigious ſucceſs, even the taſk of imitation, in which moſt kinds of excellence have excited inferior geniuſes to undertake, has appeared too arduous to be attempted with regard to this, which through an whole century ſtands alone[2]; notwithſtanding that the very plays it was written expreſsly to ridicule are forgotten, and the taſte it was meant to expoſe totally exploded; and although many other pieces as abſurd, and a taſte as depraved, have ſince at times ſprung up, which might have afforded ample materials in the hands of an equal artificer. The duke was the author of ſome other dramatic pieces; as, "The Chances," a comedy altered from Fletcher; "The Reſtauration, or Right will take place," a tragi-comedy; "The Battle of Sedgmoor," a farce; "The Militant Couple, or the Huſband may think himſelf," a fragment. Among his proſe-pieces were, "An Eſſay upon Reaſon and Religion," in a letter to Nevile Pain, eſq.; "On Human Reaſon," addreſſed to Martin Clifford, eſq.; "An Account of a Conference between the Duke and Father Fitzgerald, whom King James ſent to convert his Grace in his ſickneſs;" and, "A ſhort Diſcourſe upon the Reaſonableneſs of Men's having a Religion or Worſhip of God." This laſt was printed in 1685, and paſſed through three editions. He wrote alſo ſeveral ſmall poems, complimentary and ſatirical. One is intituled, "The Loſt Miſtreſs, a Complaint againſt the Counteſs of ———," Shrewſbury[3], as is ſuppoſed; whoſe lord he killed in a duel on her account, and who is ſaid to have held the duke's horſe, diſguiſed like a page, during the combat[4]. The loves of this tender pair are thus hinted at by Pope:

---

[1] In the Prerogative office it appears that the duke died without a will, and that his widow the ducheſs adminiſtered.

[2] See p. 298. [3] Henry lord Fairfax of Denton in Yorkſhire, baron Cameron in Scotland. [4] Gent. Mag. vol. LVI. pp. 17. 203.

[5] It is certain, from what lord Clarendon tells us, "that the duke frequently diverted himſelf with the preachers at court." See ſome anecdotes on this ſubject in Granger, vol. III. p. 192.

[6] Granger, ibid. where three portraits of the duke are noticed, one of them as maſter of the horſe.

[7] In the Memoirs of Grammont. [8] Zimri, in Abſalom and Achitophel. [9] See the paſſage cited in p. 216.

[10] Lord Orford's Works, vol. I. p. 416.

> "Behold what bleſſings Wealth to life can lend!
> And ſee, what comfort it affords our end.
> In the worſt inn's worſt room, with mat half-hung,
> The floors of plaiſter, and the walls of dung,
> On once a flock-bed, but repair'd with ſtraw,
> With tape-ty'd curtains, never meant to draw,
> The George and Garter dangling from that bed
> Where tawdry yellow ſtrove with dirty red,
> Great Villiers lies—alas! how chang'd from him,
> That life of pleaſure, and that ſoul of whim!
> Gallant and gay, in Cliveden's[5] proud alcove,
> The bower of wanton Shrewſbury and Love;
> Or juſt as gay, at Council, in a ring
> Of mimick Stateſmen, and their merry King.
> No Wit to flatter, left of all his ſtore!
> No Fool to laugh at, which he valued more.
> There, Victor of his health, of fortune, friends,
> And fame; this lord of uſeleſs thouſands ends[6]."

At the Queen's houſe are whole-length portraits of the ſecond duke of Buckingham and his brother Francis in one piece, one of the moſt capital performances of Vandyke[7], and from which a metzotinto has been publiſhed by James Mac Ardel.

——Villiers died at South Mims, Aug. 21, 1723. He was commonly called earl of Buckingham; but, his legitimacy being queſtioned, his pretenſions to the peerage were not allowed. He left two daughters[8].

NATHAN WRIGHTE, eſq. ſon of the Rev. Ezekiel Wrighte[9], B. D. rector of Thurcaſton, by Dorothy ſecond daughter of John Onebye, eſq. of Hinckley, and one of the four ſiſters and coheireſſes of ſir John Onebye, knight, was born at Thurcaſton, Feb. 11, 1653; and, after being initiated in the law under his uncle Thomas Staveley, eſq. was placed in Emanuel College, Cambridge, in 1668, by the care of his mother, who in that year had been left a widow; and in due time removed thence to the Inner Temple, where, notwithſtanding an eſtate left him by his father had been much improved during his minority, he loſt no time for more than ſeven years, which he entirely ſpent in the ſtudy of the law. Sir John Onebye, in 1671-2, tells his brother Staveley, "I ſhall take care to commend Nat Wrighte to ſober company and good ſtudents, and what elſe is convenient." However, having a good fortune with his lady (Elizabeth, daughter of George Aſhby, of Quenby, eſq. whom he married in 1676), he neglected to practiſe for ſome years, till the increaſe of his family, and the advice of friends, who foreſaw what a conſiderable figure he was likely to make in the profeſſion, prevailed with him to attend the bar, where he approved himſelf as conſummate a lawyer, and made as ample an acceſſion to his fortune, as any of his contemporaries. He was elected recorder of Leiceſter in 1680; and in 1681 he entered the pedigree of his family, at the Heraldic Viſitation of the county, as a reſident at Barwell. He held the office of recorder till 1685, when Theophilus earl of Huntingdon was choſen under the new charter, and continued about three years; after which Mr. Wrighte was reſtored, and continued to hold the office till 1696. He was alſo in 1688 elected deputy recorder of Nottingham[10]. April 11, 1692, king William and queen Mary, by their writ, called him to the ſtate and degree of ſerjeant at law; and on the 27th he appeared at the Chancery-bar, before the lords commiſſioners of the great ſeal, with thirteen other gentlemen[11]; whoſe appearance being recorded, they took the uſual oaths; after which the lord commiſſioner Trevor made a ſpeech to them; and the new ſerjeants delivered to his lordſhip two rings, to be preſented to their majeſties, with their duty and moſt humble thanks for the great honour conferred on them. Mr. Wrighte, having been counſel for the king againſt ſir John Fenwick in the houſe of peers, was, before the beginning of Hilary Term 1696, called within the bar, being made king's ſerjeant, and knighted Dec. 30. He made a ſpeech, March 19,

---

[1] A complete edition of the duke's works was publiſhed, by T. Evans, in two volumes, 8vo, 1775.

[2] The "Critic" of Mr. Sheridan is perhaps an exception.

[3] Eldeſt daughter of Robert Brudenell earl of Cardigan; ſhe afterwards was married to George Rodney Bridges, eſq. ſecond ſon of ſir Thomas Bridges, of Keynſham, in Somerſetſhire, knt. and died April 20, 1702.

[4] This duel, in which the earl of Shrewſbury was mortally wounded, was on the 6th of March, 1667. The duke's ſeconds were, Captain Holmes and Mr. Jenkins; the earl's, ſir John Talbot, of Laycocke, and Mr. Bernard Howard.

[5] This delightful palace, ſuperbly ſituated on the banks of the Thames, was for ſeveral years the reſidence of Frederick prince of Wales, who lived in it with great dignity and magnificence, attended by many of the firſt geniuſes of the age. It was unfortunately burnt to the ground in May 1795, and nothing of its elegant furniture preſerved from the flames but the fine tapeſtry that repreſented the duke of Marlborough's victories.

[6] Epiſtle to Lord Bathurſt, ver. 297—314.

[7] A certain painter who was retiring, and viewing this admirable picture with the utmoſt energy of attention, was bluntly aſked by a perſon preſent, "Whether he had a mind to leave his eyes behind him?" Granger, vol. II. p. 122.

[8] Political State for Auguſt 1723, vol. XXVI. p. 236.

[9] Born at Denington in Suffolk 1603: elected fellow of Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1625; B. D. there 16..; and rector of Thurcaſton in Leiceſterſhire; where he died May 22, 1668; and Dorothy his widow died Sept. 26, 1691. See their epitaphs, under the account of the pariſh of Thurcaſton.

[10] "Nottingham, April 6, 1688. This town having pitched upon Nathan Wrighte, of Leiceſter, eſquire, (a ſober gentleman, and of good abilities in his profeſſion) for their Deputy Recorder, and having obtained his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle's concurrence and approbation; he was accordingly ſettled therein." Publick Occurrences truly ſtated, N° 8, April 19, 1688.

[11] Mr. ſerjeant Wrighte always took place of ſerjeant Bonithon, to whom he was junior by admittance, becauſe his writ bore Teſte before that of Bonithon, though they were returnable at the ſame time. R. Raym, 605. Notwithſtanding, when he came to be lord keeper, and a queſtion of ſeniority was in judgement before him which turned on the very ſame point, he determined juſt contrary to what he acted himſelf towards Bonithon. But perhaps Wrighte would ſay, in the language of old Plowden, that "when he was to determine for another, not for himſelf, then the caſe was altered."

1699, on behalf of Henry duke of Norfolk, in a committee of the houſe of commons, on the ſecond reading of the bill for a divorce between his grace and the ducheſs[1]; and opened the indictment, March 28, 1699, on behalf of the king, on the trial of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, for the murder of Richard Coote, eſq.; and made a learned reply to the argument of counſel as to the competency of a witneſs[2]. He in like manner opened the indictment, Oct. 12, 1699, on the trial of Mary Butler, alias Strickland, at the Old Bailey, for forging a bond of £40,000. in the name of Robert Clayton[3]; and in the following year, on the refuſal of the lords chief juſtices Holt and Treby, and Trevor the attorney-general, to accept the great ſeal, which was taken from lord Somers, it was delivered by the king in council to ſir Nathan Wrighte, with the title of lord keeper[4], May 21, 1700. He would gladly have been excuſed accepting that great poſt for his health's ſake, which had been much impaired that ſpring by a dangerous fever. Beſides, he thought it imprudent to forego the great profits he might make by his practice yearly, which might have laſted his life, for the precarious enjoyment of the moſt profitable place; but his majeſty's commands muſt be obeyed. It was not decent, nor perhaps ſafe, to diſobey them. He ſubmitted to his pleaſure, without any bargain or the leaſt gratuity whatever: he never aſked for any, even the loweſt, trifle of honour; and though he had not practiſed much in the court of Chancery[5] till three or four years before he was appointed to preſide over it, yet it ſoon appeared how equal he was to that great office; and he executed it with great integrity and judgement, as the records of Parliament will teſtify, which can ſhew as few reverſals of his decrees, as of any of his predeceſſors. On the contrary, one inſtance at leaſt occurs of his having reverſed a decree of his predeceſſor lord Somers[6]. In 1700, on the death of the duke of Glouceſter, the following lines were addreſſed to him in the condoleances from the Univerſity of Oxford.

"Ad Honoratiſſimum Dom. NATH. WRIGHTE, Magni Sigilli Cuſtodem[7].

"O cui commiſit geminas Aſtræa bilances,
  Qui regis inſani jurgia rauca fori;
O qui ſperabas fruſtrà, precepta tenello
  Vel dare Gloverno, vel data juſſa, ſequi;
Ah cave ne pueri gaudentes funere Gracchi
  Sacrilegâ temerent pendula ſceptra manu;
Ah cave ſincerum ne Tybris polluat alveum,
  Ne Lemana ſacras ſquallida fœdet aquas;
Æternas memorum leges defende Britannûm,
  Sis Themidi, Cuſtos ſit Tibi ſancta Themis.
    AD. LANGLEY, A. M. Ædis Chrſti Alumnus."

Sir Nathan was one of the lords juſtices on the king's going to Holland in 1700[8]; and became alſo officially one of the lords commiſſioners for trade and plantations.

On the day king William died, March 8, 1701-2, he delivered the great ſeal into the hands of queen Anne, then ſitting in council; who inſtantly returned it.

The Dutcheſs of Marlborough, in the "Account of her Conduct," p. 124, ſays, "As ſoon as queen Anne was ſeated on the throne, the Tories (whom ſhe uſually called by the agreeable name of the Church party) became the diſtinguiſhed objects of the royal favour. Dr. Sharpe, archbiſhop of York, was pitched upon by herſelf to preach her coronation ſermon, and to be her chief counſellor in church-matters; and her privy council was filled with Tories. My lord Normanby (ſoon after duke of Buckingham), the earls of Jerſey and Nottingham, ſir Edward Seymour, with many others of the high-fliers, were brought into place; ſir Nathan Wrighte was continued in poſſeſſion of the great ſeal of England, and the earl of Rocheſter in the lieutenancy of Ireland. Theſe were men who had all a wonderful zeal for the Church; a ſort of public merit that eclipſed all other in the eyes of the queen."

John Dunton obſerves, "Sir Nathan Wrighte, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, is deſervedly advanced to the higheſt pinnacle of State preferments; and his conduct is ſo wiſe and loyal, as convinces the world that it is only religious and real goodneſs eſtabliſhes greatneſs. He knows, and diſcovers, all the reſpect due to his high place; but he does not ſuffer empty titles to puff him up, nor permit inequality of ſtate to work ſtrangeneſs of countenance. My only brother (Mr. Luke Dunton) had an honourable poſt by his recommendation; and he is kind and generous to all his relations. He was faithful to his great truſt when King William reigned, and is now as loyal to Queen Anne; and, ſhould his country call him, would refuſe no hazard, think much of no charge, to preſerve it. In a word, he excells in every grace; but his great humility is the moſt ſhining character of all his actions, and his large charity the moſt uſeful.

"The cares of counſel o'er his aſpect reign;
Though great, he 's juſt, nor, 'midſt his honours, vain;
His life 's an equal thread, correctly ſpun;
Secure his int'reſt, when his days are done[9]."

Mackay thus deſcribes him: "Sir Nathan Wrighte, lord keeper, is ſon of a clergyman; a good common lawyer, a ſlow chancellor, and no civilian. Chance more than choice brought him the ſeals: the lords chief juſtices Holt and Treby refuſing to ſucceed ſo great a man as the lord Somers, they fell into the hands of this gentleman; who, being recommended by the oppoſite party, proved their faithful tool ever ſince. He is a plain man, both in perſon and converſation; of middle ſtature, inclining to fat; hath a fat broad face, much marked with the ſmall-pox."—Swift's MS. adds, "Very covetous;" and Mr. Grove's copy, "He has done a great deal of good to his private family, married his ſon and daughter to very good fortunes. He gave the employment of the clerk of the crown to his ſon, and ſome good livings to a great many of his poor relations in the country[10]."

One of the moſt remarkable events that happened while he was in office was his ſentence for diſſolving The Savoy[11], July 31, 1702: and it may alſo be mentioned that in the ſame year, on the 19th of November, he reverſed a decree of his great predeceſſor lord Somers[12]. Burnet ſays, that "many gentlemen of good eſtates and antient families were put out of the commiſſion of the peace by him, for no other viſible reaſon, but becauſe they had gone in heartily to the Revolution, and had continued zealous for king William; and at the ſame time, men of no worth nor eſtate, and known to be ill-affected to queen Anne's title, and to the Proteſtant ſucceſſion, were put in, to the great encouragement of ill-deſigning men." He adds, that the lord-keeper was "a zealot to the party, and was become very exceptionable in all reſpects: Money, as was ſaid, did every thing with him; only in his Court, I never heard him charged, for any thing but great ſlowneſs, by which the Chancery was become one of the heavieſt grievances of the nation[13]." The ſame author likewiſe ſays, "the lord keeper was ſordidly covetous[14], and did not at all live ſuitable to that high poſt. He became extreme rich, yet I never heard him charged with bribery in his Court[15], but there was a foul rumour with relation to the livings of the Crown that were given by the great ſeal, as if they were ſet to ſale by the officers under him"

He continued lord keeper till the 6th of October, 1705; when his diſmiſſal was contrived by the Dutcheſs of Marlborough, who thus inſolently avows the tranſaction: "I prevailed with her majeſty to take the great ſeal from ſir Nathan Wrighte; a man deſpiſed by all parties, of no uſe to the crown, and whoſe weak and wretched conduct in the court of Chancery had almoſt brought his very office into contempt. His removal, however, was a great loſs to the Church, for which he had ever been a warm ſtickler."

---

[1] State Trials, vol. V. p. 239. [2] Ibid. pp. 143. 169. [3] Ibid. p. 233. [4] Lives of the Lords Chancellors, vol. I. p. 201.

[5] Mr. Rayner has a manuſcript, intituled, "Rules of Practice in the Court of Chancery," with a complete index; and this memorandum cloſes it: "N. B. This tract was drawn up for the uſe of ſir Nathan Wrighte, when he was made lord keeper."

[6] Freeman's Reports, vol. I. p. 234. pl. 306.

[7] From "Exequiæ deſideratiſſimo Principi Gulielmo Glouceſtriæ Duci ab Oxonienſi Academiâ ſolutæ, 1700."

[8] Tindal. [9] Life and Errors, 1705, p. 428. [10] See Groves's Life of Cardinal Wolſey, vol. IV. p. 286.

[11] See the hiſtory of this diſſolution in the Leiceſterſhire Collections, Bibl. Top. Brit. Nº VII. p. 237.

[12] Lawrence and Lawrence, originally heard in Michaelmas Term 1699. [13] Hiſt. of his own Times, vol. IV. p. 53. [14] Ib. p. 122.

[15] Where he could be guilty of corruption, if not in his Court, is hard to ſay. See Salmon's Hiſt. of Q. Anne, vol. I. p. 255.

Near the time of his diſmiſſal he was complimented by "Corona Civica; a Poem, to the right honourable the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England;" and about the ſame period appeared the following ſatirical ſquib, under the title of "The Country Parſon's honeſt Advice to that judicious Lawyer, and worthy Miniſter of State, my Lord Keeper Wrighte:"

"Be wiſe as Somerſet, as Somers brave,
As Pembroke airy, and as Richmond grave;
Humble as Orford be; and Wharton's zeal
For Church and Loyalty would fit thee well;
Like Sarum, I would have thee love the Church,
He ſcorns to leave his mother in the lurch.
For the well-governing your family,
Let pious Haverſham thy pattern be:
And, if it be thy fate again to marry,
And S—y—r's daughter will thy year out tarry,
May'ſt thou uſe her as Mohun his tender wife,
And may ſhe lead his virtuous lady's life.
To ſum up all; Devonſhire's chaſtity,
Bolton's merit, Godolphin's probity,
Halifax his modeſty, Eſſex's ſenſe,
Mountague's management, Culpepper's pence,
Teniſon's learning, and Southampton's wit,
Will make thee for an able Stateſman fit."

The following more appropriate character of him was ſent from ſir T. Little to Mr. Samuel Echard:

"During the whole period in which he held this high employment he was content with the uſual profits of the place, and without any penſion after he had loſt both that and his buſineſs. It is remarkable that none beſides himſelf was ever advanced to that poſt without the aſſiſtance of ſome great friend or party, or having been made attorney-general, or having ſat long in parliament (of which he never was a member); and, whatever was the occaſion of his being neglected after he had left his place, he had ſhewn an inviolable fidelity to the Crown during the whole courſe of his adminiſtration; and, upon critical conjunctures, had given wholeſome and proper advice; which others declined doing, either for fear of diſpleaſing, or from ſome other ſiniſter views. He had an hearty and ſteady regard to the conſtitution in church and ſtate; and as he always acted with diſintereſted views, he could never be induced to go into the exorbitant lengths and violence of parties; and this the king took notice of, and commended him for it; and though upon this account there were ſtrong endeavours uſed to get him diſplaced before the king died, it is well known, the king's inclination was otherwiſe, who would often expreſs his ſatisfaction in his keeper's ſervice, and his unwillingneſs to part with him. Queen Anne had the ſame value for him that her predeceſſor had; and when ſhe gave him the ſeals, was ſaid to tell him, 'he ſhould not have had them if ſhe had known a fitter perſon in the kingdom.' He had an exact regard to juſtice, and was very angry if he heard the leaſt ſurmiſe of corruption in any of his domeſtics. He had a juſt reſpect paid to him whilſt in a public character, by all who knew what was moſt valuable in perſons of rank and diſtinction, and were not influenced by envy or party paſſions; and, during the time of his receſs, was loved and eſteemed for thoſe ſocial virtues which render a man acceptable in a private ſtation. One particular in my view, when I mentioned his fidelity in counſeling the king, was his being earneſt with his majeſty not to diſſolve that parliament which continued but a very little while, which, to be ſure, you have taken notice of; and, I dare ſay, find that it was as unacceptable as it was ſurpriſing to the nation; as I remember it was ſaid the archbiſhop, and lord Godolphin, and another, whom I cannot recollect, were ſaid to join with him in that application to the king[1]."

Lady Wrighte died at Powis-houſe, Lincoln's Inn Fields, Oct. 21, 1705; after which period ſir Nathan reſided chiefly at his beautiful ſeat at Caldecote[2] in Warwickſhire; and, dying Aug. 4, 1721, was buried in that church; where, on an elegant tablet of white marble, with his arms finely blazoned, motto UNICA VIRTUS NOBILITAS, is placed the following inſcription:

"M. S.
prænobilis viri D. NATHAN WRIGHT, eq. aur.
qui quinque annos & menſes fermè magiſtratu functus dni Cuſtodis M. Sigilli Angliæ, æquus & integer, ac tanto nihil impar muneri.
Sedecim propè annos, quot exinde vixit,
famæ ſatur, & quam modici compos votis,
ex animo rura coluit vicina.
Pius & humanus,
a quoque bono & prudenti deſideratiſſimus,
obiit Auguſti 4°, anno Dñi 1721, ætat. ſuæ 68."

About two years after, his body was removed to Gayhurſt; where he was to have been buried at firſt, but that he had had a quarrel with the then incumbent.

A portrait[3] of him (here copied in Plate XXXIII.) was drawn and engraved from the life by R. White in 1700; under which is written, "The Right Hon. Sir Nathan Wrighte, Knight, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and one of his Majeſties moſt honourable Privy Council, 1700;" with the arms, quarterly, of, 1. and 4. Wrighte; 2. and 3. Onebye.

The Pedigree in p. 220, is continued from one entered by ſir Nathan (then Nathan Wrighte, eſq. reſident at Barwell) 23 March, 1681-2.

Sir Nathan had ſix ſons and four daughters; George, Nathan, Robert, Ezekiel, William, Thomas, two Dorothys, and two Elizabeths; and was ſucceeded in eſtate by his eldeſt ſon George Wrighte, eſq. on whom, for the ſake of his father's good ſervices, and his own high merit, king William beſtowed the place of clerk of the crown. He was born at Barwell, May 25, 1677; and married, Jan. 16, 1700, Mary, daughter of Thomas Bedford, eſq. of Doctors Commons; by whom he had three ſons, Nathan, George, and Thomas, and five daughters. He purchaſed in 1704, for £27,000. the manors of Gayhurſt[4] and Stoke Goldington, in the county of Bucks, with the advowſon of both churches, which ſtill remain in his family; and died, at his houſe in New James-ſtreet, near Red Lion Square, March 6, 1724-5.

Gayhurſt church was re-built in purſuance of his will, as appears by an inſcription over the Weſt-door:

"Gloriæ Dei Omnipotentis.
Georgius Wrighte, armiger, Nathan Wrighte, equitis aurati, ita pridem magni ſigilli
Angliæ cuſtodis, filius natu maximus, hujus manerii, necnon adjacentis villæ Stoke Goldington, primus ex genere ſuo dominus, eccleſiam hanc, quam vivus inſtaurare in animo habuit, moriens legavit,
anno Domini 1728."

The church is near the houſe, and very neat. The figures of father and ſon face you as you enter the

---

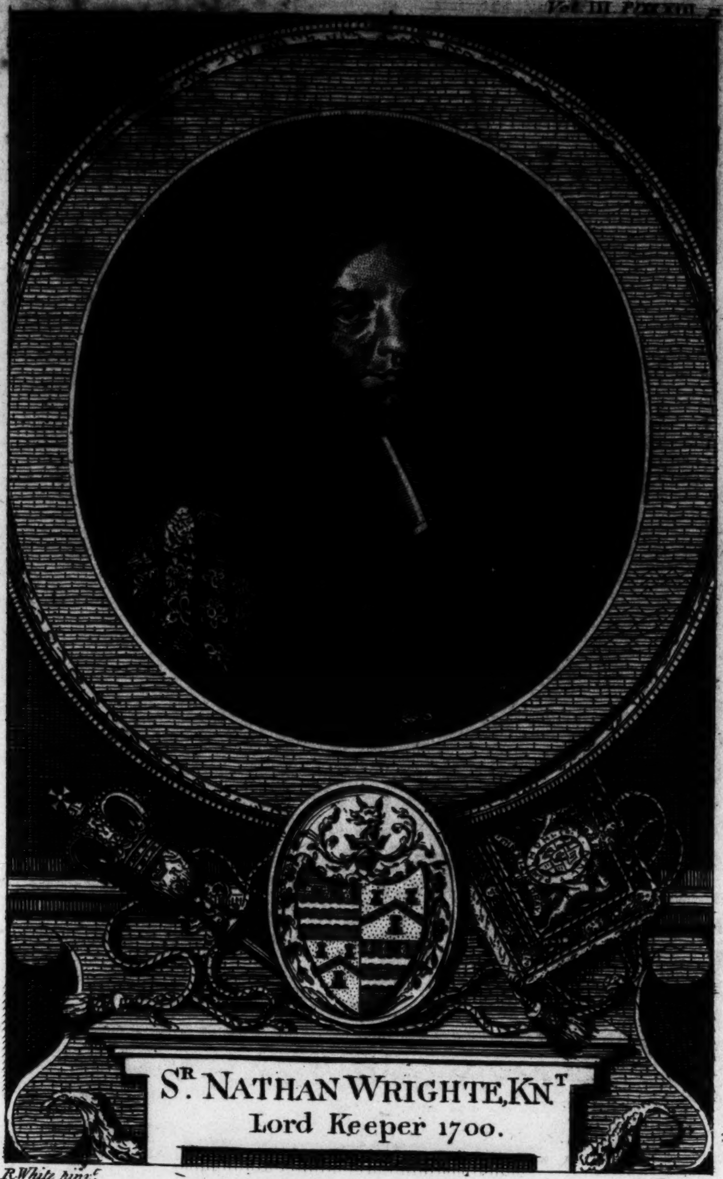
[1] Communicated by Iſaac Reed, eſq. who tranſcribed it for me from Mr. Baker's MSS. at Cambridge.

[2] Which he probably purchaſed at the ſame time with a moiety of the manor of Burton Haſtings in the ſame county, 1714. Dugdale, Warwickſhire, ed. Thomas, pp. 53. 1097.

[3] There is a full-length portrait of ſir Nathan Wrighte, in his robes, at Gayhurſt; and a head of ſir Joſeph Jekyll, in a large wig and robes. Pennant, Journey from Cheſter to London, p. 338. His arms are, Azure, two bars Argent; in chief three leopards' heads caboſſed Or. Creſt, a dragon's head couped Or, iſſuing out of a ducal coronet Or.

[4] Mr. Pennant gives a pleaſing view of Gayhurſt; and ſays, "After paſſing Stoke Goldington, a beautiful vale opens on the left, watered by the Ouze, running through rich meadows, and embelliſhed with the ſpire of Oulney church. About half a mile from its banks, on a riſing ground on the right, ſtands Gothurſt, antiently Geythurſt; whoſe venerable form has not been injured by inconſiſtent alterations. It was begun in the 43d of queen Elizabeth, and was greatly improved a few years after by William Mulſho, eſq. The windows are glazed with propriety; only part of the back front is modernized. The lands are very finely dreſſed, and ſwell into extenſive lawns. One before the houſe conſiſts of 128 acres; and on the ſides are others of great extent. The woods are vaſt, and cut into walks extenſive and pleaſing. Several pretty pieces of water; the view of the Ouze and its verdant meadows; and the old reſpectable houſe of Tyringham, with its church, on the oppoſite ſide, are no ſmall embelliſhments to the place." Journey from Cheſter to London, p. 325.

church;

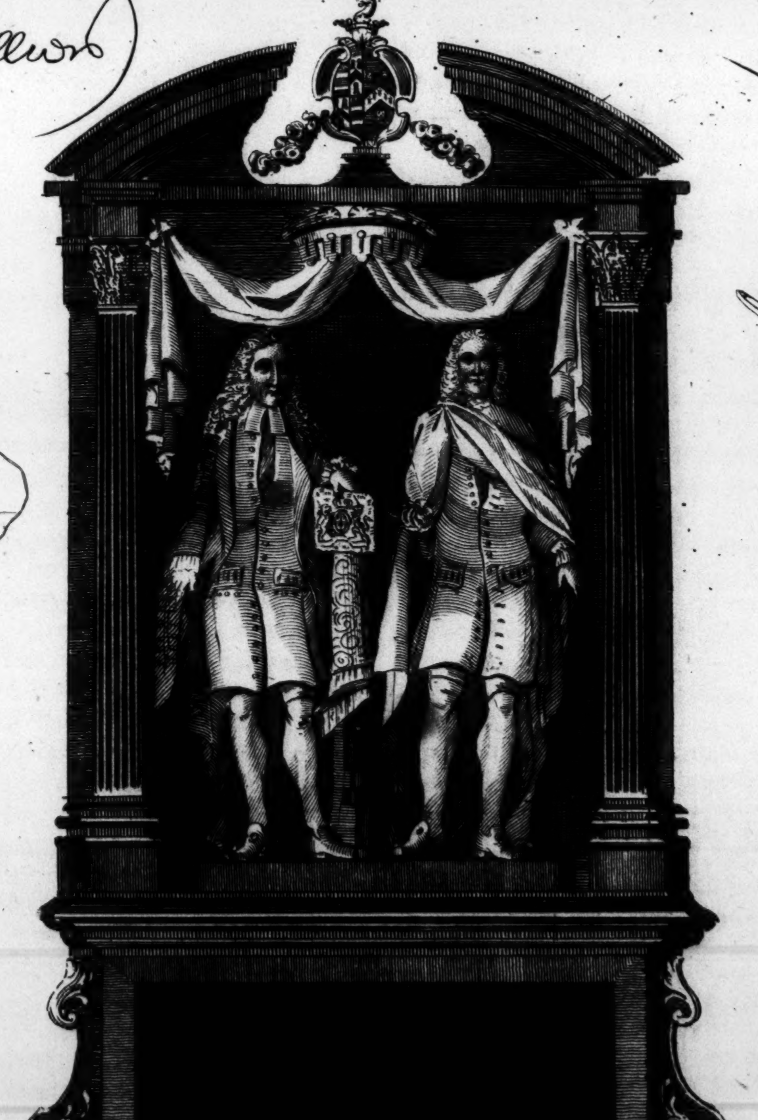


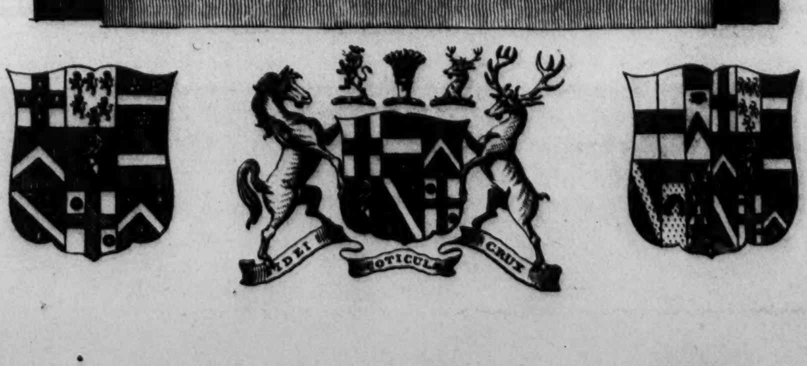
Sr. NATHAN WRIGHTE, Knt.
Lord Keeper 1700.

R. White pinxt. Royce sc.

At GOTHURST, BUCKS.

George Villiers





FIDEI COTICULA CRUX

church; the firſt in his robes, the other in a plain gown; both furniſhed with enormous Parian periwigs[1].

George's ſon George, member for Leiceſter 1727—1766, married, in May 1733, Barbara, daughter of ſir Thomas Clarges[2], bart. He died in 1766; and his widow in 1799; leaving one ſon George, and a daughter Barbara, both living in 1800.

George Wrighte, eſq. (the preſent owner of Gayhurſt 1799) married Anne, daughter and heireſs of Joſeph Jekyll, of Dallington, co. Northampton, eſq. and the right honourable lady Anne Jekyll his wife, formerly lady Anne Montague; and was left a widower December 5, 1798. Their only ſon, George, a lieutenant in the Northamptonſhire militia, died at Weymouth, where the regiment was then ſtationed, June 4, 1793, and was buried at Gayhurſt[3]. An only daughter and heireſs, Anne, born in 1784, is now living, 1800.

Nathan Wrighte, M. A. the lord-keeper's ſecond ſon, was B. A. of Brazen-noſe College, Oxford, in 1700 and 1702, when he wrote the following lines:

Ad Principissam[4].

“ Anna parens, O! ſæpè novis exercita curis,
Fœcundi quereris pignora rapta tori.
Heu! quantos labefacta extremo hoc funere luctus
Concipis, Aſcanium penè ſecuta Tuum!
Sic duras experta vices, ſobolemque peremptam
Tantalis, extinctam flet viduata domum.
Illa quidem meritas repetito crimine pœnas,
Spretorumque iram ſentit, & arma Deûm.
Illa nec exciſi generis diſpendia ſarcit,
Nec ſimili reparat prole, ſed Ipſa perit.
Tu Divos, Diis chara, colis; ſobolique ſuperſtes
Mox paries, poterit quæ ſupereſſe Tibi.
Nathan Wrighte, Hon. Dom. Mag. Ang. Sigill.
Cuſt. Filius, A. B. è Coll. Ænei Naſi.”

Ad Illuſtriſſimum Georgium Daniæ Principem[5]!

“ O Georgi, O priſci ſoboles Canuti!
Quem miſcet titulis Anglia læta ſuis;
Dextræ multa Tuæ debet tua Dania; fidas
Nunc poſcunt Britones, altera cura, manus.
Ergo adſis, duroque bonus ſuccurre labori;
Fœlicique pios protege Marte lares.
Sic Tu Cappadoci æquales ſortitus honores,
Angligenis Cuſtos Georgius Alter eris.
Nathan Wrighte, A. B. Honorat. Mag. Angl. Sigill.
Cuſt. Filius natu minor, Coll. Æn. Naſ. Soc.”

He was M. A. there June 5, 1702; and, entering into holy orders, was preſented to the rectories of Farnham Royal and Taplow, both in the county of Bucks; the former in the patronage of Eton College, the latter in the gift of the Crown; and was inſtalled a prebendary of Norwich, Nov. 29, 1703. He married Anne, ſole daughter and heireſs of lord Francis Powlett (ſecond ſon of John Powlett fifth marquis of Wincheſter by his ſecond wife, Honora, daughter of the earl of Clanrickard), with whom he obtained the eſtate and manſion-houſe of Englefield[6]. By this lady Mr. Wrighte had three ſons, Powlett, Francis, and Nathan, and a daughter Anne.

Powlett Wrighte, eſq. the eldeſt ſon of Nathan, married Mary, daughter of Richard Tyſſen, eſq. of Hackney; and died of the ſmall-pox July 6, 1741; leaving one infant ſon, Powlett, who married a ſhort time before his death a lady with whom he had long cohabited, to whom he left for life £800. a year, payable out of his eſtates, together with the ſum of £8000. beſides ſeveral very conſiderable legacies to her relations. This lady died in June 1782.

Francis and Anne died unmarried.

Mr. Nathan Wrighte, upon the death of his nephew, ſucceeded to the property at Englefield, where he reſided about three years; but, finding the eſtates, which had been diminiſhed ſome thouſands a year by his nephew, unequal to ſupport the eſtabliſhment which had been kept up by his grandfather, he removed to a ſmall ſeat which he had built during his firſt wife's life at Chicklade in Wilts; where, and in Queen's Square, Bath, he reſided till his death. On Mr. Wrighte's removal to Chicklade, Englefield-houſe was leaſed to lady Clive for ſeven years; which time expiring in 1789, Mr. Wrighte had removed his furniture, &c. and was about to return to Englefield, when he was ſeized with a fever, which terminated his life in a few days. His firſt wife was Elizabeth Dowle, of Cricklade, near Hindon, co. Wilts; his ſecond, Elizabeth Frewen, daughter of Mr. Townſend, an architect of Oxford, and widow of the Rev. John Frewen, rector of Tortworth, co. Glouceſter. His daughter and only child Selina was married, Sept. 2, 1794, to the Rev. James-Knight Moor, M. A. late of Sidney College, Cambridge, now under-maſter in King Edward the Sixth's ſchool at Sherborne, co. Dorſet; and has one ſon, John-Frewen Moor[7]. Mr. Wrighte poſſeſſed conſiderable property in the pariſh of Mortimer, co. Berks, but never reſided there. He built a neat hunting-ſeat at Chicklade, where he poſſeſſed an eſtate in right of his firſt wife, which, owing to an informality in his will, and to an attorney not arriving till he was deprived of his ſenſes, paſſed, at his death (which happened at that place June 7, 1789), to his heir at law Mr. Wrighte of Gayhurſt, who ſold it in 1797 for 3000 guineas. Leaving no iſſue, the family of ſir Nathan Wrighte's ſecond ſon became extinct; and the Englefield eſtates devolved, according to the direction of the will of the laſt Powlett Wrighte, to his half-brother, Richard Benyon[8], eſq. of Guideahall, ſon of Governor Benyon, by Mary, the widow of the firſt Powlett Wrighte, elder brother of the perſons to whom a monument[9] has been erected in Englefield church, with the following inſcription:

---

[1] Pennant's Journey, p. 338; and ſee our Plate XXXIII.

[2] Baronetage.

[3] The following extract of a letter from Weymouth, dated June 11, 1793, and extracted from the Northampton Mercury, is highly creditable to this young gentleman: “Yeſterday the remains of the late George Wrighte, eſq. lieutenant in the Northamptonſhire militia, were removed from this place, in order for interment in the county of Bucks, in the following proceſſion: A detachment of armed grenadiers; band of muſic; drums and cymbals muffled, playing the Dead-march in Saul, relieved at intervals by the drums and fifes playing a dead-march; clergyman and apothecary; ſervants of the deceaſed; two mutes with ſtaves; corpſe; pall borne by enſigns Hide and Muller, lieutenants Blencowe, Jones, Watſon, and Vage, all with hat-bands, ſcarfs, and crapes; chief mourner, major Heſilrige; officers of the regiment two and two; major Grenville and his aid-de-camp; privates and drummers of the five companies. Three vollies were fired over the corpſe previous to its being put into the hearſe. The concourſe of people aſſembled on the occaſion was immenſe, and ſuch as was never before witneſſed at this place.”

[4] From “Exequiæ deſideratiſſimo Principi Gulielmo Gloceſtriæ Duci ab Oxonienſi Academiâ ſolutæ, 1700.”

[5] From “Pietas Univerſitatis Oxonienſis, &c. 1702.

[6] Englefield gave name to a very antient family formerly lords of this manor, which was forfeited, it is believed, by the attainder of ſir Francis Englefield, 28 Eliz. for being concerned in Babington's conſpiracy, confirmed by a ſubſequent act of the 35th of that queen, after having been upwards of 780 years in that family; who have ſtill a burying-place in Englefield church, on the North ſide of the chancel, in which are ſeveral antient monuments and inſcriptions. The manor-houſe was rebuilt in a noble ſtyle, after the demolition of Baſing-houſe in the civil war, by John Powlett, the fifth marquis of Wincheſter; and came to the Wrightes by the above-mentioned marriage with his grand-daughter. It is moſt delightfully ſituated about a mile from the Weſt end of the village of Theale, between Reading and Newbury. The firſt Mr. Powlett Wrighte modernized the houſe. His ſon Powlett came to reſide in it in 1768, and farther modernized it, taking away the two bow windows and a range of apartments behind the houſe.

[7] See vol. II. p. 142.

[8] This gentleman married a daughter of ſir Edward Hulſe, by whom he had ten or twelve children.

[9] A ſimilar monument has been erected by Mrs. Wrighte, to the memory of her firſt huſband, on the North ſide of the communion-table, in the church of Tortworth, with this inſcription: “Subtus conduntur reliquiæ Johannis Frewen, A. M. Collegii Orielenſis, Oxon. olim ſocii, et hujus eccleſiæ per breve heu! biennium rectoris. Obiit tertio die Octobris, anno Domini 1767, ætatis ſuæ 52.” This Mr. Frewen was the younger ſon of a reſpectable Leiceſterſhire family, which has taken the name of Turner, and has been ſome time ſeated at Cold Overton, in that county, and at Northiam, co. Suſſex.

"Sacred to the memory of FRANCIS WRIGHTE, eſq.
who died the 7th of November, 1751, aged 31;
ANNE WRIGHTE,
who died the 3d of October, 1770, aged 55 years;
and particularly of NATHAN WRIGHTE, eſq.
who died the 7th of June, 1789, aged 73 years; grandchildren of the right honourable
Sir Nathan Wrighte, knight,
Lord Keeper of the Great Seal,
